Local Boards Act, 1884, and he was assaulted by the accused, it was held that the accused was guilty under this section and not s. 353.¹⁸

Explanation.—The Explanation is not happily worded. The expression 'the last section' is incorrect. The purport of the Explanation is that this section is subject to the same Explanation as s. 352.

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Summary trial.

Of Kidnapping, Abduction, Slavery and Forced Labour.

359. Kidnapping is of two kinds : kidnapping from British India, and kidnapping from lawful guardianship.

COMMENT.

Kidnapping is divided into two kinds. But there may be cases in which the two kinds overlap each other. For instance, a minor may be kidnapped from British India as well as from lawful guardianship.

360. Whoever conveys any person beyond the limits of British India¹ without the consent of that person,² or of some person legally authorized to consent on behalf of that person, is said to kidnap that person from British India.

COMMENT.

The offence of kidnapping is sometimes committed by means of assault, and is sometimes attended with restraint; but this is not always the case. For instance, a labourer who has been induced to embark on board a ship by false assurances that he shall be taken to a country where he shall have good wages, but whom the captain of the ship intends to sell for a slave, has not as yet been either assaulted or retained although he is kidnapped.

Ingredients.—This section requires two essentials :—

1. Conveying of any person beyond the limits of British India.
2. Such conveying must be without the consent of that person.

1. 'Conveys any person beyond the limits of British India.'—This offence may be committed on a grown-up person or a minor by conveying him or her beyond the limits of 'British India.'

See s. 15, supra, as to the definition of 'British India.'

2. 'Without the consent of that person.'—The conveying must be without the consent, express or implied, of the person conveyed. Where the accused induced certain women to leave British India for Ceylon on the misrepresentation that they were to be married to his sons, and after arriving at Ceylon made them work as coolies on a tea estate, it was held that the women must be held to have been taken without their consent and that the accused was guilty of kidnapping from British India.¹⁹

A person kidnapping a girl of fifteen years of age out of British India with her consent does not come within the purview of this section.²⁰

See s. 90, supra, as to the definition of 'consent.'

361. Whoever takes or entices any minor¹ under fourteen years of age if a male, or under sixteen years of age if a female,² or any person of unsound mind,³ out of the keeping of the lawful guardian⁴ of such minor or person of unsound mind, without the consent of such guardian,⁵ is said to kidnap such minor or person from lawful guardianship.

¹⁸ Chinnaswami Pillai v. Chairman of the Arkonam Union, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 687.

¹⁹ Periaswami Kangani, [1910] M. W. N.

262, 11 Cr. L. J. 368.

²⁰ Haribhai, (1918) 20 Bom. L. R. 372, 42 Bom. 391.

Explanation.—The words “lawful guardian” in this section include any person lawfully entrusted with the care or custody of such minor or other person.

Exception.—This section does not extend to the act of any person who in good faith believes himself to be the father of an illegitimate child, or who in good faith believes himself to be entitled to the lawful custody of such child, unless such act is committed for an immoral or unlawful purpose.

COMMENT.

Object.—The object of this section is at least as much to protect children of tender age from being abducted or seduced for improper purposes, as for the protection of the rights of parents and guardians having the lawful charge or custody of minors or insane persons.

Under English law this offence is known as ‘child-stealing.’

Scope.—Kidnapping is an offence irrespective of any intent with which it is committed. It may be committed without assault or wrongful restraint or confinement. A child, for example, who is decoyed from its guardian, who soon forgets its home, and who consents to remain with the kidnapper, cannot be said to have been assaulted or restrained. This offence may be committed in respect of either a minor or a person of unsound mind. To kidnap a grown-up person, therefore, is not this offence.²¹

Ingredients.—The section has four essentials :—

1. Taking or enticing away a minor or a person of unsound mind.
2. Such minor must be under fourteen years of age, if a male, or under sixteen years of age, if a female.
3. The taking or enticing must be out of the keeping of the lawful guardian of such minor or person of unsound mind.
4. Such taking or enticing must be without the consent of such guardian.

1. ‘Takes or entices any minor.’—The taking need not be by force, actual or constructive, and it is immaterial whether the girl consents or not.²² There must be a taking of the child out of the possession of the parent.

If a child leaves its parents’ house for a particular purpose with their consent, it cannot be said to be out of the parents’ keeping. A mere leading of a not unwilling child will be sufficient.

The word “taking” means physical taking. Thus, where a father sent his daughter to live in a house with another married daughter of his, who got her married to an inmate of the house without the consent of the father, it was held that no offence was committed by the married daughter, because there was no taking out of lawful guardianship inasmuch as the daughter never left the house where she was residing with the consent of her father.²³

The period of detention is immaterial to the offence. Where, therefore, it was proved that the accused having met a girl by arrangement, stayed with her away from her father’s house for three days, sleeping with her at night; and that he took her away without her father’s consent and against his will, in order to gratify his passions and then allowed her to return home, but not with a view to keeping her away from her home permanently, it was held that he was guilty of this offence.²⁴ If a girl under sixteen has been found in the streets by herself and seduced away, that is not a taking out of the possession of the father, even though he is living in the place and she lives with him.²⁵ If a man, by previous promises to a girl as to what he will do if she will leave her parents’ house and go to live with him, induces her at ²¹ (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 11.

²² Manktelow, (1853) 6 Cox 143.

²³ Jagan Nath, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 630, [1914] AIR (O) 126. See Jagannadha Rao v. Kamuraju, (1900) 24 Mad: 284.

²⁴ Timmins, (1860) 8 Cox 401; Bailey, (1859)

8 Cox 238. But see Hibbert, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 184.

²⁵ Green, (1862) 3 F. & F. 274, followed in Hibbert, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 184; Primett, (1856) 1 F. & F. 50.

length to do so, and then receives and harbours her secretly, he is guilty of taking her out of the possession of her parents.¹

It is not necessary to show a trespass or anything of that nature in the taking, other than the act of taking.²

Bramwell, B., in stating the law on the subject, said: "I am of opinion that if a young woman leaves her father's house without any persuasion, inducement, or blandishment held out to her by a man, so that she has got fairly away from home, and then goes to him, although it may be his moral duty to return her to her parents' custody, yet his not doing so is no infringement of this Act of Parliament, for the Act does not say he shall restore her, but only that he shall not take her away. It is, however, equally clear that, if the girl, acting under his persuasion, leaves her father's house, although he is not present at the moment, yet, if he avails himself of that leaving which took place at his persuasion, that would be a taking her out of the father's possession, because the persuasion would be the motive cause of her leaving. Again, although she may not leave at the appointed time, and although he may not wish that she should have left at that particular time, yet if, finding she has left, he avails himself of that to induce her to continue away from her father's custody, in my judgment he is also guilty, if his persuasion operated on her mind so as to induce her to leave."³

If the suggestion to go away with the accused came from the girl only, and he took the merely passive part of yielding to such suggestion, he is entitled to an acquittal.⁴

When taking is complete.—The offence of kidnapping from lawful guardianship is complete when the minor is actually taken from lawful guardianship; it is not an offence continuing so long as the minor is kept out of such guardianship. The act of taking is not, in the proper sense of the term, a continuous act; when once the boy or girl has been actually taken out of the keeping, the act is a completed one.⁵ The question whether such taking was or was not complete is a question of fact in each particular case. J, a minor girl, was taken away from her husband's house to the house of R and there kept for two days. Then one M came and took her away to his own house and kept her there for twenty days, and subsequently clandestinely removed her to the house of the accused, and from that house the accused and M took her through different places to Calcutta. It was held that the taking away out of the guardianship of the husband was complete before the accused joined the principal offender in taking the girl to Calcutta, and that the accused, therefore, could not be convicted under s. 363.⁶ Where one L enticed a minor girl to come out of a gachhi to the road and then to the motor car in which R was sitting so that the latter might drive away with her, it was held that the offence of kidnapping was complete only when R drove away with her.⁷

Speaking generally, the keeping of the guardian will be at an end when the person of the minor has been transferred from the custody of the guardian or some person on his behalf into the custody of some person not entitled to the custody of the minor.⁸

'Enticing' is an act of the accused by which the person kidnapped is induced of his or her own accord to go to the kidnapper. It is not necessary that the taking or entering should be shown to have been by means of force or fraud.⁹ For instance, the enticing away of a child playing on a public road is sufficient.¹⁰

¹ Robb, (1864) 4 F. & F. 59; George Kipps, (1850) 4 Cox 167.

² Frazer, (1861) 8 Cox 446.

³ Christian Olifier, (1866) 10 Cox 402, 404.

⁴ James Jarvis, (1903) 20 Cox 249. See Nga San Hlaing, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 205, 8 Burma L. R. 255.

⁵ Nemai Chatteraj, (1900) 27 Cal. 1041, F.B.; Chekutty, (1902) 26 Mad. 454; Ram Dei, (1896) 18 All. 350; Ram Sundar, (1896) 19 All. 109; Nanak Sao, (1926) 5 Pat. 536; Chanda, (1892) P. R. No. 6 of 1894; Mad. Baksh alias Lehna, (1893) P. R. No. 8 of 1894. Samia Kaundan, (1876) 1 Mad. 173, has been distinguished in Nemai's case on the ground that that was a case of kidnapping out of British India and, as, when the accused in that case intervened, the minor had not been actually taken out of British India, the process of taking was regarded as still going on, or continuing.

⁶ Ibid.

⁷ Rekha Rai, (1927) 6 Pat. 471; Khushal, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 615, [1931] AIR (L) 53.

⁸ Gurdit Singh, (1916) 17 Cr. L. J. 236, [1916] AIR (L) 230.

⁹ Bhungee Ahur, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 5; Amgad Bugeah, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 61; Koordan Sing, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 15; Abdul Sathar, (1927) 54 M. L. J. 456, 27 L. W. 683, 29 Cr. L. J. 635, [1927] AIR (M) 585.

¹⁰ Mussamut Ozeerun, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 62 [98].

'Minor.'—This word includes married as well as unmarried female minors.¹¹ According to Mahomedan law the occurrence of puberty determines minority and the mother's right to custody, but for the purpose of s. 363 regard must be had only to the definition of minority in s. 3, Indian Majority Act.¹²

Abetment.—The offence of kidnapping not being a continuing one there can be no abetment of the taking after the minor has once been completely taken out of the keeping of her lawful guardian.¹³ But if there is a conspiracy before the kidnapping takes place, a conviction for abetment of kidnapping can be sustained.¹⁴

2. 'Under sixteen years of age if a female.'—Where the minor kidnapped is a girl under sixteen years of age, it is no defence that the accused did not know the girl to be under sixteen, or that from her appearance he might have thought she was of a greater age.¹⁵ Any one dealing with such a girl does so at his peril, and if she turns out to be under sixteen he must take the consequences,¹⁶ even though he bona fide believed and had reasonable ground for believing that she was over sixteen.¹⁷

If the girl is not under sixteen no offence is committed under this section.¹⁸

3. 'Any person of unsound mind.'—An unconscious person cannot be said to be of unsound mind. Where a girl of twenty years of age had been made unconscious from dhatūra poisoning when she was taken away, it was held that she could not be said to be a person of unsound mind and the person taking her away was not guilty of the offence of kidnapping under s. 366.¹⁹

4. 'Out of the keeping of the lawful guardian.'—"The Legislature has advisedly preferred this phrase to the word 'possession' which frequently recurs in the Code—in connection with inanimate objects. The word 'keeping'... connotes the fact that it is compatible with independence of action and movement in the object kept. It implies neither prehension nor detention but rather maintenance, protection and control, manifested not by continual action but as available on necessity arising. And this relation between the minor and the guardian is... certainly not dissolved so long as the minor can at will take advantage of it and place herself within the sphere of its operation."²⁰ The offence consists in taking the girl out of the guardianship of the lawful guardian, and so long as the girl has an opportunity of going back to her guardian the relationship of guardianship continues. The expression "taking out of the keeping of the lawful guardian" must signify some act done by the accused which may be regarded as the proximate cause of the person going out of the keeping of the guardian or, in other words, an act but for which the person would not have gone out of the keeping of the guardian as he or she did.²¹ A girl under sixteen years of age was going to a vegetable market in search of work. On her way she met accused No. 1, another woman, who asked the girl to accompany her under a promise of obtaining work for her. The woman took the girl to her house and kept her there till evening, when she was removed by accused No. 2 to a bungalow and kept there for two days after which she was allowed to return to her home. It was held that the relation between the minor and the guardian was not dissolved at the time when accused No. 1 met the minor in the market, and that the accused were guilty under s. 366.²² Where a minor girl leaves the immediate custody of her lawful guardian for a temporary purpose she will be deemed to be still in his keeping. Where a female minor met a person in the street and went away voluntarily with that person, it was held that she was just as much in the possession of her legal guardian when she was walking in the street, unless she had given up the intention of returning home, as if she had actually been in her guardian's house when taken off.²³ A, a married

¹¹ Kammu, (1878) P. R. No. 12 of 1879.

¹² Muthu Ibrahi, (1913) 37 Mad. 567.

¹³ Durga Das, (1904) P. R. No. 13 of 1904, 1 Cr. L. J. 949; Abdur Rahman, (1916) 38 All. 464; Gokaran, (1920) 24 O. C. 329, 23 Cr. L. J. 58, [1921] AIR (O) 226.

¹⁴ Tika, (1903) 26 All. 197.

¹⁵ Robins, (1844) 1 C. & K. 456; Krishna Maharana, (1929) 9 Pat. 647.

¹⁶ Christian Olifier, (1866) 10 Cox 402; Mycock, (1871) 12 Cox 28.

¹⁷ Prince, (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154; Krishna Maharana, (1929) 9 Pat. 647; Kesar Mal, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 727, 33 Cr. L. J. 673, [1932] AIR (L) 555.

¹⁸ Mirza, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 1011, [1918] AIR (L) 37.

¹⁹ Din Mohammad, [1939] Lah. 517.

²⁰ Jetha, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 785, 788, 1 Cr. L. J. 981, 983; Karan Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 792, 17 Cr. L. J. 532, [1916] AIR (A) 272.

²¹ Abdul Sathar, (1927) 54 M. L. J. 456, 27 L. W. 683, 29 Cr. L. J. 635, [1928] AIR (M) 585.

²² Jetha, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 785, 1 Cr. L. J. 981; Mulo, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 182, 16 Cr. L. J. 117; Manshomal, (1912) 6 S. L. R. 71, 13 Cr. L. J. 736.

²³ Nga Shwe Thwe, (1907) 1 U. B. R. (1907-1909) (P. C.) 1, 6 Cr. L. J. 30.

woman under sixteen years of age, being dissatisfied with her mother-in-law, left her husband's home to go to her maternal uncle. On the way she was induced by K to accompany him and he deceitfully took her to a village where she was kept in the house of K's brother. Here negotiations were set on foot by K to remarry the girl as a jat, but on the girl disclosing her identity to the inquirers K left the village. Thereupon K's brother took her to the police-station, and pending inquiry by the police she lived for a month at his place. It was held that K was guilty of kidnapping, inasmuch as although the girl left home of her own accord she did not cease to be under the guardianship of the husband, her lawful guardian, but that K's brother was not guilty of any offence as he had done nothing in furtherance of a common intention.²⁴ A jat girl under sixteen years of age was ordered by her father to take food to the bullocks. As she was coming home, one of the accused came to her and persuaded her to accompany him. Her hair was cut and she was dressed in boy's clothes. She lived for some time with both the accused. After this both the accused were taking away the girl when they were discovered by a chowkidar. She was crying and told the chowkidar that she was a girl and not a boy. The chowkidar then arrested the accused. It was held that the accused were guilty of kidnapping, having removed the girl from the lawful guardianship of her father without his consent.²⁵

There must be a taking or enticing of a child out of the keeping of the lawful guardian. Where, therefore, a girl runs away from home in consequence of ill-treatment, and, on meeting the accused on the road, agrees to take service as a coolie and goes with him, this offence is not committed.¹ Similarly, where a girl was driven away from her parental roof and was found some days after in the company of the accused, no offence was held to have been committed.² Where a person took away a minor girl who had been turned out by her husband and allowed to be free to go anywhere, there was no kidnapping from lawful guardianship.³ If a minor girl leaves the protection of her husband and parents of her free will or voluntarily, and subsequently stays with another man of her own accord, that man will not be guilty of taking her out of the keeping of the lawful guardian of such minor.⁴ The mere fact that the minor leaves the protection of her guardian does not put her out of the guardian's keeping. But if the minor abandons her guardian with no intention of returning she cannot be held to continue in the guardian's keeping.⁵ Where a female minor by a preconcerted arrangement with the accused, left the house of her parents of her own accord, intending not to return, and met the accused at a place appointed and eloped with him willingly, it was held that the accused was an active participator in the minor's leaving her parents' house, and was, therefore, guilty of this offence.⁶ Where a female minor went to the accused's house and asked him to take her away, and she had no intention of leaving her parents if the accused did not consent, it was held that the minor had no such intention of not returning as to remove her from her parents' guardianship, and consequently, the accused had committed this offence.⁷ A low class girl under sixteen years of age left the custody of her husband and his parents and voluntarily stayed with the accused for a month. After that she was made over to certain other persons who performed certain operations on her so as to make her appear as much as possible a jat woman. She then changed hands several times and was finally made over to a person in order to be married to his brother. It was held that the accused was not guilty of the offence of taking or enticing a minor out of the keeping of her lawful guardian.⁸

English cases.—A went in the night to the house of B, and placed a ladder against a window, and held it for J, the daughter of B, to descend, which she did, and then eloped with A. It was held that this was a taking of J out of the possession of her father.⁹ A girl under the age of sixteen years having, by persuasion, been

²⁴ Karan Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 792, 17 Cr. L. J. 532, [1916] AIR (A) 272.

²⁵ Harkesh, (1918) 40 All. 507.

¹ Gunder Singh, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 6.

² Pandayaram Sastrulu, [1912] M. W. N. 538, 13 Cr. L. J. 598.

³ Francis Hector, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 401, [1937] AIR (A) 182.

⁴ Ram Chander, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 265, 15 Cr. L. J. 265, [1914] AIR (A) 376; Ewaz Ali, (1915) 37 All. 624; Lachhi Ram, (1928) 24 Cr. L. J. 564, [1928] AIR (L) 330.

⁵ R. W. Valliant v. Mrs. Eleazar, (1924) 30 C. W. N. 215, 26 Cr. L. J. 977, [1926] AIR (C) 467; Israr Husain, [1941] Luck. 128.

⁶ Nga Te Hla, (1907) 1 U. B. R. (1907-1909) (P. C.) 11, 7 Cr. L. J. 210; Nga San Hlaing, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 205.

⁷ Asgar Ali, (1909) 1 U. B. R. (1907-1909) (P. C.) 27, 11 Cr. L. J. 81; Abdul Sathar, (1927) 54 M. L. J. 456, 27 L. W. 683, 29 Cr. L. J. 635, [1928] AIR (M) 585.

⁸ Ewaz Ali, (1915) 37 All. 624.

⁹ Robins, (1844) 1 C. & K. 450.

induced by the accused to leave her father's house and go away with him without the consent of the father, left her home alone by a preconcerted arrangement between them, and went to a place appointed, where she was met by the accused, and then went away together some distance, without the intention of returning. It was held that there was a taking of the girl out of the father's possession when he met the girl and went away with her at the appointed place, as up to that moment she had not absolutely renounced her father's protection.¹⁰ A met a girl in the street going to school, and induced her to go with him to a town some miles distant, where he seduced her. They returned together and he left her where he met her. The girl then went to her home, where she lived with her father and mother, having been absent some hours longer than would have been the case if she had not met A. A made no inquiry, and did not know who the girl was, or whether she had a father or mother living or not, but he had no reason to, and did not, believe that she was a girl of the town. It was held that A was not guilty of having unlawfully taken the girl out of the possession of her father under s. 55 of 24 & 25 Vic., c. 100, which says: 'Whosoever shall unlawfully take ... any unmarried girl, being under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.'¹¹ Under similar circumstances the accused in British India will be guilty of kidnapping because his omission to inquire whether a minor has a guardian or not is no defence.¹² Where a servant girl had permission from her master to go and see her parents from Sunday to Monday night, and went to see them on the Sunday for a few hours only, and then told them that she was going back to her employment, instead of which she remained with the accused all night, and did not return to her master's employment until some days afterwards, it was held that the girl was under the lawful charge of her master, and not of her father, at the time of the alleged offence, and that there would be no conviction for kidnapping.¹³ Similarly, where a girl was employed as a bar-maid at a distance from her father's home, it was held that she was under the lawful charge of her employer, and not in the possession of her father.¹⁴

A child under ten years of age is, prima facie, subject to guardianship, and any one removing such child without permission properly obtained takes the risk of such act upon himself; the fact of having omitted to inquire whether the child has a guardian or not is no defence.¹⁵ If the minor is not in the custody of a lawful guardian the offence cannot be committed whatever the belief of the taker may be.¹⁶

In the case of a grown-up person of unsound mind there must be evidence of some kind of persuasion or moral force as a result of which he was taken out of the protection of his guardian.¹⁷

'Lawful guardian.'—The word 'lawful' does not necessarily mean that the person who entrusts a minor to the care or custody of another must stand in the position of a person having a legal duty or obligation to the minor. It is a sufficient compliance with the section and its Explanation if the entrusting of the minor to the care of another is effected without illegality or the commission of any unlawful act by a person legally competent to do so.¹⁸ The explanation of these words is intended to obviate the difficulty the prosecution might be put to in being bound to prove strictly, in cases of abduction, that the person from whose care the minor had been abducted was the guardian of such minor within the meaning of the legal acceptance of the word.¹⁹ A brother of eighteen years is lawful guardian of his sister aged sixteen when the parents are dead.²⁰ But it must be shown that the minor was abducted from lawful guardianship, and lawful guardianship is the guardianship of a person who is lawfully entrusted with the care or custody of the minor. A girl of fourteen years, being left an orphan, accompanied a woman to a town where they lived by begging and selling grass. She was persuaded by a man G to depart with him without the knowledge of the woman. She remained with him for some months and was betrothed to one of his sons. One B persuaded her to quit G's house and

¹⁰ Manktelow, (1853) 6 Cox 143.

¹¹ Hibbert, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 184.

¹² Umsadbaksh, (1878) 3 Bom. 178.

¹³ Miller, (1876) 13 Cox 179.

¹⁴ Henkers, (1866) 16 Cox 257.

¹⁵ Umsadbaksh, (1878) 3 Bom. 178.

¹⁶ Hardeo, (1879) P. R. No. 7 of 1880; Khuda Baksh, (1887) P. R. No. 27 of 1887.

¹⁷ Abdul Kayum Mamajivalla, Criminal Appeal No. 86 of 1913, decided on May 29, 1913, by Scott, C. J., and Shah, J. (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁸ Mussammatt Kesar, (1918) 4 P. L. J. 74, 20 Cr. L. J. 161, [1919] AIR (P) 27, F.B.

¹⁹ Pemantle, (1882) 8 Cal. 971.

²⁰ Mehr Hussain Shah, (1929) 81 P. L. R. 554, 81 Cr. L. J. 530, [1929] AIR (L) 885.

to go with him. This she did. B was; thereupon, convicted of an offence under s. 363. The High Court quashed the conviction on the ground that G was not the lawful guardian of the minor as he had not been lawfully entrusted with the care or custody of her.²¹ Where an orphan minor Hindu girl, who was entrusted to the care of her maternal uncles who had obtained mutation in her favour of certain property which was claimed by her paternal uncles, was forcibly carried away by her paternal uncles and got married, it was held that the paternal uncles were guilty of kidnapping her from lawful guardianship.²²

Explanation.—"The Explanation... is not intended to limit the protection which the section gives to parents and minors. It is intended to extend that protection by including in the term 'lawful guardian' any person lawfully entrusted with the care or custody of the minor. The fact that a father allows his child to be in the custody of a servant or friend, for a limited purpose and for a limited time, cannot... determine the father's rights as guardian or his legal possession for the purposes of the Criminal Law... the Court must consider all the facts and see whether they are consistent or not with the continuance of the father's legal possession of the minor. If they are not inconsistent, the minor must be held to be in the father's possession or keeping even though the actual physical possession should be temporarily with a friend or other person."²³ De facto guardianship is sufficient.²⁴ The term 'lawful guardian' does not include a person who has himself gained possession of the minor by an offence under this section. But it does include, not only the parents or relations in whose house the minor lives and is brought up, but any other person with whom the minor resides by the consent, express or implied, of those who have the higher legal right. Thus, where the husband of a minor girl, under sixteen years of age, sold her to another man, and while she was living with that man she was persuaded by the accused to leave his house and to go away with a third man, it was held that for the purpose of this section the person to whom the girl was sold was the lawful guardian of the girl and that the accused was consequently guilty of kidnapping her from lawful guardianship."²⁵

The Explanation extends the accepted definition of the words "lawful guardian" under civil law to preclude persons other than the civil law guardian from raising the technical plea that the legal relation of ward and guardian did not exist between the person kidnapped and the person from whose actual custody the minor is taken away. But as against a person, who, in fact, is the civil law guardian of the minor, mere de facto guardianship cannot be set up so as to convict the real civil law guardian of an offence under this section.¹ The word 'entrusted' means the giving, handing over, or confiding of something by one person to another. It involves the idea of active power and motive by the person reposing the confidence towards the person in whom the confidence is reposed. For an entrusting, within the meaning of this explanation, there must necessarily be three persons, viz. (1) the person reposing the confidence or trust; (2) the person in whom the trust is reposed; and (3) the person constituting the subject-matter of the trust. This Explanation contemplates a declaration of trust by a person competent to make such a declaration, conveying, handing over and confiding a minor to the care and custody of another in whom a confidence and trust is imposed. It is necessary for the person accepting the trust to do so either by express assent, or by necessary implication arising from tacit acquiescence in the performance of the trust. Neither the declaration of trust nor its acceptance need be necessarily in writing; it is sufficient if the declaration is verbally made and given, or if it arises from a course of conduct consistent only with the existence of such antecedent declaration; and accepted verbally or by necessary implication arising from the conduct of the person so entrusted with the duty imposed.² This case has

²¹ Buldeo, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 286.

²² Baij Nath, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 640.

²³ Per Benson, J., in Jagannadha Rao v. Kamaraju, (1900) 24 Mad. 284, 291; Baz, (1922) 3 Lah. 213; Mohammad Husain, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R. 10, 26 Cr. L. J. 796, [1925] AIR (A) 15; Jangli Mian, (1933) 15 P. L. T. 229, 35 Cr. L. J. 814; K. K. Ali, (1936) 18 P. L. T. 535, [1937] P. W. N. 454, 38 Cr. L. J. 673; Baz, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 588, [1922] AIR (L) 380.

²⁴ Muthuswami Sastri v. Narayana Sastri,

[1911] 1 M. W. N. 36, 21 M. L. J. 195, 11 Cr. L. J. 641; Velagupudi Appayya, (1911) 12 Cr. L. J. 239; Banamali Tripathy, (1942) 22 Pat. 263.

²⁵ Mussammatt Fatti, (1911) P. R. No. 7 of 1911, 12 Cr. L. J. 211.

¹ Saharali Mahammad v. Kamizuddin Mahammad, (1930) 58 Cal. 897; Dhuna Manjhi, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 918, [1943] AIR (P) 109.

² Mussammatt Kesar, (1918) 4 P. L. J. 74, 20 Cr. L. J. 161, F.B.; Mohansingh, (1930) 31 Cr. L. J. 949, [1930] AIR (S) 164.

been doubted in a subsequent case decided by the same High Court. The Court observed that it is doubtful "if the section contemplates either a formal declaration of trust or that there must necessarily be three persons in order that a person may be lawfully entrusted with the care and custody of a minor... a person should be regarded in the eyes of law as having been lawfully entrusted with the care and custody of a minor, if he has acquired control over the minor lawfully and in such circumstances as would imply trust even though he may not have been formally entrusted with the care and custody of the minor by a third person."³ The Nagpur High Court has held that the expression "lawfully entrusted" signifies that the care and custody of a minor should have arisen in some lawful manner so as to show as if the person having the custody of the minor had been entrusted with the care and custody of the minor. The "entrustment" contemplated by the Explanation may be by a legal guardian; it may be written or oral; express or implied. In the absence of a legal guardian or proof of declaration, written or oral, by a legal guardian, the entrustment may be presumed from a well defined and consistent course of conduct of a person alleged to be the lawful guardian of the minor or of the person actually taking upon himself the duties of the care and custody of the minor. The expression "lawful guardian" must be literally construed so as to distinguish it from "legal guardian" as a guardian may be lawful without being legal.⁴

Temporary guardianship does not oust lawful guardian's right.—Where a girl who was under the temporary guardianship of a person was taken away with his consent and married to a boy without the consent of her father, this offence was held to have been committed.⁵ A girl under sixteen years of age, living under the guardianship of her mother, was sent by the latter with another woman on a visit to her sister and on the way there the accused kidnapped her and took her to their own village and there she was married to one of the accused. The accused were convicted of an offence under s. 366 as it was immaterial whether the girl was kidnapped with the consent of the woman in charge, as she had no authority to give such consent.⁶ Where the accused was put in charge of a boy, below the age of fourteen, by his father for the purpose of teaching the Koran, but he took him away to a distant city with the object of teaching him how to paint scenes so that he might join a theatrical company, it was held that the removal of the boy amounted to taking him out of the keeping of the lawful guardian.⁷

Hindu law.—A father is the guardian of his children and is ordinarily entitled to their custody. A mother cannot have a right to the custody of her legitimate children adversely to the father. Ordinarily, the custody of the mother is the custody of the father, and any removal of the children from place to place by the mother ought to be taken to be consistent with the right of the father as guardian, and not as taking out of his keeping. If a mother removes a girl from her father's house for the express purpose of marrying her without his consent, it will amount to a taking out of the keeping of the lawful guardian.⁸

If the husband and wife live separate and the children are given in the custody of the wife under an order of the Court, the father cannot take away the children from the mother. If he does so he will be guilty of kidnapping.⁹ But if there is no order of the Court, the removal by the father of his child from the custody of its mother, who was deserted by him, will not amount to kidnapping from lawful guardianship because under Hindu law the father is the lawful guardian of his children and his rights of guardianship are paramount to those of any other person.¹⁰ The taking away of a minor Hindu girl from the custody of a person in temporary charge of her by a guardian under the Hindu law does no amount to kidnapping. The only persons having an absolute right to the custody of a Hindu minor are the father and mother of the minor. No such right exists in the person who happens to be the nearest major

³ K. K. Ali, (1936) 15 Pat. 817, 832.

⁴ Nathusingh, [1942] Nag. 34.

⁵ Jagannadha Rao v. Kamaraju, (1900) 24 Mad. 284.

⁶ Baz, (1922) 3 Lah. 213.

⁷ Mohammad Hussain, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R.

10, 26 Cr. L. J. 796, [1925] AIR (A) 295.

⁸ Prankrishna Surma, (1882) 8 Cal. 969.

See Dhara Singh v. Mussummat Kahno, (1877) P. R. No. 8 of 1878.

⁹ Damodardas Kuberdas Soni, (1917) Crim. Appln. for Revision No. 313 of 1917, decided by Heaton and Shah, JJ., on November 30, 1917 (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁰ Chowdarayya, [1932] Mad. 805.

male relation of the minor and such a relationship would not in law be a defence to a charge of kidnapping a minor from the custody of a de facto guardian.¹¹

The mother is the natural guardian of her minor children after the father, if the father has not appointed any one else as their guardian.¹² The mother of an illegitimate child is its proper and natural guardian during the period of nurture. And where the mother, on her death-bed, entrusts the care of such child to a person who accepts the trust and maintains the child, such a person is "lawfully entrusted" with the care and custody of the minor.¹³

The husband is the lawful guardian of a girl after marriage. The husband of a Hindu girl of fifteen is her lawful guardian; and, if the father of the minor takes away the girl from her husband, without the latter's consent, such taking away amounts to kidnapping from lawful guardianship even though the father may have had no criminal intention in so doing.¹⁴ Among the Hindus, according to a well recognised custom, a minor married girl, until she attains puberty, continues to be under the guardianship of her father if she is legitimate and of her mother if she is illegitimate.¹⁵ Where a married girl had been away from her husband's house for a period of five or six years, and lived with her mother, it was held that she was not in the "keeping" of her husband but that of her mother.¹⁶

The husband's relations, if any exist, within the degree of a sapinda, are guardians of a minor widow in preference to her father or his relations. If a minor widow has taken up her residence with her husband's mother, the husband's mother is the lawful guardian of the girl.¹⁷

A minor brother cannot be the guardian of his sister and cannot therefore maintain a complaint for kidnapping.¹⁸

Mahomedan law.—Under Mahomedan law, if the father take away a son under seven years, or a daughter under puberty, if Sunni, or under seven years, if Shiah, or an illegitimate child from the custody of the mother, he can be said to kidnap his own child: because the mother is by law the lawful guardian.¹⁹ According to Sunni law, the mother is the guardian of the minor daughter till she reaches puberty which is presumed when the daughter completes her fifteenth year. Even a divorced wife is entitled to the custody of her children.²⁰ In the absence of mother, mother's mother is the lawful guardian of a girl who has not attained puberty.²¹ The removal of a Mahomedan girl of eleven or twelve years of age from the house of her mother-in-law in whose charge her husband had left her, by a third person acting at the instance, and under the instigation, of her mother, was held to be not a taking from "lawful guardianship" because under the Mahomedan law the mother was entitled to the custody of her daughter, in preference to the husband, until the girl attained the age of puberty.²² S, a Mahomedan married girl under sixteen years of age, who had attained puberty, was taken away from her mother's house with whom she was living (her father being dead) by the respondents. The Magistrate convicted the accused under ss. 366 and 368. On appeal, the Sessions Judge quashed the conviction on the ground that as under Mahomedan law a mother could be a guardian only until her daughter attained puberty or completed her fifteenth year, S had become sui juris and that therefore the accused had not kidnapped her from lawful guardianship. On an appeal being preferred by Government against the acquittal, it was held that the mother of the girl was her lawful guardian within the terms of this section; and that the accused had been rightly convicted of the charge of kidnapping S from the guardianship of her mother.²³

¹¹ Sital Prasad, (1919) 42 All. 146.

¹² Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha, (1867) 7 W. R. (Civil) 73.

¹³ Pemantle, (1882) 8 Cal. 971.

¹⁴ Dhuronidhur Ghose, (1889) 17 Cal. 298; Behari Maharaj, (1906) 4 Cr. L. J. 361.

¹⁵ Nathusingh, [1942] Nag. 34.

¹⁶ Banamali Tripathy, (1942) 22 Pat. 263.

¹⁷ Tek Chand, (1915) P. R. No. 27 of 1915, 16 Cr. L. J. 780, [1915] AIR (L) 390.

¹⁸ Mam Raj, (1921) 3 L. L. J. 588, [1921] AIR (L) 316.

¹⁹ Musst. Raj Begum v. Nawab Reza Hossein, (1865) 2 W. R. (Civ. Rul.) 76; Nur Kadir v. Zuleikha Bibi, (1885) 11 Cal. 649; Hamid Ali

v. Imtiazan, (1878) 2 All. 71; Idu v. Amiran, (1886) 8 All. 322; Bawa Mahomed Gulzar, (1935) Crim. Rev. No. 232 of 1935, decided by Broomfield and Divatia, JJ., on September 9, 1935 (Bom. Unrep.).

²⁰ Ayshabai, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 536, 1 Cr. L. J. 599; Zarabibi v. Abdul Rezzak, (1910) 12 Bom. L. R. 891, 11 Cr. L. J. 687.

²¹ Bawa Mahomed Gulzar, (1935) Cr. Rev. No. 232 of 1935, decided by Broomfield and Divatia, JJ., on September 9, 1935 (Bom. Unrep.).

²² Korban, (1904) 32 Cal. 444.

²³ Miran Baksh, (1905) P. R. No. 60 of 1905, 2 Cr. L. J. 190.

A brother under eighteen years of age is the lawful guardian of a girl whose parents are dead and who is under sixteen years of age. There is no rule of law which prevents him from being the 'lawful guardian.'²⁴

The husband becomes the guardian of his wife after she attains puberty.²⁵ It is necessary to prove a legal marriage between the woman and the alleged husband.¹ The husband is not the lawful guardian of her person before puberty. In the absence of any evidence that a lawful guardian entrusted the custody of a Mahomedan minor girl to her husband, a person cannot be convicted for kidnapping her from the custody of her husband. Where the maternal uncle of a minor girl carried her away from her husband's house by force, it was held that, in the absence of evidence to prove that the husband was lawfully entrusted with the care and custody of the girl, the maternal uncle had committed no offence.²

If the mother marries a person who is an outsider so far as the family is concerned, she loses her right to be the lawful guardian of her minor daughter. If her minor daughter under sixteen years of age is enticed away from her custody, the accused cannot be convicted under this section.³ This decision is against the spirit of the Explanation to this section.

The mother is the natural guardian of her illegitimate children.

Other nationalities.—There is no law under which among Native Christians a father has a preferential right to the custody of his children to the mother and, therefore, the removal of her children by the mother from the house occupied by their father does not amount to an offence under this section.⁴ Where on an application by the husband for divorce the District Judge made a decree nisi for dissolution of marriage, and also directed the wife to deliver up to the husband the son born of the marriage and subsequent to the decree the husband without the assistance of the Court obtained the custody of the son, but before the confirmation of the decree by the High Court the wife removed the boy from the father's custody and was charged with kidnapping, it was held that the order for custody which was made was an order nisi without legal effect until confirmed by the High Court, and the wife had committed no offence in removing the boy from the father's custody.⁵

In the case of illegitimate children, under the English law, neither the father nor the mother has a preferential right. During the period of nurture the mother would naturally be preferred,⁶ but after the period the putative father would have the preference.⁷

5. 'Without the consent of such guardian.'—The consent of the minor is immaterial.⁸

Consent given by the guardian after the commission of the offence would be of no avail. Where a temporary guardian is proved to have been in collusion with the other party, and the taking away is accomplished in consequence of such collusion, there could be no such consent of the lawful guardian as the section requires.⁹ The English Courts have held that by the fraud of the temporary guardian the right to possession of the child reverts to its natural guardian.¹⁰

A consent given on a misrepresentation of a fact is one given under a misconception of fact within the meaning of s. 90, and as such is not useful as a consent under this section. A misrepresentation as to the intention of a person is a misrepresentation of a fact.¹¹ If a minor is taken with the consent of the guardian and subsequently

²⁴ Mehr Hussain Shah, (1929) 31 P. L. R. 554, 31 Cr. L. J. 530, [1929] AIR (L) 835.

²⁵ Nur Kadir v. Zuleikha Bibi, (1885) 11 Cal. 649; Wazeer Ali v. Kaim Ali, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 196.

¹ Wasima, (1935) 36 Cr. L. J. 1031, [1935] AIR (A) 566.

² Derajuddin Akanda, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 531, 37 C. L. J. 329, 24 Cr. L. J. 712, [1923] AIR (C) 672.

³ Harbhorasha Mahommed v. Jhapuran Bibi, (1929) 51 C. L. J. 476, 32 Cr. L. J. 90, [1930] AIR (C) 665.

⁴ Mrs. Peter, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 513, [1927] AIR (L) 496.

⁵ Borthwick v. Borthwick, (1913) 41 Cal. 714.

⁶ Pemantle, (1882) 8 Cal. 971; Barnardo v.

McHugh, [1891] A. C. 388.

⁷ Nash, (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 454.

⁸ Bhungee Ahur, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 5; Amgad Bugeah, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 61; Koordan Sing, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 15; Sokee, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 36 [54]; Gooroodoss Rajbunsee, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 7; Mussammat Soma, (1916) P. R. No. 17 of 1916, 18 Cr. L. J. 18, [1916] AIR (L) 414; Wali Muhammad, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1018, [1926] AIR (L) 677; Bhagwati Prasad, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 985, [1929] AIR (A) 709.

⁹ Ganesh, (1909) 31 All. 448.

¹⁰ See Roscoe, 14th Edn., p. 358.

¹¹ Jaladu, (1911) 36 Mad. 453; Mussammat Soma, (1916) P. R. No. 17 of 1916, 18 Cr. L. J. 18, [1916] AIR (L) 414.

married improperly without the consent of the guardian to any person, such improper marriage would not by itself amount to kidnapping.¹²

If a man by false and fraudulent representations induce the parents of a girl to allow him to take her away, such taking will amount to kidnapping.¹³ But where a mother had by her conduct countenanced the daughter in a lax course of life, by permitting her to go out alone at night and to dance at public houses, and she was taken away for a day by the accused, it was held that the act of the accused could not be said to have happened against her will.¹⁴ Similarly, where a female minor went to the house of a mutual friend and had sexual intercourse with the accused, she having previously had sexual intercourse with the accused in the presence and with the consent of her guardian, her mother, in her mother's house, it was held that the accused could not be convicted of kidnapping as there was no taking of the minor; and even if there was a constructive taking, as the mother was proved to have connived at the seduction of her daughter, there was reason to believe that the subsequent taking was effected with her consent.¹⁵

Pledging minor girl.—The pledging of a girl to secure a loan is not a legal contract and may not be enforced in law; but if a minor is retained in the custody of a person with the consent of the lawful guardian he will not commit the offence of kidnapping. It is essential in terms of the section that the minor should be taken or enticed out of the keeping of the lawful guardian of the minor without the consent of such guardian; and if there is consent given, the section has no application. It does not matter whether the consent is given for consideration or not. If, after having obtained custody of a minor in a lawful manner with the consent of its guardian, the minor is married or disposed of in such a manner as to make it impossible for the lawful guardian to get back the custody of the minor, an offence under this section would be committed and the temporary guardian doing any such act would be liable under the section; but so long as nothing is done which would render the restoration or exercise of the custody of the child by the lawful guardian impossible, the mere fact of transferring the guardianship by the temporary guardian would not constitute an offence. Hence, where A pledged his girl with B to secure a loan, but he did not pay the loan, and B pledged her with C to secure a loan raised by him from C; and A, without demanding the custody of the girl from B or C, instituted a complaint under this section against B and C, it was held that neither B nor C was guilty of kidnapping.¹⁶

Marrying without consent of her 'lawful guardian.'—Where the mother had assigned by a will the guardianship of her minor daughter, and the duty of marrying her, to R, and a paternal relative of the daughter removed her by fraud and force for the purpose of getting her married to a person other than the one selected by R, it was held that the paternal relative had been guilty of kidnapping as well as abducting.¹⁷ Where a Hindu woman left her husband's house, taking with her her infant daughter, and went to the house of A, and on the same day the daughter was married to B, the brother of A, without the father's consent, it was held that A had committed an offence, under ss. 109 and 369, of abetting the offence of kidnapping.¹⁸ Where an orphan minor Hindu girl, who was entrusted to the care of her maternal uncles and had obtained mutation in her favour of certain property which was claimed by her paternal uncles, after having lived for eighteen months with the maternal uncles, was forcibly carried away by her paternal uncles and was given in marriage, it was held that the paternal uncles were guilty of kidnapping.¹⁹

Where a person carried off, without the consent of her father, a girl to whom he was betrothed by her father, because the father suddenly changed his mind and broke off the marriage, it was held that he was guilty of kidnapping.²⁰

Exception.—The Exception protects the father of an illegitimate child or the person who believes himself entitled to the lawful custody of a child. The act must ¹² Jaladu, (1911) 36 Mad. 453.

¹³ Hopkins, (1842) Car. & M. 254.

¹⁴ Primett, (1858) 1 F. & F. 50.

¹⁵ Abdul Rahman, (1912) 1 U. B. R. 136, 14 Cr. L. J. 109.

¹⁶ Jildar Kaiyer, (1929) 10 P. L. T. 326, 30 Cr. L. J. 980, [1929] AIR (P) 316.

¹⁷ Mahakor, (1895) Cr. R. No. 66 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 820.

¹⁸ Prankrishna Surma, (1882) 8 Cal. 969.

¹⁹ Baij Nath, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 640, [1914] AIR (O) 329.

²⁰ Gooroodoss Rajbunsee, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 7; Modhoo Paul, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 9.

not be in furtherance of an immoral or unlawful purpose. The word 'unlawful', in its general connotation, means what is not justifiable by law. It is wider than "illegal" and is not synonymous with "immoral." The father of an illegitimate child forcibly removing it from its mother to hush up the scandal is not protected by this Exception.²¹ If a child is kidnapped for a purpose which is prohibited and punishable by law the purpose is an "unlawful purpose" within the meaning of that term as used in the Exception to this section. Thus, the intention to give a child in marriage in contravention of Act XIX of 1929 is an "unlawful purpose" within the Exception.²²

Where a mother in good faith believed that she was entitled to the custody of her own minor children a conviction for kidnapping them from the guardianship of their father was set aside.²³ A husband cannot be convicted of kidnapping his own wife when he believes in good faith that he has the right of personal custody of his wife.²⁴

362. Whoever by force compels, or by any deceitful means induces,¹ any person to go from any place,² is said to abduct that person.

Abduction.

COMMENT.

This section merely gives a definition of the word 'abduction', which occurs in some of the penal provisions which follow. Under the Code, kidnapping from lawful guardianship is a substantive offence, but 'abduction' is an auxiliary act, not punishable by itself, but made criminal only when it is done with one or other of the intents specified in the following section.²⁵

"Kidnapping" and "abduction" stand on the same footing. They do not include the offence of wrongful confinement or keeping in confinement a kidnapped person.¹

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials :—

1. Forcible compulsion or inducement by deceitful means.
2. The object of such compulsion or inducement must be the going of a person from any place.

1. 'Whoever by force compels, or by any deceitful means induces.'—Where no force or deceit is practised on the person abducted, a conviction cannot stand.² The force or fraud must have been practised upon the person.³ Actual force is required and not show or threat of force.⁴

"To induce" means "to lead into", it connotes a leading of the woman in some direction in which she would not otherwise have gone. There must be a change of mind caused by an external pressure of some kind.⁵

An orphan girl about seventeen years of age was brought up by A as his own daughter. The accused, A's neighbour, induced her to leave home on the pretext that he would either marry her himself or get her married. He did neither but debauched her himself and handed her over to a friend of his who also proceeded to have connection with her. It was held that the expression 'deceitful means' is wide enough to include the inducing of a girl to leave her guardian's house by means of a representation that the person to whom she went would either marry her himself or arrange for her marriage and that the accused was guilty of this offence.⁶

2. 'Any person to go from any place.'—In the case of a grown up woman it would be an offence to carry her away by force against her own will even with the object of restoring her to her husband.⁷

²¹ Mahendranath Chakrabarti, (1934) 62 Cal. 629.

²² Khalil-ur-Rahman, (1933) 11 Ran. 213, F.B.

²³ Howka Ramalakshmi, (1886) 1 Weir 348; John Tinkler, (1859) 1 F. & F. 513.

²⁴ Askur, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 12.

²⁵ Sant Ram, (1929) 11 Lah. 178, 186; Bidhoomooke Dabee v. Sreemath Haldar, (1870) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 4, 6 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 129; Ganga Dei, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 91, 15 Cr. L. J. 154, [1914] AIR (A) 17; Nanhua Dhimar, (1930) 53 All. 140; Nura, (1933) 3 Cr. L. J. 1386, [1934] AIR (L) 227.

¹ Adhigope, (1946) 25 Pat. 241.

² Komal Dass, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

³ Barrett, (1884) 15 Cox 658.

⁴ Koya Moidin, [1937] M. W. N. 1197.

⁵ Allahrakhio, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 231, [1934] AIR (S) 164.

⁶ Mahbub, (1907) 4 A. L. J. R. 482, 6 Cr. L. J. 9.

⁷ Fatnaya, [1942] Lah. 470, 480.

The offence of abduction is a continuing offence and a girl is being abducted not only when she is first taken from any place but also when she is removed from one place to another.⁸ Accused came on to the roof of a house where a woman was sleeping. Waking her up they asked her to accompany them. She refused and they lifted her up in order to carry her away, whereupon she raised an alarm, and the accused dropped her on the roof and made good their escape. It was held that the accused were not guilty of abduction, inasmuch as the woman was not compelled to go from the place where she was, but was merely lifted up and was dropped down again, but that the action of the accused amounted to an attempt to abduct and that they were, therefore, guilty of an offence under ss. 366 and 511.⁹

Abduction and kidnapping.—‘Abduction’ differs from ‘kidnapping from guardianship’. ‘Kidnapping from guardianship’ is committed only in respect of a minor or person of unsound mind; ‘abduction’, in respect of any person. In ‘kidnapping’ the person kidnapped is removed out of lawful guardianship; in ‘abduction’ this is not necessary. In ‘kidnapping’ the minor or the person of unsound mind is simply taken away or enticed to go with the kidnapper; in ‘abduction’ force, compulsion, or deceitful means are used. In ‘kidnapping’ consent of the person enticed is immaterial. In ‘abduction’ consent of the person moved, if freely and voluntarily given, condones it. In ‘kidnapping’ the intent of the offender is irrelevant but in ‘abduction’ it is the all-important factor. Kidnapping from lawful guardianship is not a continuing offence. As soon as the minor is removed out of the custody of his or her guardian, the offence is completed, but a person is being abducted not only when he is first taken from any place but also when he is removed from one place to another.¹⁰

In ‘kidnapping from British India’, there is removal of a person outside British India without his consent or of some one authorised to give it. He may or may not be a minor or of unsound mind.

Abetment.—A married woman cannot abet her own abduction as herein defined.¹¹ Because if a woman consents to her own abduction a substantial offence of abduction is an impossibility.

363. Whoever kidnaps any person from British India or from lawful guardianship, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section specifies the punishment for the offences defined in ss. 360 and 361. To support a conviction of kidnapping from lawful guardianship under this section, the facts must come within the ambit of s. 361, i.e., the person against whom the offence is committed must be under the age of fourteen, if a male, and under the age of sixteen, if a female. This section must be read with s. 361, and the offence of kidnapping from lawful guardianship penalised by this section is the offence which is defined by s. 361.¹²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—For kidnapping from British India prove—

- (1) That the person in question was at the time of the offence in British India.
- (2) That the accused conveyed that person beyond the limits of British India.
- (3) That he did so without the consent of that person, or of some person legally authorized to consent on that person's behalf.

For kidnapping from guardianship prove—

- (1) That the person in question was at the time of the offence a minor under fourteen years of age (if a male), or under sixteen years of age (if a female); or that

⁸ Ganga Dei, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 91, 15 Cr. L. J. 154, [1914] AIR (A) 17.

⁹ Altu, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 119, 26 Cr. L. J. 948, [1925] AIR (L) 512.

¹⁰ Nanhua Dhimar, (1930) 53 All. 140; Nura,

(1933) 35 Cr. L. J. 1386, [1934] AIR (L) 227.

¹¹ Natha Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 11 of 1883.

¹² Ismail Sayadsaheb, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 886, 57 Bom. 537, F. B.

such person was of unsound mind. The age of the girl must be proved by the prosecution. A doctor's opinion as to age is not of much value.¹³ Where, in a trial under a charge of kidnapping, the doctor's statement as to the age of the girl was an opinion based entirely on such particulars as her height, weight and teeth, which could be observed by any layman, and it did not appear that the doctor brought any scientific knowledge to bear upon his opinion, it was held that such opinion did not amount to legal proof of age of the girl.¹⁴

Where in a case under this section the Magistrate finds that there is prima facie sufficient evidence to show that the girl was enticed away he should not be content merely with finding that the girl was not proved to be under sixteen, but should examine and decide the question whether the accused can be charged with an offence under s. 366 or some other cognate offence against a female of over sixteen.¹⁵

(2) That such minor, or person of unsound mind, was, at the time, lawfully entrusted to the keeping of a guardian.

(3) That the accused took or enticed such minor, or person of unsound mind, out of such keeping.¹⁶

(4) That he so took or enticed, etc., without the consent of such guardian.

The definition of kidnapping from lawful guardianship contains the words "whoever takes or entices any minor." Where a minor girl is taken or enticed by the accused, it is for the prosecution to prove that the accused either took or enticed her from her home. The mere fact that she left her home and was found a day and a half later in the company of the accused in circumstances that would possibly offend very greatly against canons of morality is not sufficient to show that he must either have taken her or enticed her.¹⁷

Consent of girl.—Although the consent of the girl is no defence, but it is a factor which may be taken into account in awarding punishment.¹⁸

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Jurisdiction.—A subject of an Indian State, though not amenable to the British Court on a charge of culpable homicide committed out of British territories, may be so amenable on a charge of kidnapping from those territories.¹⁹ This view is hardly tenable when kidnapping is not considered to be a continuing offence. The Calcutta High Court has laid down that a person charged with having committed the offence of kidnapping in Moyurbhunj, which is outside British India, cannot be tried by a Court in British India within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped may be conveyed or concealed or detained.²⁰

The offence of kidnapping may be tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.²¹

So far as the person who abducts a woman and goes on removing her from place to place is concerned the offence of abduction is a continuing offence and he may be properly charged for the offence in any of the places where the woman is kept detained against her will. But where persons join the original abductor later on, they cannot be joined in the same trial unless it can be alleged that the offences committed by all the persons were in the course of the same transaction.²²

Magistrates should not give themselves jurisdiction by trying cases under s. 363 which really fall under s. 366. The form of kidnapping which is punishable by s. 366 is a seriously aggravated form, which only Sessions Courts and the District Magistrates in the exercise of their special powers have jurisdiction to try.²³

¹³ Nathu, (1930) 32 P. L. R. 98, 32 Cr. L. J. 1041, [1931] AIR (L) 401.

¹⁴ Qudrat, [1939] All. 871.

¹⁵ Phuman Singh, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1158, [1925] AIR (L) 339.

¹⁶ Neela Bebee, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 33; Mohim Chunder Sil, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 42.

¹⁷ Baldeo Raj, (1939) 42 P. L. R. 25.

¹⁸ Wali Muhammad, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1018, [1926] AIR (L) 677.

¹⁹ Dhurmonarani Moitro, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 39.

²⁰ Bhuta Santal v. Dama Santal, (1915) 20 C.

W. N. 62, 17 Cr. L. J. 128; Koochri, (1913) 7 S. L. R. 17, 14 Cr. L. J. 439.

²¹ The Criminal Procedure Code, s. 181 (4). This section as framed now by Act V of 1898 settles the conflict of opinion existing between several High Courts. See Thaku, (1884) 8 Bom. 312; James Ingle, (1891) 16 Bom. 200; Ram Dei, (1896) 18 All. 350; Surja, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 164; Abbi Reddi, (1894) 17 Mad. 402; Jaimal Singh, (1900) P. R. No. 1 of 1901.

²² Adhigope, (1946) 25 Pat. 241.

²³ Nga Po Saw, (1901) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 328.

Sections 346 and 363.—Where an act of restraint or confinement in an attempt to kidnap has been exercised in furtherance of the attempt, and goes to form part of that offence, and is not done with an intention or object which can be separated from the general intention to kidnap, it will constitute an integral part of that offence and should not form the subject of a separate conviction and sentence.²⁴

Misdirection.—In a charge to the jury the Judge should adhere to the words of the section and not substitute phraseology of his own, otherwise there will be misdirection.²⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, kidnapped AB [a female minor under—years] from British India [or from lawful guardianship of CD, her —], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 363 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.¹

Punishment.—The maximum sentence prescribed for this offence should only be awarded in a case of the most aggravated nature.² See the Frontier Crimes Regulation, 1901, ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). See the Indian Penal Code (N.-W. F. P. Amendment) Act (III of 1941, s. 2) as regards enhanced punishment in the North-West Frontier Province.

364. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person in order that such person may be murdered or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered, shall be punished with transportation for life or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Kidnapping or abducting in order to murder.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A kidnaps Z from British India, intending or knowing it to be likely that Z may be sacrificed to an idol. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A forcibly carries or entices B away from his home in order that B may be murdered. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.

This section provides for the case of a kidnapper whose object is that the person kidnapped may be murdered or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered. The section is not applicable where the object of the kidnapper is to hold the kidnapped person to ransom. In such a case the kidnapper can be convicted properly either under s. 363 or s 365 of the Code.³

The section provides for the punishment of a specific offence and is not intended as an indirect method of punishing persons who are suspected but not proved to have committed a murder.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the kidnapping by the accused.⁵

(2) That he so kidnapped the person in question in order (a) that such person might be murdered; or (b) that such person might be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered.

Or prove for abduction—

(1) That the accused compelled the person to go from the place in question.

²⁴ Mungroo, (1874) 6 N. W. P. 293.

²⁵ Nakul Kabiraj, (1909) 13 C. W. N. 754.

¹ (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 1; (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 11.

² Mussamut Bhooodea, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 3.

³ Samundar, (1923) 27 Cr. L. J. 64.

⁴ Alim Jan Bibi, [1937] 1 Cal. 484, 488.

⁵ Vide s. 363, sup.

(2) That he so compelled that person by means of force; or that he induced that person to do so by deceitful means.

(3) That he so abducted the person in question in order that (a) such person might be murdered, or (b) such person might be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered.

To establish a charge of abduction in order to murder, when the case is one of abduction by deceitful means, it is not enough for the prosecution merely to prove certain circumstances under which the abducted person was induced to go, nor even to prove a mere misrepresentation. They must prove that there was a misrepresentation, that that particular misrepresentation was the result of a plan to murder, and that it was one by which the abducted person was himself deceived and was induced to go.⁶

It must be proved that the person charged with the offence had the intention at the time of abduction that the person abducted should be murdered or would be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered. The prosecution has therefore to prove that the accused had that particular intention at the time he took away the girl. Where the case for the prosecution is that the person abducted has been murdered by the abductor, there can be no scope for a charge under this section. The abductor should be charged with murder pure and simple.⁷

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, kidnapped [or abducted] AB in order that the said AB might be murdered [or might be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 364 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—See the Indian Penal Code (N.-W.F.P. Amendment) Act, III of 1941, s. 3, as regards enhanced punishment in the North-West Frontier Province.

365. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person with intent to cause that person to be secretly and wrongfully confined, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Kidnapping or abducting with intent secretly and wrongfully to confine person.

COMMENT.

This section lays down the same penalty as s. 363, but it punishes abduction not mentioned in that section. It requires an intention to confine a person secretly and wrongfully.⁸ Kidnapping and confining in broad daylight without any secrecy amounts to an offence under s. 342.⁹

Where a person was abducted in order that he might be held to ransom by his abductors, it was held that this section was applicable.¹⁰

Where a child is shut up so that its natural protector or guardian cannot get at it and it is prevented from proceeding with the help of its natural protector or guardian, it is wrongfully confined. An offence under this section can be committed in respect of a child which cannot walk.¹¹

Where a girl was removed by force by the accused from her father's house at the instance of her husband and she was taken to the house of her husband's brother-in-law so that her father should not be able to find her, it was held that the intention of the accused at the time of abduction can be deduced only from what they subsequently

⁶ Abdul Gaffur Khan, (1936) 41 C. W. N. 287.

⁷ Upendra Nath Ghosh, (1940) 71 C. L. J. 597, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 285, [1940] AIR (C) 561.

⁸ Akbar Ali, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 733, 27 Cr. L. J. 229, [1925] AIR (L) 614.

⁹ Indar Singh, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 597.

¹⁰ Po Lan, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 160, 14 Cr. L. J. 167; Samundar, (1923) 27 Cr. L. J. 64; Bahadur Ali, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 622, [1923] AIR (B) 158.

¹¹ Mahendranath Chakrabarti, (1934) 62 Cal. 629.

did, and the Sessions Judge was entitled to come to the conclusion that she was to be secretly confined in that house, and the conviction of the accused under this section was justified. It was further held that a husband was not entitled to use force to compel his wife to leave her parent's house and join him.¹²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) kidnapping by the accused;¹³ or abduction by him.¹⁴

(2) That the accused thereby intended that the person kidnapped or abducted should be kept in wrongful or secret confinement.¹⁵

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Conviction under s. 452 no bar to subsequent trial under this section.—

One M formed intimacy with one H, a widow, and H took up her abode in M's house. Some of H's relations attacked the house of M, beat him and his brothers, and carried off H. For this they were tried, and convicted under s. 452 of the Code. After being removed from M's house, H disappeared, and, after all efforts to find her had been unavailing for a space of some two years, the persons who had been concerned in the attack on M's house were put on their trial under this section. It was held that their previous conviction under s. 452 was no bar to their being tried under this section.¹⁶

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, kidnapped (or abducted) one XY with intent to cause the said XY to be secretly and wrongfully confined, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 365 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—The accused abducted a girl B in order to put pressure upon her friends to restore another girl whom they had abducted. She was restored a few days after B was abducted and then B was also released. It was not found that any harm was done to B. It was held that under such circumstances heavy sentences of imprisonment were not necessary.¹⁷

See the Indian Penal Code (N.-W.F.P. Amendment) Act III of 1941, as regards enhanced punishment in the North-West Frontier Province.

366. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any woman¹ with intent that she may be compelled, or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled, to marry any person against her will,² or in order that she may be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse,³ or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and whoever, by means of criminal intimidation as defined in this Code or of abuse of authority or any other method of compulsion, induces any woman to go from any place with intent that she may be, or knowing that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person shall also be punishable as aforesaid.

Kidnapping, abducting or inducing woman to compel her marriage, etc.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is merely an aggravated form of the offence under s. 363 and the same person cannot be convicted on the same facts under both the sec-

¹² Ghungru, [1986] A. L. J. R. 340, 37 Cr. L. J. 827, [1986] AIR (A) 360.

¹³ Vide s. 363, sup.

¹⁴ Vide (1) and (2), s. 364, sup.

¹⁵ Baharuddin Mandal, (1913) 18 C.L.J. 578;

15 Cr. L. J. 43.

¹⁶ Baldeo Prasad, (1905) 3 A. L. J. R. 2, 3 Cr. L. J. 93.

¹⁷ Waris, (1916) 17 P. L. R. 237, 17 Cr. L. J. 472, [1916] AIR (L) 269.

tions.¹⁸ An intention to seduce subsequent to the elopement is an essential part of this offence.

Scope.—The former Chief Courts of Lower Burma and the Punjab held that this section did not apply to a case in which a minor girl at the time of the kidnapping from lawful guardian, intended to cohabit of her own free will with the kidnapper.¹⁹ It applied where she was compelled to marry a person against her will or where she was forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that the offence of kidnapping a minor girl, in order that she may be seduced to illicit intercourse, is established by the accused taking her from lawful guardianship, with such object, although she left home with the intention of having illicit intercourse with him. Sanderson, C. J., observed: "It is further conceded that the offence dealt with by section 366 is merely an aggravated form of the offence created by s. 363; and it would, therefore, seem to follow that when the matter under consideration, in relation to section 366, is the seduction to illicit intercourse of a girl under 16 years of age, as in this case, her consent or intention would be just as immaterial as it would be in connection with the offence dealt with under s. 363. One object of the sections under consideration is not only to protect the rights of parents and others having the lawful guardianship of girls under the age of sixteen, but also to protect the girls themselves and to prevent persons taking improper advantage of their youth and inexperience."²⁰ It is not necessary to show that after the first act of abduction or kidnapping of the girl there was another act of seduction of the girl to illicit intercourse where from the proximity of events the Court is satisfied that the effect of the inducement which was the cause of abduction continued till the time of illicit intercourse.²¹ The Lahore High Court has held that this section cannot be applied to a case where the accused is said to have been carrying on an intrigue with a girl under sixteen while she was in the custody of her lawful guardian and goes away with her because obstacles are thrown in the way of that intrigue, even though when he so goes away with her it was with the intention of carrying on that intrigue."²²

Ingredients.—This section requires:—

1. Kidnapping or abducting any woman.
2. Such kidnapping or abducting must be
 - (a) with intent that she may be compelled or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled to marry any person against her will; or
 - (b) in order that she may be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.

The second part of the section requires two things:—

- (1) By criminal intimidation or abuse of authority or by compulsion inducing any woman to go from any place.
- (2) Such going must be with intent that she may be, or with knowledge that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse, with some person.

1. 'Kidnaps or abducts any woman.'—See s. 10 as to the definition of 'woman'. The word 'woman' includes a minor female.²³

If the girl was sixteen or over, she could only be abducted and not kidnapped, but if she was under sixteen she could be kidnapped as well as abducted if the taking was by force or the taking or enticing was by deceitful means.²⁴

It is not necessary that the accused should know definitely who the guardian of a minor girl is whom he finds wandering about and make use for his own ends.²⁵

Where a man committed sexual intercourse with a girl in a field near her own home without having any intention of taking her away with him, it was held that he was not guilty of an offence under this section.¹

¹⁸ Isree Panday, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 56.

¹⁹ Nga Chan Mya, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 297; Nga Nge, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 17, 2 Cr. L. J. 476; Durga Das, (1904) P. R. No. 13 of 1904, 1 Cr. L. J. 949.

²⁰ Safdar Reza, (1922) 49 Cal. 905, 909; Sultan, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 85, [1930] AIR (A) 19. ²¹ Tufail, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 413, [1927] AIR (L) 370.

²² Allah Rakhi, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 98.

L. C.—56

²³ Dhera Singh v. Mussammat Kahno, (1877) P. R. No. 8 of 1878.

²⁴ Prafullakumar Basu, (1929) 57 Cal. 1074, 1079.

²⁵ Idu, (1923) 27 O. C. 32, 25 Cr. L. J. 913, [1924] AIR (O) 335; Mulo, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 182, 16 Cr. L. J. 117; Burma, (1930) 6 Luck. 30.

¹ Abdul, [1932] A. L. J. R. 776, 34 Cr. L. J. 100, [1932] AIR (A) 580.

2. 'With intent that she may be compelled...to marry against her will.'—The intention of the accused is the basis and the gravamen of an offence under this section. The volition, the intention and the conduct of the woman determine the offence; they can only bear upon the intent with which the accused kidnapped or abducted the woman, and the intent of the accused is the vital question for determination in each case. Once the necessary intent of the accused is established the offence is complete, whether or not the accused succeeded in effecting his purpose, and whether or not in the event the woman consented to the marriage or the illicit intercourse.² Intention is a matter of inference from the circumstances of the case and the subsequent conduct of the accused after the abduction has taken place.³ This section makes use of the words "compelled, or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled." If, therefore, a woman is not compelled to do the acts specified in the section no offence is committed. Where a procuress induced a married woman of twenty years of age to become a prostitute, and the facts showed that she made a deliberate choice to go to Calcutta, and become a prostitute, it was held that the procuress could not be convicted under this section, because the woman was not compelled to go, nor was she forced or seduced to illicit intercourse; but that she could properly be convicted under s. 498, because, whatever the woman's secret inclinations were, she would have had no opportunity of carrying them out but for the accused.⁴ Where certain persons conspired together to induce by deceitful means a girl of eighteen to leave her home and accompany them to another place with the intention of making her over to the accused's brother for marriage and on the refusal of the girl to accept the company of the accused, the latter caught hold of her hand and dragged her, it was held that the accused was guilty of abduction under this section.⁵ A Mahomedan girl of ten or eleven years of age was handed over by her mother to the accused and the mother consented to the marriage of the accused with her daughter. The marriage was performed but the girl did not consent to it, as she was not capable of giving her consent, nor had the consent of her brother been obtained who was her guardian for marriage under the Mahomedan law. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section.⁶ The accused, who were near paternal relations of a girl over sixteen years of age, and were admittedly entitled to her custody as against her mother with whom she was living, carried her away forcibly in order to marry her to one of themselves. It was held that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section.⁷ Where a Hindu mother removed her minor daughter from the father's house for the express purpose of marrying her without her father's consent and thereby deprived the father forever of the guardianship of his minor daughter, it was held that this act amounted to a taking out of the keeping of the lawful guardianship of the father and the mother was guilty of an offence under this section.⁸ Where a Hindu mother-in-law forced her minor daughter-in-law to marry a person against her will, it was held that she was guilty of an offence under this section.⁹

This section requires a special intent or knowledge. Such intent cannot be presumed in the case of a young girl of thirteen years.¹⁰

If a minor is taken with the consent of the guardian and subsequently married improperly without the consent of the guardian to any person, such improper marriage would not by itself amount to kidnapping.¹¹

The word 'marry' implies going through a form of marriage whether the same is in fact valid or not.¹²

'Against her will.'—Every act done "against the will" of a person is done "without his consent"; but an act done "without the consent" of a person is not necessarily "against his will", which expression imports that the act is done in spite of the opposition of the person to the doing of it. The provisions of s. 90 are not to ² Khalil-ur-Rahman, (1933) 11 Ran. 213, F.B.; Parag, (1932) 9 O. W. N. 1181, 34 Cr. L. J. 20, [1933] AIR (O) 45.

³ Banta Singh, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 643.

⁴ Srimotee Poddee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 45.
⁵ Sundar Singh, (1924) 2 O. W. N. 17, 26 Cr. L. J. 695, [1925] AIR (O) 328.

⁶ Ahmed Bepari, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 290, [1925] AIR (C) 578.

⁷ Sher, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 480, [1924] AIR

(L) 110.

⁸ Hulla, (1933) 11 O. W. N. 30, 35 Cr. L. J. 469, [1934] AIR (O) 89.

⁹ Sant Ram, (1929) 11 Lah. 178.

¹⁰ Mussammatt Mehran, (1916) P. R. No. 13 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 283, [1916] AIR (L) 352.

¹¹ Jaladu, (1911) 36 Mad. 453.

¹² Taher Khan, (1917) 45 Cal. 641; Sant Ram, (1929) 11 Lah. 178.

be applied to this section. Where the accused has kidnapped a girl under twelve with intent to give her in marriage no presumptio juris et de jure arises that the accused kidnapped the child with intent to compel her to marry against her will. The intent must be proved by evidence in each case.¹³

'Will' means the will of the girl and not that of the guardian.¹⁴

3. 'Forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.'—There must be forcing or seducing for the purpose of illicit intercourse in order that an offence under this part of the section is committed. The word 'force' is used in its ordinary dictionary sense and imputes force by stress of circumstances.¹⁵ Where the accused attacked another person and dragged or carried his wife in broad daylight, it was held that in the absence of any proof that the intention of the accused was to compel the wife to illicit intercourse they could not be convicted under this section but only under s. 325.¹⁶

The term "seduce" is used in the general sense of "enticing or tempting", and not in the limited sense of committing the first act of illicit intercourse. The substantial offence under the section is the act of kidnapping or abduction. The illicit nature of the intercourse for which the kidnapping or abduction takes place constitutes an aggravation of the offence.¹⁷ The word 'seduction' is not used in the narrow sense of inducing a girl to part with her virtue for the first time, but includes subsequent seduction for further acts of illicit intercourse.¹⁸ To 'seduce' is to draw aside from the path of rectitude and duty in any manner, to entice to evil, to lead astray, to tempt, and lead to iniquity. The words "seduced to illicit intercourse" do not therefore refer only to the first act of seduction or the surrender of chastity.¹⁹ The phrase "seduced to illicit intercourse" is intended to indicate something different from "seduction" in its popular, usual or ordinary sense and cannot be restricted to inducing a girl to surrender her chastity for the first time. It means "induced to surrender or abandon a condition of purity from unlawful sexual intercourse." Therefore an accused cannot be convicted of this offence unless the girl was leading a life pure from unlawful sexual intercourse at the time when the kidnapping took place. This does not mean that it is necessary to prove that the girl has never at any time surrendered her condition of purity from unlawful sexual intercourse. She may have surrendered it in the past, and thereafter have resumed a life of purity. On the other hand, if she is already leading a life of indulgence in unlawful sexual intercourse, it cannot be said that she was kidnapped "in order that she might be seduced to illicit intercourse."²⁰ If a girl is carrying on an intrigue up to the time of abduction and then the accused takes her away to continue that intrigue this section does not apply.²¹ The Madras High Court has held that this section is applicable even if chastity had already been surrendered before the abduction or kidnapping took place.²² Seduction is a comprehensive expression and does not exclude the possibility of deceitful means being used in order that seduction may be practised with effect.²³ The words 'illicit intercourse' mean merely sexual intercourse between a man and a woman who are not husband and wife.²⁴ It is not confined to sexual intercourse by a man with a married woman but includes such intercourse between two unmarried persons.²⁵ Where a man kidnaps a minor girl from lawful guardianship and thereafter cohabits with her without marriage he has, subsequent to the kidnapping, seduced her to illicit intercourse, and he has kidnapped her in order that she may be seduced to illicit intercourse, and he has committed an offence under this section, quite independent of any

¹³ Khalil-ur-Rahman, (1933) 11 Ran. 213, F.B.

¹⁴ Fulchand Tepriwalla, (1931) 36 C. W. N. 49, 33 Cr. L. J. 512, [1932] AIR (C) 442.

¹⁵ Prafullakumar Basu, (1929) 57 Cal. 1074.

¹⁶ Hazara Singh, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 867, 27 Cr. L. J. 727, [1926] AIR (L) 553.

¹⁷ Lakshman Bala, (1934) 37 Bom. L. R. 176, 59 Bom. 652; Ayubkhan Mirsultan, (1943) 46 Bom. L. R. 203, 45 Cr. L. J. 750, [1944] AIR (B) 159.

¹⁸ Prafullakumar Basu, (1929) 57 Cal. 1074; Suppiah, [1930] M. W. N. 905, 32 Cr. L. J. 357, [1930] AIR (M) 980.

¹⁹ Nga Ni Ta, (1903) 1 U. B. R. (1902-03) (P. C.) 15. This case is therefore in conflict with Nga Chan Mya, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 297;

Nga Nge, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 17, 2 Cr. L. J. 476; Durga Das, (1904) P. R. No. 13 of 1904, 5 P. L. R. 410, 1 Cr. L. J. 949; Srimotee Poddee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 45.

²⁰ Sahab Ali, (1933) 60 Cal. 1457. Sub-nom. Taki Mia, (1933) 38 C. W. N. 71.

²¹ Nura, (1933) 35 Cr. L. J. 1386, [1934] AIR (L) 227.

²² Manicka Chetty, [1935] M. W. N. 358.

²³ Mahammad Jalaluddin, (1930) 31 Cr. L. J. 1092, [1930] AIR (C) 433.

²⁴ Mahbub, (1907) 4 A. L. J. R. 482, 6 Cr. L. J. 9.

²⁵ Kesar Mal alias Kesra, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 727, 33 Cr. L. J. 673, [1932] AIR (L) 555.

intention or consent on the part of the minor girl and quite independent of any question as to whether she had surrendered her chastity before the act of kidnapping.¹ Where a girl, over fourteen and under sixteen years of age and in lawful custody, consents to an act of illicit intercourse with a man and is persuaded to elope with him for that purpose, he is guilty of an offence under this section.² If the intention to kidnap a girl in order to seduce her to illicit intercourse is present, the fact that the accused had illicit intercourse with the girl before she was kidnapped is wholly immaterial.³ But in a subsequent case the Allahabad High Court has held that this section does not apply to a case where the accused was said to have been carrying on an intrigue with a girl under sixteen, while she was in the custody of her lawful guardian, and went away with her because obstacles were thrown in the way of that intrigue, even though when he so went away with her it was with the intention of continuing illicit intercourse. The Court observed: "In the first place we note that the very phrase, 'seduce to illicit intercourse' implies two distinct stages in the acts of the accused, the seduction and the illicit intercourse. These must be two distinct acts, though they may follow in immediate sequence. The words or actions of the accused which induce the girl to submit to the illicit intercourse must precede the actual act. This does not appear to have been borne in mind in some of the cases which we have mentioned above. The reason for this is possibly that sometimes the word 'seduction' is used by itself to include comprehensively the 'seducing' and the 'intercourse'; but where both words are used 'seduced to' can only refer to the preliminary act of persuasion. The more important question is whether the term 'seduced to' can properly be applied only to that which leads to the first act of illicit intercourse, or whether it can be properly applied to that which precedes each subsequent act of illicit intercourse. The Oxford Dictionary defines 'seduction' in this connection as 'to induce a woman to surrender her chastity', which suggests at the outset that the term 'seduction' can only apply properly to the first act of illicit intercourse, for once that act has been completed, the girl has surrendered her chastity. We would, therefore, hold that the term 'seduction' can only properly be held applicable to the first act of illicit intercourse, unless there be proof of a return to chastity on the part of the girl meanwhile, or unless possibly there is an intention on the accused's part that the girl should be seduced by some different man. Neither of these conditions apply to the present case... Next we note that the act of seduction alleged must be subsequent to the kidnapping in order to make section 366 applicable. The section says 'kidnaps any woman in order that she may be seduced to illicit intercourse.' This is manifestly wholly different from 'kidnaps any woman whom he has seduced to illicit intercourse'.⁴ Where a woman, who was going peaceably with her husband on the road, was robbed of all her ornaments and jewellery, and carried off by force to a distant village where she was kept confined in a house to which no other person could have any access except the accused themselves, it was held that no other inference was possible except that the woman was carried off with the object that she might be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.⁵

Where the accused, a Santal man, had by smearing the forehead of a Santal girl by vermilion married her according to the customary form of itut marriage, and then took away the minor girl from her father's custody, it was held that no offence had been committed.⁶

The mere taking of a girl to an immigration recruiter is not necessarily the taking of the girl to his house with a knowledge that it was likely that she would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.⁷

Under Buddhist law a man cannot contract a valid marriage with a minor without her guardian's consent. Therefore, sexual intercourse without such consent will be "illicit intercourse" under this section even though marriage is intended.⁸

Seduction per se is not a criminal offence either in India or in England.

¹ Nga Ni Ta, (1903) U. B. R. (1902-03) (P. C.) 15.

² Ayubkhan Mirsultan, (1943) 46 Bom. L. R. 203, 45 Cr. L. J. 750, [1944] AIR (B) 159.

³ Prem Narain, [1929] A. L. J. R. 114, 30 Cr. L. J. 218, (1929) AIR (A) 82; Krishna Maharana, (1929) 9 Pat. 647.

⁴ Bajinath, (1932) 54 All. 756, 759, 760.

⁵ Chandu Singh, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 459, [1921] AIR (L) 323.

⁶ Dhuma Manjhi, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 918, [1943] AIR (P) 109.

⁷ Ganga Dei, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 91, 15 Cr. L. J. 154, [1914] AIR (A) 17.

⁸ Nga Ne U, (1883) S. J. L. B. 202.

Marrying girl for purpose of inducing her to prostitute herself.—Where the accused by false representations and deceitful means induced a girl to marry him and leave her home and accompany him to Kohat, where, upon their arrival, he instigated her to prostitute herself, and it appeared that it was with that end in view that he had induced the girl to marry him, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.⁹

Sheltering girls with view to prostitute themselves.—Where two girls under the age of sixteen years ran away from their houses and remained for one or two days in the house of a woman of quality and no report was made to the police, it was held that the woman in whose house the girls stayed was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁰

Abduction of married woman with intent to compel her to marry another.—One W on her husband's death returned as a widow to live with her mother. She received a proposal of marriage from D but she refused him as he was an old man with children. She entered into a marriage in nika form with P. The accused a day after the marriage came to her house and took her away by force to a place and there she received another proposal of marriage from D. It was held that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section.¹¹

Abetment.—A married woman consenting to her own kidnapping cannot be convicted of abetting the offence. If the woman is herself a consenting party to her own removal, a fact which is necessarily involved in a finding that she abetted that act, it follows that the substantive offence of kidnapping could not have been committed by the person who is alleged to have kidnapped her, and, consequently, the woman cannot be convicted of abetting such an offence which in fact is not committed.¹²

Amendment. Clause 2.—This clause was added by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (XX of 1923), s. 2. As to the meaning of 'criminal intimidation', see s. 503.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) kidnapping by the accused;¹³ or abduction by him.¹⁴

(2) That the person so kidnapped or abducted is a woman.

(3) That the accused then intended, or knew that it was likely,

(a) that such woman might or would be compelled to marry a person against her will, or

(b) that she might or would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.¹⁵

Intention is a matter of inference from the circumstances of the case and the subsequent conduct of the accused after the abduction has taken place.¹⁶ Ordinarily it is not possible for the prosecution to establish the intention except by proving the conduct of the accused.¹⁷ Human nature being what it is, whenever one finds a young man abducting a girl of marriageable age, the first and natural presumption must be that he has abducted her with the intention of having sexual intercourse with her, either forcibly or with her consent after seduction or after marrying her. If he has any intention other than that which is suggested by the natural circumstances of the case, the burden lies upon him under s. 105, Indian Evidence Act, to prove that intention.¹⁸

Under the second part of the section prove—

(1) That the accused induced a woman to go from any place by criminal intimidation, or abuse of authority, or by compulsion.

(2) The accused did so with intent, or knowledge that it was likely, that the woman might or would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with some person.

⁹ Bahadur, (1880) P. R. No. 7 of 1881.

¹⁰ Jasauli, (1912) 34 All. 340.

¹¹ Taher Khan, (1917) 45 Cal. 641.

¹² Natha Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 11 of 1883.

¹³ Vide s. 363, sup.; Mohim Chunder Sil, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 42.

¹⁴ Vide (1) & (2), s. 364, sup.

¹⁵ Meer Alum Khan, (1868) P. R. No. 23 of 1886; Naba, (1911) 12 P. L. R. 737, 12 Cr. L.

J. 393.

¹⁶ Banta Singh, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 643; Jowaya, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 131, [1930] AIR (L) 163.

¹⁷ Haider Shah, (1929) 31 P. L. R. 388, 31 Cr. L. J. 529, [1930] AIR (L) 52.

¹⁸ Mohammad Sadiq, (1937) 40 P. L. R. 730, 39 Cr. L. J. 844, [1938] AIR (L) 474.

The most important witness in an abduction case is generally the abducted woman herself and where she is not forthcoming, and the other witnesses are not of a very reliable type, the prosecution evidence must be carefully scrutinised and weighed.¹⁹ The evidence of the woman should be taken with caution.²⁰ It is extremely dangerous and permissible only in exceptional cases to convict a man of a sexual offence on the uncorroborated testimony of the complainant. The corroboration must be by independent evidence, and the rule must be properly emphasised in the charge to the jury. Failure to warn the jury of the danger of convicting the accused on the girl's evidence alone amounts to a non-direction which vitiates the conviction.²¹ The Judge must tell the jury that it is unsafe in cases of this character to convict on the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix, adding, however, that if in spite of the warning they are satisfied that she is telling the truth, they would be at liberty to convict on her evidence.²² In a case of abduction, especially where the sexual intercourse is admitted by the accused, it is not necessary that the details of the sexual intercourse should be corroborated, though the Court would normally require corroboration of the woman's statement that the intercourse was without her consent.²³ The rule of corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix applies only to cases of rape. There is no warrant for extending the rule to other cases of a sexual nature.²⁴ The age of the girl is very material on the question of consent.²⁵

To ask for a verdict on a charge under this section, upon both heads of abduction and kidnapping, is a complete misunderstanding of the law. There cannot be any such verdict under this section and a verdict returned upon such a direction cannot be upheld.¹

Medical evidence as to age.—In a case under this section in view of the fundamental importance of the question of age of the girl concerned, it is the duty of the Judge to obtain the evidence of the medical witness with the utmost precision and to have it brought out clearly whether the witness was prepared to stake his opinion that the girl could not be of the age of sixteen or over.²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Direction to jury.—In a trial with a jury under this section the Sessions Judge on the question of intent charged the jury in the following words: "It remains only to consider the question of intent. The charge was that the girl was kidnapped in order that she might be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. As to this, it is sufficient to say that no other inference is possible under the circumstances. When a man carries off a young girl at night from her father's house the presumption is that he did so with the intent indicated above. It would be open to him, if he had admitted the kidnapping, to prove that he had some other object, but no other object is apparent in the face of the facts." It was held by the High Court that this amounted to a misdirection of the jury. The question of intent was a pure question of fact, but the way in which it had been put to the jury left them no option but to adopt the view taken by the Judge.³

In a trial for offences under ss. 366, 366A and 376, a direction to the jury to the effect that the general moral character of the girl is of no consequence amounts to a misdirection.⁴

Where the accused is charged both with kidnapping and abduction, it is essential to take a separate verdict on each charge.⁵

Punishment.—Under s. 363, imprisonment, which may extend to seven years, is the punishment for kidnapping. The extra three years prescribed by s. 366 are

¹⁹ Ghulam, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 277, 27 P. L. R. 747.

²⁰ Mohammad Sadiq, (1937) 40 P. L. R. 730, 39 Cr. L. J. 844, [1938] AIR (L) 474.

²¹ Sachinder Rai, (1939) 18 Pat. 698; Kalu Mia, (1940) 44 C. W. N. 622; Taser Pramanik, (1940) 44 C. W. N. 835, 71 C. L. J. 590, 41 Cr. L. J. 841, [1940] AIR (C) 391.

²² Krishna Chandra, (1940) 45 C. W. N. 27.

²³ Kasamalli Mirzalli, (1941) 44 Bom. L. R. 27, [1942] Bom. 390, F.B.

²⁴ Banubai Irani, (1942) 45 Bom. L. R. 281, 44 Cr. L. J. 534, [1943] AIR (B) 150, F.B.

²⁵ Mohiuddin, (1930) 51 C. L. J. 352, 32 Cr. L. J. 455, [1930] AIR (C) 437.

¹ Krishna Chandra, (1940) 45 C. W. N. 27.

² Hatem Ali, (1946) 47 Cr. L. J. 325.

³ Hughes, (1891) 14 All. 25.

⁴ Sachinder Rai, (1939) 18 Pat. 698.

⁵ Nanda Ghosh, (1938) 40 Cr. L. J. 640, [1939] AIR (C) 321.

most appropriate for the intention to bring force or persuasion to bear on the girl, after she has been removed from the shelter of her home and deprived of the support which her guardian's presence would give her in resisting either threats or enticements. It is contrary to the well-known rule of construction of penal statutes to say that an intention to seduce to illicit intercourse can be presumed, when the girl has already consented to illicit intercourse.⁶

Where the accused had forcibly carried away the complainant and had subsequently raped her, it was held that he had brought himself within the purview of this section the moment he forcibly carried her away with the intention of having illicit intercourse with her, and the infliction of a separate additional sentence under s. 376 for rape was not contrary to the provisions of s. 71 of the Code.⁷

A severe sentence should be passed in the case of an offence under this section.⁸

The consent of the girl makes no difference to the offence, but where she is a consenting party it will have a bearing on the sentence to be imposed.⁹

Alteration of charge.—It is not competent to a Judge in appeal to alter a charge under s. 376 of the Code to one under this section because a charge under this section involves different elements and different questions of fact from a charge under s. 376.¹⁰

In the case of a charge of abduction, notice of the charge of kidnapping is not a fair, proper and sufficient notice to such a charge. Where the accused is charged with kidnapping only, the Judge should not leave the jury to convict the accused of abduction.¹¹

Alternative charge.—If an accused is to be charged in the alternative of kidnapping or abduction of a minor girl, or with both the offences, a separate charge must be framed in respect of each offence, for the simple reason that though these offences are punishable under the same section they are quite distinct from each other.¹² When the question of the age of the prosecutrix is in dispute, a charge under this section of kidnapping and abduction in the alternative is not illegal.¹³

The joinder of the two offences of kidnapping and abduction in the alternative in one charge is an irregularity and not an illegality and, when no failure of justice has been occasioned, s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure applies. An accused may be charged separately with kidnapping and with abduction and tried at one trial for each of such offences. It is not sufficient merely to charge an accused in the bare words of the section. Particulars must always be given sufficient to give him notice of the matter with which he is charged.¹⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate. etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, kidnapped (or abducted) a woman, to wit—, with intent that she may be compelled (or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled to marry against her will [or in order that the said woman—may be forced (or seduced) to illicit intercourse, or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced (or seduced) to illicit intercourse], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 366 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried (by the said Court) on the said charge.

If the offence is committed under the second clause the charge should say :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, induced a woman to wit—, to go from (mention place) with intent that she may be (or knowing that it is likely that she will be) forced (or seduced) to illicit intercourse with another person by means of criminal intimidation (or abuse of authority or other method of compulsion, to wit—), and thereby committed an offence punishable under the second part of

⁶ Nga Nge, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 17, 2 Cr. L. J. 476.

⁷ Ghulam Muhammad, (1926) 7 Lah. 484.

⁸ Imral, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 7, [1929] AIR (A) 916.

⁹ Khem Das, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 851.

¹⁰ Sakharam, (1905) 8 Bom. L. R. 120, 3 Cr. L. J. 240.

¹¹ Isu Sheikh, (1926) 45 C. L. J. 584, 31 C.

W. N. 171, 28 Cr. L. J. 201, [1927] AIR (C) 200.

¹² Jangli Mian, (1933) 15 P. L. T. 229, 35 Cr. L. J. 814, [1934] AIR (P) 180; Mozam Dafadar, (1933) 34 Cr. L. J. 682, [1933] AIR (C) 563.

¹³ Prafullakumar Basu, (1929) 57 Cal. 1074.

¹⁴ Rajabuddin Mandal, (1933) 63 Cal. 1394; Ramizullah, (1932) 37 C. W. N. 1071, 35 Cr. L. J. 487, [1934] AIR (C) 85.

s. 366 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

366A. Whoever, by any means whatsoever,¹ induces any minor girl under the age of eighteen years² to go from any place or to do any act with intent that such girl may be, or knowing that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse³ with another person shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine.

Procurement of minor girl.

COMMENT.

This section and s. 366B were added by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (XX of 1923) to give effect to certain Articles of International Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women and Children. The material Articles of the Convention which was signed at Paris on May 4, 1910, are as follows :—

“Article 1. Whoever, in order to gratify the passions of another person, has procured, enticed, or led away, even with her consent, a woman or girl under age, for immoral purposes, shall be punished notwithstanding that the various acts constituting the offence may have been committed in different countries.

“Article 2.—Whoever, in order to gratify the passions of another person, has, by fraud, or by means of violence, threats, abuse of authority, or any other method of compulsion, procured, enticed, or led away a woman or girl over age, for immoral purposes, shall also be punished notwithstanding that the various acts constituting the offence may have been committed in different countries.

“Article 3.—The Contracting Parties whose legislation may not at present be sufficient to deal with the offences contemplated by the two preceding Articles engage to take or to propose to their respective Legislatures the necessary steps to punish these offences according to their gravity”.¹⁵

The Statement of Objects and Reasons stated : “The principles in this International Convention were endorsed in the international Convention regarding the Traffic in Women and Children which was adopted by the Second Assembly of the League of Nations. In Article 1 of this Convention it is provided that the High Contracting Parties in event of their not being already parties to the International Convention of May 4, 1910, shall transmit with the least possible delay their ratifications of, or adhesions to, that instrument in the manner laid down therein. Further, the term “under age” which did mean under 20 completed years of age, according to paragraph B of the final Protocol of the Convention of 1910 is now interpreted as meaning under 21 completed years of age by virtue of the provisions of Article 5 of the International Convention, adopted by the Second Assembly of the League of Nations.

“In view of the resolutions adopted by the Council of State on January 31, 1922, and by the Legislative Assembly on February 7, 1922, the International Convention adopted by the Second Assembly of the League of Nations was signed at Geneva on behalf of the Government of India by His Majesty’s Minister at Berne on March 28, 1922, with the following reservation :—

‘India reserves the right of its discretion to substitute the age of sixteen years or any greater age that may be subsequently decided upon for the age limit prescribed in paragraph B of the Final Protocol of the Convention of May 4, 1910, and in Article 5 of the present convention’”.¹⁶

Object.—This section and s. 366B were introduced to punish the export and import of girls for prostitution. This section deals with procurement of minor girls from one part of British India to another. Section 366 penalises the procurement of a woman where such procurement amounts to abduction. The aim of this section is to prevent immorality, and its provisions are framed more with the desire of safeguarding the public interest of morality than the chastity of one particular woman. Often it may happen that a girl under eighteen may desire to leave her husband to better her prospects elsewhere. Such a desire would not save her helper from a conviction under this section.¹⁷

¹⁵ Vide Gazette of India for 1922, Part V, p. 343

¹⁶ Vide G. I. 1922, Part V, p. 343.

Scope.—There is a close resemblance in the texts of s. 362 and this section and some of the salient ingredients of the two offences are common. An offence under this section is a continuing offence.¹⁸ The offence is one of inducement with a particular object, and when after the inducement the offender offers the girl to several persons a fresh offence is not committed at every fresh offer for sale.¹⁹

1. 'By any means whatsoever'.—The means employed may be legal or illegal. The means may be intimidation or abuse of authority referred to in the second article of the International Convention.

2. 'Induces any minor girl under the age of eighteen years'.—Any reason given by the accused to move the girl from one place to another is sufficient for inducement. Even where the girl discovers that she is not being so taken and falls in with the plan of the accused, the inducement is complete, and the girl's subsequent willingness will neither prevent the offence nor reduce its gravity.²⁰

3. 'Forced or seduced to illicit intercourse'.—See Comment on s. 366. An offence under this section is only committed when a girl between sixteen and eighteen years of age is induced by a person to go from any place with intention that she may be or knowing that it is likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person. A person who induces such a girl without force and fraud to go from any place with the intention that she will have illicit intercourse with himself does not commit any offence under this section or any other section.²¹ The expression "illicit intercourse" in this section means sexual intercourse between a man and a woman who are not husband and wife.²² Merely giving shelter to a girl or taking her from one place to another without knowing that she is a married girl and without any intention or knowledge that she is likely to be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person is no offence under this section.²³ The accused took a girl of less than eighteen years of age from place to place with the intention of compelling her to marry against her will or in order that she may be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. There was no evidence that the girl was compelled to accompany the accused by force or by deceitful means. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section and not s. 366.²⁴ A woman aged about sixteen years having quarrelled with her husband, left his house with the idea of going to her maternal grandfather's house. On the way she met A and B. B promised to take her to her grandfather's house but took her to A's house. A took her to a neighbouring village and attempted to sell her but being unsuccessful in selling her brought her back to his own house and concealed her there. The woman was discovered in A's house and A and B were charged under this section. A contended that he did not know that the woman was married. It was held (1) that even assuming that A did not know that the woman was married, his attempt to sell her made him liable under s. 366A; (2) that B was also liable as he had by deceitful means induced the woman to stay at his house and taken her to A's house instead of her grandfather's house.²⁵ Where a married girl was unhappy with her husband and the father took her from the husband's house and gave her as a wife to B it was held that the act of the father would amount to an inducement under this section but B was not guilty under this section as the inducement to leave must have for its object seduction by another person and not by the person who himself induced the woman to leave.¹ Where A and B induced a girl to go with them offering to take her to her destination but with the real object of

¹⁷ Bhagwati Prasad, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 985, [1929] AIR (A) 709.

¹⁸ Nanhua Dhimar, (1930) 53 All. 140; Chiragh, (1936) 39 P. L. R. 365, 38 Cr. L. J. 474, [1936] AIR (L) 850.

¹⁹ Sis Ram, (1929) 51 All. 888.

²⁰ Bhagwati Prasad, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 985, [1929] AIR (A) 709.

²¹ Abbas Bahara, (1932) 37 C. W. N. 317, 34 Cr. L. J. 341, [1933] AIR (C) 362.

²² Kesar Mal, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 727, 33 Cr. L. J. 673, [1932] AIR (L) 555.

²³ Rati Ram, (1927) 28 P. L. R. 260, 28 Cr. L. J. 584, [1927] AIR (L) 727.

²⁴ Saadat Khan, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 445, 26 Cr. L. J. 1151, [1925] AIR (O) 454.

²⁵ Sher Singh, (1930) 31 P. L. R. 643, 32 Cr. L. J. 460, [1930] AIR (L) 463.

¹ Ram Saran, [1930] A. L. J. R. 1113, 31 Cr. L. J. 861, [1930] AIR (A) 497.

selling her for illicit intercourse and afterwards C and D took her from one place to another with the object of selling her but there was no evidence to show that C and D offered any inducement to the girl or to do any act with the intention that she may be or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced to illicit intercourse. It was held that the offence under this section was complete when A and B induced the girl to leave her place and what happened afterwards did not constitute a fresh offence under this section either against A and B or against any other accused who first took her from one place to another and passed her on from hand to hand.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused induced a girl.

(2) That the girl was under eighteen years of age.

(3) That the girl was induced to go from a place or to do an act.

(4) That the accused did as above with intent that such girl may be, or knowing that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person.

Corroboration as to age.—It cannot be said that the evidence of the girl always needs corroboration in cases under this section, but where it is found that the girl in question has been definitely lying on important points in her story, then it is unsafe to rely on other parts of her evidence to convict any person of a criminal offence unless that evidence, is corroborated in material points. The presence of the girl in the house of the accused is not a material point for the purpose of corroboration in a case under this section.³

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Direction to jury.—It is the duty of the Judge to direct the jury that if they are not completely satisfied that it has been established that the girl is under eighteen they are bound to acquit the accused upon a charge under this section.⁴ The fact that a girl is handsome is no evidence at all to show that the persons with whom she goes away had any intention that she should become an inmate of a brothel. Where the Judge in dealing with the evidence regarding the intention under this section told the jury to look at the surrounding circumstances and he then pointed out that the girl was handsome, it was held that it amounted to a serious misdirection.⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, induced AB——, a girl under eighteen years of age [to go from——(specify the name of the place)] or [to do the following act, to wit——] with intent that the said AB may be (or knowing that it is likely that the said AB will be) forced (or seduced) to illicit intercourse with——(name the person), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 366A of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Whipping.—Where the accused was convicted for an offence under this section and sentenced both to detention at the Borstal School and also to receive twenty lashes, it was held that the sentence of whipping in addition to a punishment to which he was liable not under the Penal Code but under s. 25 (I) of the Burma Prevention of Crime (Young Offenders) Act III of 1930, was illegal. Where the accused has given way to his passions, detention in a Borstal institution is normally not likely to prove either so efficacious or so salutary a punishment as a whipping, which in such cases operates as a wholesome and striking reminder that young men must behave themselves properly in their relations with women and girls and must learn to control their natural instincts. This object is much more likely to be achieved by a whipping than by a period of reflection and detention in a Borstal institution.⁶

² Kesar Mal, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 727, 33 Cr. L. J. 673, [1932] AIR (L) 555.

³ Kanuj Shaikh, (1946) 48 Cr. L. J. 301.

⁴ Sachinder Rai, (1939) 18 Pat. 698.

⁵ Ekkari Das, (1939) 40 Cr. L. J. 660, 43 C. W. N. 668, [1939] AIR (C) 290.

⁶ Shwe Bein, (1934) 12 Ran. 349.

366B. Whoever imports into British India from any country outside India any girl under the age of twenty-one years with intent that she may be, or knowing it to be likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse¹ with another person, and whoever with such intent or knowledge imports into British India from any State in India any such girl who has with the like intent or knowledge been imported into India, whether by himself or by another person, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section was introduced along with s. 366A by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (XX of 1923). See Comment on s. 366A.

Object.—This section makes it an offence (1) to import into British India from any country outside India a girl under the age of twenty-one years with the intent or knowledge specified in the section, or (2) to import into British India from any State in India a girl under the age of twenty-one years who has been imported in such State from any country outside India with intent that she may be, or knowing it to be likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with any person. The Select Committee in their Report observed : “The case of girls imported from foreign country we propose to deal with by the insertion of a new section 366B in the Code. We are unanimously of opinion that the requirements of the Convention will be substantially met by penalising the importation of girls from a foreign country. At the same time we have so worded the clause as to prevent its being made a dead-letter by the adoption of the course of importing the girl first into an Indian State.”

1. ‘Forced or seduced to illicit intercourse’.—See Comment on s. 366.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused imported a girl into British India.

(2) That the girl was imported from any country outside India or from any State in India.

(3) That such girl was under the age of twenty-one years.

(4) That the accused imported the girl with intent that she may be, or knowing it to be likely that she will be, forced or seduced to ‘illicit intercourse’ with some person.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, imported into British India from——(specify the name of the country) a country outside India (or a State in India) by yourself [or by——(mention the name of the person)] AB, a girl under the age of twenty-one years, with intent that she may be (or knowing it to be likely that she will be) forced (or seduced) to illicit intercourse with another person, to wit—— and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 366B of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried (by the said Court) on the said charge.

367. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person¹ in order that such person may be subjected, or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being subjected to grievous hurt,² or slavery,³ or to the unnatural lust⁴ of any person, or knowing it to be likely that such person will be so subjected or disposed of, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

¹ Gazette of India, dated February 10, 1923, Part V, p. 79.

COMMENT.

Kidnapping for grievous hurt, slavery, or unnatural offence, is punishable under this section.

1. 'Person'.—See s. 11, supra.
2. 'Grievous hurt'.—See s. 320, supra.
3. 'Slavery'.—See ss. 370, 371, infra.
4. 'Unnatural lust'.—See s. 377, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) kidnapping by the accused;⁸ or abduction by him.⁹

(2) That he so kidnapped or abducted the person in question—

- (a) in order that such person might be subjected to grievous hurt, slavery, etc., or to unnatural lust, etc.
- (b) in order that such person might be so disposed of as to be put in danger thereof;
- (c) knowing it to be likely that such person would be so subjected or disposed of.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, kidnapped (or abducted XY in order that the said XY may be subjected (or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being subjected) to grievous hurt [or slavery or to the unnatural lust of——)] or knowing it to be likely that such person will be so subjected or disposed of], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 367 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

368. Whoever, knowing¹ that any person has been kidnapped

Wrongfully concealing or keeping in confinement, kidnapped or abducted person.

or has been abducted, wrongfully conceals² or confines such person, shall be punished in the same manner as if he had kidnapped or abducted such person with the same intention or knowledge, or for the same purpose as that with or for which he conceals or detains such person in confinement.

COMMENT.

This is one of those sections in which subsequent abetment is punished as a substantive offence.

Scope.—This section refers to some other party who assists in concealing any person who has been kidnapped and not to the kidnappers.¹⁰ A kidnapper who has been convicted under s. 366 cannot, therefore, be convicted also under this section.¹¹ For the purpose of this section, it is not necessary to prove that the person confined was abducted by any particular person.

1. 'Knowing'.—This section is confined to 'knowledge' only of the fact of kidnapping or abduction. For practical and legal purposes knowledge means the state of mind entertained by a person with regard to existing facts which he has himself observed, or the existence of which has been communicated to him by persons whose ⁸ Vide s. 363, sup.

⁹ Vide (1) and (2), s. 364, sup.

¹⁰ Sheikh Oozeer, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 17.

¹¹ Bannu Mal, (1926) 2 Luck. 249.

veracity he has no reason to doubt. Where, therefore, an accused has no such knowledge of the girl having been kidnapped or abducted he does not render himself liable to punishment under this section.¹²

2. 'Wrongfully conceals'.—These words, "taken in their plain and ordinary meaning, refer to some act or omission whereby the actual person of the individual concealed is withdrawn from observation. Doubtless lies told about such a person may as effectually hoodwink those interested in discovering him or her; but what we have to assign to the word 'conceals' is only its plain signification. On this principle, as well as on that of 'noscitur a sociis'.—looking at the alternative act mentioned in the same section, which is keeping such person in confinement, it appears that the act of concealment refers to the withdrawal from the actual observation of others, by removal or otherwise, of the person kidnapped or abducted, and does not include the mere giving false information about such person".¹³ The mere fact of a girl being received into a house and retained there by the owner, even after he may have become aware of or found reason to believe that she had been kidnapped, does not amount to concealment of her unless an intention of keeping her out of view be apparent.¹⁴ Where a kidnapped girl was taken to a well where she was allowed to move about in the neighbouring fields, it was held that she was not concealed within the meaning of this section.¹⁵

C A S E S .

Concealing kidnapped girl.—Where a girl of eleven years of age was taken out of the custody of her lawful guardian by the first accused and offered for sale in marriage to another, and the second accused illegally concealed her, the conviction of the former was upheld under s. 363, and of the latter, under s. 368.¹⁶ A girl under sixteen years of age who lived with her widowed mother was going to a vegetable market in search of work. On her way she met another woman who asked the girl to accompany her under a promise of obtaining work for her. The woman took the girl to her house and kept her there till evening, when she was removed by the accused in a closed carriage to a solitary bungalow far away from the town. The girl was kept there during two days and nights, after which she was permitted to return to her house. It was held that the accused had committed this offence.¹⁷

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question has been kidnapped or abducted.

(2) That the accused knew of such kidnapping or abduction.¹⁸

(3) That he, having such knowledge, wrongfully concealed or kept such person in confinement.¹⁹

Prove also the intention or knowledge with which the accused concealed or kept such person in confinement; or prove the purpose for which he did so.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

An offence under this section is not exclusively triable by a Court of Session when the girl is wrongfully confined or concealed for the purpose of forcing her to illicit intercourse.²⁰

Even if a charge under this section is unsustainable, ss. 420, 494 and 109 of the Code may apply.²¹ But a conviction under ss. 368 and 109 is a bar to a conviction for wrongful confinement under s. 343 of the Code.²²

¹² Zamin, (1931) 8 O. W. N. 1325, 33 Cr. L. J. 275, [1932] AIR (O) 28.

¹³ Phula Singh, (174) P. R. No. 10 of 1874.

¹⁴ Jharrup, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 133; Mussu Mat Chubboo, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 189; Ram Shastri, (1902) 15 C. P. L. R. 185.

¹⁵ Shiv Singh, (1938) 41 P. L. R. 162, 40 Cr. L. J. 277, (1939) AIR (L) 26.

¹⁶ Isree Panday, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 56.

¹⁷ Jetha Nathu, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 785, 1 Cr. L. J. 931.

¹⁸ Durgamoni Dassi, (1938) 43 C. W. N. 196; Francis Hector, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 401, (1937) AIR (A) 182; Sohan Singh, (1938) 41 P. L. R. 45, 40 Cr. L. J. 684, [1939] AIR (L) 180.

¹⁹ Amar Ali, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 554, [1926] AIR (L) 384.

²⁰ Sarnam Singh, [1934] A. L. J. R. 1234, 36 Cr. L. J. 117, [1935] AIR (A) 63.

²¹ Ibrahim, (1893) P. R. No. 7 of 1894.

²² Ishwar Chandra Jogee, (1864) W. R. (Cr.), (Gap No.). 21.

Joint trial.—A and B abducted a girl and took her to the house of C where she was wrongfully confined. A, B and C were jointly tried, A and B for offences under s. 366 and C for an offence under this section. It was held that the joint trial was valid.²³ But where two persons were charged under this section for separate acts of concealment in respect of the same girl, it was held that they could not be tried together.²⁴

Venue.—The venue for the trial of a case under this section is evidently the Court within whose jurisdiction the kidnapped or abducted person has been wrongfully concealed or confined.²⁵

369. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any child under the age of ten years with the intention of taking dishonestly¹ any moveable property² from the person of such child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

Object.—Enticing away of children with no intention of taking them from their parents, but for the purpose of stealing ornaments from their person is punishable under this section.

Scope.—The offence described in s. 368 is included in that described in this section, the kidnapping and the intention of dishonestly taking property from the kidnapped child being included in the latter section.¹ The consent of the child kidnapped is immaterial.

1. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra. 2. 'Moveable property'.—See s. 22, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the kidnapping by the accused;² or abduction by him.³ (2) That the person kidnapped or abducted was a child under the age of ten years.

(3) That the accused thereby intended to take movable property from that child's person.

(4) That such intention was dishonest.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Commitment.—This being a serious offence a Magistrate should always commit the case.⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, kidnapped (or abducted) XY, a child then under the age of ten years, with the intention of taking dishonestly any movable property, to wit—, from the person of the said XY, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 369 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court.)

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—See the Indian Penal Code (N.-W. F.P. Amendment) Act, III of 1941, s. 2, as regards enhanced punishment in the North-West Frontier Province.

²³ Dosa, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 496, [1928] AIR (L) 751.

²⁴ Durgamoni Dassi, (1938) 43 C. W. N. 196.

²⁵ Nanhua Dhimar, (1930) 53 All. 140.

¹ Shama Sheikh, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 35.

² Vide s. 363, sup.

³ Vide (1) and (2), s. 364, sup.

⁴ Sohoy Dome, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 2.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

370. Whoever imports, exports, removes, buys, sells or disposes of any person as a slave,¹ or accepts, receives or detains against his will any person as a slave, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section deals with slavery. Before the Penal Code was enacted, slavery was dealt with by the Indian Slavery Act (V of 1843), which is still in force.

Object.—The sections of the Code relating to slavery were enacted for the suppression of slavery, not only in its strict and proper sense, namely, that condition whereby an absolute and unlimited power is given to the master over the life, fortune and liberty of another, but in any modified form where an absolute power is asserted over the liberty of another.⁵

This section is “directed against attempts to place persons in the position of slaves, or to treat them in a way that is inconsistent with the idea of the person so treated being free as to his property, services, or conduct, in any respect.”⁶

Ingredients.—The section makes penal—

1. The importation, exportation, removal, buying, selling or disposing of a person as a slave.
2. The buying, selling or disposal of a person as a slave.
3. The acceptance, reception or detention of any person against his will as a slave.

1. ‘As a slave’.—“A slave is a creature without any rights or any status whatsoever, who is or may become the property of another as a mere chattel, the owner having absolute power of disposal by sale, gift, or otherwise, and even of life or death over the slave, without being responsible to any legal authority.”⁷

There must be a selling or disposal of a person as a slave, that is, a selling or disposal whereby one who claims to have a property in the person as a slave transfers that property to another.⁸

There may be lawful contracts for the transfer of a child by its parents either for a time or permanently to another person; as in the case of a child whose parents permit it to be adopted by others, or in the case of a child who is apprenticed or put out for a time to learn a lawful trade or calling, etc. These, it is needless to say, are not offences against this or any other section of the Code. But care should be taken that the law is not eluded by some device or pretence of a contract. When the substance of the transaction is an attempt to give a property in the person and services of a human being, that person is disposed of ‘as a slave’ within the meaning of this section, whatever form the parties to the transaction may attempt to give it.⁹ In determining the nature of the transaction the Court should look primarily to the terms of the documents in which it is embodied, and, secondarily to the surrounding circumstances as indicating whether the parties had in mind something different from what is set forth in the document.¹⁰

Importing into British India a girl purchased in a foreign territory.—“The purchase of a girl in foreign territory, knowing her to be a slave, is not in itself an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code, and to make the importing of her into British territory offence, it is necessary that...he (the accused) imported her as a slave.”¹¹

⁵ Ram Kuar, (1880) 2 All. 723, 731, F.B.
See Koroth Mammad, (1917) 41 Mad. 334.

⁶ Per Stuart, C. J., in Ram Kuar, (1880) 2 All. 723, 727, F.B.

⁷ Per Stuart, C. J., in Ram Kuar, (1880) 2 All. 723, 726, F.B.

⁸ Ibid., p. 731.

⁹ M. & M. 320.

¹⁰ Koroth Mammad, (1917) 41 Mad. 334.

¹¹ Per Barkley, J., in Nanda, (1882) P. R. No. 26 of 1882.

Buying girls for marriage.—Buying or importing girls with a view to marriage is not punishable under this section.¹² Where R, having obtained possession of D, a girl eleven years of age, disposed of her to a third person for value, with intent that such person should marry her and such person received her with that intent, it was held that R could not be convicted of disposing of D as a slave under this section.¹³

CASES.

Selling of girl.—A kidnapped a Hindu girl and sold her to B, a Mahomedan. B made her a Mahomedan, changed her name, supplied her with food and clothes, but gave her no wages. She was employed in menial services, and was not allowed to leave the house. After staying thus for four years the girl escaped. It was held that B had committed an offence under this section.¹⁴ The accused were parties to a document in the capacity of vendor and purchaser which ran as follows:—"I execute to you and give you this day this jenmam deed giving you Vellandi's son Pulayan Vellan with his heirs. The sum that I received from you in cash to-day is ten rupees. For this sum of ten rupees, you should get work done for you by the said Vellan and his offspring that may come into being as your jenmam, and act as you please." It was held that the transaction in question was a sale of Vellan and his offspring as mere chattels and that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁵

A bought a girl from B, her mother (a low class woman) and gave her to C, a man of higher caste, for marriage to his son in consideration of the sum of Rs. 10, A having represented to C that the girl was of C's caste. It was held that B was guilty of an offence under this section and A under s. 417.¹⁶

Buying of girl.—S transferred to A for Rs. 25 his right in the person of B, a girl of thirteen years. In a document in which the transaction was recorded, B was described as a vellati (slave girl) purchased by S from P. It was held that A was guilty of buying B as a slave.¹⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused imported, exported, etc., the person in question as a slave; or that the accused accepted, received or detained the person in question as a slave.

(2) That he did so against the will of that person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Jurisdiction not affected by re-sale.—Jurisdiction to try such an offence is not affected by a re-sale of the person as a slave in another district.¹⁸

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, imported (or exported or removed, or etc.), a person, to wit—, as a slave [or accepted, received or detained against his will a person, to wit—, as a slave], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 370 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

371. Whoever habitually imports, exports, removes, buys, sells, traffics or deals in slaves, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Habitual dealing in slaves.

¹² Roda, (1867) P. R. No. 19 of 1867; Nanda, (1882) P. R. No. 26 of 1882; Ganpat, (1884) P. R. No. 20 of 1884.

¹³ Ram Kuar, (1880) 2 All. 723, F.B.

¹⁴ Mirza Sikundur Bukhut, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 146. This has been pronounced to be a most extraordinary decision by Stuart, C. J., in Ram Kuar, (1880) 2 All. 723, F.B.

¹⁵ Koroth Mammad, (1917) 41 Mad. 334.

¹⁶ Book Cir. 25 of 1865 (Oudh).

¹⁷ Amina, (1884) 7 Mad. 277.

¹⁸ Nga Shwe Pe, (1894) P. J. L. B. 81.

COMMENT.

This section is enacted for the punishment of the slave-trader, who is habitually engaged in the traffic of buying and selling human beings. The last section dealt with a casual offender. A slave-dealer on land is punished under this section; such a dealer on sea is treated as a pirate by all civilised nations and punished severely.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused imported, exported, etc., slaves.

(2) That he did so habitually.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

372. Whoever sells, lets to hire, or otherwise disposes of¹ any person under the age of eighteen years² with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose,³ or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be employed or used for any such purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Selling minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.

Explanation I.—When a female under the age of eighteen years is sold, let for hire, or otherwise disposed of to a prostitute or to any person who keeps or manages a brothel, the person so disposing of such female shall, until the contrary is proved, be presumed to have disposed of her with the intent that she shall be used for the purpose of prostitution.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section “illicit intercourse” means sexual intercourse between persons not united by marriage or by any union or tie which, though not amounting to a marriage, is recognised by the personal law or custom of the community to which they belong or, where they belong to different communities, of both such communities, as constituting between them a quasi-marital relation.

COMMENT.

This section was materially altered by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (V of 1924) which has been repealed by Schedule II of the Repealing and Amending Act (VIII of 1930).

The age-limit was raised to eighteen years from sixteen by Act V of 1924, s. 2. The words “person under the age of eighteen years with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be” were substituted for the words “minor under the age of sixteen years with intent that such minor shall be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such minor will be” by Act XVIII of 1924, s. 2. Explanations I and II were added by s. 3 of the same Act. “The amendment is designed to make it clear that an offence is committed under section 372 or 373 of the Indian Penal Code, when the minor is either disposed of or procured for the purpose of being sexually known either before or after attainment of the age of eighteen years, and whether she is made over to a life of immorality or merely subjected to an isolated act of carnal intercourse. In either case the child is equally deserving of protection”.¹⁹

¹⁹ Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to Bill No. 9 of 1924, Gazette of India, 1924, L. C.—57

Part V, p. 36.

The gist of the offence under this section or s. 373 consists in the intention that the person under the age of eighteen years shall be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or for illicit intercourse, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or in the knowledge that it is likely that such person will be employed or used for any such purpose. In the absence of any intention or knowledge of the kind referred to the mere buying, selling, letting, or obtaining possession of such person is not per se a criminal act.²⁰ But where such intention or knowledge does exist, and a change in the position or circumstances of the person has been effected with such knowledge or intention, it is quite immaterial whether third persons have or have not observed any ceremonies recognized by custom as necessary to give prostitutes a particular status.²¹ The offence consists in the intentional or conscious exposure of a person under eighteen years, whether a male or a female, to the danger of degradation.

This section deals with the person who sells such person, the next section punishes the person who buys such person.

Scope.—This section applies to married as well as unmarried females under the age of eighteen years,²² and is applicable even where the girl concerned is a member of the dancing girl caste.²³ The offence under this and the following section is committed even though the girl, prior to sale or purchase, was leading an immoral life.²⁴

Ingredients.—The section requires the following essentials :—

1. Selling, or letting to hire, or other disposal of a person.
2. Such person should be under the age of eighteen years.
3. The selling, letting to hire, or other disposal must be with intent, or knowledge of likelihood that the person shall at any age be employed or used for
 - (i) the purpose of prostitution, or
 - (ii) illicit intercourse with any person, or
 - (iii) any unlawful and immoral purpose.

1. 'Sells, lets to hire, or otherwise disposes of'.—The terms 'sell' and 'hire' do not necessarily connote a present or immediate transfer of possession and where a transfer of possession is contemplated, the offence is complete on proof of the sale or hiring and without any proof of a transfer of possession.²⁵ The words 'lets to hire' are the counterpart of the word 'hire' in s. 373. The section now contemplates a case of letting or hiring or other similar transaction by which the possession of a girl is obtained with the intention of employing her habitually for the purpose of indiscriminate sexual intercourse, or with the intention of subjecting her to an isolated act of sexual intercourse.¹ Where a young prostitute was brought to a house of assignation by the accused at the request of the complainant and for his supposed use on that one occasion, it not being contemplated that the girl should be sold or let out for a period of employment, or for the purpose of being employed by the complainant as a prostitute, or for the purpose of being disposed of by him for that course of life, it was held that such a letting out by the accused was not within the meaning of this section.² Under the present amended section such letting out will amount to an offence.

Where a girl was deserted by her husband and after living with prostitutes and others for a time, finally took up her residence in the kothel kept by the accused, well knowing their occupation and there prostituted herself to all comers, the accused housing, feeding and clothing her in consideration of receiving the wages of her prostitution, it was held that the accused by thus receiving money did not let the girl to hire within the meaning of this section, and that the persons, whom the girl, in consideration of a money payment to the accused, allowed to have intercourse with her, did not hire her within the meaning of s. 373.³

²⁰ See Khushala, (1880) P. R. No. 27 of 1880.

²¹ Bhimde Pandu Deoli, (1905) 7 Bom. L. R. 562, 2 Cr. L. J. 500.

²² Kamnu, (1878) P. R. No. 12 of 1879.

²³ See Ramanna, (1899) 12 Mad. 273.

²⁴ See Ismail Rustomkhan, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 236, 3 Cr. L. J. 334.

²⁵ (1881) 1 Weir 359, 362, F.B.

¹ Ahmedkhan, (1898) Cr. R. No. 16 of 1898, Unrep. Cr. C. 962. Dowlath Bee v. Shaikh Ali, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 473, 1 Weir 377; Mussumat

Rahman, (1872) P. R. No. 29 of 1872; Mohubbut, (1873) P. R. No. 16 of 1873; Nga Shree Thwe, (1907) 1 U. B. R. (1907-09) (P. C.) 1, 6 Cr. L. J. 30, are of no authority.

² Sukee Raur, (1893) 21 Cal. 97; Noor Jan, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 39, 6 Beng. L. R. Appx. 34. See The Public Prosecutor v. Maddala Mutyalu, (1918) 35 M. L. J. 157, [1918] M. W. N. 484, 8 L. W. 253, 19 Cr. L. J. 965.

³ Ahmedkhan, (1898) Cr. R. No. 16 of 1898 Unrep. Cr. C. 962.

A full bench of the Madras High Court held that the "term 'dispose of' has many meanings. It denotes (inter alia) "to bestow for an object or purpose", "to make a change in the circumstances"; it does not necessarily imply that there has been a transfer of possession, nor indeed do the terms 'sell' or 'hire' necessarily connote a present or immediate transfer of possession, and where, as is no doubt generally the case, a transfer of possession is contemplated, the offence is complete on proof of the sale or hiring and without any proof of a transfer of possession".⁴ It is not necessary that there should have been a disposal tantamount to a transfer of possession or control over the minor's person.⁵ In a later case, the same High Court said: "The term 'dispose of' has many meanings. In Webster's Dictionary it is defined as (a) to determine the fate of, to exercise the power of control over, to fix the condition, employment, &c., of, to direct or assign for a use; (b) to exercise finally one's power of control over, to pass over into the control of some one else as by selling, to get rid of. Seeing that the term in s. 372, Indian Penal Code, is used in conjunction with selling and letting to hire, it would seem that the Legislature rather contemplated some physical disposal for a mercenary purpose or the exercise of some power of control which would be final and irrevocable in its moral effects, more especially as the words used are 'sells, lets to hire, or otherwise disposes of', thus suggesting other acts ejusdem generis".⁶ Where the accused, who was a customer of a brothel, came across a minor girl, who had run away from her father's house, unable to bear the ill-treatment of her step-mother, and directed her to the brothel, it was held that such a mere direction to her or recommending to her to go there would not constitute a 'disposal', within the meaning of this section.⁷ The word 'disposal' necessarily connotes some control by the person disposing over the minor disposed of.⁸

The Bombay High Court has held that the performance of gejje ceremony on a minor girl does not amount to her disposal within the meaning of this section.⁹ Similarly, it has held that the ceremony of tying a talimani to a minor girl, worshipping a basin of water by her and distributing food, is merely a preliminary step before the selling, letting out, or disposing of the girl for the purpose of prostitution, and is no offence under this section.¹⁰

2. 'Person under the age of eighteen years'.—The age-limit was raised to eighteen years by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (V of 1924), s. 2 (now repealed by Schedule II of the Repealing and Amending Act (VIII of 1930)). The section applies to all persons under eighteen years, whether males or females.

3. 'With intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose'.—It is necessary to prove that the accused intended that the person shall be employed for an immoral purpose. Mere possibility of the person being so used is not sufficient. It would be sufficient to show that the girl was given and accepted with the intention mentioned in the section. When an act is not per se criminal the specific intent which renders it criminal must be established by cogent evidence.

'At any age.'—The introduction of these words takes away the defence that though a girl was made over to a prostitute it was not intended that she should actually be used for the purpose of prostitution until she had passed the age of eighteen years.¹¹

'For the purpose of prostitution.'—Acts of improper sexual intercourse are acts of prostitution in one strict sense of the term. But proof of more than that is required. The ordinary and commonly understood meaning of the word prostitution is the offering of the person for promiscuous sexual intercourse with men, and that must be taken to be its meaning in the section.¹² The word 'prostitution' is not confined to

⁴ (1881) 1 Weir 359, 362, F.B.; Marakatham,^{*} (1881) 1 Weir 364, See Noor Jan, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 39, 6 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 34.

⁵ Arunachellam, (1876) 1 Mad. 164.

⁶ Per Parker, J., in Srinivasa v. Annasami, (1892) 15 Mad. 323, 329.

⁷ Senjimalai, (1924) 48 M. L. J. 594, 21 L. W. 472, 26 Cr. L. J. 868.

⁸ Ibid.

⁹ Parmeshwari Subbi, (1920) 22 Bom. L. R.

894, 21 Cr. L. J. 721, [1920] AIR (B) 63.

¹⁰ Sahebava Birrappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1022, 26 Cr. L. J. 1482.

¹¹ Ramanna, (1889) 12 Mad. 273, The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, (1894) 22 Cal. 164, overruled.

¹² Per Scotland, C. J., in Dowlath Bee v. Shaik Ali, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 473, 476, 1 Weir 377, 379.

acts of natural sexual intercourse, but includes any act of lewdness. Prostitution is proved if it is shown that a woman offers her body for purposes amounting to common lewdness in return for the payment of money.¹³

‘Illicit intercourse with any person.’—These words were added by Act XVIII of 1924, s. 2. If the person disposing of a girl knew that she would be used for illicit intercourse he would be liable. Explanation II explains what is meant by ‘illicit intercourse’. These words take away the defence that though the girl was handed over to a particular man for his carnal knowledge of her, yet it was not intended that she should be a prostitute at all, and that though the act or acts for which she was given may have been immoral, yet they were not unlawful.¹⁴ The accused will not be able to rely on the plea that the girl was not destined for a life of prostitution but merely for a single act of sexual intercourse.

‘Unlawful and immoral purpose.’—The word ‘unlawful’ is to be construed ejusdem generis with the word ‘immoral’.¹⁵ The purpose must be both unlawful and immoral. The accused transferred his daughter to a person for the purpose of concubinage. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section.¹⁶ To sell a woman as a mistress of another person comes within the section, this being an immoral purpose. The section does not involve a distinction between taking a woman as a mistress and taking her to be used as a prostitute.¹⁷

Adoption of daughter by dancing girl.—Where a dancing girl adopted a daughter, it was held that she had committed no offence if the girl was to be brought up as a daughter, although the girl might have her choice of following the profession of prostitute or marrying; and that she would be guilty under the section, if the girl was adopted in order to follow the profession as a minor.¹⁸ Subsequently, the same High Court has held that such an adoption would be an offence under the Penal Code.¹⁹ The Bombay High Court has held such an adoption to be invalid.²⁰ Under the present section such an act would be an offence if it was done with the intention or knowledge specified in the section. The burden of proof that the possession of the girl is not given to or obtained by a prostitute for leading an immoral life is on the person who gives the possession of such girl and the person who receives the girl under Explanation I to this section and s. 373.

Explanation 1.—This Explanation provides that if a minor girl is disposed of to a prostitute or to a brothel-keeper or manager, the person so disposing of her shall be presumed to have done so with the improper intent mentioned in s. 372.²¹ The same presumption is raised in the case of a prostitute or a brothel-keeper who obtains possession of a girl under Explanation 1 to s. 373.

‘Prostitution’ is defined as “promiscuous sexual intercourse for hire, whether in money or kind.”²²

As to the meaning of a “prostitute” Beaumont C. J. has observed: “A kept woman, who confines her favours exclusively to one man, even though he is not her husband, is not, in my opinion, a prostitute. Of course, a kept woman may also be a prostitute, as may a married woman. But I think that prostitution involves a more or less indiscriminate employment of the woman’s body for hire. The definition in the Oxford Dictionary of a ‘prostitute’ is ‘a woman who offers her body to indiscriminate sexual intercourse, especially for hire’. I do not say that that is an universal definition, and I do not suggest that a prostitute is bound to be entirely indiscriminate and to accept the first customer who offers her price like a cabman or the rank. But I certainly think that prostitution involves more than intercourse with one man.”²³

¹³ De Munk, [1918] 1 K. B. 635; Lalya Bapu Jadhav, (1929) 31 Bom. L. R. 521, 30 Cr. L. J. 787.

¹⁴ Mula, (1888) P. R. No. 13 of 1888, overruled.

¹⁵ Narayan, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 440.

¹⁶ Ponrangam, (1885) 1 Weir 373.

¹⁷ Girdhari, (1933) 35 Cr. L. J. 571.

¹⁸ Ramanna, (1889) 12 Mad. 273; Ponrangam, supra.

¹⁹ Guddati Reddi Obala v. Ganapati Kondanna, [1912] M. W. N. 1138, 23 M. L. J. 493.

²⁰ Mathura Naikin v. Esu Naikin, (1880) 4

Bom. 545; Hira Naikin v. Radha Naikin, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 1129. But see Manjamma v. Sheshgiri Rao, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 116.

²¹ Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to Bill No. 9 of 1924, Gazette of India, 1924, Part V, p. 36.

²² The North-West Frontier Province Anti-Prostitution and Suppression of Brothels Act (N. W. F. P. III of 1937), s. 2.

²³ Babibai, (1942) Criminal Revision No. 157 of 1942, decided by Beaumont, C. J., and Wassoodew, J., on June 25, 1942 (Bom. Unrep.).

Brothel.—To establish that premises are used as a brothel, what needs to be proved is that people of opposite sexes come there and have illicit sexual intercourse on the premises.²⁴ ‘Brthel’ has been defined as “any house or place which the occupier or person in charge thereof habitually allows to be used by any other person for the purpose of prostitution”.²⁵

The Calcutta High Court has held that assuming that this section applies to an arrangement made between a manager of a brothel and individual visitors with regard to isolated acts of sexual intercourse, still in order to support a conviction under the section there must be proof of the act of hiring between the manager and the visitors. The mere fact of payment of money to the manager by the visitors is no such proof.¹

Explanation 2.—This Explanation defines the expression ‘illicit intercourse’.

Dev Dasi.—The dedication of girls under eighteen years to the service of a temple as dasis will amount to a disposal of such minors, knowing it to be likely that they will be used for the purpose of prostitution, within the meaning of this section.² The Member introducing the Bill amending this section said: “We have not... definitely assumed that employment as dev dasi is equivalent to employment for purposes of prostitution, but should such employment actually prove to come within that definition our Bill will enable it to be dealt with more effectively than hitherto”.³

In a Madras full bench case⁴ under the old s. 372 it was suggested:—“The acts imputed to the accused could not constitute an offence because they are sanctioned by the religious usages of Hindus”. But the Court said: “The 372nd and 373rd sections of the Indian Penal Code were intended for the protection of minors. They involve the declaration as a matter of general law that no person under the age of majority shall be devoted to a life of prostitution nor employed in, nor used for, any unlawful or immoral purpose nor placed in a position in which it is likely such person will be employed in, or used for, any such purpose.

“This rule, which is obviously suggested by the highest considerations of justice and morality, must control the exercise of all private law, even in those cases in which the private law assumes to vindicate itself on the specious plea of religion. If the terms in which the law is expressed are sufficient to include within their provisions acts done under colour of religion, those who participate in such acts are liable to the penal consequences, however, laudable their motives according to the peculiar standard of morality adopted by the professors of their religion.

“The point was fully considered and decided by this Court in *Ex-parte Padmavati*⁵...”. The learned Judges observe: ‘The argument that the treatment of such a transaction as criminal is impossible, because the Hindu religion sanctions the practice and the Private Law recognizes private rights as flowing from it, is manifestly of no weight. An offence is every transgression of a Penal Law, and a rule of Penal Law is a rule of Public Law, and necessarily overrides every precept of Private Law, and cannot be affected by any argument derived from that Law... With respect to the argument from religion, it is only necessary to observe that if the precepts of a particular religion enjoin acts which transgress the rules of Penal Law, these acts will clearly be offences. Where the Legislature intended that acts which would otherwise be offences should not be so because connected with religious observances they have expressed that intention.—(Penal Code, Sec. 292).’

“The cases in which persons have been held amenable to the penal law for

²⁴ Winter v. Woolfe, (1930) 29 Cox 214; Justices of Parts of Holland, Lincolnshire, (1882) 42 J. P. 312.

²⁵ The North-West Frontier Province Anti-Prostitution and Suppression of Brothels Act (N. W. F. P. III of 1937), s. 2.

¹ Jogueswar Ghosh, (1936) 40 C. W. N. 1188, 65 C. L. J. 344.

² See (1881) 1 Weir 359, F.B.; Dasi Marimuthu, (1884) 1 Weir 364; Padmavati, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 415, 1 Weir 356; Arunachellam, (1876) 1 Mad. 164; Basava, (1891) 15 Mad. 75; Srinivasa v. Annasami, (1891) 15 Mad. 41; same case at a further stage, (1892) 15 Mad. 323; The Public Prosecutor v. Kannammal, [1913] M. W. N. 207, 24 M. L. J. 211, 14 Cr. L. J. 33; Public Prosecutor v. Rajammal, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 479, 12 Cr. L. J. 566; Jaili Bhavin, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 60; Tippa, (1892) 16 Bom. 737. See Baku, (1899) 24 Bom. 287, 1 Bom. L. R. 678, where the question of jurisdiction is discussed.

³ Proceedings of the Legislative Assembly, dated February 11, 1924, pp. 447, 448.

⁴ (1881) 1 Weir 359, 360, F.B.

⁵ (1870) 5 M. H. C. 415, 416, 1 Weir 356.

participation in Sati, in Mariah sacrifices, and in the procuring of slaves, though these acts were sanctioned by the religious law of the parties implicated, show that the plea, that the practice is enjoined or allowed by the religious law of the accused, is not allowed to prevail over the injunctions of the penal law.

"The word 'allowed' is used advisedly, because the Court does not understand that the dedication of minors is anywhere enjoined. A dedication may be made after the girl has attained her age of majority. It is represented to the Court that it is only because it is regarded as a point of honour that a girl should be married before she attains puberty, that the dedication which is deemed equivalent to marriage takes place ordinarily during minority. Where the objection is founded not on a religious injunction but on a usage allowed by religion and suggested merely by sentiment, there can be no reluctance on the part of the Court so to interpret the law as to protect minors from a life considered by civilized nations as shameful".

To put a stop to the practice of dedicating girls as devdasis in the Bombay Presidency the Bombay Devdasis Protection Act (X of 1934) has been passed.

Amendment.—The age-limit was raised to eighteen years from sixteen years and the words "person under the age of eighteen years with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be" were substituted for the words "minor under the age of sixteen years with intent that such minor shall be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such minor will be" by the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (XVIII of 1924), s. 2. But this Act has now been wholly repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act (VIII of 1980).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question was under eighteen years of age at the time of the offence.

(2) That the accused sold, let to hire, or otherwise disposed of such person.

(3) That he did so with intent that such person should be employed or used at any age for the purpose of prostitution, or for illicit intercourse with any person, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose; or with knowledge that it was likely that such person would be employed or used for any such purpose.⁶

The question whether or not the disposal of the person was effected with the intention or knowledge postulated by this section, is a question of fact which must be determined according to the circumstances of each case.⁷

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, sold (or let to hire, or disposed of) a person under the age of eighteen years, to wit—, with intent that such person should at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or for illicit intercourse with a person, to wit—, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, viz. (state the purpose) or [knowing it to be likely that such minor would be employed or used for any such purpose], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 372 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (omit these words if the case is tried by a Magistrate)] on the said charge.

373. Whoever buys, hires or otherwise obtains possession¹ of any person under the age of eighteen years² with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit inter-

Buying minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.

⁶ Sri Lal, (1880) 2 All. 694, F.B.; Khushala, (1880) P. R. No. 27 of 1880; Durga Das, (1904) course with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose,³ or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be employed or used for any such purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

P. R. No. 13 of 1904, 1 Cr. L. J. 949.

⁷ (1881) 1 Weir 359, F.B.

Explanation I.—Any prostitute or any person keeping or managing a brothel, who buys, hires or otherwise obtains possession of a female under the age of eighteen years shall, until the contrary is proved, be presumed to have obtained possession of such female with the intent that she shall be used for the purpose of prostitution.

Explanation II.—‘Illicit intercourse’ has the same meaning as in section 372.

COMMENT.

The age-limit was raised to eighteen years from sixteen by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (V of 1924), s. 2, and the words “person under the age of eighteen years with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be” were substituted for the words “minor under the age of sixteen years with intent that such minor shall be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such minor will be” by the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (XVIII of 1924), s. 2, which has now been wholly repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act (VIII of 1930). Explanations I and II were also added by s. 4 of the same Act.

This section applies to a case of buying or hiring or other similar transaction by which possession of a person under eighteen years of age is obtained with the intention of employing or using that person for prostitution, or illicit intercourse with any person, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose. It includes both males and females under the age of eighteen years.

Sections 372 and 373.—Both the sections relate to the same subject-matter. The former contemplates an offence committed by the person who ‘sells, lets to hire, or otherwise disposes of’ any person under the age of eighteen years, with the requisite intent or knowledge. The latter relates to the case of the person who ‘buys, hires, or otherwise obtains possession of’ any person under the age of eighteen. Section 372 strikes at any bargain of the nature contemplated by it, whoever may be the party who sells or lets the person, even though it should be the father, mother, or lawful guardian. Section 373 strikes at the bawds, keepers of brothels, and all others, who fatten on the profits arising from the general prostitution of the girls.

Ingredients.—The section requires the following essentials:—

1. Buying, hiring or otherwise obtaining possession of a person.
2. The person should be under the age of eighteen years.
3. The buying, hiring, or otherwise obtaining possession must be with intent or knowledge of likelihood that the person shall at any age be employed or used for
 - (i) the purpose of prostitution, or
 - (ii) illicit intercourse, or
 - (iii) any unlawful and immoral purpose.

1. ‘Buys, hires, or otherwise obtains possession’.—The Bombay⁸ and the Patna⁹ High Courts have held that it is not necessary that the buying, hiring, or otherwise obtaining of the possession of the person should be from a third person. A person taking possession of a girl under eighteen years for the purpose indicated in the section will be liable even though there is no one who has given him the possession of the girl but he himself has taken possession of her. An offence under the previous section is not necessary for a conviction under this section. A person who steals a minor girl under eighteen years of age with the requisite intention obtains possession of her.¹⁰ The Madras¹¹ and the Calcutta¹² High Courts have held to the contrary. The language of the section is quite applicable to an agreement or understanding come to with the person without the intervention of a third person, and the vice against which the section is directed is certainly not of any less enormity in the latter case.

⁸ Shamsundarbai, (1920) 22 Bom. L. R. 1234, 45 Bom. 529; Bhagchand Jasraj Marwadi, (1934) 36 Bom. L. R. 379, 58 Bom. 498; Gordhan Kalidas, (1941) 43 Bom. L. R. 847, [1942] Bom. 7.

⁹ Shamsunder Prusti, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 800, 11 P. L. T. 341, [1930] AIR (P) 219.

'Possession' means possession with a power of disposal. The term "possession" means something more than the obtaining of possession of a girl by a man for a single act of sexual intercourse. It denotes definite control over the person of whom possession is obtained.¹³ When a girl elopes with another of her own accord and there is nothing to show that she cannot leave him at any moment the man cannot be said to have possession of the girl.¹⁴ Where a girl aged seventeen years and a half went with the accused voluntarily and there was nothing to show that the accused had exercised any control over her or prevented her from doing anything she liked, it was held that the accused did not obtain possession of the girl within the meaning of this section, and he could not, therefore, be convicted of an offence under the section.¹⁵

The offence is complete so soon as the obtaining possession, with the requisite intention or knowledge of the girl is accomplished. The phrase "otherwise obtains possession" corresponds to "otherwise disposes of" in s. 372 and is ejusdem generis with "buying" and "hiring".¹⁶

This section does not specify the nature of the possession, nor its duration, nor intensity. It merely specifies the object, namely prostitution or illicit intercourse, whether, in each case, the possession is such as to be consistent with the purpose or intention or knowledge of prostitution or illicit intercourse—is the only test which in law is necessary and sufficient.¹⁷

Where the accused is proved to have obtained possession of a female under the age of eighteen years and is proved to be a person who occupies or manages a brothel, then he is to be presumed to have obtained possession of that girl with the intent that he shall use her for the purpose of prostitution. The onus is cast upon the accused under Explanation 1 to rebut the presumption that he had obtained possession of the girl with intent that she should be used for prostitution.¹⁸

2. 'Person under the age of eighteen years'.—The age-limit was raised to eighteen years by Act V of 1924, s. 2.

3. 'With intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose'.—Proof of intention or knowledge is almost entirely a matter of inference from circumstances. Under the old section, the Calcutta and the Allahabad High Courts had held that the offence was not committed if, notwithstanding the existence of the requisite guilty intention or knowledge, the employment that was intended or known to be likely was to take place after the completion of the sixteenth year.¹⁹ The Madras High Court,²⁰ though once of this opinion, subsequently differed from it and decided that the section did not require that the intention with respect to the employment or use of the girl for the purpose of prostitution should relate to her employment or use while she was under sixteen years.²¹ The present

¹⁰ Bhagchand Jasraj Marwadi, (1934) 86 Bom. L. R. 379, 58 Bom. 498.

¹¹ Dowlath Bee v. Shaik Ali, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 473, 475, 1 Weir 377; The Public Prosecutor v. Maddila Mutyalu, (1918) 35 M. L. J. 157, [1918] M. W. N. 484, 8 L. W. 253, 19 Cr. L. J. 965; Mt. Ganga, (1897) 11 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 6.

¹² Jateendra Mohan Das, [1937] 2 Cal. 187.

¹³ Bhagchand Jasraj Marwadi, supra; Jateendra Mohan Das, supra; Nga Shwe Thwe, (1907) U. B. R. (1907-09) (P. C.). 1, 6 Cr. L. J. 30.

¹⁴ Jateendra Mohan Das, supra.

¹⁵ Gordhan Kalidas, (1941) 43 Bom. L. R. 847, [1942] Bom. 7.

¹⁶ Jateendra Mohan Das, supra.

¹⁷ Vithabai Sukha, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 618, 52 Bom. 403.

¹⁸ Chiragh, (1929) 30 P. L. R. 414, 30 Cr. L. J. 376.

¹⁹ The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, (1894) 22 Cal. 164, 172; Khetramani Dasi, (1922) 35 C. L. J. 451, 24 Cr. L. J. 104; Ramanna, (1889) 12 Mad. 273; Chanda, (1895) 18 All. 24.

²⁰ Kamalakshi v. Ramasami Chetti, (1895) 19 Mad. 127, 135.

²¹ Kannammal, [1913] M. W. N. 207, 24 M. L. J. 211, 14 Cr. L. J. 33.

section speaks of employment or use 'at any age'. The Calcutta and the Allahabad cases and the earlier ruling of the Madras High Court are, therefore, no longer of any authority.

'For the purpose of prostitution.'—Prostitution means the surrender of a girl's chastity for money.²² "Acts of improper sexual intercourse are acts of prostitution in one strict sense of the term. But proof of more than that... is required. The ordinary and commonly understood meaning of the word prostitution is the offering of the person for promiscuous sexual intercourse with men, and that... must be taken to be its meaning in the section, there being nothing in the context opposed to it, but rather the contrary".²³

'Illicit intercourse with any person.'—The meaning of 'illicit intercourse' is explained in Explanation II to s. 372. See Comment on s. 372. Cases which laid down that no offence is committed if employment for prostitution is not habitual are no longer of any authority.²⁴

'Unlawful and immoral purpose.'—Section 372 and this section do not prohibit by punishing a transaction in which the employment or use contemplated is for a purpose that is merely unlawful or for a purpose that is merely immoral, except the purpose of prostitution. No transaction of the kinds described in these sections, with the exception just noted, is an offence under these sections, unless the purpose of the contemplated use of the minor is both unlawful and immoral".²⁵

Explanation.—In order that the presumption under this Explanation should take effect, it is necessary that the accused person should be a prostitute or should be keeping or managing a brothel at the time he or she obtains possession of a girl.¹

As to the meaning of 'prostitute' see Comment on p. 900.

Amendment.—The word 'eighteen' was substituted for 'sixteen' by Act V of 1914, s. 2, before the section was altered by Act XVIII of 1924.

C A S E S .

Selling and buying girl for prostitution.—A, the father of two girl-twins about a year old, sold them to a prostitute for Rs. 23. He and the prostitute confessed to the guilty knowledge and intent with which the transaction was made. It was held that A was guilty of an offence under s. 372 and the prostitute under this section.² In a charge against a dancing girl for having purchased a girl with intent that she would be used for the purpose of prostitution or knowing it to be likely that she would be so used, evidence was given of the fact of purchase for a consideration and that numerous other dancing girls residing in the neighbourhood were in the habit of obtaining girls and bringing them up as dancing girls or prostitutes, and that there were no instances of girls brought up by dancing girls ever having been married. On its being contended that there was no evidence of intent to support a conviction under this section, it was held that there was evidence to support it.³

Obtaining possession of girl for prostitution.—A minor married girl was brought, with the consent of her husband, by accused No. 2 from Kashmir to Bombay at the expense of accused No. 1, a brothel-keeper. On her arrival in Bombay, the girl was kept in the brothel, and her earnings were divided half and half by the two accused. It was held that what took place in Kashmir was only a preparation for committing the offence, which was completed in Bombay, and the accused were guilty under ss. 373 and 114.⁴ Where a brothel-keeper allowed a girl under eighteen years

²² Frederick Moon, [1910] 1 K. B. 818, 820.

²³ Per Scotland, C. J., in Dowlath Bee v. Shaikh Ali, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 473, 476, 1 Weir 377, 379.

²⁴ Dowlath Bee v. Shaikh Ali, ibid.; Noor Jan, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 39, 6 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 34; Sukee Raur, (1893) 21 Cal. 96; Ahmedkhan, (1898) Unrep. Cr. C. 962, Cr. R. No. 16 of 1898; Mussammat Bhutia, (1875) 7 N. W. P. 295; Hardeo, (1879) P. R. No. 7 of 1880; The Public Prosecutor v. Maddila Mutyalu, (1918) 35 M. L. J. 157, [1918] M. W.

N. 484, 8 L. W. 253, 19 Cr. L. J. 965.

²⁵ Per Plowden, J., in Mula, (1888) P. R. No. 13 of 1888, p. 20.

¹ Banubai Irani, (1942) 45 Bom. L. R. 281, 44 Cr. L. J. 534, [1943] AIR (B) 150, F.B.

² The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, (1894) 22 Cal. 164.

³ Papa Sani, (1899) 23 Mad. 159; Bhagirath, (1900) 20 A. W. N. 133; Musammat Sunder, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 559, 1 Cr. L. J. 972.

⁴ Batubai Ganeshu, (1927) 29 Bom. L. R. 490, 28 Cr. L. J. 465, [1927] AIR (B) 666.

of age to visit the brothel for two or three hours in the night and allowed her to prostitute herself to customers for money, it was held that the brothel-keeper committed an offence punishable under this section.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question was under eighteen years of age at the time of the offence.

(2) That the accused bought, hired, or obtained possession of, such person.

(3) That he did so with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution, or illicit intercourse with any person, or for any unlawful and immoral purpose; or with knowledge that it was likely that such person would be employed or used for any such purpose.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—See s. 372.

374. Whoever unlawfully compels any person¹ to labour against the will² of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Unlawful compulsory labour.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section is intended to prevent abuses arising from forced labour which ryots were sometimes compelled to render to landlords.

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials:—

1. Unlawful compulsion of any person.

2. Such compulsion must be to labour against the will of that person.

1. ‘Unlawfully compels any person’.—“I do not think that a person who insists that another who has consented to serve him shall perform his work, unlawfully compels such person to labour, because it is the thing which he or she has agreed to do, and although if the employer assault the servant for not working to his satisfaction, he undoubtedly renders himself liable to rigorous imprisonment under s. 352...., I do not think he thereby commits an offence under s. 374.”⁶ Where the accused induced the complainants, who, he alleged, were indebted to him in various sums of money, to consent to live on his premises and to work off their debts, and the complainants were to, and did in fact, receive no pay, but were fed by the accused as his servants, and he insisted on their working for him, and punished them by beating them if they did not do so, it was held that a conviction under this section could not be upheld.⁷

2. ‘To labour against the will’.—The word ‘labour’ will apply either to mental or to bodily labour, though probably the latter was principally contemplated by the framers of the Code.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused compelled the person in question to labour.

(2) That such compulsion was unlawful.

(3) That the accused did so against the will of that person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, unlawfully compelled AB to ⁵ Vithabai Sukha, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 663, 52 Bom. 403.

⁶ Per Petheram, C. J., in Madan Mohan

Biswas, (1892) 19 Cal. 572, 581.

⁷ So held by Petheram, C. J., and Beverley, J., (Norris, J., dissenting) in ibid.

labour against his will, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 374 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Of Rape.

375. A man is said to commit "rape" who, except in the case hereinafter excepted, has sexual intercourse¹ with a woman under circumstances² falling under any of the five following descriptions :—

Rape.

First.—Against her will.

Secondly.—Without her consent.

Thirdly.—With her consent, when her consent has been obtained by putting her in fear of death, or of hurt.

Fourthly.—With her consent, when the man knows that he is not her husband, and that her consent is given because she believes that he is another man to whom she is or believes herself to be lawfully married.

Fifthly.—With or without her consent, when she is under fourteen years of age.

Explanation.—Penetration is sufficient to constitute the sexual intercourse necessary to the offence of rape.

Exception.—Sexual intercourse by a man with his own wife, the wife not being under thirteen years of age, is not rape.

376. Whoever commits rape shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine, unless the woman raped is his own wife and is not under twelve years of age, in which case he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for rape.

COMMENT.

In the definition of rape, the first clause operates, where the woman is in possession of her senses, and therefore capable of consenting; the second, where she is insensible whether from drink or any other cause, or so imbecile that she is incapable of any rational consent; the third and the fourth, where there is consent, but it is not such a consent as excuses the offender, because in the one case it is extorted by putting the woman in fear, and in the other, it is obtained by deception of a particular kind; and the fifth, where the intercourse is with a girl so young that consent is immaterial.

The offence of rape is in law a single act of sexual intercourse. It is not a continuing offence.⁸

English law.—A boy under fourteen years of age cannot, by law, be convicted of feloniously carnally knowing and abusing a girl under ten years old, even though it be proved that he has arrived at the full state of puberty.⁹ "The rule at common law is... that in regard to the offence of rape malitia non supplet ætatem; a boy under fourteen is under a physical incapacity to commit the offence. That is a presumptio juris et de jure, and judges have time after time refused to receive evidence to shew that a particular prisoner was in fact capable of committing the offence."¹⁰ But a boy under fourteen can be convicted of an indecent assault under the Criminal Law Amendment Act.¹¹ The presumption of English law against the possibility of the commission of the offence of rape by a boy under the age of fourteen years has no application to India.¹²

⁸ Ali Hyder (Haider), (1938) 68 C. L. J. 238, 40 Cr. L. J. 280.

⁹ Jordan, (1839) 9 C. & P. 118.

Ingredients.—This section requires two essentials :—

1. Sexual intercourse by a man with a woman.
2. The sexual intercourse must be under circumstances falling under any of the five clauses in the section.

1. 'Sexual intercourse.'—The sexual intercourse must be with a woman. The term 'man' is defined as a male human being of any age (s. 10). The term 'woman' is defined as a female human being of any age (s. 10).

2. 'Under circumstances.'—The five clauses of the section denote the circumstances which render the sexual intercourse an offence under this section.

Second clause.—'Without her consent.'—Consent of the woman should have been obtained prior to the act. It is no defence that the woman consented after the fact.¹³ As to the elements which make a consent void, see s. 90, supra. The object and effect of s. 90 is not to lay down that a child under twelve years of age is in fact incapable of expressing or withholding his or her consent to an act, but to provide that where the consent of a person may afford a defence to a criminal charge such consent must be a real consent, not vitiated by immaturity, misconception, misunderstanding, fear or fraud.¹⁴

The fact that the girl was virgo intacta up to the date of the occurrence is very strong proof against the intercourse having taken place with the consent of the girl.¹⁵

Stephen, J., in The Queen v. Clarence said : "It seems to me that the proposition that fraud vitiates consent in criminal matters is not true if taken to apply in the fullest sense of the word, and without qualification. It is too short to be true, as a mathematical formula is true. If we apply it in that sense to the present case, it is difficult to say that the prisoner was not guilty of rape, for the definition of rape is having connection with a woman without her consent; and if fraud vitiates consent, every case in which a man infects a woman or commits bigamy, the second wife being ignorant of the first marriage, is also a case of rape. Many seductions would be rapes, and so might acts of prostitution procured by fraud, as for instance by promises not intended to be fulfilled. . . . the only sorts of fraud which so far destroy the effect of a woman's consent as to convert a connection consented to in fact into a rape are frauds as to the nature of the act itself, or as to the identity of the person who does the act."¹⁶

A sleeping person can never consent. Where, therefore, a man had connection with a woman while she was asleep, he was held to have committed rape.¹⁷

Consent of a girl under ten was held to be quite immaterial where the charge was for attempt to commit rape. Consent means a willing mind on the part of the girl to allow the act to be done. If from her tender years, not knowing what was being done, she merely submits without the exercise of any will by her, it will not amount to a consent.¹⁸

Consent given by a woman of unsound mind is of no avail (s. 90). Where, therefore, a man had carnal knowledge of a girl of imbecile mind, and the jury found that it was without her consent, she being incapable of giving consent from defect of understanding, it was held that his act amounted to rape.¹⁹ But there must be evidence that the connection was against the will or without the consent of the woman.²⁰

¹⁰ Per Lord Coleridge, C. J., in Waite, [1892] 2 Q. B. 600, 601.

¹¹ 48 & 49 Vic., c. 69, ss. 4, 9; Williams, [1898] 1 Q. B. 320.

¹² Paras Ram Dube, (1915) 37 All. 187.

¹³ 1 Hawk. P. C., c. 16, s. 7, p. 122.

¹⁴ Khalil-ur-Rahman, (1938) 11 Ran. 213, F.B.

¹⁵ Sultan, (1923) 26 Cr. L. J. 1488.

¹⁶ (1888) 22 Q. B. D. 23, 43, 44.

¹⁷ Mayers, (1872) 12 Cox 311; Young, (1878) 14 Cox 114.

¹⁸ Beale, (1865) 35 L. J. (M. C.) 60; Asad Ali, (1927) 9 P. L. T. 186, 29 Cr. L. J. 12.

¹⁹ Fletcher, (1859) 8 Cox 131; Pressy, (1867) 10 Cox 635.

²⁰ Fletcher, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 39.

However, if the girl was in such a state of idiocy as to be incapable of expressing either consent or dissent, and the accused had connection with her consent, he ought to be convicted.²¹

Similarly, consent given by an intoxicated woman is of no avail. Where the accused made a girl of thirteen years quite drunk, and whilst she was insensible violated her person, he was held to have committed rape.²²

Passive non-resistance or consent obtained by fraud.—If a girl does not resist intercourse in consequence of misapprehension, this will not amount to a consent on her part. Where a medical man, to whom a girl of fourteen years of age was sent for professional advice, had criminal connection with her, she making no resistance from a bona fide belief that he was treating her medically, it was held that he could be convicted of rape.²³ Similarly, where the accused professed to give medical advice for money, and a girl of nineteen consulted him with respect to illness from which she was suffering, and he advised that a surgical operation should be performed and, under pretence of performing it, had carnal intercourse with her, it was held that he was guilty of rape.²⁴ The accused, who was engaged to give lessons in singing and voice production to a girl of sixteen years of age, had sexual intercourse with her under the pretence that her breathing was not quite right and that he had to perform an operation to enable her to produce her voice properly. The girl submitted to what was done under the belief, wilfully and fraudulently induced by the accused, that she was being medically and surgically treated by the accused and not with any intention that he should have sexual intercourse with her. It was held that the accused was guilty of rape.²⁵

“That consent obtained by fraud is no consent at all is not true as a general proposition either in fact or in law. If a man meets a woman in the street and knowingly gives her bad money in order to procure her consent to intercourse with him, he obtains her consent by fraud, but it would be childish to say that she did not consent.”²¹

Third clause.—The mere fact that a woman submits through fear does not take the offence out of the category of rape.²

The fear must be of death or hurt. ‘Hurt’ is defined in s. 319, supra.

Fifth clause.—There may be cases in which the check of the law may be necessary to restrain men from taking advantage of their marital right prematurely. Instances of abuse by the husband in such cases will fall under this clause.

The age-limit was raised from ten to twelve years by the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (X of 1891) for the following reasons: “The limit at which the age of consent is now fixed (i.e., ten years) favours the premature consummation by adult husbands of marriages with children who have not reached the age of puberty, and is thus, in the unanimous opinion of medical authorities, productive of grievous suffering and permanent injury to child-wives and of physical deterioration in the community to which they belong.”³

It was raised from twelve to fourteen years by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (XXIX of 1925), s. 2, for the following reasons: “Books of medical jurisprudence establish the fact that the age of puberty in India is attained by a girl upon her reaching the age of fourteen. Even though puberty may be reached at the age, it is obvious that girls are unfit for sexual cohabitation till they are older and more developed in physique and strength. The appalling infant mortality in the country is partially ascribed to early marriages and the consummation which follows with immature girls. It is, therefore, not only for the protection of minor girls as also of their progeny that the age of consent should be raised to at least fourteen years.”⁴

By raising this limit female children are protected (a) from premature cohabitation,⁵ and (b) from immature prostitution.

²¹ Barratt, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 81; Ryan, (1846) 2 Cox 115.

²² Camplin, (1845) 1 Cox 220; Ryan, ibid.

²³ William's Case, (1850) 4 Cox 220.

²⁴ Flattery, (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 410.

²⁵ Williams, [1923] 1 K. B. 340.

¹ Per Wills, J., in Clarence, (1888) 22 Q. B. D. 23, 27.

² Akbar Kazee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 21.

³ Statement of Objects and Reasons to Bill No. 3 of 1891, Gazette of India, 1891, Part V, p. 5.

⁴ Statement of Objects and Reasons to Bill No. 12 of 1924, Gazette of India, 1924, Part V, p. 49.

⁵ Vide Hurree Mohun Mythee, (1880) 18 Cal. 49.

The accused, a youth of about eighteen, had, without any ancillary violence, sexual intercourse with a well-developed girl probably under twelve years of age; the girl did not consent; her vagina was ruptured and, as a result, she died of shock; it was held that the accused was guilty of rape.⁶ If the girl is less than fourteen years of age her consent is immaterial.⁷

Explanation.—The Explanation says that penetration is sufficient to constitute rape. To constitute penetration it must be proved that some part of the virile member of the accused was within the labia of the pudendum of the woman, no matter how little.⁸ The only thing to be ascertained is whether the private parts of the accused did enter into the person of the woman. It is not necessary to decide how far they entered.⁹ It is not essential that the hymen should be ruptured, provided it is clearly proved that there was penetration¹⁰ even though partial.¹¹ In Reg. v. Ferroll Green, J., directed the jury that vulval penetration only was sufficient, under the law of India, to constitute rape without actual seminal emission. In this case the accused was charged with rape on a child six years old. The child had not complained, and admitted on cross-examination that she had not been hurt. The medical evidence proved that there was no injury to the parts. The child was found to be suffering from gonorrhoea, so was the accused. It was clear that the penetration (if any) had been only vulval. Green, J., directed the jury that this was sufficient to constitute rape, and the accused was convicted of rape.¹² There is a distinction between vulval penetration and vaginal penetration. In order to constitute rape the statute merely requires medical evidence of penetration, and this may occur and the hymen remain intact.¹³

Where no penetration is attempted or intended the act is not punishable under this section.¹⁴

Exception.—The age-limit was raised to thirteen years by Act XXIX of 1925, s. 2.

A man cannot be guilty of rape on his own wife when she is over the age of thirteen years, on account of the matrimonial consent she has given which she cannot retract. But he has no right to enjoy her person without regard to the question of safety to her.¹⁵ A husband can be guilty of abetment of rape by another on his wife. This was held in the notorious case of Lord Audley who held his wife by force while his butler ravished her.¹⁶ A husband suspecting the fidelity of his wife, went about in search of her, with nine companions, and found her in the company of her paramour. By way of punishment the wife was there and then ravished by all the nine companions in succession while the husband was looking on. The nine persons were held guilty of rape.¹⁷

Difference between indecent assault and attempt to commit rape.—An offence of indecent assault on a woman cannot be complete unless there is intention or knowledge that the woman's modesty will be outraged.¹⁸ An indecent assault upon a woman does not amount to an attempt to commit rape, unless the Court is satisfied that there was a determination in the accused to gratify his passion at all events, and in spite of all resistance.¹⁹ An assault with intent to commit a rape is very different from an assault with intent to have an improper connection. The former is with intent to have a connection by force. On an indictment for an assault,

⁶ Shambhu Khatri, (1924) 3 Pat. 410.

⁷ Mohuddin, (1930) 51 C. L. J. 352, 32 Cr. L. J. 455, [1930] AIR (C) 437.

⁸ Joseph Lines, (1844) 1 C. & K. 398.

⁹ Allen, (1839) 9 C. & P. 31, 34.

¹⁰ Jordan, (1839) 9 C. & P. 118; Hughes, (1841) 9 C. & P. 752; John Cox, (1832) 5 C. & P. 297; Russen, (1777) 1 East P. C. 438, 439; Maharaj Din, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 244, [1927] AIR (L) 222.

¹¹ Abdul Majid, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 241 [1927] AIR (L) 735.

¹² Bombay High Court Sessions, February 10, 1879. Referred to by Lyon in his Medical Jurisprudence for India, 9th Edn., p. 370. Followed in Natha, (1923) 26 Cr. L. J. 1185.

¹³ Jantan, (1924) 36 P. L. R. 35, 36 Cr. L. J. 310.

¹⁴ Tottitodiyil Ahmed Kutti, (1891) 1 Weir 383.

¹⁵ Hurree Mohun Mythee, (1890) 18 Cal. 49.

¹⁶ Mervin Lord Audley's Case, (1631) 3 St. Tr. 401.

¹⁷ Tatya Tukaram Khabali, (1930) Cr. App. Nos. 19 and 20 of 1930, decided by Mirza and Broomfield, JJ., on March 5, 1930 (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁸ Fatima v. Captain McCormick, (1219) 6 B. L. T. 21, 14 Cr. L. J. 149, F.B.

¹⁹ Shankar, (1881) 5 Bom. 403; James Lloyd, (1836) 7 C. & P. 318; Wright, (1866) 4 F. & F. 967.

with intent to commit a rape, the prosecutrix stated that the accused, her medical man, being in her bedroom, directed her to lean forward on a bed, that he might apply an injection; she did so, and the injection having been applied, she found the accused was proceeding to have a criminal connection with her, upon which she instantly raised herself up, and ran out of the room. She stated that the accused had penetrated her person "a little." It was held that if it had appeared that the accused had intended to have had a criminal connection with the prosecutrix by force, the complete offence of rape would, upon this evidence, have been proved, but that the getting possession of the person of the woman by surprise was not an assault with intent to commit rape, but was an assault.²⁰ Where the accused stripped a girl nearly naked and was lying upon her when her cries attracted people to the spot, it was held that he was guilty of an attempt to commit rape and not merely of an offence under s. 354.²¹ The accused caught hold of a girl, threw her down, put sand in her mouth, got on her chest and attempted to have intercourse with her. She resisted and cried and her screams attracted a couple of persons seeing whom the accused ran away. It was held that the offence committed was an attempt to commit rape and not merely one under s. 354.²² A female child aged five and a half years was discovered seated on the naked thighs of the accused who was a lad of eighteen years. The accused had taken off his own trousers and that of the girl. On medical examination of the girl it was found that with the exception of fresh redness at the entrance to the vagina, the girl bore no other mark of injury and her hymen was intact. There were no marks of blood or semen on her person and she did not complain of having felt any pain as the result of the accused's assault upon her. It was held that under the circumstances the accused was guilty of an attempt to commit rape and not merely of an indecent assault.²³ The complainant, a milkmaid aged 12 or 13 years, who was hawking milk, entered the accused's house to deliver milk. The accused got up from the bed on which he was lying and chained the door from inside. He then removed his clothes and the girl's petticoat, picked her up, laid her on the bed, and sat on her chest. He put his hand over her mouth to prevent her crying and placed his private parts against hers. There was no penetration. The girl struggled and cried, and so the accused desisted and she got up, unchained the door and went out. It was held that the accused was not guilty of attempt to commit rape, but of indecent assault.²⁴

Physical incapacity.—The Bombay High Court has held that a person physically incapable of committing the offence of rape cannot be held guilty of an attempt to commit it.²⁵ The former Chief Court of Lower Burma had expressed its dissent from this view and had laid down that a boy of twelve could be convicted of an attempt to commit rape.¹

Amendment.—The age-limit was raised to fourteen years in cl. (5) and to thirteen in the Exception to the section by Act XXIX of 1925, s. 2. The proviso to s. 376 was also added by s. 3 of the same Act.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused had sexual intercourse with the woman in question.

(2) That the act was done under circumstances falling under any of the five descriptions specified in s. 375.

(3) That such woman was not the wife of the accused; or, if she was his wife, she was under thirteen years of age.

(4) That there was penetration.

The best evidence of the age of the person violated ought to be produced.² A doctor is in a better position to form an opinion about the age of a person than a ²⁰ Stanton, (1844) 1 C. & K. 415.

²¹ Khadam, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 611; Kishen Singh, (1927) 28 P. L. R. 575, 28 Cr. L. J. 663, [1927] AIR (L) 580.

²² Bhartu, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 832, 35 Cr. L. J. 432.

²³ Mehraj Din, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 244, [1927] AIR(L) 222.

²⁴ Ahmed Asalt Mirkhan, (1930) Crim. App. No. 161 of 1930, decided by Mirza and Broomfield, JJ., on June 12, 1930 (Unrep. Bom).

²⁵ Gopala bin Rama, (1896) Cr. R. No. 31 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 865.

¹ Nga Tun Kaing, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 943; Williams, [1893] 1 Q. B. 320.

² Wedge, (1832) 5 C. & P. 298.

layman, but the statement of a doctor is no more than an opinion. When from his statement it does not appear that he brought any scientific knowledge to bear upon his opinion, where the doctor has relied entirely on certain physical peculiarities, such as teeth, etc., his statement is not a legal proof but a mere opinion.³

The following rules have been adopted in Neapolitan Jurisprudence, namely, that in an accusation of rape there must be full proof of these facts—

(1) That there has been constant and equal resistance on the part of the person violated.

(2) That there is inequality of strength between the parties.

(3) That she has raised cries.

(4) That there may be some marks of violence present.

Three questions relating to this offence have been discussed—(1) Whether the presence of venereal disease in the female violated is in favour of or against her accusation? If marks of disease are recent, in favour of her, but it must be remembered that symptoms of infection do not appear until three days after receiving it; should appearances indicate disease of long-standing they weaken her complaint.

(2) Can a female be violated during her sleep without her knowledge? If sleep has been caused by narcotics, intoxication, or syncope, or excessive fatigue, it is possible.

(3) Does pregnancy ever follow rape? Great diversity of opinion. It was formerly supposed that if a woman conceived it was no rape, it is now admitted that such an opinion has no sort of foundation.

Medical examination of accused.—It is the duty of the prosecution if, according to the medical jurisprudence, medical examination was capable of yielding conclusive results, to ensure that examination within a period of time when conclusive results could be achieved. The accused is entitled to say that if a medical examination of the vital or the material parts of his body had been conducted, he would have been in a position to show that the condition of those parts negatived the possibility of his guilt.⁴

Potency of accused.—In English law there is a conclusive presumption that a boy under fourteen years of age is incapable of committing rape. A boy under that age who is charged with rape must be acquitted on proof merely of his age, without any regard to his sexual development. In Indian law no such presumption exists, and subject to the provisions of ss. 82 and 83 a boy of whatever age who is charged with rape and wishes to avail himself of the defence of want of capacity to do the act must produce evidence to that effect. A boy between thirteen and fifteen years of age, who had the power of erection and probably that of emission according to medical evidence, was held guilty of attempt to commit rape as penetration was sufficient to complete the offence.⁵ The remark of the Bombay High Court in this case that in each case it must be proved by evidence whether or not the accused is potent is not sound.

Evidence of previous connection.—On the trial of an indictment charging an assault with intent to rape, if the prosecutrix, in answer to cross-examination, denies having voluntarily had connection with the accused prior to the alleged assault, evidence to contradict her by proving such prior connection is admissible on his behalf.⁶ The prosecutrix in an indictment for an indecent assault which on the facts alleged amounted to an attempt to rape, was asked in cross-examination whether she had not previously had connection with a man other than the accused, and denied it. It was held that she could not be contradicted.⁷ She can be cross-examined as to particular acts of connection with other men but if she denies it she cannot be contradicted.⁸ When a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character [s. 155 (4) of the Indian Evidence Act].

Dying declaration.—The dying declaration of a deceased person is admissible in evidence on a charge of rape.⁹

³ Qudrat, [1939] A. L. J. R. 980, 41 Cr. L. J. 142, [1939] AIR (A) 708.

⁴ Ram Kala, [1946] A. L. J. 86, 47 Cr. L. J. 611, [1945] O. W. N. 334 (2), [1946] AIR (A), 191; Conroy, [1945] Nag. 226.

⁵ Gopala bin Rama, (1896) Cr. R. No. 31 of

1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 865.

⁶ Riley, (1887) 18 Q. B. D. 481.

⁷ Holmes, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 334.

⁸ Cockcroft, (1870) 11 Cox 410.

⁹ Bissorunjun Mookerjee, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 75.

Corroboration to complainant's story essential.—It is a well established practice that in cases of rape the evidence of the complainant must be corroborated. The nature of the corroboration must necessarily depend on the facts of each particular case. Where rape is denied by the accused the sort of corroboration one looks for is medical evidence showing injury to the private parts of the complainant, injury to other parts of her body which may have been occasioned in a struggle, seminal stains on her clothes or the clothes of the accused or on the places where the offence is alleged to have been committed; and in all cases importance is attached to the subsequent conduct of the complainant. Whether she makes a charge promptly or not is always relevant. Her subsequent conduct by itself, though important, is not enough, for a witness cannot corroborate himself.¹⁰

Evidence of the fact that a complaint was made by the prosecutrix shortly after the alleged occurrence, and the particulars of such complaint may, so far as they relate to the charge against the accused, be given on the part of the prosecution, not as being evidence on the facts complained of, but as evidence of the consistency of the conduct of the prosecutrix with the story told by her in the witness-box, and as negating consent on her part.¹¹ The accused was indicted for an indecent assault on a girl under the age of thirteen years, whose consent to the act was therefore immaterial. At the trial evidence was admitted of the answer given by the girl to a question put by another child, in the absence of the accused, as to why the girl had not waited for the other child at the accused's house. The girl's reply was a complaint of the accused's conduct to her. It was held that the evidence was admissible, not as evidence of the truth of the charge alleged, but as corroborating the credibility of the girl and as evidence of the consistency of her conduct.¹²

Where a person indecently assaulted makes a complaint, not of her own initiative, but in answer to a question, the particulars of such complaint, though otherwise admissible within the rule laid down in Lillyman's case, cannot be given in evidence.¹³ In rape, not only what the prosecutrix said immediately after the occasion, but what was said in answer to her, is evidence.¹⁴ See also illustration (j) to s. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Where the prosecution evidence is not sufficiently strong to warrant a conviction, it is unsafe to convict merely on the accusation of the woman who has been raped.¹⁵ The presiding Judge ought to tell the jury that they ought to scrutinise the uncorroborated evidence of a prosecutrix in a case involving a sexual offence and that it is dangerous to convict a man on such uncorroborated testimony. The Judge should also say that nevertheless, if after proper scrutiny and considering the caution delivered by him, the jury are satisfied with the uncorroborated evidence, they may accept it.¹⁶ Where in a case of rape the Judge does not warn the jury that in cases of this nature it is unsafe to rely on the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix, nor does the Judge properly explain to the jury the ingredients which are necessary for an offence under this section, the charge to the jury is vitiated by non-direction.¹⁷ Where the woman had intercourse with some person but showed no signs of force having been used, and had reported to several persons, this was held to be not substantial corroboration of her evidence.¹⁸ The kind of corroboration required is the same as required for the evidence of an accomplice, that is to say, some independent evidence confirming in material particulars the allegation that the crime was committed and that the accused committed

¹⁰ Mahadeo Tatya, (1941) 44 Bom. L. R. 216, 43 Cr. L. J. 621, [1942] AIR (B) 121, F.B.

¹¹ Lillyman, [1896] 2 Q. B. 167; Wood, (1877)

14 Cox 46; Kappinaiah, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 751, [1931] AIR (M) 233.

¹² Osborne, [1905] 1 K. B. 551.

¹³ Merry, (1900) 19 Cox 442.

¹⁴ Eyre, (1860) 2 F. & F. 579.

¹⁵ Kanshi Ram, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 475; Beli Singh, (1927) 9 L. L. J. 337; Gulam Hussain, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 63, [1930] AIR (L) 337; Louis Simmons, (1931) 23 Cr. App. R. 25; Amar Singh, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 428; Baji, (1933) 10 O. W. N. 107, 34 Cr. L. J. 496, [1933] AIR (O) 163; Sikandar Miyan, [1937] 2 Cal. 345.,

U Toe Sein, (1938) 40 Cr. L. J. 525; Sachinder Rai, (1939) 18 Pat. 698; Feroze Kazi, (1939) 21 P. L. T. 731, 41 Cr. L. J. 267, [1940] AIR (P) 295; Karichiappa Goundan, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 576, [1942] AIR (N) 285.

¹⁶ Sikandar Miyan, [1937] 2 Cal. 345; Saratchandra Chakravarty, (1936) 65 C. L. J. 83, 38 Cr. L. J. 931, [1937] AIR (C) 463; Harendra Prasad Bagchi, [1940] 2 Cal. 181; Taser Pramanik, (1940) 44 C. W. N. 835, 71 C. L. J. 590, 41 Cr. L. J. 841, [1940] AIR (C) 391; The People (Attorney General) v. Williams, [1940] I. R. 195; Conroy, [1945] Nag. 226.

¹⁷ Baldeo, (1945) 25 Pat. 120.

¹⁸ Maung Ba Tin, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1284.

it. What the prosecutrix says to other persons is not corroborative evidence.¹⁹ The first and foremost circumstance that can be looked for in cases of this kind is the evidence of resistance which one would naturally expect from a woman unwilling to yield to sexual intercourse forced upon her. Such a resistance may lead to the tearing of clothes, the infliction of personal injuries and even injuries on her private parts.²⁰ The Calcutta High Court has held that the prosecutrix is not corroborated by the fact that she subsequently identified the accused.²¹ The Allahabad High Court has held that where the girl raped identified the accused in jail her evidence established the guilt of the accused.²² Failure to warn the jury of the danger of convicting the accused on the girl's evidence alone amounts to a non-direction which vitiates the conviction.²³

The Nagpur High Court has held that in the case of a rape of a girl of ten years there is no motive for false incrimination which might attract the necessity for corroboration, and where no such motive can be suggested, independent corroboration is not necessary as to the culprit's identity.²⁴

Where the only evidence was that of the complainant and there was no evidence of penetration, the conviction was altered to one under s. 354.²⁵

Collateral evidence in confirmation or otherwise.—It is no mitigation of this offence that the woman at last yielded to the violence, if such consent were forced from her by fear of death or by duress. Nor is it any excuse... that the woman consented after the fact, nor that she was a common strumpet; for she is still under the protection of the law and may not be forced; nor that she was first taken with her own consent, if she were afterwards forced against her will; nor that she was a concubine of the ravisher; for a woman may forsake her unlawful course of life, and the law will not presume her incapable of amendment.¹ Medical evidence can help the case for the prosecution even if the complainant is pregnant at the time when the rape is alleged to have been committed. But the report of the Chemical Analyser regarding the presence of semen on the complainant's clothing is not sufficient to prove that the complainant is actually raped.²

Procedure.—If the sexual intercourse was by a man with his own wife not being under twelve years of age—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triage by Court of Session, Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate.

If the sexual intercourse was by a man with his own wife being under twelve years of age—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triage by Court of Session.

In any other case—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triage by Court of Session.

False charge of rape.—Rape is an offence punishable with transportation for life or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years. The offence, therefore, of making false charge of rape is triable exclusively by the Court of Session.³

Sections 366 and 376.—Where an accused is convicted under ss. 366 and 376, it is not illegal to pass separate sentences for each of the offences inasmuch as the offences are separate and the charge under s. 366 involves elements different from a charge under s. 376.⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed rape on A. B, ¹⁹ Surendranath Das, (1933) 62 Cal. 534; Noor Ahmad, (1933) 62 Cal. 527; Abdul Gafur Kotwal, [1938] 1 Cal. 636; Baskerville, [1916] 2 K. B. 658.

²⁰ Mahla Ram, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 74, [1924] AIR (L) 669.

²¹ Bhola Nath Dome, (1939) 43 C. W. N. 1180.

²² Kunwar Pal, [1947] A. L. J. 435, 48 Cr. L. J. 851.

²³ Sachinder Rai, (1939) 18 Pat. 698.

²⁴ Bisram Bahorik, [1945] Nag. 523.

²⁵ Jalal, (1929) 30 P. L. R. 662, 31 Cr. L. J. 784, [1930] AIR (L) 193.

¹ See Roscoe's Criminal Evidence, 14th Edn., p. 974; Archbold, 13th Edn., p. 1036.

² Jalal, (1929) 30 P. L. R. 662, 31 Cr. L. J. 784, [1930] AIR (L) 193.

³ Bhikhi, (1898) Cr. R. No. 4 of 1898, Unrep. Cr. C. 953.

⁴ Ghulam Muhammad, (1926) 7 Lah. 484; Tek Singh, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 248.

and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 376 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—The offence is capable of degrees. “On the one hand let us take the case of the chaste high caste female, who would sacrifice her life to save her honour, contaminated by the forcible embrace of a man of low caste... On the other hand that of the woman without character, or any pretension to purity, who is wont to be easy of access. In the latter case if the woman, from any motive, refuses to comply with the solicitation of a man and is forced by him, the offender ought to be punished; but surely the injury is infinitely less in this instance than in the former.”⁵ But in a case it has been remarked that the measure of punishment in a case of rape should not depend on the social position of the party injured, but on the greater or less atrocity of the crime, the conduct of the criminal, and the defenceless and unprotected state of the injured female.⁶ The fact that the family of the injured girl have condoned the offence on being paid a sum of money should not be taken into consideration in determining the heinousness of the offence, or of the punishment to be inflicted.⁷ But where a girl is of unchaste character, a very severe sentence is not called for.⁸ In a case of rape the ordinary sentence varies from three to five years’ rigorous imprisonment. In a very bad case seven years’ imprisonment is sometimes given.⁹

Crimes of violence upon women should be severely dealt with.¹⁰

Under ss. 57, 376 and 511 a sentence of ten years’ transportation, or of fifteen years’ rigorous imprisonment, may be passed for the offence of attempt to commit rape; but a sentence of seven years’ rigorous imprisonment commutable under s. 59 to seven years’ transportation is illegal.¹¹

As to whipping, see the Whipping Act.¹²

As to crimes on the frontier see the Frontier Crimes Regulation, 1901, ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

Of Unnatural Offences.

377. Whoever voluntarily has carnal intercourse against the order of nature with any man, woman or animal,¹ shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—Penetration² is sufficient to constitute the carnal intercourse necessary to the offence described in this section.

COMMENT.

This offence consists in a carnal knowledge committed against the order of nature by man with man, or in the same unnatural manner with woman, or by man or woman in any manner with beast.

According to the English law if the party on whom the offence is committed be within the age of discretion, namely, under fourteen, it is not felony in him, but only in the agent. If both be of the age of discretion, it is felony in both.¹³ A man who, as pathic, committed sodomy with a boy of the age of twelve years, was convicted of this offence, though the boy was discharged.¹⁴

A married woman who consents to her husband’s committing an unnatural offence with her is an accomplice.¹⁵

1. ‘Voluntarily has carnal intercourse against the order of nature with any man, woman or animal’.—As to the definition of ‘voluntarily’, see s. 39; of ⁵ Law Commissioners’ First Rep., s. 449.

⁶ Jhantah Noshyo, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 59.

⁷ Local Government v. Pyarelal, (1917) 20 Cr. L. J. 647.

⁸ Ibrahim, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 256, [1927] AIR (L) 772.

⁹ Mahadeo Tatyia, (1941) 44 Bom. L. R. 216, 43 Cr. L. J. 621, [1942] AIR (B) 121, F.B.

¹⁰ Kala, (1929) 30 P. L. R. 437, 30 Cr. L. J. 499, [1929] AIR (L) 584.

¹¹ Joseph Merian, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 10, 1 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 5.

¹² Act IV of 1909, s. 4 (a). A sentence of fifteen stripes for the offence of rape was held to be inadequate in the case of a juvenile offender in Po Ba, (1914) 8 L. B. R. 143, 1 Cr. L. J. 538.

¹³ 1 East P. C. 480; 1 Hale P. C. 670.

¹⁴ Allen, (1849) 8 Cox 270.

¹⁵ Jellyman, (1838) 8 C. & P. 604.

'man', s. 10; of 'woman', s. 10; of 'animal', s. 47.

Coitus per os (the sin of Gomorrah) is punishable under this section.¹⁶ Kennedy, A.J.C., observed in this case: "Is the act here committed one of carnal intercourse? If so, it is clearly against the order of nature, because the natural object of carnal intercourse is that there should be the possibility of conception of human beings, which in the case of coitus per os is impossible. Intercourse may be defined as mutual frequentation by members of independent organizations. Commercial intercourse provides for the merchants of the state A who wish to come to and trade in the state B, not intending permanently to settle there but with animus redcandi to A and similarly for the merchants of the state B. Such is the magnus intercourse which regulated the trade of Britian and Flanders in the middle ages. Social intercourse provides the rules under which members of one family may resort to the premises occupied by another family, not intending to reside in such premises but merely to visit them for laudable purposes, reciprocity being of the essence of the bargain. By a metaphor the word intercourse, like the word commerce, is applied to the relations of the sexes. Here also there is the temporary visitation of one organism by a member of the other organisation, for certain clearly defined and limited objects. The primary object of the visiting organisation is to obtain euphoria by means of a detent of the nerves consequent on the sexual crisis. But there is no intercourse unless the visiting member is enveloped at least partially by the visited organism, for intercourse connotes reciprocity. Looking at the question in this way it would seem that the sin of Gomorrah is no less carnal intercourse than the sin of Sodom. The sin of Lesbos or Tribadism is clearly not such intercourse, and I doubt if mutual cheirourgia would be such. . . And it was this vice in particular which was rendered punishable by the early Christian state, for it was par excellence the vice of the Hellene and the Saracen. By making this vice particularly punishable, therefore, the State not only protected good morals but struck at its enemies. It is this vice, therefore, which attracted the severest censures of State and Church, but in mediæval times all emission other than in vas legitimum was considered unchristian because such emission was supposed ultimately to cause conception of demons. It will be seen how little help can be extracted from Christiansources in deciding this question. But why is it that most modern states, now freed from the influence of superstition, still make the sin of Sodom punishable. Partly I suppose because of the desire of Princes to encourage legitimate marriage. Partly because there is an idea, (perhaps erroneous) that the public or tolerated practice of that vice creates a tendency in the citizens of the State, where it is practised, to adopt an unmanly and morbid method of life and thinking, so that a person saturated with those ideas is less useful a member of society, partly because of the danger that men put in authority over other men may use their power for the gratification of their lusts, but principally I suppose because of the danger to young persons, lest they be indoctrinated into sexual matters prematurely. But surely all these ill consequences would equally follow in a city where the sin of Gomorrah was tolerated. . . But we must not allow our disgust at the perpetrators of such acts to blind us to the fact that this vice is less pernicious than the sin of Sodom. It has not been surrounded by the halo of art, eloquence and poetry. It cannot be practised on persons who are unwilling. It is not common and can never be so. It cannot produce the physical changes which the other vice produces. It is, therefore, lightly punishable but the punishment need not be so extremely severe as in the other case."¹⁷

Where the accused forced open a child's mouth, and put in his private parts and proceeded to a completion of his lust, it was held that this did not constitute the offence of sodomy.¹⁸ This decision proceeded upon a special statute which punished the crime of buggery. Under the Penal Code such an act will come under the provision of this section.

The accused was indicted for an unnatural offence committed on board of an East India ship, lying in St. Katherine's Docks. His defence was that he was a native of Baghdad, and his act was not considered to be an offence there. It was held that this was not a good defence.¹⁹

¹⁶ Khanu, (1924) 19 S. L. R. 327, 26 Cr. L. J. 945, [1925] AIR (S) 286, 287.

¹⁷ Ibid., pp. 328-331.

¹⁸ Jacob's Case, (1817) Russ. & Ry. 331. In a Madras case it is considered doubtful whether the act of having connection with a woman in the mouth amounts to this offence; Govindurajulu Naicken, (1886) 1 Weir 283. Will this not be carnal intercourse against the order of nature? If it is, the act will amount to an offence under this section.

¹⁹ Esop, (1836) 7 J. C. & P. 456.

A domestic fowl is an 'animal'; and an attempt to commit an unnatural offence with such fowl will be punishable under this section.²⁰ Sexual intercourse per nose with a bullock is an unnatural offence within the meaning of this section.²¹

2. 'Penetration'.—See s. 375, supra. The crime is complete if the Court is satisfied that penetration took place.²² The offence made punishable under this section requires that penetration, however little, should be proved strictly. Thus an attempt to commit this offence should be an attempt to thrust the male organ into the anus of the passive agent. Some activity on the part of the accused in that particular direction ought to be proved strictly. Where there was an intention on the part of the accused to satisfy his lust by a carnal intercourse against the order of nature, and he made every preparation to satisfy that lust, but before he could thrust his organ in he spent himself, it was held that he had not done any act which might be construed as an attempt to commit the offence of sodomy.²³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused had carnal intercourse with a man, woman, or animal.

(2) That such intercourse was against the order of nature.

(3) That the accused did the act voluntarily.

(4) That there was penetration.

It is unsafe to convict on the uncorroborated testimony of the person on whom the offence is said to have been committed, unless for any reason that testimony is entitled to special weight.²⁴ A charge of attempting to commit sodomy is very easy to bring and very difficult to refute, the evidence in support of such a charge has to be very convincing in order to convict the accused.²⁵ In a charge of sodomy stains of semen constitute important evidence. Great weight must, therefore, be attached to the Chemical Examiner's report.¹

Postcards depicting dirty sexual acts found in the possession of the accused may be admitted in evidence as things which a man intending to commit such an offence might well have about him, and might use as an adjunct to assist him in the commission of the offence. They are not admissible merely to show that he had a dirty mind.²

In the case of an unnatural offence conviction may be based on the uncorroborated testimony of the victim.³

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Insufficient particulars in charge.—Where a person was tried for an unnatural offence, and convicted on a charge which did not allege the time when, the place where, or point to any known or unknown person with whom the offence was committed and without any proof of these particulars, the facts proved against him only being that he habitually wore woman's clothes and exhibited physical signs of having committed the offence, it was held that the conviction was not sustainable.⁴

Sentence.—In the case of youthful offenders whipping is a most appropriate sentence.⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, had carnal intercourse against the order of nature with a certain man [or woman], to wit—, [or with a certain animal, to wit (specify the kind of animal)], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 377 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

²⁰ Brown, (1899) 24 Q. B. D. 357.

²¹ Khandu, (1933) 35 P. L. R. 73, 35 Cr. L. J. 1096.

²² Robert Reekspear, (1832) 1 Mood. 342.

²³ Nowshirwan Irani, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 718, 28 S. L. R. 330.

²⁴ Ganpat, (1918) 19 P. L. R. 261, 19 Cr. L. J. 946, [1918] AIR (L) 322; Bal Mukundo Singh, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1051, 61 C. L. J. 583, 38 Cr. L. J. 70.

²⁵ Sain Das, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 353, 27 Cr. L. J. 593.

¹ Devi Das, (1928) 10 Lah. 794.

² Gillingham, [1939] 4 A. E. R. 122.

³ Sardar Ahmad, (1914) P. W. R. No. 42 of 1914 (Cr.) P. L. R. No. 185, of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 266, [1914] AIR (L) 565; Kaku, [1944] Kar. 123.

⁴ Khairati, (1884) 6 All. 204; Ghasita, (1884) 4 A. W. N. 25.

⁵ Jiwan, (1883) P. R. No. 3 of 1883.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

The following offences affect property :—

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. Theft. | 7. Cheating. |
| 2. Extortion. | 8. Fraudulent Deeds and Dispositions of Property. |
| 3. Robbery and Dacoity. | 9. Mischief. |
| 4. Criminal Misappropriation of Property. | 10. Criminal Trespass. |
| 5. Criminal Breach of Trust. | |
| 6. Receiving Stolen Property. | |

Of Theft.

378. Whoever, intending to take dishonestly¹ any moveable property² out of the possession of any person³ without that person's consent,⁴ moves that property in order to such taking,⁵ is said to commit theft.

Explanation 1.—A thing so long as it is attached to the earth, not being moveable property, is not the subject of theft; but it becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 2.—A moving effected by the same act which effects the severance may be a theft.

Explanation 3.—A person is said to cause a thing to move by removing an obstacle which prevented it from moving or by separating it from any other thing, as well as by actually moving it.

Explanation 4.—A person, who by any means causes an animal to move, is said to move that animal, and to move everything which, in consequence of the motion so caused, is moved by that animal.

Explanation 5.—The consent mentioned in the definition may be express or implied, and may be given either by the person in possession, or by any person having for that purpose authority either express or implied.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A cuts down a tree on Z's ground, with the intention of dishonestly taking the tree out of Z's possession without Z's consent. Here, as soon as A has severed the tree in order to such taking, he has committed theft.

(b) A puts a bait for dogs in his pocket, and thus induces Z's dog to follow it. Here, if A's intention be dishonestly to take the dog out of Z's possession, without Z's consent, A has committed theft as soon as Z's dog has begun to follow A.

(c) A meets a bullock carrying a box of treasure. He drives the bullock in a certain direction, in order that he may dishonestly take the treasure. As soon as the bullock begins to move, A has committed theft of the treasure.

(d) A being Z's servant, and entrusted by Z with the care of Z's plate, dishonestly runs away with the plate, without Z's consent. A has committed theft.

(e) Z, going on a journey, entrusts his plate to A, the keeper of a warehouse, till Z shall return. A carries the plate to a goldsmith and sells it. Here the plate was not in Z's possession. It could not therefore be taken out of Z's possession, and A has not committed theft, though he may have committed criminal breach of trust.

(f) A finds a ring belonging to Z on a table in the house which Z occupies. Here the ring is in Z's possession, and if A dishonestly removes it, A commits theft.

(g) A finds a ring lying on the high road, not in the possession of any person. A, by taking it, commits no theft, though he may commit criminal misappropriation of property.

(h) A sees a ring belonging to Z lying on a table in Z's house. Not venturing to misappropriate the ring immediately for fear of search and detection, A hides the ring in a place where it is highly improbable that it will ever be found by Z, with the intention of taking the ring from the hiding place and selling it when the loss is forgotten. Here A, at the time of first moving the ring, commits theft.

(i) A delivers his watch to Z, a jeweller, to be regulated. Z carries it to his shop. A, not owing to the jeweller any debt for which the jeweller might lawfully detain the watch as a security, enters the shop openly, takes his watch by force out of Z's hand, and carries it away. Here A, though he may have committed criminal trespass and assault, has not committed theft, inasmuch as what he did was not done dishonestly.

(j) If A owes money to Z for repairing the watch, and if Z retains the watch lawfully as a security for the debt, and A takes the watch out of Z's possession, with the intention of depriving Z of the property as a security for his debt, he commits theft, inasmuch as he takes it dishonestly.

(k) Again, if A, having pawned his watch to Z, takes it out of Z's possession without Z's consent, not having paid what he borrowed on the watch, he commits theft, though the watch is his own property, inasmuch as he takes it dishonestly.

(l) A takes an article belonging to Z out of Z's possession without Z's consent, with the intention of keeping it until he obtains money from Z as a reward for its restoration. Here A takes dishonestly; A has therefore committed theft.

(m) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent for the purpose merely of reading it, and with the intention of returning it. Here, it is probable that A may have conceived that he had Z's implied consent to use Z's book. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(n) A asks charity from Z's wife. She gives A money, food and clothes, which A knows to belong to Z, her husband. Here it is probable that A may conceive that Z's wife is authorized to give away alms. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(o) A is the paramour of Z's wife. She gives A valuable property, which A knows to belong to her husband Z, and to be such property as she has not authority from Z to give. If A takes the property dishonestly, he commits theft.

(p) A, in good faith, believing property belonging to Z to be A's own property, takes that property out of B's possession. Here, as A does not take dishonestly, he does not commit theft.

379. Whoever commits theft shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for theft.

COMMENT.

The offence of theft under the Penal Code differs materially from the offence known as larceny in the English law.

English law.—Larceny is the wilful and wrongful taking away of the goods of another against his consent and with the intent to deprive him permanently of his property.

Differences between larceny and theft.—(1) Under larceny, the stolen property should be the property of some one ; whereas under theft, it should be in the possession of some one.

(2) Under theft, everything becomes its object which is movable, i.e., capable of being severed from its place. Hence, it is theft to sever and remove things, which are attached to the ground such as trees, vegetables, etc.¹ In larceny, no offence is committed if the objects removed "savour of the realty, and are, at the time they are taken, part of the freehold". So strict was this rule at common law that a larceny could not be committed of title-deeds.²

(3) Under larceny, it is necessary to show an intention to appropriate a chattel and exercise an entire dominion over it. If it be taken with the intention of making a temporary use of it only, and then of letting the owner have it again, there is no larceny.³ Under theft it makes no difference that the person does not intend to assume entire dominion over the property taken, or to retain it permanently.⁴

(4) Under larceny, it must be shown that the taking was against the person's consent and was not only wrongful and fraudulent, but was also "without any colour of right"; under theft, it will be sufficient to show that it was without his consent.

(5) To constitute theft it is not necessary to prove that the thief ever had the stolen thing in his power, but there can be no larceny, even if there has been an actual removal, if the offender has never had the thing in his power.

(6) Theft may be committed though the person from whom the thing is taken has no title thereto ; in the case of larceny the alleged owner should have some (general or special) ownership of it, and it must have been taken out of the owner's actual or constructive possession.

Ingredients.—In order to constitute theft five factors are essential :—

- (1) Dishonest intention to take property.
- (2) The property must be movable.
- (3) It should be taken out of the possession of another person.
- (4) It should be taken without the consent of that person.
- (5) There must be some removal of the property in order to accomplish the taking of it.

1. Intending to take dishonestly.—Intention is the gist of the offence. It is the intention of the taker which must determine whether the taking or moving of a thing is theft. The intention to take dishonestly exists when the taker intends to cause wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person.⁵ Where, therefore, the accused, acting bona fide in the interest of his employers, finding a party of fishermen poaching on his master's fisheries took charge of the nets, and retained possession of them, pending the orders of his employers, it was held that the accused was not guilty of theft.⁶ The intention to take dishonestly must exist at the time of the moving of the property (vide ill. (h)). If the act done is not done animo furandi, it will not amount to theft.⁷ Where the owner is kept out of possession temporarily not with any such intention, but only with the object of causing him trouble in the sense of mere mental anxiety, and with the ultimate intention of restoring the thing to him without exacting or expecting any recompense, the detention does not amount to causing wrongful loss in any sense.⁸ Otherwise, a person keeping concealed for a time a valuable thing belonging to a friend, who is a careless man, in jest, for the purpose of causing him a little anxiety or in earnest for the purpose of teaching him, the salutary lesson of being careful, will be guilty of theft, a result which the Legislature could never have intended. Where the accused found the complainant's pony at large, not within the compound or the stable of the complainant, it having broken from its tether to which it had been tied the previous night, and mounted it, and took a ride on it, returning home on the following day in the evening, it was held that the accused had

¹ Explanation 1; Shivram, (1891) 15 Bom. 702.

² 1 Hale P. C. 510.

³ Trebilcock, (1858) 27 L. J. (M. C.) 108; Holloway's Case, (1848) 1 Den. 370.

⁴ Nagappa, (1890) 15 Bom. 344, 346.

⁵ Madaree Chowkeedar, (1865) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 2, 3; Lal Mohammad, (1931) 12 P. L. T. 556, 32

Cr. L. J. 739, [1931] AIR (P) 337; Bhurasingh, (1934) 29 S. L. R. 121, 36 Cr. L. J. 1310.

⁶ Nobin Chunder Holdar, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 79. See Sheomeshur Rai, (1888) 8 A. W. N. 97.

⁷ Bailey, (1872) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 347.

⁸ Nabi Baksh, (1897) 25 Cal. 416.

not committed theft.⁹ Where a respectable person pinched away the cycle of another person, as his own cycle at the time was missing, and brought it back and there was no criminal intention and he did not intend by his act to cause wrongful gain to himself, it was held that his act did not amount to theft.¹⁰ The accused, the owner of a barge, sold it to the complainant and received part of the sale price as earnest money. The accused called upon the complainant to pay the remainder of the purchase money, and threatened to put an end to the contract unless the money were paid to her within a specified time. On failure of payment, the accused took the barge into her possession for which she was charged with the offence of theft. It was held that inasmuch as the accused believed that the possession of the barge was still in her in law she could not be convicted of theft as she had not shown any dishonest intention in seizing possession of the barge.¹¹

Where in execution of a decree against a certain person, property belonging to another person was wrongly taken away by the bailiff and the owner and his associates took that property, it was held that no offence was committed under this section.¹²

Where there is no proof of 'taking' of the property found in the possession of the accused, the offence committed is not theft but criminal misappropriation.¹³

Taking need not be with intention of retaining property permanently.—It is not necessary that the taking should be permanent or with an intention to appropriate the thing taken.¹⁴ The remarks of Norris, J., in *Adu Shikdar v. Queen-Empress*¹⁵ that "With regard to the charge of stealing . . . there is not only no evidence that the prisoner intended to convert it [the property] to his own use, and make it permanently his own property" are in accordance with the English law on the subject, which is quite different from the definition of theft as given in the Code. The learned Judge seems to have overlooked the fact that under the Code a temporary taking might constitute theft (vide ill. (1)). Where the Hindus of a locality apprehended that X, a Mahomedan, who owned a calf, was going to sacrifice that calf and an agreement was come to by which X consented that the calf might be tied up in Y's house, which was close by, but Z, a Hindu, who arrived on the scene subsequently carried away the calf without the consent of X or Y to prevent all chances of the calf being sacrificed and Z was convicted of theft. It was held that the calf, though it was tied up in Y's house, was still in the possession of X when Z removed it and Z's removal of the calf was "dishonest" though his motive was only to save it from being killed, and that the act of Z, therefore, amounted to theft.¹⁶

No wrongful gain is necessary.—It matters not whether the intention of the thief was or was not to derive a profit from his crime.¹⁷ It will suffice if it causes wrongful loss to the owner.¹⁸ Thus, where the accused took the complainant's three cows against her will and distributed them among her creditors, he was found guilty of stealing.¹⁹ Similarly, servants who clandestinely took their master's oats with intent to give them to their master's horses, and without any intent to apply them to their own private benefit, were held guilty of larceny, even though they were not answerable at all for the condition of the horses.²⁰ It makes no difference in the accused's guilt that the act was not intended to procure any personal benefit to himself. Could it be said that a servant would not be guilty of theft if he were to deliver over his master's plate to a pressing tailor, and tell him to pay himself?

Bona fide dispute or claim.—Where property is removed in the assertion of a contested claim of right, however ill-founded that claim may be, the removal there-

⁹ Rup Lal Singh v. Durga Prasad, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 1012, [1917] AIR (P) 459.

¹⁰ Rameshwar Singh, (1936) 12 Luck. 92.

¹¹ Sitabai Purshotam, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R. 1140, 32 Cr. L. J. 287, [1930] AIR (B) 488.

¹² Jahana, (1941) 43 P. L. R. 162, 42 Cr. L. J. 601, [1941] AIR (L) 217.

¹³ Shivbasha, (1879) Unrep. Cr. C. 143.

¹⁴ Sri Churn Chungo, (1895) 22 Cal. 1017, F.R.; Nabi Baksh, (1897) 25 Cal. 416; Nagappa, (1890) 15 Bom. 344; (1890) 1 Weir 405; Tiruvengada Chari, (1881) 1 Weir 407; Krishna Aiyar, (1883) 1 Weir 407; Shoma Chatur, (1897) Cr. R. No. 19 of 1897, Unrep. Cr. C. 908;

Jagannath Misra, (1929) 10 P. L. T. 483, 30 Cr. L. J. 546, [1929] AIR (P) 429.

¹⁵ (1885) 11 Cal. 635, 644.

¹⁶ Jagannath Misra, (1929) 10 P. L. T. 483, 30 Cr. L. J. 546, [1929] AIR (P) 429.

¹⁷ P. L. C. (1860), p. 1258; Cabbage's Case, (1815) Russ. & Ry. 292; Lal Mohammad, (1931) 12 P. L. T. 556, 32 Cr. L. J. 739, [1931] AIR (P) 337.

¹⁸ Madra, [1946] Nag. 326.

¹⁹ Madaree Chowkeedar, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 2.

²⁰ Privett, (1846) 2 C. & K. 114; Handley, (1842) Car. & M. 547; Morjit's Case, (1816) Russ. & Ry. 307.

of does not constitute theft.²¹ The dispute as to ownership must be bona fide and not a mere pretence.²² Mere assertion of a fair claim of property or right, or the mere existence of a doubt, is not enough. The claim to property must be proved by evidence to be fair and good.²³ It is the duty of the Court to determine what was the intention of the offender, and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right then it cannot refuse to convict him.²⁴ Where in asserting his right to some property which a person believes to be good, he does something which he knows he has no right to do, e.g. by taking the law in his own hands and removing such property from the possession of his opponent who claims the property himself, he may be guilty of theft.²⁵ If there be any fair pretence of property or right in the accused, or if it be brought into doubt at all, the Court should direct an acquittal.¹ In a case of alleged theft of fish from a tank which the accused claimed to have been in their possession and not in the complainant's, it was held that if the accused asserted a claim to the thing alleged to have been stolen by him, he should not be convicted unless the Court was in a position to say that the claim was a mere pretence.² It may be safely laid down as a general proposition, though not as a universal rule, that in cases where the alleged theft consists in the removal of crops grown on land, the most vital question to be investigated is as to which of the parties had grown the crops, and a decision on this point will in the majority of cases enable the Court to come to a definite conclusion as to whether the claim of the accused is made in good faith or is a mere pretence. Hence, a person who removes crops from land which is in the possession of another, knowing that the crops have been raised by the latter, cannot escape liability for theft by merely proving that he has a bona fide claim of title to the land upon which the crops were grown.³ Where civil suits were pending regarding a field and the accused who was in possession of the field, removed the crops grown on it, it was held that he could not be said to have any dishonest intention when he removed the crops and was not guilty of theft.⁴ Where the main question of dispute between two parties was whether the sale of a mahal carried within its ambit the sale of certain trees and the servant of one of the parties cut and removed certain trees under his master's orders under the bona fide belief that they belonged to his master,

²¹ Bhicaji, (1862) Unrep. Cr. C. 22; Ravi-shankar v. Savailal, (1925) 28 Bom. L. R. 89, 27 Cr. L. J. 448, [1926] AIR (B) 163; Khetter Nath Dutt v. Indro Jalia, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 68, [78]; Mahomed, (1902) 2 S. D. S. S. C. 378; Algarasawmi Tevan, (1904) 28 Mad. 304; Chaithan Charan Maity v. Kala Chand Sharmasta, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 238n; Arfan Ali, (1916) 44 Cal. 66; Mati Lal De, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 1; Sadasiva Singh, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 507, [1917] AIR (P) 40; Shib Das, (1913) 14 P. L. R. 1109, 14 Cr. L. J. 659; Lakanaw, (1916) 2 U. B. R. 124, 18 Cr. L. J. 355, [1917] AIR (UB) 2; Madhusudan Das, (1921) 25 Cr. L. J. 546, [1922] AIR (P) 12; Srinivasulu Reddiar v. Govinda Goundan, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 188, 17 L. W. 104, [1923] M. W. N. 182, 24 Cr. L. J. 254, [1923] AIR (M) 239; Bodh Kishen Goala, (1923) 4 P. L. T. 608, 24 Cr. L. J. 454, [1924] AIR (P) 125; Harnam Singh, (1923) 5 Lah. 56; Tukaram, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 349, [1924] AIR (N) 34; Sobha Mahton, (1926) 8 P. L. T. 79, 28 Cr. L. J. 72, [1927] AIR (P) 130; Ismail, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 635, 27 Cr. L. J. 1023, [1926] AIR (L) 683; Ziba, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 949, [1927] AIR (N) 404; Abdul, (1928) 10 P. L. T. 57, 30 Cr. L. J. 511, [1929] AIR (P) 86; Iswar Panda, (1930) 12 P. L. T. 577, 32 Cr. L. J. 617, [1931] AIR (P) 99; Perumal Konan, [1940] M. W. N. 873, (1940) 52 L. W. 347, 42 Cr. L. J. 263 (2), [1941] AIR (M) 71 (2); Advocate General, Orissa v. Bhikhari Charan, [1940] P. W. N. 306, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 509, [1940] AIR (P) 588; Ramzani, (1943) 19 Luck. 399.

²² Hari Bapuji, (1897) Cr. R. No. 24 of 1897,

Unrep. Cr. C. 920; Gudar, (1932) 9 O. W. N. 1196, 34 Cr. L. J. 547, [1933] AIR (R) 28; Bhurasing, (1934) 29 S. L. R. 121, 36 Cr. L. J. 1310; Nataraja Mudaliar v. Deenanani Ammal, [1941] M. W. N. 463 (2), (1941) 42 Cr. L. J. 896, [1941] AIR (M) 674; Harihar Narain Singh v. Bankley Singh, [1944] P. W. N. 276.

²³ Nassib Chowdhry v. Nannoo Chowdhry, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 47; Runnoo Singh v. Kali Churn Misser, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 18; Huris Chundra Das v. Bolai Audhicaree, (1913) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 65 [75]; Madhab Hari, (1887) 15 Cal. 390n; Bhagwat Saran Misir, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 399, 17 Cr. L. J. 295, [1915] AIR (M) 196; Madan Lal, [1930] A. L. J. R. 457, 31 Cr. L. J. 1222.

²⁴ Budh Singh, (1879) 2 All. 131, referred to in Sobalsang, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 936, 937; Pandita v. Rahi-Mulla Akundo, (1900) 27 Cal. 501.

²⁵ Rangasawmy, (1927) 6 Ran. 54; Ghulam Mohammad, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 276, 34 Cr. L. J. 843, [1933] AIR (L) 481.

¹ 2 East P. C. 659. See Harendra Narayan Das v. Ramjan Khan, (1913) 41 Cal. 433.

² Dhirendra Mohan Gossain, (1909) 14 C. W. N. 408, 11 Cr. L. J. 248; Hari Bhuiamali, (1905) 9 C. W. N. 974, 2 Cr. L. J. 836; Ram Lal Singh v. Hari Charan Ahir, (1909) 37 Cal. 194.

³ Abdul, (1928) 30 Cr. L. J. 511, 10 P. L. T. 57, [1929] AIR (P) 86; Bhan Prasad Chowdhury v. Brahamdeo Chowdhury, (1927) 9 P. L. T. 375, 28 Cr. L. J. 760, [1927] AIR (P) 385.

⁴ Jhumak Rai, (1940) 22 P. L. T. 214, 42 Cr. L. J. 339, [1941] AIR (P) 369.

it was held that the servant could not be convicted of theft.⁵

A went into possession of the disputed land in 1906. B, the complainant, obtained a decree for possession against A and obtained actual possession of the land in September, 1917. Before the execution of the decree, A grew paddy but reaped it on December 14, 1917. It was held that A having been a trespasser on the land at the time the paddy was grown, he had no right to go upon the land after the complainant had obtained possession and removed the paddy. Consequently, when the paddy was cut, A had no right to remove it and there was no bona fide dispute.⁶ Where the accused, acting as tenants, had planted paddy crops on certain land of which possession was given under a civil Court decree to the claimant, and the accused removed the crops planted by them believing they had a right to the same, it was held that they had acted under a claim of right and were not guilty of theft.⁷ Where the accused were convicted of theft for having cut and removed crops which had been sown by the complainant, and in appeal the accused raised the point that the crops stood upon fields which were in the cultivatory possession of themselves, it was held that it was immaterial whether the complainant had or had not good title to cultivate the fields; that it was sufficient that he sowed the crops; and that the accused were rightly convicted.⁸ Where the accused snatched his cooking utensil from the hands of a civil Court bailiff, who had attached it, and asserted that he did so as the utensil was exempt from attachment under s. 60, Civil Procedure Code, it was held that he was not guilty of theft.⁹ Where the accused took away his cattle from a pond where they were taken by a person, who had no right to take them, it was held that he was not guilty of theft.¹⁰

Mistake.—If a person takes another man's property, believing, under a mistake of fact and in ignorance of law, that he has a right to take it, he is not guilty of theft because there is no dishonest intention, even though he may cause wrongful loss.¹¹ It is not theft if a person acting under a mistaken notion of law, and believing that certain property is his, and that he has the right to take the same, until payment of the balance of some money due to him from the vendor, removes such property from the possession of the vendee.¹²

Stealing one's own property.—The owner of movable property cannot be found guilty of theft of the property. A person can be convicted of stealing his own property if he takes it dishonestly from another [vide ills. (j) and (k)].¹³ If A delivers goods to B to keep for him, and then steals them, with intent to charge B with the value of them, this would be felony in A. So if A having delivered money to his servant to carry to some distant place, disguises himself and robs the servant on the road, with intent to charge him, this would be robbery in A.¹⁴ Where the accused took a bundle belonging to himself, which was in the possession of a constable and for which the constable was accountable, it was held that the constable had special property in it and the accused was therefore guilty of theft.¹⁵ But if there is no dishonest intention it will not be theft [vide ill. (i)]. Thus, retaking of cattle unlawfully distrained will not amount to theft.¹⁶ If goods have been seized by the sheriff under an execution levied on the property of some person other than the owner of the goods, the owner, by taking possession of them, cannot be guilty of larceny.¹⁷

Liability of servant for act done at master's bidding.—A servant is not guilty of the offence of theft when what he does is at his master's bidding, unless it is shown that he participated in his master's knowledge of the dishonest nature of the act. There must be some evidence before the Court from which such knowledge on the part of the servant can be inferred.¹⁸ Where a servant, knowing perfectly well that his master is ⁵ Ramzani, (1943) 19 Luck. 399.

⁶ Abinash Chandra Sarkar, (1918) 28 C. L. J. 120, 23 C. W. N. 385, 20 Cr. L. J. 38.

⁷ Sit Pein, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 809, [1924] AIR (R) 72.

⁸ Muhammad Ata (1921) 19 A. L. J. R. 961, 23 Cr. L. J. 402, [1942] AIR (A) 168 (1).

⁹ Lunidomal, (1915) 9 S. I. R. 75, 16 Cr. L. J. 715, [1915] AIR (S) 25.

¹⁰ Chittiboyina v. Danduboyina Narappa, [1939] M. W. N. 470, 40 Cr. L. J. 908.

¹¹ Nagappa, (1890) 15 Bom. 344; Jay Mahto, (1940) 22 P. L. T. 694, 42 Cr. L. J. 293, [1941]

AIR (P) 383.

¹² Hamid Ali Bepari, (1925) 52 Cal. 1015.

¹³ Lakshmana Goundan, (1926) 52 M. L. J. 143, 28 Cr. L. J. 248, [1927] AIR (M) 343.

¹⁴ 1 Hale P. C. 513. See Wilkinson's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 470.

¹⁵ Shekh Husan, (1887) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1887, Unrep. Cr. C. 343.

¹⁶ Yagamurthi Thevan, (1888) 1 Weir 422.

¹⁷ Thomas Knight, (1908) 1 Cr. App. R. 186.

¹⁸ Hari Bhumali, (1905) 9 C. W. N. 974, 2 Cr. L. J. 836.

removing the goods of another without even a pretence of right, assists him in doing so, he acts dishonestly and is equally guilty along with his master of the offence of theft.¹⁹

Cases.—Dishonest intention.—The accused was the brother of a farmer or contractor of a public ferry. He seized a boat belonging to the complainant while conveying passengers across the creek which flowed into the river at a point within three miles from the public ferry. His intention was apparently to compel persons who had to cross the creek to use the ferry in the absence of the complainant's boat, and thereby increase his brother's income derived from fees to be paid by passengers crossing the creek. The accused had no reason to believe that he was justified in seizing the boat. It was held that the accused was guilty of theft, though it was not his intention to convert the boat to his own use, or deprive the complainant permanently of its possession.²⁰ Where the accused was found to have loosened the complainant's cattle at night from a cattle pen, and to have driven them to the pound with the object of sharing with the pound-keeper the fees to be paid for their release, it was held that the offence committed was that of theft.²¹ Where the accused removed cattle from the pound where they were secured, without paying the legitimate fee, it was held that he had the dishonest intention of saving himself the fee, and his act amounted to theft.²² Accused entered into an agreement with the complainant that the latter should advance him money up to a certain sum on the hypothecation of goods to be deposited by him as security. The goods were deposited in a godown, and under the agreement accused was entitled to take advances up to seventy per cent. of the value of the goods. Some time afterwards, the accused removed some of the hypothecated goods from the godown. It was held that the removal of the goods not having been proved to be honest, the accused was guilty of theft.²³

The accused, an employee under a steamer company, whose business it was to check the tickets of passengers, asked to see the complainant's ticket, but the complainant not having got one, the accused took possession of his umbrella as security that he might be compelled to pay his fare, it was held that there being no suggestion that the accused intended either to get any wrongful gain to himself by compelling payment of the fare, or to cause any wrongful loss to the complainant who was bound to pay his fare, a conviction for theft could not be made.²⁴ Where under a hire purchase agreement entered into between Messrs. Singer & Co. and the complainant in respect of a sewing machine, it was provided by one of its clauses that the company or their employees would be entitled to seize and remove the machine or its parts on the complainant defaulting in payment of monthly rents agreed upon, and where the complainant, who was in arrears in respect of the rents for several months, made a payment, on a certain date, of rent for one of those months, but the accused persons who were employees of the company, overlooking that payment, removed parts of the complainant's machine, it was held that there was no dishonest intention on the part of the accused to constitute theft.²⁵ Where property of the accused was distrained for an amount greater than the amount of arrears due, and the accused removed it, it was held that his act did not amount to theft as there was no dishonest intention.¹

Removal of debtor's property by his creditor to enforce payment of debt.—A creditor who took movable property out of his debtor's possession, without his consent, with the intention of coercing him to pay his debt, committed the offence of theft. The Court said: "We think that an intention on the part of the accused to use the possession of the property when taken for the purpose of obtaining satisfaction of a debt due to him, and only for that purpose, has no bearing on the question of dishonest intention under the Penal Code. To hold that such a purpose could render innocent what would be otherwise a wrongful gain within the meaning of s. 23 would amount to the recognition of a right on the part of every individual to recover an alleged debt by the seizure of property of his alleged debtor, and would tend to a state of things

¹⁹ Barhamdeo Rai, (1925) 7 P. L. T. 272, 26 Cr. L. J. 1559.

²⁰ Nagappa, (1890) 15 Bom. 344.

²¹ Paryag Rai v. Arju Mian, (1894) 22 Cal. 139.

²² Veerasami Naicken, (1930) 82 Cr. L. J. 354, [1930] M. W. N. 529, 33 L. W. 205.

²³ Kartikeswar Roy v. Bansidhar Byas, (1923)

25 Cr. L. J. 222, [1923] AIR (C) 594.

²⁴ Matabar Shekh, (1910) 14 C. W. N. 936, 11 Cr. L. J. 444; Daulat Shaw, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 583, 22 Cr. L. J. 673, [1921] AIR (P) 390.

²⁵ Mohammed Abdul Khoyer v. Asgar Khan, (1933) 58 C. L. J. 434, 35 Cr. L. J. 761.

¹ Muniswami Reddi, [1934] M. W. N. 889.

in which every man might, if strong enough, take the law into his own hands."² Where the accused unyoked the bullocks belonging to the complainant and took them away on the ground that the complainant's brother owed him Rs. 20 and suggested permission of the complainant to the act, but adduced no evidence, it was held that even if the complainant offered no resistance to the taking through fear of opposing the accused it was dishonest taking which was covered by the provisions of this section.³ Where the accused who was the contractor for payment of grazing dues seized a camel belonging to the complainant in order to put pressure on him to realise the due, it was held that he deprived the complainant of the possession of the animal and was guilty of theft though there was no intention to deprive the owner permanently of the animal.⁴ The complainant pledged some fishing nets with the accused. The nets remained in possession of the complainant, but the accused was at liberty to sell the goods if within three years the debt was not paid. The debt was not paid within the stipulated time and the complainant sold away one of the nets pledged. The accused, in the absence of the complainant, removed the nets. It was held that she could not be convicted of theft as it might fairly be contended that she bona fide supposed that she was justified in her action.⁵ Where the accused, a ship-owner, alleging that money was due to him on account of certain transactions with the complainant, seized the complainant's goods which were in transit to another ship-owner and detained them, it was held that he was guilty of theft.⁶ But where a creditor appropriated payment, which the debtor made under a misapprehension, towards a time-barred debt, he was held not guilty of this offence.⁷

Removal by pledgee of property pledged.—The complainant pledged some fishing nets with his creditor, accused No. 1. The nets remained in possession of the debtor as security for the debt, and the creditor was at liberty to sell the goods if within three years the debt was not paid. On the expiry of three years, the accused took away the nets from the complainant's possession as the debt remained unpaid. It was held that the accused could not be convicted of theft as it might fairly be contended that they bona fide supposed that they were justified in their act.⁸ The complainant borrowed a sum of money from the accused's brother, pledged to him a cart and two bullocks, and passed a rent note agreeing to pay rent for the use of the cart and bullocks. The accused demanded the rent due to his brother, and removed the cart and bullocks. The accused was thereupon charged with the offence of theft, but he was held not guilty.⁹

Obtaining cigarette from automatic box.—Against the wall of a public passage was fixed what is known as an "automatic box," the property of a company. In such box was a slit of sufficient size to admit a penny piece, and in the centre of one of its sides was a protecting button or knob. The box was so constructed that upon a penny piece being dropped into the slit and the knob being pushed in, a cigarette would be ejected from the box on to a ledge which projected from it. Upon the box were the following inscriptions: "Only pennies, not half-pennies"; "To obtain an Egyptian Beauties cigarette place a penny in the box and push the knob as far as it will go." The accused went to the entrance of the passage, and one of them dropped into the slit in the box a brass disc, about the size and shape of a penny, and thereby obtained a cigarette, which he took to the other accused. It was held that the accused were guilty of larceny.¹⁰

2. 'Any moveable property'.—'Moveable property' is defined in s. 22, supra. Explanations 1 and 2 state that things attached to the land may become moveable property by severance from earth, and that the act of severance may of itself be theft

² Sri Churn Chungo, (1895) 22 Cal. 1017, 1022, F.B., overruling Prosonno Kumar Patra v. Uday Sant, (1895) 22 Cal. 669; Agha Muhammad Yusuf, (1895) 18 All. 88; Bakhtawar, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 650, [1925] AIR (L) 131; Ganpat Krishnaji, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R. 351, 31 Cr. L. J. 975, [1930] AIR (B) 167; Bhagya, [1938] N. L. J. 302; H. J. Ransom v. Triloki Nath, (1942) 17 Luck. 663.

³ Munusawmy Pillai, (1910) 4 C. L. R. 19.

⁴ Abdul Khaliq Khan, (1941) 43 P. L. R. 179, 42 Cr. L. J. 625, [1941] AIR (L) 221.

⁵ Dhaklu, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 56; (1880) 1 Weir 405; Nga Shwe Meik, (1900) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 339.

⁶ U. Si Noor Mahomed, (1883) Weir (3rd Edn.) 246.

⁷ Musammatt Piari Dulaiya, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 508, 1 Cr. L. J. 803.

⁸ Dhaklu, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 56.

⁹ Waman Govind Sathye, (1931) Crim. Rev. No. 228 of 1931, decided by Patkar and Barlee, JJ., on October 14, 1931 (Bom. Unrep.).

¹⁰ Hands, (1887) 16 Cox. 188.

(vide ill. (a)). Thus, a thief who severs and carries away property is put in exactly the same position as if he carried away what had previously been severed. A sale of trees belonging to others and not cut down at the time of sale does not constitute theft.¹¹

It is not necessary that the thing stolen must have some appreciable value. Theft may be committed with regard to anything over which a person can possess the right of property. But an abuse of this section is guarded against by s. 95, which "will prevent the law of theft from being abused for the purpose of punishing those venial violations of the right of property which the common sense of mankind readily distinguishes from crimes, such as the act of a traveller who tears a twig from a hedge, of a boy who takes stones from another person's ground to throw at birds, of a servant who dips his pen in his master's ink".¹² Where the accused took a fake rupee from the pocket of a person, it was held that he was guilty of theft because although the rupee had no value as a coin yet it had some value as a piece of metal of which it was composed.¹³ A currency note was cancelled by tearing off certain parts, but the further process of cutting it into pieces and then destroying it by burning remained. It was held that such a note though cancelled was not res nullius and could be the subject-matter of theft. There is a clear distinction between intention to destroy or abandon and actual destruction or abandonment of property. If the owner of property intending to destroy or abandon property, hands it over to a third person for the purpose of destruction he still maintains his rights as the owner of the property, and taking it out of his possession is theft and improper use of it is breach of trust.¹⁴

Any part of earth whether it be stones or clay or sand or any other component when severed from the earth is movable property and is capable of being the subject of theft.¹⁵

In animals feræ naturæ there is no absolute property. There is only a special or qualified right of property—a right ratione soli to take and kill them. When killed upon the soil they become the absolute property of the owner of the soil. It was so held in the case of rabbits¹⁶ and of grouse.¹⁷ But before there can be a conviction for larceny for taking anything not capable in its original state of being a subject of larceny, as, for instance, things fixed to the soil, it is necessary that the act of taking away should not be one continuous act with the act of severance or other act by which the thing becomes a chattel, and so is brought within the law of larceny. If a man kills a rabbit and carries it away at once it is not larceny. It will not be larceny even if he kept it for sometime on the land of the person on whose grounds it is killed, provided the whole transaction can be regarded as a continuous one.¹⁸ Mere cessation of physical possession for a short time does not break the continuity of the whole act. But see ill. (a).

Cases.—Earth and stone.—Cart-loads of earth,¹⁹ or stones,²⁰ carried away from the land of another, are subjects of theft. But not clods of earth worth six pies taken from a channel-bed belonging to Government.²¹ A house cannot be the subject of theft; but there may be a theft of its materials.²²

Crops.—The real test in a case of an alleged theft of crops grown on land is as to which of the parties had grown the crops. Where the complainant is shown to have grown the crops, the accused cutting and removing the same would be guilty of theft.²³ Generally speaking in the case of theft of crops, the question who grew the crops is the first matter to look to, but it is not the only thing in all cases. The question of title though secondary is relevant and so is the state of evidence as regards past possession.²⁴ Growing crops are not movable property. A person who removes such crops attached

¹¹ Balos alias Hussain Sahib, (1882) 1 Weir 419.

¹² Note N, p. 162.

¹³ Francis Manikam, Criminal Appeal No. 342 of 1910, decided on November 3, 1910, by Batchelor and Rao, JJ. (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁴ Moti, (1923) 17 S. L. R. 260, 26 Cr. L. J. 189.

¹⁵ Suri Venkatappayya Sastri v. Madhula Venkanna, (1904) 27 Mad. 531, F.B., overruling Kotayya, (1887) 10 Mad. 255, and following Shivram, (1892) 15 Bom. 702.

¹⁶ Blades v. Higgs, (1865) 11 H. L. C. 621.

¹⁷ Rigg v. Earlsdale, (1857) 1 H. & N. 923.

¹⁸ Townley, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 315.

¹⁹ Shivram, (1891) 15 Bom. 702.

²⁰ Suri Venkatappayya Sastri v. Madhula Venkanna, (1904) 27 Mad. 531, F.B.

²¹ Public Prosecutor v. Tsandra Ramaswamy, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 632.

²² Natar Singh, (1904) U. B. R. (1904-06) (P. C.) 7, 1 Cr. L. J. 558.

²³ Kailash Singh, [1941] P. W. N. 601, (1941) 22 P. L. T. 765, 43 Cr. L. J. 294, [1941] AIR (P) 613.

²⁴ Harihar Narain Singh v. Bankey Singh, (1944) 46 Cr. L. J. 83, [1944] AIR (P) 274.

by a village Court, which has only power to attach moveables, is not guilty of theft.²⁵ Where certain growing crops were attached in execution of a decree by beat of drum without affixing a copy of the warrant of attachment on the land and another copy on the outer door of the house of the judgment-debtor, as provided by O. XXI, r. 44, Civil Procedure Code, and the accused removed the crops with the consent of the judgment-debtor, it was held that the accused were not guilty of theft as the attachment was irregular and the crops had not passed out of the possession of the judgment-debtor.¹ Where the auction-purchaser at a rent execution sale of a holding took delivery of possession and subsequently the persons who were in possession cut and removed certain bamboo clumps standing on the land, it was held that when the auction-purchaser acquired the land he acquired the bamboos too and the accused were guilty of theft.²

If a person trespasses on land in the possession of another and sows paddy on it that does not entitle him to property in the paddy that results from the sowing; and if the person in possession reaps and removes such paddy he does not thereby commit theft.³ Where a crop on a land was raised by the lessee of the accused after the court-sale, and delivery of the crop was not ordered by the Court, the removal of the crop could not be said to be dishonest and a conviction of the accused for theft was unsustainable.⁴

Trees.—Standing teak trees are immovable property.⁵ But as soon as the trees are cut with the intention of removing them dishonestly, theft is committed.

Where a mortgagee, who is in possession of trees under the terms of a mortgage deed without having a right to cut and appropriate them, cuts and appropriates the trees, he does not commit theft, because he has to recoup the owner of his loss under s. 76 of the Transfer of Property Act.⁶

Salt.—Salt spontaneously formed on the surface of a swamp appropriated by Government,⁷ or in a creek under the supervision of Government,⁸ is a subject of theft; but not that which is formed on a swamp not guarded by Government.⁹

Boat.—A boat may be the subject of theft.¹⁰

Valuable security.—The halves of currency bank-notes, sent in a letter, are goods; and a person who steals them is indictable for larceny.¹¹ Similarly, any valuable security may be the subject of theft.¹²

Human body.—A human body, whether living or dead, is not movable property and therefore stealing a corpse is not theft.¹³ But a different principle would apply in the case of human bodies, or portions of such, or mummies, preserved in museums or scientific institutions. The English law is also to the same effect.

Gas.—A having contracted with a gas company to consume gas and pay according to meter, in order to avoid paying for the full quantity of gas consumed introduced into the entrance pipe another pipe for the purpose of conveying the gas to the exit pipe of the meter, and so to the burners, for consumption without passing through the meter itself. The entrance pipe was the property of A, but he had not by his contract any interest in the gas until it passed through the meter. It was held that he was guilty of larceny.¹⁴ A stole gas for the use of a manufactory by means of a pipe which drew off the gas from the main without allowing it to pass through the meter. The gas from this pipe was burnt every day, and turned off at night. The pipe was never closed at its junction with the main, and consequently always remained full of gas. It was held that as the pipe always remained full, there was, in fact, a continuous taking of the gas, and not a series of separate takings, but that even if the

²⁵ Nallamadan Chettiar, (1929) 31 L. W. 719, 58 M. L. J. 509, [1930] M. W. N. 352, 31 Cr. L. J. 1196, [1930] AIR (M) 509.

¹ Ram Sakal Singh, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 437.

² Jagmohan Singh, (1932) 13 P. L. T. 519, 34 Cr. L. J. 355, [1932] AIR (P) 344.

³ Nga Hmyin, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 199, 4 Cr. L. J. 465.

⁴ Venkatasubbarayadu, [1940] M. W. N. 869, (1939) 52 L. W. 346.

⁵ U Ka Doe, (1929) 8 Ran. 13.

⁶ Tarachand Sah, [1940] P. W. N. 778,

(1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 795, [1940] AIR (P) 701.

⁷ Tamma Ghanaya, (1881) 4 Mad. 228; Fakira, (1872) Unrep. Cr. C. 66.

⁸ Mansang Bhavsang, (1873) 10 B. H. C. 74.

⁹ Government Pleader, (1882) 1 Weir 412.

¹⁰ Meher Dowalia, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 53 [63].

¹¹ Mead, (1831) 4 C. & P. 535.

¹² Kashiraj Martand, (1870) Cr. R. of 1870, Unrep. Cr. C. 43.

¹³ Ramadhin, (1902) 25 All. 129.

¹⁴ White, (1858) 6 Cox 213.

pipe had not been thus kept full, the taking would have been continuous, as it was substantially all one transaction.¹⁵

Water.—Water supplied by a water company to a consumer, and standing in his pipes, may be the subject of larceny.¹⁶ The Calcutta High Court has held that water running freely from a river through a channel made and maintained by a person is not a subject of theft.¹⁷ The Madras High Court¹⁸ has ruled that running water in irrigation channels is a subject of theft. It has distinguished the Calcutta case on the ground that there water was not reduced into possession. Similarly, the Allahabad High Court has held that water when conveyed in pipes and so reduced into possession can be the subject of theft.¹⁹

Animals.—In order to render an animal feræ naturæ the property of any person there must be a complete capture, the result of which is to reduce the animal completely into possession. Mere pursuit short of capture will not do, and so long as it is possible for the animal to escape it cannot be said that there is such a reduction into possession as makes the animal property of the pursuer.²⁰

Bull.—A bull dedicated to an idol and allowed to roam at large remains the property of the trustees of the temple, and can become the subject of theft;²¹ or mischief²² but not a bull set at large in accordance with religious usage.²³

Peacock.—A peacock tamed but not kept in confinement is the subject of theft.²⁴

Fish.—Fish in an ordinary open irrigation tank,²⁵ or in a tank not enclosed on all sides but dependent on the overflow of a neighbouring channel;¹ or in a public river or creek, the right of fishing in which has been let out,² are feræ naturæ and not subject of theft. Fish in an enclosed tank are restrained of their natural liberty and liable to be taken at any time according to the pleasure of the owner, and are, therefore, the subject of theft.³ The test of possession is, whether the fish could escape. If they are unable to escape, they become the subject of theft,⁴ otherwise not.⁵

Fish taken at sea are in the possession of the owner of the smack by which they are taken, as soon as they are taken, and are consequently the subject of larceny.⁶

But chanks (popularly included among shell-fish, but really large molluscs) are subject of theft as licenses to gather them are granted by the Sovereign.⁷ The word 'fish' is, according to an English case, not confined to vertebrates but includes a wrinkle. Shell-fish are included in the word 'fish'.⁸

Cattle.—The removal of animals grazing in open lands where the owner has driven them is theft.⁹ The illegal seizing of cattle and taking them to the pound

¹⁵ Firth, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 172.

¹⁶ Perens v. O'Brien, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 21.

¹⁷ Sheikh Arif, (1908) 35 Cal. 437.

¹⁸ Chockalingam Pillai, [1912] M. W. N. 119, 18 Cr. L. J. 181.

¹⁹ Mahadeo Prasad, (1928) 45 All. 680.

²⁰ Raghunandan, (1912) 15 O. C. 183, 13 Cr. L. J. 556.

²¹ Nalla, (1887) 11 Mad. 145. In this case the Court confuses the two terms feræ bestia and res nullius. The Magistrate regarded the bull a res nullius. The High Court held it was not and declined to interfere. The conviction should really have been for theft.

²² Abdul Qayum, [1946] A. L. J. 27.

²³ Romesh Chunder Sannyal v. Hiru Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 852; Bandhu, (1885) 8 All. 51; Nihal, (1887) 9 All. 348.

²⁴ Nanhe Khan, (1897) 17 A. W. N. 41.

²⁵ Subba Reddi v. Munshoor Ali Saheb, (1900) 24 Mad. 81, (1878) 1 Weir 384; Haji Changal v. Basarmal, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 122, 13 Cr. L. J. 22. If the water in an open irrigation tank has fallen to such an extent that both the supply and distribution channels are dry, the freedom of fish is circumscribed and the catching of such fish without the consent of Government would be theft: Subbian Servai, (1911) 36 Mad. 472.

¹ Maya Kam Surma v. Nichala Katani,

(1888) 15 Cal. 402.

² Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome, (1888) 15 Cal. 388; Hurimoti Moddock v. Deno Nath Malo, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 47; Revu Poithadu, (1882) 5 Mad. 390; Elahi Buz, (1936) 17 P. L. T. 189, [1936] P. W. N. 153, 37 Cr. L. J. 452.

³ Shaikh Adam, (1886) 10 Bom. 193; Sreenibash Mahata, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 501.

⁴ Manchu Paidigadu v. Kadimsetti Tammayya, [1914] M. W. N. 168, 15 Cr. L. J. 77; Nokolo Behara, (1927) 51 Mad. 333; Subbian Servai, (1911) 36 Mad. 472; Krishna Reddi v. Muniappa Reddi, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 556, [1942] M. W. N. 728 (1), 55 L. W. 696, 44 Cr. L. J. 173, [1943] AIR (M) 34.

⁵ Kaloo Khan Adya Nath Haldar, (1930) 35 C. W. N. 455; 32 Cr. L. J. 572; Thakur Jolhan Singh, (1938) 14 Luck. 322.

⁶ William Mallison, (1902) 20 Cox 204.

⁷ Annakumaru Pillai v. Muthupayal, (1904) 27 Mad. 551; Parker v. Lord Advocate, [1904] A. C. 364.

⁸ Leavett v. Clark, (1915) 25 Cox 44.

⁹ Aradhun Mundul v. Myan Khan, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 7; Karsan Bapu, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 626; Kasim, (1879) P. R. No. 19 of 1879; Nga Thein O, (1893) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 238; Paw Din, [1938] Ran. 63; Dayal, [1943] O. W. N. 202, (1943) 44 Cr. L. J. 640, [1943] AIR (O) 280.

is not theft.¹⁰ The Nagpur High Court has held that the taking for the purposes of this section must be "dishonest" within the meaning of s. 24 of the Code. It is not necessary that the taking must cause wrongful gain to the taker; it will suffice for the applicability of the section if it causes wrongful loss to the owner.¹¹ A person who steals cattle which are let loose by the owner with a view to their going to drink water at a river, commits theft.¹² Where certain cattle got scattered from the herd at the time of a cheetah scare in a forest, any person who sees such animal straying anywhere and takes it, cannot be said to do so with a dishonest intent and would not be guilty of theft. But if the person who takes it subsequently retains it intending to treat it as his own, then he will be guilty of criminal misappropriation.¹³

Carcass.—Where a person kills a wild animal on the property of another the carcass does not belong to the killer but to the proprietor of the property, and the latter, either himself or by his duly authorized agent, is entitled to demand and, if refused, seize the carcass from the possession of the killer: and such persons as help him to exercise his right are doing no wrong; but as against any person other than the proprietor of the estate or his authorised agent or those lawfully helping the proprietor or his agent the killer has a right to retain possession of the carcass.¹⁴ Where a man buried the carcass of a bullock suspecting it to have been poisoned and another person dug it up and carried it away, it was held that no theft was committed, because property as well as possession in it were abandoned.¹⁵

Pigeons.—If pigeons are so far tame that they come home every night to roost in wooden boxes, hung on the outside of the house of their owner, and a party come in the night and steal them out of these boxes, this is larceny.¹⁶ Similarly, pigeons kept in an ordinary dove-cote, having liberty of ingress and egress at all times by means of holes at the top, may be the subjects of larceny.¹⁷

Partridges.—Partridges, hatched and reared by a common hen, while they remain with her, and from their inability to escape are practically under the dominion and in the power of the owner of the hen, may be the subject of larceny, though the hen is not confined in a coop or otherwise, but allowed to wander with her brood about the premises of her owner.¹⁸

3. 'Out of the possession of any person'.—No definition is given in the Code of the word 'possession', though it is said that when property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant, on account of that person, it is in that person's possession (s. 27). Stephen¹⁹ says: "A moveable thing is said to be in the possession of a person when he is so situated with respect to it that he has the power to deal with it as owner to the exclusion of all other persons, and when the circumstances are such that he may be presumed to intend to do so in case of need." The authors of the Code remark: "We believe it to be impossible to mark with precision, by any words, the circumstances which constitute possession. It is easy to put cases about which no doubt whatever exists, and about which the language of lawyers and of the multitude would be the same. It will hardly be doubted, for example, that a gentleman's watch lying on the table in his room is in his possession, though it is not in his hand, and though he may not know whether it is on his writing-table or on his dressing-table. As little will it be doubted that a watch which a gentleman lost a year ago on a journey, and which he has never heard of since, is not in his possession. It will not be doubted that when a person gives a dinner, his silver forks, while in the hands of his guests, are still in his possession; and it will be as little doubted that his silver forks are not in his possession when he has deposited them with a pawnbroker as a pledge. But between these extreme cases lie many cases in which it is difficult to pronounce, with confidence, either that property is or that it is not in a person's possession... For the purpose of preventing any difference of opinion from arising in cases likely to occur very often, we have laid down a few rules... which we believe to be in accordance with the general

¹⁰ Jhaman Lal, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 228n.

¹¹ Madra, [1946] Nag. 326.

¹² Lakshmya, (1878) Unrep. Cr. C. 136.

¹³ Venkataswami, [1943] M. W. N. 580, (1943) 56 L. W. 547, [1943] 2 M. L. J. 334, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 220, [1944] AIR (M) 26.

¹⁴ Artu Rautra, (1924) 3 Pat. 549.

¹⁵ (1869) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 30, 1 Weir 384.

¹⁶ Brooks, (1829) 4 C. & P. 131.

¹⁷ Cheafor, (1851) 5 Cox 367.

¹⁸ Shickle, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 158; Cory, (1864) 10 Cox 23; Head, (1857) 1 F. & F. 350; Garnham, (1860) 2 F. & F. 347.

¹⁹ Digest of Criminal Law; Art. 306.

sense of mankind as to what shall be held to constitute possession (s. 27)...Much uncertainty will still remain. This we cannot prevent...The provision contained in clause 61 (s. 72) will, we think, obviate all the inconveniences which might arise from doubts as to the exact limits which separate theft from misappropriation and from breach of trust. The effect of that clause will be to prevent the judges from wasting their time and ingenuity in devising nice distinctions. If a case which is plainly theft comes before them, the offender will be punished as a thief. If a case which is plainly breach of trust comes before them, the offender will be punished as guilty of breach of trust. If they have to try a case, which lies on the frontier, one of those thefts which are hardly distinguishable from breaches of trust, or one of those breaches of trust which are hardly distinguishable from theft, they will not trouble themselves with subtle distinctions, but, leaving it undetermined by which name the offence should be called, will proceed to determine what is infinitely of greater importance, what shall be the punishment."²⁰

The property must be in the possession of the prosecutor.²¹ Thus, there can be no theft of wild animals, birds, or fish while at large, but there can be a theft of tamed animals. Similarly, where property dishonestly taken belonged to a person who was dead, and therefore in nobody's possession, or where it is lost property without any apparent possessor, it is not the subject of theft, but of criminal misappropriation (vide ill. (g)). Where the owner of bullocks had lost them and could not find them on search and the bullocks were found in the possession of the accused, it was held that they could not be convicted of theft but of criminal misappropriation.²² Where the accused removed some bricks from a heap which had been left lying for eight years, an assumption could be made that the bricks had been abandoned and their removal under the circumstances did not constitute theft.²³ Where certain trees which were the subject of the charge of theft stood on the holding in the possession of the accused, it was held that the charge of theft could not stand because the offence of theft was an offence against possession.²⁴

In a Bombay case it is said that to constitute theft it is sufficient if property is removed, against his wish, from the custody of a person who has an apparent title, or even a colour of right, to such property.²⁵ In this case the accused owed the complainant Rs. 60, and during the accused's absence his wife sold his working implements to the complainant for Rs. 25 of the debt. On accused's return he took back the implements against the wish of the complainant's wife, complainant himself not being present. The Magistrate thereupon convicted the accused of theft. But the Sessions Judge referred the case to the High Court on the ground that the offence of theft was not committed because it was not proved that the accused intended to act dishonestly in taking the implements nor was there evidence that he had authorized his wife to give the implements. West, J., said that the complainant held by an apparent title, or at least an assertion of title that was not plainly illusory, and that against even a colour of right a person aggrieved should not take the law into his own hands. The conviction was, therefore, upheld. No doubt the accused made himself liable to a suit for damages by taking the law into his own hands, but as his act in taking away the property was not proved to be a dishonest one within the meaning of ss. 24 and 378 he could hardly be said to have committed theft. In a Calcutta case the accused alleged that certain paddy was grown upon his jote, and that he cut and removed it as a matter of right and in an assertion of a bona fide claim to the land. The complainant admitted that there had been a boundary dispute between his landlord and the landlord of the accused, but claimed the paddy as his own as the land was in his possession. It was held that the accused had no justification in taking the law into his own hands, even if he was entitled to hold the land because he was not in actual possession of it.¹ If a ²⁰ Note N, pp. 159, 160, 161.

²¹ Hossene Sheikh v. Rajkrishna Chatterjee, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 80; Jodha Singh, (1912) 11 A. L. J. R. 270, 13 Cr. L. J. 298; Lekhray v. Imambur, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 130, 12 Cr. L. J. 611.

²² Nga Shwe Zan, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 300, [1917] AIR (LB) 15.

²³ Takit Tumi, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 291.

²⁴ Shikh Garib Haji v. Muchiram Shaha, (1925) 30 C. W. N. 359, 27 Cr. L. J. 133, [1925]

AIR (C) 1020; Ram Brich Lal, (1935) 16 P. L. T. 645, 37 Cr. L. J. 91.

²⁵ Gangaram Santram, (1884) 9 Bom. 135. See the judgment of Stevens, J., in Pandita v. Rahi-Mulla Akundo, (1900) 27 Cal. 501.

¹ Pandita v. Rahi-Mulla Akundo, (1900) 27 Cal. 501; Jagat Chandra Roy v. Rakhal Chandra Roy, (1899) 4 C. W. N. 190. See The Public Prosecutor v. Bullara Gored, (1897) 1 Weir 426.

person takes a lorry on hire-purchase system from a company which under the agreement has reserved the right of seizing the bus in the event of default in payment of instalments, and default is made, then the company is not entitled to retake possession of the lorry by force or by removing it from the hands of purchaser's servants, who had no authority, express or implied, to give any consent. If the company or its agents do so they are guilty of an offence under this section. The question whether the ownership had or had not passed to the purchaser is wholly immaterial as s. 378 deals with possession and not ownership. The legal possession of the lorry was vested in the purchaser and the company was not entitled to recover possession of the lorry, even though default in payment of any instalments had taken place without the consent of the purchaser. Possession of the driver and the cleaner was the possession of their master and they were not competent to give consent on behalf of their master.²

A bailee entrusted with an article to repair has no lien over it, if he has not completed the repairs within the stipulated time; or when time is not of the essence of the contract, within a reasonable time; and he cannot refuse to part with it, after doing a certain amount of work, till payment for such work, in the absence of an agreement to receive part payment for the work done; and the owner is entitled, in the circumstances, to recover his article without payment for the same. Where an electric kettle was given to a repairer for repairs, and he did not complete the work within the stipulated period, or even within a reasonable time thereafter, and the owner forcibly removed the article from the repairer's shop, without payment of the sum demanded by the latter for work already done to it, it was held that the owner was not guilty of theft, as his intention was not to cause wrongful loss to the repairer, or wrongful gain to himself, but to recover his property after the lapse of a reasonable time.³

There may be theft without an intention to deprive the owner of the property permanently. In this respect the Penal Code differs from the English law. Where, therefore, a person snatched away some books from a boy as he came out of school and told him that they would be returned when he came to his house, it was held that he had committed theft.⁴

It is legally possible for a person to abandon his property. Such property becomes first the property of nobody and then the property of the first person who reduces it into possession. Things of which the ownership has been abandoned are not capable of being stolen.⁵

'Any person.'—For the definition of the word 'person' see s. 11, supra. The person from whose possession the property is taken may or may not be the owner of it and may have his possession either rightful or wrongful. Mere physical control of the person over the thing is quite enough (vide ills. (j) and (k)).

Possession of a trustee,⁶ or a bailee,⁷ or a servant⁸ is a sufficient possession within the definition of theft.

Attachment.—Theft can be committed by the owner of a crop under attachment by removing it.⁹ Here the attachment was by distraint made by a Revenue Court, and the mode and effect of attachment by a civil Court as regards possession was not considered. Hence, where a judgment-debtor, whose standing crops were attached, harvested them while the attachment was in force, it was held that he could not be convicted of theft but of offences under ss. 424 and 403.¹⁰ But where land was attached and taken possession of by the Court under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, it was held that the removal of crops standing on the land amounted to theft.¹¹ Proof of dishonest intention is necessary. Such intention is negatived where the removal was in order to save the crop from being washed away,¹² or was in the nature of distraint ² H. J. Ransom v. Triloki Nath, (1942) 17 Luck. 663.

³ Judah, (1925) 53 Cal. 174.

⁴ Naushe Ali Khan, (1911) 34 All. 89.

⁵ Tan Soon Li v. The Burma Oil Co., Ltd., [1941] Ran. 153.

⁶ Nga Po Saw, (1887) S. J. L. B. 410.

⁷ Soukhi Chand Sao, (1917) 3 P. L. J. 354, 19 Cr. L. J. 884, [1918] AIR (P) 314; Harding, (1929) 73 S. J., Part II, 863.

⁸ H. J. Ransom v. Triloki Nath, (1942) 17 Luck. 663.

⁹ Periyannan, (1888) 1 Weir 423; Dadala

Atchigadu, (1881) 1 Weir 420; Chunnu, (1911) 8 A. L. J. R. 656, 12 Cr. L. J. 374; Pinnamaraju v. Potturi Tirapatiraju, (1930) 32 L. W. 23, [1930] M. W. N. 347, 31 Cr. L. J. 1086, [1930] AIR (M) 670.

¹⁰ Obayya, (1898) 22 Mad. 151. See also P. Subaiya, (1882) 1 Weir 421. Cf. Ramasami, (1892) 16 Mad. 364, in which the accused who harvested and removed certain crops which had been distrained for arrears of revenue were held guilty of theft.

¹¹ Bande Ali Shaikh, [1939] 2 Cal. 419.

¹² Pedda Maddulegadu, (1892) 1 Weir 423.

by a landlord after it was attached.¹³ Where the warrants of attachment were not signed by the Court and did not bear the seal of the Court as required by Order XXI, r. 24, Civil Procedure Code, it was held that the attachment was illegal and if the procedure prescribed by Order XXI, r. 44, Civil Procedure Code, was not followed, the produce attached could not be deemed to have passed from the possession of the judgment-debtor into the possession of the Court, and if the crops were removed with the consent of the judgment-debtor the person removing the crops could not be said to be guilty of theft.¹⁴

Goods in the shop of the accused were attached in execution of a decree and the decree-holder himself was given possession of the goods on his executing a security bond for the production of the goods when called upon to do so. The accused put in a claim to the goods and the claim was allowed. But the accused without taking delivery of the goods through the Court broke open the lock during the decree-holder's absence and removed the goods. It was held that as the accused only removed his own goods, there was no dishonest intention to cause loss to the complainant or gain to himself, and hence there was no theft.¹⁵

Where property has been taken possession of by a receiver in insolvency in the bona fide belief that it is property belonging to the insolvent, any person who knowing those facts takes such property from the possession of the receiver is guilty of theft, even though he may claim to be the owner thereof.¹⁶ This case has been criticised by the Madras High Court on the ground that in cases of rescue from lawful custody the presence of the element of dishonesty is a necessary condition for a conviction for theft. Where certain buffaloes which had been attached under a decree by a Munsif, and which had been handed over to two persons on their furnishing security, were rescued by the accused who pleaded that they owned the cattle and not the judgment-debtor, it was held that though the accused might have committed an unlawful act in taking the cattle out of the custody of sureties, they were not guilty of theft.¹⁷

Accused having failed to repay an agricultural loan, his property was attached, but the attaching officer had not with him, at the time of the attachment, a warrant of attachment: the property was subsequently ordered to be sold when it was discovered that the accused had removed it, he accordingly was placed on his trial and convicted under this section. It was held that as the attaching officer had not with him the warrant there was no valid attachment and, consequently, the accused was not guilty.¹⁸

Where property is attached in execution of a decree at the instance of the decree-holder, the fact that a claim petition in respect of the property attached is allowed does not warrant a conviction of the decree-holder under this section read with s. 114.¹⁹

Symbolical possession.—Delivery of symbolical possession to a purchaser at a court-sale is effective only against the judgment-debtor but does not in any way affect the possession of a third party who may be on the land. Consequently, when complainant is found to have been in possession of the land and grown the crops thereon, delivery of symbolical possession to a purchaser at an execution sale against a third party who is said to have been the owner of the land cannot be relied upon as having transferred the possession of the crops to the purchaser in answer to a charge of theft of the crops.²⁰

Possessory order.—The order of a Mamlatdar in a possessory suit is operative only as against the parties to the suit. Where, in the execution of such an order passed against a person, symbolical possession of a field with crops standing thereon was given to another, and the former's brothers cut and removed the crops, it was held that they could not be convicted of theft.²¹

The accused were convicted of having committed theft of paddy belonging to ¹³ Ram Dayal, (1915) 38 All. 40.

¹⁴ Beni, (1934) 57 All. 660.

¹⁵ Lakshminarayana Chettiar, (1922) 16 L. W. 15, 42 M. L. J. 490, 24 Cr. L. J. 414, [1922] AIR (M) 405.

¹⁶ Kamla Pat, (1926) 48 All. 368.

¹⁷ Ramaswamy Naicken v. Dandakaran, (1932) 65 M. L. J. 732, 38 L. W. 875, [1933] M. W. N. 110, 35 Cr. L. J. 463; Abdul Kabir, [1940] Kar. 105.

¹⁸ Molai, (1929) 22 Cr. L. J. 107, [1920] AIR (A) 306.

¹⁹ Sheku Sahib v. Venkataramanayya, [1941] M. W. N. 671.

²⁰ Banka Nath v. Abdul Kadir, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1306.

²¹ Sheikh Hussain, (1896) Cr. R. No. 35 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 866.

the complainant. It appeared that some months previous to the occurrence there had been an order under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code in favour of the complainant in respect of the land in question. It was held that the order under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, only showed that the complainant was in possession on the date of the order. It was only a piece of evidence to be taken into consideration in determining who was in possession. It was open to the accused to show that in spite of the order they were actually in possession or regained possession after the order and that they grew the crops and were in possession on the date of the occurrence, the title of either party to the land in question being wholly irrelevant in relation to the charge of theft.²²

Joint possession.—Where there are several joint owners in joint possession, and any one of them dishonestly takes exclusive possession, he will be guilty of theft.²³ Similarly, if a coparcener dishonestly takes the separate property of another coparcener, he will be guilty of theft.²⁴

Cases.—Taking out of possession of another person.—The complainant washed a carpet at the village tank and hung it up there to dry; the accused dishonestly took the same away. It was held that the carpet had never left the complainant's possession, and the accused had committed theft.²⁵

Where certain trees were uprooted by a dust-storm and were removed by tenants, it was held that the removal caused wrongful loss to the zamindar and wrongful gain to the tenants and that they were therefore guilty of theft.¹ Accused Nos. 2 and 3 having made a default in the payment of land revenue, the Mamlatdar proceeded to their house and made a panchanama declaring their buffaloes to be under attachment. At the instigation of accused No. 1, the other accused untied and removed the buffaloes. It was held that they were guilty of theft for the Mamlatdar was to be deemed to be in possession inasmuch as he had a statutory right to take possession, he came to the place where the buffaloes were with the intention of taking possession, he made a declaration and a panchanama that he had taken possession, and he exercised the right of possession by forbidding the defaulters from removing them.²

English cases.—Where a person, having ordered a tradesman to bring goods to his house, took out a certain quantity, asked their price, separated them from the rest, and then sent the tradesman home on pretence of wanting other articles, and ran away with the goods, it was held that this amounted to larceny.³ Getting goods delivered into a hired cart on the express condition that they would be paid for before they were taken out from the cart, and then getting them from the cart without paying the price was held to be larceny.⁴ The accused put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket, got hold of his purse, and pulled it up to the edge of the pocket when the corner caught on a belt worn by the prosecutor. The prosecutor at that moment grasped the purse and put it back. It was held that the accused was guilty of larceny. Pickford, J., said that "if a man put his hand into another's pocket, and removed a purse from the position in which it was to the edge, and was only prevented from getting full possession of it because it accidentally caught in the belt, there was a sufficient asportation to constitute larceny".⁵

Joint property.—The removal of even the whole of the crop by a ryot in a zamindari holding on a varam tenure without delivering to the Zemindar his share

²² So held by Cumming, J., (Graham, J. dubitante) in Rakhal Dolui v. Maham Lal Ghose, (1927) 31 C. W. N. 964, 28 Cr. L. J. 827, [1927] AIR (C) 701.

²³ (1880) 1 Weir 408; Virankutti v. Chiyamu, (1884) 7 Mad. 557; Kaka, (1889) P. R. No. 12 of 1889; Ponnurangam, (1887) 10 Mad. 186; Debi Das, (1881) 1 A. W. N. 115; Bramley's Case, (1822) Russ. & Ry. 478; Girdhari, (1890) 4 C. P. L. R. 174. See Phul Singh, (1912) 10 A. L. J. R. 527, 14 Cr. L. J. 3, where it appeared that a landlord had jointly cultivated land with a non-occupancy tenant and had cut and removed the crops, but the Court held that the landlord must be deemed to be part owner and in possession and could not be convicted of theft. It may, however, be observed that even a part owner has no right to take away the portion of the other part owner. The facts in the report are meagre.

²⁴ Sita Ram Rai, (1880) 3 All. 181.

²⁵ Mathi, (1886) Cr. R. No. 70 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 314.

¹ Dunyapat, (1919) 42 All. 53.

² Lallu Waghji, (1918) 21 Bom. L. R. 251, 43 Bom. 550.

³ Sharpless, (1872) 2 East P. C. 675.

⁴ Pratt's Case, (1830) 1 Mood. 250.

⁵ Taylor, (1910) 27 T. L. R. 108, 109.

of the crop does not constitute theft.⁶ A had in her possession forty baskets of paddy out of which B was entitled, under a decree of a civil Court, to thirty-five baskets. The decree awarded her this specific paddy as being the produce of a specified farm. B took the thirty-five baskets of paddy out of A's possession without A's consent. It was held that the act of B, though irregular and improper, did not amount to theft.⁷

English cases.—H, a member of a friendly society, was in possession of a shop where goods were sold for the benefit of the society. Each member partook of the profit, and was subject to the loss arising from the shop. H had the sole management, and was answerable for the safety of all the property and money coming to his possession in the course of the management. The accused, also a member of the society, assisted in the shop without salary, and was indicted for stealing money from the till. It was held that he could be convicted of larceny although a member of the society.⁸

4. 'Without that person's consent'.—The thing stolen must have been taken without the consent of the person in possession of it. The primary inquiry to be made is whether the taking were invito domino, or without the will or approbation of the owner. Hence, where a debtor gave certain property to his creditor, and subsequently found out that the debt was time-barred, it was held that the charge of theft could not be sustained against the creditor, inasmuch as there was a full unqualified consent on the part of the debtor, at the time of his giving away the property.⁹ Explanation 5 says that consent "may be express or implied, and may be given either by the person in possession, or by any person having for that purpose authority either express or implied" (vide ill. (m) and (n)). But a consent given under improper circumstances will be of no avail (vide ill. (o)). Where a consent is given under a misconception of fact and the person removing the property knows that the consent was given in consequence of such misconception it is not a valid consent.¹⁰ As to what is valid 'consent' see s. 90, supra.

Cases.—A sought the aid of B with the intention of committing a theft of the property of B's master. B, with the knowledge and consent of his master, and for the purpose of procuring A's punishment, aided A in carrying out his object. It was held that as the property removed was so taken with the knowledge of the owner, the offence of theft was not committed, but A would be guilty of abetment of theft.¹¹ Really speaking the owner did not consent to the dishonest taking away of the property. He merely assisted the thief in carrying out the latter's dishonest intention: cf. ill. (m) and (o). The thief had no knowledge of the owner's act, and it cannot, therefore, be construed as a consent. In two English cases, on similar facts, the offence of larceny was held to have been committed. The owner of goods, knowing of an intention in the accused to steal them, they having plotted so to do with his servant, directed his servant to carry on the business with a view to the detection of the thieves. The servant with the consent of his master agreed with the accused to open the door of the house and let them in. They broke open inner apartments and took the goods. It was held that they were guilty of larceny.¹²

If a person takes a lorry on hire-purchase system from a company which under the agreement has reserved the right of seizing it in the event of default in payment of instalment and default is made, then the company is not entitled to retake its possession by force or by removing it from the hands of purchaser's servants who had no authority, express or implied, to give any consent. If the company or its agents do so they are guilty of theft. The question whether ownership had or had not passed to the purchaser is wholly immaterial as s. 378 deals with possession and not ownership. The legal possession of the lorry was vested in the purchaser and the company were not entitled to recover possession of the lorry, even though default in payment of any instalments had taken place, without the consent of the purchaser.

⁶ Subudhi Rantho v. Balarama Pudi, (1902) 26 Mad. 481; Annamalai Odayar, [1914] M. W. N. 106, 15 Cr. L. J. 186, [1914] AIR (M) 286; Thoppulan v. Sankaranarayana Iyer, [1914] M. W. N. 483, 15 Cr. L. J. 440, [1914] AIR (M) 61.

⁷ Maung Po, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 334.

⁸ William Webster, (1861) 9 Cox 13; Burgess,

(1863) 9 Cox 302; Cain's Case, (1841) 2 Mood. 204.

⁹ Musammatt Piari Dulaiya, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 508, 1 Cr. L. J. 803.

¹⁰ Maung Ba Chit, (1929) 7 Ran. 821.

¹¹ Troylukho Nath Chowdhry, (1878) 4 Cal. 366. See Bannen, (1844) 1 C. & K. 295, 301.

¹² Eggington, (1801) 2 East P. C. 666.

Possession of the driver and the clearner was the possession of their master and they were not competent to give consent on behalf of the master.¹³

The accused suggested to a servant of the prosecutrix a plan for the commission of a robbery by the accused at the shop of the prosecutrix. The servant, pretending to agree to the accused's suggestion, lent the keys of the shop to the accused, who made duplicate keys, with one of which, on a day arranged with the servant, the accused unlocked a padlock attached to the outer door and entered the shop where he was arrested. The prosecutrix had been informed by the servant of the accused's plan and knew that he intended to enter the shop on the day in question. The accused was convicted on an indictment which charged him with having broken and entered the shop with intent to steal therein. It was held that the conviction was right, notwithstanding that the prosecutrix knew that the accused had been supplied with the means of breaking and entering by her servant.¹⁴ Removal of official papers without the consent of the official head amounts to theft. A Government tumar (correspondence) in which accused Nos. 2 and 3 were interested, was kept by the Mamlatdar at the house of a clerk. During the absence of the clerk from his house, accused No. 1, the record clerk in the Mamlatdar's office, removed the tumar without anybody's consent. In the company of accused Nos. 2 and 3 he went with it to a neighbouring town to show it to the pleader of accused Nos. 2 and 3 in connection with some proceeding. There accused No. 1 left the tumar with the pleader, and went about the town for some time on his own errand. Later he brought the tumar back and stealthily replaced it from where it was taken. It was afterwards discovered that some papers had disappeared from the tumar, whilst others had either been mutilated or altered. It was held that accused No. 1 was guilty of theft, as he had removed the correspondence without the consent of its custodian, though such removal was temporary, and as his intention in doing so was dishonest; and that accused Nos. 2 and 3 were guilty of abetment of theft.¹⁵

Unauthorised consent.—Possession of wood by a Forest Inspector who is a servant of Government, is possession of the Government itself, and a dishonest removal of it, without payment of the necessary fees, from his possession, albeit with his actual consent, was held to constitute theft, as the consent obtained was unauthorized and fraudulent.¹⁶ Where a licensee who was allowed to remove dead or fallen trees from a Government forest dishonestly cut green trees, and a pass for the removal of the timber was given by the forest authorities under the misconception that it was dead timber, it was held that there was no consent and the licensee was guilty of theft.¹⁷

5. 'Moves that property in order to such taking'.—The least removal of the thing taken from the place where it was before is a sufficient asportation though it be not quite carried off.¹⁸ It is not necessary that the property should have been removed out of its owner's reach or carried away from the place in which it was found. Upon this ground the guest, who having taken off the sheets from his bed with an intent to steal them carried them into the hall, and was apprehended before he could get out of the house, was adjudged guilty of larceny. So also was he, who having taken a horse in a close with intent to steal it, was apprehended before he could get it out of the close. And such was the case of him, who, intending to steal plate, took it out of the trunk wherein it was, and laid it on the floor, but was surprised before he could remove it any further.¹⁹

Explanations 3 and 4 state how 'moving' could be effected in certain cases. Illustrations (b) and (c) elucidate the meaning of Explanation 4.

The offence of theft is completed when there is a dishonest moving of the property, even though the property is not detached from that to which it is secured.²⁰

Cases.—The accused, being in the employ of Government in the Post Office Department, while assisting in the sorting of letters, secreted two letters with the intention of handing them to the delivery peon and sharing with him certain moneys payable upon them. It was held that he was guilty of theft and of attempt to commit ¹³ H. J. Ransom v. Triloki Nath, (1942) 17 Luck. 663.

¹⁴ Chandler, [1913] 1 K. B. 125.

¹⁵ Vallabhram Ganpatram, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1391, 27 Cr. L. J. 689, [1926] AIR (B) 122.

¹⁶ Hanmunta, (1877) 1 Bom. 610.

¹⁷ Maung Ba Chit, (1929) 7 Ran. 821

¹⁸ 2 East P. C. 555.

¹⁹ Ibid., p. 556; Simson, (1864) Kel. 81.

²⁰ Nga Po Hle, (1886) S. J. L. B. 399.

criminal misappropriation of property.²¹ The accused brought a civil suit on the basis of a forged promissory note. The file of the case was sent for by another Court as it was required in connection with a suit pending in that Court. It somehow found its way to the house of an official of that Court. The accused got into the inner verandah of the house and removed the forged promissory note from the file. On being pursued, they tore it to pieces. It was held that they were guilty of an offence of theft and also of an offence under ss. 201 and 511.²²

Where the accused cut the string which fastened a hass (neck ornament) round the complainant's neck, and forced the ends of the hass slightly apart in order to remove the same from the neck with the result that in the struggle that ensued between her and the accused the hass fell from her neck and was found on the bed later on, it was held that there had been sufficient "moving" of the hass to constitute the offence of theft.²³

On suspicion of theft of certain articles from a running goods train, a van on the train, in which four coolies were travelling, was searched. The property missed was not found, but, hidden under a heap of clothing belonging to the four coolies, were discovered pieces of cloth, which on investigation were ascertained to have been abstracted from the next van. It was held that none of the four coolies travelling in the van where the pieces of stolen cloth were found could be convicted of theft of the cloth in the absence of evidence to connect one or more of them individually with the possession of the cloth.²⁴

English cases.—Where the accused lifted up a bag from the bottom of a boot of a coach but was detected before he had got it out, and it did not appear that it was entirely removed from the space it at first occupied in the boot, but the raising it from the bottom had completely removed each part of it from the space that specific part occupied, it was held that this was a complete asportation.²⁵ Where the servant of a tallow-chandler removed fat belonging to his master from the room in which it was kept, to a room where his master was accustomed to buy fat from persons who had it to sell, and placed it on a pair of scales there, with intent to sell it to his master, and appropriate the proceeds to his own use, this was held to be larceny.¹ Pulling wool from the bodies of live sheep and lambs was held to be larceny.² The accused was a letter carrier and it was his duty to deliver letters given to him, and, if from any cause he was unable to deliver them, to bring them back to the post office in his pouch. He did not deliver a letter containing money which had been sorted to him for delivery, nor did he return it to the post office on the completion of his round; but, on being asked for it soon afterwards, he produced it from his pocket, and gave a false excuse for not having delivered it. It was held that there was a sufficient taking to constitute larceny.³ In an indictment for stealing five pints of porter, it appeared that the accused was discovered standing by a barrel of porter, out of a hole in which the porter was running into a can on the ground, and that above five pints had run into the can. It was held that there was sufficient asportation proved of the porter in the can.⁴

Explanations 1 and 2.—The moving by the same act which effects the severance may constitute theft.⁵ Carrying away of trees after felling them is theft,⁶ but mere sale is not.⁷ In the case of growing grass, a moving by the same act which effects its severance from the earth amounts to theft.⁸ Where certain land, on which there was a standing crop of paddy, was entrusted to the accused to take care of and watch till the paddy was ripe when they were to give notice to the factory people who

²¹ Venkatasamy, (1890) 14 Mad. 229. See, to the same effect, Egginton, (1801) 2 East P. C. 666; Poynton's Case, (1862) L. & C. 247.

²² Sheonandan, (1915) 16 Cr. L. J. 791, [1915] AIR (A) 385.

²³ Bhisakhi, (1917) P. R. No. 29 of 191, 718 Cr. L. J. 875.

²⁴ Ali Husain, (1901) 23 All. 306.

²⁵ Walsh's Case, (1924) 1 Mood. 14; Cosell's Case, (1782) 1 Leach 236.

¹ Hall, (1849) 3 Cox 245.

² Martin's Case, (1777) 1 Leach 171.

³ Poynton's Case, (1862) L. & C. 247.

⁴ Wallis, (1848) 3 Cox 67.

⁵ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 36, 1 Weir 383; Jadonath, [1942] O. W. N. 444 (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 646, [1942] AIR (O) 423.

⁶ Bhagu Vishnu, (1897) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 928; Abdul Ali Fakir v. Netali Fakir, (1911) 27 C. L. J. 228, 19 Cr. L. J. 334.

⁷ Balos alias Hussain Sahib, (1882) 1 Weir 419.

⁸ Samsuddin, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 752.

would reap it, it was held that by cutting the crops themselves and disposing of the same, the accused were guilty of theft if not of criminal breach of trust.⁹

Husband and wife.—Hindu law—There is no presumption of law that a husband and wife constitute one person in India for the purpose of criminal law. If the wife, removing her husband's property from his house, does so with dishonest intention, she is guilty of theft.¹⁰ A Hindu woman, who removes from the possession of her husband, and without his consent, her palla or stridhan, cannot be convicted of theft.¹¹ She has absolute power of disposal over it even without the consent of her husband, and no charge of theft can, therefore, be based on any such disposal.¹² So also a husband cannot be convicted of robbing his wife, she being completely under his control. He can be convicted if he steals his wife's stridhan which is her absolute property.

The proposition that everything acquired by a woman during coverture is the property of her husband has no foundation in Hindu law.¹³

Mahomedan law.—It is laid down that a Mahomedan wife may be convicted of stealing from her husband; because under this system of law, there does not exist the same union of interest between husband and wife which exists between an English husband and wife.¹⁴ The same reasoning would apply in the case of a Mahomedan husband.

English law.—There is such a unity of interest between husband and wife that ordinarily the wife cannot steal the goods of the husband, nor can an indifferent person steal the goods of the husband by the delivery on the part of the wife; and if the wife deliver the goods of the husband to an indifferent person, for that person to convert them to his own use, this is no larceny; but if the person to whom the goods are delivered by the wife be an adulterer it is otherwise, and an adulterer can be properly convicted of theft even though they be delivered to him by the wife. If no adultery has actually been committed by the parties, but the goods of the husband are removed from his house by the wife and the intended adulterer, with an intent that the wife should elope with him and live in adultery with him, this taking of the goods is, in point of law, a larceny.¹⁵ But as a husband and wife are one person in law, the wife cannot steal her husband's goods whether she had committed adultery or not.¹⁶ But a person who receives money stolen by a wife from her husband will be punishable for misdemeanour under the Married Women's Property Act.¹⁷ In order to punish the adulterer the goods should be traced in any way to his personal possession.¹⁸

Under ss. 12 and 16 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vic. c. 75) the stealing of her husband's goods by a wife when about to leave or desert him or when living separate from him, is made punishable.

“Necessitas inducit privilegium quo ad jura privata”.—Where a man in extreme want of food or clothing steals either in order to relieve his present necessities, the law allows no such excuse to be considered. See the doctrine of self-preservation discussed at page 161 and of necessity at page 196.

Abetment.—The carrying off of certain buffaloes belonging to the complainant by order of the accused, and the retention of them in the custody of the latter's servant, was held to be abetment of theft.¹⁹ Where it was found that theft was actually committed by certain members of an unlawful assembly, but it was not found that the accused himself committed it by removing any property or that he had made any preparation for committing it or aiding anyone in the commission of it, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section read with s. 114, though he could be under this section read with s. 149.²⁰

⁹ Durga Tewari, (1909) 36 Cal. 758.

¹⁰ Butchi, (1893) 17 Mad. 401.

¹¹ Natha Kalyan, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 11.

¹² Sat Narain, (1930) 53 All. 437.

¹³ Ramasami Padaiyatchi v. Virasami Padaiyatchi, (1867) 3 M. H. C. 272.

¹⁴ Khatabai, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 9.

¹⁵ Toller, (1841) Car. & M. 112; Featherstone,

(1854) 6 Cox 376; Thompson's Case, (1850) 1 Den. Cr. C. 549; John Mutters, (1865) 10 Cox 50.

¹⁶ Kenny, (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 307.

¹⁷ Payne, [1906] 1 K. B. 97.

¹⁸ Rosenberg, (1843) 1 C. & K. 233.

¹⁹ Tarinee Prosaud Banerjee, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 8.

²⁰ Hansa Pathak v. Bansi Lal Das, (1901) 8 C. W. N. 519, 1 Cr. L. J. 449.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question is moveable property.

(2) That such property was in the possession of a person.

(3) That the accused moved such property whilst in the possession of that person.

(4) That he did so without the consent of that person.

(5) That he did so in order to take the same out of the possession of that person.

(6) That he did so with intent to cause wrongful gain to himself or wrongful loss to that person.²¹

It is not sufficient that the property found in the accused's possession was like the one stolen; there must be a finding to the effect that that property was the stolen property.²²

Presumption.—Possession of stolen goods soon after the theft raises the presumption that the possessor is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen.²³ Whether the possession of stolen property is recent enough to warrant a conviction for the substantive offence is a matter entirely for the jury.²⁴ But unexplained possession of non-identifiable matter (such as paddy) alleged to be stolen does not amount to proof of theft.²⁵ In considering whether the possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of dishonest receipt of stolen property, the attention of the jury should be drawn to the necessity of satisfying themselves that the possession is clearly traced to the accused.¹ The question of what is or is not a recent possession of stolen property is to be considered with reference to the nature of the article stolen. Thus, where two ends of woollen cloth in an unfinished state, consisting of about twenty yards each, were lost, and were in the possession of the accused two months after being stolen, and still in the same state, it was held that this was a possession sufficiently recent to call on the accused to show how he came by the property.² Where a stolen buffalo was not traced to the accused until twelve months after the theft, it was held that this was not recent possession which would justify the presumption, in the absence of an explanation as to the manner in which the accused got the buffalo, that the accused stole it.³ Where circumstances are highly suspicious, and the suspicion is not rebutted when rebuttal may be reasonably expected, if the suspicion is wrong, suspicion becomes confirmed and becomes much more than suspicion. Where mere recent possession of stolen property is relied upon to prove theft or dishonest possession, such possession must be exclusive.⁴

Where the evidence of theft is not direct but circumstantial, such evidence must be exhaustive and exclude the possibility of guilt of any other person or must point conclusively to the complicity of the accused.⁵

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily, if property not worth more than Rs. 50.

Venue.—The offence of theft, or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.⁶

Joint trial.—A and B are both charged with a theft, and B is charged with ²¹ Madan, (1882) 1 Weir 411; Ardool Biswas v. Khater Mondal, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 332.

²² Bava Chela, (1886) Cr. R. No. 5 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 227.

²³ Section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act; Motee Jolaha, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 66; Jogeshur Bagdee, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 73 [109]; Shuruffooddeen, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 26; Poromeshur Aheer, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 16; Ramjoy Kurmoker, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 10; Ina Sheikh, (1885) 11 Cal. 160; Ishan Chandra Chandra, (1893) 21 Cal. 328, 336; Kavim, (1879) P. R. No. 19 of 1879; Tahu, (1891) P. R. No. 15 of 1891.

²⁴ Guzzala Hanuman, (1902) 26 Mad. 467.

²⁵ (1873) 7 M. H. C. (Appx.) 19, 1 Weir 427, followed in Royappan, (1894) 1 Weir 420; Sini Tenan, (1886) 1 Weir 429.

¹ Malhari, (1882) 6 Bom. 731; Mataro, (1928) 23 S. L. R. 5, 29 Cr. L. J. 924, [1929] AIR (S) 9.

² Partridge, (1836) 7 C. & P. 551. See Poromeshur Aheer, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 16; T. Burke, (1884) 6 All. 224, 227.

³ Nga Yauk, (1885) S. J. L. B. 366; Narain Singh, (1928) 29 P. L. R. 441, 29 Cr. L. J. 464, [1928] AIR (L) 687; Suchit Ahir, (1930) 12 P. L. T. 350, 32 Cr. L. J. 614.

⁴ Nga Tha Dne, (1896) P. J. L. B. 279.

⁵ Chiraguddin, (1914) 18 C. W. N. 1144, 15 Cr. L. J. 293.

⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 181 (3).

two other thefts committed by him in the course of the same transaction. A and B may both be tried together on a charge charging both with one theft, and B alone with the other two thefts.⁷

Joinder of charges.—Theft and concealing stolen property.—A charge under s. 380 cannot be joined to a charge under s. 414; such joinder, being opposed to s. 233. Criminal Procedure Code, constitutes not merely an irregularity but an illegality.⁸ The Patna High Court has dissented from this decision on the ground that it was decided before the amendment of s. 239, Criminal Procedure Code. It has held that it is not illegal to charge an accused person both under s. 380 and s. 414.⁹

House-breaking and theft.—When offences under ss. 457 and 380 are committed in one transaction, it is very desirable that formal convictions under both sections should be recorded, in order that if the accused subsequently commits another theft technical difficulties may not arise.¹⁰

Theft and receipt of stolen property.—A person committing theft and a person who receives the stolen property may be tried jointly where practicable.¹¹ Where there are several receivers of stolen property this should not be done.¹² Two distinct offences of theft in two separate houses and the alternative charges under s. 411 in respect of each of these transactions cannot be tried at one and the same trial.¹³

Theft and mischief.—See Practice under s. 426.

Conviction for different offences.—A person accused of theft may be convicted of criminal misappropriation, criminal breach of trust, or cheating, and vice versa.¹⁴

It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property.¹⁵

Where the accused has been convicted of theft (s. 379), it is not competent for an appellate Court, while finding the accused not guilty of theft, to modify the conviction into one of abetment of theft.¹⁶

Repetition.—Every repetition of theft is a grave offence when it indicates a habit not cured by previous light punishments.¹⁷ See s. 75, supra.

Single or several thefts.—Removal by one single act of several articles constitutes one offence of theft although the articles belong to different persons.¹⁸

Thefts of different things on different days separated by considerable periods cannot be treated as one theft on the analogy of successive blows constituting one assault.¹⁹

The Central Provinces Rules.—As there appears to be a difference of practice in respect of treating thefts as single or several, if in one transaction things belonging to different owners have been stolen, it is necessary to issue some instructions for the guidance of the Police when registering such cases in the Crime Register or when sending them up for trial and for the guidance of Magistrates when deciding whether a single trial or distinct trials are required. At the same time nothing that is here set out can in any way control the discretion given to Magistrates by s. 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure with regard to the framing of separate charges or the holding of separate trials, whenever it appears appropriate to do so.

If the property, which it was the thief's intention (as shown by the circumstances or by his admission) to take, consisted of a number of contiguous articles, which were

⁷ See ill. (c) to s. 239, ibid.

⁸ Wassanji Dayal, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 725, 1 Cr. L. J. 834, following Nathalal Bapuji, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 433. See also Keshav Krishna, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 361, 1 Cr. L. J. 330; Balabhai Hargovind, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 517, 1 Cr. L. J. 584. See, however, Gulzari Lal, (1902) 24 All. 254.

⁹ Damodar Ram Mahuri, (1929) 11 P. L. T. 481, 31 Cr. L. J. 362, [1929] AIR (P) 660.

¹⁰ Nga Pan Bee, (1908) 2 B. L. T. 19.

¹¹ Bhima, (1916) 38 All. 311; Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Raghulal Brahmim, (1935) 62 Cal. 946.

¹² Balabhai Hargovind, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R.

517, 1 Cr. L. J. 584.

¹³ Boya Lingadu, [1904] 1 M. L. J. 428, (1939) 51 L. W. 321, [1940] M. W. N. 239, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 581, [1940] AIR (M) 509.

¹⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 236, 237.

¹⁵ Sita Ram Rai, (1880) 3 All. 181.

¹⁶ Singaravelu Pillay, (1912) 13 Cr. L. J. 203.

¹⁷ Ram Nhamu, (1886) Cr. R. No. 41 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 296.

¹⁸ Krishna Shahaji, (1879) Cr. R. No. 38 of 1879, Unrep. Cr. C. 927; Sheikh Monerah, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 38; Har Dial, (1905) 6 P. L. R. 503, 2 Cr. L. J. 708.

¹⁹ Becharam Mukharji, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 666, [1944] AIR (C) 224.

reached by one and the same act of trespass or which were the subject of a single enterprise, the moving of each article, in the course of removal of the whole bulk of property, cannot ordinarily be considered to be a distinct theft. The thieving project in such a case was single, although it may have been achieved in detail; and the fact that the spoil taken consisted of several things, whether belonging to the same or the different owners, does not necessarily break up the unity of the transaction.

If, on the other hand, the property taken consisted of a number of articles so distantly or diversely situated as to require a distinct act of trespass or a distinct enterprise for the removal of each, the transaction must ordinarily be held to have been not single but complex, and its achievement to have involved the commission of more than one separate theft.

The following examples will make the distinction clear—

(a) A thief enters a house and removes one by one all the articles of value which he finds there. As all the property is got at by one and the same act of trespass, the theft is single although some of the articles may have belonged to friends of the owner of the house.

(b) A thief goes to a threshing-floor, where the grain of four cultivators is stored, and steals a little from every heap. Unless it is shown that he had distinct designs against the several owners, it is plain that there was but one act of thieving accomplished through one and the same trespass.

(c) A thief snatches from a man's hand a bag containing articles belonging to several persons. The theft thus achieved by a single enterprise is not made multiple by the fact that the things snatched had different owners.

(d) A cattle-lifter drives off a herd of six heads, being the bullocks of half a dozen separate cultivators, which were in charge of a boy. This is a single act of theft, the enterprise being single; and is not six thefts, because there were six owners.

(e) In a crowded public place, a thief picks the pockets of A, B and C in succession. Three thefts have been committed.²⁰

Restoration of stolen property.—The property stolen may be returned to the person from whom it was stolen under s. 517, Criminal Procedure Code, and an innocent purchaser may be compensated for the price paid under s. 519, if any money is found in the possession of the thief. But the property restored should be in existence at the time of the theft. R's cow, having been stolen, the thief after a lapse of a year and a half was convicted. Six months after the theft V innocently purchased the cow, which, while in his possession, had a calf. The Magistrate ordered that the cow and the calf should be delivered up by V to R. It was held that as the calf was not even in embryo at the date of the theft the order to deliver up the calf was illegal.²¹

A difference, however, should be noted when the thing stolen is (a) a negotiable instrument, or (b) a bank-note.

(a) When an instrument, such as a promissory note, has been stolen, the person from whom it was stolen has a good title to it, not only as against the thief, but also as against any person who subsequently becomes the holder, unless such person can prove that the instrument had become negotiable at the time it was stolen, and that he had obtained it bona fide for value without notice of theft.²²

(b) A currency note being in legal view money, the property in it passes by mere delivery, and in the interests of commerce and the security of human dealing nothing short of fraud in taking an instrument payable to bearer will engraft an exception upon the rule.²³ A currency note is a 'legal tender' for the amount expressed therein.²⁴ Property in it passes by mere delivery.²⁵

Title to money which is current coin of the realm passes by mere delivery to a person who receives it in satisfaction of a lawful debt even though the money was obtained by committing the offence of cheating.¹

²⁰ C. P. Cr. C. (1929) No. 16, ss. 6 & 7, pp. 47, 48.

²¹ Vernede, (1886) 10 Mad. 25. See Faiz Ahmad, (1907) P. R. No. 2 of 1908, 7 Cr. L. J. 279, where the owner of a buffalo was held entitled to recover it from an honest purchaser.

²² Bank of Bengal v. Mendes, (1880) 5 Cal. 654.

²³ Goodman v. Harvey, (1836) 4 Ad. & El. 870, followed in The Collector of Salem, (1873) 7 M. H. C. 233, 2 Weir 664.

²⁴ Joggesur Mochi, (1878) 3 Cal. 379.

²⁵ Pandharinath P. Revankar, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 922, 40 Bom. 186.

¹ Baij Nath, (1914) P. R. No. 1 of 1915, 16 Cr. L. J. 460.

Where an accused is acquitted of a charge of theft and the property found with him is not found to be the subject of theft, he is entitled to recover the property; but if the property found with him is the subject of theft, the stolen thing will not be delivered to him, his acquittal being due to the incompleteness of evidence.² Where a person accused of theft is acquitted and claims as his own the property seized from him by the police and alleged to have been stolen, it should be restored to him in the absence of special reasons to the contrary. The question of ownership should in such cases be left to be decided by the civil Court and the Magistrate should not direct the property seized to be handed over to the complainant merely because he considers him to be the owner.³

Sections 379 and 215.—"Though the ulterior object of a thief in committing theft may be to obtain money illegally in the manner contemplated in s. 215,...still he is not less liable to be convicted for the theft as well as for the offence under s. 215,...; but as the fact that the thief has restored the property may well be taken into consideration in punishing him for the theft under s. 379...it is only in very exceptional cases that the punishment for both the theft under s. 379 and the taking an illegal gratification under s. 215...should be allowed to exceed the punishment which could be inflicted for the theft alone, even though s. 71...be taken as inapplicable".⁴

Where a person offers to take any gratification on account of helping a person to recover property stolen from him and, on receipt of the gratification, points out where the stolen property is concealed, he may properly be convicted of theft in the absence of any evidence to show that anyone else had committed theft. If he fails to point out or restore the stolen property, he may properly be convicted of an offence under s. 215.⁵

Where attached properties were removed from the possession of the sureties with whom they were left by an amin and a prosecution under this section was launched, it was held that the complaint of the Court was not necessary for the prosecution.⁶

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed the theft of (specify the thing) by taking it out of the possession of AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 379 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.⁷

Punishment.—Imprisonment only is a legal punishment: fine need not necessarily be inflicted in addition.⁸ Nor can fine be substituted in lieu of imprisonment.⁹ The law does not contemplate that a thief should be more severely punished because he renders the recovery of the stolen property impossible.¹⁰ But a deterrent punishment is necessary when an ornament is stolen from a child, because it so often leads to murder.¹¹ A sentence should never be heavier than is necessary to deter the criminal from committing the offence again.¹² In the case of theft of cattle the fine must be such as to make it clear that cattle-lifting is not profitable.¹³

Railway thefts.—In cases of thefts from a railway train where the Magistrate is once satisfied that the accused has committed the offence, the sentence should be of a deterrent nature.¹⁴ In the case of railway employees the sentence should be deterrent.¹⁵

As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

² Rasul Khan, (1926) 44 C. L. J. 205, 28 Cr. L. J. 59, [1927] AIR (C) 61.

³ Karuppanan Ambalan v. Guruswami Pillai, (1933) 56 Mad. 651.

⁴ Per Aston, J. C., in Nga Tun Byu, (1896) P. J. L. B. 226, 229.

⁵ Nga Ok Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 449.

⁶ Ponnusami Padayachi, [1941] M. W. N. 675, (1940) 54 L. W. 248, 43 Cr. L. J. 438.

⁷ Vide (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 37.

⁸ Savi, (1897) Cr. R. No. 7 of 1897, Unrep. Cr. C. 893.

⁹ Sheikh Dulloo v. Zainah Bebee, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 17.

¹⁰ Nga Aung So, (1900) P. J. L. B. 633.

¹¹ Syed Khader Sahib, [1930] M. W. N. 173.

¹² Po Nyin, (1917) 9 L. B. R. 167, 19 Cr. L. J. 655.

¹³ Miro Ghulam Hussain, [1940] Kar. 88, 90.

¹⁴ Ananda Laxman Babaji, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 504, 13 Cr. L. J. 531.

¹⁵ Ali Bakhsh, (1941) 43 P. L. R. 420, 42 Cr. L. J. 823, [1941] AIR (L) 312.

Whipping.—An attempt to commit theft is not punishable with whipping and a conviction first of an attempt to commit theft, and then of an effected theft, will not justify a double sentence of imprisonment and whipping.¹⁶

380. Whoever commits theft in any building,¹ tent or vessel,² which building, tent or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or used for the custody of property,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

Object.—The object of the section is to give greater security only to property deposited in a house so as to be under the protection of the house and not to property about the person of the party from whom it is stolen. Theft from a person in a dwelling house is, therefore, simple theft under s. 379.¹⁷

Scope.—There is nothing in the section which prevents a person from being convicted under this section for a theft committed by him in his own house. It might at first seem that it was the intention of the Legislature to protect property by this section, not from the owner of the house but from others. The section is nearly identical with s. 60 of 24 & 25 Vic., c. 96, and it has been repeatedly held in England that the essential point in the offence of theft in a building is that the property should be under the protection of the building, and that the offence may be committed by the owner of the building or other person who has lawful access to the building.¹⁸

1. 'In any building'.—The term 'building' means a permanent edifice of some kind. Theft should, under this section, have been committed in any such building.¹⁹ The expression "building", more especially having regard to the expressions "tent" and "vessel" that follow, must be regarded as identical indicating some structure intended for affording some sort of protection to the persons dwelling inside it or for the property placed there for custody. Any structure which does not afford any such protection by itself but merely serves as a fencing or other means of merely preventing ingress or egress cannot make the place a building.²⁰ "What is a building must always be a question of degree and circumstances, and it is therefore impossible to lay down a general definition. In *Moir v. William*²¹ Esher, M.R., said 'the ordinary and usual meaning of a building is a block of brick or stonework covered by a roof.' If an open place of land is surrounded by a wall it would probably be impossible to call it a building. In Indian houses generally there is a courtyard which is not covered. It may be a matter of some difficulty in such cases to say that when a man commits criminal trespass and enters the courtyard of the house, he is not guilty of 'house-trespass.' Moreover there may be cases where a man may be living in a house the roof of which has fallen down, but he has put up some sort of a shelter inside within the boundaries. In such cases too it may be difficult to say that the man has not been guilty of 'house-trespass' simply because the roof of the house has fallen down. . . it would depend upon the facts of each case whether the trespass has been committed of a 'building' used for human dwelling so as to come within the definition of the word 'house-trespass.'²²

Theft from a verandah,²³ or the roof of a house,²⁴ or a brake-van,²⁵ or a railway carriage,¹ is not theft in a building. But, where the accused stole some luggage and cash from a railway carriage, when it was at a railway station, it was held that though the railway carriage was not a building, the railway station was, and that the accused had committed an offence under this section.² An entrance half surrounded by a wall

¹⁶ Abdul Masjid, (1885) S. J. L. B. 338.

¹⁷ Tandi Ram, (1876) P. R. No. 14 of 1876.

¹⁸ Nga Pan E, (1885) S. J. L. B. 367.

¹⁹ Kashinath Bhaushet, (1871) Cr. R. Sep. 1871, Unrep. Cr. C. 56.

²⁰ Lakshmana Goundan, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 248, 52 M. L. J. 143, [1927] AIR (M) 343.

²¹ [1892] 1 Q. B. 264.

²² Per Malik, J., in Mak Khan, [1945] All. 558, 564.

²³ (1870) 1 Weir 435; contra, Jabar, (1880) P.

R. No. 1 of 1881.

²⁴ (1866) 1 Weir 435. This decision is not sound. Entry into a building is not necessary according to this section. Theft from a building comes within the purview of the section.

²⁵ (1880) 1 Weir 436.

¹ Ali Hussain, (1901) 23 All. 306; (1880) 1 Weir 436.

² Sheikh Saheb, (1886) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 293.

in which there are two door-ways, but without doors, which is used for custody of property, is a building.³ A court-yard⁴ is, but a compound⁵ or a cattle-pound, being an open plot of land with a boundary fence,⁶ is not a building.

Where the accused entered the dwelling house of the complainant and in his presence dishonestly took away certain property, in spite of his remonstrances,⁷ where some constables employed to guard a house took away some property from the house;⁸ where a carter removed from the godown of a railway company a bag filled with pilferings from a number of bags consigned to others;⁹ and where a person while inspecting the record of a case removed from it a document with the intention of substituting another fabricated by him in its place and was caught before he was able to substitute the one fabricated by him,¹⁰ it was held that an offence under this section was committed.

Where the owner of a buffalo, which was impounded in an open plot with a mere boundary fence, rescued it after opening a door of the pound by slipping the chain over the lock, it was held that he had committed an offence under ss. 378 and 441, but that he could not be convicted either under this section or s. 454.¹¹

English cases.—The goods of a lodger's guest are under the protection of the dwelling house. Where, therefore, a lodger invited a man to his room, and then stole his goods to the value of forty shillings, when not about his person, he was held guilty of stealing in a dwelling house.¹² A man went to bed with a prostitute, having put his watch in his hat on a table; and she stole the watch while he was asleep. It was held that the offence was that of stealing in a dwelling house.¹³

2. 'Vessel'.—See s. 48, supra.

3. 'Used for the custody of property'.—The accused induced the complainant to deposit her moneys in two banks and her ornaments in a third bank and contrived to get accounts opened in their joint names. He subsequently withdrew the money and the ornaments from the banks on various dates without the complainant's knowledge. The accused was prosecuted under this section. It was held that this section did not apply as the money was not in the possession of the complainant but was in the possession of the bank and was taken with the bank's consent.¹⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (6) as those for s. 379, and further—

(7) That such property was at the time of the theft in a building, tent, or vessel. All that is necessary is that the property should be under the protection of the building, it is not necessary to show unlawful entrance into the building.¹⁵

(8) That such building, tent, or vessel, was then being used as a human dwelling, or for the custody of property.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily if the property is not worth more than Rs. 50.

Joinder of charges under ss. 380 and 411.—Offences under this section and s. 411 are not of the same kind. They are not even punishable with the same maximum term of imprisonment. So the charging of one or more persons of offences under this section and s. 411 would amount to a misjoinder of charges.¹⁶

Separate sentences.—Separate consecutive sentences under s. 457 and this section cannot be passed.¹⁷

³ Dad, (1878) P. R. No. 10 of 1879.

⁴ Shera, (1879) P. R. No. 35 of 1879; Ghulam Jelani, (1889) P. R. No. 16 of 1889; Surja, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 224.

⁵ Rama, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 484; Munshi, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 855, 29 Cr. L. J. 766, [1928] AIR (A) 607.

⁶ Lakshmana Goundan, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 248, 52 M. L. J. 143, [1927] AIR (M) 343.

⁷ Kashinath Bhaushet, (1871) Cr. R. Sep. 1871, Unrep. Cr. C. 56.

⁸ Baidnath Singh, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 29.

⁹ Soukhi Chand Sao, (1917) 3 P. L. J. 354, 19 Cr. L. J. 884, [1918] AIR (P) 314.

¹⁰ Radha Kishan, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 95, 26 Cr. L. J. 847.

¹¹ Lakshmana Goundan, (1926) 52 M. L. J. 143, 28 Cr. L. J. 248, [1927] AIR (M) 343.

¹² Taylor's Case, (1820) Russ. & Ry. 418.

¹³ Hamilton, (1837) 8 C. & P. 49.

¹⁴ Becharam Mukherji, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 666, [1944] AIR (C) 666.

¹⁵ Ishree Persaud, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

¹⁶ Chinnappa Chetty, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 686, [1942] M. W. N. 726, (1942) 44 Cr. L. J. 413, [1943] AIR (M) 209.

¹⁷ Khair Jama Khan, (1980) 31 Cr. L. J. 492, [1930] AIR (P) 385.

Whipping.—In a case of an offence under this section, a Magistrate has two alternatives before him. He may send an offender to prison or, in lieu thereof, he may either cause him to be whipped or send him to Borstal; but the power to order a person to be whipped is only in lieu of another punishment under the Code and once an order of detention in Borstal has been passed there is no power to alter this order to a sentence of whipping. Where a Magistrate has ordered detention in Borstal School of an offender, the Sessions Judge has no power to substitute for it a sentence of whipping as that would be enhancing the sentence.¹⁸

So far as the punishment of whipping is concerned, the offence under this section is held to be a distinct offence from that of theft under s. 378, and is not included under it.¹⁹ An offender in a case of theft under this section can be sentenced to whipping but only in lieu of the punishment of imprisonment or fine to which he is liable under the Code.²⁰ Sentence of whipping passed for the offence under this section read with s. 109 is not legal.²¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed in a building (or tent, or vessel) used as a human dwelling (or for the custody of property) the theft of (specify the thing), belonging to AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 380 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.²²

381. Whoever being a clerk or servant,¹ or being employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, commits theft in respect of any property in the possession of his master or employer, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Theft by clerk or servant of property in possession of master.

COMMENT.

This section provides for a severe punishment when a clerk or a servant has committed theft because he has greater opportunities of committing this offence owing to the confidence reposed in him. When the possession is with the master this section applies; when it is with the servant, s. 408 comes into operation.

1. 'Clerk or servant'.—A clerk or servant is a person bound either by an express contract of service or by conduct implying such a contract to obey the orders and submit to the control of his master in the transaction of the business which it is his duty as such clerk or servant to transact.²³ "What is a test as to the relationship of master and servant? A test used in many cases is, to ascertain whether the prisoner was bound to obey the orders of his employer so as to be under his employer's control... it is not necessary that there should be a payment by salary—for commission will do—nor that the whole time should be employed, nor that the employment should be permanent,—for it may be only occasional, or in a single instance—if, at the time, the prisoner is engaged as a servant."²⁴ "The test is very much this, viz. whether the person charged is under the control and bound to obey the orders of his master. He may be so without being bound to devote his whole time to this service; but if bound to devote his whole time to it, that would be very strong evidence of his being under control."²⁵ The allowance of a portion of the profits or goods does not destroy the relation of master and servant.¹ It is necessary that the objects of the service of a ¹⁸ Kyaw Aye, [1939] Ran. 744.

¹⁹ Changia, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 68; contra, Jeevan v. Boodha, (1867) P. R. No. 51 of 1867.

²⁰ Shin Narain, (1939) 14 Luck. 634.

²¹ Venappa, (1937) 38 Cr. L. J. 1013, [1927] AIR (R) 310.

²² (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 8.

²³ Stephen's Dig. of Crim. Law, Art. 335;

Sohan Lal, (1905) P. R. No. 50 of 1905, 3 Cr. L. J. 70.

²⁴ Per Bovill, C. J., in Negus, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 34, 36; Winnall, (1851) 5 Cox 326; Pyo Gyi, (1919) 10 L. B. R. 31, 20 Cr. L. J. 513, [1919] AIR (LB) 60.

²⁵ Per Blackburn, J., in Negus, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 34, 37.

¹ Lall Chand Roy, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 37.

'clerk or servant' should not be criminal but a man may be such a clerk or servant although the objects of his service are in part illegal as being contrary to public policy.²

CASES.

Clerk.—Where the clerk of a toll-contractor illegally levied toll on carts laden when leaving a town, and prevented the carts from passing through the toll-gate, unless the toll demanded was paid, he was held guilty of this offence.³

Servant.—Where some policemen stole a sum of money shut up in a box and placed in the Police Treasury building, over which they were mounting guard as sentinels, they were held guilty of an offence under this section and not under s. 409.⁴ Where a person engaged to cart tamarind fruits from a forest abstracted a portion of it, it was held that he was not the less a servant because his employment was temporary.⁵ But a hired boatman is not a servant,⁶ though an unpaid apprentice is.⁷

English cases.—The following persons were held to be clerks or servants.—An apprentice under the age of eighteen;⁸ a person paid for his services by a commission or share in the profits;⁹ a person who was occasionally employed;¹⁰ a person who was not a general servant but employed for a particular purpose;¹¹ a person employed by different persons at the same time for different purposes;¹² a person acting as a clerk or servant though not expressly appointed as such¹³ and a director of a company.¹⁴

The accused, a servant of B, a horse-dealer, was sent by him to the prosecutor to deliver a horse. The prosecutor asked the accused to sell a pony for him to C for £5 and not less. The accused took the pony to another person, sold it for £3 and absconded with the money. It was held that the pony was in the custody of the accused in the character of a servant to the prosecutor, and that it was not in his possession as bailee, and that he was therefore guilty of larceny.¹⁵

The following persons were held to be not clerks or servants.—The driver of a coach hired for the day of the party hiring;¹⁶ the person employed to collect the sacrament money from the communicants of the ministers to church wardens;¹⁷ a person requested to receive money in a single instance only;¹⁸ a person employed to solicit orders for a particular person only but at liberty to apply for orders whenever he thought most convenient and to be paid by commission;¹⁹ a person employed to get the orders for goods, and to receive payment for them, but who was at liberty to get the orders and receive the money where and when he thought proper and was to be paid by a commission on the goods sold;²⁰ the treasurer of a friendly society who received no payment for filling the office;²¹ an accountant and a debt-collector engaged by the complainant to collect debts on terms of receiving five per cent. on the amount collected;²² and a member of a committee appointed to conduct an excursion and who received no remuneration for his services.²³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points 1 to 6 as those for s. 379, and further—

(7) That the accused was at the time a clerk or servant, and was employed in such capacity by the person in whose possession the stolen property was.

² Stainer, (1870) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 230.

³ B. Appalasami, (1892) 1 Weir 441.

⁴ Juggurnath Singh, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 55;
Baidnath Singh, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 29.

⁵ (1881) 1 Weir 437.

⁶ Rawool Manjez, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 32.

⁷ Sohan Lall, (1905) P. R. No. 50 of 1905, 3 Cr. L. J. 70.

⁸ Mellish's Case, (1805) Russ. & Ry. 80.

⁹ Donald McDonald, (1861) 9 Cox 10;
Hartley's Case, (1807) Russ. & Ry. 139; Carr's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 198; May, (1860) 8 Cox 421; Turner, (1870) 11 Cox 551.

¹⁰ Spencer's Case, (1815) Russ. & Ry. 299;
Thomas, (1852) 6 Cox 403.

¹¹ Hugh's Case, (1832) 1 Mood. 370; Winnall, (1851) 5 Cox 326.

¹² Batty's Case, (1824, 2 Mood. 257; Tite's

Case, (1861) L. & C. 29; Carr's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 198.

¹³ Foulkes, (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 150.

¹⁴ Stuart, [1894] 1 Q. B. 310.

¹⁵ Stanbury, (1847) 2 Cox 272.

¹⁶ Haydon, (1836) 7 C. & P. 445.

¹⁷ Burton's Case, (1829) 1 Mood. 237.

¹⁸ Nettleton's Case, (1830) 1 Mood. 259.

¹⁹ Negus, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 34.

²⁰ Bowers, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 41. See Bailey, (1871) 12 Cox 56, where the accused was to get remuneration by commission but was bound to give the whole of his time and it was held that he was a servant.

²¹ Tyree, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 177.

²² James Hall, (1875) 13 Cox 49.

²³ Bren, (1863) 9 Cox 398.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily if the property is not worth more than Rs. 50.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being a servant [or clerk or employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant] of AB, committed theft by stealing property, to wit—, in the possession of the said AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 381 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.²⁴

382. Whoever commits theft, having made preparation for causing death, or hurt, or restraint, or fear of death, or of hurt, or of restraint, to any person, in order to the committing of such theft, or in order to the effecting of his escape after the committing of such theft, or in order to the retaining of property taken by such theft, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Theft after preparation made for causing death, hurt or restraint in order to the committing of the theft.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A commits theft on property in Z's possession; and, while committing this theft, he has a loaded pistol under his garment having provided this pistol for the purpose of hurting Z in case Z should resist. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A picks Z's pocket, having posted several of his companions near him, in order that they may restrain Z, if Z should perceive what is passing and should resist, or should attempt to apprehend A. A has committed the offence defined in this section,

COMMENT.

The possession by a thief at the time of his committing a theft of a knife or other weapon, which, if used on a human being might cause death or hurt, would not of itself justify a conviction under the section. There must be something to show or from which it may properly be inferred, that the offender made preparation for causing one or more of the results mentioned in the section.²⁵

If hurt is actually caused when a theft is committed, the offence is punishable as robbery, and not under this section.¹ In robbery there is always injury. In offences under this section the thief is full of preparation to cause hurt, but he may not cause it. A stole some rice from a house. While carrying it away he was seized by B. He thereupon dropped the rice and then stabbed B with a knife. He was convicted of voluntarily causing hurt while committing robbery under s. 394. It was held that as A dropped the rice before stabbing B, he could not have caused the hurt for the purpose of carrying away the rice, and the offence was therefore not robbery, but one under this section and s. 324.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (6) as those for s. 379; and further—

(7) That the accused, when committing such theft, made preparation for causing death, hurt, or restraint, or fear of death, hurt or restraint.

(8) That he did as above in order (a) to the committing of such theft, or (b) to effect his escape after having committed such theft, or (c) to retain property taken by such theft.

²⁴ (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 15.

²⁵ Per Fox, J., in Nga Shan Gale, (1903) 10 Burma L. R. 87, 89, 1 Cr. L. J. 378, 379.

¹ Hushrut Sheikh, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 85.

² Nga Paing alias Kya Byu, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 147, 7 Cr. L. J. 446.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed theft of (specify the article) the property of AB, after having made preparation for causing death [or hurt or restraint] by (specify the mode of preparation made) in order to the committing of the said theft, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 382 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to crimes on the Frontier, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901). As to enhanced punishment in the case of a criminal tribe, gang, or class, see the Criminal Tribes Act, 1897, s. 6. As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, 1898, s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

Of Extortion.

383. Whoever intentionally puts any person in fear of any injury to that person, or to any other,¹ and thereby dishonestly induces the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security² or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security,³ commits “extortion.”

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A threatens to publish a defamatory libel concerning Z unless Z gives him money. He thus induces Z to give him money. A has committed extortion.

(b) A threatens Z that he will keep Z's child in wrongful confinement, unless Z will sign and deliver to A a promissory note binding Z to pay certain monies to A. Z signs and delivers the note. A has committed extortion.

(c) A threatens to send club-men to plough up Z's field unless Z will sign and deliver to B a bond binding Z under a penalty to deliver certain produce to B, and thereby induces Z to sign and deliver the bond. A has committed extortion.

(d) A, by putting Z in fear of grievous hurt, dishonestly induces Z to sign or affix his seal to a blank paper and deliver it to A. Z signs and delivers the paper to A. Here, as the paper so signed may be converted into a valuable security, A has committed extortion.

384. Whoever commits extortion shall be punished with imprisonment for either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This offence occupies a middle place between theft and robbery.

Theft and extortion.—Extortion is distinguished from theft by the obvious circumstance that the consent is obtained by putting the person in possession of property in fear of injury to him or to any other. The offence is carried out by overpowering the will of the owner.³ In theft the offender's intention is always to take without that person's consent. Besides, the property which is obtained by extortion is not limited, as in theft, to movable property only. As the word ‘movable’ is omitted in the definition, immovable property may be the subject of extortion.

Ingredients.—The ingredients of extortion are:—

1. Intentionally putting a person in fear of injury to himself or another.

³ Meqjan, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

2. Dishonestly inducing the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security.

1. 'Puts any person in fear of any injury to that person, or to any other'.—The injury may be intended to the person put in fear, or to any other. No tie of relationship is necessary between that person and the person put in fear. The word 'injury' is defined in s. 44, supra. The injury contemplated must be one which the accused himself can inflict or cause to be inflicted, and a threat of divine punishment is not such.⁴ No injury can be caused or threatened to be caused unless the act done is either an offence or such as may properly be made the basis of a civil action.⁵

Extortion as defined in s. 383 includes putting any person in fear of injury and covers s. 385, which is a less serious offence punishable with two years' imprisonment as against three years' imprisonment for an offence under s. 384.⁶

The Law Commissioners observe: "We conceive that it will be a question for the Court whether the injury threatened was such as was likely to produce the effect intended, and whether under the circumstances the party was really put in fear, believing the injury to be inevitable if he did not comply."⁷

The age, sex and situation of the person threatened may properly be taken into consideration. To constitute the offence it seems necessary that the person threatened should be actually put in fear; upon the whole of the facts, however, if there is reason enough to say that similar circumstances would ordinarily excite fear in persons of the same age, etc., as the person threatened, the Court will not too easily listen to suggestions or evidence adduced to show that the passion of fear was not in truth aroused. Nor, on the other hand, considering that the proof that he was put in fear will often mainly be the evidence of the person threatened, and that exaggerated, if not false, versions of the occurrence are not improbable, should the charge of extortion be considered as established without a cautious investigation.⁸

The 'fear' must be of such a nature and extent as to unsettle the mind of the person on whom it operates, and takes away from his acts that element of free, voluntary action which alone constitutes consent. Where the threats are not necessarily of a character to excite such alarm, it becomes a question for the jury whether they were made under such circumstances of intimidation as to have that effect.⁹ Thus, threatening to expose a clergyman, who had had criminal intercourse with a woman in a house of ill-fame, in his own church and village, to his own bishop, and to the archbishop; and also to publish his shame in the newspaper was held to be such a threat as a man of ordinary firmness could not be expected to resist.¹⁰

In The Queen v. Tomlinson,¹¹ Wills J., said: "With regard to the doctrine that the threat must be of a nature to operate on a man of reasonably sound or ordinarily firm mind, I only desire to say that it ought, in my judgment, to receive a liberal construction in practice; otherwise great injustice may be done, for persons who are thus practised upon are not as a rule of average firmness; but I quite appreciate the fact that the threat must not be one that ought to influence nobody." The rule, that a threat is not of a criminal character, unless it be such as may overcome the ordinary free will of a firm man, has reference to the general nature of the evil threatened, and not to the probable effect of the threat on the mind of the particular party addressed.¹²

Threat of criminal accusation.—The terror of a criminal charge, whether true or false, amounts to a fear of injury.¹³ The guilt or innocence of the party threatened is immaterial. Therefore, although the prosecutor may be cross-examined with a view to show that he is really guilty of the offence imputed to him, yet no evidence will be allowed to be given, even in cross-examination, by another witness, to prove that the prosecutor is really guilty.¹⁴ But it is material in considering the question whether, under the circumstances of the case, the intention of the accused was to extort money, or merely to compound a felony.¹⁵

⁴ Doraswamy Ayyar, (1924) 48 Mad. 774; Tanumal, [1944] Kar. 146.

⁵ Tanumal, [1944] Kar. 146.

⁶ Mansharam Gianchand, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 460, [1941] AIR (S) 86.

⁷ First Report, s. 517, p. 306.

⁸ M. & M. 844.

⁹ Walton, (1863) 9 Cox. 268.

¹⁰ (1844) 1 Cox 22.

¹¹ [1895] 1 Q. B. 706, 710.

¹² Smith's Case, (1849) 1 Den. Cr. C. 510.

¹³ Mobarruk, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 28; James Gardner, (1824) 1 C. & P. 479.

¹⁴ Horatio Cracknell, (1866) 10 Cox 498.

¹⁵ Richards, (1868) 11 Cox 43.

Extortion may be committed even though the threat may be to accuse a person of misconduct not amounting to an offence against the criminal law.¹⁶ Even the threat need not be a threat to accuse before a judicial tribunal: a threat to charge before any third person is enough.¹⁷

Though to threaten to use the process of the law is perfectly lawful, to do so for the purpose of enforcing payment of more than is due is illegal, and such a threat made with such an object is a threat of injury sufficient to constitute extortion. Where, therefore, the accused, whose goat had been injured by the complainant, demanded of her a sum in excess of his value, and by threatening to prosecute her, succeeded in obtaining payment of that amount, it was held that the accused was rightly convicted of the offence of extortion and the fact that the offence with which the complainant was liable to be charged was compoundable could make no difference in respect of his criminal liability.¹⁸

2. 'Dishonestly induces the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security'.—The element of dishonesty is the essence of this offence.¹⁹

Delivery by the person put in fear is essential. Where a person through fear offers no resistance to the carrying off of his property, but does not deliver any of the property to those who carry it off, the offence committed is robbery and not extortion.²⁰

An intent to extort money may be implied from circumstances, and does not require an express demand of money. But, if it appear that the object is to compel the delivery of accounts of moneys honestly believed to be due and owing, there is no evidence of the intent.²¹ Where the accused forcibly removed certain property from the possession of the complainant claiming that the same belonged to himself and placed it in trust with a shop-keeper, and it appeared that there was some evidence to show that the property did in fact belong to the accused it was clear that the accused had no dishonest intention in removing the property, and no offence under this section was established against him.²²

'To any person'.—It is not necessary that the threat should be used, and the property received, by one and the same individual. It may be a matter of arrangement between several persons that the threat should be used by some, and the property received by others; and they all will be guilty of extortion.²³

'Valuable security' is defined in s. 30, supra. There is no distinction between an unstamped or an unregistered document and a document executed by a minor. In both cases the document purports to be a document whereby a legal right is created or a person acknowledges that he lies under a legal disability. Where a minor boy was forced to execute a handnote, it was held that it amounted to a valuable security within the meaning of this section read with s. 30.²⁴

The forcible taking of the victim's thumb impressions on a blank piece of paper which can be converted into a valuable security does not necessarily involve inducing the victim to deliver papers with the thumb impressions. Hence, where the victim is assaulted by the accused and his thumb impression forcibly taken upon a blank piece of paper, the offence of extortion cannot be said to have been established. The offence is no more than the use of criminal force or an assault punishable under s. 352.²⁵

3. 'Anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security'.—These words denote that incomplete deeds may be the subject of extortion under this expression. For instance, A signs his name to a blank paper or to a promissory note in which date, sums, etc., are not filled up; or A having caused a deed or a bond to be prepared, has signed and sealed it, but has not yet delivered it as his deed, this act of delivery being that which gives full legal effect and operation to the instru-

¹⁶ Tomlinson, [1895] 1 Q. B. 706.

¹⁷ Robinson, (1837) 2 Mood. & Rob. 14.

¹⁸ Sakireddi Appalasami, (1895) 1 Weir 441;

Nga Kan Tha, (1912) 14 Cr. L. J. 413.

¹⁹ Padati Chenchu Reddi, (1882) 1 Weir 440.

²⁰ Duleelooddeen Sheikh, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 19.

²¹ Coghlan, (1865) 4 F. & F. 316; Ganeshmal Sait, [1948] M. W. N. 361.

²² Ujagar Singh, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 794, 26 P. L. R. 97.

²³ Shankar Bhagwat, (1866) 2 B. H. C. 394, 395.

²⁴ Ramnarain Sahu, (1933) 15 P. L. T. 66, 35 Cr. L. J. 123.

²⁵ Jadunandan Singh, (1940) 21 P. L. T. 970, 42 Cr. L. J. 361, [1941] AIR (P) 129.

ment. In each of these cases the blank paper and the incomplete deed are subjects of extortion.¹

CASES.

Threat of loss of appointment.—The making use of real or supposed influence to obtain money from a person against his will under threat, in case of refusal, of loss of an appointment, amounts to extortion.²

Money extorted by threat of wrongful confinement.—The accused arrested one J., wrongfully confined him, and extorted from him Rs. 200 under a threat that he would not be relieved unless the money were paid. This money was paid by P, a money-lender, who lent it to J. It was held that the accused was guilty under s. 384, but P could not be regarded as an accomplice.³

Where a policeman, late at night, met the prosecutor, who had just parted from a female in a street, to whom he had been talking, and told him that he had been talking to a prostitute, and that he must go with him to the Bridewell and that the prosecutor was under a penalty of £.1 for talking to a prostitute in the street, and if the prosecutor would give him 5s. he might go about his business, it was held that this amounted to extortion.⁴ A acted as auctioneer at a mock auction. A knocked down some cloth for 26s. to B, who had not bid for it, as A knew. B refused to take the cloth or to pay for it; A refused to allow her to leave the room unless she paid. Ultimately, she paid the 26s. to A, and took the cloth. She paid 26s. because she was afraid. It was held that A was guilty of larceny.⁵ Under the Code this would be extortion.

Threat of incendiarism.—A letter written to a banker, stating that it was intended by a cracksmen to burn his books and cause his bank to stop, and that, if £.250 were put in a certain place, the writer of the letter would prevent the mischief, but if the money was not put there, it would happen, was held to be a letter demanding money by threat.⁶

Threat of criminal charge.—Where the accused threatened A's father that he would accuse A of having committed an abominable offence upon a mare, for the purpose of putting off the mare and forcing the father, under terror of the threatened charge, to buy and pay for her at the accused's price, it was held that the accused was guilty of extortion.⁷

Threat of divine displeasure.—The applicant, a contractor, wrote a post-card to the widow of one K demanding balance of ten rupees due to him for work executed in K's lifetime saying that if it was not paid through Court it would be recovered from her husband in the next world. He was prosecuted on the charge of attempting to enforce payment from the widow by threats of divine displeasure, if payment was not made. It was held that the accused was not guilty of extortion under s. 385.⁸

Money extorted by frightening person.—The prosecutrix gave L, a travelling grinder, six knives to grind for her, the ordinary charge for grinding which would be 1s. 3d. L ground the knives, and then demanded with threats 5s. 6d. as his charge from the prosecutrix. The prosecutrix, being thus frightened, in consequence of her fears, paid L the sum demanded. It was held that this was obtaining money by threat.⁹ Where some vaccinators threatened to cause pain to children while taking lymph from their arms unless they received some money, it was held that they were guilty of this offence.¹⁰

Illegal exaction of money.—A cloth-seller was threatened with the imposition of a fine if he continued to sell foreign cloth. He continued to sell such cloth, and, to enforce payment of the fine, his shop was picketed for two hours and he lost a certain amount of business and ultimately paid the fine. It was held that the person responsible for the picketing, who had been convicted under s. 385, was rightly convicted, and

¹ M. & M. 346.

² Meer Abbas Ali v. Omad Ali, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 17.

³ Akhoy Kumar Chuckerbutty v. Jagat Chunder Chuckerbutty, (1900) 27 Cal. 925.

⁴ James Robertson (1864) 13 Cox 9.

⁵ McGrath, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 205.

⁶ Smith, (1849) 2 C. & K. 882.

⁷ Redman, (1865) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 12.

⁸ Tanumal, [1944] Kar. 146.

⁹ Lovell, (1881) 8 Q. B. D. 185.

¹⁰ Hari Har, (1886) 1 C. P. L. R. 24.

might very well have been convicted under this section.¹¹ Where a person, without any right, took away cattle belonging to another and declined to release them until he was paid a certain sum and it was on receipt of that sum that he released them, it was held that he was guilty of extortion.¹² A village chaukidar arrested one A who was stealing a few wisps of sarson stalks outside his circle and after detaining him for the whole night released him upon payment of a bribe of ten rupees for forbearing to report to the police. It was held that he was guilty under this section.¹³ Where a police-officer arrested certain persons, refused to accept bail, threatened that they would not be released from lock-up until they paid a certain amount of money and released them only on payment of the money, it was held that the officer was guilty of extortion.¹⁴

No extortion.—The mere issue of an order to collect statistical information by a police-officer;¹⁵ a refusal to allow people to carry away firewood collected in a Government forest without payment of proper fees;¹⁶ a payment taken from the owners of trespassing cattle under the influence of a threat that the cattle would be impounded if the payment were refused;¹⁷ and a bond obtained under the threat of refusing service as Vakil,¹⁸ were held not to constitute extortion. Instituting a false criminal complaint against a debtor in order to bring pressure on him to pay his debt is not an attempt to commit the offence of extortion under this section read with s. 109, except where the debt is not legally due or recoverable, e.g. where it has been discharged by the Debt Conciliation Board.¹⁹

A nikah khawan is not bound to read a nikah for a person unless he chooses to do so, and it is no offence for him to demand any fee he likes for doing so.²⁰

Money extorted by picketer.—Where the charge against the accused was that he put the complainant in fear of picketing, that is, that he threatened to request third persons in a peaceable manner to abstain from doing what they were legally entitled to abstain from doing and it was not alleged that the accused proposed illegally to coerce third persons to abstain from drinking and where the complainant was induced to pay the accused a certain amount to abstain from picketing, it was held that the accused was not guilty of extortion.²¹

Mere presence is not abetment.—The mere fact that the offence of extortion is committed in the presence of a village watchman, without eliciting any disapproval on his part, does not render him liable as an abettor of the offence.²²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused put the complainant in fear of some injury.

- (2) That such injury was either to the complainant or to some other person.
- (3) That the accused did so intentionally.
- (4) That he thereby induced the person so put in fear to deliver to some person some property or valuable security, or something signed or sealed, which was convertible into a valuable security.
- (5) That the accused acted dishonestly in doing as above.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Where it is doubtful whether property is obtained by fraudulent inducement or by putting in fear of injury, the accused can be punished either for extortion or for cheating.²³

Place of trial.—See ill. (c) to s. 179, Criminal Procedure Code.

¹¹ Chaturbhuj, (1922) 45 All. 187; Local Government v. Nanmant Rao, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 60, [1924] AIR (N) 19.

¹² Habib-ul-Razaq, (1923) 46 All. 81.

¹³ Bhagwan Din, (1929) 52 All. 203.

¹⁴ Jagdish Narain, [1941] O. W. N. 1255, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 139, [1942] AIR (O) 163.

¹⁵ Meayyan, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

¹⁶ Abdul Kadar, (1866) 3 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 45.

¹⁷ (1880) 1 Weir 438; Pethiredla Virappa, (1883) 1 Weir 440.

¹⁸ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 14, 1 Weir 438.

¹⁹ Bhai Lal Chand, (1942) 44 P. L. R. 429, 43 Cr. L. J. 849, [1942] AIR (L) 253.

²⁰ Nizam Din, (1923) 4 Lah. 179.

²¹ Bartam Jagga Rao, [1940] P. W. N. 194.

²² Gopal Chunder Sirdar, (1882) 8 Cal. 728.

²³ Ramnarin Chowkeedar, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 32.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed extortion by putting AB in fear of a certain injury, to wit——, and thereby dishonestly induced the said AB to deliver to you a certain property, to wit——; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 383 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—For enhanced punishment in the case of members of a tribe, gang or class, see the Criminal Tribes Act (II of 1897), s. 6.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

385. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts any person in fear, or attempts to put any person in fear, of any injury¹, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Putting person in fear of injury in order to commit extortion.

COMMENT.

By this section a distinction between the inchoate and the consummated offence is recognised. The attempt to commit extortion has proceeded so far towards completion that a person has been put in fear of injury, or that there has been an attempt to excite such fear; but the offence is incomplete because there has been no delivery of property, etc. The Court must be satisfied that the putting in fear was with the intention of extorting a delivery of property.²⁴ Where a Mukhtyar on behalf of the accused threatened to put questions to the complainant and the ladies of his household (who were witnesses) which were entirely irrelevant, scandalous and indecent with a view to extort money, it was held that the Mukhtyar was guilty of an offence under this section.²⁵

1. 'Injury'.—See s. 44, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused put the complainant in fear, or attempted to put him in fear.

(2) That the fear was regarding some injury.

(3) That the accused did as above to commit extortion.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Punishment.—Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

386. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt to that person or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Extortion by putting a person in fear of death or grievous hurt.

COMMENT.

If the fear caused is that of death or of grievous hurt it naturally causes great alarm. The section, therefore, provides for severe penalty in such cases.

²⁴ M. & M. 347.

²⁵ Fazlur Rahman, (1929) 9 Pat. 725.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as those required for s. 384, but prove in point (1) that the fear was of death or of grievous hurt.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Punishment.—Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

387. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts or attempts to put any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt¹ to that person or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Putting person in fear of death or of grievous hurt, in order to commit extortion.

COMMENT.

The relation between this section and s. 386 is the same as that between ss. 385 and 384.

1. ‘In fear of death or of grievous hurt’.—It is not necessary that the fear of death or of grievous hurt should be instantaneous.¹

See s. 46 as to the meaning of ‘death’ and s. 320 as to ‘grievous hurt’.

The feigning of an attempt to commit suicide in order to extort money is an offence under this section.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove that the accused put or attempted to put the complainant in fear of death or of grievous hurt to him or to some other person in order to commit extortion.³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Separate convictions.—Separate convictions cannot be passed under both s. 365 and this section.⁴

Charge.—See s. 385. For the expression “in fear of injury” substitute “in fear of death or grievous hurt”.

Punishment.—As to crimes on the Frontier, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901). ss. 11 (3) (d), 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. (3) (b) and sch. II.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

388. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of an accusation¹ against that person or any other, of having committed or attempted to commit any offence² punishable with death, or with transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, or of having attempted to induce any other person to commit such offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offence be one

Extortion by threat of accusation of an offence punishable with death or transportation, etc.

¹ Tun Baw, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 100, 13 Cr. L. J. 864, F.B.

² Gregory, (1866) 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 423.

³ Vide s. 384, sup.

⁴ Po Lan, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 160, 14 Cr. L. J. 167.

punishable under section 377 of this Code, may be punished with transportation for life.

COMMENT.

The aggravating circumstance under this section is the threat of an accusation of an offence punishable with death, transportation for life or with imprisonment for ten years. If the accusation is of unnatural offence (s. 377) then the penalty provided is severer.

1. 'Fear of an accusation'.—It is immaterial whether the person against whom the accusation is threatened be innocent or guilty if the accused intended to extort money.⁵

2. 'Offence'.—The word 'offence' here means a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as those required for s. 384, showing that the fear was occasioned by a threat of an accusation of having committed, or having attempted to commit, or induced some one else to commit, an offence punishable with death, or with transportation for life, or ten years' imprisonment, or unnatural offence (s. 377).

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed extortion by putting AB in fear of an accusation against him or against—of having committed [or attempted to commit] an offence punishable with death [or with transportation for life, or with imprisonment, etc.], to wit, the offence of (specify the name of the offence), and thereby dishonestly induced the said AB to deliver to you (mention the thing or property); and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 388 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

389. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts Putting person in fear of accusation of offence, in order to commit extortion.

or attempts to put any person in fear of an accusation, against that person or any other, of having committed, or attempted to commit, an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offence¹ be punishable under section 377 of this Code, may be punished with transportation for life.

COMMENT.

This section bears the same relation to s. 388 as s. 385 bears to s. 384.

1. 'Offence'.—The word "offence" here denotes a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused put, or attempted to put, a person in fear.

⁵ James Gardner, (1824) 1 C. & P. 479; Richards, (1868) 11 Cox 43.

(2) That the fear was of an accusation of an offence, or an attempt to commit it.

(3) That such offence was punishable with death, transportation for life or imprisonment for at least ten years.

(4) That he did so in order to commit extortion (see s. 384).

For the last provision, prove further that the accusation was of an unnatural offence (s. 377).

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—See s. 385, supra.

Punishment.—As to crimes on the Frontier, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 4 (3) (d) and sch. II.

Of Robbery and Dacoity.

Robbery. 390. In all robbery there is either theft or extortion.

Theft is “robbery” if, in order to the committing of the theft, or in committing the theft, or in carrying away¹ or attempting to carry away property obtained by the theft, the offender, for that end,² voluntarily causes³ or attempts to cause to any person⁴ death or hurt or wrongful restraint, or fear of instant death⁵ or of instant hurt,⁶ or of instant wrongful restraint.⁷

Exortion is “robbery” if the offender, at the time of committing the extortion, is in the presence⁸ of the person put in fear, and commits the extortion by putting that person in fear of instant death, of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint to that person, or to some other person,⁹ and, by so putting in fear, induces the person so put in fear then and there to deliver up the thing extorted.

Explanation.—The offender is said to be present if he is sufficiently near to put the other person in fear of instant death, of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A holds Z down, and fraudulently takes Z’s money and jewels from Z’s clothes, without Z’s consent. Here A has committed theft, and, in order to the committing of that theft, has voluntarily caused wrongful restraint to Z. A has therefore committed robbery.

(b) A meets Z on the high road, shows a pistol, and demands Z’s purse. Z, in consequence, surrenders his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z by putting him in fear of instant hurt, and being at the time of committing the extortion in his presence. A has therefore committed robbery.

(c) A meets Z and Z’s child on the high road. A takes the child, and threatens to fling it down a precipice, unless Z delivers his purse. Z, in consequence, delivers his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z, by causing Z to be in fear of instant hurt to the child who is there present. A has therefore committed robbery on Z.

(d) A obtains property from Z by saying—“Your child is in the hands of my gang, and will be put to death unless you send us ten thousand rupees”. This is extortion, and punishable as such: but it is not robbery, unless Z is put in fear of the instant death of his child.

COMMENT.

Robbery is a special and aggravated form of either theft or extortion. 'Robbery' means a felonious taking from the person of another or in his presence against his will, by violence or putting him in fear.⁶

The authors of the Code say: "In one single class of cases, theft and extortion are in practice confounded together so inextricably, that no judge, however sagacious, could discriminate between them. This class of cases therefore has, in all systems of jurisprudence, ... been treated as a perfectly distinct class; ... we have therefore made robbery a separate crime.

"There can be no case of robbery which does not fall within the definition either of theft or of extortion; but in practice it will perpetually be matter of doubt whether a particular act of robbery was a theft or an extortion. A seizes Z, threatens to murder him, unless he delivers all his property, and begins to pull off Z's ornaments. Z in terror begs that A will take all he has, and spare his life, assists in taking off his ornaments, and delivers them to A. Here, such ornaments as A took without Z's consent are taken by theft. Those which Z delivered up from fear of death are acquired by extortion. It is by no means improbable that Z's right-arm bracelet may have been obtained by theft, and left-arm bracelet by extortion; that the rupees in Z's girdle may have been obtained by theft, and those in his turban by extortion. Probably in nine-tenths of the robberies which are committed, something like this actually takes place, and it is probable that a few minutes later neither the robber nor the person robbed would be able to recollect in what proportions theft and extortion were mixed in the crime; nor is it at all necessary for the ends of justice that this should be ascertained. For though, in general, the consent of a sufferer is a circumstance which very materially modifies the character of the offence, and which ought, therefore, to be made known to the Courts, yet the consent which a person gives to the taking of his property by a ruffian who holds a pistol to his breast is a circumstance altogether immaterial".⁷

The chief distinguishing element in robbery is the presence of imminent fear or violence.

The Explanation and illustrations (c) and (d) mark the distinction between simple extortion and extortion which is robbery.

The section contemplates that the accused should have, from the very start, the intention to deprive the complainant of the property, and should for that purpose either hurt him or place him under wrongful restraint.⁸

1. 'Carrying away'.—Even if death, hurt, or wrongful restraint, or fear of any of these, is caused after committing the theft in order to carry away the property obtained by theft, this offence would be committed. According to English law the force which converts theft into robbery must be used before or at the time of taking, and must be of such a nature as to show that it was intended to overpower the party robbed, and prevent his resisting, and not merely to get possession of the property stolen. Thus, if a man walking after a woman in the street were by violence to pull her shawl from her shoulders, though he might use considerable violence, it would not be highway robbery, because the violence was not for the purpose of overpowering the party robbed, but only to get possession of the property.⁹

2. 'For that end'.—The essence of the offence is that the offender for the end of committing theft, or carrying away or attempting to carry away properties obtained by theft, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant wrongful restraint.¹⁰ Death, hurt, or wrongful restraint, must be caused in committing theft, or in carrying away property obtained by theft.¹¹ The words "for that end" cannot be read as meaning in those circumstances as that would widen the application of the section.¹² The hurt contemplated must be a conscious and voluntary act

⁶ Karali Prasad Dutta v. The East Indian Railway Company, (1928) 48 C. L. J. 32, 35, [1928] AIR (C) 498.

⁷ Note N, p. 162.

⁸ Mir Baz, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 894.

⁹ Thomas Gnosil, (1824) 1 C. & P. 304.

¹⁰ Mathura Thakur, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 72, 79;

Bishambhar Nath, [1941] O. W. N. 1262, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 530, [1941] AIR (O) 476.

¹¹ Ruhman Khan, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 14; Kalio Kerio, (1872) Cr. R. June 27 of 1872, Unrep. Cr. C. 65.

¹² Karuppa Gounden, (1916) 18 Cr. L. J. 346, [1918] AIR (M) 821.

on the part of the thief for the purpose of overpowering resistance on the part of the victim quite separate and distinct from the act of theft itself.¹³ The use of violence will not convert the offence of theft into robbery unless the violence be committed for one of the ends specified in this section. Where the accused abandoned the property obtained by theft and threw stones at his pursuer to deter him from continuing the pursuit, it was held that the accused was guilty of theft and not of robbery.¹⁴

Hurt independent of theft does not amount to robbery.—Where hurt or fear of instant hurt was caused by five or more persons for the purpose of dispossessing persons already in possession of some premises and had no relation to the commission of theft, although the theft might have been committed at the same time as a perfectly independent act, it was held that this did not amount to robbery.¹⁵

Where a child of four years of age was stripped of its ornaments and when the child threatened to tell its mother it was beaten, it was held that the offence committed was one of theft and not of robbery.¹⁶

A had set wires in which game was caught. B, a game-keeper, found them and took the game and wires for the use of the lord of the manor. A demanded them with menaces, and B gave them up. The jury found that A acted under a bona fide impression that the game and wires were his property. It was held that A had not committed robbery.¹⁷

3. 'Voluntarily causes'.—These words denote that an accidental infliction of injury by a thief will not convert his offence into robbery. Thus, where a person while cutting a string, by which a basket was tied, with intent to steal it, accidentally cut the wrist of the owner, who at the moment tried to seize and keep the basket, and ran away with it, it was held that the offence committed was theft and not robbery.¹⁸ But, where, in committing theft, there is indubitably an intention, seconded by an attempt to cause hurt, the offence would be robbery.¹⁹

See s. 39, supra, as to the meaning of 'voluntarily'.

4. 'To any person'.—The 'person' need not be the one from whose possession the thing is taken.

5. 'Fear of instant death'.—See s. 46, supra, as to the meaning of 'death'. It is not necessary that fear should be caused to the owner of the house after the robbers have entered the house. If the robbers scare away the owner on account of the fear caused in his mind before they are able to make an entry into the house, the offence of robbery would be quite complete. On the other hand, where the owner of the house is scared away by a crowd of persons and the house is subsequently robbed by another crowd, acting independently of the first crowd, the offence would not be robbery.²⁰

6. 'Hurt'.—See s. 319, supra. Where A and B were stealing mangoes from a tree, C surprised them, on which A knocked him down senseless with a stick;²¹ and where a person, in snatching a nose-ring, wounded the woman in the nostril, and caused her blood to flow,²² this offence was committed.

7. 'Wrongful restraint'.—See s. 339, supra. The accused stopped the complainant's boat in a stream representing themselves to be persons in authority and saying that the boat was required by a Magistrate to carry treasure, and then they plundered it. It was held that they were guilty of robbery.²³ Where a bailiff handcuffed a prisoner under pretence of carrying him to prison with greater safety, and by means of this violence extorted money, he was held guilty of robbery.²⁴

'Restraint' implies abridgement of the liberty of a person against his will. Where a person is deprived of his will-power by sleep or otherwise he cannot, while in that condition, be subjected to any restraint. Where the accused locked from outside the room in which the watchmen of a building were asleep, and committed

¹³ Karmun, (1933) 35 P. L. R. 186, 35 Cr. L. J. 297.

¹⁴ (1865) 1 Weir 442; Kalio Kerio, (1872) Cr. R., June 27, 1872, Unrep. Cr. C. 65; Nga Po Thet, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 27, [1917] AIR (LB) 1.

¹⁵ Otaruddi Manjhi v. Kafiluddi Manjhi, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 372.

¹⁶ Padam Singh, (1892) 6 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 36.

¹⁷ Hall, (1828) 3 C. & P. 409.

¹⁸ Edwards, (1843) 1 Cox 32.

¹⁹ Teekai Bheer, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 95.

²⁰ Yamin, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 145.

²¹ Hushrut Sheikh, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 85.

²² Teekai Bheer, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 95.

²³ Duleeloodeen Sheikh, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 19.

²⁴ Gastoigne's Case, (1783) 1 Leach 280.

theft, it was held that the accused could not be held to have caused wrongful restraint to the watchmen, and could not consequently be convicted of dacoity.²⁵

Where a police-officer obtained Rs. 7 from two prisoners on a promise of releasing them and threatened them that unless they gave him Rs. 200, he would confine them in the lock-up and keep them there for months while a charge of bribery against them, in respect of Rs. 7, was being investigated, and on his threat he was allowed to take certain ornaments, it was held that the offence committed was that of robbery.¹

8. 'Presence'.—The Explanation says that the offender is said to be present if he is sufficiently near to put the other person in fear of instant death, or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

9. 'Fear of instant death,...to some other person'.—Imminent fear of death, hurt, etc., is necessary to bring the section into operation. If a man holds another's child over a river and threatens to throw it in unless the other gives him money, this will amount to robbery.² The principle of robbery is violence; where the money is delivered through fear, that is constructive violence.

CASES.

Where the accused forced an earring from the ear of a lady;³ where the accused tore some hair from a lady's head in snatching a diamond pin from it;⁴ where the accused took goods from the prosecutrix of the value of eight shillings, and by threats compelled her to take thirteen pence as payment for them;⁵ where the accused, while the complainant was proceeding in a street, caught hold of the seals and chain of the complainant's gold watch and pulled the watch out of his jab and by giving two or three jerks broke the steel chain with which it was attached and then made off with it;⁶ and where a person ran up against another for the purpose of diverting his attention while he picked his pocket,⁷ it was held that the force was sufficient to constitute the offence of robbery.

391. When five or more persons conjointly commit or attempt to commit a robbery,¹ or where the whole number of persons conjointly committing or attempting to commit a robbery, and persons present and aiding such commission or attempt, amount to five or more, every person so committing, attempting or aiding, is said to commit "dacoity".

COMMENT.

Dacoity is robbery committed by five or more persons. Abettors who are present and aiding when the crime is committed are counted in the number. The number of persons concerned in the robbery must not be less than five.

The essentials of the offence of dacoity are that the theft should be perpetrated by means either of actual violence or of threatened violence. The threatened violence may be implied in the conduct and character of the mob. It is not necessary that the force or menace should be displayed by any overt act. It cannot avail the accused to say, or reduce the gravity of their offence, that no actual hurt was caused as no one dared to resist the overwhelming show of force, which was sufficient to terrify, and did in fact terrify, those whose business it was to protect the property.⁸ In a case of dacoity the circumstance that the inmates of the house, seeing the large number of the dacoits, do not offer any resistance and no force or violence is required or used does not reduce the dacoity to theft.⁹

The authors of the Code say: "We have provided punishment of exemplary severity for that atrocious crime which is designated in the Regulations of Bengal

²⁵ Fateh Muhammad, (1927) 29 P. L. R. 90, 29 Cr. L. J. 602, [1928] AIR (L) 445.

¹ Basant Rai, (1896) P. R. No. 12 of 1896.

² 2 East P. C. 735, 736.

³ Lapier's Case, (1784) 1 Leach 320.

⁴ Mqore's Case, (1784) 1 Leach 335.

⁵ Simons, (1773) 2 East P. C. 712.

⁶ Mason's Case, (1820) Russ. & Ry. 419.

⁷ Anon., (1825) 1 Lewin 300.

⁸ Chandra Krishna, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 632, 7 Cr. L. J. 192.

⁹ Ram Chand, (1932) 55 All. 117.

and Madras by the name of Dacoity. This name we have thought it convenient to retain, for the purpose of denoting, not only actual gang-robbery, but the attempting to rob when such an attempt is made or aided by a gang".¹⁰ The popular notion of dacoity was that of an outrage committed, at the very dead of night, by a band of ruffians, whose heads were covered and whose faces were disguised by chalk or some other mixture, and who had no private enmity with the peaceable and unfortunate house-holder, whom some one of the gang had previously, by secret inquiries, marked out for a prey.

Under this section the number of persons committing robbery must be five or more. Where the evidence showed that there were six robbers but at the trial three were acquitted, it was held that a conviction under this section was not sustainable, and that the accused should be convicted under s. 392.¹¹

1. 'Conjointly commit or attempt to commit a robbery'.—A man is not guilty of dacoity unless he has committed, attempted to commit, or aided in committing robbery.¹² Where the accused did not actually take part in the dacoity but was with others before the dacoity and went with one of the dacoits to borrow a boat, and during the dacoity was left in the boat at a place some five or six miles from the place of the dacoity and was told to wait for other dacoits, it was held that the accused's action did not come within the definition of dacoity as he was not present though he might have been aiding such commission or attempt.¹³ A dacoity begins as soon as there is an attempt to commit robbery and a shot fired thereafter in order to keep off a rescue party and to allow the theft to be committed is an act committed in committing the dacoity within the meaning of this section.¹⁴

Dacoity is either theft or extortion.—If no property is carried off, there is no dacoity¹⁵ but an offence under s. 402.¹⁶ Where several Hindus acting in concert forcibly removed an ox and two cows from the possession of a Mahomedan, not for the purpose of causing wrongful gain to themselves or wrongful loss to the owner of the cattle but for the purpose of preventing the killing of the cows, it was held that they could not be convicted of dacoity but only of riot.¹⁷ But in a subsequent case the principle of this decision has been held to be limited to the particular facts of that case. Where, therefore, a large body of Hindus acting in concert and apparently under the influence of religious feeling attacked certain Mahomedans who were driving cattle along a public road and forcibly deprived them of the possession of such cattle under circumstances which did not indicate any intention of subsequently restoring the cattle to the Mahomedans, it was held that they were guilty of dacoity. The Court said: "The Indian Penal Code is a statute of the Legislature applicable to Muhammadans, Hindus, Christians and all other sects alike. It is necessary in every civilized state that in order to protect the lives and property of the members of the community penal laws should exist and be enforced, and should be enforced no matter whether the person who commits an offence against them is a Christian, or a Muhammadan, or a Hindu or member of any other religious denomination. Penal laws are made for the protection of all classes alike, and they do not recognise any exception in the case of any particular denomination. A theft or a dacoity would not be any the less a theft or a dacoity if committed by members of one denomination upon the members of another; for example, no Christian or Muhammadan could plead in a Court of justice that he was not liable to be punished for theft because he acted under the incentive of some religious motive, if the facts showed that theft had in reality been committed. There must, in all states in which law and order are to abide, be penal laws equally enforceable against every denomination; and it is further necessary, unless we are to return to barbarous times, that persons who choose to wage a species of civil war on their neighbours should be adequately punished, not only as a punishment to themselves, but as a warning to deter others from

¹⁰ Note N, p. 163.

¹¹ Pidda Enumundugaru, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 249, [1910] M. W. N. 52; Ikram-ud-din, (1917) 39 All. 348; Girdhar, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 547, [1927] AIR (L) 519; Abbas Ali Sahib, (1927) 53 M. L. J. 732, [1927] M. W. N. 853, 29 Cr. L. J. 5, [1928] AIR (M) 144.

¹² Ram Das, [1945] All. 651.

¹³ Ibrahim, (1925) 42 C. L. J. 496, 26 Cr. L. J. 1146.

¹⁴ Sitaram, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 1364.

¹⁵ Ram Sewan, (1944) 45 P. L. T. 163.

¹⁶ (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr. L.) 5.

¹⁷ Raghunath Rai, (1892) 15 All. 22.

committing similar offences. A cow is an animal which in this country, a Muhammadan is entitled to hold as his property and over which he is entitled to exercise all the lawful rights of an owner, and so long as that Muhammadan in dealing with his own property does not, in the exercise of his rights of ownership, commit an offence against the Indian Penal Code, the law must and will protect him in the exercise of his rights. Similarly the law will protect a Hindu or a member of any other denomination in the exercise of his rights of property. If a Muhammadan, a Hindu or a Christian or a member of any other denomination commits an offence against the Penal Code, the law can be put in force against him by the process of the Criminal Code and by that process only. If he does not commit an offence in exercising his rights of property the law does not allow any one to interfere with him in the exercise of those rights, and people who take upon themselves either to take the law into their own hands, or to override or exceed the law, must expect the punishment which the law awards for criminal acts."¹⁸ Where it was established that the common object of certain Mahomedan rioters was both to hurt any member of the Hindu community whom they might happen to find and to rob the shops and houses of the Hindus, it was held that any person who was proved to have taken a part in the disturbance must be found guilty not only of the offence of riot but of the offence of dacoity.¹⁹

Good faith.—When all that is done is done under a claim of right in good faith entertained by the accused, however erroneously, the charge cannot be sustained.²⁰ Where there was illegal distraint of cattle and the accused forcibly rescued the cattle inflicting injuries it was held that as the distraint was illegal the accused could not be said to be acting dishonestly when they went to recover the cattle and therefore no offence was committed.²¹

Abetment.—Knowing of a design to commit a dacoity, and voluntarily concealing the existence of that design, with the knowledge that such concealment will facilitate the commission of dacoity, does not amount to an abetment of the dacoity.²²

Fear of instant death, or of hurt, or of wrongful restraint.—Imminent fear of death, hurt, etc., will be sufficient to bring the section into operation. Where several persons attacked a house and took away property, but the inmates obtaining information beforehand had fled before the attack, it was held that the fact of the inmates running away was sufficient proof of the fear of hurt or of wrongful restraint and the accused were guilty of dacoity.²³

392. Whoever commits robbery shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the robbery be committed on the highway between sunset and sunrise, the imprisonment may be extended to fourteen years.

Punishment for robbery.

COMMENT.

This section specifies the punishment which can be inflicted in case of simple robbery. The next section punishes attempt to commit robbery.

If hurt is caused in committing robbery, s. 394 applies; if there is an attempt to cause death or grievous hurt, s. 397 applies; and if the offender is armed with a deadly weapon, s. 398 applies.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed theft (vide s. 379 for the points to be proved.)

(2) That he caused or attempted to cause to some person (a) death, hurt, or wrongful restraint; or (b) fear of instant death, or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

¹⁸ Ram Baran, (1893) 15 All. 299, 301.

¹⁹ Daulat, (1926) 2 Luck. 264.

²⁰ Karaka Nachiar alias Vellia Nachiar, (1866)

3 M. H. C. 254; Nura, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 956,

34 Cr. L. J. 1258.

²¹ Chitravelu Thevar, [1941] M. W. N. 679 (2),

[1941] 2 M. L. J. 207, (1941) 54 L. W. 482, 43 Cr. L. J. 106, [1941] AIR (M) 763.

²² Jhugroo, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 2.

²³ Kissoree Pater, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 35. [53].

(3) That he did as above (a) in committing such theft ; or (b) in order to commit such theft ; or (c) in carrying away, or attempting to carry away, the property obtained by such theft.

(4) That he acted as in (2) voluntarily.

Or prove—

(1) That the accused committed extortion (vide s. 384 for the points to be proved).

(2) That he was, at the time of committing it, in the presence of the person so put in fear.

(3) That he committed it by putting that person or some other person in fear of instant death, or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

(4) That he thereby induced the person so put in fear to deliver up then and there the thing extorted.

As an example of relevant facts, see ill. (a) to s. 7, and ill. (f) and (k) to s. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

A commits robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under ss. 323, 392 and 394.²⁴

Where persons are committed on three separate and distinct charges of three separate and distinct robberies committed on the same night in three different houses, they must be tried separately on each of the three charges.²⁵

Jurisdiction.—It is not open to a Magistrate to split up a graver offence into a number of smaller offences which, when combined, constitute that offence, in order to give himself jurisdiction.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, robbed (state the name), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 392 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I thereby direct that you be tried (by the said Court) on the said charge.²

Punishment.—In robbery, the Legislature has provided three different degrees of punishment which may be inflicted. Under s. 392, the punishment may be extended to fourteen years' imprisonment. It is not permissible to award a sentence of fine only without imprisonment for the offence of robbery.³ Under s. 394, it may be extended to transportation for life, and under s. 397, it cannot be less than seven years. Section 392 is the general section, and the two other sections specify the same offence under aggravated circumstances. This section no doubt allows the Court discretion as regards the minimum punishment to be awarded, but when the offence is attended with circumstances which would make the attempt to commit it punishable with the minimum sentence of seven years, it would not be a proper exercise of discretion to award a lesser sentence when the offence has been accomplished.⁴

Highway robbery is a very heinous offence for which deterrent sentence should be passed. In such a case the value of the stolen property should not be the criterion whereby the amount of punishment is to be determined.⁵

As to sentence of whipping, see the Whipping Act (IV of 1909), s. 4. A sentence of whipping may be imposed where, in the commission of robbery, hurt is caused. As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, 1898, s. 4 (3) (n) and sh. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6 and 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). As to members of a criminal tribes or gang, see the Criminal Tribes Act, 1897, s. 6, schedule.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

²⁴ Illustration (m), s. 235, Criminal Procedure Code.

²⁵ Itcaree Dome, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 83.

¹ Otaruddi Manjhi v. Kafiruddi Manjhi, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 372.

L. C.—61

² Criminal Procedure Code, sch. V, xxviii (9).

³ Badri Prasad, (1922) 44 All. 538.

⁴ Chandra Nath, (1931) 7 Luck. 543.

⁵ Jagannath alias Khairati, (1914) 17 Luck. 516.

393. Whoever attempts to commit robbery shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Attempt to commit robbery.

COMMENT.

This is a specific section for punishing attempt to commit robbery. A present intent to rob combined with an act in execution of such intention which falls short of the offence intended, is an attempt to rob.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove that the accused attempted to commit robbery.

As to what constitutes an attempt, see s. 511, infra.

As to the points requiring to be proved for robbery, see s. 392.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, did an act, to wit——, and which amounted to an attempt to rob AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 393 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session, or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b), sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d), and 12 (2).

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or settlement has been made (s. 19).

394. If any person, in committing or in attempting to commit robbery, voluntarily¹ causes hurt,² such person, and any other person jointly concerned³ in committing or attempting to commit such robbery, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery.

COMMENT.

The offence of voluntarily causing hurt of either description in committing, or attempting to commit robbery, is punishable under this section. Section 397 is merely a rider to this section with reference to cases in which the hurt committed is grievous.⁶

1. 'Voluntarily'.—See s. 39, supra. 2. 'Hurt'.—See s. 319, supra.

3. 'Jointly concerned'.—The guilty act of one is imputed to all who are joint with him, provided the act is done in committing the offence of robbery. Violence or hurt entirely unconnected with that offence or used to gratify personal spite or passion is not contemplated.

This section, and not s. 397, will apply to the case of a robber who does not himself cause grievous hurt or use any deadly weapon.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused, or someone jointly concerned with him, committed or attempted to commit robbery.⁸

⁶ Mohna alias Kohara, (1901) P. R. No. 16 of 1901.

186, [1912] M. W. N. 35, 13 Cr. L. J. 42.

⁸ Vide s. 392, supra.

⁷ Arunachella Thevan, (1911) 22 M. L. J.

(2) That the accused, or such other person, voluntarily caused hurt⁹ in doing so.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

As an offence punishable under this section necessarily includes the offence punishable under s. 392, an accused person who is convicted under both these sections can be legally punished only under this section and in such a case it would be sufficient to convict him under this section alone.¹⁰ But see ill. (m) to s. 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which says: "A commits robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under ss. 323, 393, and 394 of the Indian Penal Code."

Separate convictions are, according to this illustration, justifiable.

In cases where the offender attempts to cause hurt, or causes wrongful restraint, or fear of death, hurt or wrongful restraint, a charge cannot be framed against him under this section. Section 392 would be the only section applicable. But when the fact which transmutes theft into robbery is the voluntarily causing hurt, then, while s. 392 still applies, in so much that a charge under that section should be framed, a Magistrate is not justified in disregarding the application of this section: a charge of voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery should be added under that section. That section imposes a specific penalty for a specific act; and if there is prima facie ground for believing that the accused has committed that act, he should be charged with it.¹¹

Where hurt is caused in the commission of a theft, the causing of hurt changes the theft into robbery, and the charge should be held under this section for causing hurt in the commission of robbery.¹²

Commitment.—If a Magistrate finds that an accused person had caused grievous hurt in committing robbery, he is bound to commit him to the Court of Session for an offence under s. 397; it is illegal to treat the grievous hurt as simple hurt and convict the accused under this section.¹³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed [(or attempted to commit) (or were jointly with XY concerned in committing)] (or attempting to commit) robbery of the property of AB, and that as such you (or XY) voluntarily caused hurt to AB (or——), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 394 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court).¹⁴

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (d) and 12 (2).

Whipping.—Before a sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment can be passed on the accused, there must be a finding that he himself caused hurt while committing the robbery.¹⁵

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

395. Whoever commits dacoity shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for dacoity.

⁹ Vide s. 323, sup.

¹⁰ Durga, (1890) Cr. R. No. 31 of 1890, Unrep. Cr. C. 511; Mootkee Kora, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 1.

¹¹ Nga Po Lon, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 232.

¹² (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 6.

¹³ Jobania, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 476, Cr. R. No. 36 of 1889. But see Surji Doss, (1888) 1 Weir 449.

¹⁴ (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 6.

¹⁵ Po Thaug, (1927) 6 Ran. 48.

COMMENT.

This section prescribes punishment for simple dacoity; s. 396, for dacoity accompanied with murder; s. 397, for dacoity with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt; s. 398, for attempt to commit dacoity when the offender is armed with a deadly weapon; s. 399, for making preparation to commit a dacoity; s. 400, for belonging to a gang of dacoits; and s. 402, for assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that robbery was committed or attempted.¹⁶

(2) That five or more persons committed or attempted to commit robbery; or that the whole number of persons committing or attempting to commit robbery was five or more.¹⁷

If out of the persons charged with dacoity some are acquitted and five or less than five are convicted, the conviction does not become illegal. The mere fact that the evidence was not sufficient to convict the accused actually charged would not in any way affect the question of the number of persons engaged.¹⁸

(3) That such persons were acting conjointly.

As to the nature of evidence requisite to be taken in a case of dacoity, see the cases of Queen v. Modhoo Manjee,¹⁹ *Queen v. Ram Sagor*²⁰ and Queen v. Kamal Fukeer.²¹ In dacoity cases evidence adduced as to the identification of dacoits ought not to be accepted too readily, but should be looked at with great caution.²²

The statement of an approver along with the evidence of recovery of stolen property is sufficient proof to bring home to the accused the offence of dacoity.²³

In cases of dacoity and cognate offences where it is alleged that substantial property has been stolen, it is entirely unnecessary to consider motive. The taking of the booty itself provides a sufficient motive.²⁴

Presumption.—When a prisoner is apprehended eight days after a dacoity with part of the plunder in his possession, there is as good ground for charging him with the dacoity as with having received or retained with guilty knowledge, and he ought to be charged in the alternative form.²⁵ When persons are found within six hours of the commission of a dacoity, with portions of the plundered property in their possession, the presumption of law is that they are participators in the dacoity.¹

Where eight persons were each of them separately charged with dacoity, but the jury acquitted four of them but found the other four guilty, the evidence before them being that there were more than five persons concerned in the offence, even if the four who were acquitted were not there, it was held that the charge as against each of dacoity was sufficient notice to each of the accused that they were charged with four or more others and the conviction by the jury of dacoity would import a finding that there were four or more others engaged with each dacoit. The mere fact that the evidence was not sufficient to convict four of the accused actually charged would not in any way affect the question of the number of persons engaged.²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

A person convicted of dacoity under s. 395 cannot be convicted also of dishonestly receiving stolen property under s. 41, or of receiving property transferred by commission of dacoity under s. 412, when there is no evidence of the commission of more than one offence.³

Direction to jury.—In a case of dacoity the Judge should direct the jury to convict only if they find that all the prisoners had the intention of causing wrongful gain or loss to the prosecutor.⁴ The jury must be distinctly instructed that unless ¹⁶ Vide, s. 392, sup.

¹⁷ Shera, (1868) P. R. No. 18 of 1868.

¹⁸ Narayan Dinba, (1946) 47 Cr. L. J. 822, [1943] N. L. J. 566.

¹⁹ (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 51.

²⁰ (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 57.

²¹ (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 50.

²² Kallu, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 456.

²³ Shera, (1942) 44 P. L. R. 545, 44 Cr. L. J.

62, [1943] AIR (L) 5.

²⁴ Arjun Panda, (1941) 21 Pat. 130.

²⁵ Motee Jolaha, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 66.

¹ Cassy Mul, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 10.

² Rashidazaman, (1911) 15 C. W. N. 434, 12 Cr. L. J. 193.

³ Shahabut Sheikh, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 42.

⁴ Bonomally Ghose, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 8.

they are satisfied that there were five or more persons committing the robbery or that the persons present and aiding in the commission of the robbery numbered five or more persons, there could be no dacoity.⁵

Attempt.—Section 511 of the Code does not apply to a case of dacoity. An attempt to commit dacoity should be charged under this section as the definition of 'dacoity' includes attempt.⁶

Abettor.—An abettor of dacoity is punishable under this section and s. 109 without any reference to s. 397 which is applicable only to persons actually committing a dacoity in which one of the acts specified in it is done.⁷

Joinder of charges.—Where the accused were charged under this section and also under ss. 148 and 460 and the charges in respect of offences under ss. 148 and 460 were not based on any facts other than the acts which it was necessary for the prosecution to establish to prove the offence under this section, it was held that the charges under ss. 148 and 460 should not have been framed at all. It is against the spirit of the law to adopt such a course for the purpose of depriving the accused of the benefit of the verdict of the jury on the charge of dacoity.⁸

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused person) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at ——, committed dacoity, an offence punishable under s. 395 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.⁹

Alternative charges.—Alternative charges under this section and s. 457 are not bad in law.¹⁰

Punishment.—Dacoity is a most serious crime which it is difficult to detect in the sense of bringing home the offence to the culprits and it is an offence which gives rise to a great deal of misery. In ordinary circumstances a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a period of seven years is the least sentence which should be passed.¹¹ The crime of robbery in all cases must be considered as a serious crime and although this section does not provide for a graver punishment in the case of dacoity committed on the highway between sunset and sunrise, as in the case of robbery, nonetheless a dacoity committed on the highway between sunset and sunrise is an aggravation of the offence and a sentence of seven years is not excessive.¹² Where the dacoity is a very serious one the maximum sentence under this section, or something approaching the maximum sentence, should be passed upon the persons concerned.¹³ Where the circumstances indicated that the dacoits might have been under the influence of liquor at the time of the occurrence and possibly the dacoity committed by them was committed under the influence of liquor and no serious injuries were caused to anybody in the commission of the dacoity, the High Court reduced the sentence from seven years to two years rigorous imprisonment.¹⁴

A sentence of fine only is illegal.¹⁵ Sentence of transportation under this section must be either for life or for a period not exceeding ten years if given in lieu of imprisonment.¹⁶

The fact that the accused returned a part of the stolen property to the complainant the next day would not justify the High Court in reducing the sentences.¹⁷

Where a person, notwithstanding a previous conviction of dacoity and consequent punishment and after having a locus penitentie afforded him, again, after com-

⁵ Mookkandi Maniaram, (1903) 1 Weir 446.

⁶ Koonce, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 48.

⁷ Chatar Singh, (1901) P. R. No. 15 of 1901.

⁸ Arjun Panda, (1941) 21 Pat. 130.

⁹ Criminal Procedure Code, sch. V, xxviii (1) (10).

¹⁰ Bikram Ali Pramanik, (1929) 50 C. L. J. 467, 31 Cr. L. J. 610, [1930] AIR (C) 139.

¹¹ Lakhan Singh, [1936] A. L. J. R. 739, 37 Cr. L. J. 959, [1936] AIR (A) 311.

¹² Adhik Lal Pathak, (1941) 43 P. L. T. 475, [1941] P. W. N. 653, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 615, [1942] AIR (P) 156; Debi Charan, [1942] A. L. J. R. 376, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 867, [1942] AIR (A) 339.

¹³ Bansi, [1941] A. L. J. R. 490, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 97, [1941] AIR (A) 359.

¹⁴ Nabi Rasool, [1942] 2 Cal. 136, 142.

¹⁵ Bhoja, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 54; Dwarka Singh, (1946) 47 Cr. L. J. 780.

¹⁶ Arura, (1903) P. R. No. 31 of 1903, 1 Cr. L. J. 89.

¹⁷ Darao, (1944) 46 Cr. L. J. 525, [1945] AIR (A) 100.

pleting a previous term of sentence, commits the same offence, he shall be liable to whipping in addition to any sentence of imprisonment awarded. He has, that is to say, been undeterred by imprisonment, and therefore may be punished on the second occasion with stripes in addition.¹⁸

In awarding sentences in a case of communal riot and dacoity committed while the accused were smarting with indignation against the outrages upon their sacred places, every allowance should be made for their feelings and comparative leniency should be shown. At the same time they must be adequately punished, and this act must be taken into consideration that the persons injured and robbed had no share in desecrating the holy places and were made to suffer for the sins of others.¹⁹

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (b) and 12 (2).

396. If any one of five or more persons, who are conjointly committing dacoity, commits murder in so committing dacoity,¹ every one of those persons shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

Object.—In providing this section the object of the Legislature seems to be that the penalty of death or transportation for life may be inflicted on a person convicted of taking part in a dacoity in the course of which a murder is committed, even though there is nothing to show that he himself committed the murder or that he abetted it.

Ingredients.—The first essence of an offence under this section is that the dacoity is the joint act of the persons concerned; and the second essence of the offence is that the murder is committed in the course of the commission of the dacoity in question.²⁰

1. 'Conjointly committing dacoity, commits murder, etc.'—The Allahabad High Court once ruled that in order to support a conviction under this section it was necessary to establish, not only that the accused had committed dacoity conjointly with others, but it must also be shown that the murder had been committed in his presence.²¹ But it has subsequently held that when, in the commission of a dacoity, a murder is committed, it matters not whether the particular dacoit was inside the house where the dacoity is committed, or outside the house (as in the above case of Queen-Empress v. Umrao Singh), or whether the murder was committed inside or outside the house, so long only as the murder was committed in the commission of that dacoity.²² This ruling has been followed by the Bombay High Court²³ and the former Chief Court of the Punjab.²⁴ If a dacoit in the progress of, and in pursuance of, the commission of a dacoity commits a murder, all of his companions, who are participating in the commission of the same dacoity, may be convicted under this section, although they may have no participation in the murder beyond the fact of participation in dacoity.²⁵ It is not necessary that the murder should have been within the contemplation of all or some of them when the dacoity was planned, nor is it necessary that they should have actually taken part in, or abetted, its commission. Indeed they may not have been present at the scene of murder, or may not have known even that murder was going to be, or had in fact been, committed. But nonetheless they all will be liable for enhanced punishment, provided a person is in fact murdered by one of the

¹⁸ Udai Patnaik, (1869) 4 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 5, 12 W.R. (Cr.) 68; La Saing, (1907) U. B. R. (1907-09) (Whipping) 1, 7 Cr. L. J. 212.

¹⁹ Daulat, (1926) 2 Luck. 264.

²⁰ Mathura Thakur, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 72.

²¹ Umrao Singh, (1894) 16 All. 437.

²² Teja, (1895) 17 All. 86.

²³ Girya Laxmappa, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 248, 1 Cr. L.J. 258.

²⁴ Chittu, (1900) P. R. No. 4 of 1900, 1 P. L. R. 44.

²⁵ Chittu, ibid.; Bechan Chero, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 577, [1944] AIR (P) 413.

members of the gang in commission of the dacoity.¹ The common object of an assembly was to commit a dacoity, and there was a general purpose to resist all opposers even, if necessary, to the point of death. This unlawful assembly did actually commit dacoity, and while retreating on the advent of villagers in superior force, one of its members shot and killed one of the villagers. It was held that as the murder was committed in effecting a safe retreat it should be ascertained whether the retreat was so separated by time or space from the offence which formed the common object of the assembly as not to form part of it; but as there was no such separation in that particular case and the retreat was an essential part of the common criminal purpose, it was a continuation of the actual dacoity, and the murder must be taken to have been committed in prosecution of the common object of the assembly.² Where certain persons who had committed dacoity were pursued in hot haste after the act of dacoity and being brought to bay, one of the dacoits stabbed and murdered a man who was pursuing him, it was held by a full bench of the Calcutta High Court that the act of murder was not a separate transaction but an offence committed 'in committing the dacoity' within the meaning of this section.³ Murder committed by dacoits while carrying away stolen property is 'murder committed in the commission' of dacoity.⁴

Where, after the commission of a dacoity, in which the dacoits, being interrupted by villagers, did not get any plunder, the dacoits, while attempting to escape, and one or more of them in order to facilitate the escape, attacked and killed one of the pursuing party, it was held that this section did not apply, but only the person or persons actually taking part in the killing were liable therefor.⁵ This case does not lay down sound law in view of the abovementioned decisions.

If a person concerned in a dacoity unintentionally commits murder he is liable to punishment under this section, but he cannot be separately convicted of murder under s. 302 and of dacoity under s. 395.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the commission of dacoity.⁷

If this was not the object of the accused there would be no conviction under this section.⁸

(2) That one of the accused committed murder.⁹

(3) That the murder was committed during the commission of dacoity.

Where dacoits set out armed with lethal weapons and spears and murder was committed in the course of the dacoity, it is hardly relevant to say that the primary object of the dacoits was to obtain loot and that they only intended to commit murder if this was found to be desirable in their own interests.¹⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

If, when a dacoity is planned, murder is contemplated from the first and is committed in the dacoity, any person, who joins in the conspiracy, is liable under s. 302 read with s. 109 to transportation for life, even if he does not eventually join in the commission of the dacoity with the other conspirators.¹¹

"If an accused takes part in any dacoity accompanied with murder, the proper section of the Penal Code to apply to him is s. 396 in addition to s. 400, and he is liable to be sentenced to death, or transportation for life, or 10 years' rigorous imprisonment and fine. If he has not rendered himself liable to this extent, a distinction must still be made between those dacoits who, though belonging to an organized band, have only recently joined it, and have perhaps not taken part in more than one or two

¹ Punjab Singh, (1933) 15 Lah. 84, 106.

² Sakharam Khandu, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 325; Sitaram, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 550, 26 Cr. L. J. 1364.

³ Monoranjana Bhattacharjya, (1932) 33 Cr. L. J. 722, F.B.

⁴ Vitti Thevan v. Vitti Thevan, (1906) 17 M. L. J. 118, 5 Cr. L. J. 201; Lashkar, (1921) 2 Lah. 275; Karim Baksh, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 31, [1923] AIR (L) 329; Sundar, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 700 [1925] AIR (L) 142; Bishunath, [1935]

O. W. N. 145.

⁵ Chandar, (1906) 26 A. W. N. 47, 3 Cr. L. J. 294.

⁶ Rughoo, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 30.

⁷ Vide s. 395, sup.

⁸ Mathura Thakur, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 71; Arshed Molla, (1919) 29 C. L. J. 325, 20 Cr. L. J. 525, [1919] AIR (C) 85.

⁹ Vide s. 300, sup.

¹⁰ Ishar Singh, [1939] Lah. 67.

¹¹ Sukhra, (1896) 10 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 20.

dacoits at the utmost, and those who have belonged to a gang for years and have taken part in many dacoities; between those who have belonged to the worst gangs, who go about armed defying the authorities and inflicting grievous hurt upon the people, and those smaller and less dangerous gangs who dacoit only because driven to do so by want and starvation, and because they are afraid to surrender, and who inflict no injury upon the people beyond that of depriving them of a few fowls and baskets of paddy, the food they are in search of".¹²

Where it is fully established that a dacoity was committed by a party of five persons one of whom committed a murder, and the identity of four of them is established beyond question, the fifth remaining unidentified, the four accused are equally guilty under this section, though it is not possible to trace and identify one of the culprits.¹³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed dacoity, and that, in the commission of such dacoity, murder was committed by one of your number, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 396 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.¹⁴

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (b) and 12 (2).

The offence of conspiracy is a separate offence from the offence of participation in a particular dacoity or the dishonest reception of property stolen in a dacoity knowing it to be stolen. Separate sentences can of course be awarded to run consecutively for participation in separate dacoities and to these can also be added a consecutive sentence of participation in conspiracy.¹⁵

As this section covers the offence under s. 395 it is improper to pass a separate sentence in respect of that offence inasmuch as a man is not to be punished twice for the same criminal act.¹⁶

Upon a conviction under this section it is not a general rule that a sentence of death should necessarily follow. This section differs from s. 302 in this respect that whereas under s. 302 the rule is that a sentence of death should follow unless reasons are shown for giving a lesser sentence, no such rule applies to this section. So, where in the course of a dacoity one man was shot dead, and the accused person who was tried had a gun and the other dacoits also had guns, and there was no evidence that the accused was the man who fired the fatal shot, the sentence was altered from one of death to one of transportation for life.¹⁷

The Rangoon High Court has, however, held that where fire-arms are used in the course of a dacoity and a person is murdered in order to intimidate a house-owner and villagers, extreme sentence should be inflicted.¹⁸ It has also held that where death penalty is not inflicted, reasons for not imposing it must be given.¹⁹ Although reasons must be given for not passing the death sentence that does not mean that the death penalty is the normal sentence for an offence under this section.²⁰

397. If, at the time of committing robbery or dacoity, the offender uses any deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt¹ to any person,² or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, the imprisonment with which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than seven years.

Robbery or dacoity, with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt.

¹² Per Ward, J. C., in Nga Lu Nge Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 441, 442.

¹³ Mohammad Ahsan, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 112, [1930] AIR (L) 263.

¹⁴ Vide Mutirulappan, (1878) 1 Weir 447.

¹⁵ Hazari Beria, (1928) 5 O. W. N. 985, 30 Cr. L. J. 473, [1928] AIR (O) 507.

¹⁶ Sharif, [1943] Kar. 371.

¹⁷ Lal Singh, [1938] All. 875.

¹⁸ Nga Tha Hmwe, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 267, [1935] AIR (R) 504.

¹⁹ Nga Sein Tun, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 699, [1933] AIR (R) 61 (1).

²⁰ Hla San, [1941] Ran. 595.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section is intended to cover the case of a person who displays a deadly weapon to frighten his victim or their neighbours or who makes use of any deadly weapon for other similar purposes and its operation is not confined to cases where the weapon is used actually for causing injury or for attempting to cause an injury to another.²¹

This section is merely a rider to s. 394. It does not create any substantive offence. It is complementary to ss. 392 and 395 which create the substantive offences. It merely regulates the punishment already provided for dacoity, by fixing a minimum term of imprisonment when its commission has been attended with certain aggravating circumstances, viz., (1) use of a deadly weapon, or (2) causing of grievous hurt, or (3) attempting to cause death or grievous hurt. The provisions of this section are obligatory as “the imprisonment with which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than seven years.”²²

1. ‘The offender uses any deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt’.—

A very wide interpretation was put upon the expression ‘uses a deadly weapon’ by the former Chief Court of Lower Burma. It held that this expression must include the carrying of a weapon for the purpose of overawing the person robbed. “It may be argued”, observed Twomey, J., “that to ‘use’ a stabbing weapon is to stab some person with it, to ‘use’ a cutting weapon is to cut some person with it, and to ‘use’ a gun is to shoot at some person with it. According to this narrow interpretation, brandishing a dagger or levelling a gun at a man might be regarded as merely threatening to use or preparing to use it, not as actually using it. But it is not clear that the word ‘uses’ in s. 397 should be interpreted with such strictness. The very next s. 398 imposes a minimum punishment of seven years’ punishment on persons convicted of merely carrying a deadly weapon when attempting to rob. It seems probable that the Legislature intended to impose the same minimum where the robbery is actually completed. I am inclined to think, therefore, that the word ‘uses’ in s. 397 should be construed in a wide sense so as to include not merely cutting, stabbing, shooting (as the case may be) but also carrying the weapon for the purpose of overawing the person robbed. It is no doubt at first sight remarkable that wider language is employed in s. 397 (‘uses any deadly weapon’) than in s. 398 (‘is armed with any deadly weapon’). The explanation is apparently that in attempted robberies it is often difficult to prove any ‘use’ of the deadly weapon except the mere fact that the accused carried it, whereas in a case of completed robbery it generally happens that the accused not only carries the deadly weapon but also overawes the person robbed or even stabs, cuts or shoots at him. The wider view of s. 397 is supported by a passage in Maxwell’s Interpretation of Statutes²³ :—‘If he a man walks with a gun with intent to kill game, he ‘uses’ the gun for that purpose without firing, within the statute which makes using a gun with that intent penal’. English and American authorities are given for this interpretation...If the accused had merely attempted to take the complainant’s property by overawing him with a dagger but (owing to infirmity of purpose on his own part or resistance on the part of the complainant) had not carried out his design, he would undoubtedly be liable to the minimum punishment provided in s. 398. The Legislature cannot have intended that if the criminal goes a step further and actually accomplishes his purpose he should thereby establish a claim to more lenient treatment. It cannot have been intended that a criminal should be urged to complete his criminal purpose by the reflection that if he stops short at an attempt he must get seven years, while if he completes the offence he may get off with imprisonment for two or three years.”²⁴ If a person levels his revolver against another in order to overawe him, he ‘uses’ it as a ‘deadly weapon’. It is not necessary that he must fire it.”²⁵

²¹ Inder Singh, (1934) 35 P. L. R. 555, 36 Cr. L. J. 253; Thevar Serrai, [1938] M. W. N. 215, 39 Cr. L. J. 323.

²² (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr. L.) 2; Wadhawa Singh, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 259, [1923] AIR (L) 389; Maru, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 119.

²³ 7th Edition, p. 240.

²⁴ Nga I, (1911) 6 L. B. R. 41, 42, 13 Cr. L. J. 267; Nazar Shah, (1925) 20 S. L. R. 46, 27 Cr. L. J. 334, [1926] AIR (S) 150; Nagar, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 1081, 34 Cr. L. J. 45, [1933] AIR (L) 85; Vellachami Thevan, [1933] M. W. N. 727.

²⁵ Chandra Nath, (1931) 7 Luck. 543.

According to the Bombay,¹ the Calcutta,² the Madras,³ the Patna⁴ and the Rangoon⁵ High Courts the liability to an enhanced punishment is limited to the offender who actually causes grievous hurt or uses a deadly weapon, and not to the case of persons associated with such offender in the commission of the offence. The words "offender" and "such offender" refer only to the persons who are proved to have actually 'used' deadly weapons and not to the others who in combination with such persons have committed robbery or dacoity. Section 34 has no application in the construction of this section though it may be read with ss. 392 and 395 to determine the substantive offence which is created.⁶ In one case the Allahabad High Court held that the words "such offender" include any person taking part in the dacoity who, though he may not himself have struck the blow causing the grievous hurt, is nevertheless liable for the act by reason of s. 34.⁷ But in subsequent cases it has laid down that the punishment provided for by this section applies only to those persons taking part in a dacoity who themselves used deadly weapons or themselves caused grievous hurt. It does not apply to such persons taking part in a dacoity as may be liable for grievous hurt, committed by one of the party only in virtue of s. 34.⁸ It has also held that if a gun is used at a dacoity by a person or persons unknown, all of the dacoits must be punished with at least seven years' imprisonment. In other words the section does not provide for joint liability as s. 149 does.⁹

The former Chief Court of the Punjab¹⁰ adopted the view expressed in Queen-Empress v. Mahabir Tiwari.¹¹ The Lahore High Court followed in the footsteps of the former Chief Court of the Punjab in one case¹² but in subsequent cases¹³ it has adopted the later view of the Allahabad High Court. It has definitely said: "All the High Courts in India have now taken the same view as to the application of s. 34 in dealing with punishment which may be awarded under s. 397, Indian Penal Code, and it now may be said to be finally established that s. 34 of the Code has no application in the construction of s. 397."¹⁵

The Chief Court of Oudh has adopted the later view of the Allahabad High Court.¹⁶

'Deadly weapon'.—See s. 448, infra. A lathi is not a deadly weapon within the meaning of this section.¹⁷ The section does not require the user of the deadly weapon to be against the person robbed. It is enough if it was used at the time of committing robbery. Where the accused uses a knife, which is a deadly weapon, at the time of committing robbery, by threatening the companions of the person robbed by frightening them and it strikes and causes injury to the person robbed, the accused should be convicted under s. 392 read with this section.¹⁸

'Grievous hurt'.—See s. 319, supra.

2. 'Person'.—See s. 11, supra.

¹ Deoji Keru, (1872) Unrep. Cr. C. 65, Cr. R. August 1, 1872; Bhura Ahir, (1903) 16 C. P. L. R. 97; Bala Huddar, (1931) 35 Cr. L. J. 594.

² Ali Mirza, (1923) 51 Cal. 265.

³ Arunachella Thevan, (1911) 22 M. L. J. 186, [1912] M. W. N. 35, 13 Cr. L. J. 42; Komali Viswasam, (1886) 1 Weir 450.

⁴ Labadan Sain, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 476, [1931] AIR (P) 49.

⁵ Nga Pu, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1285, [1926] AIR (R) 20; Nga Sein, (1905) 3 L. B. R. 121, 3 Cr. L. J. 354; Po Win, (1913) 7 L. B. R. 26, 14 Cr. L. J. 432; Po Myaing, (1920) 10 L. B. R. 269, 22 Cr. L. J. 593, [1920] AIR (LB) 116.

⁶ Ali Mirza, (1923) 51 Cal. 265.

⁷ Mahabir Tiwari, (1899) 21 All. 263. In Ghassu, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1181, [1925] AIR (N) 136, the Court of Judicial Commissioner, Nagpur, adopted this view differing from an earlier decision, Bhura Ahir, (1903) 16 C. P. L. R. 97.

⁸ Senta, (1899) 19 A. W. N. 186; Nanhe, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 567, [1931] AIR (A) 367; Nageshwar, (1906) 28 All. 404; Danna, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 449; Naubat, [1945] All. 527.

⁹ Abdul Salam, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 617; Hazara Singh, (1946) 25 Pat. 227.

¹⁰ Mohna, (1901) P. R. No. 16 of 1901; Chatar Singh, (1901) P. R. No. 15 of 1901.

¹¹ (1899) 21 All. 263.

¹² Dangar Khan, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 593.

¹³ Ilahia, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 405; Mohar Singh, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 398, 26 Cr. L. J. 1144.

¹⁴ Abdullah alias Dullah, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 627, 628, 27 Cr. L. J. 949. See also Fazal, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1098; Bachna, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 17, [1927] AIR (L) 149; Khuda Dad, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 156, [1927] AIR (L) 791.

¹⁵ Abdul Karim, (1927) 4 O. W. N. 459, 28 Cr. L. J. 520, [1927] AIR (O) 193, following Nageshwar, (1906) 28 All. 404; Bhagwant, (1900) 3 O. C. 263.

¹⁷ Lad Khan, (1912) 13 P. L. R. 351, 13 Cr. L. J. 182.

¹⁸ Public Prosecutor v. Nagappan Servai, [1941] 1 M. L. J. 965, [1941] M. W. N. 382, (1941) 53 L. W. 718, 42 Cr. L. J. 868, [1941] AIR (M) 718.

Violence should have been used in committing robbery or dacoity.—The accused fractured one of the arms of a woman by striking one or two blows with a stick, and thereby causing her to fall to the ground, his object being to steal the pony on which she was riding. He then attempted to mount and ride off on the pony but was prevented from doing so by the girth of the pony's saddle breaking. It was held that this section was applicable.¹⁹

The accused and another attacked a man and beat him with clubs. There was no evidence as to which of them it was who struck the blow which broke his finger. It was held that the accused were not liable to enhanced punishment under this section.²⁰

Where several persons were found endeavouring to break into a house, and some of them, being armed, used violence, but only in attempting to escape being arrested, it was held that they could not properly be convicted under this section read with s. 511.²¹

Burma amendment.—In Burma the words “uses any deadly weapon or” are omitted by Burma Act IV of 1940, s. 1. This Act has no retrospective effect, and consequently the provisions of this section as they existed prior to the amendment will be applied to offences committed before the date of the amendment.²²

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) the commission of robbery²³ or dacoity;²⁴

In the case of robbery a conviction under this section is equally good, whether the number of the accused be five or under.²⁵

(2) That the accused used a deadly weapon; or caused grievous hurt; or attempted to cause death or grievous hurt.

(3) That the above acts were done during the commission of robbery or dacoity.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Where, in a case of robbery, there is no intention of causing death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, the conviction must be under this section of “voluntarily causing grievous hurt in committing robbery”.¹

Charge.—In the charge the carrying of arms must be distinctly alleged. Where the accused are charged with, and convicted of, an offence punishable under s. 395, they cannot be punished under s. 398 of the Code.² This section does not create a substantive offence and a Court, therefore, should not frame a charge under it but under s. 392 read with s. 397, or s. 395 read with s. 397, as the case may be.³

The charge should be for the substantive offence of robbery or dacoity, and the following clause should be added to the charge:—

And that at the time of committing the said robbery (or dacoity) you used a deadly weapon, to wit—(mention the deadly weapon), [or caused grievous hurt to AB, or attempted to cause death or grievous hurt to AB], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

Punishment.—The maximum term of imprisonment that can be passed under this section cannot exceed ten years (see s. 396).⁴ The minimum is seven years.⁵ The Allahabad High Court has held that this section imposes a minimum sentence of seven years where a dacoit has used a deadly weapon or has caused grievous hurt, but that does not mean that a sentence of less than seven years should be passed on persons against whom it is impossible to prove that they used dangerous weapons themselves or caused grievous hurt.⁶

¹⁹ Harnaman, (1900) P. R. No. 6 of 1901.

²⁰ Bhagwant, (1900) 3 O. C. 263.

²¹ Beni, (1900) 23 All. 78.

²² Shwe Hla U, [1941] Ran. 58.

²³ Vide s. 392, sup.

²⁴ Vide s. 395, sup.

²⁵ Dwarka Aheer, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

¹ Chakor Haree, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

² Punya Sakharan, (1897) Cr. R. No. 25 of 1897, Unrep. Cr. C. 921; Durgya bin Ramappa, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 513.

³ Bhagwant, (1900) 3 O. C. 263; Tha Hmu, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 206, 1 Cr. L. J. 475; Dangar Khan, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 503; Po Myang, (1920) 10 L. B. R. 269, 22 Cr. L. J. 593, [1920] AIR (LB) 116.

⁴ Nama Dulab, (1908) Criminal Revisional Application No. 223 of 1908, decided on July 30, 1908 (Unrep. Bom.).

⁵ Radhia, (1927) 9 P. L. T. 572, 29 Cr. L. J. 85.

⁶ Bansi, [1941] A. L. J. R. 490, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 97, [1941] AIR (A) 359.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

398. If, at the time of attempting to commit robbery or dacoity, the offender is armed with any deadly weapon, the imprisonment with which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than seven years.

Attempt to commit robbery or dacoity when armed with deadly weapon.

COMMENT.

This section does not by itself create a substantive offence, but only regulates the measure of punishment when certain facts are found to exist in the commission of the substantive offence of robbery.⁷ It is applicable only to a case of an attempt to commit robbery and has no application to a case in which the robbery has actually been committed. It can regulate the punishment only in cases of an attempt to commit robbery as distinguished from a case in which the offender has already accomplished his purpose and robbery has actually been committed.⁸

To such of the offenders as are armed with deadly weapons, though they do not use them in the attempt to rob or commit dacoity, an imprisonment of not less than seven years must be awarded. It is the terror which the possession of a deadly weapon naturally creates that has led the Legislature to provide for a severe sentence where the offender has such a weapon.

It is necessary to show that at the time of committing robbery the accused was armed with a deadly weapon and not merely that one of the robbers who was with the accused at the time carried one.⁹ The words "offender" and "such offender" refer only to the persons who are proved to have actually been "armed with" deadly weapons and not to the others who in combination with such persons have committed robbery or dacoity. Section 34 has no application in the construction of this section, though it may be read with ss. 392 and 395 to determine the substantive offence which is created.¹⁰

Burma amendment.—In Burma this section has been repealed by Burma Act IV of 1940, s. 2.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the attempt to commit robbery or dacoity.

(2) That the accused was armed with a deadly weapon.

(3) That he was so armed when the robbery or dacoity was committed.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Abetment.—A person cannot be convicted of abetting an offence under this section. The appropriate sections for abetment should be ss. 393, 114. Where a person was convicted under this section for abetment and the charge was not amended by the Sessions Court, the charge was altered on appeal into one under ss. 393, 114.¹¹

Charge.—See the last section.

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d), and 12 (2).

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

⁷ Nabibux, (1927) 30 Bom. L. R. 88, 52 Bom. 168.

⁸ Chandra Nath, (1931) 7 Luck. 543.

⁹ Bhavjya, (1895) Cr. R. No. 54 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 795; Deoji Keru, (1872) Unrep. Cr. C. 65; Bhan Singh, (1932) 34 P. L. R. 449,

33 Cr. L. J. 460.

¹⁰ Ali Mirza, (1923) 51 Cal. 265; Nabibux, (1927) 30 Bom. L. R. 88, 52 Bom. 168; Bhan Singh, (1932) 34 P. L. R. 449, 33 Cr. L. J. 460.

¹¹ Nag, Pu, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1285, [1926] AIR (R) 207.

399. Whoever makes any preparation¹ for committing dacoity, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making preparation to commit dacoity.

COMMENT.

Under the Code, mere preparation to commit an offence is punishable in three cases: (1) preparation to wage war against the King (s. 122); (2) preparation to commit depredation on territories of a power at peace with the King (s. 126); and (3) preparation to commit dacoity. Preparation to commit any other offence, such as house-breaking or robbery, is not an offence.¹²

1. 'Makes any preparation'.—It is ordinarily no offence to make preparation for committing a crime until the stage of preparation has passed and that of attempt is reached. But it is an offence under this section to "make preparation for committing dacoity." No hard and fast rule can be laid down that any particular act or any particular kind of steps towards the commission of an offence are necessary to constitute "preparation." The essential thing is that the prosecution must show that there were persons who had conceived the design of committing dacoity. Once the existence of such a conspiracy has been established then any step taken with the intention and for the purpose of forwarding that design may justify the Court in holding that there has been preparation within the meaning of this section.¹³ The words "makes any preparation" point to acts done prior to a commencement of the execution of the guilty purpose and it may be before any particular dacoity is planned. It will be enough if there is a general design to commit dacoity, or to engage in an expedition for this purpose, though the plans of the dacoits are not yet matured. The making of 'preparation' should be shown to the satisfaction of the Court by some act, such as the collection of men, arms, provisions, etc., which, coupled with other circumstances, plainly manifest the intention to commit dacoity.¹⁴ A man may in conjunction with others make preparation for committing dacoity without having any intention of taking an active part himself in the actual dacoity.¹⁵ A mere assembling without further preparation is not a preparation within the meaning of this section. Mere assembling without proof of other preparation is punishable under s. 402. A person may not be guilty of dacoity, yet guilty of preparation, and not guilty of preparation yet guilty of assembling.¹⁶ In order to constitute preparation it is not necessary that an overt act towards the commission of dacoity should have been done. The law requires that the accused should have done some act to get ready for committing dacoity. Where it is found that the members of a gang had taken in their possession instruments for house-breaking and arms for the purpose of offence and defence and had actually proceeded to a place near the scene of the contemplated dacoity, the Court is justified in holding that there was not a mere assemblage but that the members of the assemblage had got ready for the actual commission of a dacoity.¹⁷ Where a band of armed men some of them with unlicensed fire-arms, who were moving about many miles from their village attempting to conceal their presence threatened those who enquired who they were, resisted pursuit and fired at those who pursued them, the only reasonable inference that can be drawn is that the men were dacoits and had made preparations to commit dacoity.¹⁸

In order to establish an offence under this section, it is not necessary that the persons shown to be making the preparation should be five or more in number. But it is necessary to prove that the raid for which they were making preparation was to be committed by five or more persons. Otherwise it would not be dacoity but merely robbery, and mere preparation for committing robbery, unless it ends in an actual attempt, is not punishable by law.¹⁹

As to the distinction between preparation and attempt, see s. 511, infra.

¹² Shera, (1868) P. R. No. 18 of 1868.

¹³ Jain Lal, (1942) 21 Pat. 667.

¹⁴ M. & M. 357; Karmun, (1915) P. R. No. 6 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 280, [1916] AIR (L) 334.

¹⁵ Nga Lin, (1935) 36 Cr. L. J. 1384, 1386.

¹⁶ Ramesh Chandra Bannerjee, (1913) 41 Cal. 350.

¹⁷ Karmun, (1915) P. R. No. 6 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 280, [1916] AIR (L) 334; Indar Singh, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 752, 27 Cr. L. J. 1161; Bhagwan Bakhsh, [1935] O. W. N. 770, 36 Cr. L. J. 1003.

¹⁸ Haji, [1943] Kar. 139.

¹⁹ Khawaja Hassan, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 136.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the act of the accused amounted to preparation.
(2) That it was preparation to commit dacoity.

Where one of the prosecution witnesses in a case under this section had been in the company of the accused persons at the time when plans for committing dacoity were made and took part in the preparation therefor, he was held to be an accomplice and his evidence was not accepted as sufficient, without corroboration.²⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, made preparation, to wit——, for committing dacoity, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 399 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

400. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall belong¹ to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity,² shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for belonging to gang of dacoits.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section was intended by the Legislature to provide for the punishment of those who belong to a gang of persons who make it their business to commit dacoity; and it is not essential for the purpose of conviction that the evidence should show the same degree of particularity as to the commission of each individual dacoity as is required to support a simple and substantive charge of that crime. It is sufficient to establish that the person accused belongs to a gang whose business is the habitual commission of dacoity, or, in other words, that he was associated with others for the habitual pursuit of that offence.²¹ It is not necessary that the person belonging to a gang must have taken part in any one dacoity. But actual participation by that person in any given dacoity is sufficient evidence both of his association with the gang and of his object in such association.

Association for the habitual pursuit of dacoity is the gist of the offence under this section.²² A conviction can be had even where no actual commission of a dacoity is proved.²³ The offence is of a very special character.

1. 'Belong'.—The word 'belong' implies something more than the idea of casual association; it involves the notion of continuity and indicates a more or less intimate connection with a body of persons extending over a period of time sufficiently long to warrant the inference that the person affected has identified himself with a band, the common purpose of which is the habitual commission of dacoity.²⁴ Where ²⁰ Karim Baksh, (1927) 9 Lah. 550.

²¹ Kure, (1896) 6 A. W. N. 65, 66; Kader Sundar, (1911) 16 C. W. N. 69, 13 Cr. L.J. 39; Murli Brahman, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1412, 27 O. C. 385.

²² Kader Sundar, (1911) 16 C. W. N. 69, 13 Cr. L. J. 39.

²³ Murli Brahman, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1412, 27 O. C. 385; Suresh Chandra Bannerjee, (1927)

47 C. L. J. 471, 29 Cr. L. J. 705, [1928] AIR (C) 309.

²⁴ Hira Lal, (1910) 13 O. C. 243, 11 Cr. L.J. 554; Bachchu, (1930) 7 O. W. N. 862, 32 Cr. L. J. 162, [1930] AIR (O) 455; Bhabuti, (1921) 19 A. L. J. R. 725, 22 Cr. L. J. 663, [1921] AIR (A) 32; Suresh Chandra Bannerjee, (1927) 47 C.L. J. 471, 29 Cr. L. J. 705, [1928] AIR (C) 309.

at the trial of a gang of habitual dacoits who were charged with the commission of ten dacoities, the evidence against an individual was no more than that he had joined them in the commission of one dacoity and that he must have known that they were a gang of habitual dacoits, it was held that it was not established that he belonged to the gang within the meaning of this section.²⁵ The mere fact that women lived as wives or mistresses with men who were dacoits is not sufficient for a Court to hold that they belonged to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity within the meaning of this section, unless it be proved that the women themselves were associated with their husbands or protectors for the purpose of themselves habitually committing dacoities.¹ A person cannot be said to belong to a gang of dacoits in respect of whom the Court is satisfied that his connection with the gang was limited and was always intended to be limited to a series of acts, none of which amounted either to dacoity or to abetment of dacoity, though they might be punishable under s. 216A.² Generally speaking, only those persons can be convicted under this section, who have either taken active part in the crime or been employed for the purpose of scouting or in other ways facilitating the commission of the crime.³

2. 'Associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity'.—The word 'habitual' means constant.⁴ The element of the offence under this section is association with the knowledge that the gang is formed for the purpose of committing dacoities habitually and conviction can be had under this section even where no actual commission of dacoity by a particular accused person is proved.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused belonged to the gang in question.

(2) That such gang was associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity.⁶

One of the chief points to establish in a case of gang dacoity is association in the crime, and if it can be proved that certain persons have joined together to commit burglaries as well as dacoities, the former fact is strong evidence of criminal association and is relevant to show that they are members of the gang. If a gang can be shown to have been associated for the habitual commission of dacoities, evidence as to other crimes committed by the gang, e.g. burglaries, may very well be relevant against the accused.⁷

It is not necessary that the person convicted must have taken part in any one dacoity. Evidence, showing the actual participation by an accused in any given dacoity, is evidence both of his association with the gang and of his object, in such association, Evidence which though not believed for the purpose of a conviction under s. 395 may yet be relied upon for the purpose of a conviction under this section. A conviction under this section cannot be considered bad in law merely because the evidence on the record would also have justified a conviction of a specific offence under s. 395.⁸

The associating and the purpose of the association may be proved by direct evidence or by proof of facts from which they can be reasonably inferred. Evidence that the accused or groups of them had been concerned in a large number of dacoities in a comparatively short space of time may be sufficient evidence of such association.⁹ It is not sufficient to prove simply that the accused gave shelter and assistance to dacoits.¹⁰ The special conspiracy must be proved.¹¹

The general criminality of a tribe or caste cannot be imputed to individual members operating in gangs where the prosecution is under this section, and the fact

²⁵ Bhabuti, (1921) 19 A. L. J. R. 725 22 Cr. L. J. 663, [1921] AIR (A) 32.

¹ Yelli kom Yella, (1896) Cr. R. No. 26 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 863.

² Gaya Din, (1908) 13 O. C. 235, 11 Cr. L. J. 551.

³ Nidhi, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 660, 26 Cr. L. J. 123.

⁴ See Baburam Kansari, (1891) 19 Cal. 190.

⁵ Murli Brahman, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1412, 27 O. C. 385.

⁶ Naba Kumar Patnaik, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 146; Walita, (1910) 11 P. L. R. 42, 11 Cr. L. J.

364; Mooktaram Sirdar, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 18; Kure, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 65; Arumugam, (1937) 48 L. W. 639, [1938] M. W. N. 595, 40 Cr. L. J. 855.

⁷ Nidhi, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 660, 26 Cr. L. J. 123.

⁸ Bachchu, (1930) 7 O. W. N. 862, 868, 32 Cr. L. J. 162, [1930] AIR (O) 455.

⁹ The Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu, (1908) 32 Mad. 179.

¹⁰ Vithu Rayaji, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 156.

¹¹ Tirumal Reddi, (1901) 24 Mad. 523, 546.

that members of the tribe generally were alleged to have been implicated in several dacoities within a period of ten years preceding the trial was not sufficient proof against the persons under trial when it appeared that the tribe contained within it thousands of human beings.¹²

Where association for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity had not been made out, the mere fact that some of the accused had been previously convicted of dacoity or theft or had been bound down to be of good behaviour under s. 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, was of no consequence.¹³ The accused were charged under this section with belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity. The prosecution sought to prove against some of the accused that they had been previously convicted of theft or had been ordered to give security for good behaviour on the ground of being habitual thieves. It was held that evidence regarding previous conviction or bad livelihood was not admissible under s. 14 of the Evidence Act, because the offence for which the accused were being tried was the particular one of belonging to a gang of dacoits and simple theft or bad livelihood, in which the order for giving security was based on evidence that the accused habitually committed thefts, was not evidence indicating an intention to commit the particular crime of which the accused were charged.¹⁴

But where there is sufficient evidence to establish association for the purpose of habitually committing theft, evidence of previous convictions of offences against property and of bad livelihood is admissible to prove habit, and for this purpose, convictions of bad livelihood are more cogent than those of isolated thefts.¹⁵ Evidence that the accused were bound down under s. 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is admissible.¹⁶

Previous conviction of the accused for dacoity along with other dacoities is relevant against him under Explanation 2 to s. 14 of the Indian Evidence Act. But the propriety of the conviction of the accused must be judged exclusively by reference to the evidence adduced by the prosecution at the trial.¹⁷ The fact that some of the persons undergoing trial for an offence under this section had once been sent up on a charge of dacoity of which they were acquitted could not be relied on to prove that they were habitual dacoits. No adverse inference can be drawn against accused persons after their acquittal.¹⁸

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, belonged to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 400 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—“There are...many points which have to be considered...in determining what is an adequate sentence to pass upon an accused convicted of an offence falling under s. 400...Among these may be noted the following:—

- (1) How long has the accused belonged to the gang?
- (2) What dacoities have been committed by the gang since the accused joined it?
- (3) In how many of these dacoities did the accused actually take part? (If the accused are being separately prosecuted for every dacoity in which they have been concerned as members of the gang, this point must be left out of consideration).
- (4) What was the character of the dacoities in which the accused actually took part? Were they accompanied with murder, culpable homicide, grievous hurt, torture,

¹² Kader Sundar, (1911) 16 C. W. N. 69, 12 Cr. L. J. 39.

¹³ Ibid.

¹⁴ Haji Sher Mahomed, (1921) 25 Bom. L. R. 214, 46 Bom. 958.

¹⁵ Bhona, (1911) 38 Cal. 408; Ledu Molla,

(1925) 52 Cal. 595.

¹⁶ Ledu Molla, ibid.

¹⁷ Walha, (1910) 11 P. L. R. 42, 11 Cr. L. J. 364.

¹⁸ Kader Sundar, (1911) 16 C. W. N. 69, 13 Cr. L. J. 39.

or with any acts of a specially brutal character, or were they only dacoities of the ordinary character ? ”¹⁹

In the case of a gang consisting of desperate men prepared to proceed to all lengths in carrying out their crimes, the heaviest possible sentences should be passed. In awarding sentences the Court ought to consider not so much whether particular offenders were concerned in only one or more of the dacoities committed by the gang, as whether it was clearly established that they did in fact join a recognized gang.²⁰

Separate sentences can be passed on an accused person, who has been proved to have taken part in a particular dacoity and also to have been a member of a gang of dacoits. The limit of punishment prescribed by s. 71 does not apply to such a case. The provisions of s. 397 of the Code of Criminal Procedure will apply to such a case and then it will be at the discretion of the criminal Court whether the two sentences should run concurrently or not.²¹

As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11(d) and 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, 1898, s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II.

401. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall belong to any wandering or other gang of persons¹ associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery,² and not being a gang of thugs or dacoits, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The principle enunciated in the last section is extended by this section to a gang of thieves or robbers. The gist of an offence under this section is association for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery.

Technically the offence of being a member of a gang associated for the purpose of committing burglaries is different from that of actually taking part in them, but looked at from a practical point of view, unless the activities materialise into active burglaries or attempt at burglaries nobody will be any the wiser or take any action.²²

The ‘association’ referred to in the section must be a conscious association with the primary object of committing the offences mentioned therein.²³

Scope.—This section “no doubt has excellent objects and uses; but it ought not to be resorted to when the person sought to be brought within its four corners, might have been made responsible for distinct and individual offences: nor is it intended to affect them, unless an association for the habitual commission of theft or robbery is clearly made out”.²⁴

1. ‘Belong to any wandering or other gang of persons’.—The word “belong” is very comprehensive, but the expression “to belong to a gang of persons, etc.”, conveys the same idea as “to be one of a gang of persons, etc.” “Gang” is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word “gangan” to go, and its dictionary meaning is “a number going in company, hence a company or number of persons associated for a particular purpose”. If it could be said that a person belongs to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft because he receives stolen property from them, then this section would apply to all who may in some way or other be connected with the gang, for instance, the wives and children of the men constituting the gang, and persons who may give them shelter or provide food for them. The object of the section obviously is to punish the persons who organize thieving expeditions and form a party to commit theft. A person who receives stolen property from them, for instance, a saraf (merchant) cannot be said to belong to their gang.

¹⁹ Per Ward, J. C., in Nga Lu Nge Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 441, 442.

²⁰ Ghulam Mustafa, (1911) 12 P. L. R. 297, 12 Cr. L. J. 260.

²¹ Murli Brahman, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1412, 27 O. C. 385.

L. C.—62

²² Surjan Singh, (1931) 33 P. L. R. 602, 33 Cr. L. J. 251.

²³ Ajita, (1911) 9 A. L. J. R. 565, 12 Cr. L. J. 204.

²⁴ Per Straight, J., in Jahangira, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 16.

The habitual receiver of stolen property is punishable under s. 413 and not under this section.²⁵

2. 'Associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery.'—Habit is to be proved by the aggregate of acts, and though the charge is a charge of a single offence, the period over which the association extends is often very long; and the longer the period the better it is to establish habit.¹ It is not necessary to prove that each individual member of the gang has habitually committed theft or any particular act of theft. Once it is proved that a gang was formed for the purpose of habitually committing theft, all persons who thereafter join the gang in committing one more theft come within the purview of this section.²

CASES.

Where it was proved that certain persons were found together at some distance from their houses, that they were all intimately connected with one another and were in the habit of visiting melas (assemblies) together, that one of them was arrested in the act of picking a pocket, and that when they were arrested many of them gave false names and false addresses, it was held that they could not be convicted under this section, there being no proof that they belonged to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft.³ In a trial on a charge of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft, the evidence against the accused was of three kinds, viz. (1) that they were seen together at midnight in a certain place with implements of house-breaking on a certain night; (2) that some of them were seen together in different places where house-breaking and theft were immediately afterwards committed; and (3) that they had been each convicted at different times of theft, etc. It was held that the above circumstances were not sufficient proof of the association and of the association being for the habitual committing of theft which are required to be established to support a charge under this section.⁴ Where the accused were arrested together in one village and there was no doubt that each of the accused had individually committed theft or robbery, but it was not shown that there had been any association among the accused for the purpose of committing theft or robbery, much less for the purpose of habitually committing such offences, it was held that conviction under this section was not sustainable.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that there existed a gang of persons.

(2) That those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery.

(3) That theft or robbery was to be committed habitually.⁶

(4) That the accused was a member of such gang.⁷

A prosecution under this section is of a peculiar nature differing from an ordinary case in the number of accused involved and the extent of time covered by their operations. There can be no definite rule of limitation barring responsibility for stolen property after a certain time. Each case must be judged on its own facts, the important factors being the number of articles recovered and the way in which the information led to the recovery.⁸

Aggregate of acts will prove the habit.⁹ It is not necessary to prove that each individual member of the gang has habitually committed theft or has committed any particular theft in company with other members. Once it is proved that a gang, however small, was formed for the purpose of habitually committing theft, all persons

²⁵ Abdulla, (1926) 28 P. L. R. 19, 23, 28 Cr. L. J. 179, 180, [1927] AIR (L) 524; Arjan Das, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 736, 33 Cr. L. J. 584.

¹ Kasam Ali, (1919) 47 Cal. 154, 159.

² Darya Singh, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 520, (1923) AIR (L) 666.

³ Mankura Pasi, (1899) 27 Cal. 139.

⁴ Suban, (1894) 1 Weir 452.

⁵ Afridi, (1879) P. R. No. 9 of 1880.

⁶ Shriram Venkatasami, (1871) 6 M. H. C. 120, 1 Weir 452; Mankura Pasi, (1899) 27 Cal.

139; Naba Kumar Patnaik, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 146; Dwarka Bania, (1899) 3 C. W. N. cccxxxviii (338n); Ajita, (1911) 9 A. L. J. R. 565, 12 Cr. L. J. 204; Peera, (1869) P. R. No. 37 of 1869; Ishar Das, (1912) 13 P. L. R. 813, 13 Cr. L. J. 799.

⁷ Pir Baksh, (1923) 24 Cr. L. J. 703, [1923] AIR (L) 327.

⁸ Andumiyar, [1937] Nag. 315.

⁹ Savaladas, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 418.

who thereafter joined that gang in committing one or more thefts, come within the purview of this section.¹⁰ Any person who knowing of the existence of such a gang joins that gang for the purpose of committing even one theft is guilty under this section. At the same time a person may have taken part in a theft with one or more members of a gang without himself becoming a member of that gang.¹¹ Evidence showing the actual participation by an accused in any given theft or robbery is evidence both of his association with the gang and of his object in such association.¹² Merely being seen getting on board a boat with four persons, who have on their own admission been convicted of belonging to a gang of dacoits, is held not sufficient evidence against those so seen.¹³

Evidence of the commission of several thefts, of meeting together at different places, before and after the commission of thefts and burglaries in bazaars, boats and houses, of being seen on various occasions carrying away stolen articles or found in company under circumstances suggesting complicity in thefts and burglaries, and evidence of systematic thefts of cattle by individual accused are sufficient to support a conviction under this section.¹⁴

The possession of stolen property by the gang, and the fact that the country through which the gang passed was free from petty crimes when they were not about, are admissible facts.¹⁵ Similarly, evidence of previous convictions of some of the accused for theft, house-breaking, receiving or concealing stolen property both prior and subsequent to the year when the gang was found to have been first formed, is admissible.¹⁶

Evidence of character of accused.—The character of the accused not being a fact in issue in the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft, evidence of bad character or reputation of the accused is inadmissible.¹⁷ This case has been doubted in a subsequent case in which it is held that where other evidence establishes association for the purpose of habitually committing theft, evidence of previous convictions of offences against property and of bad livelihood is admissible to prove habit; and for this purpose convictions of bad livelihood are more cogent than those of isolated thefts.¹⁸ For the purpose of determining whether a party of accused persons constituted a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitual theft, the evidence that each individual of that party is a convicted thief is relevant. Such evidence can be tendered before or after the prosecution have established the association.¹⁹ At the trial of an accused in 1923 for the offence of belonging to a gang of thieves, a former judgment convicting him of dacoity in 1897 was held admissible in evidence. The former judgment is, however, only useful for showing that the accused is a person of criminal tendencies to theft who may be a member of the alleged gang. It by no means goes to show that he had any habit of committing thefts in the period under consideration.²⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge to jury.—The Judge should put clearly to the jury—(1) the necessity of proof of association; and (2) the need of proving that that association was for the purpose of habitual theft, and that habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts.²¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, belonged to a (wandering) gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft (or robbery), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 401 of the Indian

¹⁰ Beja, (1913) P. R. No. 13 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 33, [1914] AIR (L) 539.

¹¹ Wasawa Singh, (1916) 17 P. L. R. 282, 17 Cr. L. J. 443, [1916] AIR (L) 447.

¹² Lale, (1929) 5 Luck. 101.

¹³ Kamal Fukeer, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 50.

¹⁴ Kasem Ali, (1919) 47 Cal. 154; Mahadeo, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 807, [1926] AIR (N) 426.

¹⁵ Dukharan, (1904) 7 O. C. 163, 1 Cr. L. J. 490.

¹⁶ Hidayata, (1914) P. R. No. 3 of 1915, 16

Cr. L. J. 800, [1914] AIR (L) 545.

¹⁷ Mankura Pasi, (1899) 27 Cal. 139.

¹⁸ Bhona, (1911) 38 Cal. 480; Baksho, (1930) 24 S. L. R. 252, 31 Cr. L. J. 1046, [1930] AIR (S) 211.

¹⁹ Tukaram Malhari, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 373, 13 Cr. L. J. 539.

²⁰ Motiram Hari, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 1223, 26 Cr. L. J. 1391.

²¹ Shriram Venkatasami, (1871) 6 M. H. C. 120, 1 Weir 452.

Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II.

“If an accused takes part in any dacoity accompanied with murder, the proper section of the Penal Code to apply to him is s. 396 in addition to s. 400, and he is liable to be sentenced to death, or transportation for life, or ten years' rigorous imprisonment and fine. If he has not rendered himself liable to this extent, a distinction must still be made between those dacoits who, though belonging to an organised band, have only recently joined it, and have perhaps not taken part in more than one or two dacoities at the utmost, and those who have belonged to a gang for years and have taken part in many dacoities; between those who have belonged to the worst gangs, who go about armed defying the authorities and inflicting grievous hurt upon the people, and those smaller and less dangerous gangs who dacoit only because driven to do so by want and starvation, and because they are afraid to surrender, and who inflict no injury upon the people beyond that of depriving them of a few fowls and baskets of paddy, the food they are in search of”.²²

402. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall be one of five or more persons assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Assembling for purpose of committing dacoity.

COMMENT.

This section applies to mere assembling without proof of other preparation. Where there is preparation s. 399 applies.²³

Five or more persons (who constitute an unlawful assembly) meeting for a common purpose to commit dacoity are subject to the severe punishment provided in this section, even though the persons assembled may not have proceeded one step towards the accomplishment of their objects.

CASES.

Where the accused knew that the assembly, of which they formed a part, was an assembly for the purpose of committing dacoity, and that all the persons of the assembly lived on the proceeds of dacoity and had no other means of living, they were held guilty of this offence.²⁴ Several persons were found at eleven o'clock at night on a road just outside the city of Agra, all carrying arms (guns and swords) concealed under their clothes. None of them had a license to carry arms, and none of them could give any reasonable explanation of his presence at the spot under the particular circumstances. It was held that they were guilty under this section.²⁵ Fifteen men were seen approaching a village and split up into three bands just outside the village. Subsequently, different members of these three bands were caught and found to be in possession of arms and ammunition, and none of them could explain his presence at the spot. It was held that they were members of a party and had collected for the purpose of committing dacoity and were consequently liable to be convicted under this section.¹ Where the accused belonging to different villages were found at a lonely well at a long distance

²² Per Ward, J. C., in Nga Lu Nge Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 441, 442.

²³ Ramesh Chandra Banerjee, (1913) 41 Cal. 350.

²⁴ Kendra Kamar, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 61, [97].

²⁵ Bholu, (1900) 23 All. 124. This decision is somewhat startling as from the facts given in the report it does not appear that it was the object of the accused to commit dacoity and not any other offence. It has been referred to with approval in Bhola, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 1028, 26 Cr. L. J. 380.

¹ Bhola, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 1028, 26 Cr. L. J. 380.

from their homes fully armed and equipped for committing a dacoity, a conviction under this section was held maintainable.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that five or more persons were assembled.

(2) That they were assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity.

(3) That the accused was one of such persons.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, were one of five (or more) persons assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 402 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (1898) s. 4 (3) (b).

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

Of Criminal Misappropriation of Property.

403. Whoever dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use¹ any moveable property,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A takes property belonging to Z out of Z's possession in good faith, believing, at the time when he takes it, that the property belongs to himself. A is not guilty of theft; but if A, after discovering his mistake, dishonestly appropriates the property to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(b) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent. Here, if A was under the impression that he had Z's implied consent to take the book for the purpose of reading it, A has not committed theft. But, if A afterwards sells the book for his own benefit, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A and B, being joint owners of a horse, A takes the horse out of B's possession, intending to use it. Here, as A has a right to use the horse, he does not dishonestly misappropriate it. But, if A sells the horse and appropriates the whole proceeds to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

Explanation 1.—A dishonest misappropriation for a time only is a misappropriation within the meaning of this section.

ILLUSTRATION.

A finds a Government promissory note belonging to Z, bearing a blank endorsement. A, knowing that the note belongs to Z, pledges it with a banker as a security for a loan, intending at a future time to restore it to Z. A has committed an offence under this section.

Explanation 2.—A person who finds property not in the possession of any other person, and takes such property for the purpose of protecting it for, or of restoring it to, the owner, does not take or misappropriate it dishonestly, and is not guilty of an offence; but he is guilty of the offence above defined, if he appropriates it to his own use, when he knows or has the means of discovering the owner, or before he has used reasonable means to discover and give notice to the owner and has kept the property a reasonable time to enable the owner to claim it.

¹ Waryam Singh, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 605; 144.
Ahmad, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 14, [1928] AIR (L)

What are reasonable means or what is a reasonable time in such a case, is a question of fact.

It is not necessary that the finder should know who is the owner of the property, or that any particular person is the owner of it: it is sufficient if, at the time of appropriating it, he does not believe it to be his own property, or in good faith believe that the real owner cannot be found.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A finds a rupee on the high-road, not knowing to whom the rupee belongs. A picks up the rupee. Here A has not committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A finds a letter on the road, containing a bank note. From the direction and contents of the letter he learns to whom the note belongs. He appropriates the note. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A finds a cheque payable to bearer. He can form no conjecture as to the person who has lost the cheque. But the name of the person, who has drawn the cheque, appears. A knows that this person can direct him to the person in whose favour the cheque was drawn. A appropriates the cheque without attempting to discover the owner. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(d) A sees Z drop his purse with money in it. A picks up the purse with the intention of restoring it to Z, but afterwards appropriates it to his own use. A has committed an offence under this section.

(e) A finds a purse with money, not knowing to whom it belongs; he afterwards discovers that it belongs to Z, and appropriates it to his own use. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(f) A finds a valuable ring, not knowing to whom it belongs. A sells it immediately without attempting to discover the owner. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

COMMENT.

Criminal misappropriation takes place when the possession has been innocently come by, but where, by a subsequent change of intention, or from the knowledge of some new fact with which the party was not previously acquainted, the retaining becomes wrongful and fraudulent.³ The offence consists in the dishonest misappropriation or conversion, either permanently or for a time, of property which is already without wrong in the possession of the offender.⁴ See illustrations (a), (b) and (c) which show that the original innocent taking amounts to criminal misappropriation by subsequent acts.

This section lays down a principle quite at variance with the English law according to which the intention of the accused at the time of obtaining the possession of property is only taken into account. If the intention was not dishonest when the possession was obtained, subsequent change of intention does not convert the possession into an illegal one. Explanation 2 emphasizes the difference between the English law and the Code.

"Section 403 requires that the property should be shown to have been misappropriated or converted to his own use by the accused. The mere possession of the property is not sufficient for proving the charge without something to indicate the appropriation or conversion though long possession without any attempt to find the owner may amount to evidence of intention to do so... There is no proof of any other overt act indicating conversion or appropriation to his own use, nor did any interval of time worth considering elapse between the taking and the arrest to raise any presumption, from the mere act of detention, of an intention to misappropriate or convert. Explanation (2) to s. 403... makes the necessity of some positive proof of this sort quite clear. Illustration (a) shows that the picking up of a rupee, whose owner is not known, is not an offence. Similarly, Illustration (e) shows that the finding of a purse with money belonging to an unknown owner is not an offence, but the appropriation of it to the finder's own use is necessary to complete it".⁵

³ Per Norris and Ghose, JJ., in Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome, (1888) 15 Cal. 388, 400.

⁴ Ramakrishna, (1888) 12 Mad. 49, 50.

According to the English law innocent taking followed by conversion, owing to subsequent change of intention, is a civil wrong but not an offence.

Theft and criminal misappropriation.—In theft the object of the offender always is to take property which is in the possession of a person out of that person's possession; and the offence is complete as soon as the offender has moved the property in order to a dishonest taking of it. In criminal misappropriation, there is not necessarily an invasion of the possession of another person by an attempt to take from him that which he possesses. The offender is already in possession of the property; and is either lawfully in possession of it, because either he has found it or is a just owner of it, or his possession, if not strictly lawful, is not punishable as an offence because he has acquired it under some mistaken notion of right in himself or of consent given by another.

Ingredients.—The section requires—

1. Dishonest misappropriation or conversion of property for a person's own use.

2. Such property must be movable.

1. 'Dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use'.—"In order to be dishonest the property must be misappropriated or converted 'with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person, or wrongful loss to another', that is, with the intention to cause gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining it is not legally entitled, or the loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled. The gain or loss of property, and the gain or loss of the possession of property are not necessarily identical things, and the distinction is especially clear when the loss of possession is only temporary, and is intended by the person who causes such loss to be temporary only. When there is no intention to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss of property, and merely an intention to deprive the owner temporarily of the use of property, dishonesty is not made out".⁶ The offence is complete as soon as there is a misappropriation or conversion with a dishonest intention. It is not necessary that loss to the owner should have actually accrued by that time.⁷ The offence is complete if the conversion is done with the intention of causing wrongful gain to the offender irrespective of any loss which may ensue to any other person. The offence does not depend on the consequence which has ensued, but only on the act which has been done.⁸ A wrong opinion that the accused was justified in keeping the thing does not constitute this offence,⁹ nor does a mere retention of a redeemed pledge by the pledgee as security for the repayment of a loan of a different person constitute this offence.¹⁰ Where a criminal intention is an essential ingredient of the crime charged against a person, any mental state in addition to drunkenness can also be put forward with equal relevancy for the purpose of negating the existence of that intention.¹¹

'Dishonestly misappropriates.'—The verb 'to appropriate' in this connection means setting apart for, or assigning to, a particular person or use; and to 'misappropriate' means to set apart for or assign to the wrong person or a wrong use, and this act must be done dishonestly.¹² The word 'misappropriation' is in the ⁵ Per Chatterji, J., in Phuman, (1907) P. R. No. 11 of 1908, at pp. 33, 34, 8 Cr. L. J. 250, 253.

⁶ Per Plowden, J., in Jhandu, (1886) P. R. No. 27 of 1886, at p. 59.

⁷ Kashiram Mehta, (1934) 56 All. 1047, F.B.

⁸ Simhachalam, (1917) 44 Cal. 912, 915;
Ahmed Ebrahim, v. Hajee A. A. Ganny, (1923)

1 Ran. 56.

⁹ Khanderao, (1894) Cr. R. No. 30 of 1894, Unrep. Cr. C. 700.

¹⁰ Gulab Chand Sowcar v. Arumugam, [1935] M. W. N. 1063.

¹¹ Joseph, [1939] Mad. 353, 355.

¹² Sohan Lal, (1915) 13 A. L. J. R. 1131, 16 Cr. L. J. 795, [1915] AIR (A) 380.

illustrations and in the Explanations to the section replaced by the expression "appropriates to his own use", which seems equivalent to "setting apart for his own use to the exclusion of others". It does not, of course, follow from this that setting apart by one person for the use of some person other than himself and the true owner, is not a misappropriation. A Hindu girl having picked up a gold necklet and made it over to a sweeper girl, the accused, the brother of the finder, represented to the latter that the necklet belonged to a person of his acquaintance and thus got possession of it from her. On inquiry by a police constable a few hours later, he repeated the representations, but afterwards gave up the necklet. These representations were found to be untrue to the knowledge of the accused. It was held that he had committed this offence.¹³ This section is in no way restricted to appropriating property to one's own use. If a trustee repudiates the trust and asserts that he holds the property on behalf of a person other than the one who entrusted him with it, he has misappropriated the property just as much as he would have been said to misappropriate it if he had been putting forward his own claims to it.¹⁴

Retention of money for a sufficiently long period by a person who is bound under law to return it to another legally entitled to it raises an inference of a temporary misappropriation within the meaning of this section. When the prosecution proves such retention it is not incumbent to prove that the accused did not refund it to the person from whom he received it and the accused is liable to be convicted of an offence under the section if he fails to prove that he returned it to the person legally entitled to it, or from whom he received it.¹⁵ The mere realization of money and failure to credit the same is not in itself criminal misappropriation but the retention of money realised for a particular purpose without any justification shown ordinarily leads to the inference that it has been misappropriated and the reasonable inference to draw when a person has realised money for somebody else and has not paid it is that he has appropriated it to his own needs. Such inference of course may be rebutted by the accused.¹⁶ Where an employee withdraws the amount deposited by him as a security during his appointment without his employer's permission and before adjustment of the amounts between him and the employer, the withdrawal amounts to criminal misappropriation.¹⁷

A false denial of a loan is not in itself a misappropriation at all, and may amount to no more than an attempt to evade civil liability for the money or the chattel lent. Attempt to evade civil liability does not necessarily imply that the property lent has been misappropriated. The false denial of a loan is compatible with the absence of criminal misappropriation, and no more constitutes that offence than possession of stolen property constitutes theft or dishonest receipt. The false denial may be evidence of an offence under this section as possession of stolen property may be evidence of offences under s. 379 or s. 411.¹⁸

'Converts to his own use'.—There must be actual conversion of the thing appropriated to the use of some person other than the person entitled thereto. Where the accused found a thing, and merely retained it in his possession, it was held that he could not be convicted of criminal misappropriation.¹⁹ Similarly, where the accused found a purse on the pavement of a temple in a crowded gathering and put it in his pocket but was immediately after arrested, it was held that he was not guilty of criminal misappropriation for it could not be assumed that by the mere act of picking up the purse or putting it in his pocket he intended to appropriate its contents to his own use.²⁰ Where a police constable of seventeen years' standing caught a strayed sheep intended for sacrifice and on his transfer, from the thana to which he was attached, to another thana he took it with him there, it was held that it was sufficient evidence of dishonesty.²¹ Mere retention of money would not warrant a conviction under this section unless there is evidence that accused used the money: Where a clerk received certain sums on various dates but entered them in the accounts on each occasion some days after and it was found that the clerk was not in difficulties and that he did not use the amounts, the ¹³ Ram Dayal, (1886) P. R. No. 24 of 1886.

¹⁴ Indar Singh, (1925) 48 All. 288.

¹⁵ Prool. Govt., C. P. & Berar v. Shanker Gopal, [1939] Nag. 180.

¹⁶ Nani Gopal v. Nripendra Nath, (1947) 51 C. W. N. 301.

¹⁷ Surendra Nath Basu, [1938] 2 Cal. 257.

¹⁸ Girji, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 1093, 1 Cr. L. J. 1109.

¹⁹ Abdool, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 23A.

²⁰ Phuman, (1907) P. R. No. 11 of 1908, 8 Cr. L. J. 250.

²¹ Sarju Malla, (1918) 17 A. L. J. R. 145, 20 Cr. L. J. 218, [1919] AIR (A) 302.

mere retention by the clerk of the money for some days would not warrant a conviction under this section.²²

'Any moveable property'.—The misappropriation must be of 'moveable property'. As to the meaning of this expression see s. 22, supra.

There cannot be any criminal misappropriation with regard to immovable property.

A bull set at large in accordance with a Hindu religious usage is not 'property' of any one, and not the subject of ownership by any person, as the original owner has surrendered all his rights as its proprietor, and has given the beast its freedom to go withersoever it chose.²³ Such a bull cannot be the subject of criminal misappropriation. The fact that such a bull receives some attention from the cow-herd of the persons who set it at liberty and is daily fed by him by direction of his employers, and is not used for breeding purposes without their permission being asked, is not consistent with a total surrender by those who set it at liberty of all their rights as proprietors.²⁴

The offence of criminal misappropriation is committed, either permanently or for a time, of property which is already without wrong in the possession of the offender. The dishonest intention to appropriate the property of another is common to theft and to criminal misappropriation. But this intention, which in theft is sufficiently manifested by a moving of the property, must in the other offence be carried into action by an actual misappropriation or conversion.²⁵

Temple property.—The property of an idol or a temple must be used for the purposes of that idol or temple : any other use will be a malversation of that property, and, if dishonest, will amount to criminal misappropriation.¹

Retention of money paid by mistake.—Where money is paid to a person by mistake, and such person, either at the time of the receipt or at any time subsequently, discovers the mistake, and determines to appropriate the money, that person is guilty of criminal misappropriation.² In England, the law is doubtful on this point.³ But in a case the Ministry of Food, in error, drew and posted a cheque to the accused, who then wrote and asked them to insert his initials on the cheque. This was done and the cheque was returned to him. The accused paid the cheque into a bank and drew upon it. It was held that the process of taking the cheque and deciding to appropriate it to his own use must be regarded as one transaction, the accused, therefore, who had an animus furandi at the moment of his decision to appropriate, also had an animus furandi at the moment of taking and was guilty of larceny.⁴

Joint property.—Where the accused is interested in the property jointly with others, he is not necessarily guilty of a criminal act if he takes possession of it, and disposes of it.⁵ But joint property might be criminally misappropriated.⁶ No coparcener in a joint Hindu family having before division a right in or to any specified share in any particular items of the family property, a prosecution for dishonest misappropriation cannot lie against the managing member of the family until the accounts have been taken and the shares allotted.⁷ "Such managing member may be liable to a charge of misappropriation, if, after a division of property has taken place, and the share of each member of the family has been ascertained, it is found that the manager has wrongfully applied to his own use the share that belongs to one of the other coparceners ; but so long as no account of produce or money has been taken, or the shares ascertained, no member of an undivided Hindu family has the right to claim any particular share or property as his separate property, and no prosecution against the manager for misappropriation would lie. The mere fact that there has been a general agreement to divide does not entitle one of the coparceners to claim any defined portion of the ²² Raghava Menon, [1940] 2 M. L. J. 748, [1940] M. W. N. 1110, (1940) 52 L. W. 633, 42 Cr. L. J. 296 (1), [1941] AIR (M) 250.

²³ Bandhu, (1885) 8 All. 51; Nihal, (1887) 9 All. 348.

²⁴ Romesh Chunder Sannyal v. Hiru Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 852.

²⁵ M. & M. 359.

¹ Gadgaya v. Guru Siddeshwar, (1897) Unrep. Cr. C. 919.

² Shamsoondur, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 475.

³ Middleton, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 38 ; Ashwell, (1885) 16 Q. B. D. 190; Flowers, (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 643; Hehir, [1895] 2 I. R. 709.

⁴ Hudson, [1943] 1 A. E. R. 642.

⁵ Parbutty Churn Chuckerbutty, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 13.

⁶ Pania, (1881) 1 A. W. N. 89.

⁷ (1880) 1 Weir 453.

estate, nor does it even enable him to say that he is entitled to any particular quantum in an isolated item of the property; until division, the law entrusts the property to the manager."⁸

Partner.—A partner is liable to be tried for criminal misappropriation of partnership property.⁹

Explanation 1.—This Explanation "refers only to cases in which there is a 'dishonest misappropriation', and explains that the section includes temporary as well as permanent misappropriation of that description. It does not extend the section so as to include not only cases of wrongful gain or loss of property, but also cases of wrongful gain or loss of the possession of property, as distinct from gain or loss of the property itself".¹⁰

A servant, who misappropriates his master's property with the intention of restoring it after a time, ought to be punished. He has no more right to steal his master's property for a time than for ever. It is no answer for a trustee who misappropriates his trust property to say that he intended to put it back again. The fact is that when once a man makes away with property in this way, it generally happens that he never has the means of making restitution. So with regard to the thief, the probability is that when he steals another's property he will never change his mind about restoring the same to the owner.¹¹

Explanation 2.—There can be no criminal misappropriation of things which have actually been abandoned.¹² The property must have its owner to render a person guilty of misappropriating it. Illustration (a) to this section is to be taken as qualified by ill. (f).¹³

Where property is cast away or abandoned, any one finding and taking it acquires a right to it which will be good even as against the former owner, if the latter should be minded to resume it, but when a thing is accidentally lost, the property is not divested, but remains in the owner who loses it.¹⁴

Property found drifting in river.—The accused found two logs of wood drifting in a river during a high flood and took possession of them. The logs were left by the accused in front of his house unused and exposed for several months. It was held that a conviction under this section could not be upheld.¹⁵

Lost property.—A person who takes possession of property which the rightful owner has lost is guilty of criminal misappropriation if he appropriates or converts such property to his own use.¹⁶ A very high standard of honesty is demanded of the finders of lost property. Before appropriating it, they must attempt to find the owner, if they have means of so doing. If there is no clue to the owner, the finder must use all reasonable means to find the owner and must wait a reasonable time to allow the owner to claim the property before he appropriates it. Where a person lost some currency notes and they were found by a child in the street and ultimately came in the possession of the accused to whom they were traced and ultimately recovered within a short time of the incident, it was held that no offence was committed under s. 411.¹⁷ Where the accused found a gold mohur on an open plain, and sold it the next day to a shroff for the full value and appropriated the sale-proceeds, it was held that, in the absence of any information as to the circumstances under which the coin was lost, and as it was not impossible that the property in the coin had been abandoned by the original owner, the accused could not be convicted of criminal misappropriation.¹⁸ A person, finding a property of which, from the nature of it, there must be an owner, must take reasonable care of it and endeavour to find out the owner, but he is not bound to adopt extraordinary ⁸ Anon., (1880) 1 Weir 453, 454.

⁹ Reddy v. Reddy, [1941] Ran. 547; Baron Von Dincklage, [1941] 2 M. L. J. 748, [1942] M. W. N. 41, (1941) 54 L. W. 521, 48 Cr. L. J. 395, [1942] AIR (M) 182.

¹⁰ Per Plowden, J., in Jhandu, (1886) P. R. No. 27 of 1886, at p. 60.

¹¹ P. L. C. 1861, p. 1270.

¹² Bandhu, (1885) 8 All. 51; Nihal, (1887) 9 All. 348; Romesh Chunder Sannyal v. Hiru Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 852; Sita, (1893) 18 Bom. 212.

¹³ Mahadev Govind, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R. 356, 31 Cr. L. J. 926, [1930] AIR (B) 176.

¹⁴ Glyde, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 139.

¹⁵ Murugan, (1883) 1 Weir 455.

¹⁶ Nga Shwe Zan, (1916) 18 Cr. L. J. 300, [1917] AIR (LB) 15.

¹⁷ Ramakhal, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 312, 46 L. W. 812, [1937] 2 M. L. J. 734, [1937] M. W. N. 1321.

¹⁸ Sita, (1893) 18 Bom. 212. See Phuman, (1907) P. R. No. 11 of 1908, 8 Cr. L. J. 250.

means for the discovery, nor is he bound to be out of pocket in discovering the owner by means of an advertisement.¹⁵ The accused found a spanner of no appreciable value in a public road and attempted to sell it. It was held that he was not guilty of criminal misappropriation as the case was governed by ill. (a) and not by ill. (f) to the section.¹⁶ Where a person took possession of a bullock which had strayed, but there was no evidence that it was stolen property, and he dishonestly retained it, it was held that he was guilty under this section and not under s. 411.¹⁷

The law with regard to the finder of the lost property does not apply to the case of property of a passenger accidentally left in a railway carriage, and found there by a servant of the company.¹⁸

Treasure trove.—A person who found money from a piece of land purchased by him and appropriated it to his own use was held not to have committed this offence.¹⁹

In England the law seems to be this: "...if a man find goods that have been actually lost, or are reasonably supposed by him to have been lost, and appropriate them with intent to take the entire dominion over them, really believing when he takes them that the owner cannot be found, it is not larceny. But if he take them with the like intent though lost, or reasonably supposed to be lost, but reasonably believing that the owner can be found, it is larceny."²⁰

The possessor of land is generally entitled, as against the finder, to chattels found in the land.²¹

CASES.

Dishonest intention necessary.—The accused was found riding on a mare which had strayed away from the possession of its owner. The day after he was found riding he confessed that he had found the mare hobbled, had unfastened the rope and used it as a bridle, had mounted the mare intending to ride her to his house and to loose her when he reached his house. Subsequently he stated before the Magistrate that his intention was to take the strayed mare to a police-station. He was convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was illegal, for it could not be assumed that the intention of the accused was dishonest. The subsequent statement being attributable to fear did not affect the question of the accused's guilt.²² The accused, who had lost his buffalo some time back, found a buffalo very much resembling his own entering into his house and tied her in on an open verandah which overlooked a public road and refused to permit the complainant, who claimed the buffalo as his, to remove the same. It was held that the essential element of a dishonest intention to make up the offence was wanting.²³ Where the accused removed posts and hitters for firewood from a house which they believed was deserted, it was held that they did not commit criminal misappropriation for there was no dishonesty in the act.²⁴ Where the accused took certain hides from the prosecutrix, but refused to pay for them on the ground that she owed a sum to him, it was held that he had not committed this offence.²⁵ Where a Sub-Inspector of Police kept a bullock for twenty days and after advertising for the owner sold it, it was held that no offence had been made out under this section.¹ An order was passed by a District Magistrate staying delivery of certain property to the complainant. This order was by mistake not communicated to the lower Court. In pursuance of the lower Court's order, complainant was served with notice by the police that he should take delivery or the property would be forfeited to Government. The complainant took delivery though knowing of the stay order and afterwards disposed of it in such a way as to make it impossible of being returned to the other party if the District Magistrate would order it to be returned. It was held that the action of the complainant did not amount to an offence under this section.² Where on settling the marriage of his daughter with the complainant, the accused took from the latter certain

¹⁵ Sarajul Haque, (1920) 23 Cr. L. J. 401.

¹⁶ Mahadev Govind, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R. 356, 31 Cr. L. J. 926, [1930] AIR (B) 176.

¹⁷ Phul Chand Dube, (1929) 52 All. 200.

¹⁸ Pierce, (1852) 6 Cox 117.

¹⁹ Chodapa, (1868) Unrep. Cr. C. 8.

²⁰ Per Park, B., in Thurborn, (1849) 18 L. J. M. C. (N. S.) 140, 144.

²¹ South Staffordshire Water Company v. Sharman, [1896] 2 Q. B. 44.

²² Muhammada, (1905) 7 P. L. R. 100, 3 Cr. L. J. 299.

²³ Dwarka Doss v. Narasimhalu Naidu, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 128, [1923] AIR (M) 364.

²⁴ Nawtara Singh, (1904) U. B. R. (1904-06) (P. C.) 7, 1 Cr. L. J. 558.

²⁵ Boystum Moochee, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 11.

¹ Amir Hasan Khan, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 128, 27 Cr. L. J. 5, [1926] AIR (A) 251.

² Nagendra Nath Roy, (1934) 35 Cr. L. J. 886

ornaments and clothes of female wear, meant either as a present to the future bride or as a part of the amount to be given to him in consideration of giving his daughter in marriage, but later on he married his daughter to some other person and on being questioned by the complainant, denied both the agreement for marriage and the receipt of the articles, it was held that an offence under this section had been committed.³

Claim of right.—A servant, who retained in his hands money which he was authorized to collect and which he did collect from the debtor of his master, because money was due to him as wages, was held guilty of criminal misappropriation.⁴

Servant misappropriating money received on behalf of his master.—Where the accused, a Government servant, whose duty it was to receive certain moneys and to pay them into the treasury on receipt, admitted that he had retained two sums of money in his possession for several months, but on fearing detection he paid them into the treasury, making a false entry at the time in his books with a view to avert suspicion;⁵ and where the accused, a village kurnam, received money from the head of the village for the purpose of remitting it to the public treasury, but omitted to do so until after an inquiry had been held into arrears due by the villager,⁶ it was held that this offence was committed. It is impossible for the prosecution to follow the money in the hands of an accused person and prove that he spent a certain specific item in any particular manner. The prosecution must stop when it is proved that the accused has received the money, has acknowledged the receipt and has failed to pay it to his master or show it in his master's accounts.⁷

Secreting letters.—The accused, a servant in the Postal Department, while assisting in the sorting of letters, secreted two letters, with the intention of handing them over to the delivery peon and sharing with him certain money payable upon them. It was held that the accused was guilty of attempt to commit dishonest misappropriation of property and of theft.⁸

A letter addressed to W was handed by a postman to W, who was at the time in a room in the occupation of H. W read the letter, and put it on a table in the room and left it there. H took the letter, and subsequently attempted to file it as an exhibit attached to an affidavit made by him in a suit for judicial separation between W and his wife, for the purpose, as he afterwards stated, 'of strengthening Mrs. W's case and of improving his own position'. The Court, however, refused to receive the letter. It was held that in the circumstances H could not be convicted of dishonest misappropriation of property with respect to his retention of the letter.⁹

D who wanted to send by registered insurance post a letter with five currency notes each of Rs. 100 asked the accused to write the address on the envelope but the accused tried to substitute another envelope in the place of the original one and wrote the address on it. D's suspicions having been aroused he demanded of the accused the original envelope. An altercation ensued and the original envelope containing the currency notes and D's coat were torn. The accused was charged under this section. It was held that the accused was guilty of attempt to commit criminal misappropriation.¹⁰

Harvesting crops under attachment.—Where a judgment-debtor, whose standing crops were attached, harvested them while the attachment was in force, it was held that he had committed this offence.¹¹

Exchanging railway tickets.—A and B were about to travel by the same train from Benares City. A had a ticket for Ajudhia. B had two tickets for Benares Cantonment. A voluntarily handed over her ticket to B in order that he might tell her if it was right. B, under the pretence of returning A's ticket, substituted therefor one of his own, and kept A's ticket. It was held that the offence committed by B was that of criminal misappropriation rather than that of cheating.¹²

English cases.—A person purchased, at a public auction, a bureau in which he afterwards discovered, in a secret drawer, a purse containing money, which he appro-

³ Mohori Lal Chowdhury, (1938) 42 C. W. N. 783.

⁴ Bissessur Roy, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 51.

⁵ Ramakrishna, (1888) 12 Mad. 49; Kareem Bux, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 30.

⁶ Madduri Krishnamma, (1884) 1 Weir 455.

⁷ Shiam Sundar, (1930) 6 Luck. 435.

⁸ Venkatasami, (1890) 14 Mad. 229.

⁹ Harris, (1917) 40 All. 119.

¹⁰ Rabu Saleh, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 802, [1932] AIR (S) 139.

¹¹ Obayya, (1898) 22 Mad. 151.

¹² Raza Husain, (1905) 25 A. W. N. 9, 2 Cr. L. J. 94.

priated to his own use. At the time of the sale no person knew that the bureau contained anything whatever. It was held that if the buyer had express notice that the bureau alone, and not its contents, if any, was sold to him; or if he had no reason to believe that anything more than the bureau itself was sold, the abstraction of the money was a felonious taking, and he was guilty of larceny in appropriating it to his own use. But that if he had reasonable ground for believing that he bought the bureau with its contents, if any, he had a colourable right to the property, and it was no larceny.¹³ If a bureau be delivered to a carpenter to repair, and he discovered money in a secret drawer of it, which he, unnecessarily as to its repair, breaks open, and converts the money to his own use, it is a felonious taking of the property, unless it appear that he did it with intention to restore it to its right owner.¹⁴ A servant indicted for stealing bank-notes, the property of her master, in his dwelling-house, set up, as her defence, that she found them in the passage, and not knowing to whom they belonged, kept them to see if they were advertised. It was held that she ought to have inquired of her master whether they were his notes or not, and that not having done so, but having taken them away from the house, she was guilty of stealing them.¹⁵ The accused stole some iron from a canal, in which it was found when the canal was in process of being cleaned. In an indictment against him for stealing the iron, it was held that the proprietors of the canal had a sufficient property in the iron to justify alleging of the property to be in them.¹⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question is moveable property.

(2) That the accused misappropriated it or converted it to his own use.¹⁷

(3) That he did so dishonestly.¹⁸

See the Indian Evidence Act, s. 14, ill. (b).

On a charge of criminal misappropriation, it is sufficient for the prosecution to establish that some of the money mentioned in the charge has been misappropriated by the accused, even though it may be uncertain what is the exact amount so misappropriated.¹⁹

When a case comes under the second Explanation it should be ascertained whether the person accused had reasonable belief that the owner could be found, by evidence of his previous acquaintance with the ownership of the particular chattel, the place where it is found, or the nature of the marks upon it. In some cases, it would be apparent, in others appear only after examination. It would probably be presumed that the taker would examine the chattel, as an honest man ought to do at the time of taking it, and if he did not restore it to the owner the jury might conclude that he took it when he took complete possession of it.²⁰

The mere fact that the prosecutor gave the accused time to make out his accounts and pay the balance due does not vitiate a conviction for dishonest misappropriation, or show that the matter is one for civil Courts only.²¹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by any Magistrate.

In a case of complaint under this section, it is open to a Magistrate in case of doubt to hold an inquiry under s. 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code before summoning the accused in order to find out whether a prima facie case was made out or whether the accused should be summoned or not.²²

Venue.—The offence of criminal misappropriation may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which ¹³ Merry v. Green, (1841) 7 M. & W. 623.

¹⁴ Green's Case, (1802) 2 Leach 952.

¹⁵ Kerr, (1837) 8 C. & P. 176.

¹⁶ Rowe, (1859) 28 L. J. (M. C.) 130.

¹⁷ Ghulam Haidar, (1938) 40 P. L. R. 870, 39 Cr. L. J. 851.

¹⁸ Parsotam Das, (1881) 1 A. W. N. 80; Murugan, (1883) 1 Weir 455; Ramayya, (1904) 10 Burma L. R. 170, 1 Cr. L. J. 908; Ram Byas Rai, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 943, [1918] AIR (P)

489 (2).

¹⁹ Byramji Chawalla, (1927) 52 Bom. 280, 30 Bom. L. R. 325; Vinayak Bhatkhande, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 1530, sub-nom. Bhatkhande, (1928) 53 Bom. 119.

²⁰ Thurborn, (1849) 18 L. J. M. C. (N.S.) 140, 144.

²¹ Sreekant Biswas, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 56.

²² Gowkaran Lal v. Sarjoo Saw, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 200, 21 Cr. L. J. 519.

is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.²³ Even in the absence of any evidence on the point, it will be fair to presume that the accused retained the property, which is the subject of the offence, at the place where he resides. And the Court of that place has, therefore, jurisdiction to try the offence.²⁴

Separate offences.—The misappropriation of each separate item of money with which a person is entrusted is a separate offence, and the facts connected with it should form the subject of a separate inquiry. The duty of a committing officer in such a case is to select certain distinct items, to frame his charges upon them, and to adduce evidence specially upon those items.²⁵ Where moneys are dishonestly misappropriated and false accounts or vouchers prepared for the purpose of screening the misappropriation, the offence of falsification becomes part and parcel of the offence of misappropriation, and the whole transaction must be considered practically as one offence consisting of criminal misappropriation.¹

Joinder of charges.—When two persons are implicated in a case of criminal misappropriation with respect to a certain sum of money, the charges against them must be of misappropriation in one case and of abetment in the other because it is impossible to hold that two persons can be guilty of misappropriation of the same sum of money. It is also open to the Court to frame charges against each of them in the alternative, i.e. of misappropriation or of abetment.²

Charge.—When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of s. 234: Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.³

The charge should run as follows:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, dishonestly misappropriated [or converted to your own use] certain property, to wit——, belonging to AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 403 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

404. Whoever dishonestly misappropriates¹ or converts to his Dishonest misappropriation of property possessed by deceased person at the time of his death. own use property,² knowing that such property was in the possession³ of a deceased person at the time of that person's decease, and has not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to such possession, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the offender at the time of such person's decease was employed by him as a clerk or servant, the imprisonment may extend to seven years.

ILLUSTRATION.

Z dies in possession of furniture and money. His servant A, before the money comes into the possession of any person entitled to such possession, dishonestly misappropriates it. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

²³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 181, (2).

²⁴ Hussain Bakhsh v. Khuda Bakhsh, (1936) 18 Lah. 299.

²⁵ C. A. Chetter, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

¹ Anant Narayan, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 94, 1

Cr. L. J. 105.

² Girwar Narain, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 600, 13 Cr. L. J. 506.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 22 (2).

COMMENT.

This section relates to a description of property peculiarly needing protection. The offence consists in the pillaging of movable property during the interval which elapses between the time when the possessor of the property dies, and the time when it comes into the possession of some person or officer authorized to take charge of it.⁴

Scope.—The section is intended only to punish servants and strangers who could possibly have no right to, or interest in, the effects of a dead man and who misappropriates such effects, but not to punish near relations who take possession of and deal with the deceased's effects under a claim of independent ownership or a claim to succeed as heir to the deceased.⁵

1. 'Dishonestly misappropriates'.—A person may commit the offence of dishonest misappropriation of property possessed by a deceased person at the time of his death by dishonestly misappropriating the money entrusted to him although he does not bring such money to his own use.⁶ As to the meaning of 'dishonestly', see. s. 24, supra.

2. 'Property'.—The High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta hold that the word 'property' does not refer to immovable property, but only to movable property. Hence, where a person was convicted of misappropriating the house of a deceased person the conviction was annulled.⁷ The Allahabad High Court has dissented from this view. It says that this section contains no such express limitation. This section and some of the other sections following it refer to property without any qualifying description; and in each the context must determine whether the property referred to is intended to be movable property or property movable or immovable. Where the accused, in order to obtain a wrongful gain to the prejudice of a decree-holder whose decree was still pending, removes some rafters from a house which was in the possession of a deceased person at the time of her death and had not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to it, it was held that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section. The property removed by the accused was immovable property so long as it was attached to the house but became movable property when it was severed from the house.⁸

3. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Under this section all the elements required to constitute the offence of criminal misappropriation in respect of a person who is alive will be necessary.⁹ Prove (1) that the property in question is movable property.

(2) That it was in the possession of a deceased person at the time of his death.

(3) That it was not thereafter in the possession of any person legally entitled to its possession.

(4) That the accused misappropriated it or converted it to his own use.

(5) That he did so dishonestly.¹⁰

(6) That he knew the circumstances mentioned in (2) and (3).

For the second clause prove further that the accused was, at the time of the owner's death, employed by him as a clerk or servant.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable¹¹—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, dishonestly misappropriated [or converted to your own use] certain property, to wit——, knowing that such pro-

⁴ M. & M. 364.

⁵ Karri Mangadu, [1914] M. W. N. 791 15 Cr. L. J. 602, [1915] AIR (M) 506.

⁶ Enayet Hoosein, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 1; Nobin Chunder Sircar, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 39.

⁷ Girdhar Dharamdas, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 33; Jugdown Sinha, (1895) 23 Cal. 372.

⁸ Daud Khan, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 153, 27 Cr. L. J. 17, [1925] AIR (A) 673.

⁹ Nobin Chunder Sircar, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 39.

¹⁰ Vide s. 24, supra.

¹¹ (1874) 7 M. H. C. Appx. 34

perty was in the possession of AB, a deceased person, at the time of the said AB's decease, and had not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to such possession; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 404 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Of Criminal Breach of Trust.

405. Whoever, being in any manner entrusted with property, or with any dominion over property,¹ dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property,² or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do,³ commits "criminal breach of trust".

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, being executor to the will of a deceased person, dishonestly disobeys the law which directs him to divide the effects according to the will, and appropriates them to his own use. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(b) A is a warehouse-keeper. Z, going on a journey, entrusts his furniture to A, under a contract that it shall be returned on payment of a stipulated sum for warehouse-room. A dishonestly sells the goods. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(c) A, residing in Calcutta, is agent for Z, residing at Delhi. There is an express or implied contract between A and Z, that all sums remitted by Z to A shall be invested by A, according to Z's direction. Z remits a lakh of rupees to A, with directions to A to invest the same in Company's paper. A dishonestly disobeys the directions and employs the money in his own business. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(d) But if A, in the last illustration, not dishonestly but in good faith, believing that it will be more for Z's advantage to hold shares in the Bank of Bengal, disobeys Z's directions, and buys shares in the Bank of Bengal, for Z, instead of buying Company's paper, here, though Z should suffer loss, and should be entitled to bring a civil action against A, on account of that loss, yet A, not having acted dishonestly, has not committed criminal breach of trust.

(e) A, a revenue-officer, is entrusted with public money and is either directed by law, or bound by a contract, express or implied, with the Government, to pay into a certain treasury all the public money which he holds. A dishonestly appropriates the money. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(f) A, a carrier, is entrusted by Z with property to be carried by land or by water. A dishonestly misappropriates the property. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

406. Whoever commits criminal breach of trust shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

To constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust, there must be dishonest misappropriation by a person in whom confidence is placed as to the custody or management of the property in respect of which the breach of trust is charged.¹² There must be an entrustment; there must be misappropriation or conversion to one's own use or use in violation of any legal direction or of any legal contract; and thirdly the misappropriation or conversion or disposal must be with a dishonest intention.¹³ Every breach of trust gives rise to a suit for damages, but it is only when there is evidence of a mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that the commission of embezzlement of any sum of money becomes a penal offence punishable as criminal breach of trust. It is this mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that clearly demarcates an act of embezzlement which is a civil wrong or tort, from the offence of criminal breach of trust. Every offence of criminal breach of trust involves a civil wrong in respect of which the complainant may seek his redress for damages in the civil Court, but every breach of trust, in the absence of mens rea, cannot legally justify a criminal prosecution.¹⁴

'Larceny' and 'embezzlement' in English law are the offences which represent what is known in India as theft, criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust. There is no exact equivalent in English law of "criminal breach of trust".¹⁵

Scope.—The terms of the section are very wide. It applies to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property. The section does not require that the trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object. The section then provides, inter alia, that if such a person dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use the property entrusted to him, he commits criminal breach of trust. This part of the definition is complete in itself. It has no reference to the provisions as to disposal in violation of a direction of law, or of a legal contract. There are separate ways in which criminal breach of trust may be committed.¹⁶ This section embraces the cases of all those offenders not specifically provided for in ss. 407, 408 and 409. Offences committed by trustees with regard to trust property fall within the purview of this section.

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust.—In criminal misappropriation the property comes into the possession of the offender by some casualty or otherwise, and he afterwards misappropriates it. In the case of criminal breach of trust the offender is lawfully entrusted with the property and he dishonestly misappropriates the same, or wilfully suffers any other person to do so, instead of discharging the trust attached to it.

Ingredients—The section requires—

1. Entrusting any person with property or with any dominion over property.
2. The person entrusted (a) dishonestly misappropriating or converting to his own use that property; or (b) dishonestly using or disposing of that property or wilfully suffering any other person so to do in violation—
 - (i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or
 - (ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust.

1. 'Entrusted with property, or...dominion over property'.—It is an essential condition...that the property which is the subject-matter of the offence must have been entrusted to a person. "Entrusted" is not necessarily a term of law. It may have different implications in different contexts. In its most general significance all it imports is a handing over the possession for some purpose which may not imply the conferring of any proprietary right at all".¹⁷ The accused falsely represented to the complainant that they had sent some bonds for rectification to Bombay and as they had not arrived and the last day for completion of a contract with a Bank had arrived, requested the complainant to oblige them by giving the complainant's bonds temporarily for a few days, assuring him that his bonds would be returned

¹² Isser Chunder Ghose v. Peari Mohun Palit, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 39; Ko Set Shwin, (1903) 1 U. B. R. (P. C.) 9, 1 Cr. L. J. 385.

¹³ V. Krishnan, [1939] M. W. N. 1213, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 824, [1940] AIR (M) 329.

¹⁴ Kanhaiya Lall, (1937) 38 Cr. L. J. 491, [1937] O. W. N. 505, [1937] AIR (O) 331.

¹⁵ Velagala Venkata Reddy v. Kovvuri Chinna L. C.—63

Venkata Reddy, [1941] Ran. 547.

¹⁶ Nga Te, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 216, 1 Cr. L. J. 730, F.B.

¹⁷ Per Viscount Haldane in Lake v. Simmons, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 621, 625; McIver, (1935) 69 M. L. J. 681, 690, [1935] M. W. N. 914, 42 L. W. 923, 37 Cr. L. J. 142, [1936] AIR (M) 1.

to him as soon as the bonds sent for rectification were received and the complainant endorsed and delivered to the accused the bonds for this purpose. It was held that the bonds were not handed over absolutely to the accused but were entrusted to them. Even though the accused when he induced the complainant to part with certain properties had the intention of deceiving him, a subsequent misappropriation by him of the property to his own use would amount to criminal breach of trust. The fact that there was complete offence of cheating when the property was received would not prevent the accused being guilty.¹⁸ The word 'entrusted' when used with respect to money means that the money has been transferred to the accused under circumstances which show that notwithstanding its delivery to the accused, the property in it continues to vest in the prosecutor and the money remains in the possession or control of the accused as a bailee and in trust for the prosecutor as bailor, to be restored to him or applied in accordance with his instructions.¹⁹ Where goods are delivered to a person in pursuance of a contract for their purchase, there is no entrustment which would give rise to a trust and the mere fact that the person denies receipt of goods delivered does not render him guilty either of criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust.²⁰ Where a person was entrusted with property attached by an order of a civil Court and he deliberately refused to produce the property when called upon to do so, it was held that his conduct amounted to a repudiation of his trust and he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.²¹ When the secretary of a Bank who is authorised by the terms of a power-of-attorney to purchase Government Promissory Notes on behalf of the Bank receives the notes he becomes "entrusted" with them by the Bank within the meaning of this section. He is bound to pay them to the Bank, and has no authority to keep them in his hands in satisfaction of any claim he may have against the Bank. Such retention amounts to misappropriation.²²

A person cannot be said to be entrusted with property within the meaning of this section when he obtains possession by means of a trick. A trust implies confidence placed by one man in another. It implies necessarily that the confidence was freely given and that there is a true consent. There is no true consent if confidence is obtained as a result of a trick. If there was a trick or deceit, a true consent cannot arise; there can be no entrustment, and no offence under s. 406, because an essential element of that offence is an entrustment. The accused represented to the complainant that he was a tinner while he was in fact not a tinner. The complainant thereupon gave the accused certain utensils to be repaired which were neither repaired nor returned by the accused. It was held that while it might be said, using the words of general import, that the complainant entrusted the accused with property, he was, in fact, tricked out of it. Therefore the offence fell not under this section, but under s. 420.²³

Trust of some kind necessary.—A 'trust' is an obligation annexed to the ownership of property, and arising out of a confidence reposed in and accepted by the owner, or declared and accepted by him, for the benefit of another, or of another and the owner.²⁴ Hence, where there is no original confidence, there is no trust, and a misappropriation, if punishable at all, will be under s. 403.

The terms of this section are wide enough to include trustees of every kind; that is, those who are such, not only by reason of some employment for which they receive remuneration, but by reason of some trust constituted by express deed, or even by mere implication of law, though the office may be gratuitous. They also include the case of a person who commits this offence by misappropriation of property to the advantage of a third person.²⁵ Where the complainant entrusted the accused with his property in order to prevent it from being taken in execution of a decree that might be passed against him, it was held that that was not a legal defence to a charge

¹⁸ McIver, (1935) 69 M. L. J. 681, 690, [1935] M. W. N. 914, 42 L. W. 933, 37 Cr. L. J. 142, [1936] AIR (M) 1.

¹⁹ Ghanshamdas, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 431, 23 S. L. R. 13, [1928] AIR (S) 106.

²⁰ Velayutham Chetty, (1922). 24 Cr. L. J. 332; Labhu, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 300, [1930] AIR (L) 408; Nga Po Seik, (1912) 5 B. L. T. 143, 6 L. B. R. 62, 13 Cr. L. J. 888.

²¹ Chanan Singh, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 119.

²² Ram Nath Dave, [1942] O. W. N. 485, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 832, [1942] AIR (O) 473.

²³ Arab Mian, [1942] Kar. 284.

²⁴ Indian Trusts Act, II of 1882, s. 3.

²⁵ Nobin Chunder Sircar, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 39; Shah Naim Ata, (1930) 7 O. W. N. 668, 31 Cr. L. J. 1012, [1930] AIR (O) 401.

under this section when the accused had misappropriated the property for his own use.¹

The trust may not be legal or in furtherance of a lawful object. But if there is no trust there will be no offence under this section. Thus, a person who takes a sum of money by way of a loan is not entrusted with any property.² But a servant who obtains money by false pretences from his master for using it in a particular way may be guilty of criminal breach of trust. Where the accused, a servant of a company, misappropriated a large sum of money made up of amounts which he received from the manager at various times on the false pretence that they were required for paying coolies, it was held that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust. When he received the money he did so as the servant of the company for the express purpose of using it for his master's benefit in a particular way. He was, therefore, entrusted with the money and his appropriating it to himself amounted to criminal breach of trust. The fact that the criminal intent was present at the time of the receipt of the money was immaterial.³

Mere breach of contract is not made synonymous with criminal breach of trust. In all cases given in the illustrations to s. 405 in which the person is said to have committed the offence, the property in respect of which it is said to have been committed is property of another person, or property of which the offender was not the beneficial owner, although in one case, that of the executor, he had the legal title. The property in respect of which criminal breach of trust can be committed must be either the property of some person other than the person accused, or the beneficial interest in or ownership of it must be in some other person and the offender must hold such property on trust for such other person or in some way for his benefit.⁴ Moneys advanced to a broker for the specified purpose of purchase and supply of paddy with the agreement that the broker is to suffer the loss or get the profit by a fall or rise in market price cannot be said to be entrusted to him within the meaning of this section, although by the agreement the company bound itself to take delivery of the paddy purchased and an express trust was declared in regard to the amounts advanced. The accused entered into an agreement with the complainant company under which he received Rs. 4,500 by way of advance and undertook to employ the money in the purchase and transport of paddy to it. There were stipulations in the agreement to the effect that he was to hold the money in trust for the company and that the property in the money and the paddy purchased therewith was to remain with the company. These stipulations were, however, inconsistent with other clauses of the agreement which inter alia laid on the accused the responsibility for any loss of either paddy or money, whatever the cause. It was held that there was no real trust and that the accused was not guilty of criminal breach of trust in failing to devote the money to the purchase and transport of paddy.⁵

Debt.—The complainant owed money to the accused on a mortgage bond and on a certain day went to their house and paid the amount settled as due in full satisfaction of the bond. An endorsement of payment was made on the back of the bond by one of the witnesses for the prosecution and the accused went inside their house with the bond and money saying that they would keep the money and return the bond, but they did not come back that day and afterwards denied the receipt of the money. It was held that on the facts there was no trust which could bring the case within the terms of this section.⁶ Where the complainant executed a handnote in favour of the accused and also pawned ornaments with him, the accused then evaded settlement of account and return of the handnote and the ornaments, and so panchas settled the total dues at Rs. 155 which the complainant paid, but the accused on the pretext of bringing the document from inside the house bolted away and was charged for criminal misappropriation of the sum of Rs. 155, it was held that there was no breach of trust because there was

¹ Chinna Karuppa Muppan, (1889) 1 Weir 463.

² Wong Yone Main, (1911) 6 L. B. R. 46, 13 Cr. L. J. 269.

³ Ramappa, (1911) 22 M. L. J. 112, 13 Cr. L. J. 15.

⁴ Po Seik, (1912) 6 B. L. R. 62, 13 Cr. L. J. 888, F.B.; Hock Chong & Co. v. Tha Ka Do, (1913) 7 L. B. R. 16, 14 Cr. L. J. 145, F.B.; Ramaswami Reddi, [1930] M. W. N. 790, 32 Cr. L. J. 743, [1931] AIR (M) 235.

⁵ Po Ywet, (1914) 7 L. B. R. 278, 7 B. L. T. 209, 15 Cr. L. J. 452, F.B.

⁶ Golam Hussain, (1917) 22 C. W. N. 1005, 20 Cr. L. J. 151, [1919] AIR (C) 155.

no entrustment, the money was not given in trust but in discharge of a debt, and the money became the accused's property as soon as he received it.⁸

'Property'.—'Property' referred to in this section must be movable property. Criminal breach of trust cannot be committed in respect of immovable property. The accused was a Jemadar of an indigo factory and in such capacity was entrusted with dominion over certain plots of zerait land. His duty was to see that the plots were cultivated with indigo, but he knowingly allowed them to be cultivated with other crops. It was held that the accused was not guilty of criminal breach of trust.⁹ It is submitted that the offence of criminal breach of trust is committed not only by dishonest conversion, but also by dishonest use or disposition, and there is nothing in the wording of this section to exempt from the definition of criminal breach of trust dishonest use of immovable property by the person entrusted with dominion over it. The Madras High Court has remarked that the above case is based on the general assumption that if a man cannot move a thing away, he cannot dishonestly convert it to his own use. In the majority of cases that assumption may be correct: but the wording of s. 405 is very comprehensive and it is dangerous to lay down any absolute rule.¹⁰ Accused borrowed an agricultural engine from his relation, who was looking after it for the real owner. He had also a lease of the engine from his relation. He sold the engine to his aunt. He was convicted of criminally misappropriating the engine, the breach of trust being alleged to consist in the sale of the engine "in violation of the trust". The engine was not moved from the place where it was put, and there was no evidence of an intention to move it either. It was held that the accused was not guilty of any criminal offence.¹¹ In another case the Court has discussed the question, without deciding, whether immovable property can be the subject of an offence under s. 406.¹² A forest range officer marked certain growing teak trees and allowed them to be felled by a free-license-holder whose license allowed him to fell only aule-nathat teak. The officer was convicted of criminal breach of trust and in the alternative of mischief. It was held that the criminal breach of trust referred to movable property only and that standing teak trees being immovable property the officer could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of them.¹³

The word 'property' includes the sale-proceeds of goods entrusted to the accused.¹⁴ A cancelled cheque falls within the term 'property'. The question of the value of the property in respect of which the breach of trust is committed is, except so far as s. 95 of the Code is concerned, quite immaterial.¹⁵

An association not expressly sanctioned by law, yet not criminal, is not incapable of holding any property at all.¹⁶

'Dominion over property'.—The property regarding which the offence is alleged to have been committed must have been 'entrusted' to the accused or he must have 'dominion over' it. Where it is the duty of a Municipal Water Works Inspector to supervise and check the distribution of water from the municipal water-works, he has dominion over the water belonging to his employers. If he deliberately misappropriates such water for his own use or for the use of his tenants for which he pays no tax and gives no information to his employers he is guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁷

If a mortgagor in possession, who is entrusted with the dominion over the mortgaged property by the mortgagee in whom the property is in a mortgage in the English form, wilfully defaults and causes the property to be sold for arrears of Government revenue for the purpose of defrauding the mortgagee, and purchases it benami, he is liable to be punished for this offence.¹⁸ The accused hypothecated to the complainant by a written contract all his claims as a contractor against Government in respect of work done and materials supplied to the Executive Engineer, and under-

⁸ Hitnarain v. Bednarain, (1944) 24 Pat. 128.

⁹ Jugdown Sinha, (1895) 23 Cal. 372; Bhagu Vishnu, (1897) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1897, Unrep. Cr. C. 928; Anon., (1925) 49 M. L. J. 30 (Notes of Recent Cases); Chandan Lal, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 760, [1926] AIR (L) 478.

¹⁰ Rukmani Ammal v. Muthurama Reddi, (1925) 24 L. W. 603, 50 M. L. J. 94, 27 Cr. L. J. 331.

¹¹ Ibid.

¹² Natesa Mudaliar v. Srinivasulu Naidu,

[1932] M. W. N. 1353.

¹³ U Ka Doe, (1929) 8 Ran. 13.

¹⁴ Balthasar, (1914) 41 Cal. 844; Dwarkanadas Haridas, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 1270, 30 Cr. L. J. 329, [1928] AIR (B) 521.

¹⁵ Maula Bakhsh, (1904) 27 All. 28.

¹⁶ Tankard, [1894] 1 Q. B. 548.

¹⁷ Bimala Charan Roy, (1913) 35 All. 361.

¹⁸ Ram Manick Shaha v. Brindaban Chunder Potdar, (1866) 5 W. R. 230.

took regularly and without fail to convey and make over to the complainant all cheques drawn by the Executive Engineer in his favour, and, subsequently, in violation of the said contract, cashed two such cheques, and appropriated the proceeds. It was held that the accused had committed criminal breach of trust.¹⁹

When the manager of a branch office of a bank receives Government Promissory Notes from a constituent under a contract of pledge as security for overdrafts granted to the latter and gets them entered into the books of the bank, the Promissory Notes pass into the possession of the bank, over which, apart from the pledge, it has banker's lien. The manager becomes entrusted with dominion over the Promissory Notes to hold them as security against the overdrafts. If, before the overdrafts are satisfied, either pro tanto or completely, the manager returns the Promissory Notes, though shown in the books of the bank as still deposited there, and the constituent repledges them with other banks, the manager commits the offence of criminal breach of trust and the constituent abetment thereof. It is no defence for the manager, who is also a servant of the bank subject to its directions and control, to say that he is to be treated as an agent of the bank under a power-of-attorney granted to him, which authorises him to accept and take securities owing to the bank, give or grant any release, discharge or acquittances for the same and perform all such matters in regard thereto as should effectually transfer the property and interest therein of the bank. Whatever may be the effect of such power-of-attorney upon the rights of third parties in civil proceedings, it is the duty of the manager to serve the bank honestly and faithfully. If he acts dishonestly and in breach of his duty to his employers and he commits an offence against the criminal law, the power-of-attorney will not protect him from the consequence thereof. Both the manager in returning the Promissory Notes and the constituent in taking them back, knowing full well that he had pledged them as security and that the manager was acting in breach of his duty to the bank in so returning them, act dishonestly within the meaning of s. 24.²⁰

Partner.—The words of the section are wide enough to include the case of a partner, if it be proved that he was in fact entrusted with the partnership property, or with a dominion over it, and has dishonestly misappropriated it or converted it to his own use.²¹ A partner is entitled to be called upon for an account of the expenditure of the money, which he has received, and it is open to him to spend the money received by him and to account for it in dealing with the partnership. Where it was not satisfactorily made out that this was not done, and could not be made out in the absence of a proper demand for accounts, it was held that there was no dishonest conversion, which would justify his conviction under this section.²² In the case of a charge of criminal breach of trust against a partner, the criminal Court should not entertain the case if the prosecution is unable to prove clearly and beyond doubt that the accused has acted dishonestly and with a view to enrich himself clandestinely at the expense of those with whom he was working and with whom he was bound by a fiduciary relationship.²³ The Court will not interfere if the case against the partner is an outcome of a dispute as regards the liabilities of the partners.²⁴ The Court should be very careful in dealing with charges against partners of criminal breach of trust. It is impossible to say in many cases what the share of the accused may be, whether the accused is indebted to the firm or whether the firm is indebted to him. If the firm is indebted to him there may be no dishonest intent in his withdrawing money from the firm.

¹⁹ Shuduthroy Bisseshurda v. Agama Mistry, (1908) U. B. R. (P. C.) 13, 8 Cr. L. J. 24.

²⁰ Sailendra Nath Mitter, [1943] 1 Cal. 493.

²¹ Okhoy Coomar Shaw, (1873) 13 Beng. L. R. 307, sub. nom. Nrigendro Lall Chatterjee v. Okhoy Coomar Shaw, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 59, F.B., overruling Lall Chand Roy, (1868) 9 W.R. (Cr.) 87; Laloo Ghella, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 553, 1 Cr. L. J. 757; Jagannath Raghunathdas, (1931) 33 Bom. L. R. 1518, 33 Cr. L. J. 317; Karim Bakhsh v. Habibulla, (1903) P. R. No. 15 of 1903, 1 Cr. L. J. 506; Bhudarmull Marwari v. Ramchander Marwari, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 127, 21 Cr. L. J. 338, [1920] AIR (P) 112; Balls, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 328; Tankard, [1894] 1 Q. B. 548; Bhupendranath Singha v. Girdharilal Nader (1932) 60 Cal. 1318; Sham Lal v.

Chaman Lal, (1938) 41 P. L. R. 37, 40 Cr. L. J. 942, [1939] AIR (L) 406; Alla Rakha v. Liakat Hossain, (1940) 44 C. W. N. 650, 41 Cr. L. J. 796, [1940] AIR (C) 371; Reddy v. Reddy, [1941] Ran. 547; Baron Von Dincklage, [1941] 2 M. L. J. 748, [1942] M. W. N. 41, (1941) 54 L. W. 521, 43 Cr. L. J. 395, [1942] AIR (M) 182; Mandavalli Satyanarayanamurthi v. Kotha Manikyala Rao, [1939] M. W. N. 1252, (1938) 41 Cr. L. J. 398, [1940] AIR (M) 265.

²² Debi Prasad Bhagat v. Nagar Mull, (1901) 35 Cal. 1108.

²³ Koorathakwar Chetty, [1920] M. W. N. 346, 11 L. W. 144, 21 Cr. L. J. 309, [1920] AIR (M) 150.

²⁴ Ragho Prasad Gupta, (1930) 12 P. L. T. 255 22 Cr. L. J. 690

If there is any doubt upon the matter, the accused must always have the benefit of the doubt.²⁵ A partner who receives money on behalf of the partnership does not receive it in a fiduciary capacity. Consequently, when one partner is alleged to have withheld the share of the profits of the partnership business said to be due to another partner, he cannot be prosecuted under this section.¹

Auctioneer.—An auctioneer is not liable for criminal breach of trust merely because he does not punctually carry out every term in the agreement, e.g. as to the date of the sale and the time of payment of the proceeds.²

Executor de son tort.—An executor de son tort is held liable to account for assets which come into his hand, not upon the basis of entrustment, but upon the basis that, not being entrusted, he had no business to intermeddle. The application of the doctrine in no way depends upon the bad faith in the person intermeddling. It is not sound to hold a person guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust upon the basis that he became an executor de son tort.³

Wife.—A wife has a joint possession of her husband's property and cannot, therefore, be indicted for disposing of it in any way.⁴ According to English law she can be convicted of larceny as a bailee.⁵

Loan.—If a sum of money is advanced by way of loan no criminal breach of trust is committed even if the borrower uses it for a purpose other than that for which the advance was made. The accused was given a sum of money for the purpose of buying paddy for the complainant. At the time of the advance he signed an agreement under which he undertook to use the money solely to buying paddy, and to deliver the paddy to the complainant. The value of the paddy was to be credited at the market rate of the day of delivery. The accused had also signed a demand promissory note for the amount of the advance. The accused failed to carry out the arrangement and was convicted of criminal breach of trust. It was held that the conviction was bad as the transaction amounted to a loan and not a trust.⁶

Pledgee.—A person who pledges what is pledged to him in violation of any direction of law or contract⁷ or denies the pledge⁸ is guilty of this offence. Where there is no condition attached to the contract of pledge, the pledgee has a perfect legal right to deal with the pledged property in any manner he chooses so long as he is within the rights that can be exercised by a bailee with regard to the property which is the subject-matter of bail. Consequently, no dishonest intention can be inferred from the fact of a sub-pledge by a pledgee.⁹ The accused, in the regular course of his money-lending business, effected sub-pledges of the same jewels, for the same amounts and on the same dates as the pledges made to him, with his financiers or khata-dars to raise capital at a lower rate of interest. There was no express contract taking away the right to make sub-pledges and there was no evidence to show that the sub-pledges were made with a dishonest intention. It was held that the accused was not guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust. Under s. 179 of the Indian Contract Act the pawnee or pledgee has the right to make a sub-pledge of the goods pawned to him to the extent of his interest.¹⁰ Where the accused, to whom a thing was not entrusted, was present and helped the other accused in pledging it, knowing that the other had no right to pledge it, it was held that though he could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust he would be guilty of abetment of that offence.¹¹ The accused was entrusted with a pair of earrings for the purpose of raising Rs. 7 only upon them for the complainant's

²⁵ Jagannath Raghunathdas, (1931) 33 Bom. L. R. 1518, 33 Cr. L. J. 317.

¹ Man Mohan Das v. Mohendra Bhowal, (1948) 52 C. W. N. 441.

² Baliharas, (1914) 41 Cal. 844.

³ Susenbihari Ray, (1930) 58 Cal. 1051, s.b.

⁴ (1864) Weir (3rd Edn.) 266. This decision does not seem to be a sound one. If a wife removing the separate property of her husband is guilty of theft, there is no reason why she should not be guilty of criminal breach of trust in respect of such property.

⁵ Jane Robson, (1861) 31 L. J. (M. C.) 22.

⁶ Wong Yone Main, (1911) 6 L. B. R. 46, 13 Cr. L. J. 269, approved of in the full bench cases of Po Seik, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 62, 13 Cr. L. J. 888, F.B., and Hock Chong & Co., v. Tha Ka Do, (1913) 7 L. B. R. 16, 14 Cr. L. J. 145, F.B.

⁷ (1871) 6 M. H. C. (Appx.) 28, 1 Weir 461; Vadivaloo Chetty v. Abdul Razak, (1907) 13 Burma L. R. 286, 6 Cr. L. J. 334.

⁸ Abinas Chandra Kumar v. Dhani Buksh Muhammad, (1935) 62 C. L. J. 487, 38 Cr. L. J. 118, [1936] AIR (C) 673.

⁹ Sarju Prasad, (1922) 26 O. C. 4, 24 Cr. L. J. 10, [1922] AIR (O) 280.

¹⁰ Nemichand Parakh, [1938] Mad. 639;

¹¹ Yeditha Subbayya, [1912] M. W. N. 725, 23 M. L. J. 722, 13 Cr. L. J. 453.

use. But he pledged them for a larger sum and gave Rs. 7 to the complainant and applied the additional money to his own use without telling him what he had done. It was held that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹²

Where the accused who had pledged promissory notes with the complainant as security for a loan dishonestly induced the latter to hand over the same to him by pretending that he required the same to collect money from his debtors with the aid of which he would pay cash to the complainant and the accused disposed of the notes in violation of his contract with the complainant, it was held that there was both entrustment and dishonest misappropriation and the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹³

Deposit.—Security deposit by an employee is a sum which the employer is entitled to retain as long as it is necessary to secure him against losses which may be occasioned by the employee's default. This would usually be until accounts between the employer and the employee have been adjusted. During such period no one, not even the employee who has made the deposit, may deprive the employer of his right to retain the amount deposited. The surreptitious withdrawal by the employee of his security deposit before accounts have been adjusted amounts to criminal breach of trust on the part of the employee.¹⁴ The accused was an employee of a zemindar and at the time he entered service he furnished a certain amount in cash as security. At the time of leaving his service the accused handed over the account papers to his masters. One item of expenditure shown in the account papers was the withdrawal of the money that he had put in as security. It was held that no dishonest intention could be made out on the part of the accused. It might be that he took a wrong view of his civil rights in taking away the amount, but he believed he had the right on giving up his service and his conviction under s. 408 could not stand.¹⁵ The return of a deposit to the brother of the depositor under circumstances indicating the best of intention and an absence of moral turpitude, may render the depositee civilly liable to the depositor but does not amount to criminal breach of trust which involves moral turpitude.¹⁶ The complainant executed a mortgage to the accused and left the money with the accused with the stipulation that as the complainant settled and arranged with his creditors by remissions the necessary amount should be advanced by the accused to him. The accused made certain payments but after a time refused to pay further amounts. The accused was charged with an offence of criminal breach of trust. It was held that no criminal offence was committed as it was not a case of entrustment of money to a clerk or a servant or a bare custodian on the understanding that it should be produced when required but was a case of current deposit.¹⁷ Where the complainant had failed to recover from the accused a Municipal debenture which he had deposited with him by way of security on being given an employment and it appeared that the accused had deposited the debenture with a Bank against a loan and made no attempt to redeem it but there was no evidence that he had no intention of doing so, it was held that by such use of the debenture as had been made, there was no breach of any legal contract, express or implied, and the accused was not guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁸ A mere failure to return promptly the amount deposited by an employee with an employer as security was held to be not sufficient for conviction of the employer for criminal breach of trust.¹⁹

Hire.—The words of this section do not embrace the case of a man who has taken an article on hire and fails to produce it. There must be some evidence that he acted dishonestly. A person who fails to produce a meter installed by an electric company is responsible for its price but is not guilty of criminal breach of trust.²⁰

Hire-purchase agreement.—If a person gets an article under a hire-purchase agreement and subsequently sells it without making payments in full to the person ¹² Gurumahanty Appalasamy, (1894) 1 Weir 464.

¹³ Venkatagurunatha Sastri, (1923) 45 M. L. J. 133, [1923] M. W. N. 813, 17 L. W. 580, 24 Cr. L. J. 452, [1923] AIR (M) 597.

¹⁴ Surendra Nath Basu, [1938] 2 Cal. 257.

¹⁵ Abdul Majid, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 56, [1936] AIR (C) 520.

¹⁶ Hussainalli Mahomedali, (1929) 30 Cr. L.

J. 735, [1929] AIR (S) 119.

¹⁷ Mahammad Ismail Beig v. Ahamad Sheriff, [1934] M. W. N. 738.

¹⁸ Gurudas v. Monindra, (1940) 44 C. W. N. 872.

¹⁹ L. Cramwell, (1944) 48 C. W. N. 734.

²⁰ Manni Lal, [1932] A. L. J. R. 213, 33 Cr. L. J. 866.

from whom he has hired it, he commits a criminal breach of trust.²¹ The accused hired a motor car of the complainant company under the hire-purchase system, which provided that until the car was fully paid for by the accused the car was to remain the absolute property of the company; and the accused agreed during the hiring not to "assign, underlet or part with the possession" of the car in any way. Whilst this agreement was in force the accused pledged the car to three different persons on three different occasions. The accused was convicted of the offence of criminal breach of trust for making those assignments. It was held that the pledging of the car by the accused was a violation of the legal contract made by him in regard to the hire of the car and that violation was dishonest on the part of the accused.²² The accused obtained a motor car from the complainant on a hire-purchase agreement, stipulating that so long as the whole amount of the price was not paid, the car would remain the absolute property of the complainant and that the accused would not in any way dispose of it. The complainant brought a suit for the recovery of the price still remaining due under the agreement and got a decree for a certain sum with costs, but no lien on the car was declared by the Court. Soon after this decree the accused sold away the car. It was held that the accused in disposing of the car, in contravention of the original hire-purchase agreement, did not commit an offence under this section, as the original contract was merged in the decree of the civil Court.²³ One C agreed to purchase a motor lorry from the owners, paying the price by instalments. Meanwhile he signed an agreement with the owners by which, describing himself as "the hirer", he undertook to pay certain instalments; to insure the vehicle hired; not to deal with it; to allow the owners to recover possession in case of default in payment of instalments; and he admitted that the lorry would remain the property of the owners until all the instalments due were paid. It was held that C, having, in spite of his agreement, sold the lorry before the instalments were paid, was guilty of criminal breach of trust.²⁴ But where the complainant sold a gramophone to the accused on instalment system but on his not paying the instalments the complainant asked for the machine and, though it was not immediately produced, it had not been sold and was produced in Court, it was held that the matter was of civil dispute, and the mere non-payment of the monthly instalments could not be considered as a criminal offence.²⁵

Disputed claim.—The accused was employed by the complainant and others to take their paddy for sale and he sold it to a Marwari. The complainant stated that the accused had withheld from him a portion of the money due from the sale of his paddy. There was a dispute between the parties as to the number of bags that were given to the complainant by the accused, and the defence was that some of the bags, for which the price was claimed by the complainant, were bags given to the accused by another man who had filed a suit against the accused to recover their price. It was held that the accused could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust on refusing to give to the complainant money, which was claimed by another person as well as by the complainant.¹ Where the accused still retains dominion over the property and has some claim to it, even if it turns out not to be sustainable in law, there is no offence unless the claim is merely a pretence and not bona fide.²

Debt is not trust.—Upon a charge for criminal breach of trust the accused pleaded that the amount claimed by the complainants was due to them as a debt, but having sustained losses in business they were unable to pay it. It was held that in such cases the crucial test is, was the sum due to complainants owed by the accused as a debt, or was it held by them as trust money for complainants over which they had no right of disposition of any kind?³

2. 'Dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property'.—Dishonest intention is the gist of the offence.⁴ Whether wrongful gain or loss

²¹ Maung Mya Gyi v. Nga Po Shwe, (1914) 7 L. B. R. 298, 15 Cr. L. J. 425, [1914] AIR (LB) 157.

²² Moses, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 670, 16 Cr. L. J. 665.

²³ Cohen v. Sasi Bhushan Das Gupta, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 728, [1918] AIR (C) 668.

²⁴ C. J. Cadd, (1928) 45 All. 588. Reference to s. 420 in the headnote is wrong.

²⁵ Kalipada Mondal v. Kali Kinkar Chatterjee,

(1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 113, [1936] AIR (C) 674.

¹ Raj Kishore Patter v. Joy Krishna Sen, (1900) 28 Cal. 362.

² Harry Jones, (1924) 28 C. W. N. 831, 25 Cr. L. J. 1053, [1924] AIR (C) 908.

³ Raushan Rai, (1901) P. R. No. 32 of 1901.

⁴ Rahim Baksh, (1879) P. R. No. 30 of 1879; Ponnambalam Pillai, (1883) 1 Weir 462; Murphy, (1887) 9 All. 666; H. A. L. Girsham v. Mutusamy, (1909) U. B. R. (P. C.) 21, 11 Cr. L. J. 44.

actually results is immaterial; it is a consequence, but not essential part, of the offence, and a person is not accused of the offence by reason of it.⁵ Any breach of trust is not an offence. It may be intentional without being dishonest or it may appear dishonest without being really so. In such cases the Magistrate must be slow to move. This caution is all the more necessary since there is a natural desire to secure speedy justice by having recourse to criminal law.⁶ As to the meaning of "dishonestly" see s. 24, supra. The offence of criminal breach of trust is completed by the misappropriation or the conversion of the property dishonestly. It is only the intention which is essential; whether wrongful gain or loss actually results is immaterial; it is a consequence, but not essential part, of the offence, and a person is not accused of the offence by reason of it.⁷ Mere retention of property entrusted to a person without any misappropriation is not criminal breach of trust. Unless there is some actual user by the accused which is in violation of law or contract, there is no criminal breach of trust; and even if there is such user there must be a dishonest intention. If a man is proved to have had a reasonable claim against another for more than the sum of money belonging to the other in his hands, his retention of it, and even his user of it for his own purposes would not in law amount to criminal breach of trust because the intention could not have been dishonest, that is to say, to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain.⁸ The accused, who was the Head Clerk in a Sub-Magistrate's Court, was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of amounts of fines received by him as Head Clerk from parties. It was admitted that he received the amounts in question and spent them for his private purposes. The evidence, however, showed that during the period when the misappropriation took place, he was not in a normal state of mind and that he was subject to fits of insanity which rendered him unable to understand that what he was doing was wrongful. It was held that, even if the case was not really covered by s. 84, the evidence excluded the existence of a dishonest intention which was an essential ingredient of the offence of criminal breach of trust, that the misappropriation could not therefore be regarded as criminal, and that the conviction of the accused was illegal.⁹

Loss to the principal or anybody else is not a necessary ingredient of this offence.¹⁰

If, instead of denying the appropriation of property, the accused, in rendering his account, admits the appropriation, alleging a right in himself, no matter how unfounded, or setting up an excuse, no matter how frivolous, this offence is not committed.¹¹ Bare refusal by the accused to allow the removal of a box left in his house by the complainant, unless some debt due to him by the complainant was paid, was held not to amount to a criminal breach of trust.¹²

Where an agent receives money on behalf of his principal, the money so received is the property of, and is owned by, the principal, and if such agent refuses, at the request of the person paying the money, to refund it, he is not criminally liable, and, consequently, cannot be prosecuted for criminal breach of trust, as the gist of that offence is the dishonest misappropriation or the conversion by one to his own use of the property of another which has been entrusted to him.¹³

'Misappropriates'.—"There may be appropriation by a mental act without any actual expenditure of the money thus appropriated. The fact that the money has not been expended is a circumstance to be taken into account as evidence in favour of the view that there has been no mental appropriation, but the circumstance is not conclusive that there has been no such appropriation. Again, the mental appropriation must be established by some overt and visible act, but actual expenditure of the money is not the only proof of it".¹⁴

Dishonest conversion.—Where a Magistrate made over a pony, which had been condemned by the municipal authorities as unfit for work, to a person professing to be the secretary of a society for the maintenance of incurable animals and as such secretary

⁵ Mathura Pd., [1946] P. W. N. 192.

⁶ Rangi Lall, (1930) 6 Luck. 68; Kanhaiya Lal, [1937] O. W. N. 505, 38 Cr. L. J. 491, [1937] AIR (O) 331.

⁷ Rambilas, (1914) 38 Mad. 639.

⁸ V. Krishnan, [1939] M. W. N. 1213, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 824, [1940] AIR (M) 329.

⁹ Joseph, [1939] Mad. 353.

¹⁰ Jivandas Savchand, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R.

1195, 55 Bom. 59, F.B.

¹¹ Norman, (1842) Car. & M. 501.

¹² Adinarayana Iyer, (1907) 17 M. L. J. 413, 6 Cr. L. J. 330.

¹³ Ram Khelawan, (1919) 20 Cr. L. J. 654, [1919] AIR (P) 570.

¹⁴ Per Plowden, J., in Kesho Ram, (1889) P. R. No. 36 of 1889, at p. 137.

agreed to take charge of the pony, but afterwards sold it to an eka (one-horse carriage) driver,¹⁵ this offence was held to have been committed.

A lady wishing to get a railway ticket, finding a crowd at the pay-place at the station, asked the accused, who was nearer to the pay-place, to get a ticket for her, and handed him a sovereign to pay for it. The price of the ticket was 10s. He took it intending to steal it, and instead of getting the ticket immediately ran away with the money. It was held that he was guilty of larceny at common law, as the lady being present retained the dominion and possession, in point of law, after she had handed it to him for the intended purpose.¹⁶ Under the Penal Code, it will be criminal breach of trust.

Where the accused asked for a gold mohur (sovereign) from the complainant in order that he might play with the child who was weeping, using the mohur as a plaything, and subsequently misappropriated it, it was held that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁷ Where a municipal board undertakes house scavenging by means of "customary sweepers", the rubbish and night-soil collected by the sweepers is the property of the board. Hence, where a sanitary inspector, having induced the sweepers to deposit the matter collected by them in a place other than that prescribed by the board, thereafter sold it for his own benefit, it was held that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁸ Certain grain and live-stock were attached from complainant's possession in execution of a decree against him, and were made over to the decree-holder (accused) for safe-custody. When the attached property was sold, it was found that there was a shortage in quantity of grain and animals while in accused's possession. It was held that the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust and not of an offence under s. 206 as the criminal intention required to be proved in the latter offence was materially different from the intention required in the offence of criminal breach of trust.¹⁹

Stake-holder.—A stake-holder, who misappropriates to his own use the stakes deposited with him for a wager, is guilty of criminal breach of trust.²⁰

3. 'Dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law...or of any legal contract...touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do'.—A user of property comes within this definition when such user causes substantial or appreciable loss to the owner of the property or gain to the accused. The use by a printer of certain blocks entrusted to him to print the complainant's catalogue for the purpose of printing a rival firm's catalogue amounts to criminal breach of trust.²¹ It is not necessary, in order to establish dishonesty, that the prosecution should establish an intention to retain permanently the property misappropriated. An intention wrongfully to deprive the owner of the use of the property for a time and to secure the use of the property for his own benefit for a time, may be sufficient.²² The Madras High Court has held that for either wrongful loss or gain the property must be lost to the owner or the owner must be wrongfully kept out of it. The deterioration of an article, such as a turban, by use, is, according to its opinion, not such a loss of property to its owner, and the wrongful beneficial use of property by the accused is not such a gain to him.²³

Where a sum of money is placed in the hands of a person under a lawful agreement which, however, becomes subsequently incapable of execution, and is retained by him afterwards against a debt due to him, he cannot be held guilty of criminal breach of trust.²⁴

'Wilfully suffers any other person so to do'.—If a person entrusted with property, or with any dominion over property, wilfully suffers any other person to use or dispose of the trust property, he will be liable under the second part of the section. Where ¹⁵ Gauri Shankar, (1894) 14 A. W. N. 197.

¹⁶ George Thomas, (1862) 32 L. J. (M. C.) 53.

¹⁷ Raghubir Kurmi, (1919) 1 U. P. L. R. 69, 20 Cr. L. J. 418, [1919] AIR (A) 309.

¹⁸ Hori Lal, (1922) 45 All. 281.

¹⁹ Sahebrao Baburao, (1936) 38 Bom. L. R. 1192, 38 Cr. L. J. 272, [1937] AIR (B) 46.

²⁰ Nga Te, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 216, 1 Cr. L. J. 730, F.B., overruling Nga Po Twe, (1881) S. J.

L. B. 130.

²¹ Keshab Chandra Boral v. Nityanund Biswas, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 203.

²² Chaturbhuj Narain Choudhury, (1935) 15 Pat. 108.

²³ (1866) 3 M. H. C. (Appx.) 6.

²⁴ Puran, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 383, [1926] AIR (A) 298.

a public servant, who was entrusted with the safe custody of records, allowed the keys of the record-room to go into the possession of another person in order to give corruptly access to the records to make copies, it was held that the fact that the accused himself did not misappropriate or use or dispose of any record in violation of his trust was immaterial and the second part of s. 405 applied and the accused was guilty under s. 409.²⁵ See Comment on s. 477A, infra, as to the meaning of the word 'wilfully'.

Wilful omission to account.—If a person receives money which he is bound to account for and does not do so, he commits this offence, although no precise time can be fixed at which it was his duty to pay over the money.¹ Where a servant fails to render accounts and to deliver up the money realized by him in spite of repeated demands, he uses the property entrusted to him in violation of the legal contract made by him with his master and is guilty of an offence under s. 408.² "...where money is entrusted for a particular purpose, the owner cannot know that it has been misappropriated until the person to whom it has been entrusted fails to account for it. On the other hand, when the latter fails to account for the money entrusted to him, the owner naturally comes to the conclusion that he has dishonestly misappropriated it. Whether a civil suit for account does or does not lie, and whether the complainant or informant has or has not been led to institute criminal proceedings, merely because he has not got an account, are immaterial. The question is whether the facts constitute the offence defined in section 405".³ It is not necessary or possible in every case of criminal breach of trust to prove in what precise manner the money was spent or appropriated by the accused because under the law even temporary retention is an offence provided that it is dishonest. The essential thing to be proved in such cases is whether the accused was actuated by dishonest intention or not. The failure to account for the money proved to have been received by the accused or giving a false account as to its use is generally considered to be a strong circumstance against the accused. The mental act or intent to deprive the master of his property is the gist of the offence of criminal breach of trust.⁴

If a servant, immediately on receiving a sum for his master, enters a smaller sum in his master's books and ultimately accounts to his master for the smaller sum, he may be considered as embezzling the difference at the time he makes the entry. It will make no difference though he received other sums for his master the same day, and in paying those and the smaller sum to his master together, he might give his master every piece of money or note he received at the time he made the false entry.⁵

It is not necessary to prove that any particular sum or sums were received from any particular person. Where the accused had debited himself with an amount, forming the balance of a large number of receipts and payments, this was held to be sufficient.⁶

It was the duty of a servant, authorized to receive money for his employer, to account to his employer on the evening of every day for the money received during the day by him for his employer, and to pay over the amount. He received three sums for his employer on three different days, and neither accounted for those sums, nor paid them over. He never denied the receipt of them, nor rendered any written account in which they were omitted. It was held that, if the servant wilfully omitted to account for these sums, and pay them over on the respective days on which he received them, they were embezzlements, and that such wilful omissions to account and pay over were equivalent to a denial of the receipt of them.⁷ If a public servant in his capacity as such receives money on a certain date and does not include it in his cash balance entered in the register which he is required to maintain, there is very strong prima facie evidence of the money having been misappropriated on that date, and he is guilty of embezzlement if he does not hand over to his successor the money in his hands due to Government.⁸ The position of a shroff of a Battery with reference to the custody of the Government moneys entrusted to him being that of a cashier, his

²⁵ Abdus Salam, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 219, [1936] AIR (P) 108.

¹ Welch's Case, (1846) 1 Den. 199.

² Brij Kishore v. Chandrika Prasad, (1936) 12 Luck. 77; Wazair Singh, (1941) 17 Luck. 353.

³ Per Shaw, J. C., in H. A. L. Girdham v. Mutusamy, (1909) U. B. R. (P.C.) 21, 22, 11 Cr. L. J. 44, 45.

⁴ Chaturbhuj Narain Choudhury, (1935) 15

Pat. 108.

⁵ Hall's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 463.

⁶ Lambert, (1847) 2 Cox 309.

⁷ Jackson, (1844) 1 C. & K. 384; Charles Lister, (1856) 26 L. J. (M. C.) 26; Chandra Prasad, (1926) 5 Pat. 578.

⁸ Daya Shankar, (1926) 1 Luck. 345; Dewasikhamani Asari, (1925) 23 L. W. 718, 26 Cr. L. J. 863, [1926] AIR (M) 727.

failure to produce the entire amount of the balance of cash entrusted to him was held to be criminal breach of trust.⁹

In cases of criminal breach of trust failure to account for the money proved to have been received by the accused or giving a false account as to its use is generally considered to be a strong circumstance against the accused. But accused must not be convicted on it alone. It is only an indication, a piece of evidence pointing to dishonest intention, and must be considered along with other facts of the case.¹⁰ Accused was employed as agent by the complainant to collect certain taxes. He was to receive as remuneration ten per cent. of the collections, and was to hand over the collections, less his remuneration, to his master or to pay the money into the treasury, no period being fixed for the latter purpose. It was alleged that while in charge of the collections he failed to account for a certain sum of money collected by him. He was accordingly convicted of criminal breach of trust. It was held that in such cases the nature of the trust should be established; that as the accused was entitled to deduct his remuneration from the collections, and as no period was fixed for payment into the treasury, a charge of criminal breach of trust could only be maintained after an adjustment of accounts, the mere fact that he retained the sums collected not being conclusive proof of criminal breach of trust, and that the conviction was, therefore, not maintainable.¹¹

False accounting.—The accused had received a cheque which he was to get cashed, and lay out the proceeds in the market. He did cash it, but did not lay out the proceeds as he ought to have done, and in the prosecutor's books gave a wrong account of the manner in which the money had been expended. It was held that this offence had been committed.¹²

'In violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract...touching the discharge of such trust.'—The misappropriation, conversion, etc., must be in violation of a legal direction prescribing the mode in which the person entrusted with the property is to carry out the trust or the contract. Where the accused were entrusted with some silver for the purpose of making ornaments and they introduced copper into the ornaments, it was held that they were guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹³

When a person takes goods on approval under an agreement that property therein was to pass only if he exercised his option to take them and paid cash in full for certain articles and in part for others, the trust continues till the option is exercised and cash payments made, and he commits criminal breach of trust if he sells them without such payments.¹⁴

The servant of a liquor contractor was entrusted with liquor by his master to sell. For selling it, he was to receive a certain quantity himself, and he was to account for the remainder to his master, with whom he made a legal contract that he would not adulterate it with water before selling it. In violation of that contract he mixed water with the liquor, and having thus increased its amount, sold it at the same rate per gallon as was chargeable for unadulterated liquor, and appropriated the profit thus made to his own use. It was held that having thus gained by unlawful means money to which he was not legally entitled, he acted dishonestly within the meaning of the Code, and was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁵ In both the cases the accused were entrusted with property for a particular purpose and there was a contract with them which they violated. If the contract itself is illegal no conviction can be sustained even if there is misappropriation in violation of the terms of the contract. Where the accused misappropriated money under an agreement which was by way of wager it was held that he could not be convicted under the second part of this section under which he was charged. In this case the accused had started a betting business, the principal object of which was to provide facilities to constituents to back horses at various race meetings in India. He was to remit sums furnished by customers to some person

⁹ Hira Lal, (1907) P. R. No. 19 of 1908, Cr. L. J. 492.

¹⁰ Harakrishna Mahatab; (1929) 11 P. L. T. 319, 31 Cr. L. J. 249, [1930] AIR (P) 209; Gona Achayya, [1936] M. W. N. 825.

¹¹ Nurul Hassan, (1920) 21 Cr. L. J. 509, [1920] AIR (P) 168 (2).

¹² Goodenough, (1853) 6 Cox 206; see also Guelder, (1860) 8 Cox 372.

¹³ Babaji bin Bhau, (1867) 4 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 16.

¹⁴ Khitish Chandra Deb Roy, (1924) 51 Cal. 796.

¹⁵ Jamsetji, (1888) Cr. R. No. 53 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 395.

present at the race meeting, who would put them on selected horses either through the totalizer or otherwise. Certain sums of money were placed in his hands as bets on horses running in Poona races, but he did not forward the money to Poona and misappropriated the sum.¹⁶ But where an assistant station-master, whose duty it was to issue tickets to the passengers and to charge fares as fixed by the railway, made an overcharge over some of the tickets and did not credit the excess so realised to the railway, it was held that he was not guilty of criminal breach of trust, as he was not a trustee within the meaning of this section. The Court observed: "A trustee is a person in whom is invested the legal or formal interest in property, the equitable or beneficial interest vesting in and belonging to some other person. In the present case it is beyond doubt that the legal and the beneficial interest both vested in and belonged to one and the same person, viz. the petitioner, the Railway having no beneficial interest in the money dishonestly recovered and in fact in direct contravention of their own instruction".¹⁷

No breach of trust if there is no dishonest use or disposal.—Where a cloth was entrusted to the accused, a washerman, on the understanding that it was not to be washed by men of certain class, and the accused allowed the article to be worn by the prohibited class, the article being thereby rendered valueless to the owner;¹⁸ where the accused refused to give up land alleged to have been mortgaged;¹⁹ where the accused did not immediately apply the money for the purpose for which it was intended;²⁰ where the mother of a child recently vaccinated accepted two annas from a vaccinator under promise to take the child to another village where the vaccinator wanted to take lymph out of the baby and she subsequently refused to take the child there;²¹ where a Sub-Inspector of Police purchased a pony which had been impounded;²² and where the accused failed to deliver the full quantity of hides entrusted to him as the tindal of a cargo boat to be carried on a steamer,²³ this offence was not committed. Where the accused were entrusted by a Court officer with certain movable property attached in execution of a decree, but at the time of sale they did not produce the property and evaded the service of notice, it was held that they could not be held guilty of criminal breach of trust inasmuch as they did not misappropriate the property or convert it to their own use or dispose of it in any manner contrary to the terms of the trust.²⁴ Where in payment for certain cloth valued at Rs. 43-12-0 purchased from the accused the complainant sent a hundred rupee note, but the accused did not send back any change alleging that money was due to him and refusing to give the change until the account was settled, it was held that no offence under this section was committed, inasmuch as the conduct of the accused was not dishonest.²⁵

Bona fide claim.—Where a bona fide claim of title is raised, founded or unfounded, the accused is entitled to acquittal, but whether the claim is bona fide raised or not is a question of fact and has to be determined in the circumstances of each case.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was entrusted with property or with dominion over it.²

(2) That he (a) misappropriated it, or (b) converted it to his own use, or (c) used it, or (d) disposed of it.

(3) That he did so in violation of (a) any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust was to be discharged, or (b) any legal contract, express or implied, which he had made touching the discharge of such trust;³ or that he wilfully suffered some other persons to do as above.

¹⁶ Uppasini, (1926) 52 M. L. J. 179, 28 Cr. L. J. 381, [1927] AIR(M) 425.

¹⁷ Kudrat Nath, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 879, [1923] AIR (L) 295.

¹⁸ (1880) Weir (3rd Edn.) 269.

¹⁹ Jaffir Naik, (1864) 2 B. H. C. 127.

²⁰ Aredeshir Merwanjee, (1889) Cr. R. No. 50 of 1889, Unrep. Cr. C. 484.

²¹ Satawa, (1891) Unrep. Cr. C. 557.

²² Rajkristo Biswas, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 52, 8 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 1.

²³ Ramaya, (1904) 1 Cr. L. J. 908.

²⁴ Harnam Singh, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 600, 19 Cr. L. J. 975, [1918] AIR (A) 446.

²⁵ Bajinath Marwari, (1933) 34 Cr. L. J. 915, [1933] AIR (P) 554.

¹ Panchi Mandar, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 318, 21 Cr. L. J. 609, [1920] AIR (P) 663.

² Gouri Narayan Barrua v. Tilbikram Chetri, (1921) 25 C. W. N. 838, 23 Cr. L. J. 220, [1921] AIR (C) 531.

³ Pritchard, (1928) 30 Cr. L. J. 18, [1928] AIR (L) 382.

In a case under this section the question of trust must be fully inquired into. For this purpose it is essential that the whole prosecution evidence should be recorded. It is impossible to guess at an intermediate stage what will be the result of the inquiry. The Magistrate is not so much concerned as to whether an offence has been committed against the complainant as to whether an offence has been committed which is punishable by the law of the land. Consequently when only a few of the prosecution witnesses have been examined, it is too premature to decline to examine any more witnesses for the prosecution and discharge the accused on the ground that the case is of civil nature.⁴

To make out a case of criminal breach of trust it is not sufficient to show that money has been retained. It must also be shown that the accused disposed of it in some way other than that in which he was bound to apply it and that he did so dishonestly. The mere fact that the accused did not at once apply the money to the purpose for which it was intended does not amount to criminal breach of trust. There must be some dishonest use of money to constitute the offence.⁵ Mere retention of money does not necessarily raise a presumption of dishonest misappropriation to one's own use, but dishonest misappropriation may sometimes be inferred from the circumstances without direct evidence.⁶ The prosecution cannot rest content with proving mere false entries to bring home to the accused that money had been misappropriated without further evidence to prove that the accused attempted to suppress all traces of his embezzlement by any manipulation of the accounts, or evidence of the financial circumstances of the accused which would render probable a case of misappropriation.⁷

(4) That he acted as in (2) dishonestly.⁸

Where the accused admits having received the money alleged to have been misappropriated by him, but defends himself by saying that he made it over to the proper person, the onus does not lie on him to prove payment, but on the prosecution to prove non-payment; for it is only when the latter is proved that a presumption will arise of misappropriation or breach of trust.⁹

It is neither necessary nor possible in every case of criminal breach of trust to prove in what precise manner the money was spent or appropriated by the accused, since by law even temporary retention provided it is dishonest is an offence. But where there is no direct evidence of misappropriation and one is left to surmise as to what use was made by the accused of the money, one ought to require clearer evidence of dishonest intention than in a case where there is direct evidence to prove that the money was appropriated by the accused for a particular use which is inconsistent with his position as a trustee of the money.¹⁰

Evidence of acts of embezzlement other than those charged in indictment.—An indictment charged the accused with having embezzled three sums of £2, the moneys of his employers, he being a clerk or servant. Evidence was given of the embezzlement of these sums, and it was then proposed to give evidence of other sums not charged in the indictment, but which had also been embezzled, to show that if it should be contended the sums charged in the indictment were subjects of a mistake in the keeping of the accounts, there being many other sums unaccounted for, admitting evidence of such sums would assist the Court in determining what value was to be attached to the suggestion. It was held that such evidence was admissible.¹¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

In a case of criminal breach of trust arising out of the misappropriation of a number of sums, the proper course is for the prosecutor to select three items on which

⁴ Chan Eiliam v. L. H. Wellington, (1938) 41 Cr. L. J. 25, [1939] A. L. J. R. 806, [1939] AIR (R) 377.

⁵ Nga Hmu, (1901) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 345; Parmod Ban Behari Saran, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 90.

⁶ Nga Tha Zan, (1905) U. B. R. (P.C.) 19, 2 Cr. L. J. 478.

⁷ Rama Rao v. The Sub-Inspector of Police, Kalahasti Station, [1937] M. W. N. 566.

⁸ Nagappa Malkappa, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. J. 120; Jagannath Raghunathdas, (1931) 33 Bom. L. R. 1518, 33 Cr. L. J. 317.

⁹ Hari Dagdu, (1896) Cr. R. No. 47 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 872; Ramchandra Ganesh, (1896) Cr. R. No. 27 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 860.

¹⁰ Harakrishna Mahatab, (1929) 11 P. L. T. 319, 31 Cr. L. J. 249, [1930] AIR (P) 209.

¹¹ Richardson, (1861) 8 Cox 448; Wm. Proud (1861) 9 Cox 22.

to proceed in the first instance and to give some general evidence as to the amount believed to have been misappropriated.¹² In view of s. 222(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code this is not necessary, but if it is done the accused cannot complain of multifariousness. Where a person receives money for the express purpose of using it for his master's benefit in a particular way, he is entrusted with money, and his appropriation of it to himself amounts to criminal breach of trust; and consequently a conviction for criminal breach of trust committed by misappropriation of a large sum of money made up of various items (more than three in number) on false pretences is not illegal.¹³

The offence of criminal breach of trust involves entrustment or dominion over property and dishonest misappropriation, conversion, use or disposal thereof. It is not possible to find these elements unless one can form a conception as to what that property is. There must, therefore, be a definite finding of a certain definite sum traced to the accused in order to form the basis of his conviction.¹⁴

If a person commits breach of trust of or misappropriates different sums of money, he commits so many offences. But it is not desirable that he should be tried as many times, when he could have been tried for all of them at one trial.¹⁵

Agreement to refund does not bar prosecution.—An agreement between the prosecutor and the accused that the money embezzled shall be refunded cannot be pleaded in bar of the prosecution.¹⁶

Pending of civil suit between parties.—Where offences with which the accused had been charged were under ss. 406 and 420 of the Code, but civil suits were also pending between the complainant and the accused in respect of the ornament which was the subject-matter of the criminal complaint, it was held that criminal proceedings could not be stayed till the civil cases were decided.¹⁷

Venue.—The offence of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.¹⁸ Section 405 is in two parts. The first part will apply where it is known that the accused has dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use the entrusted property at a particular place, and jurisdiction to try the accused will be at that place. But where it cannot be alleged that the misappropriation was actually and definitely committed at any particular place, there the case comes under the second part of section 405, namely dishonestly disposing of property in violation of any direction of law or of any legal contract; and if the legal contract required that the accused should remit or deliver or otherwise dispose of the property at a particular place, then his failure to do so constitutes the offence, and the jurisdiction to try the accused exists at such place. Hence, if there is evidence apart from the fact of non-delivery or non-accounting to show where the misappropriation was committed, the trial may be held at that place; but if there is no evidence to show where the misappropriation was committed, other than the fact of non-delivery or non-accounting according to the contract, then the trial may be held at the place where the accused failed to deliver or to account, because that is where the offence was committed. So, where the accused was engaged in Cawnpore as an agent of a firm of Cawnpore to sell goods in Bengal and either bring or remit the money to Cawnpore; and the accused made some sales and realised the prices at some places in Bengal but failed to bring or remit the money to Cawnpore; and there was no allegation or evidence that the accused had actually misappropriated or converted to his own use the money by any definite act committed at any particular place, it was held that the Cawnpore Court had jurisdiction to try him for an offence under s. 408/409.¹⁹ Mohru Lal's case has been dissented from by the Rangoon High Court in a case where the accused, an employee ¹² Villikkat Govind Menon, (1888) Weir (3rd Edn.) 270.

¹³ Ramappa, (1911) 22 M. L. J. 112, 13 Cr. L. J. 15.

¹⁴ Khirode Kumar Mukerji, (1924) 29 C. W. N. 54, 40 C. L. J. 555, 26 Cr. L. J. 532, [1925] AIR (C) 260.

¹⁵ Sidh Nath Awasthi, (1929) 57 Cal. 17, 24.

¹⁶ Mayandi Pillai, (1886) 1 Weir 462; The Zamindar of Yethiyapuram v. Ramasami Nandan, (1888) 1 Weir 465.

¹⁷ Panna Lal, [1943] All. 27.

¹⁸ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 181; D'Mello v. Pereira, (1937) 39 Bom. L. R. 620, [1937] Bom. 743.

¹⁹ Mohru Lal, (1935) 58 All. 644; Kunj Behari Lal v. Brahman Datta, [1942] A. L. J. R. 559, (1942) 44 Cr. L. J. 102, [1942] AIR (A) 439.

of the complainant at Akyab, was sent to Cochin to receive consignments of rice shipped by the complainant's firm from Rangoon and Akyab and to sell the rice. The accused was to submit accounts and pay the net cash balance resulting from the sales to the complainant's firm at Akyab. Instead of doing so the accused went away to his native country from Cochin without returning to Akyab to account for and pay in the moneys which came into his hands in the business at Cochin. The complainant filed a complaint for criminal breach of trust against the accused before a Magistrate at Akyab. It was held that the Magistrate at Akyab had no jurisdiction to try the offence, as it was not committed in Akyab. Although a person may have to account for money, it is not the failure to account, but the misuse of the money for dishonest purposes, which constitutes the offence. The money was not received or retained by the accused at Akyab. Further the failure by the accused to remit or bring the money occurs at the place where the accused is, and not in the place where the money is to be sent or brought.²⁰ In a case of criminal breach of trust by a servant whose duty it is to render account at one place, and there is no evidence to show where the alleged misappropriation was committed other than the fact of non-accounting, the venue may be laid in the place where the accused failed to account. If, however, there is evidence, apart from the fact of non-accounting, to show where the misappropriation was committed, the venue must be laid either in that place or the place where the property was received or retained. In the latter case there is no alternative venue in the place where the account was to be rendered.²¹ There is a clear distinction between mere liability to account at a particular place and the further duty to deliver property at that place. An agreement to render accounts at a particular place cannot be deemed to hand over or deliver any money or property at that place.²² Where criminal breach of trust was completed in Rangoon, the obligation on the part of the accused to render accounts in Bombay and to send the accounts to Bombay did not give the Bombay Court jurisdiction to try the offence.²³ The offence of criminal breach of trust cannot be tried at a place where neither the entrustment nor any act of conversion of the money entrusted took place but where the accused was to account for and deposit the money received and failed to do so, specially when there was nothing to show that the accused had been at that place at any material time.²⁴

Section 179 of the Criminal Procedure Code contemplates cases where the act done, and the consequence ensuing therefrom, together constitute the offence. The "consequence" contemplated by the section must be a necessary ingredient of the offence. If the offence is complete in itself by reason of the act having been done, and the consequence is a mere result of it which was not essential for the completion of the offence, then s. 179 would not be applicable. Loss to the owner is not the kind of "consequence" contemplated by s. 179, and that section will not confer jurisdiction for trial at the place where loss to the owner may ensue.²⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, being entrusted with certain property, to wit——, committed criminal breach of trust; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 406 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

A charge under this section is defective if it omits to set out the time and manner of the entrustment alleged with sufficient particularity.¹ It must indicate the clause of s. 405 under which the offence complained of falls.²

When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been com-

²⁰ Khimjee v. Tokersey, [1938] Ran. 1; Abdul Salam, (1919) 21 Cr. L. J. 149.

²¹ Paul De Flonder, (1931) 59 Cal. 92; Brij Kishore v. Pandit Chandrika Prasad, (1936) 12 Luck. 77.

²² Fateh Singh, [1940] All. 48.

²³ Jivandas Savchand, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R.

1195, 55 Bom. 59, F.B.

²⁴ Daityari Tripatti v. Subodchandra Chaudhuri, [1942] 2 Cal. 507.

²⁵ Kashi Ram Mehta, (1934) 56 All. 1047, F.B.

¹ Bhupendranath Singha v. Giridharilal Nagar, (1933) 60 Cal. 1316.

² Abinashchandra Sarkar, (1935) 63 Cal. 18.

mitted, and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence: Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.³ Prior to the enacting of this clause there was a difference of opinion between the various High Courts as to the legality of charging a person for a general deficiency without specifying particular items or exact dates. This clause is in accordance with the present English law. Where an accused person is charged with having misappropriated or committed criminal breach of trust in respect of an aggregate sum of money, the whole sum being alleged to have been wrongfully dealt with by the accused within a period not exceeding one year, the mere fact that the items composing such aggregate sum are specified and may be more than three in number will not render the charge obnoxious to the prohibition implied by s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁴ In a charge of criminal misappropriation there were three counts. Each count specified the sum of money alleged to have been misappropriated by the accused on a particular day; but in two out of the three cases the total sum consisted of three separate items in each instance. It was held that a charge so framed did not offend against s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁵ An accused person was tried for criminal breach of trust in respect of three distinct sums, and one charge was drawn up specifying all the three sums and the persons from whom he collected them. He was not charged with three offences, but with one offence under s. 409 and was convicted and sentenced to one term of imprisonment. It was held that the charge as framed was not contrary to law, it being in accordance with s. 222, sub-s. (2), and s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁶

Where the charge against the accused was to the effect that he on or before June 21, 1907, committed breach of trust in respect of some deeds which he took from the complainant and was thereby guilty of an offence punishable under this section, but at the trial he was convicted of embezzling not the deeds but amounts obtained by dealing with those deeds, it was held that the conviction was bad.⁷

Punishment.—A case of embezzlement of money is not a case contemplated by s. 62; and hence, in a sentence under this section, the Court is not competent to order that the rents and profits of the property of the accused should be forfeited to Government during the period of his imprisonment.⁸

407. Whoever, being entrusted with property as a carrier,¹ wharfinger² or warehouse-keeper,³ commits criminal breach of trust in respect of such property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Criminal breach of trust by carrier, etc.

COMMENT.

Those who receive property under a contract, express or implied, to carry it or keep it in safe custody are punishable under this section for a criminal breach of duty with respect to such property. The persons specified in this section are alike in being entrusted with the custody of property for which they are remunerated, their employment being not continuous, but intermittent and in relation to specific goods.

1. 'Carrier'.—A 'carrier' is a person who undertakes to transport the goods of other persons from one place to another for hire.⁹ Any one who undertakes to carry the goods of all persons indifferently for hire, is a common carrier.¹⁰ Railway companies are carriers.¹¹

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 222 (2). The cases of Ramchandra Govind Harshe, (1895) 19 Bom. 749, Luchminarain, (1886) 14 Cal. 128, Pursotam Dass Morarjee, (1896) 24 Cal. 193, C. A. Chetter, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 5, Ekram Ali, (1891) 2 C. W. N. 341, are no longer of any authority. See Kellie, (1895) 17 All. 153; Buddhu v. Babu Lal, (1895) 18 All. 254.

⁴ Gulzari Lal, (1902) 24 All. 254.

⁵ Ishtaq Ahmad, (1904) 27 All. 69.

⁶ Sat Narain Tewari, (1905) 32 Cal. 1085.

⁷ Bipra Das Giri v. Niradmoni Bewa, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 577, 7 Cr. L. J. 372; Balthasar, (1914) 41 Cal. 844.

⁸ Amrit Lal, (1906) 29 All. 25.

⁹ Wharton; 14th Edn., p. 164.

¹⁰ Gisbourn v. Hurst, (1710) 1 Salk. 249.

¹¹ Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890. Their civil liability is restricted by ss. 72-82.

2. 'Wharfinger'.—The term 'wharfinger' means a person who owns or keeps a wharf, which is 'a broad plain place, near some creek or haven, to lay goods and wares on that are brought to or from the water'.¹²

3. 'Warehouse-keeper'.—One who keeps a warehouse, which is a house to deposit or keep wares in. Ware is an article of merchandise, fabric, especially in the plural, goods, commodities, merchandise.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a carrier, wharfinger, or warehouse-keeper.

(2) That he was as such entrusted with the property in question.

(3) That he committed criminal breach of trust in respect of it.¹³

See the Indian Evidence Act, s. 15 (b).

To establish the essential elements of this offence it is necessary to show at least that some of the property entrusted to the accused cannot be accounted for by him.¹⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Place of trial.—Where the accused was entrusted with the carriage of a quantity of coffee from an estate in Mysore to a merchant firm in Mangalore, and a portion of the goods was abstracted and there was no evidence as to when or where such abstraction took place, it was held that the Magistrate at Mangalore had jurisdiction to try the accused on a charge of criminal breach of trust, as there was a failure to deliver the goods at Mangalore in accordance with the terms of the entrustment.¹⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, being entrusted with property, to wit——, as a carrier [or wharfinger, or warehouse-keeper] committed criminal breach of trust in respect of such property; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 407 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

408. Whoever, being a clerk¹ or servant² or employed as a clerk or servant,³ and being in any manner entrusted in such capacity with property,⁴ or with any dominion over property,⁵ commits criminal breach of trust in respect of that property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant.

COMMENT.

Section 381 punishes theft by a clerk or a servant. This section inflicts enhanced punishment on such a person for criminal breach of trust.

Scope.—The offence is committed even where the act of the accused is to cause wrongful loss to his master for a time only.¹⁶

1. 'Clerk'.—In modern usage this word means a writer in an office, public or private, either for keeping accounts or entering minutes. See s. 381, supra.

2. 'Servant'.—Master and servant, a relation whereby a person calls in the assistance of others, where his own skill and labour are not sufficient to carry out his own business or purpose.¹⁷ See s. 381, supra. A person hired by a market gardener

¹² Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 1064.

¹³ Vide s. 406, sup.

¹⁴ Parabhu, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 229, 5 Cr. L. J. 235.

¹⁵ Public Prosecutor v. Podimonu Beary,

(1928) 52 Mad. 61.

¹⁶ Tulsidas Chhaganlal, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 951, 5 Cr. L. J. 5.

¹⁷ Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 641.

to do a day's work, and sent by him to sell vegetables at market and brings back the proceeds is a servant to his employer in respect of such employment.¹⁸ A person engaged by a trading firm on commission to make purchases under instructions from the firm is a servant of the firm.¹⁹ A broker is a middleman who brings together a buyer and a seller. To work as a broker under or for a firm is not necessarily to become their servant.²⁰

3. 'Employed as a clerk or servant'.—If a person acts as a clerk or servant although there is no contract binding on him to work, yet so long as he does the duties he will come under the category of clerk or servant.²¹

If a servant receives money on his employers' account and embezzles it, he is guilty of a felony, though his employers had no right to it and were wrong-doers in receiving it.²²

4. 'Entrusted in such capacity with property'.—The property must have been entrusted to the accused in his capacity of a clerk or a servant.²³ If it is not entrusted in such capacity the clerk or servant will be liable under s. 406 and not under this section. Where a servant fails to render accounts and to deliver up the moneys realised by him in spite of repeated demands, he uses the property entrusted to him in violation of the legal contract made by him with his master and is guilty of an offence under this section.²⁴

If a servant secret moneys which his master has marked and sent by a friend to make a purchase at his shop, with a view to try the honesty of the servant, it is a felonious breach of trust.²⁵

Accused was engaged by the complainant as a tonga driver on a monthly salary of Rs. 15 to drive the tonga on hire within the limits of the Ludhiana Municipality. He was to bring the tonga back each evening and pay over his earnings to the complainant. He did not return one evening and on the following day was pursued and arrested at a place several miles from Ludhiana driving the tonga rapidly. The accused was convicted of an offence under this section by the Magistrate but acquitted on appeal to the Sessions Judge who found that there had been no criminal breach of trust as the accused had not disposed of the tonga. It was held that there was no doubt that the accused intended to deprive his master of the tonga and that this intent or mental act of his was the gist of the offence of criminal breach of trust and he was therefore guilty of an offence under this section.¹

A cheque is property within the meaning of this section.²

5. 'Or with any dominion over property'.—If a clerk or servant who has dominion over the property of his master in some way or other misappropriates or converts to his own use such property he commits criminal breach of trust. For instance, where it is the duty of a Municipal Water-works Inspector to supervise and check the distribution of water from the municipal water-works, he has dominion over the water belonging to his employers. If he deliberately misappropriates such water for his own use or for the use of his tenants for which he pays no tax and gives no information to his employers he is guilty of criminal breach of trust.³ Where a Municipal Water-works Inspector, being the lessor of a house within municipal limits which he had sub-let, had such house connected with a municipal water main and accepted a yearly payment as water-tax from his tenants, but neither informed the municipal board that the connection had been made nor credited to the board the money which he received as water-tax from his tenants, it was held that he was properly convicted under this section.⁴

Commission obtained by servant.—The principle applying to cases where a servant employed to pay a bill for his master, obtains a commission or a reduction

¹⁸ Winnall, (1851) 5 Cox 326. See Pyo Gyi, (1919) 10 L. B. R. 31, 20 Cr. L. J. 513, [1919] AIR (LB) 60.

¹⁹ Pyo Gyi, ibid.

²⁰ Maung Chan Sein, [1941] Ran. 193, 197.

²¹ Foulkes, (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 150. See Karim-ud-din, (1918) 40 All. 565.

²² Beacall, (1824) 1 C. & P. 454.

²³ (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr. L.) 12.

²⁴ Brij Kishore v. Pandit Chandrika Prasad, (1936) 12 Luck. 77; Wazir Singh, (1941) 17 Luck. 353.

²⁵ Headge's Case, (1909) 2 Leach 1033.

¹ Dina, (1925) 6 Lah. 257.

² S. F. Rich, [1930] A. L. J. R. 849, 31 Cr. L. J. 865, [1930] AIR (A) 449.

³ Bimala Charan Roy, (1913) 35 All. 361.

⁴ Ibid.

of a price for his own benefit, has been thus laid down:—"If the account is an open one, that is, an account of which the items have never been checked or settled, and if the transaction amounts to a taxation of the bill and a reduction of the price by the servant, it is obvious that the servant obtains the reduction for his master; that the money in his hands always remains the master's property, and that if he appropriates it, he steals it. But if the master himself has settled the account with the tradesman for a specific sum, and he sends the servant with the money, and the servant, after making the payment, asks the tradesman for a present, then, if the servant takes the present and keeps it, he is not guilty of stealing, because he has no intention to steal: the money is given to him by a person whom he believes to have a right to give it. It may be that, according to the strict equitable doctrines of the Court of Chancery, the servant is bound to account to his master for the money. But, however this may be, his act is a very different matter from a criminal offence, and I do not think he can be convicted of criminal breach of trust merely because, by a mere equitable doctrine of the Court of Chancery, it was obligatory upon him to render an account."⁵

Wilful omission to account.—As to wilful omission to account for the money received on behalf of the master, see Comment on p. 1008.

CASES.

Conversion by servant under special trust.—Where a Court Inspector improperly delegated to a constable the custody, etc., of Government moneys taking from him private security to save himself from loss in case of defalcation, and the constable dishonestly converted the money to his own use, although he afterwards restored it, it was held that his offence fell under this section and not under s. 409, the money having been entrusted to him in his private and not public capacity.⁶ A servant, who received money for a specific purpose, and did not use it for that purpose, and, on being called on to account for the money, falsely said that he used it for that purpose, was held to have committed this offence.⁷

If a servant immediately on receiving a sum for his master enters a smaller sum in his master's books, and ultimately accounts to his master for the smaller sum, he may be considered as embezzling the difference at the time he makes the entry. It will make no difference though he received other sums for his master the same day, and in paying those and the smaller sum to his master together, he might give his master every piece of money or note he received at the time he made the false entry.⁸ The accused was given money by complainant company to purchase specified paddy at specified prices. He was to be paid all expenses incurred in purchasing the paddy and bringing it to the mill, and was to receive a commission of rupee one per hundred baskets. This commission was his only form of legitimate remuneration, and he could not suffer any loss by the transaction. It was held that the accused was a servant of the company in this transaction, that the money was entrusted to him for a specific purpose, and that the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust under this section.⁹

Property must have been entrusted to person's clerk or servant.—A station-master on the East Indian Railway, under an arrangement with the company, received a fixed allowance in respect of the marking, loading and unloading work at his station and used to engage his own men for that purpose. One of such men, engaged as a marksman, was first allowed to keep certain registers, which it was the duty of the station-master to maintain, and next allowed to receive cash payments and make entries in the cash register. Whilst so employed, he received a sum of Rs. 5-10-0 as an overcharge or demurrage in respect of certain goods which passed through his hands, and appropriated the same. To this sum, however, the railway company made no claim. He was also alleged to have received and appropriated to his own ⁵ Per Petheram, C. J., in Imdad Khan, (1885) 8 All. 120, 138. See U Maung Gale, (1926) 4 Ran. 128, where the commission was obtained by the Vice-President of a Municipality.

⁶ Banee Madhub Ghose, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 1. This case has been modified by Ram Dhan Dey, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 77, in which conviction under s. 409 was maintained.

⁷ Watson & Co. v. Golab Khan, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 28, 1 Beng. L. R. (S. N. C.) 21. See also Lalit Mohan Sarkar, (1894) 22 Cal. 313.

⁸ Hall's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 463.

⁹ Pyo Gyi, (1919) 10 L. B. R. 31, 20 Cr. L. J. 518, [1919] AIR (LB) 60.

use two other sums of money under somewhat similar circumstances. In respect of these three sums he was tried and convicted on three counts under this section. It was held that the offence, if any, committed with regard to the sum of Rs. 5-10-0 did not fall within this section at all, and, this being so, the joinder of the three charges in one trial was illegal.¹⁰ Where a railway servant was supplied with a water-proof coat on condition that if it was damaged or lost it would be renewed at the cost of the railway servant, the contract was one of bailment. Delivery of the water-proof coat was an entrustment, and when he attempted to pawn the garment, he was liable to conviction under this section read with s. 511¹¹. Where the accused who was a paid supervisor of a society connected with the co-operative movement, debited Rs. 2 as the pay of a sweeper woman, took the thumb impression of his nephew against the debit entry, certified the thumb impression to be that of the sweeper woman, and appropriated the amount to himself, it was held that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust under this section, as he misappropriated the amount.¹²

Use of property entrusted for benefit of another person.—Where a person entrusted another with some blocks of wood-engraving to print his catalogue, and that other person used the blocks or allowed other persons to use the blocks to print a rival firm's catalogue, it was held that such dealing with the blocks was a violation of an implied contract and caused wrongful gain to the accused, for he obtained a catalogue at a less expense, and wrongful loss to the owner, inasmuch as his property deteriorated in value, and therefore constituted criminal breach of trust.¹³

Appropriation by servant of property ordered to be destroyed.—The accused, a servant, was ordered by his employers to take certain bags of papers and forms belonging to them to their yard and there to burn and destroy them. Instead of doing this, the accused carried the papers away to a certain place. It was held that the act of the accused did not amount to this offence.¹⁴ As no reasons are given in the judgment, this decision is not a sound one in the light of observations made in the following case. Where a currency note was cancelled by tearing off certain parts, but the further process of cutting it into pieces and then destroying it by burning remained, it was held that such a note though cancelled was not res nullius and could be the subject-matter of theft. The Court observed: "A very clear distinction must be drawn between an intention to destroy and to abandon and an actual destruction and abandonment. The very fact that the owner of the property intends to destroy or abandon that property and hands it over to some person to effect those purposes is in our opinion a clear indication that he still maintains his rights as the owner of that property and that those rights subsist until the abandonment or destruction is completed...As long as the destruction or abandonment is not fulfilled and as long as it is still in the hands of the owner to countermand such destruction or abandonment the property is still the property of the owner and the taking it out of his possession is theft, and improper use of it is breach of trust."¹⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was the clerk or servant of the person reposing trust.

(2) That he was in such capacity entrusted with the property in question or with dominion over it.

(3) That he committed criminal breach of trust in respect of it.¹⁶

Actual conversion need not be proved. A mental act of fraudulent appropriation may be inferred from conduct.¹⁷

To support a conviction for abetment of criminal breach of trust by a servant it must be proved that the transaction was a dishonest transaction, that the accused knew that, in respect of such transaction, the servant was acting dishonestly and was committing a breach of trust, and that he abetted the servant in effecting it.¹⁸

¹⁰ Karim-ud-din, (1918) 40 All. 565.

¹¹ Nga Aung Thein, (1933) 35 Cr. L. J. 718, [1934] AIR (R) 41.

¹² Keshavrao, (1934) 36 Bom. L. R. 1120, 36 Cr. L. J. 522.

¹³ Keshab Chandra Boral v. Nityanund Biswas, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 203.

¹⁴ Preo Nath Chowdhry, (1902) 29 Cal. 489.

See Wilkinson, (1898) 2 C. W. N. 216, where the accused was a public servant.

¹⁵ Moti, (1923) 17 S. L. R. 260, 262, 26 Cr.

L. J. 189, [1925] All. (S) 21.

¹⁶ Vide s. 406, sup.

¹⁷ Kesho Ram, (1889) P. R. No. 36 of 1889.

¹⁸ Bal Gobind Shaha, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 309.

Excessive delay in remitting revenue collections to the Treasury is held to be evidence of a dishonest misappropriation on the part of a village officer.¹⁹

Where a property is entrusted to a servant and such servant fails to return or to account or gives an account which is shown to be false and incredible, it is ordinarily a reasonable inference that he has criminally misappropriated the property so entrusted to him and dishonestly converted it to his own use. In such cases the Courts are entitled to draw hostile inferences and presumptions from the action and statements of the servant.²⁰

Where the accused was charged with criminal breach of trust, the case of the prosecution being that he had realised certain sums of money on behalf of his master but did not actually credit the same in the master's books and the defence of the accused was that he had done so, but the accused was convicted as he did not adduce any evidence to prove the payment, it was held that the case was dealt with on an erroneous point of view and that it was the duty of the prosecution to prove that the accused had not in fact made the payments.²¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Jurisdiction.—The Court, within whose jurisdiction the consequence of an accused's act occurs, can inquire into the charge.²² Where the complainant residing at Rangoon entrusted certain negotiable securities to the accused at Rangoon with instructions to proceed up-country and collect the amounts due upon them at various places and to account for the receipts at Rangoon, it was held that the offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of the proceeds of such collection could be tried by the Rangoon Courts.²³ Where it is the duty of the accused to keep accounts of all the moneys received by him at different places and to deposit the moneys so realised at his master's place of business and get accounts entered there, and the accused fails to deposit the money and render accounts at the said place, the Court at that place is fully competent to try the case.²⁴

Joint trial of principal and abettor.—Under s. 239, Criminal Procedure Code, all persons abetting the principal offender in defalcating the different items can be tried at the same trial with the latter.²⁵

Charge.—Where an accused person was charged under this section with having committed criminal breach of trust in respect of a gross sum of money misappropriated by him within the period of one year and the charge specified not only the gross sum taken and the dates between which it was taken, but also set out the items, twenty-two in number, composing such gross sum, giving the dates and the amount alleged to have been misappropriated on each date, it was held that the charge came within s. 222 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that by specifying the items composing the gross sum the charge went beyond what was necessary and was to that extent favourable to the accused.¹ The Patna High Court has held that it is lawful to charge a person under this section with criminal breach of trust in respect of a lump sum of money made up of three different items and to link with that a series of charges of falsification of accounts under s. 477A each of which charges under s. 477A is united with one of the items of embezzlement under the charge under this section, provided the charges of embezzlement under this section are linked together into one sum and that linking together also affects the charges of falsification.² It has subsequently held that the series of charges under s. 477A even though committed in the course of one year are not permitted to be lumped up together as s. 222(2), Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 refers only to the offence of criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of ¹⁹ (1880) 1 Weir 464.

²⁰ Sona Meah, (1924) 2 Ran. 476.

²¹ Balai Chandra Khara v. Bishnu Bejoy Srimani, (1934) 38 C. W. N. 474, 35 Cr. L. J. 715, [1934] AIR (C) 425.

²² O'Brien, (1886) 19 All. 111; Ali Mohamed Kassim, (1931) 9 Ran. 338.

²³ Yacoub Ahmed v. V. M. Abdul Ganny, (1928) 6 Ran. 380; Public Prosecutor v. Podimou Beary, (1928) 52 Mad. 61; Brij Kishore v. Pandit Chandrika Prasad, (1936) 12 Luck. 77;

D'Mello v. Pereira, (1937) 39 Bom. L. R. 620, [1937] Bom. 743.

²⁴ Brij Kishore v. Pandit Chandrika Prasad, (1936) 12 Luck. 77.

²⁵ Rabindra Nath Majumdar v. Patiya Urban Co-operative Bank, [1944] 1 Cal. 109.

¹ Samiruddin Sarkar v. Nibaran Chandra Ghose, (1904) 31 Cal. 928. See Gulzari Lal, (1902) 24 All. 254; Raman Lal, (1926) 49 All 312.

² Michael John, (1930) 10 Pat. 463.

money and not to falsification of accounts. Where the prosecution selected more than three charges under s. 477A although by the device adopted by the Public Prosecutor twenty-eight charges were condensed into four by using sub-headings under each charge, it was held that the charges as framed were illegal.³ The Calcutta High Court has held that a joinder of three charges under s. 409 with three under s. 477A relating to different transactions is not warranted by any of the exceptions provided in the Code, and is illegal. Such a misjoinder is absolutely fatal to the trial.⁴

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, being a servant in the employment of AB, and in such capacity entrusted with [or with dominion over] certain property, to wit——, committed criminal breach of trust with respect to the said property, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 408 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

409. Whoever, being in any manner entrusted with property,¹ or with any dominion over property in his capacity of a public servant² or in the way of his business as a banker,³ merchant,⁴ factor,⁵ broker,⁶ attorney⁷ or agent,⁸ commits criminal breach of trust in respect of that property,⁹ shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section classes together public servants, bankers, merchants, factors, brokers, attorneys and agents. As a rule the duties of such persons are of a highly confidential character, involving great powers of control over the property entrusted to them; and a breach of trust by such persons may often induce serious public and private calamity. "In order to bring a case within s. 409 it is... necessary to show that property was entrusted to a public servant and that he accepted the property entrusted, being in his public capacity required or authorized to accept it. Otherwise in accepting the property he acts as a mere volunteer, and is not entrusted with it in his capacity of a public servant. It is not... sufficient to show merely that a person delivered property to him because he was a public servant. The motive which induced the person to deliver the property cannot alone determine the quality of the trust created. The mistaken belief of the person delivering the property or of the person accepting it, or of both, that the latter was authorized to receive it in his public capacity cannot alter the facts and supply the deficient and requisite authority so as to convert simple breach of trust into breach of trust by a public servant".⁵ This section cannot be construed as involving that any head of an office, who is negligent in seeing that the rules about remitting money to the Government treasury are observed, is ipso facto guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust; but something more than that is required to bring home the dishonest intention, which is one of the essentials of the offence. There should be some indication which justifies a finding that the accused definitely had the intention of wrongfully keeping Government out of the moneys; and ordinarily that would be shown by some overt act, which went beyond mere retention of money that should have been remitted to the treasury.²⁰ This was followed in a later case, where, on similar facts, the Court remarked : "There can be no doubt that the accused ought to have kept all

³ Ramautar Lall, (1941) 21 Pat. 113.

⁴ Raman Behari Das, (1913) 41 Cal. 722.

⁵ Per Plowden, J., in Bhag Singh, (1876) P. R. No. 24 of 1876, at p. 46; Banee Madhub Ghose, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 1.

⁶ Lala Raoji, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 625, 628, 630, 29 Cr. L. J. 922, [1928] AIR B, 205. See Sukhdeo Narain, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 812, [1929] AIR (P) 506.

the Government moneys in the box and in departing from this obviously desirable practice he was guilty of some dereliction of duty. It appears to us, however, to be getting too far to infer from the fact that the money was not kept in the box that the accused had a dishonest intention of converting it to his own use."⁷

Scope.—This section does not include an intention to misappropriate at a future date.⁸

1. 'Entrusted with property'.—The relationship between a banker and a customer in respect of money received from the latter on a current account is that of debtor and creditor, the banker being free to use the money, which becomes his own, in any way he pleases, subject to a liability to repay on demand. The money is not entrusted with him within the meaning of s. 405 and this section. Consequently, no prosecution under this section lies against a banker for his failure to pay the money on demand on the ground of want of cash.⁹

Moneys paid to a post-master for money-orders are public moneys; as soon as they are paid they cease to be the property of the remitters, and a misappropriation of such moneys will fall under this section.¹⁰

2. 'In his capacity of a public servant'.—It is not necessary that the property should be that of Government, but that it should have been entrusted to a public servant in that capacity.¹¹ The section does not limit the mode in which a trust arises, whether by specific order or by reason of its being part of the proper duty of a public functionary.¹² If a public servant in his capacity as such receives money on a certain date and does not include it in his cash balance entered in the register which he is required to maintain, there is very strong prima facie evidence of the money having been misappropriated on that date, and he is guilty of embezzlement if he does not hand over to his successor the money in his hands due to Government. Where, under the rules, a public servant was required to lodge in the treasury any Government money in excess of that shown due to Government by the registers in his hands and the public servant removed the excess from the office cash-box, it was held that he was guilty of misappropriation and it made no difference that he removed it to a godown belonging to Government, he being not entitled to retain it pending scrutiny of the accounts.¹³

Without the slightest evidence of any money having been received by a public servant he can be convicted of criminal breach of trust by a public servant under this section and of conspiracy under s. 120B when property under his control disappears and his connection with the conspiracy is brought home to him.¹⁴

As to the meaning of 'public servant' see s. 21, supra. A naib nazir is a public servant within the meaning of this section.¹⁵

3. 'Banker' is one who receives money to be drawn out again as the owner has occasion for it, the customer being lender, and the banker borrower, with the super-added obligation of honouring the customer's cheques up to the amount of the money received and still in the banker's hands.¹⁶ The word 'banker' includes a cashier or shroff.¹⁷ The relation between a banker and customer, who pays money into the bank, is the ordinary relation of debtor and creditor, with a superadded obligation arising out of the custom of bankers to honour the customer's drafts; and that relation is not altered by an agreement by the banker to allow the interest on the balances in the bank.¹⁸

4. 'Merchant'.—A merchant is one who traffics to remote countries; also, any one dealing in the purchase and sale of goods.¹⁹ But every one that buys and sells is not at this day under the denomination of a merchant, only those who traffic, in the way of commerce, by importation or exportation, or carry on business by way of emption, vendition, barter, permutation or exchange, and which make it their living

⁷ Per Broomfield, J., in Vishnu Balwant Gharbude, (1936) Crim. Revn. No. 463 of 1929, decided by Mirza and Broomfield, JJ., on January 22, 1936 (Unrep. Bom.).

⁸ Ahmad Din, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 165.

⁹ S. Takashi, (1941) 45 C. W. N. 1071, 43 Cr. L. J. 451, [1941] ALN (C) 718.

¹⁰ Juala Prasad, (1884) 7 All. 174, F.B.

¹¹ Ram Soonder Foddar, (1878) 2 C. L. & 515.

¹² Ram Dhun Day, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 77.

¹³ Daya Shankar, (1926) 1 Luck. 345.

¹⁴ F. S. Hay, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 469, 26 Cr. L. J. 1217, [1925] AIR (O) 469.

¹⁵ Mahmood Hoossein, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 298.

¹⁶ Wharton, 14 Edn., p. 109.

¹⁷ Hira Lal, (1907) P. R. No. 19 of 1908, 8 Cr. L. J. 492.

¹⁸ Foley v. Hill, (1848) 2 H. L. C. 28.

¹⁹ Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 649.

to buy and sell, by a continued assiduity, or frequent negotiation, in the mystery of merchandising are esteemed merchants. Bankers, and such as deal by exchange, are properly called merchants.²⁰

5. 'Factor' is a substitute in mercantile affairs; an agent employed to sell goods or merchandise consigned or delivered to him by or for his principal, for a compensation commonly called factorage or commission.²¹

6. 'Broker' is an agent employed to make bargains and contracts between other persons in matters of trade, commerce and navigation, by explaining the intentions of both parties, and negotiating in such a manner as to put those who employ him in a condition to treat together personally. More commonly he is an agent employed by one party only to make a binding contract with another.²²

A factor is "entrusted with the possession as well as the disposal of property" a broker is "employed to contract about it, without being put in possession".²³

7. 'Attorney' is one who is appointed by another to do something in his absence, and who has authority to act in the place and turn of him by whom he is delegated.²⁴

8. 'Agent'.—An agent is a person employed to do any act for another or to represent another, in dealings with a third person.²⁵ The person charged with an offence must have been entrusted with the property in his capacity of an agent, but the section does not require that he should be still an agent at the time of committing the breach of trust.¹ A person who is the manager of a firm cannot be held criminally liable for breach of trust where there is no personal entrustment of goods to him but to the firm in respect of which the offence was alleged to have been committed.² Where the accused was authorised to lend his master's money and he lent it to himself without his master's permission, it was held that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.³ Where a lambardar converted to his own use the money paid to him by landowners in discharge of their liability to Government, it was held that he was guilty under this section.⁴ Where a commission agent was employed to sell cotton and he acted according to the custom of the market which made him liable for the price of the cotton on demand being made, it was held that he could not be prosecuted under this section for the return of the cotton.⁵

9. 'Commits criminal breach of trust in respect of that property'.—Dishonesty is a pre-requisite for a prosecution under this section.⁶

CASES.

Guilty.—Public servant.—Where a constable dishonestly misappropriated to his own use the pay of his station police entrusted to him;⁷ where a police-officer misappropriated the property seized by him, under s. 550 of the Criminal Procedure Code, during an investigation;⁸ and where the head clerk of an office entrusted the management of stamps, with the knowledge and sanction of his superiors, to one of his assistants, and the latter stole stamps,⁹ it was held that this offence had been committed. Where the accused, a cattle pound-keeper, having levied Rs. 5 for five buffaloes in his charge, gave a receipt for Rs. 4 only to the owner of the cattle, and entered only Rs. 4 in his accounts, but subsequently altered the accounts and entered the proper amount, namely, Rs. 5, it was held that the conviction should be under this section and s. 511.¹⁰

²⁰ Jacob's Law Dictionary, (1736) as enlarged by Tomlins, Vol. II, Edn. of 1809.

²¹ Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 400.

²² Wharton 14th Edn., p. 148.

²³ Smith's Mercantile Law, 13th Edn., p. 195, quoted in Dixon Henley, (1876) 4 Ch. D. 133, 137, and in Stevens v. Buler, (1883) 25 Ch. D. 31, 34.

²⁴ Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 95.

²⁵ The Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 182.

¹ Chaturbhuj Narain Choudhury, (1955) 15 Pat. 108.

² S. C. Guha, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 149.

³ Ramanathan Chettiar v. Duraiswamy Ayyangar, [1933] M. W. N. 256.

⁴ Sultan Mahmud, [1939] Lah. 119; Ram Prasad Saikia, (1936) 40 C. W. N. 1154.

⁵ Gangaram, [1943] N. L. J. 128, (1942) 44 Cr. L. J. 423, [1943] AIR (N) 168.

⁶ Krishna Dayal, (1945) 47 Cr. L. J. 1041, [1946] A. I. R. (A) 227.

⁷ Subdar Meeah, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 44.

⁸ Local Government v. Abas Ali, (1935) 31 N. L. R. 312, 36 Cr. L. J. 867.

⁹ Ram Dhun Dey, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 77.

¹⁰ Bhula, (1893) Cr. R. No. 2 of 1893, Unrep. Cr. C. 632.

A traveller, with considerable property, partly in cash and partly in gold coins, put up at an inn, and believing himself to be dying, sent for a police officer for protection of his property. The accused went to the inn, and received charge of the property. It was held that the accused was entrusted with the property in his capacity of a public servant as he was empowered by s. 95, Criminal Procedure Code, to receive the property to prevent the commission of an offence, i.e. theft by other persons, taking advantage of the illness or death of the traveller.¹¹ A clerk in a record room made over a document forming part of a record in his custody to a person who was entitled to the document, but would otherwise have had to present an application on stamped paper in order to secure its return in a legal manner. It was held that the clerk was, under the above circumstances, rightly convicted under this section.¹² The accused, a petty officer in the Salt Department, was empowered to sell salt at reduced prices to fish-curers. He was directed to enter the sales to such persons by departmental orders in the Government books. He really bought some salt for himself at the reduced rates entering the sales in the Government books as if made to fish-curers and thereby appropriated to himself the difference between the reduced price and the proper price. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section and not under s. 177, as he was not 'legally bound' to obey the departmental rule.¹³ A post-master whose duty it was to pay over to the holders of certain cash certificates the money due thereon at a certain rate, in fact paid the holders at a lower rate and appropriated the difference to himself. It was held that by so doing he had committed an offence under this section.¹⁴ Where a public servant was entrusted with money to purchase some materials for building a house and he by some private arrangement obtained the same free of cost, it was held that a trust having been reposed in the accused as a public servant it was his duty to account truly for all the moneys received and that as he had obtained the materials free of cost, it was his duty to have refunded the unspent balance to Government and as he did not do so he was guilty of criminal breach of trust.¹⁵ C, a sub-postmaster, and D, a parcels clerk, were charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of three sums of money received for value-payable articles. The sums of money were paid to the post office and were received by D in the usual course and entered by him in the register of value-payable articles received. C had made some entries in the register of value-payable articles received and had also initialled the balance of articles undisposed of. Under the rules the accused were bound to send money received for value-payable articles to the sender on the date of receipt or at the latest on the next day. It was not proved that C was ever entrusted with the money received by D or that he had any knowledge of the receipt of money in the post office. It was held that D was guilty of criminal breach of trust; and that the mere fact that C had made some of the entries in the register and had initialled the daily balance of articles undisposed of, or the fact of his failure to check the register with the articles actually in hand, did not take the place of proof that he knew the moneys to have been paid or that they were at any time entrusted to his care, and that, therefore, he was not guilty.¹⁶

Where a public servant was required to lodge in the treasury any Government money in excess of that shown due to Government by the registers in his hands and the public servant removed the excess from the office cash box, it was held that he was guilty of misappropriation and it made no difference that he removed it to a godown belonging to Government, he being not entitled to retain it pending scrutiny of the accounts.¹⁷

The accused, a sub-postmaster, received a value-payable letter to be delivered to a person on payment of the value-payable amount. He handed over the letter to that person without getting payment on or before October 20, 1925, and he altered his accounts so as to make it appear that he only handed over the letter on October 24, 1925. It was held that the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts.¹⁸

¹¹ Bhag Singh, (1876) P. R. No. 24 of 1876.

¹² Ganga Prasad, (1904) 27 All. 260.

¹³ The Government Pleader v. Balayya, (1894)

1 Weir 467.

¹⁴ Sita Ram, (1919) 42 All. 204.

¹⁵ Sayid Mohiuddin, (1925) 4 Pat. 488.

¹⁶ Chandra Prasad, (1926) 5 Pat. 578.

¹⁷ Daya Shankar, (1926) 1 Luck. 345.

¹⁸ Kandasami Aiyar, (1926) 52 M. L. J. 703, 25 L. W. 656, 28 Cr. L. J. 552, [1927] AIR (M) 626.

Director.—Where the directors of a bank paid the dividends out of the deposits, when there were no profits, thereby causing gain to persons to which they were not entitled; and wrongful loss to depositors, they were held guilty under this section.¹⁹ The mere passing of an incorrect balance-sheet was held not to amount to an offence under this section.²⁰ The accused, the managing director of a bank, wishing the bank to make a better show than the real facts of its working would warrant, in order to maintain the confidence of the share-holders and the public and so to make possible a project for increasing largely the bank's capital, on December 17, 1912, got his son to present a pro-note for Rs. 3,000 as a pro tanto addition to the profits for 1912, by reducing on paper to that extent his remuneration account from Rs. 4,050, which he had actually drawn, to Rs. 1,050, and thus deceiving the shareholders as to the real profits, induced them to declare a dividend of six per cent. instead of some three per cent. which would otherwise have been the most possible. Later, in January, 1913, i.e. after the close of the financial year, the whole thing was readjusted and matters returned to the status quo ante December 17, 1912. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section inasmuch as by his act he caused wrongful immediate gain to himself and the other shareholders to the extent of the enhanced dividend and so acted dishonestly.²¹ A German Director in India of a German company on the eve of the declaration of war between Britain and Germany realised some cash by sale of his stock and handed over the money to his wife. In a prosecution for criminal breach of trust, it was found that the acts of the accused were done merely to screen the money from the Government of India or Custodian of Enemy Property and that he had no intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain to any other person or persons. It was held that there being no evidence that he intended to profit himself at the expense of his firm of which he was a partner or that he intended to defraud creditors of the firm, he was not guilty of an offence under this section.²²

Trustee.—Where a trustee or a manager of a temple misappropriated temple jewels, he was held guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust under ss. 405, 408, and this section, and not of offences under ss. 380, 381 and 457. The trustee or manager of the temple appointed by a committee under Act XX of 1863 is not in the position of a clerk or servant removable at the pleasure of the committee, and his possession of the temple and its properties is not possession of the committee. The property of the temple is not vested in the committee, nor do they represent it. The deity is the owner of the property and the trustee is the agent of the deity subject to the committee's control. Therefore, if such trustee or manager misappropriates temple jewels, he is not guilty of theft but of the offence of criminal breach of trust by an agent punishable under this section.²³

Not guilty.—Public servant.—A certain consignment of rice lay unclaimed at the docks and was advertised for sale by auction by the Port Commissioners. But the rice was found to be in a rotten condition and was ordered to be destroyed by the Health Department of the Corporation of Calcutta. It was entrusted for the purpose of destruction to the accused, who were Inspectors in that Department; but they sold the same to a third party and retained the proceeds of such sale. It was held that they had committed no offence under the Code, though they might have been guilty of infringing a departmental rule.²⁴ It was so held on the ground that the rice was not 'property' and there was no one in whom the right of property was vested. Where the accused in his capacity of Revenue Patel received from the Government treasury small sums of money on account of certain temple allowances, and did not at once pay over the same to the persons entitled to receive them as he was bound to do, but it appeared that such persons were willing to trust him, and had actually passed receipts which the accused forwarded to the revenue authorities, it was held that the accused fulfilled the trust reposed in him by Government and that his mere retention of money for a time, in the absence of any evidence of dishonesty, did not amount to ¹⁹ Moss, (1893) 16 All. 88.

²⁰ Giles Seddon v. Loane, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 624.

²¹ Daulat Rai, (1915) P. R. No. 28 of 1915, 16 Cr. L. J. 473, [1915] AIR (L) 471. See Mangal Sen, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 954, [1930]

AIR (L) 57.

²² Baron Von Dincklage, [1941] 2 M. L. J. 748, [1942] M. W. N. 41, (1941) 54 L. W. 521, 43 Cr. L. J. 395, [1942] AIR (M) 182.

²³ Muthusami Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 432.

²⁴ Wilkinson, (1898) 2 C. W. N. 216.

criminal breach of trust.²⁵ Where a village shroff, whose duty it was to assist in collecting public revenue, received grains from ryots and gave receipts as if for money received by virtue of a private arrangement, it was held that he was not guilty of this offence as he was not authorized to receive the public revenue in kind and the party who delivered the grain did not thereby discharge himself from liability for the revenue.¹ The accused, a kurnam of a Government village, received moneys from certain ryots of the village as revenue due on unassessed lands, part of which was cultivated by the ryots without leave, and as cost of boundary stones required for the said lands and misappropriated the moneys so received to his own use. It was held that the accused was not guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust by a public servant under this section or of cheating under s. 417.² The accused, the nazir of the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate, was convicted of having criminally misappropriated Rs. 52-6-3 out of the Government money in his charge. It appeared that he intended to restore this money to Government. It was also found that the accounts in the books were kept all right and there appeared to have been a practice of long standing in the office among officials employed to receive advances of moneys out of the cash with the accused according to their requirements, generally out of mutual regard, and then to repay them when the salaries were drawn from the treasury and that the accused had made advances when deficiency was found in the cash. The accused made good the deficiency when he was ordered by the Cantonment Magistrate to refund it. It was held that the accused was not guilty of this offence, as there was no dishonest misappropriation or conversion or use within the meaning of s. 405.³ The mere fact that a Village Munsiff did not pay into the treasury the very next day an amount received by him as an instalment of an agricultural loan was held insufficient, by itself, to convict him for criminal breach of trust.⁴ Where money drawn by the principal of a school for payment of a bill due to a particular firm had been under his order appropriated towards the payment of another bill due to the same firm, it was held that this was an irregularity but it did not amount to an offence under this section if no money was actually embezzled by anybody.⁵

Trustee.—Where an assistant station-master whose duty it was to issue tickets to the passengers and to charge fares as fixed by the railway made an overcharge over some of the tickets and did not credit the excess so realized to the railway, it was held that he was not guilty of criminal breach of trust as he was not a trustee within the meaning of s. 405.⁶ The accused, who was a Vice-President of a Municipality, had received a certain commission from a firm on the purchase of certain goods made by the Municipality. The commission was paid to him personally. It was held that there being no trust, the accused was not guilty of an offence under this section.⁷ Where the president of a co-operative society, who was authorised to draw a certain sum of money from a bank, drew the sum, but instead of crediting the amount to the society retained it for his own use with the permission of his fellow members of the managing committee, as he was in need of funds for some purpose, it was held that the offence, if any, committed by the president was of a purely technical nature and he was entitled to the benefit of the doubt as he probably did not think that he was doing any dishonest act.⁸

Intention to misappropriate at future date.—Where the accused, who was the treasurer of a co-operative credit society, satisfied a decree against him by making a deposit entry in favour of his creditor-decree-holders, it was held that the fraudulent action of the accused did not earmark the money in his hands as the source for payment in respect of that liability: the fraudulent entry was intended to make it possible at a later date to misappropriate the moneys of the society; but nothing was then misappropriated and consequently the accused was not guilty under this section.⁹

²⁵ Ganpat Tapidas, (1885) 10 Bom. 256; Lachman Singh, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 811; Muthuswami Udayan, [1911] -M. W. N. 667, (1941), 54 L. W. 235, 43 Cr. L. J. 445, [1941] AIR (M) 761.

¹ (1869) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 32, 1 Weir 465.

² Rengaswami Ayyangar, (1888) 1 Weir 466.

³ Imam Din, (1902) 3 P. L. R. 157.

⁴ Munusami Nainar, (1930) 58 M. L. J. 649, 31 L. W. 887, [1930], M. W. N. 530, 31 Cr. L.

J. 1198, [1930] AIR (M) 507.

⁵ Chandrika Prasad, (1930) 7 O. W. N. 564, 31 Cr. L. J. 1081, [1930] AIR (O) 324.

⁶ Kudrat Nath, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 879, [1923] AIR (L) 295.

⁷ U Maung Gale, (1926) 4 Ran. 128.

⁸ Azad Khan, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 274, [1930] AIR (L) 1045.

⁹ Ahmad Din, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 165.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was either a public servant or a banker, or a merchant, or a factor, or a broker, or an attorney, or an agent.

(2) That he was in such capacity entrusted with the property in question or with dominion over it.¹⁰

(3) That he committed criminal breach of trust in respect of it.¹¹

Distinct proof of criminal misappropriation is necessary.¹² But it does not lie on the prosecution to prove the actual mode of misappropriation. Where it is proved by the prosecution that the money was not returned by accused which he was bound to do, it lies on the accused to prove his defence.¹³

All the necessary elements constituting the offence must be strictly proved, and when the charge is that something was substituted in place of another, there must be clear evidence that the thing alleged to have been extracted was actually there when it came under the dominion of the accused.¹⁴

In a charge under this section, it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove in what manner the money alleged to have been misappropriated has actually been spent by the accused. If it is shown that money entrusted to the accused or received by him for a particular purpose, was not used for such purpose, neither was the same returned by him in accordance with his duty, it lay on the accused to prove his defence if he has set up any. Mere retention of money would not necessarily raise a presumption of dishonest intention: but it is a step in the direction. The fact that money entrusted to be used for a particular purpose, was not used for such purpose, that there was retention for a sufficiently long time, would justify the inference that the accused did not intend to pay.¹⁵ The prosecution need not prove the actual mode of misappropriation, but must prove dishonest misappropriation. It may do so either directly (e.g. by showing that the money was paid into the account of the accused) or indirectly by circumstantial evidence. In the latter case the fact that the accused has failed to show what has happened to the money coupled with other circumstances may justify an inference that he misappropriated it. But that does not mean that the burden of proof has shifted from the prosecution to the defence.¹⁶ A person accused of criminal misappropriation has not to account for the moneys, and when he has stated how the money was spent it is for the prosecution to disprove the alleged expenditure. It is wrong to hold that unless a person accused of criminal breach of trust himself proves the truth of every item of expenditure alleged by him, he cannot rely on such payments as a defence. On the other hand, if the statement of account is otherwise reasonable or probable the accused is entitled to the benefit of the statement of expenditure submitted by him unless and until that statement is proved to be false. The practice of running down the evidence of witnesses is much to be deprecated. It is unfair to the witnesses and it might often result in serious miscarriage of justice. A witness should not be rejected as a false witness merely because he has not produced his account unless it is clear that he keeps an account and has not produced it when required and when it was possible for him to produce it. Without any opportunity being given for production of the account and without even a question being asked whether an account is kept or not, it would be hardly right to characterise a witness as a liar because he has not produced his account.¹⁷ When an accused person takes up a substantive defence and that defence receives considerable support from the prosecution evidence itself, it is incumbent upon the prosecution to establish, by definite and clear evidence, that the case for the defence is untrue.¹⁸ Where the dispute between the complainant and the accused is one in the nature of accounting, the proper remedy of the complainant is to file a civil suit for recovery of the amounts due from the accused and not to launch a prosecution under this section.¹⁹

¹⁰ Rangamannar Chetty, [1935] M. W. N. 649.

¹¹ Id., s. 406, sup.

¹² Brinbadhur Putnaik, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 21

¹³ Kadir Bakhsh, (1910) 8 A. L. J. R. 88, 11. Cr. L. J. 699.

¹⁴ I. G. Singleton, (1924) 29 C. W. N. 260, 26 Cr. L. J. 662, [1925] AIR (C) 501.

¹⁵ Akshoy Chandra Bose, (1934) 38 C. W. N. 467, 59 C. L. J. 306, 35 Cr. L. J. 1279, [1934]

AIR (C) 532.

¹⁶ Robert Stuart Wauchope, (1923) 61 Cal. 168, 185.

¹⁷ Syed Karim Sahib, [1936] M. W. N. 1019, 1022.

¹⁸ Hem Chandra Halder, (1934) 38 C. W. N. 582, 35 Cr. L. J. 912, [1934] A. R. (C) 407.

¹⁹ Munnoo Lal, [1935] O. W. N. 126, 36 Cr. L. J. 477.

It is not open to an accused charged with criminal breach of trust to put up a defence that the prosecution have failed to prove the embezzlement of a particular sum with which he is charged though they might have succeeded in proving embezzlement of other sums. Such a defence cannot hold good for the simple reason that if accepted it would merely involve a conviction whatever hypothesis was adopted and no prejudice can be urged by the accused for lack of charge because it was his own defence.²⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

The Magistrate should hold a preliminary inquiry before issuing a warrant of arrest. He should not issue it merely on a sworn statement of the complainant, without asking him how he proposed to prove his allegations.²¹

Place of trial.—The complainant who resided at Lyallpur appointed the accused his agent for sale of certain commodities at Najibabad and sent him goods in pursuance of that contract. The accused sold the goods and misappropriated the sale proceeds. It was held that the Court at Najibabad was only competent to entertain the complaint and not that at Lyallpur.²² Where goods were pledged in British India and the pledgee sub-pledged them for a higher amount in a place outside British India, the offence of criminal breach of trust constituted by the sub-pledge cannot be tried in British Indian Courts in the absence of compliance with the requirement of s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code, regarding certificate of the Political Agent or sanction of the Provincial Government.²³

Public servant.—Sanction necessary.—Under s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code, when any public servant who is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Provincial Government or some higher authority, is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council where the public servant is employed in the affairs of the Government of India or of the Governor of a Province where the public servant is employed in the affairs of a Province. Where a Sub-Postmaster was prosecuted under this section in respect of embezzlement of funds entrusted to him by various depositors for credit into their Savings Bank accounts, it was held that no sanction under s. 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935, was necessary for his prosecution because in committing such an offence he could not be said to be acting in the discharge of his official duty, but intended to act in direct opposition of his duty.²⁴ Similarly, where the accused had misappropriated certain medicines entrusted to him in his official capacity as a Sub-Assistant Surgeon, it was held by the Federal Court of India that the consent of the Governor under s. 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935, was not necessary.²⁵ An officiating Kulkarni (village official) collected money on account of land revenue and instead of sending it to the Government treasury used it for his own purposes. He was prosecuted for an offence under this section, without obtaining sanction of the Local Government under s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was held that the offence was not committed by the accused while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty and therefore no sanction of the Local Government under s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code was necessary.¹

Charge.—See s. 408.

In a charge of criminal misappropriation there were three counts. Each count specified the sum of money alleged to have been misappropriated by the accused on a particular day; but in two out of the three cases the total sum consisted of three separate items in each instance. It was held that a charge so framed did not offend against s. 234, Criminal Procedure Code.² An accused person was tried for criminal breach of trust in respect of three distinct sums, and one charge was drawn up specifying all the three sums and the persons from whom he collected them. He was not charged

²⁰ Gurbaksh Singh, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 1157, 37 Cr. L. J. 581, [1936] AIR (L) 907.

²¹ Htye Yar, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 91, [1937] AIR (R) 474.

²² Durga Parshad v. Banwari Lal, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 453; Gobindram Jashammal, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 1032, [1928] AIR (S) 166.

²³ Verghese, (1947) 60 L. W. 233.

²⁴ Manzur Ali, [1939] Lah. 227; Sannaya, [1941] Mad. 258.

²⁵ Hori Ram Singh, [1939] F. C. R. 159.

¹ Gurushiddaya Shantiviraya, (1938) 40 Bom. L. R. 1286, [1939] Bom. 199.

² Ishtiaq Ahmad, (1904) 27 All. 69.

with three offences, but with one offence under this section, and was convicted of one offence and sentenced to one term of imprisonment. It was held that the charge as framed was not contrary to law, it being in accordance with ss. 222, sub-s. (2), and 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.³ Where the accused was charged with three offences under s. 477A and three offences under this section, and tried and convicted, it was held that the trial was void by reason of misjoinder of charges.⁴ Where the amount composed of four different sums payable in respect of four different holdings, was realized at the same time and for which one receipt was originally granted by the accused for the whole amount, it was held that it could not be said that there were four different items in respect of which he was charged and one single charge regarding the whole amount did not contravene the provisions of s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The accused was charged under s. 222 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure for misappropriating a certain amount between April 1923 and March 31, 1924. In ascertaining the amount misappropriated, the Court had to go into details and found the different dates on which the different amounts came into his hands. The Court found that on some dates certain sums were realized by him and that between some other dates certain other sums were realized by him. The method adopted by the Court was to facilitate the calculation of the total amount for the misappropriation of which he was charged. The accused did not realize and misappropriate different sums during different periods. It was held that the charge as framed was right, and did not contravene the provisions of s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁵

Punishment.—Criminal breach of trust by a person in charge of public moneys calls for a severe sentence.⁶

Of the Receiving of Stolen Property.

410. Property, the possession whereof has been transferred by theft, or by extortion, or by robbery, and property ^{Stolen property.} which has been criminally misappropriated or in respect of which criminal breach of trust has been committed, is designated as “stolen property”, whether the transfer has been made, or the misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed, within or without British India.¹ But, if such property subsequently comes into the possession of a person legally entitled to the possession thereof,² it then ceases to be stolen property.

411. Whoever dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property,¹ knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 410 explains what comes under the words ‘stolen property’. Things which have been stolen, extorted, or robbed, or which have been obtained by criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust come under the extended signification given to these words. As to the definition of ‘possession’ see s. 27; of ‘theft’, s. 378; of ‘extortion’, s. 388; of ‘robbery’, s. 390; of ‘criminal misappropriation’, s. 403; of ‘criminal breach of trust’, s. 405. Under s. 410 it is immaterial whether the transfer is made or misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed within or without British India.

³ Sat Narain Tewari, (1905) 32 Cal. 1085. See Kashinath Bagaji Sali, (1910) 12 Bom. L. R. 226, 11 Cr. L. J. 337.

⁴ Raman Behari Das, (1913) 41 Cal. 722; Manant, (1915) 27 Bom. L. R. 1343, 49 Bom. 892; Nagendra Nath Sen Gupta, (1922) 36 C. W.

N. 542, 55 C. L. J. 111, 33 Cr. L. J. 265; Bhu Prakash, (1940) A. L. J. R. 796.

⁵ Harendra Kumar Ghosh, (1926) 45 C. L. J. 207, 28 Cr. L. J. 489, [1927] AIR (C) 409.

⁶ Parma Nand, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 1.

Section 411 clearly shows that besides dishonest possession of stolen property there must also be the knowledge of or at least reasonable belief in the property being stolen property; but when some property is proved to be stolen property and the person who is found in possession of it cannot account for its possession especially when he is found in possession of it soon after the theft of the property, it is only reasonable to conclude not only that he was in possession knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen property but also that his possession of it was dishonest.⁷

English law.—The description of 'stolen property' in s. 410 is not so wide as that of the similar provision of the Larceny Act,⁸ which enacts that "Whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, extorting, obtaining, embezzling, or otherwise disposing whereof shall amount to a felony, either at common law or by virtue of this Act, knowing the same to have been feloniously stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or disposed of, shall be guilty of felony, etc." This provision includes property obtained by cheating, whereas the definition of stolen property as given in s. 410 does not include it.

1. 'Whether the transfer has been made, or the misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed, within or without British India'.—These words were inserted by Act VIII of 1882, s. 9. They have enlarged the scope of the term 'stolen property', and the act by which property has been stolen no longer need be an act punishable under the Code. The amendment was made in consequence of Moorga Chetty's case,⁹ which decided that bills of exchange stolen in Mauritius were not 'stolen property' so as to make the receiver a Bombay liable under s. 411.

The receipt or retention must take place within British India, unless the person receiving or retaining out of British India is a British subject.¹⁰ A subject of a Native State, who is guilty of retaining stolen property within that State, is not liable to be punished under the Code.¹¹

Where there is a dishonest retention in British India of property stolen elsewhere, it is no defence by the accused, being a foreign subject, that the property was stolen by himself, he not being liable to be tried, convicted, or punished by the British Court for the theft.¹²

Where a Nepalese subject, having stolen cattle in Nepal, brought them into British territory, it was held that he could not be convicted of theft but that he might be convicted of an offence under s. 410.¹³ Similarly, where the accused, a subject of a Native State, committed a theft at Rajkot (Indian State) and brought the property to Thana (British territory), it was held that he could not be tried for theft, but he might be tried under s. 411 for retaining stolen property.¹⁴ Two persons, B, who was not a British subject, and R, who was, were committed to the Court of Session at Jhansi, it being alleged against them that they had committed a robbery in an adjoining Native State and had brought the stolen property into British territory. It was held that though neither could be tried by the Sessions Judge of Jhansi for the robbery, B because he was not a British subject, and R because the certificate required by s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was wanting, yet both might be tried for the offence of retaining stolen property under s. 411.¹⁵

But if theft has been committed in British India and the accused is found in possession of stolen property outside British India, he cannot be tried for an offence under s. 411 by a British Court having jurisdiction over the place where the theft took place because the offence of receiving or retaining stolen property was committed at a place beyond 'British territory'.¹⁶

2. 'If such property subsequently comes into the possession of a person legally entitled to the possession thereof'.—If the owner of stolen property some-

⁷ Shakur, [1935] O. W. N. 911, 914, 38 Cr. L. J. 1206, 1208.

⁸ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 96, s. 91.

⁹ (1881) 5 Bom. 338, F.B.; Adivigadu, (1876) 1 Mad. 171, is also now obsolete.

¹⁰ See s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code.

¹¹ Gunna, (1926) 48 All. 687.

¹² Jafar Ali, (1898) P. R. No. 30 of 1894.

¹³ Sunker Gope, (1883) 6 Cal. 307. Held similarly where the accused, a foreign subject, stole a horse in the Bhawalpur State and brought it in British India: Mul Chand, [1943] Lah. 62.

¹⁴ Abdul Latib valad Abdul Rahiman, (1885) 10 Bom. 186; Chhataria Pyaralal, (1930) Crim. Ref. No. 14 of 1930, decided by Mirza and Broomfield, JJ., on February 3, 1930 (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁵ Baldewa, (1906) 28 All. 372.

¹⁶ Moheshwari Prasad Singh, (1914) 18 C. W. N. 1178, 15 Cr. L. J. 537, [1914] AIR (C) 725.

how resumes possession of the stolen property before its receipt by the person accused of receiving it, it ceases to be stolen property, and the accused cannot be convicted of receiving it knowing it to have been stolen.²¹ If stolen goods are restored to the possession of the owner, and he returns them to the thief for the purpose of enabling him to sell them to a third person, they are no longer stolen goods, and that third person cannot be convicted of feloniously receiving stolen goods, although he received them, believing them to be stolen. Where, therefore, stolen goods were found by the owner in the pockets of a thief, and the owner sent for a policeman who took the goods, but subsequently returned them to the thief, who was sent by the owner to sell them where he had sold others, and the thief then went to the shop of the accused and sold goods, and gave the money to the owner, it was held that the accused was not guilty of feloniously receiving stolen goods, inasmuch as they were delivered to him under the authority of the owner by a person to whom the owner had bailed them for that purpose.²²

If a person buys in good faith property which has been stolen he does not acquire any ownership therein.²³

Stolen property coming into possession of owner before its receipt by person accused of receiving it.—Four thieves stole goods from the custody of a railway company, and sent them in a parcel by the same company's line addressed to the accused. During the transit the theft was discovered; and, on the arrival of the parcel at the station for its delivery, a policeman in the employ of the company opened it, and then returned it to the porter whose duty it was to deliver it, with instructions to keep it till further orders. On the following day the policeman directed the porter to take the parcel to its address, when it was received by the accused, who was afterwards convicted of receiving the goods knowing them to be stolen. It was held that the goods had got back into the possession of the owner, so as to be no longer stolen goods, and that the conviction was wrong.²⁴ A parcel was handed to the prosecutors, a firm of carriers, for conveyance to the consignees. While in the prosecutors' depot, a servant of the prosecutors removed the parcel to a different part of the premises, and placed upon it a label addressed to the accused. The superintendent of the prosecutors' business, on receipt of information as to this, and after inspection of the parcel, directed it to be replaced in the place to which the thief had removed it, and to be sent in a van, accompanied by two detectives, to the address shown on the label. The parcel was received by the accused under circumstances which clearly showed knowledge on their part that it had been stolen. It was held that as the owners had resumed possession of the stolen property before its receipt by the accused, it had then ceased to be stolen property, and the accused could not be convicted of receiving it knowing it to have been stolen.²⁵ A lad was detained on leaving his master's premises, and a policeman sent for, who searched him and took a stolen cigar from him in the master's presence. In consequence of the lad's statement, the cigar was returned to him with five others, which the lad took to the accused and gave them to him. It was held that the accused could not be convicted of receiving the cigars knowing them to be stolen for they were not stolen property at the time they were received, the master and the policeman having acted in concert in supplying the lad with six cigars, and instructing him what to do with them.¹

Section 411.—This section requires two essentials:—

1. Dishonest receipt or retention of stolen property.
2. Knowledge at the time of receipt that the property was obtained in one of the ways specified in the section.

1. 'Dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property'.—The offences of receiving and retaining are different.

"The use of the alternative expression 'dishonestly receives or retains', in one and the same section relieves the prosecutor of proving more than that the accused 'either received or retained' the property (of course in either case dishonestly), that is to say, the prosecutor need not prove that it was dishonestly received as distinct ²¹ Villensky, [1892] 2 Q. B. 597.

²² Dolan, (1885) 6 Cox 449; Schmidt, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 15.

²³ The Indian Sale of Goods Act (III of 1930),

L. C.—65

s. 27.

²⁴ Schmidt, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 15.

²⁵ Villensky, [1892] 2 Q. B. 597.

¹ Hancock, (1878) 38 L. T. 787.

from dishonestly retained, or dishonestly retained as distinct from dishonestly received: it is enough to prove facts which justify the inference that the accused either dishonestly received the property or having received it honestly, dishonestly retained it. A similar use of an alternative expression is common throughout the Code in offences where a thing is said to be done 'with the intention of causing a specified effect', or with the knowledge that 'the effect is likely to be caused'. In such cases the prosecution need not prove and the Court need not find the intention as distinct from the knowledge; it is sufficient to prove or to find one or the other to have existed."²

The offence of dishonest retention of property is almost contemporaneous with the offence of dishonestly receiving it. A man who dishonestly receives property, if he retains it, must obviously continue dishonestly to retain it. It would be different if the reception of the property were innocent, for then it would be for the prosecution to show at what stage guilty knowledge of the receiver supervened to make the retention dishonest.³ Where the stolen properties were pledged with the accused, it was held that he could not be convicted under s. 411.⁴

Thus a person cannot be convicted of 'receiving' if he had no guilty knowledge at the time of receipt. But he is guilty of 'retaining' if he subsequently knows or has reason to believe that the property was stolen. The offence of dishonest retention of stolen property may be complete without any guilty knowledge at the time of receipt.⁵ But in order to support a conviction of dishonestly retaining stolen property, it ought to be shown that the accused, being in innocent possession of the property, acquired the knowledge that it was stolen, and thereafter retained it dishonestly.⁶ A person who is proved to have dishonestly misappropriated property cannot be convicted of retaining it.⁷

As to the meaning of 'dishonestly', see s. 24, supra.

There must be dishonest receiving or retaining.⁸ The removal of a birth register from the possession of an official without his consent for producing it in Court to prove the date of birth of a certain person is held to be not an offence under this section or any other.⁹

Manual possession not necessary for receiving.—It is not necessary that the accused should have had manual possession of the goods; but directing a servant to dispose of them as by pawning or otherwise, will be sufficient to support the charge. Where stolen property was brought by the thief into A's shop, A, with guilty knowledge, called her servant and directed her to take the stolen goods to the pawn office and "pawn them for the girl" (the thief), and the servant did so accordingly and brought back the money, which she handed to the thief in her mistress's presence, it was held that this amounted to a receiving by A of the stolen property, though she had never the manual possession of either the goods or the money.¹⁰ Where the consignee presented a railway receipt for certain stolen goods to the station-master, paid the freight and received formal delivery of the package from the latter, it was held that the goods had come to be not merely in the potential possession of the consignee but actually within his power and unrestricted control, though he had not removed them from the station where they were then lying, nor made any attempt to do so, and that he had received them within the meaning of this section.¹¹

If exclusive possession remain in the thief, there cannot be a conviction for receiving. A and B, two thieves, were seen to come at midnight out of a house belonging to C's father, under the following circumstances. A carried a sack containing stolen goods, B accompanied him; C preceded them, carrying a lighted candle. All three went into an adjoining stable belonging to C, and then shut the door. Policemen entered the stable and found the sack lying on the floor tied at the mouth, and the three men standing round it as if they were bargaining: but no particular words were heard. It was held that on this evidence C could not be convicted of receiving stolen goods; inasmuch as although there was evidence of a criminal intent to receive, and of

² Per Plowden, J., in Muhammad, (1889) P. R. No. 15 of 1889, at p. 62.

³ Saifal, (1936) 18 Lah. 227, dissenting from Najibulla Khan, (1884) P. R. No. 18 of 1884.

⁴ Rangayya, [1939] M. W. N. 413, 49 L. W. 544, 40 Cr. L. J. 828.

⁵ (1869) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 42, 1 Weir 469.

⁶ Khona, (1879) P. R. No. 31 of 1879.

⁷ Shanno Thi, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 254, 5 Cr. L.

J. 413.

⁸ Phul Chand Dube, [1930] A. L. J. R. 220, 30 Cr. L. J. 1133, [1929] AIR (A) 917.

⁹ Chuni, (1914) 15 P. L. R. 177, sub. nom. Chima, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 522, [1914] AIR (L) 174.

¹⁰ Miller, (1853) 6 Cox 353; Thomas Smith, (1855) 24 L. J. (M. C.) 135.

¹¹ Shewdhar Sukul, (1913) 40 Cal. 99C.

a knowledge that the goods were stolen, yet the exclusive possession of them still remained in the thieves, and therefore C had no possession, either actual or constructive.¹² Where the accused, along with several others, was found in the house of one of them, quarrelling over the division of certain stolen property, which consisted of packages of cloth which had been cut through and were lying open in the house, it was held that the accused was in possession of the property and was guilty under this section and s. 414.¹³

Though manual possession is not necessary yet proof of an actual taking into some kind of possession is necessary. A stole fowls, and sent them by coach to Birmingham, in a box, not addressed to anyone; but A made a verbal statement, when he sent them, that a person would call for them at Birmingham. B inquired for the box; it was shown to her, and she claimed it but it was not delivered to her. It was held that B could not be properly convicted as a receiver.¹⁴

Any profit to receiver not necessary.—It makes no difference whether a receiver receives for the purpose of profit or advantage, or whether he does it to assist the thief.¹⁵

False claim is not receipt.—The circumstance that a person knew that the property was not his own and yet claimed it before the Magistrate in his deposition in a case, was held to be not sufficient for his conviction.¹⁶

It is legally possible for a person to abandon his property. Such property becomes first the property of nobody and then the property of the first person who reduces it into possession. Things of which the ownership has been abandoned are not capable of being stolen.¹⁷

"Res nullius" cannot be subject of receiving.—Where a bull was let loose, as part of a religious ceremony, and was the property of no one, it was held that it could not be the subject of an offence under this section, as the original owner had surrendered all his rights as its proprietor and that it was, therefore, nullius in terra.¹⁸

Receiving stolen property from child.—Where a child committed theft and was discharged under s. 83, this fact was held to be no bar to the conviction of the person who received the stolen property from the child under this section because the child had attained sufficient maturity of understanding so as to know the nature of the act.¹⁹

Joint possession.—A person having joint possession with the thief may be convicted as a receiver.²⁰ If the stolen property is found in joint possession of two or more persons then all of them may be convicted. There is no justification for the view that there cannot be joint criminal possession.²¹

Where property is found in a house in the possession of more persons than one, mere discovery of any stolen property in that house is not in itself sufficient to prove that the possession was of any of those persons.²² Three bags of grain, alleged to be stolen property, were found in a room which was in the occupation of two persons, and was locked at the time of the search. Both of them were convicted for being in possession of stolen property. It was held that looking to the nature of the stolen property, both the accused must have known that the grain was in their room, and the presumption was that they were both accomplices and in possession of the property. The Court said: "The rule as to exclusive possession is based on the principle that possession must be conscious and voluntary. When the article is so small that it might have been placed in the house by another inmate and overlooked by the accused, the accused is not in possession, for he was not conscious of the presence of the article".²³

Joint family possession.—Where stolen property is found in a house occupied by several persons, it is not enough to show that the property was found in the house, ¹² John Wiley, (1850) 4 Cox 412. See Muhammad Ali Shet, (1908) 19 M. L. J. 301, 9 Cr. L. J. 52.

¹³ Parmeshwar Dayal, (1926) 7 P. L. T. 567, 27 Cr. L. J. 657, [1926] AIR (P) 316.

¹⁴ Catherine Hill, (1849) 18 L. J. (M.C.) N. S. 199.

¹⁵ Davis, (1833) 6 C. & P. 177.

¹⁶ Mutaya, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 416.

¹⁷ Tan Soon Li v. Burma Oil Co., Ltd., [1941] Ran. 153.

¹⁸ Bandhu, (1885) 8 All. 51; Nihal, (1887) 9 All. 343; Jamuna, (1884) 4 A. W. N. 87.

¹⁹ Begarayi Krishna Saranu, (1883) 6 Mad. 373.

²⁰ Thomas Smith, (1855) 24 L. J. (M. C.) 155.

²¹ Diwan Singh, (1932) 34 P. L. J. 576, 34 Cr. L. J. 634, [1933] AIR (L) 148.

²² Muhammad Ali Shet, (1908) 19 M. L. J. 301, 9 Cr. L. J. 52; Ram Charan, [1933] A. L. J. R. 1388, 34 Cr. L. J. 930, [1933] AIR (A) 437.

²³ Jumo, (1907) 1 S. L. R. 66, 67, 8 Cr. L. J. 184, 185.

to convict a member of the family who might have had nothing to do with bringing or keeping it there.²⁴ Where a boy had taken part in the commission of a dacoity, the presumption, which would naturally be drawn, would be that a wearing cloth which had been stolen and found in the house had remained in his possession, and the boy's father could not be made accountable for it merely because it was in the house which he and his son jointly occupied.²⁵ The manager of a joint Hindu family is prima facie responsible for the illegal possession of stolen articles found in his house, unless the presumption is rebutted upon the particular facts and circumstances of the case.¹ Where the only evidence of the receiving of stolen property by a wife was that the property was found in the house where she lived with her husband, it was held that the offence was not established, because the evidence pointed to the possession of the husband rather than that of the wife.² The bare finding of stolen property in the house of a joint Hindu family is not such evidence of possession on the part of each of its members as would form a sufficient basis for a conviction.³ The managing member of a joint Hindu family may be convicted of retaining stolen property. If knowledge of the presence in the house of the stolen property is established against the managing member, he must, as the house-master, be presumed to have been in possession of it.⁴

In a house occupied by a joint family including several male and female members certain stolen property was found in a locked box, the key of which was in the possession of the wife of one of the men who, however, was not in the house. The husband was convicted under this section. It was held that it could not be presumed that in every case of this kind the possession of the wife is per se the possession of the husband, and as there was nothing to connect the husband with the possession beyond the mere fact that he was the husband of the woman who had the key of the box, the conclusion that he was in possession of the property was not justified.⁵

Husband and wife.—English law.—Upon a joint charge against husband and wife, of receiving stolen goods, the wife cannot properly be convicted if the husband is.⁶ If the wife has voluntarily committed theft, the husband can be convicted of receiving stolen property from the wife.⁷ But if the wife has received stolen goods without the control or knowledge of and apart from her husband, the husband cannot be held guilty of receiving even though he afterwards adopts his wife's receipt.⁸ Bare acquiescence in the receipt of stolen property is not the adoption of receipt, so as to constitute receiving.⁹ A wife, in the absence of her husband, and without his knowledge, received stolen goods, and paid money on account of them. The thief and the husband afterwards met. The latter then learnt that the goods were stolen, he had agreed on the price which he was to pay for them, and paid the balance to the thief. It was held that the husband might be convicted of receiving the goods knowing them to be stolen.¹⁰

A husband and wife were jointly indicted for receiving stolen goods. There was evidence that the wife had received part of the stolen property from one of the thieves; there was no evidence that the husband was present at the time, and there was no evidence that the wife was acting under his compulsion. It was held that the wife was properly convicted of receiving stolen goods.¹¹

A wife, though she may have committed adultery, cannot steal her husband's goods; and therefore the adulterer, receiving from her the goods which she has taken from her husband, cannot be guilty of receiving stolen goods. The receiver, however, may be indicted for common law misdemeanour.¹²

²⁴ Bashir Ahmad Khan, (1919) 22 O. C. 256, 21 Cr. L. J. 40, [1939] AIR (O) 32; Deonandan Jha, [1937] P. W. N. 39, 37 Cr. L. J. 1123, [1936] AIR (P) 534.

²⁵ Dwarika Lohar, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 258, [1941] AIR (P) 223.

¹ Musai Kamat, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 481, 21 Cr. L. J. 757, [1920] AIR (P) 190.

² Desilva, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 120. See Wardroper's Case, (1860) Bell Cr. C. 249.

³ Nirmal Das, (1900) 22 All. 445; Sangam Lal, (1893) 15 All. 129; Ram Autar, (1925) 47 All. 511.

⁴ Budh Lal, (1907) 29 All. 598; Sangam Lal, (1893) 15 All. 129, 131.

⁵ Khushi Ram, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 162, 23 Cr. L. J. 386, [1922] AIR (A) 83; Qaim Din, (1924) 26 P. L. R. 522, 27 Cr. L. J. 249.

⁶ Archer's Case, (1826) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 143.

⁷ M'Athey, (1862) 9 Cox 251.

⁸ Dring's Case, (1857) Dears. & B. 329.

⁹ James Orris, (1908) 1 Cr. App. R. 199.

¹⁰ Woodward, (1862) 31 L. J. (M. C.) 91.

¹¹ Mary Baines, (1900) 19 Cox 524.

¹² Kenny, (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 307; Streeter, [1900] 2 Q. B. 601.

Where the only circumstance proved against the accused was that his wife produced the stolen properties from the house where both were living, it was held that this would not warrant the conviction of the accused under this section.¹³

'Stolen property.'—Property into or for which the stolen property has been converted or exchanged is not stolen property.¹⁴ Hence, money obtained upon forged money-orders¹⁵ is not stolen property; but mutton obtained by killing sheep which was stolen alive,¹⁶ or an ingot of gold or silver obtained by melting gold or silver articles which were stolen, does not cease to be stolen property.¹⁷

Under the English law it is held that money obtained by sale of property stolen,¹⁸ or currency notes of smaller denomination obtained in exchange of currency notes of higher denomination which were stolen¹⁹ are not stolen property. The Chief Court of Sind has held that when notes of higher denomination entrusted to a person are changed by him into notes of lower denomination the person holding those notes holds them in trust for the person who had given him and if misappropriated would be regarded as stolen property.²⁰

2. 'Knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property'.—The offence made punishable is not the receiving of stolen property from any particular person, but the receiving of such property knowing it to be stolen. "The word 'believe'... is a very much stronger word than 'suspect,' and it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing must be stolen property". "It was not sufficient [in such a case] to show that the accused was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient enquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired".²¹ A person is not guilty of this offence although at the time of receiving the property he erroneously believes it to be stolen;²² or where the articles are not of an unusual character but are such as easily pass from hand to hand.²³

"A person must be held to have 'reason to believe' property to be stolen within the meaning of s. 411... when the circumstances are such that a reasonable man would be led by a chain of probable reasoning to the conclusion or inference that the property he was asked to deal with was stolen property, although the circumstances may fall short of carrying absolute conviction to his mind on the point".²⁴ See also s. 26, supra, as to the meaning of 'reason to believe'.

It is immaterial whether the receiver knows or not who stole them. The section does not apply to the actual thief. The class of persons against whom it is directed is a class to whom these alternative words apply, "knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property".²⁵ Retention of property stolen during the mutiny in 1857 was held punishable.¹

Servant receiving goods knowing them to have been stolen.—Where A, knowing that goods were stolen, directed B, his servant, to receive them into his premises,

¹³ Marimuthu Kavandan, [1941] M. W. N. 479 (2), (1941) 42 Cr. L. J. 738, [1941] AIR (M) 694.

¹⁴ Subha Chand, (1881) P. R. No. 39 of 1881.

¹⁵ Monmohun Roy, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 33.

¹⁶ Cowell v. Green, (1796) 2 East P. C. 617.

¹⁷ Ganu Vitlu Ghode, (1942) Criminal Appeal No. 187 of 1942, decided by Beaumont, C. J., and Wassoodew, J., on June 30, 1942 (Unrep. Bom.). "It is necessary to prove that the property, which is produced, is the property which was stolen, but it need not necessarily be produced in the form which it possessed when it was stolen. If a gold necklace is stolen, and exchanged for another necklace or a bullock, it is obvious that the second necklace or the bullock is not stolen property. But, if the gold necklace is melted down and converted into an ingot, it does not cease to be the same gold as was in the necklace. What was stolen was gold in the form of a necklace, and what is produced is the same gold in the form of an ingot."

¹⁸ Chapple, (1840) 9 C. & P. 355.

¹⁹ Walkley, (1829) 4 C. & P. 133.

²⁰ Sugnomal Bhojraj, (1944) 46 Cr. L. J. 243, [1944] AIR (S) 237.

²¹ Per Melville, J., in Rango Timaji, (1880) 6 Bom. 402, 403, followed in Kanniappa Naicker, [1918] M. W. N. 696, 14 Cr. L. J. 591; The Crown Prosecutor v. Sankara Narayana Chetti, (1916) 4 L. W. 53, 17 Cr. L. J. 312; Muhammad Ibrahim, (1915) 17 Cr. L. J. 25; Abdur Rahim, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1144, [1927] AIR (N) 40; A. G. Edgecombe, [1928] AIR (C) 264; Suraj Prasad, [1929] 6 O. W. N. 208, 30 Cr. L. J. 969, [1929] AIR (O) 213; Bhagga, (1935) 11 Luck. 70.

²² Issup, (1888) Cr. R. No. 41 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 389.

²³ Ravaji, (1892) Cr. R. No. 13 of 1892, Unrep. Cr. C. 594; Mowlabux, (1910) 4 S. L. R. 159, 11 Cr. L. J. 730; Gaya Prasad, (1931) 8 O. W. N. 517, 32 Cr. L. J. 1184; Gian Chand, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 572, 33 Cr. L. J. 764.

²⁴ Per Rattigan, J., in Gulbad Shah, (1888) P. R. No. 37 of 1888, p. 95.

²⁵ Johri, (1901) 23 All. 266.

Sita Ram, (1891) 1 O. D. 391.

and B, in pursuance of that direction, afterwards received them in A's absence, B knowing that they had been stolen, they were jointly indicted for receiving them.²

Amendment.—After the expression 'in respect of which' there were the words 'the offence of'. But the word 'the' was repealed by Act XII of 1891; and the words 'offence of', by Act VIII of 1882, s. 9, as a result of the decision in Moorga Chetty's case.³

The words 'whether the transfer, etc., British India' were, as heretofore said, inserted by Act VIII of 1882, s. 9.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question is stolen property.⁴

The goods received must be the identical goods which were stolen, and not something for which they had been sold or exchanged.⁵ The finding must be that the accused received the very property stolen, not property like it.⁶ If it is manifestly impossible to recognize the stolen property no conviction could be made.⁷

Where the stolen property consisted of cereals, the fact that the cereals found in the house of a person residing in the same village corresponded with the alleged stolen cereals was held to be not sufficient to establish the identity of the stolen cereals with those found.⁸

(2) That the accused received or retained such property.

There must be some proof that some person other than the accused had possession of the property before the accused got possession of it.⁹

Where property sufficiently identified to be the property of one person is found to be in the possession of another person without leave or license or any legal permission of the owner, it is for the party in whose possession the property is found duly to account for its possession, and, unless he can do so, a jury might fairly infer in such circumstances that it was with a guilty knowledge that the accused took that which he knew to be not his own.¹⁰ The prosecution must establish not only that the stolen property was recovered from the house, or other place in the occupation of the culprit, but also that the incriminating article was in the house or other place and the culprit was fully aware of its presence there.¹¹ But possession of property which has been stolen from the owner is generally at best only evidence of theft when the date of the theft is so recent as to make it reasonable to presume, in the absence of explanation, that the person in whose possession the property is found must have obtained the possession by stealing.¹² If, however, the person gives a reasonable explanation of the possession, the Court should not find him guilty even if it is not affirmatively satisfied that such explanation is true. Where the accused has not been asked to offer any explanation of possession, his conviction cannot be maintained even if the evidence as to possession is accepted.¹³ Mere recent possession of stolen property is not alone sufficient, as such possession is in general evidence of stealing and not of receiving.¹⁴ The possession of stolen goods by the accused must be possession soon after the theft or the stolen goods must have been 'recently' stolen.¹⁵ Possession of stolen goods a few months after theft raises no presumption that the possessor knew or had reason to believe the goods to be stolen.¹⁶ If the possession is not a recent possession the accused ought not

² Parr, (1841) 2 Mood. & Rob. 346.

³ (1881) 5 Bom. 338, F.B.

⁴ Buldeo Pershad, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 187; Ishan Chandra Chandra, (1893) 21 Cal. 328; T. Burke, (1884) 6 All. 224; Mutaya, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 416.

⁵ Subha Chand, (1881) P. R. No. 39 of 1881.

⁶ Bava Chela, (1886) Cr. R. No. 5 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 227; Gobinda Maharana, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 648, [1942] AIR (P) 304 (1).

⁷ Lal, (1912) 13 P. L. R. 616, 13 Cr. L. J. 720.

⁸ Shaikh Sharafat, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 727; 21 Cr. L. J. 673; Udho Singh, (1941) 42 Cr. L. J. 810, [1941] AIR (P) 614.

⁹ Ishan Muchi, (1888) 15 Cal. 511; Shivram, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 98. See Nga Kywet, (1900)

1 L. B. R. 39, where this rule which is based on English precedents, is not followed.

¹⁰ Shuruffooddeen, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 26; Ramjoy Kurmoker, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 10; Hari Ramji, (1906) 9 Bom. L. R. 27, 5 Cr. L. J. 63.

¹¹ Maharaj Singh, [1945] All. 290.

¹² Poromeshur Aheer, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 16; Sami, (1890) 13 Mad. 426.

¹³ Baidyanath Mahanty, (1940) 23 P. L. T. 500, 43 Cr. L. J. 234, [1942] AIR (P) 145.

¹⁴ Nihal Singh, (1866) P. R. No. 31 of 1866; Najibulla Khan, (1884) P. R. No. 18 of 1884; Jowaya, (1887) P. R. No. 46 of 1887.

¹⁵ Hathim Mondal, (1920) 31 C. L. J. 310, 24 C. W. N. 619, 21 Cr. L. J. 455, [1920] AIR (C) 342; Baboo Lal, (1932) 9 O. W. N. 1169.

¹⁶ Aha, (1924) 1 Lah. C. 471.

to be called upon to explain how his possession was acquired. The question of what is, or what is not, recent possession is to be considered with reference to the nature of the article stolen.¹⁷ Where a revolver was stolen in October and was recovered from the possession of the accused in the following May it was held that it could be presumed that the accused was either the thief or retainer of stolen goods.¹⁸ Where a stolen revolver was found in the possession of the accused who were engaged in collecting arms and explosive substances and it appeared that the theft was not at all recent, it was held that the mere fact of possession was not sufficient for a conviction under this section.¹⁹ Whether a presumption of theft or of receipt of stolen property should be drawn would depend on the circumstances, the length of time that has elapsed after the theft, how much of stolen property is found in the possession of the person in question, the circumstances which led to the recovery and other facts connected with the discovery of the property.²⁰ It is a presumption of fact, and not an implication of law, from evidence of recent possession of stolen property unaccounted for, whether the offence of stealing, or of receiving, has been committed. Where the accused was found in the recent possession of some stolen sheep, of which he could give no satisfactory account, and it might reasonably be inferred from the circumstances that he did not steal them himself, it was held that there was evidence for the jury that he received them knowing them to have been stolen.²¹ Where a stolen horse was found in the possession of the accused six months after it was lost, and there was no other evidence against the accused, was not called upon for his defence as the possession was not sufficiently recent.²² Possession of a stolen buffalo five or six, or even four or five months, after the offence, is not such possession as will constitute proof of an offence under this section.²³ Some bullocks were stolen, and one of them was discovered in the house of the accused fifteen months after the theft. It was held that in view of this long lapse of time between the theft and the discovery of the stolen property, the onus of proving innocent possession should not have been cast on the accused. The fact that the accused when asked to explain his possession of the animal gave an explanation which was not satisfactory was not a sufficient ground for his conviction.²⁴ Where ordinary keys of the value of Rs. 2-8-0 were found in the possession of a man of substance more than three months after the theft, it was held that having regard to the length of time there was no presumption that the accused knew or had reason to believe the property to be stolen.²⁵ Where the accused was found in possession of stolen property two months after the theft was committed, and gave no account of how he became possessed of it, but denied that he was ever in possession of any of the articles stolen, it was held that the accused should be convicted under this section and not under s. 379.¹ Where valuable jewellery which was stolen or otherwise lost to the owner was found under circumstances of grave suspicion in the possession of the accused about two years after the theft or loss, and the accused refused to disclose the name of the person from whom he received the same or to give the particulars as to the origin of his possession, the Court drew an inference of guilty knowledge on the part of the accused.² Where the accused, the father-in-law of one S, who was the cousin of the thief, was found in possession of the stolen property three days after the theft and he disposed of it in a somewhat suspicious manner, it was held that the circumstances, though they formed grounds for grave suspicion against

¹⁷ Ina Sheikh, (1885) 11 Cal. 160; Ravaji, (1892) Cr. R. No. 13 of 1942, Unrep. Cr. C. 594; The District Magistrate of Bellary v. Obbava, [1912] M. W. N. 529; Nga E, (1885) S. J. L. B. 354; Phul Khan, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 975, 38 Cr. L. J. 871, [1937] AIR (L) 246.

¹⁸ Reoti, (1933) 34 Cr. L. J. 1018, [1933] A. L. J. R. 523, [1933] AIR (A) 461.

¹⁹ Dharani Kanta Chakrabarty, (1932) 57 C. L. J. 57, 35 Cr. L. J. 226, [1933] AIR (C) 594.

²⁰ Sessions Judge of Vizagapatam v. Gorle Kandungadu, [1912] M. W. N. 97, 13 Cr. L. J. 140; Imamuddin Khan, (1936) 17 P. L. T. 754, [1936] P. W. N. 677, 38 Cr. L. J. 349, [1937] AIR (P) 112.

²¹ Langmead, (1864) 9 Cox 464; McMahon, (1875) 13 Cox 275.

²² Cooper, (1852) 3 C. & K. 318. See, to the same effect, Ram Chandra Saha v. Haji Meah Haji Abdullah, (1913) 17 C. W. N. 1129, 14 Cr. L. J. 571, [1914] AIR (C) 273, where the Court refused even to issue process against a shroff in whose possession a Government currency-note of the value of Rs. 1,000 was traced seven months after its loss. See also Vellai Ocha Thevan, [1912] M. W. N. 362, 13 Cr. L. J. 475; Mangaya Shah, (1915) 17 P. L. R. 175, 17 Cr. L. J. 68, [1916] AIR (L) 288; Muthu Veera Velan, [1929] M. W. N. 517, 30 Cr. L. J. 542.

²³ Hashim Umar, [1942] Kar. 186.

²⁴ Narain Singh, (1928) 29 P. L. R. 441, 29 Cr. L. J. 464, [1928] AIR (L) 687.

²⁵ Joenullah Bepari, (1918) 22 C. W. N. 597, 19 Cr. L. J. 702.

¹ Madappa Teva, (1888) 1 Weir 471.

² Ram Pershad, (1924) 2 Ran. 80.

the accused, did not furnish conclusive evidence against him for his conviction under this section.³ Lapse of time after the article was stolen is usually an important factor in determining the guilt of the accused, but the importance to be attached to it must vary with the circumstances of the individual case and will depend largely on the frequency with which the property is likely to have changed hands. No maximum period can be suggested as that beyond which no inference of guilt can be drawn.⁴ There can be no hard and fast rule as to time when an accused person should not be called upon to explain the possession of ordinary articles found with him after the commission of dacoity at which they were stolen. Two and a half months after a dacoity is, however, not a long time and where such articles are recovered two and a half months after the dacoity it cannot be presumed that the accused had no guilty knowledge.⁵ Where the stolen property is traced to the accused's possession two months after the theft there is no presumption against him under this section.⁶ Where property is alleged to have been stolen some three years before it is found in possession of a person, very clear evidence is required to show that he must have known it to be stolen.⁷

Illustration (a) to s. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act means that where the accused person has been found in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft, the Court may draw a presumption and may act on it if the accused cannot account for his possession, but this illustration does not mean that the burden of proof is shifted to the accused, so that he must prove affirmatively that he came by the goods innocently. It is sufficient if he can give an explanation which may raise doubt in the mind of the Court as to the guilt of the accused—which in the opinion of the Court may possibly be true. So, where a conviction under this section was based on the presumption aforesaid, the Court saying that the burden of proving his bona fides was thrown on the accused and that the oral testimony on behalf of the accused to prove that he had purchased the goods from a certain person was not very reliable, it was held that the conviction was illegal.⁸ Even if it be found that the accused was the sole occupant of the room it does not necessarily follow that he must have been aware of the presence in the room of all the articles that were found therein. It is incumbent upon the Court to consider the circumstances of the occupation of the room and to consider whether it was reasonably possible for other persons to introduce the articles into the room without the accused's knowledge.⁹ Upon the prosecution establishing that the accused was in possession of goods recently stolen, the jury may, in the absence of any explanation by the accused of the way in which the goods came into his possession which might reasonably be true, find him guilty, but that if an explanation were given which the jury think might reasonably be true, and which is consistent with his innocence although they were not convinced of its truth, the accused is entitled to be acquitted inasmuch as the prosecution would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused.¹⁰ If a person of his own accord hands over stolen property to the police in order to assist them in investigation, it cannot be said to give rise to a presumption that he is the receiver of the stolen property in the criminal sense. On the contrary, the presumption would rather be that he had a clear conscience in the matter.¹¹

Under s. 410 property which has been criminally appropriated is designated stolen property and there is no logical reason why a man who is in possession of goods soon after they have been criminally misappropriated, if he cannot account for his possession, should be regarded as less likely to have misappropriated them or to have received them knowing them to have been misappropriated than if they had been the subject of theft.¹²

Recognition of things not before the eyes of deposing witnesses is not evidence against a person accused of having been in possession of those things.¹³

³ Asvini Kumar Roy, (1905) 10 C. W. N. 219, 3 Cr. L. J. 195.

⁴ Smith, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 189, [1918] AIR (M) 111.

⁵ Jwala, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 638, [1927] AIR (O) 277.

⁶ Ramudu Aiyar, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 243, 17 L. W. 370, [1923] AIR (M) 365.

⁷ Lal Singh, (1914) 15 P. L. R. 373, [1914] AIR (L) 84, 15 Cr. L. J. 521.

⁸ Hori Lal, (1933) 56 All. 250; Jagannath, [1945] All. 11.

⁹ Indu Bhusan Pal, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 561, [1942] AIR (C) 440.

¹⁰ Gfeller, [1943] A. L. J. R. 502, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 241, (1943) AIR (P. C.) 211.

¹¹ Hata, (1941) 44 Cr. L. J. 186, [1943] AIR (L) 4.

¹² Rami Reddi, (1944) 58 L. W. 209, [1945] 1 M. L. J. 207, [1945] M. W. N. 107, [1945] AIR (M) 208.

¹³ Mussamut Joonnee, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

Joint possession.—Where the stolen articles are merely pointed out and produced by the accused from a place of which he has only joint possession, the possession of the articles must be clearly traced to him.¹⁴ Where incriminating articles are recovered from a place in the occupation or possession of more persons than one and it is not possible to fix the liability on any particular individual a Court is not bound to hold that the said articles were in possession or under the control of the head of the family.¹⁵

(3) That he did so dishonestly.¹⁶ Where a person is found in possession of stolen property dishonest retention on his part must be proved. The mere fact that his conduct is suspicious is not sufficient to repose a conviction upon.¹⁷ The onus is on the prosecution to prove that the accused received the property dishonestly, and not on the accused to show that he received it honestly.¹⁸

In considering whether the possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of dishonest receipt of stolen property, possession should be clearly traced to the accused.¹⁹

Where there was not only the recovery of the stolen property at the instance of the accused but there was the evidence of witnesses to show that the accused had for sale certain property proved to be stolen and the accused offered no explanation as to how he came into possession of that property, it was held that he was guilty under this section.²⁰

(4) That he knew or had reason to believe that the property was stolen property.²¹

As to the proof of the receiver's guilty knowledge, from the caution necessary in this sort of traffic, it must often happen that no express disclosure is made to him and yet that he knows the property to have been stolen as well as if he had actually witnessed the theft. In this, as in other cases, it is sufficient if circumstances are proved, which, to persons of ordinary understanding in the situation of the accused person, must have led to the conclusion that the property was stolen or otherwise dishonestly acquired. Thus, if it is shown that the accused received large quantities of money, ornaments, bundles of clothes of various kinds or movables of any sort from persons destitute of property and without any apparent lawful means of acquiring it, and especially if it is proved that the property was brought at untimely hours and under circumstances of evident concealment, it may well be concluded that it was received with a full understanding of the guilty mode by which it has been acquired. And this will be still further confirmed, if it appears that the property was purchased for a sum far below its real value, or was concealed in places not usually employed for keeping such property, or if the marks on it are effaced, or if false or inconsistent stories are told as to the mode of its acquisition. Another circumstance from which such guilty knowledge may be inferred is that the property has been received from a notorious thief or one from whom stolen property has on previous occasions been received.²² Where a question of value of the property stolen is to arise there must be direct evidence of value.²³

Where the circumstances do not raise the presumption that a person received the property knowing it to be stolen, the accused cannot be convicted of this offence merely because he is in possession of the property and does not account for his possession.²⁴ The Court must be satisfied that the property was stolen by some other person to the knowledge of the accused and there should be some evidence to show that such was the case.²⁵ The stealing by the other person must be proved, otherwise the receiver must be acquitted.¹

¹⁴ Chandappa Pujari, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 63; Maharaj Singh, [1945] All. 290; Ramaswamy, [1946] 2 M. L. J. 435, [1946] M. W. 732, 48 Cr. L. J. 720.

¹⁵ Santa Singh, (1944) 26 Lah. 137.

¹⁶ T. Burke, (1884) 6 All. 224.

¹⁷ Ghansham Das, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 165.

¹⁸ Kartar Singh, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 594.

¹⁹ Malhari, (1882) 6 Bom. 731.

²⁰ Abdul Rahim, (1934) 11 O. W. N. 905, 35 Cr. L. J. 1130, [1934] AIR (O) 399.

²¹ Doyal Shilydar, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 87; Meer Yar Ali, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 70;

Dussorut Dass, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 63; Bujo Huri, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 37.

²² M. & M. 373.

²³ Mahboob, (1920) 21 Cr. L. J. 552.

²⁴ T. Burke, (1884) 6 All. 224; Bharos, (1928) 21 A. L. J. R. 836, 25 Cr. L. J. 942, [1924] AIR (A) 192; Yasinkhan, (1923) 19 N. L. R. 176, 24 Cr. L. J. 960, [1924] AIR (N) 48; Fateh Ali, (1941) 46 C. W. N. 54.

²⁵ Densley, (1834) 6 C. & P. 399; Rajendra Nath Laha, (1935) 18 P. L. T. 210, [1936] P. W. N. 98, 38 Cr. L. J. 129, [1937] AIR (P) 191.

¹ Woolford, (1834) 1 Mood. & Rob. 384.

The mere fact that a person points out a place where stolen property is concealed, if the place is not in his own house or in his own field, but is in the field of another man, is not sufficient to entitle the Court to find that the person who pointed out the stolen article had received it, or retained it, knowing it to be stolen. There must be some evidence which suggests that the accused himself concealed the article in the place where it was found.²

A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article. The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen.³ The fact of stolen property being found concealed in a man's house would be sufficient to raise a presumption that he knew the property to be stolen property, but it would not be sufficient to show that it had been acquired by dacoity,⁴ or some such other offence.

On an indictment against A for stealing, and B for receiving stolen goods, evidence was given that on various former occasions portions of the commodity stolen had been missed, and the accused had, after such occasions, been found selling such commodity; and that on the last occasion it was part of what was stolen. It was held that this was sufficient to fix the receiver with a guilty knowledge.⁵

Upon the trial of an accused person for feloniously receiving stolen property, a list of the stolen articles which the accused, who was a marine-store dealer, had bought, was received in evidence in order to show that he had bought at an under-value. The circumstances under which the list was written were as follows: A police constable asked the accused to consider when he had bought the stolen property, to which the accused replied that his wife should make out a list of it, and on the next day the accused's wife in her husband's hearing said, "this is a list of what we bought, and what we gave for them." On the question whether the list was properly admitted in evidence, it was held that it was clearly admissible in evidence.⁶

A principal felon is a competent witness against an accessory for receiving stolen property.⁷ An admission of his guilt, made by the thief while in custody, in the presence of the receiver, is evidence against the receiver.⁸ But it is unsafe to convict a party as receiver on the evidence of the thief, unless it is confirmed.⁹ The mere fact that stolen goods were found on the accused's premises is not sufficient to confirm the evidence of the thief.¹⁰

Where stolen property is found in the possession of dacoits the offence of "knowingly having in possession" is to be considered as included in the original one of dacoity, unless there are circumstances clearly separating the one crime from the other, e.g., length of time, or distance.¹¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily if the property is not worth more than Rs. 50.

A Magistrate cannot assume jurisdiction to try an offence under this section, in a summary form, unless he satisfies himself that the property in respect of which he is trying the accused is less than Rs. 50 in value, and he must record the fact in the form prescribed in s. 263 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Where there is no such reference in the record of the case, the conviction is bad.¹²

Venue.—A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were

² Gobinda, (1895) 17 All. 576; Paimullah, (1911) 16 C. W. N. 288, 13 Cr. L. J. 127; Public Prosecutor v. Pakriswamy, [1929] M. W. N. 785, 30 L. W. 791, 57 M. L. J. 548, 31 Cr. L. J. 449, [1929] AIR (M) 846; Hamada, (1906) 4 Cr. L. J. 176; Pir Bakhs, (1911) 13 P. L. R. 140, 13 Cr. L. J. 28; Mehru, (1913) 14 P. L. R. 1058, 14 Cr. L. J. 602; Barkat Ali, (1916) P. R. No. 2 of 1917, 18 Cr. L. J. 29; Indar Singh, (1920) 24 Cr. L. J. 587, [1921] AIR (L) 385; Mata Prashad, [1943] O. W. N. 96, (1943) 44 Cr. L. J. 473, [1943] AIR (O) 298.

³ Illustration (a) to s. 14, Indian Evidence Act.

⁴ Malhari, (1882) 6 Bom. 731.

⁵ William Nicholls, (1858) 1 F. & F. 51.

⁶ Mallory, (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 33.

⁷ Haslam's Case, (1876) 1 Leach 418.

⁸ Moulton Cox, (1858) 1 F. & F. 90.

⁹ Robinson, (1864) 4 F. & F. 43.

¹⁰ Pratt, (1865) 4 F. & F. 315.

¹¹ Abool Hossein, (1814) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 148.

¹² Brij Nandan Panday, (1922) 6 P. L. T. 114, 25 Cr. L. J. 545, [1922] AIR (P) 227.

stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.¹³

Property belonging to different owners.—Where a person was found in possession of stolen property, identified as belonging to different owners, but it did appear that he had received such property at different times, it was held that such person could not properly be tried and convicted under this section separately in respect of the property identified by each owner.¹⁴ The onus in such a case lies on the prosecution to establish that the property was received by the accused at different times, and it is not for the accused to prove that he had received the same at one time.¹⁵

Separate trials in respect of different items of stolen property.—In the house belonging to two brothers, three items of stolen property were discovered, namely, a quantity of unused postage stamps, some carpets, and some buckets and padlocks. There was no evidence to show that the stamps and carpets had been received by the brothers on different dates. On a charge of dishonestly retaining the carpets, one brother was acquitted and the other convicted. Proceedings against them were also instituted in respect of dishonest retention of the stamps. The accused pleaded that as the stamps had been discovered at their house on the same date and at the same place as the carpets, only one offence in respect of these two items of property had been committed and that as they had already been tried in respect of the carpets they could not be tried in respect of the stamps. It was held that they could not be so tried.¹⁶ Where the property stolen formed the contents of a single parcel, a single offence in respect of all the articles contained in the parcel and not separate offences in respect of the different articles should be treated as the basis of the conviction.¹⁷

When a person is in possession of various stolen articles he cannot be convicted separately in respect of each article unless the prosecution establish that there were different acts of receiving in respect of these articles.¹⁸

Person committing theft or breach of trust not liable as receiver.—A person cannot be convicted under this section in respect of property for which he himself has been convicted.¹⁹ The theft and taking and retention of stolen goods form one and the same offence, and cannot be punished separately.²⁰ When the chief offence charged and proved by the evidence is theft, the fact of the stolen property being found in the possession of the offender should be considered as a portion of the evidence by which the chief offence is proved; and the verdict of 'not guilty' should be entered upon the charge of dishonestly receiving or retaining such property.²¹

Direction to jury.—It is no misdirection for a Judge to tell the jury that, if the accused could not prove how he became possessed of certain articles, it was their duty to convict him, for the presumption in such a case was legally valid that he knew that the property had been unlawfully acquired.²² The Sessions Judge should direct the jury to find (1) whether the property was stolen, (2) whether it was dishonestly retained, and (3) whether the accused knew or had reason to believe the same to be stolen property.²³ The proper way to charge the jury in a case under ss. 411 and 414 would be to tell that when once the presumption under s. 114, Indian Evidence Act, ceased to be applicable, there is no evidence of guilty knowledge at all. Omission to state this is a misdirection. The omission to mention before the jury some small items of corroborative or discrepant evidence may be comparatively unimportant, particularly in a case where the jury had been addressed by advocates on each side. But the omission to make it clear to them exactly what they have to decide and how they have to proceed to decide it, or the stating of points in a manner which is positively misleading is a very serious misdirection, since it is the business of the Judge to explain clearly to the jury what is the point which they have to decide.²⁴ In cases of receiving ¹³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 180, ill. (b).

¹⁴ Makhan, (1898) 15 All. 317; Sheo Charan, (1923) 45 All. 485; Ganesh Sahu, (1923) 50 Cal. 594; Maiku, (1890) O. S. C. 167, 1 O. D. 252; Munwa, (1923) 26 Cr. L. J. 1, [1925] AIR (O) 298; Chanan Singh, (1936) 37 Cr. L. J. 752.

¹⁵ Hayat, (1928) 10 Lab. 158.

¹⁶ Bishun Singh, (1924) 3 Pat. 503.

¹⁷ Ram Pershad, (1924) 2 Ran. 80.

¹⁸ Jalal, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 458, 34 P. L. R.

433, [1932] AIR (L) 615.

¹⁹ Shunkur, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 312.

²⁰ Sreemunt Adup, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 68; Seeb Churn Haree, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 12.

²¹ (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. Cir.) 2.

²² Narain Bagdee, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 3.

²³ Balya Somya, (1890) 15 Bom. 369.

²⁴ Rajendra Nath Laha, (1935) 38 Cr. L. J. 129, 18 P. L. T. 210, [1936] P. W. N. 98, [1937] AIR (P) 191.

stolen property the onus of proof never passes to the accused. The Crown must prove guilty knowledge. Under s. 114, ill. (a), of the Indian Evidence Act, the Court may presume that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods, knowing them to be stolen unless he can account for his possession. If he gives an account of his possession which may reasonably be true, though the jury are not convinced that it is true, and there is no other evidence of his guilty knowledge, the accused is entitled to an acquittal.²⁵

Joint trial.—Under s. 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code, several accused can be tried jointly for offences under this section, provided the property was originally stolen on one occasion.¹ If more than one offence of theft has been committed in respect of certain property which could be designated as stolen property, within the meaning of s. 410, then the persons in possession of such stolen property which has been secured by means of the commission several offences of theft or robbery, etc., cannot be tried jointly according to the provisions of cl. (f) of s. 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.² A person accused of an offence under s. 457 can, by virtue of s. 239 (e), Criminal Procedure Code, be legally charged and tried with persons accused of receiving or retaining the stolen property.³

Charge.—The charge should state that the articles found in possession of the accused were the property of a certain person, who was the owner thereof.⁴ It should also set forth that the accused knew or had reason to believe that the property he received was stolen property, for without this knowledge or belief, the offence is not complete.⁵

The charge should be as follows :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, dishonestly received (or retained) stolen property, to wit—, belonging to one AB, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—In general a sentence of fine in the case of a receiver of stolen property is an improper and a futile sentence, inasmuch as the fine is a mere temporary diminution of the receiver's illegitimate profits.⁶ That one of the accused is a member of the criminal tribe is no ground for differentiation of sentence so far as he is concerned for an offence under this section.⁷

412. Whoever dishonestly¹ receives or retains² any stolen property,³ the possession whereof he knows or has reason to believe to have been transferred by the commission of dacoity,⁴ or dishonestly receives from a person, whom he knows or has reason to believe to belong or to have belonged to a gang of dacoits, property which he knows or has reason to believe to have been stolen, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The object of this section is to stamp out the offence of dacoity which was very common when the Code was enacted.

²⁵ Daud Shaikh, (1985) 40 C. W. N. 159, 62 C. L. J. 257, 37 Cr. L. J. 976.

¹ Lakha Amra, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 301, 33 Cr. L. J. 394, [1932] AIR (B) 201; Musammatt Guljania, (1927) 6 Pat. 583; Shakur, [1935] O. W. N. 911, 36 Cr. L. J. 1206.

² Bhaggan, (1935) 11 Luck. 70.

³ Nawab, (1936) 18 Lah. 62.

⁴ Siddu Balnath, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 95.

⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 11.

⁶ Per Batchelor, J., in Isarising, Cr. Reference No. 97 of 1915, decided on November 16, 1915 (Unrep. Bom.).

⁷ Somanna, [1941] 2 M. L. J. 253, [1941] M. W. N. 480, (1940) 54 L. W. 479, 42 Cr. L. J. 824, [1941] AIR (M) 708.

This section refers to persons other than the actual dacoits. It implies receipt from another person or an act by one not himself the dacoit.⁸ The receiver is punishable under it as severely as those who commit dacoity. The offence under this section is much more serious than the offence under the preceding section.

1. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra.

2. 'Receives or retains'.—See s. 411, supra. A person cannot be convicted for "receiving or retaining stolen goods" unless he is shown at the material time to have been in possession or control of the place where they were discovered or at least to have had some knowledge of their deposit there.⁹

Such receipt or retention must have taken place in British India to give jurisdiction to Courts. Certain persons, who were not proved to be British subjects, were found in possession in a Native State, of property, the subject of a dacoity committed in British India. They were not proved to have taken part in the dacoity, and there was no evidence that they had received or retained any stolen property in British India. They were convicted of offences punishable under this section. It was held that no offence was proved to have been committed within the jurisdiction of a British Court.¹⁰

3. 'Stolen property'.—See s. 410, supra.

4. 'Possession... transferred by the commission of dacoity'.—See s. 27, supra. The possession contemplated is exclusive possession, otherwise the receiver or the possessor of the stolen property would run the risk of losing the stolen property, if some one else could get hold of it. Where in a case of dacoity the only evidence against the accused was that he produced stolen property from under a tree in a certain field not belonging to him, it was held that the evidence was not enough to prove his complicity in the commission of the dacoity. The accused could not be said to be in exclusive possession of the stolen property as anybody could have access to the tree in the field where it was buried, and so he could not be convicted under this section or s. 411.¹¹ Mere recent possession of property taken in dacoity does not necessarily lead to the presumption that the person in possession is guilty under this section. In most cases the presumption would be of an offence under s. 411.¹² In a trial for an offence under this section, the presumption permitted by s. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, does not arise until the prosecution has established three facts—namely the ownership of the articles in question, the theft of them, and their recent possession by the accused. It is not a reasonable explanation of his possession for the accused to deny the existence of these facts. The explanation which renders the presumption unavailable to the prosecution is an explanation of how articles belonging to the complainant are found in possession of the accused shortly after they had been stolen from the possession of the complainant. It is only when the explanation offered by the accused is with regard to that possession, that the presumption does not arise.¹³

'Reason to believe'.—See s. 26, supra. 'Dacoity'.—See s. 391, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question was stolen property.¹⁴

(2) That the possession of such property was transferred by the commission of dacoity.

(3) That the accused received or retained such stolen property.

Where no stolen property was recovered from the accused, but some of it was given up by his step-father with whom the accused was living, it was held that the accused could not be convicted under this section, without sufficient proof that the property had been taken by the accused to the house inhabited by him and his step-father.¹⁵

⁸ Bahiru, (1886) Cr. R. No. 65 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 312.

⁹ Aftab Mohammad Khan, [1940] A. L. J. R. 206, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 647, [1940] AIR (A) 291.

¹⁰ Kirpal Singh, (1887) 9 All. 523; Muhammad Hussain, (1923) 23 Cr. L. J. 560; Gunna, (1926) 48 All. 687.

¹¹ Ram Aular, (1936) 12 Luck. 88.

¹² Chavadappa Pujari, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 63.

¹³ Dhyanigope, (1946) 25 Pat. 262.

¹⁴ Vide s. 410, sup.

¹⁵ Mahabir, (1933) 10 O. W. N. 842, 33 Cr. L. J. 165, [1933] AIR (O) 423.

(4) That he did as in (3) dishonestly.¹⁶

(5) That he knew or had reason to believe the circumstances stated in (2).¹⁷

Or prove (1) that the property in question was stolen property.

(2) That the accused received it.

(3) That he received it from a person who belonged to or had belonged to a gang of dacoits.

(4) That he did as in (3) dishonestly.

(5) That he knew or had reason to believe that the person from whom he received the property belonged to or had belonged to a gang of dacoits.

(6) That he knew or had reason to believe that the property was stolen property.

Onus.—It is for the prosecution to prove guilty knowledge. The onus of proof never passes to the accused.¹⁸

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Where the accused is apprehended soon after a dacoity, with part of the plunder in his possession, there is as good ground for charging him with the dacoity as with having received or retained with guilty knowledge, and he ought to be charged in the alternative form.¹⁹ But when stolen property is found in the possession of dacoits, the offence of 'knowingly having it in possession' is to be considered included in the original one of dacoity, unless there are circumstances clearly separating the one crime from the other, e.g., length of time or distance.²⁰ Separate convictions and sentences under s. 395 and this section with respect to the same property are, therefore, obviously improper.²¹ It is quite meaningless to convict the accused both under s. 395 and this section with regard to the evidence about the finding of certain articles in their possession. If the jury are prepared to draw an inference from the fact that a particular person is a thief there would be no difficulty in convicting him under s. 395, when it is proved that the actual property was stolen in the course of a dacoity. If they are not so satisfied, the position becomes very different because there being no evidence from which a jury could be asked to say that these individual accused knew or had reason to believe that the stolen properties were transferred by the commission of dacoity. If the charge under s. 395 failed the only alternative would be one under s. 411.²²

Sentence.—A sentence of transportation under this section and s. 59 cannot exceed ten years.²³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, dishonestly received [or retained] stolen property, to wit—, belonging to one AB, knowing or having reason to believe that the possession of the same had been transferred by the commission of dacoity; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 412 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

413. Whoever habitually receives or deals in property which Habitually dealing in stolen property. he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

¹⁶ Vide s. 24, sup.

¹⁷ Jogeshur Bagdee, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 73 [109]; Bishoo Manjee, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 16; Samiuddin, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Daji Mahadhu, (1895) Cr. No. 19 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 756; Surendra, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 639; Meghu Chamar, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 911, [1942] AIR (P) 439 (1); Sheo Bux Singh, [1945] O. W. N. 118, 46 Cr. L. J. 600; Narayan Dinba, [1946] N. L. J. 566, 47 Cr. L. J. 822.

¹⁸ Daud Shaikh, (1935) 40 C. W. N. 159, 62

C. L. J. 257, 37 Cr. L. J. 976.

¹⁹ Motee Jolaha, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 66; Cassy Mul, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 10.

²⁰ Abool Hoosein, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 48; Shahabut Sheikh, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 42.

²¹ Bahiru, (1886) Cr. R. No. 65 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 312.

²² Abdul Jabbar Molla, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 468, [1944] AIR (C) 39.

²³ Mohanundo Bhundary, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

COMMENT.

This section punishes severely the common receiver or professional dealer in stolen property. One who casually receives stolen property is punished under the two preceding sections according to the taint attaching to the property.

In order to support a conviction of being an habitual receiver of stolen property, it must be shown that the property was received on different occasions and on different dates. A person cannot be said to be an habitual receiver of stolen goods who may receive the proceeds of a number of different robberies from a number of different thieves on the same day.²⁴ Because the "very essence of that offence... is the habitual, that is to say, constant, receipt of or dealing in goods which the prisoner knew or had reason to believe were stolen".²⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question is stolen property.

(2) That the accused received it or dealt in it.

(3) That he did so habitually.

(4) That he did so knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen property.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Trial for offences under ss. 411 and 413.—An accused person cannot be tried at the same trial for receiving or retaining (s. 411), and habitually receiving or dealing in (s. 413), stolen property. The proper course is to try the accused first for the offence under s. 411, and, if he is convicted, to try him under s. 413, putting in evidence the previous convictions under s. 411, and proving the finding of the rest of the property in respect of which no separate charge under s. 411 could be made or tried by reason of the provisions of s. 453 of the Criminal Procedure Code.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the ----day of----, at----, were a habitual receiver or dealer in property, which you knew (or had reason to believe) to be stolen property, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 413 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

414. Whoever voluntarily assists in concealing or disposing of or making away with property¹ which he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Assisting in concealment of stolen property.

COMMENT.

This section punishes those acts of receiving or retaining stolen property which do not come under the purview of ss. 411, 412 and 413.

Scope.—This section is intended to apply to cases where there has not been such a possession as would support an indictment against the party, as a receiver, under s. 411. "When a person is shown to stand in such a relation to stolen property as falls short of possession by him of such property, his manner of dealing with the property may warrant a charge of assisting in concealing or disposing of or making away with the property, with a guilty knowledge".² The Bombay High Court in a case held that the section applied only where there was no actual receipt of the property.³ But subsequently it has dissented from this view and has held that a person receiving stolen articles could be convicted of concealing or disposing of them.⁴

²⁴ Baburam Kansari, (1891) 19 Cal. 190.

²⁵ Per Norris and Beverley, JJ., in ibid. p. 191.

¹ Uttom Koondoo, (1882) 8 Cal. 634.

² Per Plowden, J., in Khona, (1879) P. R. No. 31 of 1879, at p. 84.

³ Alu Kala, (1891) Unrep. Cr. C. 553, Cr. R. No. 28 of 1891; (1868) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 13, 1 Weir 409; Subha Chand, (1881) P. R. No. 39 of 1881.

⁴ Abdul Gani, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1374-40 Bom. 878.

Ingredients.—This section requires two things :—

1. Voluntary assistance in concealing or disposing of or making away with property.

2. Knowledge or reason to believe that such property is stolen property.

1. 'Voluntarily assists in concealing or disposing of or making away with property'.—As to the meaning of 'voluntarily', see s. 39, supra. The words 'disposing of' must be interpreted in the light of the words they are associated with, viz., 'concealing' and 'making away with', and cannot be taken to include restoring to the owners. They cannot be divorced from their context. The intention of the section is to punish persons who subsequent to the commission of the offence either conceal it or make away with it by destroying or otherwise disposing of it. The section is intended to penalise persons who deal with stolen property in such a way that it becomes impossible to identify it or use it as evidence. It cannot apply to the case of a person spending money stolen by another.⁵ Where the accused was convicted of having voluntarily assisted in concealing stolen railway pins in a certain person's house and field, with a view to having such innocent person punished as an offender, it was held that the Magistrate was right in convicting and punishing the accused for the two separate offences of fabricating false evidence for use in a stage of a judicial proceeding under s. 193, and of voluntarily assisting in concealing stolen property under this section.⁶ Where the accused was found to have restored to the owners jewellery believed to have been stolen by his son, and then to save his son from punishment denied all knowledge of the matter, and on this ground was convicted under this section, it was held that the accused had committed no offence.⁷

The accused was the driver of a taxi, which was carrying several persons who had hired it. While on its way the taxi stopped at a place for some reason, not known, and two of the passengers got down from the taxi and within a distance of about 3½ yards from the taxi they suddenly and without premeditation attacked, injured and robbed a man of his purse containing about Rs. 50. The robbers then boarded the taxi, and the driver, in spite of the cries of the victim, drove away as fast as he could. It was held that the driver assisted the robbers in making away with the money so robbed and had committed this offence.⁸

2. 'Knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property'.—The person voluntarily assisting in concealing or disposing of or making away with property must have a definite knowledge that such property was stolen property.

"The word 'believe'... is a very much stronger word than 'suspect,' and it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing must be stolen property". "It was not sufficient [in such a case] to show that the accused was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient enquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired".⁹ The mere fact that jewellery handed over to the accused for sale by a European soldier was such as was usually worn by Indian females, and a European is not expected to own it, was held, standing by itself, not sufficient to support the finding that the accused believed or had reason to believe that the jewellery was stolen.¹⁰ See also s. 26, supra, as to the meaning of 'reason to believe'.

It is not necessary to establish that the property was the subject-matter of any particular theft; but it must be shown that it was the subject-matter of some theft or other. The essence of this section is the concealment of stolen property which the accused knew or had reason to believe to be stolen property. If, therefore, an accused thinking that an article, which is in his possession, is stolen property, tries to conceal that property, when as a matter of fact it is not stolen property at all but property honestly come by, he does not commit an offence under this section. The fact that

⁵ Amar Nath, (1935) 36 Cr. L. J. 1459.

⁶ Rameshwar Rai, (1877) 1 All. 379.

⁷ Nga Yan E, (1910) 1 U. B. R. 8, 11 Cr. L. J. 493.

⁸ Hari Singh, [1940] 2 Cal. 9.

⁹ Per Melvill, J., in Rango Timaji, (1880) 6 Bom. 402, 403, followed in Kanniappa Naicker, [1913] M. W. N. 696, 14 Cr. L. J. 591; Sankara Narayana Chetti, (1916) 4 L. W. 53, 17 Cr. L. J. 312, [1917] AIR (M) 418; Muhammad Ibrahim, (1915) 17 Cr. L. J. 25; Abdur Rahim, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1144, [1927] AIR (N) 40.

¹⁰ Gian Chand, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 572, 33 Cr. L. J. 764, [1932] AIR (L) 434.

the property dealt with is stolen property may in some instances be inferred indirectly from circumstantial evidence as from the way in which it is dealt with by the party dealing with it, but the circumstances must be such as would justify the conclusion that the property is actually stolen property.¹¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question is stolen property.¹²

(2) That the accused assisted in concealing or disposing of, or making away with, such property.

This section does not impose on the prosecution the requirement that it should in all cases trace the owners of the property stolen. All that is needed is to show that the accused voluntarily assisted in concealing or disposing of property which he had reason to believe to be stolen property.¹³

(3) That he did as in (2) voluntarily.

(4) That he knew or had reason to believe that the property was stolen property.¹⁴

When persons are charged with assisting in concealing or disposing of property which they know or have reason to believe to be stolen, the nature of the property, as well as the circumstances under which it was being made away with, must be taken into consideration.¹⁵ An accused person's merely pointing out the place where some of the stolen property is recovered and his making an admission before the police of having concealed it there, which admission is not admissible in evidence, are not sufficient for convicting him under this section in the absence of any other independent proof connecting him with the commission of the crime.¹⁶

Where an accused pleads guilty and admits himself to be the thief and not merely the receiver, the conviction should obviously be under this section and not under s. 411.¹⁷

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily if property is not worth more than Rs. 50.

The same person cannot be properly convicted for theft and for attempting to conceal the stolen property¹⁸ or for theft and for dishonestly disposing of the same property.¹⁹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, voluntarily assisted in concealing (or disposing of, or making away with) property, to wit—, which you knew (or had reason to believe) to be stolen property, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 414 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Sentence.—Where an accused is convicted of an offence under ss. 411 and 414, it is not permissible to pass on him separate and consecutive sentences under each head of the charges, but in such a case only one sentence must be passed on him for both offences.²⁰ The charges under these sections should ordinarily be made alternatively, and not cumulatively.²¹

¹¹ Samachari, (1923) 45 M. L. J. 728, 18 L. W. 743, 25 Cr. L. J. 790, [1924] AIR (M) 350.

¹² Vide s. 410, sup.

¹³ Budhankhan Inayathkhan, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 893, 13 Cr. L. J. 793; Abdul Gani, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1873, 49 Bom. 873.

¹⁴ Rameshar Rai, (1877) 1 All. 379.

¹⁵ Harishmakar Fakirbhai, (1865) 2 B. H. C. 130.

¹⁶ Kaka Singh, (1908) 9 P. L. R. 400, 8 Cr.

L.C.—66

L. J. 460.

¹⁷ Khair Din, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 823, [1940] AIR (L) 319.

¹⁸ Zinda, (1896) P. R. No. 15 of 1896.

¹⁹ Nga Po Kyow, (1885) S. J. L. B. 334.

²⁰ Sakharam, (1889) Cr. R. No. 8 of 1889, Unrep. Cr. C. 449; Alu Kala, (1891) Cr. R. No. 28 of 1891, Unrep. Cr. C. 553.

²¹ Yeshwant, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. J. 125.

Of Cheating.

415. Whoever, by deceiving any person,¹ fraudulently or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property,² or intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything³ which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause⁴ damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property,⁵ is said to "cheat".

Explanation.—A dishonest concealment of facts is a deception within the meaning of this section.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, by falsely pretending to be in the Civil Service, intentionally deceives Z, and thus dishonestly induces Z to let him have on credit goods for which he does not mean to pay. A cheats.

(b) A, by putting a counterfeit mark on an article, intentionally deceives Z into a belief that this article was made by a certain celebrated manufacturer, and thus dishonestly induces Z to buy and pay for the article. A cheats.

(c) A, by exhibiting to Z a false sample of an article, intentionally deceives Z into believing that the article corresponds with the sample, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to buy and pay for the article. A cheats.

(d) A, by tendering in payment for an article a bill on a house with which A keeps no money, and by which A expects that the bill will be dishonoured, intentionally deceives Z, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to deliver the article, intending not to pay for it. A cheats.

(e) A, by pledging as diamonds articles which he knows are not diamonds intentionally deceives Z, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to lend money. A cheats.

(f) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A means to repay any money that Z may lend to him and thereby dishonestly induces Z to lend him money, A not intending to repay it. A cheats.

(g) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A means to deliver to Z a certain quantity of indigo plant which he does not intend to deliver, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to advance money upon the faith of such delivery. A cheats; but if A, at the time of obtaining the money, intends to deliver the indigo plant, and afterwards breaks his contract and does not deliver it, he does not cheat, but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract.

(h) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A has performed A's part of a contract made with Z, which he has not performed, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to pay money. A cheats.

(i) A sells and conveys an estate to B. A, knowing that in consequence of such sale he has no right to the property, sells or mortgages the same to Z, without disclosing the fact of the previous sale and conveyance to B, and receives the purchase or mortgage money from Z. A cheats.

COMMENT.

The definition of cheating contains two parts. First comes the main part "whoever, by deceiving any person..." words which obviously apply to the whole section. Then comes the first part "fraudulently, or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property". Then comes part 2, which is an alternative to sub-part 1, viz., "or intentionally induces...mind, reputation or property". Then come the closing words "is said to cheat". The words "and which act or omission...reputation or property" form a portion of part 2 and are not applicable to part 1 at all.²² The definition of the offence of cheating embraces some cases in which no transfer of property is occasioned by the deception and some in which such a transfer occurs ; for these cases generally a general provision is made in s. 417 of the Code. For the cases in which property is transferred a more specific provision is made by s. 420.²³ But in an earlier case it has been laid down that an offence of cheating accompanied by a delivery of property may be punished under either of the sections : but where the case appears to be of a serious nature steps must be taken to send it to the Court of Session for trial under s. 420.²⁴

²² Ishar Das, (1908) P. R. No. 10 of 1908, 7 Cr. L. J. 290.

The offence of cheating is not committed if a third party, on whom no deception has been practised, sustains pecuniary loss in consequence of the accused's act.²⁵

The authors of the Code say : " We propose to make it cheating to obtain property by deception in all cases where the property is fraudulently obtained ; that is to say, in all cases where the intention of the person who has by deceit obtained the property was to cause a distribution of property which the law pronounces to be a wrongful distribution, and in no other case whatever. However immoral a deception may be, we do not consider it as an offence against the rights of property if its object is only to cause a distribution of property which the law recognizes as rightful. . .

" We propose to punish as guilty of cheating a man who, by false representations, obtains a loan of money, not meaning to repay it ; a man who, by false representations, obtains an advance of money, not meaning to perform the service or to deliver the article for which the advance is given ; a man who, by falsely pretending to have performed work for which he was hired, obtains pay to which he is not entitled.

" In all these cases there is deception. In all, the deceiver's object is fraudulent. He intends in all these cases to acquire or retain wrongful possession of that, to which some other person has a better claim, and which that other person is entitled to recover by law. In all these cases, therefore, the object has been wrongful gain, attended with wrongful loss. In all, therefore, there has, according to our definition, been cheating ".¹

" In the definition of cheating in sec. 415 there are set forth two separate classes of acts which the person deceived may be induced to do. In the first place he may be induced to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property. In order to constitute the offence of cheating the person who induces another to do this class of acts must fraudulently or dishonestly induce the persons deceived to do that kind of act. The second class of acts set forth in the section is the doing or omitting to do anything which the person deceived would not do or omit to do if he were not so deceived. In order to constitute the offence of cheating with regard to this class of acts the person who induces another to do them must intentionally induce him to do them. In the first class of cases the inducing must be fraudulent or dishonest. In the second class of acts the inducing must be intentional ".²

English law.—Whosoever shall by any false pretence obtain from any other person any chattel, money, or valuable security, with intent to defraud, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.³ There are two vital points in which the English law differs from the Code :—

(1) A promise as to future conduct not intended to be kept is not by itself a cheating.⁴ Under the Code this will amount to cheating : see ill. (f) and (g).

(2) The object of the accused must be to obtain any chattel, money, or valuable security. The definition of cheating as given in this section is much wider and includes damage or harm to a person in body, mind, reputation, or property.

False pretence in English law is narrower in its application than what is contemplated by 'cheating' in this section. It does not cover cases dealing with the second part of the definition of cheating but concerns only where delivery of chattel, money, or valuable security is obtained.⁵

²³ Bavaji, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 96, Cr. R. September 23, 1875.

²⁴ Bapu, (1864) Unrep. Cr. C. 2.

²⁵ Sundar Singh, (1904) P. R. No. 25 of 1904, 2 Cr. L.J. 37.

¹ Note N, pp. 164, 166.

² Per Geidt, J., in Kishori Lal Chatterji,

(1905) 9 C. W. N. 764, 767, 2 Cr. L. J. 422, 427.

³ Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vic., c. 96), s. 88.

⁴ 62 & 63 Vic., c. 22, s. 3.

⁵ Thakur Mandal, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 65, 67, [1942] AIR (P) 53.

Scope.—There is nothing in this section to exclude from the scope of its provisions cheating which has relation to immoveable property. The representation which must be fraudulent or dishonest and which must have induced the person deceived to deliver property may as well be perpetrated in relation to immoveable property as to moveable property. It is true that so far as that part of the section which relates to dishonest concealment of facts is concerned, it must be read subject to the qualification that there is no duty on a seller to disclose defects in title in immoveable property which the buyer with ordinary care could discover.⁶

Cheating and breach of contract.—The distinction between mere breach of contract and cheating depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of the alleged inducement which may be judged by his subsequent act but of which the subsequent act is not the sole criterion. Mere breach of contract cannot give rise to a criminal prosecution.⁷

Cheating and extortion.—The offence of cheating must, like that of extortion, be committed by the wrongful obtaining of a consent. The difference is, that the extortioner obtains the consent by intimidation, and the cheat by deception.⁸

Cheating and criminal breach of trust and criminal misappropriation.—Cheating differs from the last two offences in the fact that the cheat takes possession of the property by deception. There is wrongful gain or loss in both cases and in both cases there is an inducement to deliver property. Cheating is a complete offence by itself and is not a form of criminal breach of trust. A person who tricks another into delivering property to him bears no resemblance to a trustee in the ordinary acceptance of that term.⁹

Ingredients.—This section requires—

1. Deception of any person.

2. (a) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person

(i) to deliver any property to any person; or

(ii) to consent that any person shall retain any property, or

(b) intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property.

1. 'Deceiving any person'.—It means causing to believe what is false; or misleading as to a matter of fact, or leading into error.¹⁰ The person deceived need not be a definite person to whom the false representation is made. To constitute cheating there must be a deception which must precede and induce under the first part of the section, the delivery or retention of property or the act or omission referred to in the second part. Such deception may be by words or conduct. As to what is sufficient to constitute a deception must be decided in each case on its own facts.¹¹

When a person fraudulently represents as an existing fact that which is not an existing fact, he commits this offence. A wilful misrepresentation of a definite fact with intent to defraud, cognizable by the senses—as where a seller represents the quantity of coals to be fourteen cwt., whereas it is in fact only eight cwt., but so packed as to look more; or where the seller, by manoeuvring, contrives to pass off tasters of cheese as if extracted from the cheese offered for sale, whereas it is not—is cheating.¹²

Where a charge of cheating rests upon a representation which is impugned as false and which relates not to an existing fact but to a certain future event, it must be shown that the representation was false to the accused's knowledge at the time when it was made. It is but little to the purpose to show that in fact the representation has turned out to be untrue.¹³

⁶ Shivnath Sahibram v. Jethanand Moorijmal, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 510, [1937] AIR (S) 56.

⁷ Sheosagar Pandey, (1935) 16 P. L. T. 553, 37 Cr. L. J. 38; Ram Bharose Singh, [1926] O. W. N. 754, 37 Cr. L. J. 907, [1936] AIR (O) 372.

⁸ Note N, p. 163.

⁹ John McIver, (1936) 43 L. W. 548, 70 M. L. J. 635, [1936] M. W. N. 281, 37 Cr. L. J.

657, [1936] AIR (M) 353, F.B.

¹⁰ Dr. Murray's New English Dictionary; Woolley, (1850) 4 Cox 193.

¹¹ Rammath Kalapahar, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 524, 3 Cr. L. J. 160.

¹² Goss, (1860) 8 Cox 262.

¹³ Ebrahimji Mulla Jeevanji, (1912) 15 Bom. L. R. 297, 14 Cr. L. J. 232.

It is not necessary that the false pretence should be made in express words. if it can be inferred from all the circumstances attending the obtaining of the property.¹⁴ Fraudulent intent is absolutely essential. An illegal demand if not fraudulent does not amount to cheating. The accused, who was the landlord of the complainant, sent for the latter, and on the latter appearing demanded payment of rent. The complainant left for home to fetch the money requesting the accused and his clerk to have in the meantime his dues worked out and have a receipt written. He returned soon with Rs. 90 and paid the same to the accused, who drove him away refusing to give a receipt or return the money unless and until Rs. 25 more were paid to make up the sum, the said amount having been deducted towards certain subscription. It was held that no criminal offence was committed.¹⁵

The deceit referred to in this section and its ill. (f) may be by conduct. The nature of the transaction itself may imply an assertion. The words "not intending to pay" in ill. (f) to this section cover a case where the accused will not be able to pay except for a miracle.¹⁶

Where a person knows that the statements made by another are false, but still acts upon them with a view to entrap that person, it will not amount to cheating but will amount to attempt to cheat. A man may be guilty of an attempt to cheat although the person he attempts to cheat is forewarned and is therefore not cheated.¹⁷ M wrote a letter to the Currency Office at Calcutta, enclosing the halves of two Government currency notes, stating that the other halves were lost, and inquiring what steps should be taken for the recovery of the value of the notes. The Currency Office, having, upon inquiry, discovered that the amount of the notes had been paid to the holder of the other halves, and that the notes had been withdrawn from circulation and cancelled, sent M the usual form of claim to be filled up and returned to it. It appeared from the evidence that the Currency Office never contemplated paying M in respect of the notes. The form was filled up and signed by M and returned by him to the Currency Office. It was held that, although there was no intention on the part of the Currency Office to pay the amount of the notes, M was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹⁸ The accused described himself as the principal of the 'British Health Institute' and issued advertisements stating that arrangements had been made for testing urine, if desired, at a nominal fee of 1s. 6d. Two individuals, who suspected the genuineness of the advertisement forwarded to the accused a solution of water with colouring ingredients mixed with soap, and asked for an analysis of their "water". Letters were received from the accused advising a course of treatment to cost not less than one guinea in each case. It was held that the accused was guilty of attempting to obtain money by false pretences although the persons to whom the false pretence was made knew it to be false.¹⁹ Where the accused posed that he could double currency notes and a police-officer knowing that he could not do so but with a view to get him convicted gave him some notes and caught him while, after going through a mock process of doubling notes, he tried to substitute some pages of a book in their place, it was held that the accused went far beyond the stage of preparation and was liable to be convicted of the offence of attempting to cheat.²⁰

It is not necessary that there should be false representation by words. Where the accused wore a khaki shirt and threatened to take the complainant to the thana, it was held that it could be inferred that the accused gave the complainant to understand that he was a police-officer (which he was not) and that he had the authority to take him to the thana (which authority he did not possess) and that the accused's action amounted to deception.²¹

¹⁴ Maria Giles, (1865) 10 Cox 44; Khoda Bux v. Bakeya Mundari, (1905) 32 Cal. 941; Ram Chand v. Jai Dial, (1912) 13 P. L. R. 345, 13 Cr. L. J. 456, on remand, (1915) 16 Cr. L. J. 657.

¹⁵ Kumeda Charan Ghose, (1911) 15 C. L. J. 515, 13 Cr. L. J. 512. See also Birraj Marwari, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 294, 14 Cr. L. J. 120; Nathuram, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 442; Deodhari Mahto, (1920) 2 P. L. T. 211, 22 Cr. L. J. 169, [1921] AIR (P) 80.

¹⁶ Mohsinbhai, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 313, 56

Bom. 204.

¹⁷ Heusler, (1870) 11 Cox 570; The Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder Mitter, (1888) 16 Cal. 310.

¹⁸ The Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder Mitter, ibid.

¹⁹ Light, (1915) 24 Cox 718.

²⁰ Raghunath alias Ram Singh, (1940) 16 Luck. 194.

²¹ Ali Hussain, (1932) 56 C. L. J. 73, 34 Cr. L. J. 530, [1933] AIR (C) 308.

Fraudulent prospectus.—Where a prospectus put forward a highly speculative and palpably unworkable scheme, but made no false statements and concealed nothing and merely appealed to the gambling instinct, and the members of the public who contributed to the scheme were either too obtuse to realise its weakness which was patent or actuated by a vague hope that their money would somehow be repaid before the cash came, it was held that no conviction for the offence of cheating could be founded on the issue of such a prospectus alone.²² In order to make a company prospectus fraudulent, it is not necessary that there should be a false representation in it, even if every word is true. The suppression of material facts may render it fraudulent. To judge its effects, it should be read as a whole. If two or more persons agree to issue a prospectus and by the concealment of facts to deceive the public and fraudulently or dishonestly induce them to take shares in a company, the offence of conspiracy to cheat is completed.²³

Snowball scheme.—Promoters of financial snowball scheme, which could run only so long as there would be a continuous uninterrupted and enormously progressive increase in subscribers, but which could not go on indefinitely, would not be guilty of cheating, in the absence of false representations and dishonest concealment of fact either in the prospectus issued or in the conduct of the promoters, calculated to deceive the public and thereby induce it to contribute money to the scheme. When, however, a prospectus states that payment to the subscribers would be possible by investing the money contributed in some lucrative businesses mentioned therein, which it was never the intention of the promoters to start, they would be guilty under this section.²⁴

It is immaterial whether prosecutor has means of detecting fraud or not.—A person who fraudulently offered a £1 bank-note as a note for £5 and got it changed upon that representation, was held guilty of obtaining money by false pretences, although the prosecutor might, by the exercise of reasonable caution, have detected the imposition.²⁵ The question in every case is, whether, in truth, the false statement did impose upon the prosecutor or not.¹

2. 'Fraudulently or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property . . . or to consent that any person shall retain any property'.—As to the meaning of 'fraudulently', see s. 25, and of 'dishonestly' s. 24, supra. The word 'fraudulently' being used in the section together with the word 'dishonestly', must mean, if it is to have any meaning at all, something different from 'dishonestly'.² The words 'fraudulently' and 'dishonestly' do not govern the whole of the definition of cheating. The section is divided into two parts. Under the first part the person deceived must have been fraudulently or dishonestly induced to deliver any property to any other person, or to consent that the said other person should retain any property. The second part provides for the case of a person who by deceiving another intentionally induces the person so deceived to do an act which causes or is likely to cause damage or harm, although the deceiver has not acted fraudulently or dishonestly.³ The evidence must establish the existence of a fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of the commission of the act in respect of which the cheating is alleged.⁴ Once a person obtains possession of property by a trick, the offence of cheating is complete.⁵ To describe consequences of an act to be more serious than, in fact, they were likely to be, may be to deceive, but is not cheating if done without any fraudulent or dishonest intention. Thus, to induce a son to pay his father's debts, by acting merely on his fear of consequences to his father, is not cheating.⁶ A owed B a debt, of which B could not get payment. C, a servant of B, went to A's wife and obtained two sacks of malt of her, saying that B had bought them of A. C knew this to be false, and took the malt to B, his master, to enable him to pay himself the debt. It was held that if C did not ²² Radha Ballav Pal, (1939) 43 C. W. N. 388, 40 Cr. L. J. 600; Maung Ba Thwin, (1937) 40 Cr. L. J. 20.

²³ Srinivasan, [1944] M. W. N. 312.

²⁴ Hari Das Burat, [1939] 2 Cal. 81.

²⁵ Jessop, (1858) 7 Cox 399.

¹ Woolley, (1850) 4 Cox 193.

² Per Henderson, J., in Baburam Rai, (1905)

32 Cal. 775, 779.

³ Mohabat, (1889) P. R. No. 20 of 1889.

⁴ Viraswami, (1881) 1 Weir 478; G. W. Dick, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 1258, 16 Cr. L. J. 49, [1914] AIR (A) 538.

⁵ Arab, [1942] Kar. 284.

⁶ Raj Coomarr Banerjee, (1864) W. R. (Gap. No.) (Cr.) 25.

intend to defraud A, but merely to put into his master's power to compel A to pay him a just debt, C ought not to be convicted of obtaining the malt by false pretences.⁷

A concealment of facts cannot be said to be dishonest unless the accused was under an obligation to disclose the facts concealed.⁸ There is no obligation on the seller to disclose any defect unless it is a defect which the buyer could not with ordinary care discover. The existence of prior mortgage or the claims of a coparcener of a Hindu joint family are defects which the buyer could discover with ordinary care and the failure on the part of the seller to disclose them does not therefore amount to cheating.⁹ Where a loan was made upon certain property burdened with a charge on the representation that the property was free of any charge and the questions specifically asked were answered falsely, and the charge upon the property was not a registered charge, it was held that it could not be said that the creditor could have discovered this charge by reference to the registers, and that as it was a false misrepresentation deliberately made for the purpose of deception it amounted to cheating.¹⁰

A person who sent an insured cover, purporting to contain Government currency notes, but which, on receipt by the addressee, was found to contain only a letter advising the despatch of notes, and pieces of waste-paper, was held not guilty of cheating. The Court observed: "All that the person deceived has been induced to do is that he has signed a receipt acknowledging the delivery of a cover. He has not acknowledged by that the receipt of any sum of money alleged to be contained in the cover. That being so, we are unable to say that the charge of cheating has been brought home to the accused."¹¹ In response to a serious demand by complainant for repayment of a loan which accused had taken from him some time back, accused addressed an insured cover to the complainant. On opening this cover the complainant discovered that instead of Government currency notes it contained a number of Khilafat Bonds. Thereupon he reported the matter to the post office. In the course of an inquiry accused stated that he had sent Government currency notes and not the Khilafat Bonds. It was held that no offence under this section was committed. Sulaiman, J., observed: "The mere fact that a cover insured for a certain amount is sent raises no presumption in law that that cover contains the necessary amount of Government Currency Notes. It is, therefore, not easily conceivable what is the thing which the complainant would have done or omitted to do if the fraud contemplated by the accused had succeeded. The only thing that can be said is that the accused imagined that he would have had some sort of a proof that the debt had been paid off. Then the offence would be an attempt to fabricate false evidence within the meaning of s. 192 of the Indian Penal Code. The accused, however, has not been charged with any such offence."¹² Where the accused desiring to evade payment of his debt sent to his creditor a registered and insured cover containing only blank pieces of paper in order to obtain from him an acknowledgment of receipt which could subsequently be used in order to evade payment, it was held that the offence of cheating was actually committed, for where the creditor signed the acknowledgment which he would not have done if he had not been so deceived he committed an act which was likely to cause damage or harm to him within the meaning of this section and that the commission of the offence of cheating was not postponed until the creditor had attempted to use the acknowledgment as proof of payment. A person is guilty of cheating if by deceiving his creditor he obtains from him a document, not necessarily a legal quitance or a valuable security, but such a document as is likely to facilitate the evasion of payment by the debtor and to cause embarrassment to the creditor when he seeks to enforce his claim.¹³ The accused presented two letters to ⁷ Williams, (1836) 7 C. & P. 354.

⁸ Paruchury Venkatappayya, (1916) 18 Cr. L. J. 40, [1917] AIR (M) 732.

⁹ The Karachi Municipality v. Bhograj, (1915) 9 S. L. R. 97, 16 Cr. L. J. 706, [1915] AIR (S) 21.

¹⁰ Shivnath Sahibram v. Jethanand Moorijmal, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 110, [1937] AIR (S) 56.

¹¹ Raman Behari Roy, (1923) 50 Cal. 849, 852; Vaithianathaswami Aiyar, (1926) 51 M. L. J. 800, 24 L. W. 725, 38 Cr. L. J. 70, [1927] AIR (M) 199.

¹² Tula Ram, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 865, 867,

868, 26 Cr. L. J. 209, [1924] AIR (A) 205. Sadho Lal, (1916) 1 P. L. J. 391, 17 Cr. L. J. 272, [1917] AIR (P) 699, commented on. See Vaithianathaswami Aiyar, (1926) 51 M. L. J. 800, 24 L. W. 725, 38 Cr. L. J. 70, [1927] AIR (M) 199, on the point of an offence under ss. 193, 511.

¹³ Bajjnath Sahay, (1932) 14 P. L. T. 48, 34 Cr. L. J. 1020, [1933] AIR (P) 183, approving Sadho Lal, (1916) 1 P. L. J. 391, 17 Cr. L. J. 272, [1917] AIR (P) 699.

be registered at a post office for despatch to two different places. As the letters were said to contain currency notes, one was insured for Rs. 1,000 and the other for Rs. 2,000. When the letters were opened by their respective addressees they were found to contain waste-paper. The accused's defence was that the letters he handed in to the post office were stolen and the letters sent to the addressees were fraudulently substituted by some one in the post office. He offered a reward of Rs. 500 for the discovery of the person who had extracted the currency notes from the packets. On the evidence the High Court concluded that the currency notes were not put into the letters tendered by the accused and that he was therefore guilty of offences under ss. 420, 511, and 193.¹⁴ The former Chief Court of the Punjab also held, where the accused, who was indebted to the complainant, despatched to the latter an envelope insured for Rs. 530 containing two pieces of waste paper, intending to use the receipt for the same as evidence of payment of Rs. 530 towards the liquidation of his debt to the complainant, that the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹⁵

Where a person receives moneys due to him from another which that other person pays, with the intention not to credit the money to the real debt due, but to deceive him into paying money due on a real debt and keeps the money under the pretence of crediting it to a debt which the other person did not owe upon a bond which he did not execute, the person is guilty of cheating.¹⁶ A charge of cheating can be sustained even though the promise which induced the delivery of property was a promise to do a criminal act, or an act forbidden by law, and one which could not form a cause of action in a civil Court.¹⁷

Where a person orders goods on credit and promises expressly or impliedly to pay for them on a particular date, then if the prosecution proves that at the date of the contract the circumstances of the accused were such that he must have known that it was practically impossible that he would be able to pay for the goods, the offence of cheating is committed. The mere fact that the accused was in embarrassed circumstances is not enough. A man who is in embarrassed circumstances is not bound to disclose all his circumstances to the people with whom he deals on credit. But he is not entitled to make any untrue statement. If any question is put to him he must answer truthfully; if he does not, he is guilty of cheating. The question whether there was an intention to deceive must be answered as at the date when the contract is made.¹⁸

Cheque.—The act of drawing a cheque for payment of goods purchased implies at least three statements as to the state of affairs existing at the time when the cheque is drawn, first, that the drawer has an account with the bank in question; secondly, that he has authority to draw on it for the amount shown on the cheque; and, thirdly, that the cheque, as drawn, is a valid order for the payment of that amount, or that in the ordinary course of events the cheque, on future presentation, will be honoured. It does not, however, imply any representation that the drawer already has money in the bank to the amount shown in the cheque, for he may either have authority to overdraw, or have an honest intention of paying in the necessary money before the cheque can be presented.¹⁹ A post-dated cheque in payment of goods already received is a mere promise to pay on a future date and the fact that the cheque is dishonoured, which amounts only to a broken promise, is not a criminal offence. The accused was a motor bus owner and used to take on credit petrol and oil from the complainant. He gave a post-dated cheque which was dishonoured by the bank. Three months after he was prosecuted for cheating. It was held that no offence had been committed.²⁰ Giving of a cheque in lieu of money already due, with the knowledge that the drawer has no funds in the Bank does not amount to an offence but is only a civil wrong.²¹ But if ¹⁴ Mahipat, (1924) Criminal Appeal No. 453 of 1924, decided by Macleod, C. J., and Pratt, J. (Crump, J., dissenting), on November 28 and December 9, 1924, (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁵ Arura, (1912) P. R. No. 20 of 1913, 16 Cr. L. J. 436.

¹⁶ Ramuath Kalapahar, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 524, 3 Cr. L. J. 160. Mookerjee, J., expressed a contrary opinion.

¹⁷ Meera, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 362, [1917] AIR

(LB) 105.

¹⁸ Mohsinbhai, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 313, 56 Bom. 204.

¹⁹ Kanwar Sain, [1938] Lah. 662.

²⁰ Chidambaram Chettiar v. Shanmugham Pillai, [1937] 2 M. L. J. 878, [1937] M. W. N. 999, 46 L. W. 629, 39 Cr. L. J. 261, [1938] AIR (M) 129.

²¹ Ratra v. Ganesh Dass, (1939) 41 P. L. R. 869, 41 Cr. L. J. 394.

a person gives a cheque in lieu of some goods and it is dishonoured and from the circumstances it could be presumed that he must have been aware that the cheque would be dishonoured so that the failure to meet payment of the cheque was not accidental, it was held that he was guilty under s. 420.²²

'Any property to any person'.—It is no objection to an indictment for this offence that the thing obtained was not in existence at the time of cheating, provided the thing when made is delivered under the influence thereof.²³

Whether an article is or is not 'property' does not depend upon its possessing a money or market value. If it has some special value for the person, or persons concerned, it is "property", even though its value cannot be measured in money.²⁵ A health certificate is property within the meaning of this section.¹ So is a certificate of having passed an examination,² or a ticket entitling its holder to enter an examination room,³ or a railway ticket,⁴ or a warrant⁵ or a motor car driving license in the possession of the licensing officer.⁶

Delivery to 'any person' includes even an agent, and the post office can be deemed to be such an agent.⁷

'To consent that any person shall retain any property'.—It is equally a cheat whether a deception causes a person fraudulently or dishonestly to acquire property by delivery, or to retain property already in his possession. If a man to whom property is lent or who is entrusted for a time with the charge of it deceives the owner and thereby induces him for some purpose of wrongful gain to the borrower or wrongful loss to the owner to allow the property to be retained in the borrower's possession, this amounts to cheating.⁸

Cases.—Inducing person deceived to deliver property.—Where a person hired certain property for use at a wedding, paying a portion of the hire, and giving a written promise to pay the balance of the hire, and to restore the property after the wedding, he being well aware that there was to be no wedding, and intending, when he got the property, to apply for its attachment in a civil suit in respect of an alleged claim;⁹ where the accused received a Government promissory note, promising to return certain jewels pledged to them but not intending to do so, and they subsequently claimed to retain the note for another debt alleged to be due to them by the sender;¹⁰ where a person obtained delivery of a valuable security under the inducement of a promise not intended to be kept and with fraudulent intention,¹¹ and where a person procured for another a motor driving license from the licensing officer without the latter undergoing the prescribed test,¹² this offence was held to have been committed.

The accused was alleged by the prosecution to have advertised that a work on English idioms by Robert S. Wilson, M.A., was ready, stating that the price was Rs. 2-4-0 and that intending purchasers might remit it by money order to Robert S. Wilson, Council House Street, Calcutta, to have then requested the postal authorities at Calcutta, by a letter signed Robert S. Wilson, to have the money orders re-directed to him as above at Rajam; to have similarly requested the post-master at Rajam to pay the money orders to his clerk Sheshgiri Rau; and to have subsequently received the value of money orders made out in favour of Robert S. Wilson, from the post master of Rajam, signing receipts as Sheshgiri Rau. Robert S. Wilson and Sheshgiri Rau were alleged to be fictitious persons, and it was alleged that the accused had no book on English idioms ready to be despatched to purchasers. It was held that the above allegations supported the charges of cheating and forgery.¹³

²² Kumar Sen, (1932) 8 Luck. 286.

²³ Martin, (1867) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 56.

²⁵ Local Government v. Gangaram, (1921) 18 N. L. R. 52, 23 Cr. L. J. 443, [1922] AIR (N) 229.

¹ Packianathan, (1919) 11 L. W. 368, 21 Cr. L. J. 478.

² Local Government v. Gangaram, (1921) 18 N. L. R. 52, 23 Cr. L. J. 443, [1922] AIR (N) 229.

³ Appasami, (1889) 12 Mad. 151.

⁴ Horace William Chapman, (1910) 4 Cr. App. R. 276.

⁵ Harishanker Gangaram, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 375, 1 Cr. L. J. 332.

⁶ Krishnan, [1947] 2 M. L. J. 380, 60 L. W. 690, [1947] M. W. N. 762.

⁷ Kaleek, [1927] M. W. N. 221, 52 M. L. J. 511, 28 Cr. L. J. 452, [1927] AIR (M) 544.

⁸ M. & M. 382.

⁹ Kadir Bux, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 16.

¹⁰ Sheodurshun Dass, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 17.

¹¹ (1880) 1 Weir 478.

¹² Krishnan, sup.

¹³ Pera Raju, (1889) 13 Mad. 27.

Complainant's firm had advanced money to the accused on the understanding that the accused would purchase rice from the outlying shops and ship and deliver the same at the firm's place of business, where it would be sold, the profits on the sale going to the accused and the accused being liable to pay to the complainant's firm the capital advanced with interest and a commission of one anna per maund of rice sold. The accused failed to deliver the rice within the stipulated time and was charged with cheating. The representations made by the accused to the complainant's firm when getting the advance were not entirely false, and it appeared that the accused had to some extent endeavoured to carry out the terms of the agreement, though he was also found to have converted a small portion of the money to his own use in paying off his own debts. It was held that the case was really one of breach of contract. The mere fact that the accused converted a small portion of the money to his own use was not in itself sufficient to prove that his intention, when he received the money from the complainant's firm, was dishonest or that he obtained it by a fraudulent misrepresentation of facts. The important question to be considered was whether the accused, when he took over the money from the complainant's firm, had any intention of performing the contract.¹⁴

The accused obtained an advance for which he gave a promissory note, stating that he had two boat-loads of paddy in the adjoining creek and that he would bring the paddy to the complainant for sale: he then absconded. It was held that the conviction under this section was good; that the facts warranted the inference that the accused, at the time of obtaining the advance, had no intention of performing his promise.¹⁵ The accused, who was the complainant's paddy-broker and regular paddy supplier, took from them advances for the purchase of paddy and gave promissory-notes for the advances in question. From time to time he had supplied paddy the total quantity of which, however, had not been sufficient to satisfy all the advances. He last obtained an advance of Rs. 4,000 when there was already due to the complainants a large sum on the previous advances, but only supplied a further small lot of paddy valued at Rs. 800, and was in consequence prosecuted in respect of that last advance. It was held that the facts did not warrant the inference that the accused, at the time of obtaining the advance, had no intention of performing his promise and that, in the absence of proof of any representation at the time on the part of the accused, which he knew, or had reason to believe, to be false, there was no offence of cheating committed.¹⁶

The accused, a judgment-debtor, applied for permission to raise the amount of the decree by a private transfer of his house, which had already been sold in execution of the decree. The application was refused. The accused mortgaged the house to the complainant, representing that he was empowered to mortgage the house in order to pay off the decretal amount due to the decree-holder. He got the mortgagee to pay the amount due to the decree-holder and received the balance himself. He did not enter appearance in Court and the sale was confirmed. The mortgagee, failing to get refund of the money paid to the accused, charged him with cheating. It was held that he was guilty of cheating.¹⁷

The accused was in charge of a mare belonging to C who had given it to him for sale. One L made an offer for the mare and insisted on the offer being communicated to the owner. The accused showed L a telegram which the latter understood to have come from C refusing the offer. He thereupon raised the offer and purchased the mare. Subsequently, he instituted these proceedings against the accused on the ground that deception was practised on him, but, when he was examined, stated that he would have paid the same price had he known that the mare belonged to the accused. It was held that no wrongful loss was caused to L by reason of the fact that he was induced to bid up to what he considered to be the full value of the mare; and that by merely placing before L the telegram which purported to have been received from C, the accused could not be said to have acted fraudulently.¹⁸

¹⁴ Dy. Legal Remembrancer v. Ijjatulla Kari, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 1005, 4 Cr. L. J. 154.

¹⁵ Poon v. Messrs. Mohr Brothers & Co., Ltd., (1911) 6 L. B. R. 38, 13 Cr. L. J. 50.

¹⁶ Maug Po u., (1923) 1 Ran. 397.

¹⁷ Ram Chand v. Jai Dial, (1912) 13 P. L. R. 345, 13 Cr. L. J. 456.

¹⁸ G. W. Dick, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 1258, 16 Cr. L. J. 49.

A and B went to C and B asked for a loan on the security of a ring seemingly, but not really, of gold. A assured C that B was an honest man, and thereby induced C to advance the money. B was convicted of cheating. It was held in revision that B's conviction was wrong as A's assurance was the effective inducement for C's advancing the money irrespective of the question whether B's dishonesty was or was not proved.¹⁹ The accused drew a hundi and borrowed money on it, without assuring himself that the drawee, with whom he had no previous dealings and who was not supplied with funds, would honour the same. The money so borrowed was spent by him on his own purposes. The hundi, when presented for payment, was dishonoured by the drawee. The accused, though apprised of the dishonouring, took no steps either to have the hundi honoured or to repay the money borrowed on the hundi, but made himself scarce. It was held that the accused was guilty of cheating.²⁰

Where a person induced a clerk under a false representation to deliver a warrant of attachment to him, and made on it an endorsement to his own advantage, and but for the false representation the clerk would not have parted with the warrant, it was held that the person committed the offence of cheating.²¹ The accused went to the house of the complainant and said that he was a tinner and asked for work. The complainant gave him some utensils to repair. The utensils were not returned and the accused was prosecuted. It was held that the accused was guilty of cheating and not of criminal breach of trust (s. 406).²²

Accused No. 1, who was one of the three partners in a trading firm, borrowed Rs. 500 from the complainant under a promise to repay them on the following day. On the appointed day, accused Nos. 2 and 3 (other partners in the firm) offered to the complainant a cheque for Rs. 2,000 dated the following day and took from him in exchange a cheque for Rs. 1,500 in their favour. The complainant's cheque was duly cashed; but the accused's cheque when presented for payment was dishonoured. It was held that the accused committed the offence of cheating under this section read with s. 109, inasmuch as they acted in concert throughout the transaction and as the dishonest intention arising from the knowledge that the cheque would not and could not be paid on the due date must be imputed to all of them alike.²³

A charge of cheating on the allegations that the accused received an amount from the complainant with a representation that the accused would with that money bribe the Income-tax Officer was not held to be unsustainable on the ground that the amount paid could not be recovered in a civil Court, having been paid for an illegal object. But in the absence of evidence to show that at the time the money was paid there was an actual receipt in the sense that it was not the intention of the accused even to try to utilise the amount in that way it could not be held that the accused was guilty of cheating.²⁴

English cases.—Where a postman falsely pretended that 2s. was payable on a postal letter entrusted to him for delivery, whereas 1s. only was payable, this offence was held to have been committed.²⁵ It was the duty of the accused, who was an officer of a society, to return the names of members entitled to sick pay. He wrongfully entered on the list a member's name, which he gave to the secretary, and in due course received an order from the treasurer to pay the member the sum named. When the accused received the money he applied it in payment of a debt due from the member to himself. It was held that there was evidence upon which the jury might find that the money was obtained by the accused by a false pretence made by him to the treasurer.¹ Where a person put the name of a painter upon the copy of one of his pictures, in order that it may be passed off as the original, it was held that he had committed this offence and not forgery.² Under the Code this will amount to forgery.

3. 'Intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything'.—By this clause "intentional deceptions are made punishable as cheats if they cause or are likely to cause any damage or harm whether to property or to re-

¹⁹ Mata Prasad, (1902) 18 A. L. J. R. 371, 21 Cr. L. J. 362, [1920] AIR (A) 66.

²⁰ Uttam Lal Narottamdas, (1920) 23 Bom. L. R. 340, 22 Cr. L. J. 305.

²¹ Harishanker Gangaram, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 375, 1 Cr. L. J. 332.

²² Kundan, [1942] Kar. 288.

²³ Keshavji Madhavji, (1930) 32 Bom. L. R. 562, 31 Cr. L. J. 1096, [1930] AIR (B) 179.

²⁴ Public Prosecutor v. Bhimeswara Rao, (1948) 61 L. W. 223.

²⁵ Matthew Byrne, (1866) 10 Cox 36.

¹ Taylor, (1901) 65 J. P. 457.

² Closs, (1857) 7 Cox 494.

putation. It is sufficient to constitute cheating within this clause if the deception is intended to cause any damage or harm whatsoever to the person deceived... The deception must be intended not only to induce the person deceived to do or omit to do something, but also to cause damage to that person. False statements are often made incautiously or carelessly or without sufficient information or inquiry and without any intention to deceive or injure. It may be observed of all incorrect or deceptive statements that they are not deceptions within this section, unless the person making them intends to induce the person to whom they are made to act upon the strength of such statements; even they are not deceptions within the definition unless the person who does or omits, etc., is induced to act by such statements and not by other independent motives; and lastly they will amount to the offence of cheating, only when they are intended to cause damage or harm to that person".³

The word 'intentionally' only applies to the act or omission which the person deceived is induced to do or omit to do, and it is not necessary in order to sustain a charge under this branch of the definition that the accused person should also have intended to cause harm or damage as the result of such act or omission. It is sufficient if he intentionally induces the person deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit to do if he were not deceived and the act or omission causes damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property.⁴ The intention need not be fraudulent or dishonest. In the latter part of the section the words 'fraudulently' or 'dishonestly' do not find a place.⁵

"Intent" refers to the dominant motives of action, and not to a casual or merely possible result.⁶

Cases.—Inducing person deceived to do something.—Where a prostitute communicated syphilis to a man who had sexual intercourse with her on the strength of her misrepresentation that she was free from disease;⁷ where the accused passed off girls of a low caste as girls of a higher caste and thus obtained money from persons who married them;⁸ and where the accused applied to a Tahsildar for a quantity of land on cowle tenure free of tax for five years and falsely represented that the land was waste land,⁹ this offence was held to have been committed.

The accused, a coolie recruiter, induced the complainant to come to a coolie depot, and promising him domestic service entered his name in the books of the depot and wrote a letter to a coolie contractor in Calcutta offering the complainant as a coolie; on the same day the accused persuaded the complainant to go to a railway station to fetch a parcel and the accused bought a railway ticket for Calcutta for the complainant and tried to get him to enter the train, but the complainant refused to go. The object of the accused was to get the complainant to go to Calcutta that he might be sent from there to Assam as a tea-garden coolie. It was held that the act of the accused amounted to an attempt to cheat.¹⁰

The accused, a fireman, applied for employment to the Locomotive and Carriage Superintendent of Burma Railways. He forwarded with his application a copy of a certificate purporting to have been granted to him by the N. W. Railway authorities to the effect that the accused had been employed as an engine-driver on that railway for a considerable period and was of good conduct, when in fact no such certificate had ever been issued to him, nor had he ever worked as an engine-driver on that railway. It was held that he was guilty of an attempt to cheat and not of forgery.¹¹ Where a registered opium consumer got a license to purchase opium in one of his names and another license in the other of his names, and thereby obtained more opium than he would have done otherwise, it was held that he had committed the offence of cheating.¹²

The accused proposed to the father of a girl for the hand of his daughter and obtained his consent and was admitted into his house. Subsequently, information was ³ M. & M. 383.

⁴ Nand Lal, (1888) P. R. No. 36 of 1888.

⁵ Baburam Rai, (1905) 32 Cal. 775, 781.

⁶ Harendra Nath Das v. Jyotish Chandra Datta, (1924) 52 Cal. 188.

⁷ Rakma, (1886) 11 Bom. 59.

⁸ Komul Dass, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 7;
Puddomoni Boistobee, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 98;
Dabee Sing, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 55; Sheoram,

(1882) 2 A. W. N. 237.

⁹ (1868) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 12.

¹⁰ Kishori Lal Chatterji, (1905) 9 C. W. N. 764, 2 Cr. L. J. 422.

¹¹ Fazal Din, (1906) P. R. No. 1 of 1907, 4 Cr. L. J. 355.

¹² Tha Byaw, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 315, 9 Cr. L. J. 15, F.B.

received by the father that the accused was a married man; this the accused admitted to be true. Shortly after the daughter who was major left the father's protection of her own accord and went to the accused. On the complaint of the parents the accused was convicted of cheating. It was held that the facts did not bring the case within s. 417, read with this section.¹³

English cases.—The accused ordered goods of the prosecutors, and said he wished to pay ready money for them. He gave cheques on a bank and took away the goods. He had shortly before opened an account at the bank but had drawn out the amount deposited except a few shillings. It was held that he was guilty of cheating.¹⁴ Where the accused conspired to obtain a passport from the Foreign Officer by false representation in the name of M for his use in Russia intending that it should be used by some other person, it was held that they were guilty of cheating and criminal conspiracy.¹⁵ The accused ordered a meal in a restaurant: he made no verbal representation at the time as to payment, nor was any question asked him with regard to it. After the meal he said that he was unable to pay, and that he had only one half-penny in his possession. It was held that he could not be convicted of the offence of obtaining goods by false pretences, but he was liable to be convicted of obtaining credit by means of fraud within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869.¹⁶ In India such an act will be covered by the definition of cheating.

4. 'Causes or is likely to cause'.—These words are very wide. Thus, under illustrations (f) and (g) deception as to a future event is criminal: this is not the case under English law. The expression 'or is likely to cause' may apply to such cases as the following: A by deception is induced to make an entry in his shop books that certain goods have been paid for when in fact they have not; to give credit in account for a greater amount than has actually been paid; or to sign a receipt for a sum which has not been received. In these cases the thing which A is induced by the deception to do is one which is likely to cause damage to A; for such admissions in his own handwriting would be weighty evidence against A's claim if they were produced against him or against his representatives after his death in a Court of Justice.¹⁷

5. 'Damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property'.—"The illustrations throw no light on what is meant by damage or harm in body, mind or reputation and so far as such damage is concerned the offence is not very appropriately placed in the Chapter of the Code relating to offences against property. An essential ingredient of the offence is the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused in the said respects or in property. Generally speaking, a criminal offence consists in an act done by the accused with a specific criminal intent, or state of mind, constituting the mens rea. Difficulties connected with the notion of causation, common enough in other branches of the law, such as tort, seldom arise. It is true that negligence is sometimes punishable as an offence because it causes or is likely to cause hurt or injury to another (cf. ss. 279 and 280 and 284-287 of the Code). But cheating in the second form has this additional peculiarity. The damage is to be caused by the person deceived to himself. Indirectly it may be, the damage is to result from the deceit, but immediately it is to result from the induced act of the person deceived. This no doubt explains why the word 'injury', defined in s. 44 of the Code as 'any harm whatever illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation, or property' was not employed in s. 415. It does not appear to be necessary that the resulting damage or likelihood of damage should have been within the actual contemplation of the accused when the deceit was practised. But authorities in this Court lay down—(i) that the person deceived must have acted under the influence of the deceit. . . (ii) that the facts must establish damage or likelihood of damage. . . and (iii) that the damage must not be too remote. . . On the point of remoteness of damage, there seems no sound reason why a definition which presupposes wilful deceit on the part of the accused should be too narrowly interpreted. The word 'cause' doubtless excludes damage occurring as a mere fortuitous sequence, unconnected with the act induced by the deceit, except as every event is connected with preceding events in an unending chain. On the other

¹³ Sergeant R. Milton v. Mr. & Mrs. Sherman, (1918) 22 C. W. N. 1001, 19 Cr. L. J. 781.

¹⁴ Hazzelton, (1874) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 134; Cosnett, (1901) 20 Cox 6. See ill. (d) to s. 415.

¹⁵ Brailsford, [1905] 2 K. B. 730.

¹⁶ Jones, [1898] 1 Q. B. 119.

¹⁷ M. & M. 384.

hand the definition, as it stands, is wide enough to include all damage resulting or likely to result as a natural consequence of the induced act."¹⁸

The deception must be intended to cause damage or harm to the person deceived in body, mind, reputation or property. If A by deception induce B to make an incorrect statement to C, a master, concerning the conduct or character of one of his servants, which misstatement causes C to prosecute or dismiss the servant, here the deception causes no damage or harm to B, the person deceived, and is therefore not, so far as he is concerned, within the definition.¹⁹ The Lahore High Court has observed in a case that the definition of cheating requires modification in order to cover cases where one person is deceived and another person suffers, or is likely to suffer, damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. It has been revealed in a number of cases that serious deception has been practised on Government officials as a result of which certain other persons have suffered a great deal of harm in reputation or property. As the definition of 'cheating' at present stands, such cases are not covered by this section, and the punishment prescribed in ss. 419 and 420 cannot be awarded to persons who practise deception on Government servants which results in damage and harm to third parties. Persons who practise such deception may be convicted under s. 182, but the punishment prescribed for that offence is not sufficiently deterrent, and it is desirable that such convicts should be liable to be heavily punished under s. 420, which prescribes a maximum sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment."²⁰

Neither the section nor the illustrations indicate what the meaning of causing harm in 'body, mind or reputation' is. Each and every illustration is confined to the kind of cheating which causes wrongful gain or wrongful loss, or which causes harm only in respect of property. Injury to body or to 'reputation' is explicable. But 'harm in mind' is not. It is difficult to say whether the authors of the Code intended thereby to mean mental gain or injury to the mental powers.

Again, the 'damage or harm' caused, or likely to be caused, must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom;²¹ and not any remote possibility flowing from the act. The proximate and natural result only of the act induced has to be considered, and not any vague and contingent injury that may possibly arise.²² Loss from non-delivery of goods arises from breach of the contract and not from the act of acceptance of a bought note, and loss from subsequent rise of the market or harm to reputation from dealing with a bogus firm are remote contingencies not contemplated by this section.²³

Cases.—Damage or harm to complainant in body, mind, reputation or property.—The accused without any authority arranged a contract for the delivery of goods to the complainant's firm by B. & Co. On the repudiation of the contract by the latter, the former pressed their claim under the contract and instructed their pleader to write to the latter firm, and demand fulfilment of the contract. The accused then went to the pleader, falsely represented himself to be a member of the complainant's firm and instructed the pleader to write a letter in the name of the complainant's firm to B. & Co., stating that the contract was cancelled by the complainant's firm. The pleader wrote the letter but on reference to the complainant's firm refrained from despatching it. It was held that the accused had committed the offence under ss. 417 and 511 of the Code as he fraudulently induced the pleader to write a letter which he otherwise would not have written, and as, if the fraud had been successful, it must necessarily have caused injury to the pleader in mind, reputation, and perhaps in his business and might have involved him in litigation.²⁴

Where a person attempted to get himself reinstated in the post of a karnam by the production of a certificate of having passed a certain examination and representing that the certificate referred to him while in fact it referred to another man ¹⁸ Per Richardson, J., in Legal Remembrancer v. Manmatha Bhusan Chatterjee, (1923) 51 Cal. 250, 260.

¹⁹ M. & M. 384.

²⁰ Muhammad Bakhsh, (1941) 22 Lah. 718, 729.

²¹ Mojey, (1890) 17 Cal. 606; Muhammad Shah, (1918) P. R. No. 34 of 1918, 20 Cr. L. J. 77, [1919] AIR (L) 473; Legal Remembrancer v.

Manmatha Bhusan Chatterjee, (1923) 51 Cal. 250, 260.

²² Harendra Nath Das v. Jyotish Chandra Datta, (1924) 52 Cal. 188; Ratan Singh, (1934) 35 P. L. R. 666, 36 Cr. L. J. 274.

²³ Ibid., Sarda Saran, (1923) 21 A.L. J. R. 873, 26 Cr. L. J. 213, [1924] AIR (A) 209.

²⁴ Mahadev Lal v. Dhorraj Maisri, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 750, 7 C. L. J. 375, 7 Cr. L. J. 342.

bearing the same name, it was held that in the absence of proof that the representation caused or was likely to cause damage or harm to the officer to whom the representation was made either in body, mind, reputation or property within the meaning of this section the accused could not be convicted under ss. 419 and 511.²⁵ The accused, a judgment-debtor, gave a cheque to the decree-holder not in token of immediate satisfaction of the decree but only as a security and as a measure of accommodation to enable the judgment-debtor to provide means for honouring the cheque within a convenient period after issue or to otherwise satisfy the decree, and one week's time for settlement was taken from the Court. The cheque was dishonoured, and the accused was thereupon prosecuted for cheating. It was held that the element of fraud or dishonesty was absent and there was no delivery of property and there was no damage or harm to the complainant in body, mind, reputation or property.¹

The accused applied to the postal authorities and obtained an appointment in the Postal Department but he had not mentioned in his application that he was dismissed from Government's service. He was charged with and convicted of cheating as he did not state the fact of his dismissal in his application. Knight, J., said: "I find no difficulty in concluding that the petitioner's silence regarding his previous employment deceived and was meant to deceive the authorities of the Post Office, and thereby procured him an appointment that he would not otherwise have obtained. But I do not think that this amounts to an offence under section 415, Indian Penal Code. For neither the act of appointment, nor the omission to inquire into the petitioner's antecedents caused, or was likely to cause, damage or harm 'to the body, mind, reputation, or property' of the person deceived. Such damage or harm must, I take it, be the proximate and natural result of the act or omission: and we cannot include in it such vague and contingent injury as might arise from the discredit that might attach to the Department, from the employment of a man of doubtful character. It has not been suggested that the damage to be apprehended was that which might be caused by the petitioner's dishonesty; and this too would be a consequence too remote for the purposes of the section. I therefore agree that the conviction should be quashed".² Where the manager of a firm was induced by the false representation of the accused to accept a bought note with a non-existent firm for the purchase of jute, and to sign a receipt for the note, it was held (as to the receipt) that the case did not fall within the first part of this section, as the accused had no intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain to any one by inducing the manager to make out or give a receipt for the bought note, which had been actually made over to him, but at most an intention to hold him to the contract. As to the note it was held that the case did not fall within the second part of this section as no loss of property or harm to the manager's reputation resulted proximately and necessarily from the act itself which he was induced to do, viz. acceptance of the contract.³ A licensed bookmaker, on the assurance of the opposite party that he would pay up his losses, if any, punctually on the settling day, allowed the latter to take bets on credit. The opposite party failed to pay his debts and on different dates paid cheques to the petitioner and induced him to accept further bets on credit. It was held that although the petitioner was deceived and thereby induced to take bets on credit from the opposite party, it could not be said that the act which the petitioner was induced to do by reason of such deception had caused or was likely to cause damage or harm to him in body, mind, reputation or property. It did not follow that if the petitioner had refused to take bets on credit, the opposite party would of a certainty have had to offer bets by paying cash. The opposite party might not have offered any bets at all. Therefore the offence of cheating was not committed.⁴ The unauthorised allotment of more wagons to a colliery than they were entitled to, through the fraudulent or dishonest acts of the servants of a railway company would not cause, or would not be likely to cause, any appreciable damage to the railway company's reputation, as the damage would be too remote.⁵ Where the accused falsely induced the complainant

²⁵ Manikam Pillai, (1908) 19 M. L. J. 271, 8 Cr. L. J. 421.

¹ Sheo Saran Vaish v. Jitendra Nath Daw, (1928) 5 O. W. N. 357, 29 Cr. L. J. 657, [1928] AIR (O) 292.

² Kashinath Mahadev Phatak, (1910) Criminal Application for Revision No. 402 of 1909, decided on February 24, 1910, per Chandavarkar and Knight, J.J., (Unrep. Bom.).

³ Harendra Nath Das v. Jyotish Chandra Datta, (1924) 52 Cal. 188.

⁴ H. K. Bhedwar v. Rao Shahat C. S. R. Rao, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 919, 39 C. L. J. 273, 24 Cr. L. J. 748, [1924] AIR (C) 111.

⁵ Legal Remembrancer v. Manmatha Bhusan Chatterjee, (1923) 51 Cal. 250.

to compromise a criminal case, which was not compoundable, it was held that a charge of cheating would not lie.⁶

Certain recruits were rejected by a Recruiting Officer at Lahore as unfit. The accused took them to Lyallpur and offered them to a lambardar on condition that he would pay Rs. 50 for each recruit. It was arranged that this money would only be paid if the recruits were accepted by the Recruiting Officer. The lambardar asked the accused whether the recruits had already been rejected and they replied in the negative. The lambardar on presenting the recruits to the Lyallpur Recruiting Officer was told by that officer's orderly that they had already been rejected in Lahore. It was admitted that the lambardar was not liable to any punishment departmentally as merely presenting rejected recruits was not an offence unless it was done knowingly. It was held that no offence under ss. 420 and 511 had been established as the money was not to be paid to the accused by the lambardar unless the recruits were accepted. It was further held that the first and second ingredients of the offence of cheating existed, but not the third, seeing that the lambardar's action in presenting the recruits not knowing that they had been previously rejected was not likely to cause him any harm or injury at all. There was only a possibility that he might suffer annoyance or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation or property in case his explanation was not at once accepted, while the damage or harm caused within the meaning of this section must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom.⁷ Section 539B of the Criminal Procedure Code which empowers the Court to make a local inspection does not contemplate a procedure by which the presiding officer would to all intents and purposes put himself in the position of a witness in the case. Where the accused advertised a gupta mantra (secret incantation) by the reading of which the reader would achieve his object without any effort, and offered a cash prize in case of the failure of the mantra, and the accused while sending the mantra sent instructions that were very difficult to follow, it was held that the accused was guilty of cheating.⁸

Explanation.—Concealment of any facts which deceive a person must be dishonest; an improper concealment or suppression of a material fact, which the party concealing is legally bound to disclose, and of which the other party has a legal right to insist that he shall be informed, is fraudulent. Where the cheating consists in concealment, it must be shown that suppressio veri was a violation of a legal duty or it was an illegal omission in fact.⁹ Accused No. 1 floated a company with a nominal capital and employed accused Nos. 2 to 4 either as agents or canvassers. The scheme of work of the company was to advance loans to applicants at the rate of one and a half per cent. per annum. Each applicant had to deposit a sum of money with the application, and the loan was to be made in specified instalments determined by drawing lots. The loan was made repayable after about five to eight years from its grant. If the loan was not made within a year, the applicant could get a refund of the application moneys. All these conditions were printed and attached to the forms of application. After the scheme was in operation for some time, some of the applicants got loans applied for in full. On a prosecution of the accused for the offence of cheating under s. 420 it was held, discharging the accused, that though the scheme was highly speculative it was not dishonest or fraudulent in the sense that it either represented to the public something which was not true or concealed from them something which the company ought to have disclosed.¹⁰

The Explanation to this section refers to the actual deception itself and not to the concealment of a deception by some one else.¹¹

A promise to do something in the future per se may not amount to a false pretence

⁶ Banamali Charan Bhunia v. Dharani Dhar, [1943] 1 Cal. 154.

⁷ Muhammad Shah, (1918) P. R. No. 34 of 1918, 20 Cr. L. J. 77, [1919] AIR (L) 473.

⁸ Akil Kishore Ram, (1937) 19 P. L. T. 375, [1918] P. W. N. 93, 39 Cr. L. J. 442, [1938] AIR (P) 185.

⁹ Bishan Das, (1905) 27 All. 561. See Dori Lal, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 500, 20 Cr. L. J. 313;

Sada Ram, (1920) 18 A. L. J. R. 408, 21 Cr. L. J. 749, [1920] AIR (A) 289.

¹⁰ Durgadas, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 1181, 35 Cr. L. J. 644, [1934] AIR (B) 48; Jatindra Nath Sircar, (1934) 38 Cr. L. J. 209, [1936] AIR (C) 449.

¹¹ Nga Po Maung, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 255.

or to cheating, but, it may at the same time, in certain cases, involve a false pretence that the promisor has the power to do that thing for which false pretence the promisor may be indictable.¹²

Puffing.—The authors of the Code say: "If all the misrepresentations and exaggerations in which men indulge for the purpose of gaining at the expense of others were made crimes, not a day would pass in which many thousands of buyers and sellers would not incur the penalties of the law. It happens hourly that an article which is worth ten rupees is affirmed by the seller to be cheap at twelve rupees, and by the buyer to be dear at eight rupees. The seller comes down to eleven rupees, and declares that to be his last word; the buyer rises to nine, and says that he will go no higher; the seller falsely pretends that the article is unusually good of its kind, the buyer that it is unusually bad of its kind; the seller that the price is likely soon to rise, the buyer that it is likely soon to fall. Here we have deceptions practised for the sake of gain, yet no judicious legislator would punish these deceptions...The moralist may regret this; but the legislator sees that the result of the attempts of the buyer and seller to gain an unfair advantage over each other is that, in the vast majority of cases, articles are sold for the prices which it is desirable that they should fetch; and therefore he does not think it necessary to interfere. It is enough for him to know that all this great mass of falsehood practically produces the same effect which would be produced by truth; and that any law directed against such falsehood would in all probability be a dead letter, and would, if carried into rigorous execution, do more mischief in a month than all the lies which are told in the making of bargains throughout all the bazaars of India produce in a century".¹³

Where the allegation against the accused was that he advertised in the papers that he was willing to sell an almost new jazz set, and the complainant answered the advertisement and after some correspondence sent the price settled to the accused, and on receipt of the goods the complainant found that they were not of the quality he expected according to the advertisement and certain articles mentioned in the list were not sent, and the accused was summoned to answer a charge of cheating; it was held that the allegations were insufficient to justify the prosecution of the accused for a criminal offence, and the proceedings against the accused were quashed. The giving of untrue praise of articles by a seller does not amount to a criminal offence.¹⁴

English cases.—A simple misrepresentation of the quality of goods is not a false pretence.¹⁵ In order to obtain an advance of money on a large quantity of plated spoons, the defendants represented to a pawnbroker that they were of the best quality, that they were equal to Elkington's A, that the foundation was the best material, and that they had as much silver upon them as Elkington's A. The jury found that these representations were wilfully false, and that by means of them an advance of money was made. It was held that the representation being a mere exaggeration or puffing of the quality of the goods in the course of a bargain, it was not a false pretence.¹⁶ This case was governed by the maxim simple commendatio non obligat. Any exaggeration or deception in the ordinary course of dealings between the buyer and the seller during the progress of a bargain cannot be the subject of a criminal prosecution. But when the thing sold is of an entirely different description from what it is represented to be and the statements made are not in form an expression of opinion or mere praise, the offence of cheating will be committed. Where, therefore, the accused induced the prosecutor to purchase a chain from him by fraudulently representing that it was 15-carat gold, when, in fact, it was only a trifle better than 6-carat, knowing at the time that he was falsely representing the quality of the chain as 15-carat gold, it was held that the statement that the chain was 15-carat gold, not being mere exaggerated praise, nor relating to a mere matter of opinion, but a statement as to a specific fact within the knowledge of the accused, was a false pretence.¹⁷

The accused induced the prosecutor to buy certain plated goods plate at an auction for £7 on the representation that they were the best silver lined with gold

¹² Girdhari Lal, (1910) P. W. R. No. 26 of 1910 (Cr.) P. R. No. 12 of 1913, 11 Cr. L. J. 428.

¹³ Note N, p. 163.

¹⁴ W. H. Da Costa v. J. P. Deefholts, (1924) 29 C. W. N. 362, 26 Cr. L. J. 921, [1925] AIR

L.C.—67

(C) 605.

¹⁵ Bryan, (1857) 7 Cox 312.

¹⁶ Ibid.

¹⁷ Ardley, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 301; Roebuck, (1856) 25 L. J. (M. C.) 101.

and worth £20. The foundation of the goods was Britannia metal, instead of nickel as in the best goods, covered with a transparent film of silver, and they were worth only about 30s. It was held that there was no false pretence. The Court said: "It is most important not to bring within the criminal law the ordinary enhancing of value and quality by the seller of goods. There is always a conflict of knowledge and skill between a buyer and seller, the one wishing to buy as advantageously, and the other to sell as advantageously as he possibly can, and it would be very dangerous to extend the criminal law to such cases. At present the line is fixed, and there must be a false representation of an existing fact, operating upon the mind of a buyer, and deceiving him in such a manner that he cannot protect himself against it."¹⁸

Statutory application.—The Bombay City Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1902), s. 126; the Madras City Police Act (Mad. Act III of 1888), s. 51.

CASES.

Vendor and purchaser.—The selling of milk and water in about equal proportion as pure milk would support a finding of cheating.¹⁹ Where a person was purposely sent to buy milk knowing it was watered, in order to prosecute the seller, it was held that as there was no deception a conviction for cheating would not stand.²⁰ But according to Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder Mitter,²¹ the seller would probably be guilty of an attempt to cheat. Where the accused sold nasty sweetmeats, it was held that he could not be held guilty of this offence as the purchaser might have tasted the sweetmeats before buying them.²² Where the accused sold liquor, measuring it with a glass which was not a prescribed measure, and of which they fraudulently misrepresented the capacity, it was held that they ought to have been tried for this offence and not for one under s. 265.²³ Where a licensed opium vendor sold opium at rates higher than those fixed by the Government, it was held that he had committed this offence.²⁴ Where the vendor of immovable property omitted to mention that there was an incumbrance on the property, it was held that he could not be convicted of cheating unless it was shown either that he was asked by the vendee whether the property was incumbered and said it was not, or that he sold the property on the representation that it was unincumbered.²⁵

The vendee defendant in a suit for pre-emption compromised the suit, the plaintiff agreeing to pay a certain sum in cash and to discharge certain incumbrances on the property in suit. It was subsequently discovered that the vendee had, after his purchase but before the suit, mortgaged the property, which was the subject of the suit for pre-emption. It was held that the vendee could not, on account merely of his omission to disclose the existence of this subsequent mortgage, be held guilty of cheating.¹ D sold certain trees to S which stood on land in respect of which D held a mortgage. D brought the land to sale under the mortgage and purchased it before the sale of the trees by him to S; but in the interim the mortgagor had given the trees in suit to other persons as compensation for certain trees which the mortgagor had wrongfully cut down. S was resisted in cutting the trees and found that the trees belonged to certain other persons. S complained to D but D put him off and eventually drove him away with abuse and would not return the money. It was held that D was guilty of dishonestly concealing the facts within the meaning of the Explanation of this section.²

The accused contracted to supply to the complainants 260 bales of fully good machine-ginned cotton. In fulfilment of this contract, he delivered as many bales largely composed of cotton-seed, raw cotton and rubbish, carefully packed into the middle, while all round the sides was placed good ginned cotton. The percentage of the admixture was from 6 to 15 per cent. as against the normal admixture of $\frac{1}{2}$ or 1 per cent. The accused was shown to have business relations with a factory which owned ¹⁸ Levine and Wood, (1867) 10 Cox 374, 376.

¹⁹ Nana, (1880) Unrep. Cr. C. 145.

²⁰ Kalee Modock, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 61.

²¹ (1884) 16 Cal. 310.

²² Kalee Modock, sup.

²³ Nurodin, (1888) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 386.

²⁴ Pandurang Ramchandra, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 823.

²⁵ Bishan Das, (1905) 27 All. 561. The Karachi Municipality v. Bhojraj, (1915) 9 S. L. R. 97, 16 Cr. L. J. 706; Ramdayal Mahto, (1927) 9 P. L. T. 303, 29 Cr. L. J. 700, [1928] AIR (P) 337.

¹ Gendun Lal v. Abdul Aziz Khan, (1904) 27 All. 302.

² Dori Lal, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 500, 20 Cr. L. J. 331.

ginning machines which were capable of making the admixture, and was found to be present there whilst the machines were ginning such adulterated cotton. It was held that the accused was guilty of cheating.³

Misstatement as to nature of goods.—The accused, a travelling hawker, represented to the prosecutor's wife that he was a tea-dealer, and induced her to buy certain packages which he stated to contain good tea, but three-fourths of the contents of which was not tea at all, but a mixture of substances unfit to drink and deleterious to health. It was held that he was guilty of false pretence.⁴

Where the offence charged consisted of selling or pawning as genuine gold mohurs of the reign of Shahajahan silver rupees of that reign which had been gilt or in some way covered over with gold, it was held that this offence had been committed.⁵

Where property is delivered, fraudulent or dishonest intention on part of accused is necessary : where any act is done, through deception, that act should have caused damage or harm.—Where the accused gave a false name and address in order to shield prosecution for an offence;⁶ where the accused falsely told his master's brother that his master was ill in a certain village and so induced him to go to that village;⁷ and where the accused presented a stolen note to a shopkeeper for encashment, and in reply to the inquiry of the shopkeeper after he had cashed the note gave his name falsely,⁸ it was held that this offence was not committed. Where the accused secretly entered an exhibition building without having purchased a ticket, and was there apprehended, it was held that such act did not amount to cheating because he had not made a false representation to anyone.⁹ If the accused had said to the doorkeeper that he had a ticket, and had thus obtained access to the building, that would have been cheating. Where a person, who purchased rice from a famine-relief officer, at a certain rate, on condition that he should sell it at a pound less, was convicted of cheating because he did not sell it at the rate agreed on, it was held that as there was no wrongful gain or loss to anyone, no offence was committed.¹⁰ For, the rice having been sold to him, and he having paid for it, it was not unlawful for him to sell it again at such price as he thought fit. The fact that a trader in a statement of his account included, amongst other articles delivered, an article, which the complainant alleged she had returned, was held not to amount to cheating unless it was proved that he had done so with an intention to defraud and had obtained a payment of the whole bill or of the bill in part including the price of that article.¹¹ Where a person attempted to obtain his recruitment in the police by giving certain information, which he knew to be false, to the District Superintendent of Police, it was held that he had not thereby committed the offence of attempting to cheat, because the act was not likely to cause damage or harm to the person deceived in body, mind, reputation or property.¹² Where the accused promised to withdraw his charge against the complainant's brother-in-law and others without intending to do so, and thereby deceived the complainant and induced him to withdraw his charge against the accused, it was held that the act of the complainant so induced by the accused's deceit could not be said to be one likely to cause damage or harm to him in body, mind, reputation or property within the meaning of this section and that the accused was not, therefore, guilty of cheating.¹³ Where the accused, a public servant, purchased at an auction a quantity of waste-paper, bidding for it under an assumed name, it was held that in the absence of any rule forbidding employees in the office to bid at such sales; the conviction of the accused under this section could not be sustained.¹⁴ The accused were charged before the District Magistrate with cheating in that they waylaid certain intending customers of the complainant and falsely represented themselves as belonging to the complainant's shop, took them to their own shop on the pretence that it was the shop of the complainant and sold sweets to them. It appeared that the customers sustained no pecuniary loss in consequence of the accused's acts who apparently had not tried to

³ Kanji Shivaji, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 137, 13 Cr. L. J. 285.

⁴ Foster, (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 301.

⁵ Khushali, (1906) 29 All. 141.

⁶ Ladka, (1893) Cr. R. No. 10 of 1893, Unrep. Cr. C. 635.

⁷ Punjia, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 423.

Shank Basit, (1883) 1 Weir 479.

⁸ Mehervanji Bejanji, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 6.

¹⁰ Lal Mahomed, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 82.

¹¹ Baij Nath Ram Marwari v. Burgess, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 255.

¹² Dwarka Prasad, (1883) 6 All. 97.

¹³ P. Durgiah, (1892) 1 Weir 477.

¹⁴ Kutab Ali, (1903) 23 A. W. N. 231.

make anything out of their victims and had only charged the market rate for the sweets. The Magistrate convicted the accused of cheating, holding that the deception must have injuriously affected the business of the complainant. It was held that the conviction was bad.¹⁵

The accused, a shopkeeper, having sold goods worth Rs. 2-13-0 to a customer, received in payment two currency notes one of Rs. 2-8-0 and the other of Re. 1. Instead of returning eleven annas, as he ought to have done, he paid only Re. 0-9-3 to the customer, saying that the notes were not worth their face value. It was held that the offence of cheating was not committed, for there was no deceit, inasmuch as the customer was not induced to hand over the notes by any representation on the part of the accused that he would get change calculated on the face value of the notes but the notes were handed over in the ordinary course of the sale and purchase and what really happened was that a dispute then arose as to the correct amount of the change due to the customer.¹⁶

With a view to escape the payment of just dues of their creditors, the accused, who were retail traders, fraudulently induced the creditors before the closing of the civil Courts for vacation, to grant them some time to pay up. Their object in gaining time was to remove the goods from their shop. The civil Courts having closed within the time thus granted, the creditors were prevented from seeking any remedy in the civil Courts. It was held that as time was obtained fraudulently the accused were guilty of cheating.¹⁷

The accused, who was the complainant's paddy-broker and regular paddy-supplier, took from them advances for the purchase of paddy and gave promissory notes for the advances in question. From time to time he had supplied paddy the total quantity of which, however, had not been sufficient to satisfy all the advances. He last obtained an advance of Rs. 4,000 when there was already due to the complainants a large sum on the previous advances, but only supplied a further small lot of paddy, valued at Rs. 800, and was in consequence prosecuted in respect of this last advance. It was held that the facts did not warrant the inference that the accused, at the time of obtaining the advance, had no intention of performing his promise, and that, in the absence of proof of any representation at the time on the part of the accused, which he knew or had reason to believe to be false, no offence of cheating was committed.¹⁸

False entries.—Where the accused was requested to make an entry in a book of accounts, belonging to the complainant, to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts, instead of making this entry entered in a language not known to the complainant that this sum had been paid to the complainant, it was held that he had committed an offence of attempt to cheat, and not one under s. 465.¹⁹ Where the lessee of a forest presented false accounts to a Forest Officer in order to defraud the Government, it was held that the offence committed was that of attempt to cheat.²⁰

False compromise.—The charge under s. 408 is not compoundable and even where the accused makes some promise and the case is dropped, the promise would not be enforceable and it would always be open to the complainant to have the case revived if the Magistrate is so disposed. Hence in such a case the accused cannot be prosecuted for cheating for having induced the complainant to "compromise the case".²¹

Fraud by railway passengers.—Where a passenger travelled in a carriage of higher class than that for which he had paid fare;²² and where a passenger gave some part of his luggage to a co-passenger to evade the charge for over-weight,²³ this offence was held not to have been committed. Where a man endeavoured to evade payment of a railway fare by the production of an old pass altered as to date and number of

¹⁵ Sundar Singh, (1904) P. R. No. 25 of 1904, 2 Cr. L. J. 126.

¹⁶ Muraji Raghunath, (1919) 21 Bom. L. R. 763, 43 Bom. 842.

¹⁷ Ramshwar v. Gobind Prasad, (1925) 23 A. L. J. R. 433, 26 Cr. L. J. 970, [1925] AIR (A) 473.

¹⁸ Maung Po Lu, (1923) 1 Rán. 397.

¹⁹ Kunju Nayar, (1888) 12 Mad. 114.

²⁰ Ramajirav Jirbajirav, (1875) 12 B. H. C.

(Cr. C.) 1.

²¹ Banamali Charan Bhunia v. Dharani Dhar, [1943] 1 Cal. 154.

²² Dayabhai Parjaram, (1864) 1 B. H. C. 140; but such a person becomes liable to pay excess fare and penalty under s. 113 (2) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, which does not require intention to defraud: Horniman, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 1666, 34 Cr. L. J. 239.

²³ Paras Ram, (1903) P. R. No. 25 of 1903.

persons, it was held that he was guilty of an attempt to cheat.²⁴ Where a railway employee obtained a free pass for his wife and mother and handed it over to a woman who was neither his wife nor his mother and she used it, it was held that he was guilty of cheating under s. 420 of the Code and not under s. 112 of the Railways Act.²⁵

Abetment.—The forwarding of fictitious consignment notes was held to be abetment.¹ The accused by falsely representing F, a notorious and practised gambler well skilled in all the tricks of gambling, to be a rich merchant, induced the prosecutor to gamble with him, on the representation that the merchant would fall an easy prey if the prosecutor gambled with him, and he (the prosecutor) was thus induced to part with all his property. It was held that those facts were sufficient to sustain a conviction for abetment of cheating.²

416. A person is said to “cheat by personation” if he cheats by pretending to be some other person, or by knowingly substituting one person for another, or representing that he or any other person is a person other than he or such other person really is.

Explanation.—The offence is committed whether the individual personated is a real or imaginary person.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A cheats by pretending to be a certain rich banker of the same name. A cheats by personation.

(b) A cheats by pretending to be B, a person who is deceased. A cheats by personation.

COMMENT.

Ingredients.—This section requires any one of the following essentials:—

1. Pretension by a person to be some other person.
2. Knowingly substituting one person for another.³
3. Representation that the person representing or any other person is a person other than he or such other person really is.

“To ‘personate’ means to pretend to be a particular person”.⁴ “As soon as a man by word, act, or sign holds himself forth as a person entitled to vote with the object of passing himself off as that person, and exercising the right which that person has, he has personated him”.⁵ If a person at Oxford, who is not a member of the University, go to a shop for the purpose of fraud, wearing a commoner’s cap and gown, and obtain goods, this appearing in a cap and gown is a sufficient thing although nothing passed in words.⁶

Explanation.—The person personated may be a real or an imaginary person.

CASES.

False personation at examination.—Where A falsely represented himself to be B at a University Examination, got a hall-ticket under B’s name, and wrote papers in B’s name, it was held that A had committed the offence of forgery and cheating by personation.⁷

Personation before public servant.—A female vendor started for D, in company with three persons, to get her deed of sale registered. She fell ill on the way, and her three companions went to the Registrar’s office. One of them, a woman, there personated the vendor, and got registry of the deed. She was convicted under this section and the other two of abetting the offence. It was held that as there was no

²⁴ Gunpat, (1868) P. R. No. 6 of 1868.

²⁵ Ram Dayal, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 510, 26 Cr. L. J. 1164.

¹ Raghunath, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 470.

² Jahana, (1904) P. R. No. 4 of 1905, 2 Cr. L. J. 38.

³ Gian Singh, (1938) 40 Cr. L. J. 371.

⁴ Per Crompton, J., in Hague, (1864) 4 B. & S. 715, 720, 33 L. J. (M. C.) 81, 82.

⁵ Per Blackburn, J., in ibid., pp. 721, 83.

⁶ Barnard, (1837) 7 C. & P. 784.

⁷ Appasami, (1889) 12 Mad. 151; Ashwani Kumar Gupta, [1937] 1 Cal. 71. See Ganesh Khanderao, (1889) 13 Bom. 506.

apparent intention on the part of the accused to injure or defraud any one, the convictions should have been under the Registration Act and not under the Code.⁸ Similarly, where a servant purchased a stamp paper for his master, giving his master's name as if it had been his own, it was held that a conviction under this section was bad, inasmuch as although there might have been personation, there was no cheating as there had been no fraudulent intent.⁹

Where the accused was found to have knowingly represented one J to be B, the mother of a sepoy K, who had been killed in action, and thereby induced the military authorities to grant a pension to J to which she was not entitled, it was held that he had committed this offence.¹⁰

Where the accused travelled by rail without ticket and on arriving at the place of destination presented a forged railway pass made out in the name of the "Servant of Mr. Brown, Assistant Auditor"—a description which did not apply and never had applied to him, it was held that as it was not proved whether he had shown the pass to a Ticket Examiner before the completion of his journey, he was guilty of an attempt to cheat under this section.¹¹ A and L induced the muhammad at a fair to write out a certificate of sale of a mare giving S as the name of the seller and L as the purchaser. A posed as S and affixed thereto his thumb-mark. It was held that as the muhammad was deceived, A and L were guilty of an offence under this section whatever reason they had for deceiving him and inducing him to write a false certificate.¹²

Where a person falsely personated another and induced a Health Officer to deliver to him a health certificate it was held that he was guilty of this offence.¹³ Where a person purchased a stamp-paper from a licensed vendor, representing himself to be H and the vendor entered H's name in the register as purchaser, it was held that a charge of cheating could not be sustained. Though the accused by personating H deceived the stamp-vendor and induced him to make an incorrect entry in the register, which act was likely to cause damage to the stamp-vendor, it was not shown that the accused had any fraudulent design upon the vendor, and it was not enough if his intention was to use the stamp to the injury of H.¹⁴ Where the accused presented a certificate given to another person terminating his service on account of reduction, to a railway officer to employ him, and the railway officer employed him not on account of the certificate but owing to his personal qualifications, it was held that handing over the certificate was an act of deception but as it was not proved that the railway officer was induced to appoint him on the production of the certificate he was not guilty under this section.¹⁵

Personation by witness.—A witness falsely deposing in another's name should be charged with giving false evidence, under s. 198, and not with cheating by personation.¹⁶

False representation as to caste.—Where the accused represented to the prosecutor that a girl was a Brahmin and thereby induced him to part with his money on consideration of the marriage of the girl to his brother, when the girl really was Sudra, it was held that he was guilty of cheating by false personation.¹⁷ Where the accused falsely represented to the mother of a girl that he was a Barendra Brahmin, whereas in fact he really belonged to another sub-caste, namely, Barna Brahmin, and thereby procured his marriage with the girl to which the mother would not have agreed but for such false representation and as a result of which marriage the mother was excommunicated from her caste, it was held that the accused was guilty of cheating by false personation under s. 419.¹⁸ The former Chief Court of the Punjab had held that a person could not be convicted of an offence under this section for disposing of ⁸ Looty Bewa, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 24, 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 25. See Mojey, (1890) 17 Cal. 606, followed in Balaku Vithu, Criminal Revision No. 202 of 1909, decided on December 15, 1909, per Chandavarkar and Knight, JJ., (Unrep. Bom.).

⁹ Karuppanna Pillai, (1883) 1 Weir 480.
¹⁰ Kirat Singh, (1907) 27 A. W. N. 291, 6 Cr. L. J. 426.

¹¹ Gorindaswamy Naidu, (1911) 21 M. L. J. 748, 12 Cr. L. J. 406.

¹² Ahmada, (1913) P. R. No. 9 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 139, [1914] AIR (L) 558.

¹³ Packinathan, (1919) 11 L. W. 368, 21 Cr. L. J. 478.

¹⁴ Girdharee, (1876) P. R. No. 16 of 1876.

¹⁵ Thakur Mandal, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 65, [1942] AIR (P) 53.

¹⁶ Prerna Bhika, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 89.

¹⁷ Mohim Chunder Sil, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 42. See Komul Dass, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 7; Poddomonte Boistobee, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 98; Dabee Sing, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 55; Bhaiji, (1866) Cr. No. 49 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 301.

¹⁸ Kshiteesh Chandra Chakrabarti, [1937] 2 Cal. 221.

a girl representing her to be of a different caste from that to which she belonged.¹⁹ Describing a Brahmin woman as a Kirari,²⁰ or a sweeper woman whose husband was alive as a jat widow,²¹ was held to be not an offence under this section but one under s. 420.

Misrepresentation as to one's position.—The first illustration indicates that a misrepresentation by false description of one's position in life falls under this section. Where, therefore, a document purported to have been signed by G. L. a putwaree, and it was said that it was signed by G. L., but at a time when G. L. was not a putwaree, it was held that this offence had been committed.²² Similarly, where a person represented a girl to be the daughter of a certain woman of good family, when she was within his knowledge the daughter of another woman, it was held that he was guilty of this offence.²³

False statements as to name and performances.—Entries for two handicaps were sent to the secretary of an athletic meeting, in the name of Sims, containing statements as to the recent performances of Sims, which were very moderate, and in consequence Sims was given long starts. The entries were not written by either Sims or the accused. At the meeting the accused, who was a good runner, personated Sims, who was absent, and came first in both the races. After the first race the handicapper asked the accused whether he was really Sims, whether the performances given in the entry form were really his, and whether he had never won a race, as stated in the entry. He answered these questions falsely in the affirmative. It was held that the accused was rightly convicted of attempting to obtain property by false pretences.²⁴ Under the Code this offence will fall under this section.

417. Whoever cheats shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes simple cases of cheating. When there is delivery of any property or destruction of any valuable security s. 420 is the proper section to apply.²⁵ The offence under this section is non-cognizable, the one under s. 420 is cognizable.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person deceived delivered to someone, or consented that some person shall retain certain property.

(2) That the person deceived was induced by the accused to do as above.

(3) That such person acted upon such inducement in consequence of his having been deceived by the accused.

(4) That the accused acted fraudulently or dishonestly when so inducing that person.

Or prove (1) that the person deceived did, or omitted to do, something which he was not bound to do or omit to do.

(2) and (3) as above.

(4) That the accused so induced that person intentionally.

(5) That such act or omission caused, or was likely to cause, damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property.

There must be some evidence of fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of the omission of the act in respect of which the cheating is alleged.¹ Subsequent conduct of the accused would be evidence to show the previous dishonest intention.² The test to be applied in considering whether, on the trial of an indictment charging ¹⁹ Singhara, (1903) P. R. No. 17 of 1903.

²⁰ Durga Das, (1904) P. R. No. 13 of 1904, 1 Cr. L. J. 949.

²¹ Jhanda Singh, (1917) P. R. No. 6 of 1918, 19 Cr. L. J. 335 [1918] AIR (L) 377 (2); Raj Bahadur, (1918) P. R. No. 23 of 1918, 19 Cr. L. J. 931, [1918] AIR (L) 49.

²² Joy Kurn Singh v. Man Patuck, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

²³ Dhunput Ojha, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 51.

²⁴ Button, [1900] 2 Q. B. 597.

²⁵ Sher Singh, (1928) 10 Lah. 513.

¹ Hargovandas, (1872) 9 B. H. C. 448; Fazu, (1886) Cr. R. No. 66 of 1887, Unrep. Cr. C. 312; Venkatarhala Pillai, (1883) 1 Weir 476; Vira-swami, (1881) 1 Weir 478.

² Heeramun Hulweye, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

obtaining money, goods, or credit by false pretences, evidence of acts of the accused subsequent to those which are the subject of the indictment is admissible, is whether the evidence is relevant. A connection must be shown to exist between the acts which are the subject of the indictment and the acts sought to be proved. The fact that the subsequent acts show that the accused has committed an offence distinct from that which is charged in the indictment is not sufficient to make evidence of the subsequent acts admissible if a connection is shown to exist between the transactions.³ The accused was tried for obtaining eggs by false pretences; it was proved that he had falsely represented by advertisement in newspapers that he was carrying on a bona fide dairyman's business. Evidence was admitted that subsequent to the transaction in question he had obtained eggs from other persons by means of similar advertisements. It was held that such evidence was admissible.⁴ The accused was indicted for obtaining a cheque by falsely pretending that another cheque, which he then gave to the prosecutor, was a good and valid order for the payment of money. The prosecutor deposed that he gave his cheque to the accused on the faith of the accused's statement that a cheque, which the accused then gave to the prosecutor, was a good cheque. The cheque given by the accused was dishonoured. The accused stated that when he gave the cheque he expected a payment which would have enabled him to meet it. The accused was acquitted. He was then tried on a second indictment, charging him with obtaining from other persons three sums of money on three cheques which were dishonoured. To prove guilty knowledge the prosecutor in the first case was called, and gave the same evidence as in the first case. It was held that his evidence was admissible for the purpose of proving guilty knowledge.⁵

At the trial of an accused person on an indictment charging him with obtaining a pony and cart by false pretences on June 4, 1909, evidence was admitted that, on May 14, 1909, and on July 8, 1909, the accused had obtained provender from other persons by false pretences different from those alleged in the indictment. The accused was convicted. It was held that the evidence was wrongfully admitted, as it did not show a systematic course of fraud, but merely that the accused was of a general fraudulent disposition, and therefore it did not tend to prove the falsity of the representations alleged in the indictment; that although there was sufficient evidence of the false pretences alleged to justify the conviction, the evidence as to the other cases might have influenced the jury and the conviction must, therefore, be set aside.⁶

Evidence with regard to a previous act of fraud alleged to have been committed by an accused who is on his trial on a charge under s. 420 is inadmissible in law. Such evidence cannot be brought in either under s. 14 or s. 15 of the Indian Evidence Act, the case being one in which the innocence or guilt of the accused depends upon proof of actual facts and not upon the state of the accused's mind.⁷ On a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that he was the derwan of an estate and could procure for the complainant an appointment to the vacant post of manager to the estate and thereby obtaining a sum of money as a pretended security deposit, evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons, before and after the date of the offence charged, was admissible under ss. 14 and 15 of the Evidence Act, not to establish the factum of the offence but to prove that the transaction in issue was one of a systematic series of frauds, and that the intention of the accused on the particular occasion in question was dishonest and fraudulent.⁸

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

A criminal Court should not, save for very exceptional reasons, go behind the finding of a civil Court and convict of cheating a person who upon the very same facts has succeeded in satisfying a civil Court upon the merits of the case or the justice of his claim. Parties should not be encouraged to resort to the criminal Court in cases in which the point at issue between them is one which can more appropriately be decided by a civil Court.⁹

³ Smith, (1905) 20 Cox 804.

⁴ Rhodes, [1899] 1 Q. B. 77.

⁵ Ollis, [1900] 2 Q. B. 758.

⁶ Fisher, [1919] 1 K. B. 149.

⁷ Gokul Khatik, (1924) 20 C. W. N. 483, 26

Cr. L. J. 906, [1925] AIR (C) 674.

⁸ Debendra Prosad, (1909) 36 Cal. 573.

⁹ Bishan Dass, (1909) P. R. No. 233 of 1910.
12 Cr. L. J. 50.

Attempt to cheat.—In a prosecution on a charge of attempting to cheat a certain person, that person need not be the complainant.¹⁰

Jurisdiction.—The accused sent from Madras by value payable parcel to a person at Hyderabad four boxes of tea. The person got delivery at Hyderabad on payment of Rs. 168. But when he opened the boxes he found they contained saw dust. The accused was charged with an offence under s. 419. It was held that the offence was committed at Hyderabad and the Madras Court had no jurisdiction. The deceit and the delivery in consequence of the deceit were complete when the money was handed to the post office. And the subsequent delivery by the post office to the accused was not a necessary ingredient of the offence to bring it within the operation of s. 179, Criminal Procedure Code.¹¹

Charge.—In the case of cheating the charge must set out the manner in which the offence was committed. Whether the words of the charge are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the accusation which he has got to meet depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. The omission to state the manner of the cheating is regarded as material or not according as the accused has or has not in fact been misled by the omission and the omission has or has not occasioned a failure of justice.¹²

K was convicted of the offence of cheating for obtaining goods from a shop by tendering a post-dated cheque. The charge framed merely stated that the accused cheated the complainant by dishonestly inducing him to deliver certain property; it did not indicate the nature of the representations by which the complainant was induced to make over the goods. It was held that in framing such a charge it was necessary to set out not merely the fact that the accused had obtained goods by dishonest means but also the deception which had been practised so that the accused might have an opportunity of saying either that he never made such representation or that representation was not in fact false, or that it was not in consequence of this representation that the goods were obtained, the need of framing a precise charge being all the stronger in a transaction of this kind in which the representation was implied rather than directly expressed.¹³

Where an accused person attempts to cheat a whole body of villagers and speaks to them in a body and not to each individual villager for the purpose, he may be tried on one charge for each attempt to get money from them.¹⁴ There should be as many charges as there are persons cheated.¹⁵

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, (set out the manner in which the cheating was committed), and thereby committed cheating, an offence punishable under s. 417 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

418. Whoever cheats with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause wrongful loss to a person whose interest in the transaction to which the cheating relates, he was bound either by law, or by legal contract, to protect, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to person whose interest offender is bound to protect.

¹⁰ Mahadev Lal v. Dhonraj Maisri, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 750, 7 C. L. J. 375, 7 Cr. L. J. 342.

¹¹ Ka'ceek, [1927] M. W. N. 221, 52 M. L. J. 511 28 Cr. L. J. 452, [1927] AIR (M) 544.

¹² Kedarnath Chakravarti, (1924) 41 C. L. J.

172, 29 C. W. N. 408, 28 Cr. L. J. 849, [1925] AIR (C) 603.

¹³ Kunwar Sain, [1938] Lah. 662.

¹⁴ Johan Subarna, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 618, 10 C. W. N. 520, 3 Cr. L. J. 111.

¹⁵ Kailash Chandra Pal, (1918) 46 Cal. 712.

COMMENT.

This section applies to cases of cheating by a guardian, a trustee, a solicitor, an agent, or manager of a Hindu family, a kurnavan of turward in Malabar or by directors or managers of a bank in fraud of the shareholders. It is the abuse of trust that is visited with severe punishment. A Mahomedan, who represents himself to be a Hindu for the purpose of getting an employment with a Hindu, who would not employ a Mahomedan, commits an offence under this section.¹⁶

False balance-sheets.—If the directors, manager and accountant, dishonestly, that is, to obtain wrongful gain for themselves or to cause wrongful loss to others, put before the shareholders balance-sheets which they knew to be materially false and misleading and likely to mislead the public as to the condition of the bank, and conceal its true condition and thereby induce depositors to allow their money to remain in deposit in the bank, they commit an offence under this section.¹⁷ But the mere fact that directors pass an incorrect balance-sheet is not sufficient to charge them with cheating. The guilty knowledge of each director cannot be presumed from the fact that he authorizes the issue of a balance-sheet containing false entries. The nature of false statements, the ease or difficulty with which their truth or falsity can be ascertained, the course of business of the company, and the position, experience and attainment of each individual director, are some of the circumstances that should be considered.¹⁸

False prospectus.—The following observations of Lord Halsbury L. C. are very important in fixing liability for false prospectus:—"If by a number of statements you intentionally give a false impression and induce a person to act upon it, it is not the less false although if one takes each statement by itself there may be a difficulty in shewing that any specific statement is untrue".¹⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused cheated some person (see s. 417).

(2) That he was under a legal obligation to protect the interest of that person.

(3) That the cheating had relation thereto.

(4) That he knew he was likely to cause wrongful loss to such person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, cheated XY by doing an act, to wit—, with the knowledge that you were thereby likely to cause wrongful loss to the said XY whose interest in the transaction to which the cheating related you were bound either by law (or a legal contract) to protect, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 418 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

419. Whoever cheats by personation shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for cheating by personation.

COMMENT.

This section provides punishment for the offence described in s. 416.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused cheated the complainant.

¹⁶ Sherbaz, (1923) 18 S. L. R. 59, 25 Cr. L. J. 789, [1925] AIR (S) 57.

¹⁷ Moss, (1893) 16 All. 88. See G. S. Clifford, (1913) 7 L. B. R. 143, 15 Cr. L. J. 80, F.B.

¹⁸ Giles Seddon v. Loane, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 624.

¹⁹ Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss, [1896] A. C. 273, 281; Kylsant (Lord), [1932] 1 K. B. 442.

(2) That he did so by pretending to be some other person; or by knowingly substituting one person for another; or by representing that he, or some other person, is a person other than the person he really is.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of —, at—, pretending to be (specify the person personated) [or knowingly substituted A for B or represented that you or A were so and so], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 419 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

420. Whoever cheats and thereby¹ dishonestly² induces the person deceived to deliver any property³ to any person, or to make, alter or destroy the whole or any part of a valuable security,⁴ or anything which is signed or sealed, and which is capable of being converted into a valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

Simple cheating is punishable under s. 417. But where there is delivery or destruction of any property or alteration or destruction of any valuable security resulting from the act of the person deceiving, the proper section to apply is this section and not s. 417. Section 417 covers cases of cheating in which though there is fraud yet there is no intention of causing wrongful loss, or wrongful gain. The word 'fraudulently' is not used in s. 420.

1. 'And thereby'.—These words do not imply that some further act of delivery is necessary after the offence of cheating is completed, for the offence of cheating is not complete unless the deception is effective. They are only designed to introduce a description of a particular sort of cheating, i.e. when the effect of cheating is to induce the delivery of property or the alteration or destruction of a valuable security.²⁰

2. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra. The word "dishonestly" implies a deliberate intention to cause wrongful gain, or wrongful loss, and when this is coupled with cheating and delivery of property the offence is punishable under this section.²¹ The requirement of dishonesty is satisfied if there was an intention to make wrongful gain on the part of the person cheating even if there was no intention to cause wrongful loss to the person cheated.²² The dishonest intention must either precede or accompany the act of dishonesty.²³ Subsequent denial of a transaction or refusal to return money does not show that there was the necessary criminal intent from the beginning.²⁴ A young boy was married to a girl who was much older. The girl having grown up to womanhood, the mother and the elder brother of the boy suggested to the father of the girl to return certain ornaments which had been given to the bride at the time of marriage and thus put an end to the marriage. The father called a panchayat of leading men, and in accordance with their advice the ornaments demanded were made over and a formal receipt written and signed by the parties. Subsequently, the bride's father charged the boy's mother and brother with cheating. It was held that the charge of cheating could not be entertained as it was found that there was no dishonest

²⁰ Sanwaldas, (1917) 11 S. L. R. 67, 18 Cr. L. J. 990, [1917] AIR (S) 89.

²¹ Ba Shein, (1920) 10 L. B. R. 366, 22 Cr. L. J. 721.

²² Solomon Ezekiel, (1939) 69 C. L. J. 298.

²³ Hemraj, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 295; Ram Bharose Singh, (1936) 37 Cr. L. J. 907, [1936] O. W. N. 754, [1936] AIR (O) 372.

²⁴ Harnam Singh, (1937) 39 P. L. R. 300. 3 Cr. L. J. 845.

inducement.²⁵ Two contracts were entered into between the complainant and the accused, one for the sale by the complainant of a certain number of shares of a particular kind and the other for the purchase by the complainant of certain shares of another kind. Subsequently, when the position between the parties was that the contract regarding the purchase by the complainant was either cancelled or so disputed that it could not be enforced except by litigation the accused induced the complainant to part with his shares promising to give him back cash for it but instead of doing it he offered to credit the value thereof against the sum due to him under the other contract and subsequently tendered the amount less the loss sustained by him for the non-fulfilment of the other contract, it was held that the action of the accused was dishonest and fraudulent within the meaning of this section.¹ Mere breach of a contract cannot give rise to a criminal prosecution. The distinction between a case of mere breach of contract and one of cheating depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of the alleged inducement which may be judged by his subsequent act but of which the subsequent act is not the sole criterion. Where there is no clear and conclusive evidence of the criminal intention of the accused at the time the offence is said to have been committed and where the party said to be aggrieved has an alternative remedy in a civil Court, the matter should not be allowed to be fought in a criminal Court.²

3. 'Deliver any property'.—'Property' in this section refers only to movable property.³ 'Movable property' is defined in s. 22, supra. It includes money.⁴ Whether an article is or is not 'property' does not depend upon its possessing a money or market value. If it has some special value for the person or persons concerned, it is 'property' even though its value cannot be measured in money. A certificate of having passed an examination is therefore 'property' within the meaning of this section.⁵ So is a promissory note. The accused, who had left certain promissory notes with the complainant as security for a loan, dishonestly induced him to return the promissory notes pretending that they were required to collect money from the debtors with the aid of which the complainant would be paid, but instead of doing so disposed of them and did not pay the complainant. It was held that the act of the accused in dishonestly inducing the complainant to return the notes to him constituted cheating.⁶ When property is delivered by means of cheating the offence falls under the first clause.⁷ Where a person issued cheques for some goods which were dishonoured and from the circumstances it could be presumed that he must have been aware that the cheques would be dishonoured so that the failure to meet payment of the cheques was not accidental, it was held that he was guilty under s. 420.⁸

Delivery of money.—The accused falsely representing himself to be the manager of an estate induced one G to borrow some money and pay it to him as advance of security money to be deposited for a post promised by him to G. He then put off G from time to time and at length when he was found out, he promised to return the money. It was held that the offence of cheating was completed as soon as the accused obtained the money by a promise which he knew he could not fulfil. The fact that long afterwards the accused paid back under pressure a part of the money, did not in any way affect his criminality. The test of criminality is what was in his mind at the time when the money was given to him and whether he at that time intended to repay the same.⁹ G, by falsely representing to L that G had been instructed by a competent authority to recruit unskilled labour for service in Africa and that G would, on payment of a certain sum of money as a fee for registering L's name, be able to engage L for service in that country, induced L to pay G the said fee, it was held that G had committed this offence.¹⁰ Where an accused person had taken a ransom for the restoration of stolen

²⁵ Jumman, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 321.

¹ Aswini Kumar Chatterji, (1921) 25 C. W. N. 618, 23 Cr. L. J. 221, [1921] AIR (C) 119.

² Sheosagar Pandey, (1935) 16 P. L. T. 553, 37 Cr. L. J. 38.

³ Abdul Ahad, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 6.

⁴ Birendra Lal Bhaduri, (1904) 32 Cal. 22.

⁵ Local Government v. Gangaram, (1921) 18 N. L. R. 52, 23 Cr. L. J. 443, [1922] AIR (N) 220.

⁶ Venkatagurunatha Sastri, (1923) 45 M. L. J. 133, [1923] M. W. N. 313, 17 L. W. 580, 24 Cr. L. J. 452, [1923] AIR (M) 597.

⁷ Sadanund Doss alias Sona Biswas, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 29; Bavaji, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 96.

⁸ Kunwar Sen, (1932) 8 Luck. 286.

⁹ Debendra Prosad, (1909) 36 Cal. 573.

¹⁰ Girdhari Lal, (1910) P. R. No. 12 of 1913, P. W. R. No. 26 of 1910 (Cr.), 11 Cr. L. J. 428.

property, and failed to return that property to the person who had paid him the ransom, it was held that he ought to be convicted of the more serious offence of cheating under this section.¹¹ The accused drew a hundi and borrowed money on it, without assuring himself that the drawee, with whom he had no previous dealings and who was not supplied with funds, would honour the same. The money so borrowed was spent by him on his own purposes. The hundi, when presented for payment, was dishonoured by the drawee. The accused, though apprised of the dishonouring, took no steps either to have the hundi honoured or to repay the money borrowed on the hundi but made himself scarce. It was held that he was guilty of cheating under this section.¹² Accused adulterated saccharine with bicarbonate of soda and put the mixture into tins which he gave to a broker to sell. The broker sold the mixture as genuine saccharine and received money for it, which he made over to the accused. It was held that the accused was guilty of cheating and abetting that offence.¹³ Where the accused sold Indian liquor representing it a genuine Scotch Whisky with false labels, it was held that he was guilty under this section.¹⁴ The accused, an auditor, took a sum of Rs. 1,000 from two persons whose income-tax affairs he was looking after in order to give it to the income-tax officer. The amount was not paid to the income-tax officer and the accused was charged with an offence under this section for having dishonestly induced his two clients to deliver it to him. It was held that, in the absence of proof that at the time the money was paid to the accused, he did not intend to utilise it for the purpose intended, he could not be convicted of an offence under this section.¹⁵

Suppression of facts.—Mere suppression of some facts at the time of borrowing money does not amount to cheating where there is no evidence of either active deception or dishonest or fraudulent action. So where a person mortgaged to another for Rs. 1,000 a mortgage executed in his favour of a house for Rs. 2,000 and also agreed that in case of his mortgagee not being able to recover his money from the mortgage rights he would make good the money from his other property, it was held that there was no element of cheating in that person's act even if he knew at the time of borrowing money that his mortgagor's title to the house was defective, and did not disclose that defect to his creditor.¹⁶ But where the vendor of property deceived the purchaser into believing that there was only a particular incumbrance on the property sold whereas in fact there were other incumbrances known to the former, it was held that the vendor would be guilty of cheating even if the purchaser was empowered by a covenant in the sale-deed to recover any further moneys for which the property might be liable.¹⁷ Under s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act no charge can be enforced against any property in the hands of a person to whom such property has been transferred for consideration and without notice of the charge. A person, who conceals the charge from such a transferor is not guilty of the offence of cheating.¹⁸

Delivery of money under immoral or illegal contract.—The accused agreed to let her daughter on hire to the complainant for concubinage for one year in consideration of Rs. 70, out of which she received Rs. 35 in advance. Later, she refused to carry out the contract or to return the advance. She was convicted of cheating. It was held, reversing the conviction, that a party to an immoral contract should not be allowed to prosecute on a criminal charge when he could not get performance of the contract in a civil Court.¹⁹ Where, while certain persons were being tried for an offence, the accused representing that he could influence the Court in their favour received money from them and on his being prosecuted for cheating pleaded that the money having been received for an illegal purpose, it should not form the basis of a prosecution, it was held that such a contention was unsound.²⁰ Where the accused took a young girl who was already married from her mother's house with her consent and got her married to a rich man at another village who paid a certain amount to the accused as

¹¹ Nga Shan, (1922) 11 L. B. R. 422, 24 Cr. L. J. 529, [1923] AIR (R) 37.

¹² Uttamlal Narottamdas, (1920) 32 Bom. L. R. 340, 22 Cr. L. J. 305.

¹³ Bholasing Amersingh, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 211, 25 Cr. L. J. 1102, [1924] AIR (B) 303.

¹⁴ J. E. Gubbay, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 556, [1940] AIR (C) 205.

¹⁵ Public Prosecutor v. Bhimeswara Rao, [1947] 2 M. L. J. 594, [1948] M. W. N. 5.

¹⁶ Hari Kishan, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 610.

¹⁷ Lal Bahadur, (1923) 33 Cr. L. J. 884, [1933] AIR (A) 42.

¹⁸ Ramkrishna v. Ganesha, (1934) 30 N. L. R. 303, 35 Cr. L. J. 1063, [1934] AIR (N) 149.

¹⁹ Jani Hira, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 503, 13 Cr. L. J. 521.

²⁰ Yacoub, (1933) 34 Cr. L. J. 1 255, [1933] AIR (R) 199.

bride price which the accused handed over to the mother, it was held that they were guilty of cheating.²¹

Delivery of goods.—A person whose duty it was to ascertain and report the current rates in the market, by arrangement with persons in the market, reported rates higher than those really current, and in consequence of which higher rates were paid to sellers than they were entitled to, it was held that he had committed this offence.²² Where the accused induced the complainant to deliver to him a bicycle under false representations that he was a commission agent and that the machine was required for an up-country purchaser, but after taking its delivery he negotiated its sale to a customer in Bombay, it was held that the offence of cheating and dishonestly inducing the delivery of property was complete as soon as the bicycle was handed over.²³ Where A went to an opium shop with B's ticket and explicitly or by implication represented himself to be B, and thereby induced the shopkeeper to deliver to him a certain quantity of opium, it was held that A had committed the offence of cheating by personation; and as opium was actually delivered in consequence of the cheating, he should be convicted under this section.²⁴ The accused, by making a false representation that he was an employee of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation, obtained rupees ten as subscription from the Health Officer of that Corporation towards the funds of a charitable society. The money was duly made over by the accused to the charity, but he was subsequently charged with the offence of cheating and was convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction and sentence should be set aside, there being no such deception in this case as to cause "wrongful loss" or "wrongful gain".²⁵ Where the accused, falsely pretending to be a pensioned Subedar, intentionally deceived the complainant and dishonestly induced him to let him have on credit certain articles for which he did not intend to pay, it was held that he was guilty under this section as the cheating was accompanied with a transfer of property.¹

Obtaining certificate.—A railway company offered some concession rates to student travellers, and a certificate was presented by somebody—not the accused—containing the names of students who had not applied for the certificate which the accused did not know and the endorsement of the railway official "may be issued" was made thereon, and the accused thereafter presented the same for the necessary pass to be issued. The company issued the pass and arrested the accused. It was held that the accused being himself entitled to travel at the reduced rate was not guilty of any fraudulent intent, no fraudulent intention could be assumed on the part of the accused to use the pass for persons not entitled to travel at the reduced rates and that as the company had not been defrauded the accused could not be convicted.² Where a person obtained a certificate from a Deputy Inspector of Schools by stating untruly that he had passed an examination in a certain year, when another person of the same name had passed, it was held that he had acted fraudulently within the meaning of s. 415, and was guilty of an offence punishable under this section.³ An owner of a tea estate made an application to a Committee for transfer of export quota rights in which he mentioned the export quota far in excess of what was fixed to his credit by the Committee. A clerk of the Committee wrote on the application that the quota mentioned therein was 'available' for transfer. Due to this false endorsement the transferor was granted the quota transfer certificate which enabled him to transfer export quota rights far in excess of what was to his credit and thereby made a huge wrongful gain. It was held that the fraud was committed at the instance of the transferor and as the quota transfer certificates were by themselves property and documents of title both the transferor and the clerk were guilty under this section and s. 120B.⁴

4. 'Valuable security'.—See s. 80, supra. A 'decree' does not come within the definition of "valuable security": it merely declares the existence of legal rights or the extinguishment, extension, transfer or restriction of legal rights, etc.; the rights are there, etc., and all that the decree does is that it formally expresses the ²¹ Banamali Tripathy, (1924) 22 Pat. 263.

²² Parmeshwar Dat, (1886) 8 All. 261.

²³ Banaji Framji Munshi, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 621.

²⁴ Nga Po Lu, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 356.

²⁵ Ashutosh Mallick, (1905) 33 Cal. 50.

¹ Sher Singh, (1928) 10 Lah. 513, 518.

² James Fletcher, [1910] 1 M. W. N. 510, 11 Cr. L. J. 339.

³ Local Government v. Gangaram, (1921) 18 N. L. R. 52, 23 Cr. L. J. 443, [1922] AIR (N) 229.

⁴ J. S. Dhas, [1939] M. W. N. 1125, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 388, [1946] AIR (M) 155.

adjudication by the Court on the rights of the parties. Therefore, a 'decree' is not a "valuable security", but even if a 'decree' did satisfy the definition of a "valuable security", there is no delivery of property. When the Court passes a decree, it does not deliver any property, because the original decree remains in Court, and the term "valuable security" can only apply to the original document and not to any copy of a decree which may be supplied on application to the parties. The same arguments would apply to orders in execution.⁵ A deed of divorce is a valuable security. The complainant was taken to a village on the pretence that a buffalo would be bought for him and that the money necessary for this purpose would be advanced to him. He was then given a large amount of liquor to drink and when in the state of intoxication a document purporting to be a bond was executed and his signature was obtained. This document was a deed of divorce of his wife who was then taken away by some of the accused. It was held that the offence committed came within the purview of this section and not s. 417.⁶

An acknowledgment of receipt of an insured parcel is not a "valuable security". It is merely evidence that a parcel of some sort was delivered to the addressee and it cannot operate as a discharge of any liability. Where the accused, in order to create false evidence that he had paid off a sum of Rs. 650, which he owed to complainant, filled a registered envelope with blank sheets of paper and posted it to the complainant after insuring it for Rs. 650, and the complainant gave an acknowledgment of receipt of the parcel to the post office on receiving the same, it was held that these facts amounted to an attempt to cheat.⁷ This case has not been approved of by the Allahabad High Court,⁸ and the Calcutta High Court has also held that such an act does not amount to cheating.⁹

A bill receipted as by a cheque is not a valuable security. Hence, a person paying a bill by a cheque of date or post-dated and obtaining the bill receipted as by the cheque cannot be charged with this offence on the cheque being dishonoured, inasmuch as he does not induce the delivery of any property or the making of any valuable security.¹⁰

The accused who owed the complainant a certain sum of money made a false representation that he wanted to settle the account and thereby induced the complainant to produce his account book. When the complainant opened the account book for the inspection of accounts the accused tore that part of the page which bore his thumb impression and decamped. It was held that the offence disclosed was one under s. 477 and not one under this section.¹¹

Attempt to cheat.—The accused, having manufactured at home certain spurious trinkets took them to a goldsmith, showed them to him, said they were of gold (which they were not), that they were stolen property (which was also untrue), and that he did not wish to sell them in the bazaar, and said 'buy them'. The goldsmith did not buy and the negotiations went no further. It was held that he was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹² The accused insured his mill and stock, which were burnt by fire. He thereupon made a claim on the basis that 75,040 baskets of paddy were stored at the time of the fire. It was found that the mill godowns were not built to accommodate more than 15,000 baskets. It was held that the claim was not a mere exaggeration but was a false representation as to the quantity stored, that the accused having followed up the notice of the fire by actually sending in false claim papers his action must be regarded as an overt act towards the commission of the offence of cheating which had gone beyond the mere stage of preparation, and the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹³

Abetment.—Where a person quick-silvered a double-pice so as to make it look like a rupee, and gave it to one K to get it changed, it was held that if the idea

⁵ Charu Chandra Ghose, (1923) 28 C. W. N. 414, 422 423, 39 C. L. J. 122, 132, 25 Cr. L. J. 1034, [1924] AIR (C) 502.

⁶ Bakhtawar Singh, (1920) 23 Cr. L. J. 428, [1921] AIR (L) 63.

⁷ Sadho Lal, (1916) 1 P. L. J. 391, 17 Cr. L. J. 272, [1917] AIR (P) 699.

⁸ Tula Ram, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 865, 26 Cr. L. J. 209, [1924] AIR (A) 205.

⁹ Raman Behari Roy, (1923) 50 Cal. 849.

¹⁰ H. K. Shaw, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1182, 62 C. L. J. 119, 37 Cr. L. J. 828, [1936] AIR (C) 324.

¹¹ Ram Parshad v. Dhanna, (1939) 41 P. L. R. 198.

¹² Abdullah, (1914) P. R. No. 14 of 1914, 15 Cr. L. J. 265, [1914] AIR (C) 315. See P. E. Blinghurst v. Blackburn, H. P., (1923) 27 C. W. N. 821, 25 Cr. L. J. 1813, [1924] AIR (C) 18.

¹³ Mawng Po Hmyin, (1923) 2 Ran. 53.

of using the coin as a rupee was an afterthought he might be convicted under ss. 116 and 420 of abetting K to cheat the person to whom he was sent for change.¹⁴

PRACTICE.

The vital difference between offences under s. 417 and this section is that whereas an offence against the latter section is a cognizable one, that against the former is non-cognizable and investigation of it can only be undertaken by the police on the instructions of a Magistrate, whereas in the other case the police can act on their own motion under ss. 154 and 156, Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁵

Evidence.—Prove the same points as those for s. 417, with the modification that the latter part of this section is confined to cases of cheating where the injury caused is the delivery of property, or the making, altering or destroying wholly or partially a valuable security, or making, or destroying anything signed or sealed which is capable of being converted into a valuable security.¹⁶

Evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons, before and after the date of the offence charged, is admissible not to establish the factum of the offence but to prove that the transaction in issue was one of a systematic series of frauds and that the intention of the accused on the particular occasion in question was dishonest and fraudulent.¹⁷ In a case of cheating, it is open to the prosecution to show that the acts charged against the accused were parts of a series of similar acts committed by him, or in which he was concerned, at or about the time in question. Evidence of such other acts, whether previous or subsequent to the frauds charged against the accused, is relevant for the purpose of showing whether or not the intention of the accused was honest or fraudulent. Evidence merely to prove that the accused's character is such that he is likely to commit the act with which he is charged is not admissible.¹⁸

If this representation has to be proved it would be better to get the exact words used by the accused.¹⁹

There is no general principle that a criminal prosecution for cheating must fail if it is based upon a contract which could not be enforced in a civil Court.²⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

When the facts charged indicate an offence under this section, a Second Class Magistrate should not try the accused under s. 417 by ignoring facts of aggravation.²¹

Acquittal of some members of conspiracy to cheat no bar to conviction of remaining member.—Where five persons are alleged to have combined to deceive another and are prosecuted for conspiracy to cheat under this section read with s. 120B, and four are given the benefit of doubt, the position of the remaining accused who is found guilty of deception is not affected. The participation of the others being eliminated, he is the only person who was responsible for deception which ex hypothesi did take place and his conviction under this section is not vitiated by the fact that four of his co-accused, who were said to have conspired with him, were acquitted.²²

Charge.—It should state that the property obtained was the property of the person defrauded.²³

It should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, cheated AB, by dishonestly inducing him to deliver——(specify the property) to you and which was the property of the said AB (or to make, alter, or destroy, the whole or any part of a valuable

¹⁴ Miharban, (1883) P. R. No. 9 of 1884.

¹⁵ Nazir Ahmed, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 245, 246, P.C.

¹⁶ See Kalipuddo Poramanick, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

¹⁷ Debiendra Prosad, (1909) 36 Cal. 573.

¹⁸ Girdhari Lal, (1910) P. R. No. 12 of 1913, P. W. R. No. 26 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 428.

¹⁹ Chandra Narain Jha, [1940] P. W. N. 557.

²⁰ Raghunath, [1940] O. W. N. 819, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 881, [1941] AIR (O) 3.

²¹ Setti Rangayya v. Somappa, (1924) 20 L. W. 919, 25 Cr. L. J. 1193, [1925] AIR (M) 367; Mani Ram, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 463.

²² Jia Lal, [1936] A. L. J. R. 413, 37 Cr. L. J. 697, [1936] AIR (A) 357.

²³ Durga, [1929] A. L. J. R. 400, 30 Cr. L. J. 340, [1929] AIR (A) 260.

security or anything which is signed or sealed, and which is capable of being converted into a valuable security), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 420 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—Where an offender is convicted under this section, some sentence of imprisonment must be given and the Court has a discretion to add or refrain from adding a fine.²⁴ Where a person's proved connection with the specific offence of cheating is only through the general conspiracy to cheat and he has already received a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment for his part in the general conspiracy, there should be no additional sentence on the cheating charge.²⁵

Of Fraudulent Deeds and Dispositions of Property.

421. Whoever dishonestly¹ or fraudulently² removes, conceals or delivers to any person, or transfers or causes to be transferred to any person, without adequate consideration, any property,³ intending thereby to prevent, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby prevent, the distribution of that property according to law among his creditors or the creditors of any other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This and the three following sections deal with fraudulent conveyances referred to in s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act and the Presidency and Provincial Insolvency Acts (III of 1909, s. 56, and V of 1920, s. 54).

Object.—This section is intended to punish fraudulent debtors. It specially refers to frauds connected with insolvency. The offence under it consists in a dishonest disposition of property with intent to cause wrongful loss to the creditors. It is not necessary that the transferee should be privy to the fraud; but want of bona fides on the part of the transferee is necessary under civil law.

When a debtor with bankruptcy impending pays a creditor in the honest belief on reasonable grounds that he is legally bound to make the payment, it is not a fraudulent preference, even though the debtor is in fact under no legal obligation to make the payment.¹

Scope.—The section covers benami transactions in fraud of creditors.²

This section applies to property both movable and immovable.

1. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra. The property of a debtor cannot be distributed according to law save after the provisions of the relevant enactments have been complied with. A shopkeeper who has stocked his shop with goods obtained on credit and who sells these goods without making any payment to his creditors commits no offence under this section. In selling the goods, which are his own in spite of the fact that he has not yet paid for them, he is not causing wrongful gain to himself; neither is he causing wrongful loss to anybody, because unless the creditors have obtained some legal right over the property he is not by his action depriving them of any right of theirs.³

2. 'Fraudulently'.—See s. 25, supra.

3. 'Property'.—This word includes a chose in action. The right to cut trees under an agreement for the purpose of making charcoal from wood is movable property.⁴

²⁴ Williams, (1862) 1 M. H. C. 31; 1 Weir 471.

²⁵ Solomon Ezekiel, (1939) 69 C. L. J. 298, 41 Cr. L. J. 255, [1939] AIR (C) 376.

¹ Vautin; Saffery, [1900] 2 Q. B. 325.

² Abdul Gani Suleman, (1899) P. J. L. B. 593.

L. C.—68

³ Ismail Peer Mohammed, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 767, [1938] AIR (R) 242.

⁴ Manchersha v. Ismail Ibrahim, (1935) 38 Bom. L. R. 168, 60 Bom. 766.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused removed, concealed, or delivered the property; or that he transferred it or caused it to be transferred to some one.

(2) That such transfer was without adequate consideration.

(3) That the accused thereby intended to prevent, or knew he was thereby likely to prevent, the distribution of that property according to law among his creditors, or creditors of another person.

(4) That he acted as above dishonestly or fraudulently.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Jurisdiction.—The Magistrate's jurisdiction to entertain a complaint under this section is not taken away by the provisions of s. 103 of the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, III of 1909,⁵ or the Provincial Insolvency Act, V of 1920, s. 69.⁶ The Magistrate's jurisdiction to try the insolvent under this section and s. 424 even after the death of the complainant is not taken away by the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act.⁷

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, dishonestly (or fraudulently) removed (or concealed, or delivered) to a certain person, to wit——, without adequate consideration) certain property, to wit——, intending thereby to prevent or knowing it to be likely that you would thereby prevent the distribution of the said property according to law among your creditors (or the creditors of——); and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 421 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

422. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently prevents any debt or demand due to himself or to any other person from being made available according to law for payment of his debts or the debts of such other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors.

COMMENT.

This section, like the preceding one, is intended to prevent the defrauding of creditors by masking property. Any proceeding to prevent the attachment and sale of debts due to the accused will fall under it. The offence consists in the dishonest or fraudulent evasion of one's own liability.

CASES.

Where A entered into an agreement with B not to compromise a case with C, because he had assigned the benefit of the suit to B as a security for the due payment of an instalment of money and A notwithstanding did afterwards compromise the suit with C, it was held that A could not be convicted under this section unless the compromise was made dishonestly or fraudulently towards B.⁸ The accused's estate was under mortgage and in the management of certain persons under certain conditions as to payment of moneys realized by them. In execution of a decree obtained by the managers in a suit brought by them in the name of the accused, a certain under-tenure was sold for Rs. 3,000. The judgment-debtor arranged with the accused that on payment of Rs. 1,000 the sale should be set aside and he accordingly paid that sum into Court, and an application was made by the accused to draw out the money upon which no order was made. They were, thereupon, convicted, at the instance of the managers, of an attempt to commit an offence under this section. It was held

⁵ Mulshanker Harinand Bhat, (1910) 35 Bom. 63, 12 Bom. L. R. 750.

⁶ Segu Baliah v. Ramasamiah, (1917) 6 L. W. 283, 18 Cr. L. J. 992.

⁷ U Mo Gaung v. U Po Sin, (1928) 6 Ran. 664.

⁸ Nobin Chunder Mudduck, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

that the application to obtain the money paid into Court might have been a breach of their contract with the mortgagors, but such conduct would not necessarily be regarded as dishonest or fraudulent so as to render the accused liable to punishment; their attempt to get the money being more to put an end to the management than to prevent money from being available for the payment of their debt under the mortgage.⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the debt or demand was due to the accused, or some other person.

(2) That the accused prevented such debt or demand from being made legally available for his debts, or for the debts of another person.

(3) That he did as above dishonestly or fraudulently.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

423. Whoever dishonestly¹ or fraudulently² signs, executes or becomes a party to any deed or instrument³ which purports to transfer or subject to any charge any property, or any interest therein, and which contains any false statement relating to the consideration for such transfer⁴ or charge, or relating to the person or persons for whose use or benefit it is really intended to operate, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

One of the necessary elements under this section is that some dishonesty or fraud should be made out.¹⁰ The section deals with fraudulent and fictitious conveyances and trust. If the consideration for the sale of immovable property is, with the consent of the purchaser, exaggerated in a deed of sale in order to defeat the claim of the pre-emptor, the purchaser will be guilty of this offence.¹¹ In such cases it is necessary to prove the existence of a right of pre-emption in respect of the subject-matter of such sale, as it is not an offence if the property sold is not subject to such a right.¹²

Under this section the dishonest execution of a benami deed will be punishable. The institution of a civil suit is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of a charge in a criminal Court for this offence.¹³

1. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra.

2. 'Fraudulently'.—See s. 25, supra. This word does not connote deprivation of property. It is not essential that the person deceived or to be deceived should be the same as the person injured or intended to be injured.¹⁴ Where the judgment-debtors executed a document with a false recital as to the consent of the decree-holder to take their land and this was found to have been done fraudulently with the intention of supporting at a later stage a case of satisfaction of the money decree which the decree-holder had obtained against them, it was held that this was enough to bring the act of the judgment-debtors within the purview of this section.¹⁵

3. 'Any deed or instrument'.—A kabuliat is not a document contemplated under this section. Although a kabuliat, when accepted, operates as a lease for some purposes, it is not a document which purports to transfer or subject to any charge any property or any interest therein.¹⁶

⁹ Hara Karmay Choredharani v. Savi, (1900) 28 Cal. 314.

¹⁰ Hafim-un-nisa, [1935] O. W. N. 879, 37 Cr. L. J. 1037, [1936] AIR (O) 195.

¹¹ Gurditta Mal, (1901) P. R. No. 10 of 1902; Lachman Das, (1907) P. R. No. 16 of 1907, 6 Cr. L. J. 111; Mahabir Singh, (1902) 25 All. 31.

¹² Chhajju, (1907) P. R. No. 16 of 1908, 8 Cr.

L. J. 486.

¹³ Umrao Singh, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 209.

¹⁴ Legal Remembrancer v. Ahi Lal Mandal, (1921) 48 Cal. 911.

¹⁵ Amiri Singh, (1933) 34 Cr. L. J. 846, [1933] AIR (P) 495.

¹⁶ Mahammad Kazem Ali v. Jorabdi Naskar, (1919) 46 Cal. 986.

4. 'False statement relating to the consideration for such transfer'.—

The law does not make punishable every false statement in an instrument of transfer. The false statement in order to become criminal must relate to the consideration or to the person to be benefited by it. The word 'consideration' cannot mean the property transferred. A statement that the vendee purchased the whole land while the vendor could only sell part of it, is not one coming under this section.¹⁷ Where an accused person had unsuccessfully sought to obtain a woman in marriage and thereafter made and registered an agreement in her favour falsely reciting that he had married her, and purporting to convey to her a plot of land in lieu of her dower, it was held that he had an intention to cause injury to her and her husband, and to support his own false claim to that status, and that he was guilty under this section.¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused signed, executed, or became a party to the deed, or instrument in question.

(2) That the purport of such document was to transfer, or to subject to a charge, the property or any interest in question.

(3) That such document contained a false statement relating to the consideration, or relating to the person for whose use or benefit it was really intended to operate.

(4) That the accused did as above dishonestly or fraudulently.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

424. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently conceals or removes Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property.

any property¹ of himself or any other person, or dishonestly or fraudulently assists in the concealment or removal thereof, or dishonestly releases any demand or claim to which he is entitled, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section provides for cases not coming within the purview of ss. 421 and 422. It contemplates such a concealment or removal of property from the place in which it is deposited, as can be considered dishonest or fraudulent, whether the fraud is intended to be practised on creditors or partners.¹⁹

1. 'Dishonestly or fraudulently conceals or removes any property'.—

The crucial question for determination under this section is whether the alleged removal of property is dishonest or fraudulent, and therefore if persons claiming title to a property under attachment in execution of a decree on another remove the same, the matter whether such property belonged to the accused or no has to be determined by the criminal Court before deciding upon conviction.²⁰

The removal is ejusdem generis with concealment which precedes it. The section has no application to a case where property is openly seized by a person in the exercise of an alleged right.²¹

CASES.

Removal by partner.—Where one of the several partners removed the partnership books at night, and when questioned denied having done so, this offence was held to have been committed.²² But a partner who retains the books of accounts of the partnership business cannot be prosecuted for an offence under this section.²³

¹⁷ Mania Goundan, (1917) 37 Mad. 47.

¹⁸ Legal Remembrancer v. Ahil Lal Mandal, (1921) 48 Cal. 911.

¹⁹ Gour Benode Dutt, (1873) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 10, 13 Beng. L. R. 308n.

²⁰ Ghasi, (1929) 52 All. 214, 216.

²¹ Nand Kishore, [1939] A. L. J. R. 941, 41 Cr. L. J. 111, [1939] AIR (A) 710.

²² Gour Benode Dutt, (1873) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 10, 13 Beng. L. R. 308n.

²³ Man Mohan Das v. Mohendra Bhowal, (1948) 52 C. W. N. 441.

Removal of property to save it from attachment.—Taking away property by others with a view that it might not be attached, if done with a dishonest intention, would amount to an offence under this section.²⁴

Removal during attachment.—Where a judgment-debtor, whose standing crops were attached, harvested them while the attachment was in force, this offence was held to have been committed.²⁵ But where the accused is not a judgment-debtor and has grown the crops which he contended could not be legally attached, he cannot be convicted under this section for harvesting them.¹

Removal when order of attachment illegal.—A removal of crops in violation of an order, which the person making it has no authority to make, does not constitute this offence.² Removal of crops to avoid an illegal distraint is not an offence under this section.³ Certain crops were attached in execution of a decree and placed in the custody of a bailiff. The crops did not belong to the judgment-debtors, and the owners cut and removed a portion of them in spite of the resistance of the bailiff. It was held that no offence was committed.⁴ Where property was attached after the date fixed for the return of the warrant of attachment,⁵ and where the warrant of attachment was itself illegal,⁶ it was held that the property was not lawfully attached and the owner did not commit an offence by removing the attached property. In execution of a decree against the accused the Amin purported to attach his crops but the attachment did not comply with the provisions of Order XXI, r. 44, Civil Procedure Code. Subsequently, the crops were removed by the accused and he was prosecuted under this section. It was held that the attachment being illegal, the accused could not be convicted under this section.⁷

Removal of crops by tenants.—Where ryots holding land on veram tenure removed crops for the purpose of protecting them from injury or damage owing to delay or refusal on the part of the Zemindar to perform his part in harvesting or division, it was held that such a removal was not dishonest. But where it was proved that the crops had been removed dishonestly or fraudulently, it was held that this offence was committed, even though the Zemindar, under the terms of the tenancy, acquired no property in the share due to him until the ryots had delivered it to him.⁸ Similarly, where the accused who was a ryot under the Madras Estates Land Act and who was bound to share the produce of his land with the landholder in a certain proportion, dishonestly concealed or removed the produce, thus preventing the landholder from taking his due share, it was held that the accused was guilty under this section apart from the provisions of the Madras Estates Land Act.⁹

Removal during bona fide dispute.—Where the accused was convicted under this section, for dishonestly removing certain property from a shop upon which were the padlocks of two widows and it appeared that he removed the property at the instance of the widow who claimed to be entitled to the whole of it, it was held that if eventually it be decided that the other widow was not entitled to a share in the property, it would follow that the accused's action in removing the property from the locked shop was not a dishonest one within the meaning of this section.¹⁰

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused concealed or removed the property, or that he assisted in doing so.

²⁴ Rajamraju v. Tirapatiraju, [1930] M. W. N. 347, 32 L. W. 23, 31 Cr. L. J. 1086, [1930] AIR (M) 670.

²⁵ Obayya, (1898) 22 Mad. 151; Daya Karsan, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 515; Appaiya Goundan, (1883) 1 Weir 485; Ram Bahal Ahir, [1936] A. L. J. R. 283, 37 Cr. L. J. 675, [1936] AIR (A) 364.

¹ Sohan Mundari, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 435, [1929] AIR (P) 520.

² Bavuri Magata, (1882) 1 Weir 483; Ananda Muthusami Aiyar, (1883) 1 Weir 484.

³ Gopalasamy, (1902) 25 Mad. 729; Nallamaden Chettiar, [1930] M. W. N. 352, 58 M. L. J. 509, 31 L. W. 719, 31 Cr. L. J. 1196, [1930] AIR (M) 509.

⁴ Ghasi, (1929) 52 All. 214.

⁵ Gurdial, (1932) 55 All. 119.

⁶ Chelli Latchanna, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 795, [1942] AIR (P) 480.

⁷ Sarsar Singh, [1934] A. L. J. R. 749, 35 Cr. L. J. 1307, [1934] AIR (A) 711.

⁸ Subudhi Rantho v. Balarama Pudi, (1902) 26 Mad. 481; Periana Thevan v. Karupiah Thevan, [1931] M. W. N. 1049.

⁹ Sivanupandia Thevan, (1914) 38 Mad. 793; Kuldip Panday, (1916) 1 P. L. J. 353, 17 Cr. L. J. 315, [1916] AIR (P) 232; Lalu Gope, (1917) 1 Cr. L. J. 687, [1917] AIR (P) 522.

¹⁰ Khusi Ram, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 142, [1921] AIR (L) 184.

(2) That he did as above dishonestly,¹¹ or fraudulently.¹²

Or prove (1) that the accused was entitled to the demand or claim in question.

(2) That he released the same.

(3) That he did so dishonestly, or with intent to defraud.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

The legality or formality of the mode of attachment allowed by a civil Court is not a matter for a Deputy Magistrate's consideration.¹³ Civil rights are not to be disposed of in criminal Courts.¹⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——; at——, dishonestly (or fraudulently) concealed (or removed) a certain property, to wit——, belonging to yourself (or to——) [or dishonestly or fraudulently assisted in the concealment or removal thereof; or dishonestly released a certain demand, to wit——] and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 424 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Of Mischief.

425. Whoever, with intent to cause, or knowing that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any person,¹ causes the destruction of any property, or any such change in any property² or in the situation thereof as destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously³, commits "mischief".

Mischief.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to the offence of mischief that the offender should intend to cause loss or damage to the owner of the property injured or destroyed. It is sufficient if he intends to cause, or knows that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to any person by injuring any property, whether it belongs to that person or not.

Explanation 2.—Mischief may be committed by an act affecting property belonging to the person who commits the act, or to that person and others jointly.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A voluntarily burns a valuable security belonging to Z intending to cause wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(b) A introduces water into an ice-house belonging to Z and thus causes the ice to melt, intending wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(c) A voluntarily throws into a river a ring belonging to Z, with the intention of thereby causing wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(d) A, knowing that his effects are about to be taken in execution in order to satisfy a debt due from him to Z, destroys those effects, with the intention of thereby preventing Z from obtaining satisfaction of the debt, and of thus causing damage to Z. A has committed mischief.

(e) A having insured a ship, voluntarily causes the same to be cast away, with the intention of causing damage to the underwriters. A has committed mischief.

(f) A causes a ship to be cast away, intending thereby to cause damage to Z who has lent money on bottomry on the ship. A has committed mischief.

(g) A having joint property with Z in a horse, shoots the horse, intending thereby to cause wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

¹¹ Halim-un-nissa, [1935] O. W. N. 879, 37 Cr. L. J. 1037, [1936] AIR (O) 195.

¹² Sohan Mundari, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 435,

[1929] AIR (P) 520.

¹³ Brojo Kishore Dutt, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 17.

¹⁴ (1868) 1 Weir 483.

(h) A causes cattle to enter upon a field belonging to Z, intending to cause and knowing that he is likely to cause damage to Z's crops. A has committed mischief.

426. Whoever commits mischief shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for mischief.

COMMENT.

The section deals only with a physical injury from a physical cause.¹⁵

Ingredients.—This section necessitates three things¹⁶:—

1. Intention or knowledge of likelihood to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any person.
2. Causing the destruction of some property or any change in it or in its situation.
3. Such change must destroy or diminish its value or utility or affect it injuriously.

1. 'Intent to cause, or knowing that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public or any person'.—As to the meaning of 'wrongful loss', see s. 23, supra; and of 'public', sec. s. 12, supra. 'Wrongful loss or damage' means loss or damage by unlawful means. The accused installed an oil engine on his property. The complainant, who was a neighbour of the accused, instituted criminal proceedings against the accused, alleging that his property was damaged by reason of vibrations from the engine. It was held that the accused was not liable to be convicted of mischief, for there was nothing unlawful in his installing an oil engine in his own property and working it in any way he chose, and that if the damage complained of was attributable to what was in its nature a lawful act of the accused, the matter could be dealt with in the civil Court.¹⁷

The Bombay High Court in an old case said that the gist of this offence lay in the intention.¹⁸ But in a subsequent case it has held that the terms of the section are satisfied when there is a distinct finding on the question of the accused's knowledge, and the question of intention is material only as regards the sentence.¹⁹ This is the correct view. A person commits mischief if he causes destruction of property knowing that he is likely to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or any person even if an intention to cause that damage is not made out.²⁰

The offence of mischief imports an act done wilfully and not merely negligently.²¹

This section does not necessarily contemplate damage of a destructive character. It requires merely that there should be an invasion of a right, and diminution of the value of one's property, caused by that invasion of right, which must have been contemplated by the doer of it when he did it.²² The damage need not, necessarily, consist in the infringement of an existing, present, and complete right, but it may be caused by an act done now with the intention of defeating and rendering infructuous a right about to come into existence (vide ill. (d)). Any person who contracts to purchase property, and pays in a portion of the purchase-money, has such an interest in that property, although his title may not be complete, or his right final and conclusive, that the destruction of such property may cause to him wrongful loss or damage within the meaning of this section.²³ The probable consequential damage to other property would not of itself constitute mischief.²⁴

Cases.—Wrongful loss or damage necessary.—The accused's premises adjoined a public road on the opposite side of which there grew a chestnut-tree, which overhung the road to within a few feet of the accused's premises. The accused cut off

¹⁵ Moti Lal, (1901) 24 All. 155, 156.

¹⁶ (1868) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 15, 1 Weir 512; (1874) 7 M. H. C. (Appx.) 89; Nga Tha Zan, (1901) (1897-1901) 1 U. B. R. 348.

¹⁷ Punjaji Bagul, (1934) 37 Bom. L. R. 96, 59 Bom. 177.

¹⁸ Shama, (1874) Unrep. Cr. C. 88.

¹⁹ Revsing, (1894) Cr. R. No. 13 of 1894, Unrep. Cr. C. 690.

²⁰ Kastur Chand, (1933) 15 P. L. T. 107, 35 Cr. L. J. 1034, [1934] AIR (P) 221.

²¹ Akidullah, [1911] 5 S. L. R. 263, 13 Cr. L. J. 536.

²² Juggeshwar Dass v. Koylash Chunder Chatterjee, (1885) 12 Cal. 55.

²³ Dharma Das Ghose v. Nusseruddin, (1886) 12 Cal. 660.

²⁴ (1868) 4 M. J. C. (Appx.) 15, 1 Weir 512.

certain portions of the tree, contending that he had a right to do so in order to protect his property from the nuisance caused by stones which boys threw at the blossoms, and by the branches interfering with the entrance of light and air to his dwelling. It was held that he was guilty of causing damage to the tree.²⁵ Where tenants finding their fields flooded, cut a channel through a railway in order to let the water run off their fields, it was held that the act having been intentionally done amounted to mischief and it was no defence to say that their motive in doing it, namely, to free their fields from water, was an innocent one.¹ After driving a cow out of his master's field the accused threw at her two stones one of which fractured her leg. It was held that he was guilty of mischief under this section. If the animal had been maimed or rendered useless the conviction would be under s. 428.² The accused dug a trench in his own land but alongside of a wall belonging to the complainant and removed the lateral support of the wall so as to cause the wall to tumble down. The complainant had not acquired lateral support for his wall by prescription. It was held that the accused in digging a trench and thus removing such support could not be said to have an intention to cause "wrongful loss" to the complainant as the means adopted by him to cause the loss were not "unlawful".³ Over the chabutra of a mosque there was an image of a Hindu god. It was surrounded by a wall which belonged to the Mahomedan community. Accused, a Hindu, widened the doorway in the wall by demolishing a portion of it on either side of the door. It was held that he was guilty of mischief.⁴ A person obstructing a right of water-course belonging to another commits an act of trespass and the loss caused to him by the persons entitled to the right when they destroy that obstruction in order to exercise their own right of water-course cannot be considered to be wrongful loss within the meaning of this section.⁵

Destruction of property of trespasser.—The owner of land has no right to destroy the property of a trespasser found upon the premises. The complainant obtained possession of certain land as tenant of the accused, D, and after the term of his lease had expired, he was left in possession by D who took no steps to evict him. But when the complainant attorned to one B as landlord, D, who was litigating with B, forcibly and wantonly destroyed the earthen pots and put out of order a water-wheel of the well from which the complainant watered the crop raised by him on the land in dispute. It was held that the damage caused by D amounted to mischief. Batty, J., said: "The applicant's pleader, I understand, is unable to contend that if a trespasser left his watch in the room of another person, that would justify that other person in smashing the watch or throwing it down a well".⁶ There was a dispute about the possession of a certain land between the accused and the complainant. The complainant dug a well with a view to cultivate the land. The accused forcibly entered on the land and damaged the well. It was held that the accused were guilty under s. 147 and this section.⁷ The accused, who had a right of way for his carts across the fields of the complainants, was prevented from exercising his right by the complainants erecting dams in their fields. The accused obtained an injunction restraining the complainants from interfering with the accused in the exercise of his right. The complainants failed to comply with the injunction. The accused, instead of enforcing the injunction in the usual way, himself proceeded to the complainants' fields and had the dams demolished. It was held that the accused was guilty of mischief, for the loss to the complainants was caused by unlawful means adopted by the accused in taking the law in his own hands and abetting the nuisance contrary to the provisions of s. 36 of the Indian Easements Act, 1882.⁸ A dominant owner, having a right of way over land of another, was held to have no right to remove an obstruction unless his right of way was impaired by it. If he did so, and if loss of property was caused thereby to another, he would be guilty under this section.⁹ Where certain persons gathered at a public ²⁵ Hamilton v. Bone, (1888) 16 Cox 437.

¹ The Deputy Superintendent & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Chulhan Ahir, (1908) 16 C. W. N. 263, 13 Cr. L. J. 188.

² Mahadeo, (1916) 12 N. L. R. 188, 18 Cr. L. J. 286, [1916] AIR (N) 14.

³ Athi Ayyar, (1920) 14 L. W. 728, 23 Cr. L. J. 607, [1921] AIR (M) 332.

⁴ Mahadeo Singh, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 898, [1926] AIR (A) 704.

⁵ Deocharan Singh v. Ram Sunder Sahu, [1938] P. W. N. 642, 19 P. L. T. 703, 40 Cr. L. J. 89, [1938] AIR (P) 538.

⁶ Dinkar Chintaman Patkar, (1904) 7 Bom. L. R. 86, 87, 2 Cr. L. J. 55, 57.

⁷ Abdul Hussain, [1943] Kar. 7.

⁸ Zipru Tanaji Patil, (1927) 51 Bom. 417, 29 Bom. L. R. 484.

⁹ Hari Bilash Shau v. Narayan Das Agarwala, [1938] 1 Cal. 680.

street and demolished a portion of a building which they considered to be an encroachment on the street, it was held that the accused had no right to take the law in their hands in order to abate the nuisance and were consequently liable to be proceeded against for offences under ss. 147 and 427.¹⁰ The Court dissented from an earlier case in which the accused, who were members of the public and who, in bona fide exercise of the right of way, pulled down a wall obstructing a public way which was built by the complainant, were held not guilty of mischief.¹¹ There is no statutory provision in India justifying a private person or a member of the public in demolishing a building and causing loss to another person by way of abating a nuisance.¹² A private party, having a right of easement, is not entitled to take the law in his own hands in order to remove an obstruction unless it actually amounts to nuisance.¹³

Accident.—Where the accused who were employed in floating timber through a bridge, struck the arch of the bridge with some of the logs, it was held that this offence was not committed.¹⁴

No mischief if no wrongful loss or damage or invasion of civil right.—Where the accused cut down crops planted by the complainant on land to which he had no right whatever;¹⁵ where the accused was found catching fish in a public river, the right of fishing in which was let out by Government to another but no fencing was put up to shut up the fish in any manner;¹⁶ where the servant of a person pulled down a building which a civil Court had declared ought not to have been erected;¹⁷ where a person innocently removed a barricade placed by a Municipality on a piece of land in front of his house which impaired his ingress and egress to or from his house;¹⁸ where an agent of a landlord accompanied by a bailiff broke open the door of a room, in his chawl, in the possession of his tenant, in execution of a distress warrant issued against the tenant for non-payment of rent;¹⁹ where the owner of an animal buried its carcass to prevent the mahars (low caste people) of a village from taking off its skin;²⁰ where a person, in a bona fide belief that the construction of a wall on his land was a civil trespass, destroyed the construction;²¹ where members of a Municipal Committee permitted a tree within municipal limits to be cut for public purposes against the orders of the Municipal Committee as a body;²² where persons took cattle to a pound whereby their owners were subjected to a fine;²³ where the reversioner of a mortgagor sold some of the bricks of the mortgaged house, which had tumbled down;²⁴ and where a person dug out tombs of the forefathers of the complainant which stood on his own lands,²⁵ it was held in all these cases that this offence was not committed.

The fact that for years a deity was allowed to be brought once a year underneath a tree standing on the land of the accused for public worship, was not sufficient to divest the owner of the land and of the tree standing thereon of his ownership and not to amount to a dedication of the tree to the deity or the public, and the accused, who cut the tree, was, therefore, not guilty of mischief.¹ Where the accused, a servant of one R, acting solely in the interests of his master, removed or damaged some bamboos which belonged to the estate of his master which was under the management of the Court of Wards, it was held that the act of the accused did not amount to this offence inasmuch as by his act no wrongful loss was caused to anybody, not even to the Court of Wards. The Court said: "It is a well-known rule of law that a man may commit mischief by damaging his own property, provided he does so in order to cause wrongful loss to somebody else, or knowing it to be likely to cause wrongful loss to somebody else.

¹⁰ Narasimhulu v. Nagur Sahib, (1933) 57 Mad. 351.

¹¹ Dharmalinga Mudaly, (1914) 39 Mad. 57.

¹² Narasimhulu v. Nagur Sahib, (1933) 57 Mad. 351.

¹³ Hari Bilash Shau v. Narayan Das Agarwala, [1938] 1 Cal. 680.

¹⁴ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 40, 1 Weir 487.

¹⁵ Nga Si, (1908) 1 Cr. L. J. 668.

¹⁶ Bhagiram Dome v. Agar Dome, (1888) 15 Cal. 388; Bakar Halsana v. Dinobandhu Biswas, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 17, 12 W. R. (Cr.) 1.

¹⁷ Rajcoomar Singh, (1878) 3 Cal. 573.

¹⁸ Abdul Aziz, (1895) Cr. R. No. 10 of 1895,

Unrep. Cr. C. 745.

¹⁹ Kaikhuro Cursetji, (1898) Unrep. Cr. C. 949.

²⁰ Gorinda Punja, (1884) 8 Bom. 295.

²¹ Shankar Lal, (1887) 7 A. W. N. 101; Rustam Ali, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 209.

²² Amir Chand, (1877) P. R. No. 9 of 1878.

²³ Ramjiawan, (1881) 1 A. W. N. 158; Dayal, [1943] O. W. N. 202, (1943) 44 Cr. L. J. 640, [1943] AIR (O) 280.

²⁴ Bhuban Mohan Banerjee v. Tansuk Roy Seraogi, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 34.

²⁵ Chotually, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 463; but see contra, Rumala Nagayya, (1889) 1 Weir 496.

¹ Venkatapurmanandam, (1902) 1 Weir 496.

But it can hardly be said that a man who damages his own estate, although he has at present only a qualified interest damages the trustees in possession, whose only object is to preserve the estate for the benefit of the owner".² If a person wishing to eject a trespasser sets fire to his own house, he cannot be said to cause wrongful loss to any person or to the public, and, therefore, cannot be convicted of mischief.³

2. 'Causes the destruction of any property or any such change in any property'.—It is the essence of this offence that the perpetrator must cause the destruction of property or such change in it as destroys or diminishes its value or utility. Something should be done to the property contrary to its natural use and serviceableness. It may be mischief to throw the contents of a pot of food upon the fire, but it is not mischief, though it may be theft, to eat the food. Where some graziers grazed goats without the necessary permit no offence was held to have been committed.⁴ To cut a crop that is grown to be cut is not to destroy it, or affect it injuriously,⁵ but cutting an unripe crop would constitute mischief.⁶ Cutting and removal of bamboos which are grown to be cut⁷ or of a branch of a tree⁸ does not amount to mischief. Walking across a field of long grass is causing damage to the grass;⁹ making a breach in the wall of a canal is an act which causes such a change in the property as destroys or diminishes its value or affects it injuriously and therefore amounts to mischief.¹⁰ The section contemplates a physical injury from a physical cause. Certain Hindus present at a caste dinner had sat down to partake of the food which had been served to them, when certain other members of the caste came, and, after telling those who were seated to move to another place which they refused to do, threw down a shoe amongst the men who were seated. The persons who threw the shoe were convicted of mischief inasmuch as their action had polluted the food, and had, from a Hindu religious point of view, rendered it unfit to be eaten. It was held that they were not guilty of mischief.¹¹ Where the accused, a landlord, omitted to give electric light to the complainant, his tenant, by not switching on the light, it was held that this did not amount to mischief as it did not involve a change in the property.¹²

The accused threw large pieces of brick at the back of the complainant's house, complainant being at the time on the ground in front of the house and there being no one in the house. It was held that the accused was guilty of mischief because roofs and walls of dwelling-houses were not put up to be pelted at with brick-bats and their owners had a right to be protected from even hurts and marks being made in and on them without their consent.¹³

'Property' means some tangible corporeal property capable of being forcibly destroyed, but does not include an easement. The accused with intent to cause wrongful loss or damage to the complainant caused the destruction of certain stairs. The Magistrate found that the accused was the owner of the stairs but that the complainant had the right to use them, and convicted the accused. It was held, quashing the conviction, that even assuming such an easement existed it could not be considered 'property' within the meaning of this section.¹⁴ Similarly a right to collect toll at a public ferry was not held to be property.¹⁵ If the owner of land over which another or a body of others have a right either of passage or other use throws earth upon the land so that the use becomes either disadvantageous or impossible, it does not amount to mischief.¹⁶ Filling up a ditch dug by the complainant does not constitute mischief as, in the first place, it is doubtful if it can be said to cause wrongful loss to the complainant, and, in the second place, it does not affect any property injuriously so as to diminish its

² Parameswar Singh, (1910) 38 Cal. 180, 181.

³ Ram Krishna Singh, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 385, 28 Cr. L. J. 321, [1922] AIR (P) 197.

⁴ Ragupathi Ayyar v. Narayana Goundan, (1928) 52 Mad. 151.

⁵ Pahawan Singh, (1934) 10 Luck. 1.

⁶ Mahomed Foyaz v. Khan Mohamed, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 10. See Miras Chowkidar, (1803) 7 C. W. N. 713.

⁷ Shakur Mahomed v. Chunder Mohun Sha, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 38.

⁸ Sardar Singh, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 339,

[1918] AIR (P) 323, contra, Muhammad Hasan, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 275, [1927] AIR (A) 610.

⁹ Gayford v. Chouler, [1898] 1 Q. B. 316.

¹⁰ Bansi, (1912) 34 All. 210.

¹¹ Moti Lal, (1910) 24 All. 155.

¹² Abdul Rahman, (1927) 22 S. L. R. 393, 28 Cr. L. J. 960, [1928] AIR (S) 49.

¹³ Ma Nyein Gale v. Nga Sein, (1909) 5 L. B. R. 100, 10 Cr. L. J. 552, F.B.

¹⁴ Keru, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 387.

¹⁵ Ali Ahmad v. Ibadat-Ullah Khan, [1944] All. 189.

¹⁶ Ramaraju, [1980] M. W. N. 909.

value or utility.¹⁷ But where the accused dug a ditch in a cartway over which the complainant had a right to pass it was held that they were guilty of mischief.¹⁸

The mischief must be done to the property belonging to another person, but where a person's right is declared by a civil Court, he commits no mischief by damaging the property.¹⁹

Where the accused on receiving delivery of a registered article from a village branch postmaster was requested to sign an acknowledgment for the article received by him, but instead of returning the same duly signed he tore it up and threw it on the ground, it was held that the accused was guilty of mischief. The Court said: "...the act of tearing is an act of mischief, and...the postal receipt is the property of the post office, which has some value, however small. The tearing of such a receipt causes damage to the post office, that is wrongful loss to it, and...there can be no question that the accused is liable under s. 426...for his act".²⁰ The destruction of a document evidencing an agreement void for immorality constitutes this offence as it can be used as evidence for other collateral purposes.²¹

In a Collectorate partition a certain building which was in the possession of the complainant fell to the share of one A. Subsequently, there was a compromise between A and the complainant whereby the former agreed to give up the building to the latter in exchange for a plot of land. This compromise was filed before the Collector who gave effect to it in the Collectorate partition. Complainant continued in possession of the building. Accused, a servant of A, along with others, demolished the building and ploughed up the site asserting that the building belonged to his master A and that the compromise was ineffective as no deed of exchange had been drawn up in accordance therewith. It was held that the compromise having been given effect to by the Collector in the partition the title to the building had passed to the complainant, and that the accused was, therefore, guilty of mischief.²²

'Change' means physical change in composition or form. A change in value is not sufficient to constitute mischief.

3. 'Destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously'.— It is highly essential that the property regarding which the offence is alleged to have been committed must have been destroyed or its value or utility must have been diminished. In the latter case it is not said to what extent the value or utility must have been diminished. But there must be some appreciable diminution; otherwise s. 95 will apply. It is not essential that the property interfered with should belong to the person injuriously affected. See Explanation 1. Illustrations (e) and (f) exemplify this Explanation.

D, as lessee of Government, held rights of fishery in a particular stretch of river. C, by diverting the water of that river, converted the bed of the river for a considerable distance into dry land, or land with a very shallow covering of water upon it, and by so doing he was enabled to destroy, and did destroy, very large quantities of fish, both mature and immature. It was held that when C deliberately changed the course and condition of the river in the manner described to the detriment of D, he was guilty of the offence of mischief.²³

A person who destroys property which at the time belongs to himself with the intention of causing, or knowing that it is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to anybody else, is guilty of this offence.²⁴ Illustrations (e) and (g) show that a man may commit mischief on his own property. See Explanation 2. In order, however, to his doing so, it is necessary that he intends to cause wrongful loss to some person, as in the cases stated in the illustrations. If a person destroys a duplicate specimen (his own property) of some rare coin, painting, or other object to enhance the value of the remaining one, such an act could not be done with the intention of thereby causing wrongful loss to any person.²⁵

¹⁷ Ram Roop, [1938] O. W. N. 1127, 3 Cr. L. J. 188, [1939] AIR (O) 88.

¹⁸ Sri Ram, [1947] O. W. N. 481.

¹⁹ Jang Bahadur Singh, (1925) 7 P. L. T. 79, 27 Cr. L. J. 392, [1926] AIR (P) 244; Arman Shaik, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 524, [1926] AIR (C) 157.

²⁰ Sukha Singh, (1905) P. R. No. 24 of 1905, at p. 57, 2 Cr. L. J. 242, 243.

²¹ Vyapuri, (1882) 5 Mad. 401.

²² Tanak Chaudhry, (1923) 24 Cr. L. J. 542, [1923] AIR (P) 361.

²³ Chanda, (1905) 28 All. 204.

²⁴ Dharma Das Ghose v. Nussuruddin, (1886) 12 Cal. 660.

²⁵ M. & M. 892.

Bona fides.—"If a person deals injuriously with property in the bona fide belief that it is his own he cannot be convicted of the offence of mischief, because his act was not committed with intent to cause wrongful loss or damage to any person. But the mere assertion of a claim of right is not in itself a sufficient answer to such charges. It is the duty of the criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender, and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender, assuming of course that the other facts are established which constitute the offence".¹ Where, therefore, a person cut trees on land which he claimed, but possession of which, after an execution sale, had been legally made over to another person without any objection or formal intervention on his part, it was held that he had committed mischief.² But where the accused cut the branches of a tree regarding which there was a dispute, it was held that he was not guilty.³ Where a raiyat surrendered his holding to the landlord who took possession of the land dispossessing an under-raiyat who had been brought on the land by the raiyat and uprooting the seeds sown by the under-raiyat, it was held that, under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, after surrender the position of the under-raiyat was that of a trespasser and the action of the landlord being a bona fide claim of right, he was not liable for criminal trespass and mischief.⁴

Where, in the bona fide assertion of a right, a wall was pulled down, it was held that the act did not amount to mischief and the dispute between the parties was one for settlement by a civil Court.⁵ Where the complainant and the accused occupied adjoining houses, and there was undoubtedly a projection of poles and planks over the land of the accused from the complainant's portion, and there was no doubt that the projections were an invasion of the rights of the accused, and he tried to remove them and in doing so caused damage to the complainant's building, it was held that the accused must have acted bona fide in the exercise of what he considered to be his right and he was not guilty of any offence.⁶ Where, in the exercise of any bona fide claim of right to bury a deceased person, the members of a congregation broke open the gate of a graveyard which they believed was wrongfully closed against them by a priest, it was held that they had committed no offence.⁷ The accused who were servants of S were convicted by a Magistrate under this section and s. 143 for having cut a channel from a jhil which was in the possession of B and by so doing let water and fish from the jhil. The Magistrate had found that the land adjoining the jhil across which the channel had been cut had been in the possession of S. On appeal, it was contended that the accused had a perfect right to make the cutting in their master's land. It was held that though they had that right, it did not follow that they had a right to extend the cutting beyond and through the bank of the jhil, which, with the jhil itself and the land underneath the water, were in the possession of B, and the conviction could not be set aside on that ground.⁸ A game-keeper was prosecuted for unlawfully and maliciously killing a dog which was at the time near an aviary in which pheasants, the ¹ Per Turner, J., in Budh Singh, (1879) 2 All. 101, 108; Keru, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 387; Nandu, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 465; Natha Singh, (1903) P. R. No. 6 of 1903; Madhu Sudan Das Gupta v. Sasti Prosad Nandy, (1903) 7 C. W. N. 859; Bakar Halsana v. Dinobandhu Biswas, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 17, 12 W. R. (Cr.) 1; Shakur Mahomed v. Chunder Mohun Sha, (174) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 38; (1881) 1 Weir 488; Daniel Grove, (1882) 1 Weir 488; Viagula Fernandez Vaz, (1891) 1 Weir 489; Jagannathan, (1893) 1 Weir 490; James, (1837) 8 C. & P. 181; Matthews, (1877) 14 Cox 5; Manikka Veera, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 623, Kondi Chetti, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 566; Pitamb Singh, (1920) 21 Cr. L. J. 828, [1928] AIR (A) 215 (2); Talebar Chowdhary, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 750, [1917] AIR (P) 366; Gainu Panday, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 394, 23 Cr. L. J. 504; Tatiparthi v. Sanam Kanakya, [1929] M. W. N. 711, 31 Cr. L. J. 225, [1929] AIR (M) 833; Sebastian Lobo v. Mingel D'Souza, [1932] M. W. N. 645, 37 L. W. 149, 33 Cr. L. J. 655, [1932] AIR (M) 676.

² Sonai Sardar v. Bukhtar Sardar, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 46. See also Dharma Das Ghose v. Nusseruddin, (1886) 12 Cal. 660.

³ Sardar Singh, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 339; [1918] AIR (P) 323; Sham Lal Lohar, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 729; Sarat Chandra Sen v. Yakub Taluqdar, (1923) 28 C. W. N. 736, 26 Cr. L. J. 194, [1924] AIR (C) 805.

⁴ Har Prasad Singh v. Hulsan Chamar, (1928) 9 P. L. T. 728, 29 Cr. L. J. 642.

⁵ Jagannathan, (1893) 1 Weir 490; Balkrishna Narhar Velhankar, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 978, 26 Cr. L. J. 254, [1924] AIR (B) 486; Suryanarayana Murthi, [1940] 1 M. L. J. 571, [1939] M. W. N. 1254, (1938) 41 Cr. L. J. 807, [1940] AIR (M) 747.

⁶ Jambulingam Pillai v. Ponnuswami Pillai, [1939] 1 M. L. J. 321, 49 L. W. 332, [1939] M. W. N. 815, 40 Cr. L. J. 656, [1939] AIR (M) 400.

⁷ Viagula Fernandez Vaz, (1891) 1 Weir 489.

⁸ Shoshi Bhushan Bose v. Gobind Chandra Roy, (1903) 7 C. W. N. 663.

property of the appellant's master, were confined for breeding purposes. It was held that he was not liable if he acted under the bona fide belief that what he was doing was necessary for the protection of his master's property.⁹

Negligence is not mischief.—Where the accused set fire to a heap of rubbish in his own field, and a gust of wind came and carried the flame to an adjacent forest and burnt it, it was held on the analogy of cases of alleged mischief done by straying of cattle, that the facts did not at the outside show more than "mere neglect or carelessness" on the part of the accused to keep the fire from straying into the forest, and that the "neglect or carelessness" was not sufficient to constitute the offence of mischief.¹⁰ Where the accused whilst driving his bullock-cart pulled the bullock in the wrong direction and thereby dashed the pole of his yoke against the footboard of the complainant's carriage and caused damage, it was held that the accused was not guilty of mischief.¹¹

Master not liable for negligence of servant.—An owner who lived elsewhere could not, in the absence of express malice, be held criminally liable for the negligence of his contractor in digging the foundations of a house then being built without proper precautions.¹²

Cattle.—In the case of mischief done by straying of cattle, mere neglect or carelessness on the part of the owner of cattle to keep them from straying into fields of others is not sufficient.¹³ To warrant a conviction it must be proved that he actually and wilfully caused the cattle to enter, knowing that by so doing he was likely to cause damage,¹⁴ or at least that he was present and able to restrain the animal from causing damage and did not restrain it from so doing.¹⁵ The prosecution is bound to show that there was an intention to cause wrongful loss or damage.

But owners of cattle, who, knowing their animals to be not properly provided with fodder and accustomed to stray in search of food, intentionally omit to secure their cattle or neglect to take reasonable precautions for their care and custody, may be guilty of this offence. The omission or neglect, however, must be such as to have an active effect conducing to the result, as a link in a chain of facts from which an intention to bring about the result may be inferred.¹⁶ Where the accused grazed their cattle on waste lands on which the Government had by notification prohibited the public from grazing cattle, when provision was made for the public grazing their cattle elsewhere, this offence was held to have been committed.¹⁷ But when the grass was not meant to be sold for a profit, and the accused grazed his goats without the necessary permit, it was held that no offence was committed.¹⁸ In a subsequent case the same High Court held that in allowing one's cattle to graze on land belonging to the complainant, there is no destruction of property within the meaning of this section.¹⁹ Where in the absence of the accused, his cattle entered into the Government garden, it was held that he was not guilty of mischief. The act to be criminal should be done with dishonest intention.²⁰

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused caused the destruction of some property, or some change in such property or in the situation thereof.

⁹ Miles v. Hutchings, [1903] 2 K. B. 714.

¹⁰ Per Russell, Ag. C. J., and Heaton, J., (Aston, J., dissenting) in Nandeyappagowda, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 851, 854, 4 Cr. L. J. 446.

¹¹ Thornotti Madathil Poker, (1886) 1 Weir 405.

¹² Srish Chandra Sircar, (1918) 17 A. L. J. R. 343, 20 Cr. L. J. 299, [1919] AIR (A) 385.

¹³ Narsu, (1882) Unrep. Cr. C. 185; Rangu, (1883) Unrep. Cr. C. 189, Cr. R. April 19, 1883; Hyderally, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 199; (1871) 6 M. H. C. (Appx.) 36, 1 Weir 487.

¹⁴ Aras Sircar, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 29; Major Forbes v. Girish Chandra Bhuttacharjee, (1870) 6 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 8, 14 W. R. (Cr.) 31; Bai Baya, (1883) 7 Bom. 126; Shaik Raju, (1884) 9 Bom. 173; Mehdi Hasan, (1907) 29 All.

565.

¹⁵ Narsu, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 357; Vithu, (1887) Unrep. Cr. C. 318, Cr. R. No. 5 of 1887.

¹⁶ Thornotti Madathil Poker, (1866) 1 Weir 405.

¹⁷ Gurram Siddugadu, (1886) 1 Weir 492. See Nga Lun, (1903) 2 L. B. R. 158.

¹⁸ Ragupathi Ayyar v. Narayana Goundan, (1928) 52 Mad. 151.

¹⁹ Palaniandi Muthirian v. Ramaswami Reddi, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 545, [1942] M. W. N. 756 (2), (1942) 55 L. W. 695, 44 Cr. L. J. 140, [1942] AIR (M) 724 (1).

²⁰ Ghazi, (1904) P. R. No. 28 of 1904, 1 Cr. L. J. 1097. See Joti Babu, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 549, 4 Cr. L. J. 93.

(2) That the above act destroyed or diminished the value or utility of such property, or affected it injuriously.

(3) That the accused did as in (1) intending or knowing that he was likely to cause loss or damage to the public or to any person.²¹

(4) That the causing of such damage or injury was wrongful.

Onus.—It is for the prosecution to prove that the accused caused damage with a wrongful intent—with a knowledge that he was not justified in doing it, and that the party under whose orders he was acting had no real title.²²

Where, in a case regarding mischief to land, the defence raises a bona fide plea of right to the land, the Magistrate should determine whether the accused acted with any such intent as made his act criminal, viz. any such intent as is mentioned in this section.²³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Warning to Magistrate.—The authority vested in the criminal Court of punishing persons for acts of mischief is one which must be exercised with great caution, and it must be very clear, before conviction, that the accused has brought himself within the true meaning of s. 425, otherwise this provision of the law will be frequently resorted to as a trenchant mode of deciding disputed civil questions of rights.²⁴

Conviction for mischief as well as for theft.—It is not illegal to convict the accused of mischief as well as of theft. Where, therefore, the accused had cleared a piece of Government land, cutting down and appropriating the trees thereon without permission, it was held that it was not illegal to convict them of mischief and theft, as the mischief preceded the theft which could not have been committed according to Explanation 1 of s. 378 until the trees had been detached from the ground.²⁵ Where the accused stole a sheep and killed it, it was held by the Patna High Court that he could not be charged with and convicted of mischief as well as of theft.¹ The Madras High Court has held likewise.² But the Bombay High Court has held in a case in which the accused stole a calf and then killed it that he should be convicted and sentenced separately for each of the offences.³ The Rangoon High Court has followed the view of the Bombay High Court and has dissented from the view of the Madras and the Patna High Courts in a case in which the accused stole a bullock from a jungle, where it was put to graze by its master, a cartman, and then killed it for food. He was convicted of the offences of theft and mischief at one trial and was sentenced separately for each offence. It was held that the sentences were legal.⁴

Summary trial.—A person may be tried summarily for criminal trespass and mischief unless there is a bona fide claim of right depriving the Magistrate of jurisdiction.⁵

Punishment.—In laying down the punishment for different degrees of the offence of mischief, the gradation observed refers to the amount of loss sustained, the mode of distinction not admitted in estimating the degrees of criminality in other offences against property.⁶ The penal provisions relating to mischief have been framed on the same principle which pervades the Code of first providing a certain amount of punishment for all offences of a particular denomination and then proceeding to provide

²¹ Denoo Bundhoo Biswas, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 1, 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 17; Kashi Nath Ghose v. Dinobundhoo Mtyee, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 62 [72]; Pran Nath Shaha, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 69; (1881) 1 Weir 488.

²² Issur Chunder Mundle v. Rohim Sheikh, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 65.

²³ Mahadshet, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 432.

²⁴ Ram Golam Singh, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 59.

²⁵ Narayan Krishna, (1866) 2 B. H. C. 392.

¹ Hussain Buksh Mian, (1924) 3 Pat. 804; Rathi, (1901) 14 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 159.

² Madar Saheb, (1902) 1 Weir 497. In Burma and in Sind the same view has been taken: Nga Paik Hmwe, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 241; Nga Aung So, (1900) P. J. L. B. 633; Jairo, (1915) 9 S. L. R. 204, 17 Cr. L. J. 239, [1916] AIR (S) 77.

³ Bhawan Surji, (1935) 38 Bom. L. R. 164, 60 Bom. 627, approving Krishna, (1889) Cr. R. No. 1 of 1889, Unrep. Cr. C. 430, disapproving Ramla Ratanji, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 460, and Genya, (1877) Unrep. Cr. C. 129.

⁴ Paw Din, [1938] Ran. 63.

⁵ Gamirullah Sarkar v. Abdul Sheikh, (1884) 10 Cal. 408, disapproving Shakur Mahomed v. Chunder Mohun Sha, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 38.

⁶ 1st Rep., s. 608.

heavier punishment for aggravated offences of that kind.⁷ This section provides punishment for the offence of mischief generally. But if in any particular case there is any circumstance which brings it within any of the subsequent penal clauses whereby heavier punishment is provided, and if that circumstance can be proved, that subsequent clause is then the appropriate one for the punishment of the offence committed. And when one set of aggravating circumstances properly attaches to an act making it an offence, another set should not be applied to the same act, unless there be in the mind of the offender a wholly separate intention.

427. Whoever commits mischief and thereby causes loss or damage to the amount of fifty rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief causing damage to the amount of fifty rupees.

COMMENT.

This section provides for enhanced sentence where the loss or damage caused is upwards of fifty rupees. In estimating the amount of the loss or damage caused, the actual loss or damage only should be taken into consideration and not the damage which, in consequence of such loss, may be occasioned to the sufferer.⁸ But the damage done to several things may be added together, provided the things are damaged at one and the same time, or so nearly at the same time as to form one continuous transaction.⁹

CASES.

Where some persons belonging to a certain village pulled up and removed fishing stakes lawfully fixed in the sea, within three miles of the shore, by the villagers of another village, and the removal of the stakes, though without any intention to appropriate them, occasioned "damage", it was held that they had committed mischief.¹⁰ Cattle belonging to the accused, who were Rabaris, having trespassed on the complainant's farm and done damage to the crops there, the accused were tried for the offence of mischief under this section and also for an offence under s. 26 of the Cattle Trespass Act. It appeared that on previous occasions too, cattle of each of the accused were impounded a number of times for similar acts. It was held that they were guilty of mischief.¹¹ Where a person not entitled to a piece of land or to raise any crops on it, raised crops on it and the accused drove his cattle into the land and destroyed the crops, it was held that as the person who raised the crops was not legally entitled to the land or to the crops there was no wrongful loss to him and no offence under this section was committed.¹²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the loss or damage caused amounted to Rs. 50 or more.

There ought to be evidence to show that the defendant caused mischief.¹³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed mischief, causing loss or damage to the amount of—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 417 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

⁷ M. & M. 302.

⁸ M. & M. 393.

⁹ Shepherd, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 118.

¹⁰ Kastya Rama, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 63.

¹¹ Punya Godad, (1918) 21 Bom. L. R. 247, 20

Cr. L. J. 387, [1919] AIR (B) 59.

¹² Kolathukara Goundan v. Kuppuswami Goundan, [1948] 1 M. L. J. 830, 61 L. W. 331.

¹³ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 29, 1 Weir 497.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

428. Whoever commits mischief by killing, poisoning, maiming¹ or rendering useless any animal² or animals of the value of ten rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by killing or maiming animal of the value of ten rupees.

COMMENT.

This section is intended to prevent cruelty to animals and consequent loss to the owner.

1. 'Maiming'.—The term "maiming" refers to those injuries which cause the privation of the use of a limb, or a member of the body.¹⁴ 'Maiming' implies a permanent injury,¹⁵ affecting the use of limb, or other member of the body.¹⁶ Wounding is not necessarily maiming. Wounding is causing an injury to the person by which the skin is broken.¹⁷ To constitute a wound it is necessary that there should be a separation of the whole skin; and a separation of the cuticle or upper skin only is not sufficient.¹⁸ The external surface of the body must be divided.¹⁹ 'Maiming' must mean some permanent injury because it occurs in this section and s. 419 between 'killing' and 'rendering useless'. This last expression again differs from 'diminishing utility', the expression used in the definition of 'mischief'.²⁰ Meres, C. J., in a case²¹ said: "It is true that in its primitive meaning the verb to 'maim' involves the notion of mutilation of some part of the body useful for fighting. . . . I do not think the framers of the Code intended this restricted meaning only of this expression. It seems difficult to understand how many of the domestic animals could be 'maimed' within this meaning of the term. I think the expression would fairly include the amputation of any member, or the injury, of an animal by which its speed, or endurance, or use, was permanently diminished". Maiming then means some permanent injury to one of the members of the body. It involves the notion of the privation of the use of some limb or member involving a permanent injury, and not a mere disfigurement.²² Where the ribs of a pony were broken so as permanently to diminish its usefulness and value, it was held to be 'maimed'.²³ Similarly, where the ears of a horse,²⁴ or an ass,²⁵ were cut off, it was held that the accused was guilty of maiming. But where one-half of one ear of a mare was cut off whereby the animal's sense of hearing was not impaired, it was held that this did not amount to maiming within the meaning of this section.¹ Where the accused caused the death of a mare through injuries inflicted by his inserting the handle of a fork into her vagina and pushing it into her body, it was held that he was liable for killing, maiming or wounding the mare.²

It is not necessary to prove that any instrument was used to inflict the wound.³ Pouring acid into the eye of a mare, and thereby blinding her, was held to be maiming.⁴ But, if a person inflicts a wound on an animal whereby it is disabled for some days only, his offence falls under s. 426.⁵

2. 'Animal'.—See s. 47, supra. The animal destroyed must be the subject of property. The escape of an animal that is originally in the condition of feroe naturae, but is subsequently reduced into possession, does not terminate the owner's right to it, and any person shooting such an animal is guilty of mischief.⁶

¹⁴ Fattehadin, (1881) P. R. No. 33 of 1881.

¹⁵ Jeans, (1844) 1 C. & K. 539; Narain Singh, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 25, 3 Cr. L. J. 107.

¹⁶ Juman Sajan Otho, [1946] Kar. 437, 440.

¹⁷ Moriarty v. Brooks, (1834) 6 C. & P. 684.

¹⁸ M'Loughlin, (1831) 8 C. & P. 635.

¹⁹ Beckett, (1836) 1 Mood. & Rob. 526.

²⁰ Bahawal, (1891) P. R. No. 7 of 1891.

²¹ Nga San Yun, (1885) S. J. L. B. 404.

²² Anna Laxman, (1916) 18 Bom. L. R. 289, 17 Cr. L. J. 253, [1916] AIR (B) 220.

²³ Nga San Yun, (1885) S. J. L. B. 404.

²⁴ Marigowda v. Srinivasa Rangachar, (1911) 35 Mad. 594.

²⁵ Rangasami Goundan, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 620, [1918] AIR (M) 638.

¹ Anna Laxman, (1916) 18 Bom. L. R. 289, 17 Cr. L. J. 253, [1916] AIR (B) 220.

² Welch, (1875) 1 Q. B. D. 23.

³ Bullock, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 115.

⁴ Owen's Case, (1828) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 205.

⁵ Subrao Sukhal, (1901) 3 Bom. L. T. 503.

⁶ M. Subrayadu, (1888) 1 Weir 498.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426 ; and further—

(5) That the property injured consisted of an animal or animals.

(6) That the value thereof at the time of injury was Rs. 10 or more.

(7) That the injury in question was caused by killing, poisoning, maiming, or rendering useless such animals.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed mischief by killing (or poisoning, etc.) an animal, to wit—, of the value of—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 428 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

429. Whoever commits mischief by killing, poisoning, maiming¹ or rendering useless, any elephant, camel, horse, mule, buffalo, bull, cow or ox,² whatever may be the value thereof, or any other animal of the value of fifty rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by killing or maiming cattle, etc., of any value or any animal of the value of fifty rupees.

COMMENT.

This section is exactly similar to the preceding s. 428 except that it mentions particular animals.

This section provides enhanced punishment owing to the greater value of the animals mentioned therein. Intention is the gist of the offence. The accused threw a stone at a young buffalo and thereby caused its death, and it appeared that her intention was to drive it out of her backyard. It was held that the accused was not guilty of mischief.⁷

1. 'Maiming'.—See s. 428, supra. Beating to death a buffalo dedicated to a deity is an offence under this section. An animal branded and let loose on the occasion of the funeral or obsequies in a Hindu family may be nullius in terris, but an animal dedicated to a deity is not a res nullius.⁸

2. 'Horse, mule, buffalo, bull, cow or ox'.—The word 'horse' includes a mare⁹. According to the Madras High Court, a 'calf' does not come within the term 'bull, cow or ox';¹⁰ but the Calcutta High Court has held that the words 'bull' and 'cow' in this section include the young ones of those animals. The section specifies the more valuable of the domestic animals, without any regard to age; but in respect of other kinds of animals not so specified, the section will not apply unless the particular animal in question is shown to be of the value of fifty rupees or upwards.¹¹

Bulls set at large according to religious usage.—Such bulls are not the subject of ownership by any person, as the original owner surrenders all his rights as its proprietor and gives it its freedom to go whithersoever it chooses. They are, therefore, nullius in terris, and as such cannot be the subject of mischief.¹² But if there is not total abandonment of control and property, the animal would not cease to be the private property of the owner. Before finding that the animal ceased to be the private property of any one it is necessary to see whether the ceremony at which it was released was followed by an abandonment of all control and property over it.¹³ There

⁷ Obammal, (1901) 1 Weir 502.

⁸ Abdul Qayum, [1945] O. W. N. (H.C.) 287.

⁹ Agne, [1947] O. W. N. 494.

¹⁰ Cholay, (1864) Mad. 4th Ses. Unrep.

¹¹ Hari Mandle v. Jafar, (1895) 22 Cal. 457.

¹² Romesh Chunder Sannyal v. Hiru Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 852.

¹³ Ghanta Veeranna v. Pusapati Narasiah, (1888) 1 Weir 500; Sulaiman Shah, (1936) 18 P. L. T. 329, 38 Cr. L. J. 407, [1937] AIR (P) 406.

is also a material distinction in principle between the case of an animal, property in which is wholly renounced or abandoned and allowed in accordance with superstitious or religious usage to roam at large free from control, and an animal so abandoned and at large after dedication to a temple.¹⁴ The former Chief Court of the Punjab had held that a bull liberated according to ancient usage did not cease to be "property", and was moveable property within the meaning of the Code, and capable of being the subject of the offence of mischief.¹⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the property injured consisted of an elephant, camel, horse, mule, buffalo, bull, cow, or ox; or that such property consisted of any animal of the value of Rs. 50 or more.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed mischief by killing (poisoning, maiming or rendering useless) (specify the animal: where the animal is not of the kind mentioned in the section specify its value also), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 429 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

430. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act which causes,

Mischief by injury to works of irrigation or by wrongfully diverting water.

or which he knows to be likely to cause, a diminution of the supply of water¹ for agricultural purposes, or for food or drink for human beings or for animals which are property, or for cleanliness or for carrying on any manufacture, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section deals with diminution of water supply. Section 278 applies if the water is foiled so as to be unfit for use.

For a conviction under this section there must be some infringement of right resting in some one by the act of the accused. It must be proved that the accused had no right to do what they did.¹⁶ This section only applies if mischief, within the meaning of s. 425, is committed.¹⁷

Scope.—The section applies equally to irrigation channels as to other sources of irrigation, such as tanks and ponds.¹⁸

1. 'Diminution of the supply of water'.—Under this section the physical requisites of the act are the doing of any act which causes, or to the doer's knowledge is likely to cause, a diminution of supply. He also fulfils the mental requisites when he does this with intent to cause wrongful loss, and the intention is properly held to be such when he takes it without any sort of right, and it matters not that he claims to set up such a right if the facts are so clear that the claim is manifestly only an additional wrong. It is for judicial tact to distinguish where the case is sufficiently doubtful to prevent the inference of a wrong intent. It is no part of the definition of the ¹⁴ Nalla, (1887) 11 Mad. 145.

¹⁵ Bahadur Singh, (1888) P. R. No. 84 of 1888.

¹⁶ Ashtosh Ghosh, (1929) 57 Cal. 897.

¹⁷ Mohammad, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 1085, 37

Cr. L. J. 430, [1936] AIR (L) 15.

¹⁸ Syru Chinna Mangaiya, (1886) 1 Weir 510; Ismail Biswas, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 751, [1930] AIR (C) 289.

offence that the act of the accused should be in common language a mere wanton act of waste.¹⁹ It is sufficient that the supply of water available for a particular person or class of persons should be diminished by the act of the accused.²⁰ The words "diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purposes" refer to actual utilization of the particular water by particular persons who are deprived of it by the mischief complained of and not to the use to which such water is put by the accused and, therefore, the fact that the water was used by the accused also for agricultural purposes does not take the case out of this section.²¹ The accused is liable even if his whole crop would have been destroyed but for his act of cutting a bandh belonging to the complainant.²² Where the accused cut a dam erected by the complainant, not to take a supply of water but to save their own crops, and it was not proved that the act of the accused caused a diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purposes or that the accused knew that it was likely to cause such diminution in future, it was held that the accused could not be convicted of this offence.²³

The placing, across a channel, of an embankment²⁴ or the cutting of an embankment,²⁵ may lead to a diminution of supply. If a supply channel is obstructed or filled up by a dam put up or by raising a dam already existing, there is a change made in the channel which diminishes its value or utility and which, if it was done with intention to cause or with knowledge that it was likely to cause wrongful loss to any person, would constitute 'mischief'. If the act so done causes a diminution of supply of water an offence under this section is committed.¹ The mere deprivation of water supply to the complainant by a cut in a dam is not an offence under this section. It is the destroyed property that must have lost its utility or value to bring the offence under it. Where the accused have not caused destruction of any property by damaging a canal or any of its banks or openings in any manner but only continued to take water from the canal even after the end of their turn, no offence under this section is committed and the accused are only liable to be dealt with under the provisions of the Canal Act.²

Where the accused closed the supply of water to his own land, without the permission of Government officials, and no one else was deprived of water on that day, it was held that no offence under this section was committed.³

Bona fides.—It is only interference which cannot be justified by the assertion of a bona fide right that would constitute mischief.⁴ This section will not apply to proceedings taken by anybody in good faith in the exercise of his rights of property. Where, therefore, a zamindar stopped a water-channel running over his own land on the complainant's refusing to pay him the rent he demanded, it was held that he was not guilty under this section.⁵ Where the accused cut open a bund and diverted water to his fields in anticipation of usual permission to do so, it was held that he had committed no offence under this section.⁶ Where there was no doubt that the accused knew that by their act they were causing a diminution of the water supply and where they had not substantiated a right to take the water nor shown that the other side had no right, it was held that a bona fide claim to take the water could not be entertained.⁷

¹⁹ Ramakrishna Chetti v. Palaniyandi Kudambar, (1876) 1 Mad. 262 F.B.; Ashulosh Ghosh, (1929) 57 Cal. 897.

²⁰ Narasimha Rao v. Ayyanna Rao, [1939] 1 M. L. J. 445, 49 L. W. 298, [1939] M. W. N. 121, 41 Cr. L. J. 88, [1939] AIR (M) 794.

²¹ Lukman, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1233, [1927] AIR (S) 39.

²² Raghunath Thakur, (1932) 13 P. L. T. 162; 33 Cr. L. J. 313, [1932] AIR (P) 224.

²³ Nafar Chandra Bhattacharjee v. Helakuddin Mondal, (1904) 8 C. W. N. 370, 1 Cr. L. J. 245; Mohammad, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 168.

²⁴ Nalla Narayanasami, (1884) 1 Weir 504.

²⁵ Sheikh Arif, (1908) 35 Cal. 437.

¹ Deenabandu v. Viswaswamy, [1923] M. W. N. 684, 24 Cr. L. J. 830, [1924] AIR (M) 176; Narasimha Rao v. Ayyanna Rao, [1939] 1 M. L. J. 445, 49 L. W. 298, [1939] M. W. N. 121, 41

Cr. L. J. 88, [1939] AIR (M) 794.

² Mohammad Raja, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 430, 38 P. L. R. 1035, [1937] AIR (L) 196.

³ Chimandas Dhanomal, [1943] Kar. 8.

⁴ Kovada Sanyasi Naidu, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 930, [1940] AIR (M) 306.

⁵ Mohur Singh v. Laloo, (1906) 3 A. L. J. R. 142n. See Armugam Chetti, (1888) 8 Mad. Jur. 528; Athinarayanasaamy Pillai v. Subbier, (1898) 1 Weir 505; Deputy Legal Remembrancer Behar and Orissa v. Matukdhari Singh, (1915) 20 C. W. N. 128, 17 Cr. L. J. 9; Gulab Singh, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1354, [1927] AIR (A) 112.

⁶ Kallappa Naicker v. Palani Ammal, [1920] M. W. N. 131, (1919) 11 L. W. 148, 21 Cr. L. J. 137.

⁷ Basdeo Singh, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 258, [1924] AIR (P) 704.

CASES.

Diminution of supply of water.—Where it appeared that the complainant was the exclusive owner of a water-course, and that the accused had no sort of right to assert any claim to it, the causing of a diminution of the supply of water by the accused, even though in assertion of a right, was held to be only an additional wrong, and to constitute this offence.⁸ Where the accused closed a water-course by which water had been supplied to the complainant's land, he was held not to have committed this offence, as no damage was alleged to have been caused by the stoppage of water to any crop in the land.⁹ Where the accused bunded up a portion of the channel, running in his own land, and carrying water to the complainant's land to which he was not found to be entitled either by way of contract or by easement, it was held that no actual wrongful loss had been proved and that therefore the accused's action in bunding up the channel did not constitute any offence.¹⁰ On a partition between the complainants and the accused, who were members of a joint family, certain fields fell to the share of the former and other fields fell to the share of the latter. On the lands allotted to the accused there had existed a channel for a long number of years which was used for carrying water to the fields which had been allotted to the complainants. Some years after the partition the accused filled up the channel with the result that water could not be carried to the lands of the complainants for purposes of irrigation. It was held that the loss caused to the complainants by the channel being filled up was wrongful loss and the accused must be presumed to have had the knowledge that their act in filling up the channel was likely to cause such wrongful loss to the complainants and that consequently they were guilty of an offence under this section.¹¹ Where the accused took water for agricultural purposes to which he was not entitled, and thereby diminished the supply of others who were entitled, it was held that he was guilty under this section.¹² A landlord had agreed with the tenants of his flats, on payment of a separate charge, to pump water for them from a reservoir. He stopped the pumping. It was held that no offence under this section was committed as the act of the landlord was mere breach of contract.¹³

Diminution of water by cutting embankment.—The complainant put up an embankment on Government land without previous permission to store water for the use of his land. The accused cut the embankment and were charged with mischief but were acquitted on the ground that the complainant's act was illegal. It did not appear that the accused interfered to protect their own interests. It was held that the acquittal was wrong.¹⁴ The accused cut the embankment of an irrigation tank and kept the embankment open for more than twenty-four hours and pleaded in excuse of their act the authorization of the Public Works authorities given to them to take the water for twenty-four hours. It was held that, assuming the original act of cutting the embankment was lawful in consequence of the authorization given by the Public Works authorities to the accused to take the water for twenty-four hours, by keeping the breach open for six hours longer, they were guilty of an illegal omission which was under s. 32 of the Code equivalent to an illegal act, and that they were guilty under this section as their act was clearly likely to cause a diminution of water supply for agricultural purposes; and that it was not necessary to prove actual damage.¹⁵ But in a Punjab case it was held that a person by merely irrigating his land from a Government canal-cut for a period exceeding that allotted to him, did not commit any offence under this section.¹⁶

The accused entered into the lands of the complainant and cut three bunds which had been erected in a channel that ran through the land, with the result that water in that channel ran down another channel off the complainant's land, and utilized

⁸ Jagannath Bhikaji Bhawe, (1885) 10 Bom. 188.

⁹ Kataya, (1885) Unrep. Cr. C. 217; Vattu Karan, (1882) 1 Weir 507.

¹⁰ Budda Reddi, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 234, 16 L. W. 792, [1922] M. W. N. 839, 23 Cr. L. J. 655, [1923] AIR (M) 141.

¹¹ Krishna Aiyar v. Ayappa Naick, [1925] M. W. N. 45, 21 L. W. 611, 26 Cr. L. J. 1100, [1925] AIR (M) 577.

¹² Aiyannagowd, (1882) 1 Weir 507; Sheikh

Arij, (1908) 35 Cal. 437. See, to the same effect, Chengama Naidu, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 349, 12 Cr. L. J. 551; Har Narain, (1919) 41 All. 599; Athimoolam Pillai v. Palaniandi Ambalam, (1920) 13 L. W. 266, 22 Cr. L. J. 270, [1921] AIR (M) 536.

¹³ Ram Das Pandey, (1947) 51 C. W. N. 751.

¹⁴ Rangana Goundan, (1890) 1 Weir 510.

¹⁵ Nallappa Udayan, (1899) 1 Weir 505.

¹⁶ Fateh Din, (1909) P. R. No. 14 of 1909, 11 Cr. L. J. 65.

by the accused for sale to ryots holding the lands lower down. The complainant was entitled to the whole of the water in the channel in question. It was held that this section applied not only where the water was wantonly wasted but also where the accused himself utilized it, or sold it to others provided the person entitled was deprived of its use.¹⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426 ; and further—

(5) That the mischief in question caused, or was likely to cause, diminution of the supply of water.

This is an essential element to be proved.¹⁸

(6) That such supply of water was for purposes of agriculture ; or for food or drink for human beings ; or for animals which are property ; or for cleanliness ; or for carrying on any manufacture.

(7) That such mischief was done with knowledge that it would, or was likely to cause, such diminution of the supply of water.¹⁹

The prosecution must prove that there has been unlawful and intentional interference on the part of the accused with the admitted or proved rights of the complainant.²⁰

It is not necessary to prove actual loss.²¹

Where there was nothing to show that the complainant had any legal right to the water intercepted by the accused, it was held that the complainant's loss was not wrongful and the offence of mischief was not established.²²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

A Magistrate can make an inquiry by personal inspection of the disputed place.²³

Where there was a genuine dispute between the two parties in regard to a channel and one party was charged with mischief for closing the channel, it was held that the matter was not one for trial in a criminal Court and that the act of closing the channel was not an offence.²⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed mischief by doing—which act caused (or which you knew to be likely to cause) a diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purposes (or for food, etc.) and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 430 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

431. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act¹ which renders or which he knows to be likely to render any public road,² bridge, navigable river or navigable channel, natural or artificial, impassable or less safe for travelling or conveying property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by injury to public road, bridge, river or channel.

COMMENT.

To support a conviction under this section there must be evidence of intention to cause mischief, and of knowledge that injury is likely to result from the act of the ¹⁷ Chidambaram Pillai v. Muhammad Khan Sahib, (1918) 34 M. L. J. 206, 19 Cr. L. J. 356, [1918] AIR (M) 72; Lukman, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1233, [1927] AIR (S) 39.

¹⁸ Taj-ud-din, (1908) 5 A. L. J. R. 159, 7 Cr. L. J. 296.

¹⁹ Nga Myat Aung, (1908) 1 Cr. L. J. 663; Mewa Ram, (1934) 35 Cr. L. J. 1250, [1934] AIR (A) 687.

²⁰ Banwari Karmakar v. Gosto Behary Karmakar, (1920) 32 C. L. J. 476, 22 Cr. L. J. 415, [1920] AIR (C) 835.

²¹ (1881) 1 Weir 503.

²² Tun Aung, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 149, 7 Cr. L. J. 448.

²³ Muruga Pillai, (1883) 1 Weir 508.

²⁴ Athinarayanadasamy Pillai v. Subbier, (1898) 1 Weir 505; Ashutosh Ghosh, (1920) 57 Cal. 897.

accused.²⁵ Such intention or knowledge is not necessary for offences under ss. 279, 280 and 283.

1. 'Act'.—See s. 33, supra.

2. 'Road'.—A path through a jungle is not a road.¹

CASES.

In a case where the accused was charged with committing mischief by doing an act which rendered a bridge impassable, it was proved (1) that two pieces of timber came floating down the river in flood and coming in contact with a bridge destroyed two of its pillars; (2) that the accused cut the smaller piece at a point on the bank of the river some eight miles above the bridge, and left it lying on the bank. It was held that the conviction could not be sustained, for on the facts found there was obviously no intention to cause mischief, and there was no sufficient evidence of knowledge that injury was likely to result from the act of the accused.² Where the accused dug a trench on waste land bordering upon a public road in order to protect his land from drainage water and thereby incidentally caused damage to the public road, it was held that this was not sufficient to constitute the offence of mischief.³ Mere placing of bricks on a road would not come within this section.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the mischief in question consisted of an act rendering or likely to render impassable or less safe, a public road, bridge, navigable river or channel, natural or artificial, for the purpose of travelling or conveying property.

(6) That such mischief was done with a knowledge that it would, or was likely to, cause such injury.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

432. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act¹ which causes or which he knows to be likely to cause an inundation or an obstruction to any public drainage attended with injury or damage, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by causing inundation or obstruction to public drainage attended with damage.

COMMENT.

This section provides for a more severe punishment where the mischief is committed by causing inundation to public drainage as it affects the health of the community.

1. 'Act'.—See s. 33, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the mischief consisted of an inundation or obstruction to drainage.

(6) That such inundation or obstruction was, or was likely to be, attended with injury or damage.

(7) That such damage was public.

(8) That the mischief was done with a knowledge that it would, or was likely to, cause such injury.⁵

It is not sufficient to show probable consequential damage to other property.⁶ The accused were convicted by a Magistrate for erecting a dam across the bed of a ²⁵ Malayan Kalan, (1883) 1 Weir 510.

¹ Nga Shwe Laukke, (1899) P. J. L. B. 629.

² Malayan Kalan, (1883) 1 Weir 510.

³ Kairthadi Anantha Bhattar, (1888) 1 Weir 511.

⁴ Jugal Narain Singh, (1908) 12 C. W. N. cxxii (152).

⁵ Pran Nath Shaha, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 69.

⁶ (1868) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 15, 1 Weir 512.

river knowing it to be likely that the lands of the adjacent village would be in consequence inundated. The High Court in quashing the conviction held that as the act done was the erecting of a dam which did not cause 'the destruction' of any property the offence of mischief was not committed.⁷

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

433. Whoever commits mischief by destroying or moving any light-house or other light used as a sea-mark, or any sea-mark or buoy or other thing placed as a guide for navigators, or by any act which renders any such light-house, sea-mark, buoy or other such thing as aforesaid less useful as a guide for navigators, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful a light-house or sea-mark.

COMMENT.

This section is an extension of the principle laid down in s. 281. Sea-marks are very important in navigation and any tampering with them may lead to disastrous results.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the mischief consisted of an act causing the destruction, or moving of, or rendering less useful a light-house, sea-mark, etc.

(6) That such light-house, sea-mark, etc., was at the time of mischief used as a guide for navigation.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

434. Whoever commits mischief by destroying or moving¹ any land-mark fixed by the authority of a public servant,² or by any act which renders such land-mark less useful as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by destroying or moving, etc., a land-mark fixed by public authority.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the destruction or removal of land-marks. The preceding section deals with sea-marks. But as destruction of sea-marks is likely to lead to disastrous consequences the punishment provided in s. 433 is much higher than the punishment provided under this section.

1. 'Moving'.—Sec s. 378, Explanation 3, supra.

2. 'Fixed by the authority of a public servant'.—The Madras High Court has held that in construing the words 'authority of a public servant' the same considerations would apply to an offence under this section as to an offence under ss. 183 and 186.³ A Magistrate making an order under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, has no authority to cause the property which is the subject of a dispute likely to occasion a breach of the peace to be demarcated by boundary pillars, and, consequently, if he does so, a person destroying or removing such boundary pillars is not liable to conviction under this section.⁴ Where a surveyor empowered by a notification under the Survey

⁷ (1868) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 15, 1 Weir 512.

⁸ Public Prosecutor v. Madhava Bhonjo Santos, (1916) 31 M. L. J. 305, 311, [1916] 2 M

W. N. 183, 4 L. W. 377, 17 Cr. L. J. 481.

Rameshar, (1904) 27 All. 300.

and Boundaries Marks Act to survey certain lands, in good faith and under colour of his office, entered upon the lands of the accused and fixed demarcation stones on them and the accused obstructed the surveyor in measuring the lands and removed the demarcation stones, it was held that the accused were guilty under this section though it might be proved that the lands on which the surveyor carried on his operations were not actually included in the notification.¹⁰

Innocent removal.—Where a person innocently removed a barricade, placed by a Municipality on a piece of land in front of his house, which impaired his ingress and egress to, or from his house, it was held that he had committed no offence.¹¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426 ; and further—

(5) That the mischief consisted of an act causing the destruction, or moving of, or rendering less useful, a land-mark.

(6) That such land-mark was fixed by the authority of a public servant.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

435. Whoever commits mischief by fire or any explosive substance,¹ intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, damage to any property to the amount of one hundred rupees or upwards or (where the property is agricultural produce) ten rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to cause damage to amount of one hundred or (in case of agricultural produce) ten rupees.

COMMENT.

Where the mischief is committed by means of fire or any explosive substance and the evidence enables the Court to conclude that the offender intended or knew himself to be likely to cause wrongful loss or damage to the amount of 100 rupees, the conviction must be under this section. If the evidence falls short of this, but is sufficient to show that mischief to the amount of 50 rupees has been caused, whether by fire or by any means whatsoever, the offender may be convicted under s. 427. In the case of agricultural produce the value fixed under the section is Rs. 10, in the case of other property, it is Rs. 100.

1. 'Explosive substance'.—This expression, according to the Explosive Substances Act (VI of 1908), s. 2, includes any materials for making any explosive substance, also any apparatus, machine, implement, or material used, or intended to be used, or adopted for causing, or aiding in causing, any explosion in or with any explosive substance : also any part of any such apparatus, machine or implement.

Amendment.—The words “or (where the property is agricultural produce) ten rupees or upwards” were inserted by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (VIII of 1882), s. 10. The amendment was introduced to protect agricultural produce.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426 ; and further—

(5) That the mischief was caused by fire or some explosive substance.

(6) That the damage caused thereby to property amounted to Rs. 100 or more ; or if the property in question is agricultural produce, to Rs. 10 or more.

(7) That the accused intended or knew that he was likely thereby to cause such damage.

Mere negligence or carelessness would be of no avail. Where the accused set fire to a heap of rubbish in his field which was close to a protected forest and the wind ¹⁰ Public Prosecutor v. Madhava Bhonjo Santos, (1916) 31 M. L. J. 305, 311, [1916] 2 M. W. N. 183, 4 L. W. 377, 17 Cr. L. J. 481.

¹¹ Abdul Aziz, (1895) Cr. R. No. 10 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 745.

carried the flames to a forest and destroyed a part of it, it was held that he was not guilty of mischief.¹²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

436. Whoever commits mischief by fire or any explosive substance,¹ intending to cause,² or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, the destruction of any building³ which is ordinarily used as a place of worship or as a human dwelling or as a place for the custody of property, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section punishes mischief by fire or explosive substance. Owing to the serious nature of the means employed the punishment is severe.

1. 'Explosive substance'.—See s. 435, supra.

2. 'Intending to cause'.—The offence is not intentionally committing mischief by fire, and thereby causing the destruction of building, etc., but committing mischief by fire, with the intention of causing the destruction of a building, etc. Intention is a most important element in such a charge.¹³

3. 'Building' is not necessarily a finished structure.¹⁴ An unfinished house, of which the walls were built and finished, the roof unfinished, a considerable part of the flooring laid, and the internal walls and ceilings prepared ready for plastering was held to be a building.¹⁵ It is absolutely necessary to prove that the building which the accused destroyed came within one of the three classes mentioned in the section. The words "ordinarily used" do not mean that other buildings are from time to time used for purposes such as those stated in the section but they mean that that particular building is itself used. Certain villagers were convicted under s. 304 and this section, for having made an attack on the Chamars (skinners) of the village, resulting in the destruction by fire of their chaupal, and the death of their child therein. It appeared that on being attacked the Chamars fled from the spot and left the child inside the chaupal. There was no evidence that the chaupal was ordinarily used as a human dwelling or for one of the other purposes specified in this section. Nor did the accused know that the child was inside when they set fire to it. It was held that under the circumstances no offence under s. 304 or this section had been established.¹⁶ Where the accused poured kerosene oil over the furniture in a room at a railway station and set fire to it, it was held that they were guilty under this section and their defence that the building was of solid masonry and, therefore, could not have been destroyed was not upheld.¹⁷

The Law Commissioners observe: "The grass or mat huts of the lowest classes are placed on a level with the substantial, secure, and valuable dwellings of the better classes. . . It is obviously proper that in the case of mischief by fire a distinction should be made between the huts. . . and substantial houses, but there is sufficient room for such a distinction between the maximum of fourteen years and the minimum of one year, and between rigorous and simple imprisonment. . . , and we think it best that the distinction should be left to the discretion of the Judge".¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—
(5) That the property injured consisted of a building.

¹² Nandeyappagowda, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 851, 4 Cr. L. J. 446.

¹³ (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr. L.) 18.

¹⁴ Manning, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 338.

¹⁵ William Edgell, (1897) 11 Cox 132.

¹⁶ Khanjan, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1190, [1924] AIR (A) 781.

¹⁷ Ram Pratap, (1948) 45 Cr. L. J. 728.

¹⁸ 1st Rep. ss. 614, 615, p. 322.

(6) That such building was ordinarily used as a place of worship, or as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property.

Procedure—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

In a charge under this section the amount of mischief done is not altogether to be the measure of the penalty to be inflicted. A person who mischievously sets fire to a human dwelling may put in jeopardy the lives and the property, not only of those dwelling therein, but of others dwelling in adjoining houses, of persons assisting to put out the fire, and so on. Severe penalties of this section are, therefore, justified.¹⁹

Charge.—In a case of mischief by fire with intent to cause the destruction of a building, the charge should lay the intent as an intent to cause the destruction not of a house simply, but of a house used as a place of worship, or as a human dwelling, or as a place for custody of property.²⁰

Punishment.—Arson in an Indian village is a crime which cannot be too heavily punished as it causes incalculable damage to innocent persons who can ill-afford to lose the little property that they possess and in such a case a sentence of three to five years' rigorous imprisonment cannot be reduced.²¹

As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d), and 12 (2).

A sentence of whipping is not legal under this section.²²

437. Whoever commits mischief to any decked vessel¹ or any vessel of a burden of twenty tons or upwards, intending to destroy or render unsafe, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby destroy or render unsafe, that vessel, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief with intent to destroy or make unsafe a decked vessel or one of twenty tons burden.

COMMENT.

This section operates in the case of decked vessels or any vessel of a burden of twenty tons, or upwards. Only vessels of large dimensions have decks. Fishing boats, ferry-boats, canoes, etc., will not come under it. Thus, small crafts of all kinds are excluded. The intention of the Legislature is to punish mischief committed on vessels which are likely to carry passengers.

1. 'Vessel'.—See s. 48, supra. Where a sailor on board a ship entered a part of the vessel where spirits were kept, for the purpose of stealing rum, and, while tapping a cask of rum, a lighted match, held by him, came in contact with the spirits which were flowing from the cask tapped by him, and a conflagration ensued, which destroyed the vessel, it was held that a conviction for the arson of the vessel could not be upheld.²³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

(5) That the mischief was committed in respect of a decked vessel, or a vessel of a burden of twenty tons or upwards.

(6) That the accused when committing mischief intended, or knew that he was likely, to render unsafe that vessel.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

¹⁹ (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 14.

²⁰ Durbáro Polie, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 30.

²¹ Ghafoor Khan, (1930) 6 Luck. 539.

²² Jagannath, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 666, [1928] AIR (O) 111.

²³ Faulkner, (1877) 13 Cox 550.

438. Whoever commits, or attempts¹ to commit, by fire or any explosive substance,² such mischief as is described in the last preceding section, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for the mischief described in section 437 committed by fire or explosive substance.

COMMENT.

This section provides for much more severe punishment than the last section when the mischief is committed by fire or explosive substance to a decked vessel or a vessel of a burden of twenty tons or upwards.

1. 'Attempts'.—See s. 511, infra.
2. 'Explosive substance'.—See s. 435, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426; and further—

- (5) That the accused committed or attempted to commit mischief by fire, or any explosive substance.
- (6) That the mischief was committed in respect of a decked vessel, or a vessel of a burden of twenty tons or upwards.
- (7) That the accused, when committing or attempting to commit mischief, intended, or knew that he was likely, to destroy or render unsafe such vessel.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

439. Whoever intentionally runs any vessel¹ aground or ashore, intending to commit theft² of any property contained therein or to dishonestly misappropriate³ any such property, or with intent that such theft or misappropriation of property may be committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for intentionally running vessel aground or ashore with intent to commit theft, etc.

COMMENT.

This section punishes an act which is akin to piracy. Under this section it is sufficient if a vessel is run aground or ashore with the intention to commit theft of any property contained therein; whether actual theft is committed or not is immaterial. As to what amounts to piracy, see p. 34.

1. 'Vessel'.—See s. 48, supra.
2. 'Theft'.—See s. 378, supra.
3. 'Dishonestly misappropriate'.—See s. 403 and s. 24, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the property in question was contained in a vessel.

- (2) That the accused ran such vessel aground or ashore.
- (3) That he did so intentionally.
- (4) That he intended thereby (a) to commit theft of the property so contained therein; or (b) to dishonestly misappropriate the same; or (c) that such theft or misappropriation thereof might be committed.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

440. Whoever commits mischief, having made preparation for causing to any person death,¹ or hurt,² or wrongful restraint,³ or fear of death, or of hurt, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The aggravating circumstance which is visited with severe punishment under this section is preparation for causing to any person death, hurt, or wrongful restraint if any opposition is offered while committing mischief.

1. 'Death'.—See s. 46, supra. 2. 'Hurt'.—See s. 319, supra.

3. 'Wrongful restraint'.—See s. 339, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as those for s. 426 ; and further—

(5) That when such mischief was committed, the accused had made preparation for causing death, hurt, or wrongful restraint, or fear thereof.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2). As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, (1898), s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II.

Of Criminal Trespass.

441. Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another¹ with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property,² or, having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there³ with intent thereby to intimidate, insult or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence, is said to commit "criminal trespass".

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code say : "We have given the name of trespass to every usurpation, however slight, of dominion over property. We do not propose to make trespass, as such, an offence, except when it is committed in order to the commission of some offence injurious to some person interested in the property on which the trespass is committed, or for the purpose of causing annoyance to such a person. Even then we propose to visit it with a light punishment, unless it be attended with aggravating circumstances.

"These aggravating circumstances are of two sorts. Criminal trespass may be aggravated by the way in which it is committed. It may also be aggravated by the end for which it is committed."²⁴

Scope.—"The unusually vague and elastic language used in s. 441, which, if not closely scrutinized and strictly interpreted, might lead to its application to sets of facts or circumstances, for which it was never intended by the Legislative authorities who framed it. For it is easy enough to conceive multitudinous cases, some approaching the verge of absurdity, that would fall within the letter, not the spirit of the section, and which no one would for a moment consider fit subject even for civil proceedings, much less for a prosecution in a criminal Court. To lay down any rule, as to the extent to which its operation should be limited, is scarcely possible, but it is plain ²⁴ Note N, p. 168.

that its scope must be confined within those bounds that common sense and sound reason dictate."²⁵

Ingredients.—The section has three essentials :—

1. Entry into or upon property in the possession of another.
2. If such entry is lawful then unlawfully remaining upon such property.
3. Such entry or unlawful remaining must be with intent
 - (i) to commit an offence; or
 - (ii) to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession of the property.

1. 'Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another'.—

Every unauthorised entry is not criminal trespass. A trespass is not criminal unless one or other of the intentions specified in the definition is proved. "There must be an unauthorised entry into or upon property,—unauthorised, that is to say, either directly against the will of the person in possession, or constructively against his will, in the sense that he who enters has unlawful intention, which, were it known to such person, would make him object, forbid or prevent the entry that in ignorance of such intention he sanctions and permits."¹

A man may be guilty of criminal trespass on the land of another without ever personally setting foot on it, if for example, he causes others to build on it against the wishes and in spite of the protest of the owner.² The Rangoon High Court has dissented from this view and held that where a person acting in good faith and believing the land to be his gives to his tenant the right to possession of the land but does not order him to take it on his behalf, he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass.³

The use of criminal force is not necessary.⁴

'Whoever'.—Any person who enters in the manner indicated in the section commits this offence. The accused must have committed the trespass in person. Merely sending a servant to plough up land is not an entry by the master.⁵

'Property'.—In this section property generally means immovable corporeal property, and not incorporeal property. A right of fishery is not property of such a nature as that a man who unlawfully infringes that right can be said to enter upon property in the possession of another, within the meaning of this section.⁶ Similarly, a person plying a boat for hire at a distance of three miles from a public ferry cannot be said, with reference to such ferry, to commit criminal trespass.⁷ But the word 'property' is wide enough to cover moveable property into or upon which it is possible for a person to enter or upon entering remain, with the intention described in the section. The word would, therefore, cover a boat, and a person may be found guilty of criminal trespass in respect of a ferry boat.⁸

'Possession'.—The possession must be actual possession of some person other than the alleged trespasser.⁹ If one person forcibly enters upon property in the possession of another, and there does an act with intent to annoy the person so in possession, is guilty of criminal trespass without reference to the question in whom the title to the land may ultimately be found.¹⁰ A landlord who forcibly enters on land in the possession of a tenant after the expiry of the lease and dispossesses him is guilty of an offence of criminal trespass, even where the lease gives him the right of re-entry on its termination.¹¹ The question of title is not to be raised on a plea of possession. But "a mere trespasser cannot, by the very act of trespass, immediately and without acquiescence, give himself what the law understands by possession against the person whom he ejects, and drive him to produce his title, if he can, without delay, reinstate

²⁵ Per Straight, J., in Gobind Prasad, (1879)

2 All. 465, 466; Shistidhar Parui, (1872)

9 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 19, 18 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Chooramoni Sant, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 25.

¹ Per Straight, J., in Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All. 465, 466.

² Ghasi, (1917) 39 All. 722.

³ Maung Nwe v. Maung Po Hla, [1937] Ran. 246.

⁴ Pottivadu v. Vecrayya, (1902) 12 M. L. J. 447.

⁵ Shwe Kun, (1906) 8 L. B. R. 278, 5 Cr. L. J. 415; Mg. Shwe Kyi, (1922) 1 B. L. J. 276.

⁶ Charu Nayiah, (1877) 2 Cal. 354.

⁷ Muthra v. Jawahir, (1877) 1 All. 527.

⁸ Dhananjay Dhara v. Provat Chandra Biswas, (1934) 38 C. W. N. 665, 35 Cr. L. J. 949, [1934] AIR (C) 480.

⁹ Faujdar, (1878) P. R. No. 28 of 1878; Kunji Lal, (1913) 12 A. L. J. R. 151, 14 Cr. L. J. 633, [1914] AIR (A) 220; Parmeshwar Lal Mitter, (1921) 7 P. L. T. 347, 23 Cr. L. J. 440; Abdul Hussain, [1943] Kar. 7.

¹⁰ Ram Dyal Mundle, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 28.

¹¹ Dwarka Singh v. Ram Kishun Singh, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 402, [1917] AIR (P) 542.

himself in his former possession.¹² Possession is not lost because trespassers come without license and plough the land. It would put the rightful owner of land in an almost impossible position if after getting possession of the land through a civil Court a single act of trespass is deemed sufficient to take away his possession and to deprive him of recourse to the criminal Courts. Consequently the rightful owner can file a complaint for the second act of trespass even though at the time he was deprived of the possession by the trespassers.¹³ The offence may be committed in respect of property in a person's possession even though such possession may not have originated in right.¹⁴ Possession given even for a few minutes in execution of a decree constitutes possession contemplated by this section.¹⁵

A proprietor in possession of land through his license or tenant can be said to be in possession of the property and if a person trespasses on the land with intent to cause annoyance to the proprietor, he is guilty of the offence under this section.¹⁶

It would seem that a person entitled to a right of way or other incorporeal right is not a person in possession of property within the definition of this offence, and there can be no criminal trespass 'into or upon' such property.

Joint possession.—A joint owner of land who enters upon the land with the intention or knowledge of doing a wrongful act commits criminal trespass.¹⁷ A prosecution for criminal trespass on the part of one co-owner against another co-owner will not lie unless there has been an ouster from possession or some destruction or waste of the common property.¹⁸ Where one co-sharer built upon a piece of common land against the will of the other co-sharer, whose consent had been previously asked and refused, it was held that this circumstance alone was not sufficient to render the co-sharer so building guilty of criminal trespass.¹⁹ One member of a joint family commits no trespass by entering into the house which forms the joint property, but he is guilty of that offence when he enters into the room ordinarily occupied by another member of the family.²⁰ A joint owner of property is entitled to have joint possession restored to him in a civil Court; but he is not justified in taking the law into his own hands to recover possession. If he does so he is liable for criminal trespass.²¹ The entry of a stranger into a family dwelling-house, with the permission and license of one of the members, is not criminal trespass.²²

Where a business is in the actual possession of one partner as manager and that partner dies, the firm or the remaining partners collectively must be considered to be in possession thereafter for purposes of this section.²³

Entry to commit offence, etc.—The entry into or upon the property in the possession of another must be with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession of the property. Where the accused entered upon another's property to cut down trees;²⁴ where the accused cultivated village waste-land, which he had been ordered not to cultivate;²⁵ and where the accused enclosed, and cultivated a portion of a burial-ground,¹ this offence was held to have been committed.

Entry not to commit offence or to intimidate, insult, or annoy.—Where the accused secretly entered into an exhibition building without ticket but without any of the intents specified in the section;² where the accused went into cavalry lines, without the permission of the commanding officer, with a cavalryman of the regiment with intent to commit adultery;³ where a person drove his cart across an open green, ¹² Per Lord Denman, C. J., in Browne v. Dawson, (1840) 12 Ad. & E. 624, 629.

¹³ Amru, (1915) 37 Cr. L. J. 720.

¹⁴ Surwan Singh, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 11.

¹⁵ Sitaram v. Tilokchand, (1932) 28 N. L. R. 98, 34 Cr. L. J. 145, [1933] AIR (N) 86.

¹⁶ Bansidhar, [1941] O. W. N. 1300, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 162, [1942] AIR (O) 104.

¹⁷ Ram Prasad, (1911) 33 All. 773.

¹⁸ K. M. Hamin Khan, (1881) 3 Mad. 178.

¹⁹ Ram Sarup, (1914) 36 All. 474.

²⁰ Frankisto Chunder v. Bissonath Chunder, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 6.

²¹ Gopakrao Venkatesh, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 285, 7 Cr. L. J. 309.

²² Prankrishna Chandra, (1870) 6 Beng. L. R.

(Appx.) 80.

²³ Gopala Iyer, [1935] M. W. N. 48.

²⁴ Jeenut Bebee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

²⁵ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 17, 1 Weir 513. See Nagoji Ramachandra, (1898) 1 Weir 143.

¹ (1871) 6 M. H. C. (Appx.) 25, 26, 1 Weir 513, 514. But see (1871) 6 M. H. C. (Appx.) 26, 1 Weir 514, in which a person who included in his own land a portion of a public foot-path was held to have not committed this offence. See also Fakirgavda, (1888) Cr. R. No. 49 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 393.

² Mehervanji Bejanji, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 6.

³ Kushee, (1887) Cr. R. No. 18 of 1887, Unrep. Cr. C. 328.

in contravention of an order issued by Municipal Commissioners, who had no power to issue the order;⁴ where an excommunicated Hindu wife entered the house of her husband to claim maintenance;⁵ where a person effected an entry into a Local Fund market with intent to evade payment of market dues;⁶ where A, having shot a deer near B's land, followed it into D's land for the purpose of killing it, although he was warned off the land beforehand;⁷ where a man for several years cultivated land under a lease from the Forest Department, and during his occupation built a dwelling-house and made other improvements, but refused to relinquish the land after notice of ejectment was served upon him until he was paid compensation;⁸ where an owner entered into his own lands permissively used or occupied by, but not in the possession of, another;⁹ where a person fished in a tank to which the public generally had access;¹⁰ where a person entered into premises purchased by him at a Sheriff's sale for the purpose of acquiring possession;¹¹ where a zamindar, under the pretext that one of his tenants had left the village and abandoned his holding, took possession of the tenant's holding wrongfully;¹² and where the accused drove a cart over Government waste land in respect of which the Municipality had put up notices prohibiting cart traffic,¹³ this offence was held not to have been committed.

The accused granted a lease of pepper on certain hills described to be the property of his tarwad. The lease granted comprised within the boundaries mentioned therein not only land belonging to the tarwad of the accused but also other land stated to be the property of Government. The lessee conveyed his rights to others, and, under colour of the lease, the sub-lessees bona fide entered upon the land and took the pepper. The accused was convicted of abetment of criminal trespass and of theft. It was held that the execution of the document could not be said to aid either the entry or the taking, and that, in the absence of evidence that the accused either suggested the entry or the taking, he was not guilty.¹⁴ Where a servant of a proprietor, who had voluntarily surrendered his estate to the Court of Wards, cut or removed bamboos, etc., growing thereon for the benefit of his master, it was held that no offence had been committed.¹⁵ A school was built by public subscription and put in charge of a teacher. He closed the school for want of pupils, and went away having locked the building. The accused who were some of the managers of the school took possession of the building and started certain classes in it. They were convicted of criminal trespass. It was held that the conviction was improper as the building was not in the possession of the teacher and the accused had no intention of annoying him.¹⁶

2. 'With intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property'.—The word "intent" is not to be taken as identical with "wish" or "desire". The intention constitutes the entry criminal. Merely to trespass is not ordinarily such an offence; but when the trespass is in order to the commission of an offence, or when it is to intimidate, to insult, or to annoy, it is punished. Thus, the essence of the offence is the intent in committing the trespass.¹⁷ It is essential for the prosecution to prove the intention laid down in the section. The intention must always be gathered from the circumstances of the case, and one matter which has to be considered is the consequences which naturally flow from the act, because a man is usually presumed to intend the consequences of his own act. That, however, is only one element from which the Court has to discover the intention of the party who trespasses.¹⁸ "It must be proved that some criminal intent was present in the mind of the accused, and it does not at all follow that, because an act is unlawful and is one that the civil law will restrain, or for which it will compensate the injured

⁴ (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 38.

⁵ Marimuttu, (1881) 4 Mad. 243, (1881) 1 Weir 523.

⁶ Varthappa Nayakan, (1882) 5 Mad. 382.

⁷ Chunder Narain v. Farquharson, (1879) 4 Cal. 837.

⁸ Faujdar, (1878) P. R. No. 28 of 1878.

⁹ Daniel Groves, (1882) 1 Weir 521.

¹⁰ (1879) 1 Weir 520.

¹¹ Charoo Chunder Mutty Lal, (1899) 4 C. W. N. 47.

¹² Jangi Singh, (1903) 26 All. 194; Barid, (1904) 27 All. 298.

¹³ Nga U Thit, (1909) U. B. R. (P. C.) 25, 11

Cr. L. J. 57.

¹⁴ Parapravan Bavothi Hadgi v. Henry Rhodes Morgan, (1890) 1 Weir 48.

¹⁵ Parmeshwar Singh, (1910) 38 Cal. 180.

¹⁶ Narain Das, (1918) 17 A. L. J. R. 384, 20 Cr. L. J. 463.

¹⁷ See Mathura Rai, (1928) 50 All. 637; Duraismami, [1935] M. W. N. 1290; Ganauri Mia, (1935) 16 P. L. T. 847, 37 Cr. L. J. 513, [1936] AIR (P) 248; Khurshedji, (1926) 21 S. L. R. 263, 28 Cr. L. J. 349, [1927] AIR (S) 159.

¹⁸ D'Cunha, (1935) 37 Bom. L. R. 880, 59 Bom. 738.

party in damages, it is necessarily criminal".¹⁹ A mere knowledge that he will annoy the owner is not sufficient. It must be shown that the intention of the accused was to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession.²⁰

An intent to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment is not the same thing as an attempt to commit such offence. It exists before the attempt is begun. A mere intent is not by itself an offence. Therefore, where it is used as essential to bring a particular act within the category of criminal offences, and proof has been given that such an act accompanied by such an intent has been committed, the offence is complete, even though the further act intended may not have been committed or even attempted. Where an offender enters the premises of his neighbour on his way to the private apartments occupied by that neighbour's wife with intent to commit adultery, the offence of criminal trespass is complete long before the stage of an attempt to commit the adultery is reached.²¹

Criminal trespass depends on the intention of the offender and not upon the nature of the act and when the man's intention is to save his family and property from imminent destruction it cannot be said that because he commits civil trespass on his neighbour's land and cuts a portion of an embankment belonging to his neighbour which he ordinarily would not be justified in doing, he is guilty of any criminal offence.²² It is one thing to entertain a certain intention, and another to have the knowledge that one's act may possibly lead to a certain result. The section is so worded as to show that the act must be done with intent and does not, as other sections do (e.g. s. 425), embrace the case of an act done with knowledge of the likelihood of a given consequence. Although a trespasser knows that his act, if discovered, will be likely to cause annoyance, it does not follow that he does the act with that intent.²³ There is a distinction between the phrases "with intent" and "with knowledge"; it must be proved by the prosecution that the accused had the intention to intimidate, insult or annoy when he made the entry, and it is not enough that the prosecution should ask the Court to infer that the entry is bound to cause intimidation, insult or annoyance. A mere knowledge that the trespass is likely to cause insult or annoyance does not amount to an intent to insult or annoy within this section. A conviction could not follow merely because one could pronounce with certainty that the accused must have known that his act would, as one of its inevitable incidents, cause annoyance.²⁴ Accused's son, a young boy, having stolen some jewels belonging to his father, told him that he had given them to the Head Master of his school, the complainant, who kept them in a box in his house. Thereupon the accused with his friends, the co-accused, went into the complainant's house and in spite of the latter's protests, searched the house, but nothing was found. It was held that the accused were not guilty of criminal trespass because trespass was an offence only if it was committed with one of the intents specified in the section and proof that a trespass committed with some other object was known to the accused to be likely or certain to cause insult or annoyance was insufficient to sustain a conviction under s. 448.²⁵ Where the accused started building a hut on a piece of land which was not obviously included within railway land, and the accused apparently acted under a bona fide claim of title and there was nothing to establish an intention to intimidate, insult or annoy, but later on it was demonstrated to him that the land was railway land, and he still continued to build in spite of repeated remonstrances and warnings, it was held that he was rightly convicted of the offence of criminal trespass.¹

'Offence.'—As to offence, see s. 40, supra. Every unlawful act is not necessarily an offence, and mere entry, without right upon another's land does, not render the accompanying trespass a criminal trespass.² If the entry is to commit an offence, ¹⁹ Per Rattigan, J., in Alladitta, (1882) P. R. No. 29 of 1882, p. 37; Ganpat, (1888) Cr. R. No. 43 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 390; Rehana, (1923) 5 Lah. 20; Mayang Po Thei, (1937) 38 Cr. L. J. 776.

²⁰ Nagi Reddy v. Sanjiva Reddy, [1942] 1 M. L. J. 585, [1942] M. W. N. 371, (1941) 55 L. W. 367, 43 Cr. L. J. 755, [1942] AIR (M) 533 (2).

²¹ Dhantua Lodhi, (1915) 19 Cr. L. J. 881, [1917] AIR (N) 90.

²² Madan Mandal, (1918) 41 Cal. 662.

²³ Rayapadayachi, (1896) 19 Mad. 240, 241, approving Sivaratri Guravaiya, (1885) 1 Weir

536, disapproving Veda Gurukkal, (1882) 1 Weir 535. See, to the same effect, Vencataramanuja Reddi, (1909) 10 Cr. L. J. 384; Po Kin, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 355; Tharu, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 29, 12 Cr. L. J. 148.

²⁴ Moti Lal, (1925) 47 All. 855; Mahadeo, [1934] A. L. J. R. 1061, 36 Cr. L. J. 328, [1934] AIR (A) 1025.

²⁵ Vullappa v. Bheema Row, (1917) 41 Mad. 156, F.B.

¹ Baldawa, (1933) 56 All. 33.

² Ibid.

criminal trespass is committed.³ In a Madras case it is laid down that it is sufficient if the evidence leaves no reasonable doubt that the accused intended to commit some offence. It is not necessary for the Magistrate to find what specific offence he wanted to commit.⁴

The offence mentioned in this section cannot be the offence of criminal trespass itself but must be some other offence either under the Penal Code or under any special enactment. Where a cow belonging to the accused was found grazing in the wheat crops of a certain person who had it impounded in the cattle-pound and the accused proceeded to the cattle-pound, opened the lock, entered and drove off his cow, it was held that as the accused entered with intent to commit an act, which was made an offence by the Cattle Trespass Act, he was guilty of criminal trespass.⁵ Where the accused sat in front of a railway train to prevent its progress as a protest against a railway company for overcrowding, it was held that he had committed an offence under s. 128 of the Indian Railways Act and his act amounted to criminal trespass.⁶

It is not necessary that the offence should be directed against the person in possession. It is sufficient that the property entered upon should be in the possession of another.⁷ The section, as worded, means that if a person enters upon property with intent to commit an offence on that property, or any other property, or with respect to a person who is, or is not in possession of the property entered upon, he is guilty under it.⁸ Where the accused at night passed stealthily through the courtyard of one house with the intention of committing adultery in another adjoining house, it was held that he was guilty of criminal trespass under the first part and not the second part of this section.⁹

An unlawful act is not necessarily an offence (s. 40), and an intention to commit such act does not render the accompanying trespass criminal.¹⁰ Thus, unlawful infringement of a right of exclusive fishing in a part of a public river is not an offence which can be brought within the definition of criminal trespass.¹¹

If a person suspects that a trader, of whom he is a customer, is having false measures, he is entitled to get in and see whether the trader has correct measures or not and if he entered the shop to seize the measures his entry will not amount to criminal trespass, for it cannot be said that when he entered the shop he did so with intent to commit any offence.¹²

'To intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property'.—Trespass is an offence only if it is committed with one of the intents specified in the section and proof that a trespass committed with some other object was known to the accused to be likely or certain to cause insult or annoyance is insufficient to sustain a conviction.¹³

'Intimidate'.—The word "intimidate" must be understood in its ordinary sense "to overawe, to put in fear, by a show of force or threats or violence". Where the accused persons came on the land of the complainant to oust him forcibly and by intimidation, that is to say, they entered upon the land with intent to intimidate the complainant and thereby to compel him to give up possession, it was held that they had committed criminal trespass.¹⁴ The accused's son, a young boy, having stolen some jewels belonging to his father, told him that he had given them to the Head Master of his school, the complainant, who kept them in a box in his house. Thereupon the second accused with his friends, the other four accused in the case, went into the complainant's house, and in spite of the latter's protest and remonstrances insisted on searching, and did in fact search, the house. But nothing was found. The complainant naturally felt insulted and annoyed at the high-handed conduct of the accused and lodged a complaint against the accused. It was held that the accused were not guilty of criminal trespass.¹⁵

³ Jeenut Bebee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

⁴ See Samban, (1881) 1 Weir 533, followed in Kurnam Seshayya, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 71, 21 M. L. J. 781, 12 Cr. L. J. 453.

⁵ Bhola, (1927) 8 Lah. 331.

⁶ Ram Chander Mutsaddi, (1930) 6 Luck. 485.

⁷ Chinkwana, (1901) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 352, 353.

⁸ Mohammad Yar, (1938) 19 Lah. 462, 469, F.B.

⁹ Ibid.

¹⁰ Alladitta, (1882) P. R. No. 20 of 1882.

¹¹ Charu Nayiah, (1877) 2 Cal. 354.

¹² Singara Babu, [1944] 2 M. L. J. 455, (1944) 57 L. W. 394.

¹³ Vullappa v. Bheema Row, (1917) 41 Mad. 156, F.B., Sellamuthu Seroigaran v. Pallamuthu Karuppan, (1911) 35 Mad. 186, overruled.

¹⁴ T. H. Bird, (1933) 18 Pat. 268.

¹⁵ Vullappa v. Bheema Row, (1917) 41 Mad. 156, F.B.,

During the pendency of a civil suit, certain persons, on behalf of the plaintiff, went on to the premises belonging to the defendant for the purpose of making a survey and for getting materials for a hostile application against the defendant. They went (some of them armed) and, without the permission of the defendant, and in his absence, and when the defendant's servants objected to their action, persisted in their trespass, and endeavoured to prevent opposition by making false statements as to the authority under which they were acting. It was held that their actions amounted to criminal trespass as their object in taking swords with them was "to intimidate".¹⁶

The accused was ejected from a plot of land and formal delivery of possession took place, but even after that he continued in possession and sowed a crop therein although the land was leased by the landlord to another person. After the crop had been cut and the land was lying fallow the lessee entered into possession but was forcibly ousted by the accused. It was held that the accused acquired no fresh right by forcibly cultivating the plot after his ejection and the new lessee was in rightful possession when he was ousted by the accused. The primary intention in such a case was to intimidate and the secondary object was to enforce possession, and the accused by entering on property in the possession of another with intent to intimidate could not defend his act by reliance on his ultimate intention of enforcing his supposed right of possession and he was guilty of criminal trespass.¹⁷

Where the object of the accused in standing on a chabutra, which the Chairman of the Municipal Board wanted to demolish, was to prevent the Congress flag from being removed, it was held that their conduct in remaining near the flag could not be said to have been actuated with an intent to insult, intimidate or annoy the Chairman of the Municipal Board and they were not guilty of criminal trespass.¹⁸ Where the accused held a condolence meeting in a park in contravention of a notice served by the Chairman of the Municipal Board, it was held that the intention to hold such a meeting could not possibly amount to an intention to commit an offence, nor could the primary intention be said to be to intimidate, insult or annoy the Chairman of the Municipal Board and the action of the accused in holding the meeting did not amount to criminal trespass. They could only be said to have committed civil trespass for which they could be sued in a civil Court.¹⁹

'Annoy'.—"The word 'annoy'... must be taken to mean annoyance that would generally and reasonably affect an ordinary person, not what would specially and exclusively annoy a particular individual".²⁰ "'Annoyance' is a wider term than nuisance, and if you find a thing which reasonably troubles the mind and pleasure, not of a fanciful person or of a skilled person who knows the truth, but of the ordinary sensible... inhabitant of a house—if you find there is anything which disturbs his reasonable peace of mind, that seems to me to be an annoyance, although it may not appear to amount to physical detriment to comfort."²¹ "Mere knowledge of the possibility of annoyance resulting from an act of trespass is not sufficient to bring the case within the definition [of trespass] but... the word 'intent' cannot be read as if it were identical with 'wish' or 'desire'. There may be no wish to annoy but if annoyance is the natural consequence of the act, and if it is known to the person who does the act that such is the natural consequence then there is an intent to annoy. Most acts in the common course of natural events and human conduct lead to a series of results, and if these results are foreseen by the person doing the acts they cannot be said to be caused unintentionally. The ultimate object may be something different but the person intends all the intermediate results which he knows will happen in the natural course of events even though he may regret that they should happen. When it is uncertain whether a particular result will follow... there may be no intent to cause that result even though it may be known that the result is likely. But it seems impossible to contend when an act is done with a knowledge amounting to practical certainty that a result will follow, that it is not intended to cause that result".²² The mere fact that ¹⁶ Golap Pandey v. Boddam, (1889) 16 Cal. 715.

¹⁷ Bans Gopal, (1938) 14 Luck. 360.

¹⁸ Ram Bahi, (1936) 13 Luck. 89.

¹⁹ Babu Sundar Lal Gupta, (1936) 13 Luck. 92.

²⁰ Per Straight, J., in Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All 465, 467.

²¹ Per Bowen, L. J., in Tod-Heatly v. Benham, (1888) 40 Ch. D. 80, 98.

²² Per Fulton, J., in Luxman Raghunath, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 280, 282, 26 Bom. 558, 560. This case is not reconcilable with Chunder Narain v. Farquharson, (1879) 4 Cal. 887, Rayapadayachi, (1896) 19 Mad. 240, and has been dissented from in Fullappa v. Bheema Row, a person in possession is annoyed is not enough. It must be proved that the intention of the trespasser was to annoy.²³

Where an accused person has forcibly or clandestinely entered a house which he knew to have been definitely closed and barred against him by the owner thereof, in that case the Court may find that the intention to insult or annoy, under such circumstances, was so clearly inherent in the acts of the accused as to form an essential part of the purpose with which entry into the house was effected. If there is an invitation (to enter a house) combined with an intention (on the part of the accused) to preserve strict secrecy, then it is difficult to say that there is any intention to annoy a third person, but if that third person has expressly prohibited the accused then his act becomes a direct defiance to an express order and an intention to annoy the author of the order may be inferred from it. A person was found inside the house of another at night and he pleaded in defence, first, that he had entered the house at the request of one of the inmates and, secondly, that he had no intention of annoying or insulting the complainant. It was found that he had taken the precaution of keeping his presence in the house entirely secret from the owner thereof, and it was not found that he was forbidden to enter the house by the owner. It was held that the conviction of the accused without inquiry into the truth or otherwise of the defence set up was bad in law.²⁴ Where it was proved that a person entered a house with intent to have illicit intercourse with a widow, it was held that he was not guilty of any offence.²⁵ Because though he might have known that, if discovered he was likely to cause annoyance to the owner of the house, he could not be said to have intended either actually or constructively to cause such annoyance. But where the accused could not prove to the satisfaction of the Court that he had an intimacy with a widow living in the house, it was held that he was guilty of lurking house-trespass.¹ Where the accused entered into a house to carry on an intrigue with a girl on receiving information that her father was absent, but was caught by her uncle before he could get away, it was held that it could not be said that the accused either intended or expected that his conduct would cause annoyance by being made public.² Where the accused entered at night the complainant's house with intent to carry on an intrigue with his unmarried goown-up daughter, it was held that it could not be said that he intended to cause annoyance to the complainant and was therefore not guilty of criminal trespass.³ A house was occupied only by the owner and his concubine who had an intimacy with the accused. The accused entered the house at her invitation in the absence of the owner and took measures to conceal himself as soon as the owner arrived who, however, arrested him. It was held that the accused was not guilty of an offence under this section.⁴ Where accused broke open a lock and entered into a room which was not in his possession, but was in the possession of the complainant, behind the back of the latter, it was held that the intention to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult or annoy was clearly inherent in the act of the accused.⁵

Where the accused entered on the land of another to stop him from ploughing in order to make him render an account;⁶ where the complainant leased a portion of his lands to certain tenants for the purpose of making bricks and the accused entered on such land with an intention to annoy the complainant;⁷ where the accused acting on behalf of or under the colour of the right of their master to whom possession had (1917) 41 Mad. 156, F.B.; but it has been referred to with approval in Chhote Lal, (1917) 40 All. 221. It may be observed that intent and knowledge are distinguishable in the Indian Penal Code. In definitions of some of the offences both the words occur. In others only intent enters as an ingredient. The doctrine of presuming intention from knowledge cannot be safely applied to the Indian Penal Code. See Ram Sukh, (1933) 10 O. W. N. 1075, 34 Cr. L. J. 1055, [1933] AIR (O) 436; Maia Dayal v. Salig Ram, (1933) 10 O. W. N. 1078, 35 Cr. L. J. 124, [1933] AIR (O) 469.

²³ Upendra Nath Paul v. Bankim Chatterjee, (1947) 48 Cr. L. J. 785.

²⁴ Chhote Lal, (1917) 40 All. 221; Asa Ram, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 751.

²⁵ Gaya Bhar, (1916) 38 All. 517.

¹ Mulla, (1915) 37 All. 395. See Kangla, (1900) 23 All. 82; Brij Basi, (1896) 19 All. 74; Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391; Ram Saran, (1905) P. R. No. 12 of 1906, 4 Cr. L. J. 293, F.B.; Chatter Singh Demat, (1919) 8 U. B. R. (1917-1920) 194, 21 Cr. L. J. 435, [1920] AIR (UB) 50.

² Suleman, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 385, 27 Cr. L. J. 1015, [1927] AIR (S) 92; Ram Saran, (1905) P. R. No. 12 of 1906, 4 Cr. L. J. 293, F.B.

³ Abdul Majid, (1938) 40 P. L. R. 806, 39 Cr. L. J. 756, [1938] AIR (L) 534, F.B.

⁴ Rupa, (1919) 22 O. C. 121, 20 Cr. L. J. 610, [1919] AIR (O) 402.

⁵ Jamnadas, [1944] All. 754.

⁶ Weir (3rd Edn.) 204; Bhow, (1877) Unrep. Cr. C. 122.

⁷ Muniandia Pillai, (1882) 1 Weir 517.

been awarded by a civil Court, entered upon land in the physical possession of tenants or others prima facie entitled to retain possession until ousted by due course of law;⁸ where a person, after having been ejected by due process of law from certain agricultural land, wilfully persisted in trespassing upon such land;⁹ where the complainant, the purchaser of the rights of a mortgagee in possession and his predecessor-in-title, had been peacefully in possession of certain agricultural land for some years, and a relation of the mortgagor forcibly ousted the complainant on the plea that he was under the Hindu law entitled to share in the land and the mortgagor had no title to make a mortgage thereof with possession¹⁰ it was held that this offence was committed.

The accused was convicted under s. 509 for causing the roof of a house belonging to him, which the complainant occupied as his tenant, to be removed while the complainant's wife, a purdanashin woman, was in it, without giving any notice beforehand, and thereby causing her to be exposed to public view. It was held that the removal of the roof in the circumstances amounted to criminal trespass as it was clear that the accused intended to annoy the complainant, and house-trespass (s. 448) was thus established.¹¹ In a full bench case the former Chief Court of the Punjab held that where a person claiming a title to property, whether his title be good or bad, entered without any legal justification upon property in the established possession of another, he must be inferred to have had an intent to annoy the person in possession even though he had no primary desire to annoy and his only object was to obtain possession for himself.¹² The Patna High Court has held otherwise,¹³ but its decision seems not to be sound.

A headman was holding a regular trial in his private dwelling, and the accused attended to watch the proceedings on behalf of his nephew, who was under trial. The accused was ordered to withdraw by the headman, but he remained there to witness the proceedings. He was subsequently pushed out and then prosecuted for committing house-trespass. It was held that he had not said or done anything from which an intent to intimidate, insult, or annoy, might be inferred, and he was therefore not guilty.¹⁴

'Any person in possession'.—The Allahabad High Court has held that the possession contemplated and intended by this section must be "actual in the sense and meaning of s. 530, Criminal Procedure Code."¹⁵ The person to be annoyed must be on the premises, otherwise there could be no criminal trespass.¹⁶ Of two rival claimants, A and B, to some immovable property, including a certain shop, A was in possession of the shop through a tenant. The tenant, however, vacated the shop, whereupon B occupied it and locked it up. It was held that A could not, at the time of the occurrence, be said to be in possession of the shop within the meaning of this section and that the intention of B was not necessarily that required to constitute the offence of criminal trespass within the meaning of this section.¹⁷

The Calcutta High Court has also held that an intention to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of a house does not mean to insult or annoy any person in constructive but in actual possession of the premises.¹⁸ The section contemplates actual possession, not mere juridical possession. Where there is a person in actual physical possession of property, he is the only person whose feelings have to be considered under this section.¹⁹

The Bombay High Court has held likewise.²⁰

⁸ Srinivasaiyengar, (1884) Weir (3rd Edn.) 320.

⁹ Tika Ram, (1901) 22 A. W. N. 6.

¹⁰ Nandan, (1902) 22 A. W. N. 42.

¹¹ Dheramal, (1901) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 350.

¹² Ram Saran, (1905) P. R. No. 12 of 1906, 4 Cr. L. J. 293, F. B. Per Clark, C. J., and Reid, J. Rattigan, J., dissented from this view and held that it was not enough for the prosecution to prove or for the Court to find that the accused knew that his entry would probably annoy the person in possession, but it is absolutely essential to affirmatively establish and find that the accused acted with an intention to annoy; mere knowledge that annoyance is likely to result is not sufficient. Followed in Premam, (1929) 11 Lah. 288.

¹³ Ramzan Mistry, (1929) 11 P. L. T. 80, 80 Cr. L. J. 684, [1929] AIR (P) 111.

¹⁴ Nga Po Ya, (1922) 25 Cr. L. J. 673, [1923] AIR (R) 145. See Audayappa Mudaliar, (1923) 18 L. W. 181, [1923] M. W. N. 451, 24 Cr. L. J. 824, [1924] AIR (M) 40.

¹⁵ Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All. 465, 468; Jangi Singh, (1903) 26 All. 194; Bazid, (1904) 27 All. 298.

¹⁶ Moti Lal, (1925) 47 All. 855, 858.

¹⁷ Ibid.

¹⁸ Ishur Chunder Kurmoker v. Seetul Das Mitter, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 47.

¹⁹ Tok Gyi, (1916) 8 L. B. R. 425, 17 Cr. L. J. 378, [1917] AIR (LB) 155; Bismillah, (1928) 3 Luck. 661. Bhagwan Din, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 501, 19 Cr. L. J. 704, [1918] AIR (A) 365, leaves the point open.

²⁰ Balkrishna Narhar Velhankar, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 978, 26 Cr. L. J. 254, [1924] AIR (B) 486.

The Madras High Court has held that the offence may be committed against a person in constructive as well as against a person in actual possession of immovable property.²¹ Criminal trespass may be committed even when the person in possession of the property is absent, provided the entering into or upon the property is done with intent to do any of the acts mentioned in the section. Where a person entered upon a field, that had been leased, during the absence of the lessee and ploughed it, and only the lessor came to the spot on hearing of it to prevent the commission of such act, it was held that that was not enough to exonerate that person from intention to annoy the lessee and that such a person could properly be convicted under this section.²² A woman entered into the compound of an Assistant Superintendent of Police in his absence for the purpose of meeting her paramour. It was held that as her entry was not made with the object of intimidating, insulting or annoying the absent Superintendent of Police or any other person she was not guilty of criminal trespass.²³

The Chief Court of Oudh has held that owners of houses are not always and at all times in possession of their houses or of their shops and it would be absurd to hold that because the complainant was temporarily absent from his house at the time when forcible entry was effected into it, therefore, the accused were not guilty of the offence of criminal trespass.²⁴ Putting a lock on the outer door of an empty house does constitute in the eye of the law either actual or physical possession over the house.

The words "any person in possession" do not mean only "a complainant in possession" there being no authority for taking the offence of mischief and trespass out of the general rule which allows any person to complain of a criminal act.²⁵

An owner has no right to re-enter land which he has let to a tenant, and may be convicted of an offence for so doing under s. 447 unless it can be shown that the tenancy has been determined in accordance with law.¹ Where the complainant was a tenant of the accused and was living in his house, but he left it when the house fell down and the accused took possession of the vacant site, it was held that the accused had committed no offence.²

C, a rate-payer, who had filed a petition against an assessment which in his absence had been dismissed, entered a room, where a Committee of the Municipal Commissioners were seated hearing and deciding petitions in assessment matters, ostensibly with the object of presenting a petition for the revision of his assessment. The Chairman ordered him to leave the room, and on his refusal to do so, he was turned out. Outside the room in the verandah he addressed the crowd complaining that no justice was to be obtained from the Committee. It was held that he had committed no offence.³

3. 'Having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there'.—The second part of the section applies where the entry is lawful, but subsequently the person who has entered insists on unlawfully remaining, either directly or constructively against the will of the person in possession with intent thereby to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person in possession of the property.⁴

A person who unlawfully continues in occupation of property upon which he has unlawfully entered is as liable to punishment as a person who remains unlawfully on property which he has entered lawfully provided he is actuated by one of the intentions

²¹ Sheikh Hyder Sahib v. Sabjan Sahib, [1931] M. W. N. 328, 34 L. W. 527, 33 Cr. L. J. 145, Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All. 465, dissented from; Maung Kado, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 264. See Jambulinga Chetti, (1924) 47 M. L. J. 437, [1924] M. W. N. 546, 26 Cr. L. J. 219, [1924] AIR (M) 862.

²² Venkatesu v. Kesamma, (1930) 54 Mad. 515; Narayan v. Madar Khan, [1944] 2 M. L. J. 380.

²³ Chinna Thoyi, (1895) 1 Weir 518; Narain Das, (1918) 17 A. L. J. R. 834, 20 Cr. L. J. 463, [1919] AIR (A) 300.

²⁴ Baldeo Prasad, (1934) 11 O. W. N. 738, 85 Cr. L. J. 964, [1934] AIR (O) 281.

²⁵ Keshavlal Jekrishna, (1896) 21 Bom. 536;

¹ Maung San Myin, (1922) 25 Cr. L. J. 699, 2 B. L. J. 87, [1923] AIR (R) 245.

Prayag Singh v. Morgan, (1920) 33 C. L. J. 118, 22 Cr. L. J. 494, (sub. nom.) Rayaz Singh, (1920) 25 C. W. N. 425, [1921] AIR (C) 627; Daga Bhika, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 631, 29 Cr. L. J. 977, [1928] AIR (B) 221.

² Sondu v. Rama, (1932) 34 P. L. R. 953, 85 Cr. L. J. 77, [1933] AIR (L) 734.

³ Chandi Pershad v. Evan, (1894) 22 Cal. 123, commented on in Prayag Singh v. Morgan, (1920) 33 C. L. J. 118, 22 Cr. L. J. 494, (sub. nom.) Rayaz Singh, (1920) 25 C. W. N. 425, [1921] AIR (C) 627; Nga Po Tok, (1918) 8 U. B. R. (1917-20) 111, 20 Cr. L. J. 115; contra, Nga Tok Kyi, (1916) 8 L. B. R. 425, 17 Cr. L. J. 878.

⁴ Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All. 465, 466.

mentioned in this section; and he is liable to be convicted in respect of such unlawful continuance even though he has already been convicted in respect of the original unlawful entry inasmuch as each time the true owner goes upon the property or makes a claim under circumstances sufficient in law to constitute re-entry, and the trespasser opposes him with the intention required by this section, a new offence is committed and a new liability arises.⁵ The former Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur had differed from this view and had held that continuance in possession after unlawful entry did not constitute a fresh offence unless there had been re-entry by the true owner. There was no such re-entry if the true owner had merely gone near the property.⁶ Approving this case, the Nagpur High Court has held that the offence of criminal trespass is complete as soon as there is unlawful entry. It is a continuing offence only when the entry is lawful and the subsequent possession becomes unlawful. Where the original entry is unlawful, the possession must be presumed to have commenced with the unlawful entry. There is, therefore, no fresh act of criminal trespass on a subsequent date.⁷

The accused placed bricks on complainant's land with his permission but subsequently refused to remove them. For this he was convicted of criminal trespass. It was held that the possession being lawful in its inception the subsequent refusal did not amount to criminal trespass and the matter was one for decision by a civil Court.⁸

Bona fide claim.—"If a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, but without any intention to intimidate, insult, or annoy the person in possession, or to commit an offence, then although he may have no right to the land he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass, because the entry was not made with any such intent as constitutes the offence... But the mere assertion of a claim of right is not in itself a sufficient answer to such charges. It is the duty of the criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender, and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender, assuming of course that the other facts are established which constitute the offence".⁹ The existence of a bona fide claim of right is not irrefutable evidence of the absence of a criminal intent.¹⁰ But where the accused acts on a belief of his own right, he cannot be held guilty of criminal trespass.¹¹ It should distinctly be found whether the entry of the accused upon the land was in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right or with one of the intents requisite to constitute a trespass criminal within the meaning of this section. If the accused entertained the belief in good faith that he was entitled to the possession of the land, his entry and continuance on it would constitute a trespass on the land for which he would, if he failed to prove his title, be answerable in a civil suit, but would not be liable to a criminal charge. If, on the other hand, the circumstances are such that he could not have entertained such a belief in good faith, it would be a fair inference that he intended the annoyance which his action must have caused to the complainant, and the conviction would be proper.¹²

Re-entry into or remaining upon land from which a person has been ejected by civil process, or of which possession has been given to another, for the purpose of asserting rights he may have solely or jointly with other persons, is not criminal tres-

⁵ Bandhu Singh, (1927) 6 Pat. 794.

⁶ Saibaj v. Gaffoor, (1931) 28 N. L. R. 57, 33 Cr. L. J. 861, [1932] AIR (N) 112.

⁷ Anantram, [1939] N. L. J. 564, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 315.

⁸ Nand Singh, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 247, [1925] AIR (O) 540.

⁹ Per Turner, J., in Budh Singh, (1879) 2 All. 101, 103; Seith Roshun Lal, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 82; Shistidhar Parui, (1872) 9 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 19, 18 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Po Ke, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 319; Maung Kado, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 264; Ramchandra v. Ratho, (1908) 5 N. L. R. 69, 9 Cr. L. J. 561; Abdul Latif, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 135, 13 Cr. L. J. 27; Jagan Dubey, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 629, [1918] AIR (P) 639; Debi Dayal, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1047, [1925] AIR (P) 167; Habib Musalman, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 952, [1928] AIR (N) 79; Sri Narain, [1936] A. L. J. R. 203, 37 Cr. L. J. 244, [1936] AIR (A) 146.

¹⁰ Arunachala Achari, (1881) 1 Weir 520. See Jhumuk Noniah v. Shadashib Roy, (1881) 7 Cal. 26; Chakoo Mandal, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 467, 5 Cr. L. J. 278.

¹¹ Jurakhan Singh, (1907) 7 C. L. J. 238, 7 Cr. L. J. 312; Reajaddin Molla, (1914) 18 C. W. N. 1245, 15 Cr. L. J. 725, [1915] AIR (C) 236; Akshay Singh v. Romeshwar Bagdi, (1916) 43 Cal. 1143; Bhagwan Din, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 501, 19 Cr. L. J. 704, [1918] AIR (A) 365; U Kyaw Zan, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 759, [1937] AIR (R) 122.

¹² Devarasctli Gangaiya, (1884) 1 Weir 516; Po Ke, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 319; Maung Shwe Ku, (1923) 24 Cr. L. J. 929, [1923] AIR (R) 157; Ghulam Ahmad, (1938) 40 P. L. R. 757, 40 Cr. L. J. 180, [1938] AIR (L) 848.

pass unless the intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy is conclusively proved.¹³ But where A was in peaceful possession of land which he claimed to hold in mortgage from B, and C entered on the land and ploughed it, ousting A, on the ground that he had bought the land from B, it was held that A was not liable to be ousted from the land save in due course of law, and C rendered himself liable to a conviction of criminal trespass.¹⁴ Similarly, a forcible entry upon land, which had been sold in execution of a money-decree and of which actual possession had been given to the purchaser under s. 318 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, without resistance or opposition, and over which the purchaser had thereafter exercised acts of possession, by sub-tenants claiming under a lease of an antecedent date from the judgment-debtor, was held to be criminal trespass.¹⁵ Thus, superior title in the accused will not by itself convert the complainant into a mere trespasser, so as to justify him in ejecting the complainant, if the latter be in possession otherwise than as a mere trespasser.¹⁶

The law is that the lawful owner of land of which another is in possession without right may enter on it, provided he is entitled by law to enter and can do so peaceably. But he may not effect such entry "with a strong hand or multitude of people". He may use a reasonable amount of force. But, whether peaceably or with a reasonable amount of force, he must somehow enter. In order to sustain a conviction under s. 447 you must have something more effective than a mere claim to the property; certainly something more effective than the very indefinite sort of attempt or gesture by sending men to the property.¹⁷ Where a person armed with weapons went on a land of which he was the owner when no one else was there at the time and refused to vacate it, when called upon to do so by a person who had no right to the land, it was held that the owner did not remain on the land unlawfully and was not therefore guilty of the offence of criminal trespass within the meaning of this section.¹⁸

In order to effect delivery of possession of an inhabited house, it is necessary to eject the former occupier. It cannot be effected by beating a drum and putting up a notice. If the former occupier forcibly enters into the house under such circumstances he could not be held guilty of criminal trespass.¹⁹

442. Whoever commits criminal trespass by entering into¹ or remaining in any building,² tent or vessel³ used as a human dwelling, or any building used as a place for worship, or as a place for the custody of property, is said to commit "house-trespass".

Explanation—The introduction of any part of the criminal trespasser's body is entering sufficient to constitute house-trespass.

COMMENT.

Circumstances which aggravate the offence of criminal trespass are of two sorts. "Criminal trespasses may be aggravated by the way in which it is committed. It may also be aggravated by the end for which it is committed."²⁰

The authors of the Code say: "There is no sort of property which it is so desirable to guard against unlawful intrusion as the habitations in which men reside, and the buildings in which they keep their goods. The offence of trespassing on these places we designate as house-trespass, and we treat it as an aggravated form of criminal trespass."²¹

¹³ Gobind Prasad, (1879) 2 All. 465; Shah Muhammad v. Ganesh Dass, (1904) P. R. No. 13 of 1905, 2 Cr. L. J. 83; Nanak Chand, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 188; Kewal v. Tufail Ahmad, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1125, [1925] AIR (A) 592.

¹⁴ Mya Zan, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 358.

¹⁵ Kailash Ghose v. Jugal Lohar, (1905) 1 C. L. J. 104, 2 Cr. L. J. 161; Gill, (1904) 5 P. L. R. 484.

¹⁶ The Public Prosecutor v. Ponnurami Pillai, (1899) 1 Weir 522; Rabi Lochan v. Purna Chandra Dey, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 171, 5 Cr. L. J. 14; Chhakoo Mandal, (1906) 11 C. W. N.

467, 5 Cr. L. J. 268.

¹⁷ Per Broomfield, J., in Lawman Mahadev Banker, (1938) Criminal Reference No. 46 of 1938, decided by Broomfield and Norman, JJ., on July 5, 1938 (Bom. Unrep.).

¹⁸ Adalat, (1945) 24 Pat. 519.

¹⁹ Ram Janam Singh v. Mohan Lal Ahir, (1935) 16 P. L. T. 361, 36 Cr. L. J. 860, [1935] AIR (P) 355.

²⁰ Note N, p. 168.

²¹ Note N, p. 168.

1. 'Entering into'.—The introduction of any part of the trespasser's body is entering sufficient to constitute house-trespass.²² Going on to the roof of a house is not entering into a building.²³ The accused, who held a decree against a judgment-debtor, went with a bailiff to execute a warrant of arrest against the judgment-debtor. Finding the door of the judgment-debtor shut they entered into his compound by passing through the complainant's house without the latter's consent and notwithstanding his protest. It was held that the accused's act amounted to criminal trespass, for when they trespassed on the complainant's house notwithstanding his protest, they must, as reasonable men, have known that they would annoy him.²⁴

2. 'Building'.—What is a 'building' must always be a question of degree, and circumstances: its "ordinary and usual meaning is, a block of brick or stone-work, covered in by a roof."²⁵ The mere surrounding of an open space of ground by a wall or fence of any kind cannot be deemed to convert the open space itself into a building, and trespass thereon does not amount to house-trespass.¹ A courtyard partly surrounded on the front by a mud wall with no roof over it nor any door or gateway is not a building or house within the purview of this section.² The mere rigging up of an awning over a shop does not constitute the shop a 'building'.³ According to the Code any construction that is used as a human dwelling will be included in the term 'building'.

The building should be the property of another person. If an owner in charge of a house professes to be an accomplice and invites another to his house to commit an offence, a conviction for house-trespass is bad in law.⁴

The following are held to be buildings :—An entrance hall surrounded by a wall in which there were two doorways but no doors, and used for the custody of property,⁵ a courtyard, consisting of a walled enclosure with four chambers, opening into it, and an outer door or gate leading into a side street,⁶ a walled enclosure from which other rooms of a house open and having no roof,⁷ a cattle yard originally walled on four sides, but one wall of which having fallen into disrepair, had a gap stopped with a thorn bush,⁸ an outer verandah of a Burmese dwelling-house,⁹ and a thatch-hut built for the purpose of residence.¹⁰

The following are held to be not buildings :—A courtyard of an uninhabited house,¹¹ a walled courtyard which is not provided with a door,¹² a compound,¹³ a cattle-fold or pen with a thorn-hedge round it,¹⁴ and a wehra used for custody or property.¹⁵

3. 'Vessel'.—See s. 48, supra.

CASES.

Lawful entry followed by assault.—The accused entered a house, remained there, and committed an assault. It was held that although the original entry might not have been unlawful, the remaining in the house was unlawful, and that as the ²² Vide Explanation.

²³ Nanhun, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 906, 34 Cr. L. 1181, [1933] AIR (L) 433 (1).

²⁴ Lukshman Raghunath, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 280, 26 Bom. 553; Lakshmi Das, (1919) 4 L. L. J. 582.

²⁵ Per Esher, M. R., in Moir v. Williams, [1892] 1 Q. B. 264, see Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, 2 Edn., Vol. 1, p. 225.

¹ Palani Goundan, (1896) 1 Weir 523.

² Sundar, (1919) 20 P. L. R. 109, 20 Cr. L. J. 240.

³ Sankar Dayal, [1938] O. W. N. 960, 39 Cr. L. J. 987.

⁴ P. Kamaraju, (1888) 1 Weir 534.

⁵ Dad, (1878) P. R. No. 10 of 1879; Niamat, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 753, [1925] AIR (L) 117.

⁶ Shera, (1879) P. R. No. 35 of 1879; Wali Mahomed, (1928) 22 S. L. R. 466, 29 Cr. L. J. 875, [1929] AIR (S) 17; Bhag, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 368.

⁷ Ismail, (1925) 6 Lah. 463.

⁸ Dullea, (1874) 6 N. W. P. 307; Ghulam Jelani, (1889) P. R. No. 16 of 1889.

⁹ Sit Hon, (1916) 8 L. B. R. 463, 18 Cr. L. J. 81, [1917] AIR (LB) 76.

¹⁰ Salig Ram, (1916) 17 Cr. L. J. 536, [1916] AIR (O) 109.

¹¹ Surja, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 224.

¹² Buta, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 457, [1924] AIR (L) 623; Mul Chand, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 383, [1925] AIR (L) 279.

¹³ Rama, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 484; Po Thet, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 24, 6 Cr. L. J. 134.

¹⁴ Sucha Singh, (1887) P. R. No. 57 of 1887; Kohmi, (1914) P. R. No. 24 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 1, [1914] AIR (L) 584; Munshi, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 855, 29 Cr. L. J. 766, [1928] AIR (A) 607.

¹⁵ Niamat, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 753, [1925] AIR (L) 117.

accused unlawfully remained in the house and then committed an offence, he must be held, while unlawfully remaining, to have remained with an intent necessary to constitute the offence.¹⁶

Attempt.—The removal of a trap-door with the intention of committing house-trespass amounts to an attempt to commit house-trespass.¹⁷ Entry on a verandah coupled with an attempt to push open a door amounts to an attempt to commit criminal trespass.¹⁸

Entry not to commit offence not house-trespass.—Where a person entered into a havalat (lock-up) with intent to convey or attempt to convey food to an under-trial prisoner, such act on his part was held not to amount to house-trespass as conveyance of food into a havalat was not an offence punishable under s. 45, Prisons Act, XXVI of 1870.¹⁹ Similarly, an entry into a cattle pen to prosecute an intrigue with an unmarried woman of over sixteen years of age was held to be no offence under s. 448.²⁰ The accused entered into the house of the complainant, in his absence, with intent to have sexual intercourse with his mother, a widow, and was found out by him while remaining in the house. It was held that the accused could not be said to have had the intent to annoy or insult the complainant because an act of which a man was never intended to hear could not be said to be done with intent to insult him.²¹ A house was occupied only by the owner and his concubine, who had an intimacy with the accused. The accused entered the house at her invitation in the absence of the owner and took measures to conceal himself as soon as the owner arrived who, however, arrested him. It was held that the accused was not guilty of house-trespass.²² Where in execution of a decree certain property was attached and taken out of the house in which it was, it was held that the decree-holder was not guilty of house-trespass.²³ Where a person suspected that a trader of whom he was a customer was having false measures, and he entered into his shop to see whether he had correct measures or not, it was held that he was not guilty of criminal trespass.²⁴

Where, during the absence of the complainant, the accused took possession of the house in the complainant's occupation and established there a boy alleged to be the adopted son of the complainant's father, it was held that the accused could not be convicted of this offence.²⁵ A girl disappeared from the house of her parents shortly before she was to be married. It was found after some time that she was living with the complainant, and some of her relations went to the complainant's house in his absence and removed the girl. There was no proof that the girl had been lawfully married to the complainant. It was held that the accused were not guilty of house-trespass as there was no proof of any intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of the house.¹ It is submitted that this decision is of doubtful authority because the forcible removal of a mistress from a person's house must necessarily cause him annoyance.

Bona fide dispute.—The complainant and the accused were neighbours. Their houses were divided by a wall, which the complainant claimed as his own, but which, according to the accused, was a party-wall. The accused gave a notice prohibiting the complainant from raising the height of the wall. The very next day the complainant raised the height. Whilst the complainant was absent the accused went into his house and demolished the new addition to the wall. The accused were thereupon prosecuted for the offence of house-trespass and mischief under ss. 451 and 426. It was held that inasmuch as there was a bona fide claim or right by the accused to the wall in dispute and as the accused had entered the complainant's house and pulled down the addition in his absence, the offences charged were not made out against the accused.²

¹⁶ C. Bashika Chari, (1888) 1 Weir 528.

¹⁷ Narshi, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 188.

¹⁸ Nga Pan Hlaing, (1914) 16 Cr. L. J. 2, [1915] AIR (LB) 102.

¹⁹ Lalat, (1879) 2 All. 801, Spankie, J., contra. See Nawab Ali, (1885) 5 A. W. N. 50.

²⁰ Ramsan, (1905) F. R. No. 28 of 1905, 2 Cr. L. J. 420.

²¹ Pamba Rangadu, (1896) 1 Weir 587; Ambika Charan Sarkar, (1906) 4 C. L. J. 169, 4 Cr. L. J. 144.

²² Rupa, (1919) 22 O. C. 121, 20 Cr. L. J. 610, [1919] AIR (O) 402.

²³ Bhikam Singh, (1917) 15 A. L. J. R. 808, 19 Cr. L. J. 46, [1918] AIR (A) 374; Abdul Sattar v. Sm. Moti Bibi, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 588, 31 Cr. L. J. 1223, [1930] AIR (C) 720.

²⁴ Singara Babu, (1944) 57 L. W. 394, [1944] 2 M. L. J. 455, [1944] M. W. N. 498, 45 Cr. L. J. 805, [1944] AIR (M) 445.

²⁵ Soita Biswal v. Dochhi Stri, (1907) 12 C. W. N. 269, 7 Cr. L. J. 108.

¹ Rehana, (1928) 5 Lah. 20.

² Balkrishna Narhar Velhankar, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 978, 26 Cr. L. J. 254, [1924] AIR (B) 486.

Officer exceeding powers.—A police-officer is not justified by the mere fact that a person is of a suspicious character in entering his house at midnight to see whether he is in the house. Such an act is clearly a house-trespass, as it is calculated to annoy the members of the family of the suspected person and also to insult the latter person.³ To constitute an offence of house-trespass it is not enough that there should be an entry into a house without complying with all the formalities required by law. It further requires an intention either to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession. Therefore, where a Sub-Inspector of Police searched a house for cocaine and omitted to record his reasons as required by s. 53 of the Excise Act for not first obtaining a search-warrant from a Magistrate, it was held that he could not be convicted under s. 448.⁴

443. Whoever commits house-trespass having taken precautions to conceal such house-trespass¹ from some person who has a right to exclude or eject the trespasser from the building, tent or vessel² which is the subject of the trespass, is said to commit "lurking house-trespass".

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code say: "House-trespass, again, may be aggravated by being committed in a surreptitious or in a violent manner. The former aggravated form of house-trespass we designate as lurking house-trespass; the latter we designate as house-breaking. Again, house-trespass, in every form, may be aggravated by the time at which it is committed. Trespass of this sort has, for obvious reasons, always been considered as a more serious offence when committed by night than when committed by day. Thus we have four aggravated forms of that sort of criminal trespass which we designate as house-trespass, lurking house-trespass, house-breaking, lurking house-trespass by night, and house-breaking by night.

"These are aggravations arising from the way in which the criminal trespass is committed. But criminal trespass may also be aggravated by the end for which it is committed. It may be committed for a frolic. It may be committed in order to (commit) a murder. It may also often happen that a criminal trespass which is venial, as respects the mode, may be of the greatest enormity as respects the end; and that a criminal trespass committed in the most reprehensible mode, may be committed for an end of no great atrocity. Thus A may commit house-breaking by night for the purpose of playing some idle trick on the inmates of a dwelling. B may commit simple criminal trespass by merely entering another's field for the purpose of murder or gang-robbery. Here A commits trespass in the worst way. B commits trespass with the worst object. In our provisions, we have endeavoured to combine the aggravating circumstances in such a way that each may have its due effect in settling the punishment."⁵

1. 'Having taken precautions to conceal such house-trespass'.—In order to constitute lurking house-trespass the offender must take some active means to conceal his presence.⁶ The mere fact that a house-trespass is committed by night does not make the offence one of lurking house-trespass. A man entered the courtyard of a building through a gate which had no door attached to it, and he was caught in the courtyard, his intention apparently being to commit theft of cattle. It was held that he was guilty under s. 451 and not s. 457 as he had taken no steps to conceal the fact of his presence.⁷ Entry upon the roof of a building may be criminal trespass. But it cannot sustain a conviction for lurking house-trespass,⁸ or for house-breaking.⁹

2. 'Vessel'.—See s. 48, supra.

³ Dorasami Pillai, (1903) 1 Weir 529.

⁴ Syed Ali Abbas v. Subba Singh, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 468, 26 Cr. L. J. 1205, [1925] AIR (O) 505.

⁵ Note N, p. 168.

⁶ Budha, (1916) P. R. No. 21 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 304, [1916] AIR (L) 425; Chhadami, [1940] All. 175.

⁷ Budha, (1916) P. R. No. 21 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 304, [1916] AIR (L) 425.

⁸ Alla Bakhsh, (1886) P. R. No. 9 of 1887; Mullua, (1900) 20 A. W. N. 151.

⁹ Fazla, (1890) P. R. No. 9 of 1890.

444. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass after sunset and before sunrise, is said to commit "lurking house-trespass by night."

COMMENT.

Under this section the time of the entry aggravates the offence.

445. A person is said to commit "house-breaking" who commits house-trespass if he effects his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the six ways hereinafter described; or if, being in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence,¹ or, having committed an offence therein, he quits the house or any part of it in any of such six ways, that is to say:—

First.—If he enters or quits through a passage made by himself or by any abettor of the house-trespass, in order to the committing of the house-trespass.

*Secondly.*²—If he enters or quits through any passage not intended by any person, other than himself or an abettor of the offence, for human entrance; or through any passage to which he has obtained access by scaling or climbing over any wall or building.

Thirdly.—If he enters or quits through any passage which he or any abettor of the house-trespass has opened,³ in order to the committing of the house-trespass by any means by which that passage was not intended by the occupier of the house to be opened.

Fourthly.—If he enters or quits by opening any lock in order to the committing of the house-trespass, or in order to the quitting of the house after a house-trespass.

Fifthly.—If he effects his entrance or departure by using criminal force or committing an assault, or by threatening any person with assault.

*Sixthly.*⁴—If he enters or quits by any passage which he knows to have been fastened against such entrance or departure, and to have been unfastened by himself or by an abettor of the house-trespass.

Explanation.—Any out-house or building occupied with a house, and between which and such house there is an immediate internal communication, is part of the house within the meaning of this section;

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A commits house-trespass by making a hole through the wall of Z's house, and putting his hand through the aperture. This is house-breaking.

(b) A commits house-trespass by creeping into a ship at a port-hole between decks. This is house-breaking.

(c) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through a window. This is house-breaking.

(d) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through the door, having opened a door which was fastened. This is house-breaking.

(e) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through the door, having lifted a latch by putting a wire through a hole in the door. This is house-breaking.

(f) A finds the key of Z's house door, which Z had lost, and commits house-trespass by entering Z's house, having opened the door with that key. This is house-breaking.

(g) Z is standing in his doorway. A forces a passage by knocking Z down, and commits house-trespass by entering the house. This is house-breaking.

(h) Z, the door-keeper of Y, is standing in Y's doorway. A commits house-trespass by entering the house, having deterred Z from opposing him by threatening to beat him. This is house-breaking.

COMMENT.

House-breaking as defined in this section is an aggravated form of criminal trespass. One form of criminal trespass is the act of entering upon property, in the possession of another, with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property. If the property is used as a human dwelling, the offence of criminal trespass becomes the offence of house-trespass. If this offence of house-trespass is further aggravated by an entry or departure of a forcible nature, then the entry passes from an offence merely of criminal trespass to the more serious offence of house-breaking as defined in this section. The offence of house-breaking may be further aggravated by causing grievous hurt to any person whilst committing the house-breaking (vide s. 459.)

The section prescribes six ways in which the offence of house-breaking may be committed. Clauses 1 to 3 deal with entry which is effected by means of a passage which is not ordinary. Clauses 3 to 6 deal with entry which is effected by force.

English law.—According to English law to constitute house-breaking there must be always an actual breaking of some part of the house, in effecting which more or less of actual force is employed, or a breaking by construction of law, where an entrance is obtained by threats, fraud, or conspiracy. Under the Code the mere entry through a window not intended for human entrance will amount to house-breaking (vide ill. (c)). According to English law, if a thief enters through an aperture in a cellar window to admit light, it is not house-breaking.¹⁰

1. 'For the purpose of committing an offence'.—It is not necessary to specify any particular offence.¹¹ Intention of committing any offence is sufficient.

2. Clause 2.—This clause deals with those cases where a new passage has been created by a thief. When a hole is made by burglars in the wall of a house but their way is blocked by the presence of beams on the other side of the wall the offence committed is one of attempt to commit house-breaking and not actual house-breaking and illustration (a) to this section does not apply.¹²

3. Clause 3.—'Has opened'.—A door or window is not open if it is shut, though unfastened. Pulling down the sash of a window is a breaking.¹³ Raising a window which is shut down close, but not fastened, though it has a hasp which might have been fastened, is a breaking.¹⁴ Where a window opens upon hinges, and is fastened by a wedge, so that pushing against it will open it; forcing it open by pushing against it is sufficient to constitute a breaking.¹⁵ The breaking open of a cattle shed in which agricultural implements are kept amounts to house-breaking.¹⁶

The following acts are held to be breaking under the English law and will amount to house-breaking under the Code:—Entry effected by taking out a glass from a door;¹⁷ or breaking a pane of glass;¹⁸ lifting up a heavy flap of a cellar to come out;¹⁹ obtaining admission by getting down a chimney;²⁰ removing the fastening of a window by the hand introduced through a broken pane of the window, and thereby opening the window and entering.²¹

¹⁰ Lewis, (1827) 2 C. & P. 628.

¹¹ See Jharu Sheikh, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 696, 13 Cr. L. J. 224.

¹² Ghulam, (1923) 4 Lah. 899.

¹³ Haine's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 451.

¹⁴ Hyams, (1836) 7 C. & P. 441.

¹⁵ Hall's Case, (1818) Russ. & Ry. 355.

¹⁶ Pullabhotla Chinniah, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J.

469, [1918] AIR (M) 709.

¹⁷ Smith's Case, (1820) Russ. & Ry. 417.

¹⁸ Joseph Perkes, (1824) 1 C. & P. 300; Tucker, (1844) 1 Cox 73.

¹⁹ Russell's Case, (1838) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 377.

²⁰ Brice's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 450.

²¹ Robinson's Case, (1831) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 327.

The accused suggested to a servant of the prosecutrix a plan for the commission of a robbery by the accused at the shop of the prosecutrix. The servant, pretending to agree to the accused's suggestion, lent the keys of the shop to the accused, who made duplicate keys, with one of which, on a day arranged with the servant, the accused unlocked a padlock attached to the outer door and entered the shop, where he was arrested. The prosecutrix had been informed by the servant of the accused's plan and knew that he intended to enter the shop on the day in question. The accused was convicted on an indictment which charged him with having broken and entered the shop with intent to steal therein. It was held that the conviction was right, notwithstanding that the prosecutrix knew that the accused had been supplied with the means of breaking and entering by her servant.²²

4. Clause 6.—The word 'fastened' implies something more than being closed such as chaining the shutters or tying them with a rope or bolting them or locking the door. An entry of an accused into a house by merely pushing in shutters of the door does not constitute the offence of house-breaking, as it does not come under any of the six clauses, but constitutes an offence of house-trespass under s. 457 with intent to commit an offence.²³

446. Whoever commits house-breaking after sunset and before sunrise, is said to commit "house-breaking by night."
House-breaking by night.

COMMENT.

Section 445 contains an elaborate definition of house-breaking. The addition in this section of the element of time turns the offence into 'house-breaking by night', the equivalent of the crime of 'burglary' in English law. The analysis of this offence naturally suggests a division of its ingredients into—(1) the breaking; (2) the entry; (3) the place; (4) the time; and (5) the intent.

English law.—Whosoever shall enter the dwelling house of another with intent to commit any felony therein, or being in such dwelling house shall commit any felony therein, and shall in either case break out of the said dwelling house in the night, shall be deemed guilty of burglary.²⁴

447. Whoever commits criminal trespass shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.
Punishment for criminal trespass.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the complainant has possession of the property in question.²⁵ In a prosecution for criminal trespass it is necessary to determine in whose possession the property was at the date of the alleged trespass.¹ Whether a party is in possession of immovable property or not is a question of fact to be ascertained by taking evidence in the usual way. The mere fact that a decree has been given against one party by a civil Court does not determine the question of possession, as that party may still be in possession of the property in dispute until effect is given to the decree in due course of law.² But a criminal is not entitled to disregard the decree of a civil Court declaring rights to the identical property in dispute in the criminal case.³

(2) That the accused entered into or upon the property; or after having lawfully entered unlawfully remained there.

(3) That he so entered or remained there with the intention (a) to commit ²² Chandler, [1913] 1 K. B. 125.

²³ Ledga, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 278, [1922] AIR (N) 26.

²⁴ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 96, s. 51.

²⁵ Kalinath Nag Chowdhry, (1887) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 1; Parmeshwar Lall Mitter, (1921) 3 P. L. T. 347, 23 Cr. L. J. 440, [1922] AIR (P) 296.

¹ Mantripragada Venkatarama Rao, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 761, [1918] AIR (M) 574 (1).

² Mi Tok v. Mi Shan Ma, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 262.

³ Varadaraja Chettiar v. Swami Maistry, [1948] M. W. N. 62.

an offence; or (b) to intimidate, insult, or annoy the person in possession.⁴

The Magistrate must find what the intent with which the accused committed the trespass was. He is not to leave it to inference what the intent with which he committed the trespass was.⁵

"Though the prosecution must prove the existence of some one or more of the intentions mentioned in section 441 . . . , the proof need not be direct, that is, by the confession of the accused, showing that his intention was one of those mentioned in that section, or by the evidence of witnesses proving that he admitted to them that such was his intention. It will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and of surrounding circumstances."⁶

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

A Magistrate ought not to decline to go into a case of criminal trespass because the complainant does not make out his title to the land.⁷ A person who enters upon property in the possession of another may be guilty of criminal trespass, without reference to the question in whom the title to the land may ultimately be found.⁸ The accused, after having been convicted of criminal trespass committed by entering on certain land, were again prosecuted for a further trespass by remaining on the land in spite of the previous conviction. It was held that the accused were not liable to be again convicted.⁹

Where a person commits criminal trespass in respect of property in the possession of a tenant, his landlord can file a complaint.¹⁰

Burma Circular.—The time and labour devoted by Magistrates to cases under section 447 of the Indian Penal Code is frequently out of proportion to their importance. In the majority of cases brought under this section the object of the complainant is to obtain in a cheap and speedy manner a remedy which ought to be sought by means of a civil suit. Magistrates are not authorised to dismiss complaints, or to discharge or acquit the accused, merely on this ground, because the facts which entitle a person to bring a civil suit may also constitute the offence of criminal trespass, but they should not allow prosecutions where the wrong is purely of a civil nature. In many cases where servants acting under their employer's orders enter upon land in the possession of another the ruling in *Shwe Kun v. King-Emperor*¹¹ is applicable. Such servants are not guilty of criminal trespass if they enter on the land in good faith in obedience to their employer's orders and without any intention of annoying the person in possession. A full and complete examination of the complainant and a careful consideration of the above and similar matters will enable Magistrates to dismiss summarily many more complaints of criminal trespass than they do, or in any event will enable them to discharge the accused after a brief hearing. Compensation under section 545, Criminal Procedure Code, should never be granted to a complainant when it appears that his object in instituting the prosecution was merely to assert a title to the land.¹²

448. Whoever commits house-trespass shall be punished with imprisonment for house-trespass. may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 442 defines the offence of 'house-trespass'; this section provides punishment for it.

⁴ Vujeer, (1868) Unrep. Cr. C. 10; Sristeedhur Parooe v. Indrobhoosun Chuckerbutty, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 25, 9 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 19; Shib Nath Banerjee, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 58; Punjab Singh, (1881) 6 Cal. 579.

⁵ Durgaiya, (1882) 1 Weir 524. See Devarasetti Gangaiya, (1884) 1 Weir 516; Wariama, (1885) P. R. No. 11 of 1885. See Meajan v. Sharafatullah Khan, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1007, 18 Cr. L. J. 783; Chinna Krishna Reddi v. Marri Poliah, [1912] M. W. N. 395, 13 Cr. L. J. 477.

⁶ Per Banerjee and Sale, JJ., in Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391, 406.

⁷ Surwan Singh, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 11.

⁸ Ram Dyal Mundle, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 28.

⁹ Ma Hla Ya, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 276, 8 Cr. L. J. 474.

¹⁰ Fakir Chand v. Fakir, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 699.

¹¹ (1906) 3 L. B. R. 278, 5 Cr. L. J. 415. Explained in Maung Nwe v. Maung Po Hla, [1937] Ran. 246.

¹² B. C. M., c. 455, p. 198.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed criminal trespass.¹³

(2) That such criminal trespass was committed by entering into, or remaining in, a building, tent, or vessel.

(3) That such building, tent, or vessel, was used as a human dwelling or as a place for worship, or as a place for the custody of property.

To support a conviction under this section, some one or other of the intents mentioned in s. 441 must be expressly found and must not be left to inference.¹⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

In proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate must confirm the party who is in actual possession and he is not competent to dispossess such a party by appointing a receiver. Persons who continue to remain on the property after the appointment of a receiver appointed in such circumstances cannot legally be convicted under this section.¹⁵

Restoration of possession.—Where possession of a house is taken by means of criminal trespass with a show of force, the Court can direct the restoration of the house to the complainant under s. 522, Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁶

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed house-trespass by entering into [or remaining in] the building [or tent, or vessel] of AB used as a human dwelling [or as a place of worship, or for the custody of property] with intent (specify the motive for entering into or remaining in), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 448 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

449. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence punishable with death, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with death.

COMMENT.

This section provides punishment for house-trespass committed with intent to commit an offence punishable with death.

It is not made necessary under this section that the offender should do any further act than house-trespass towards the commission of the 'offence punishable with death'. But to justify a conviction there should be a clear proof of the design to commit a murder or other like offence. In the absence of proof of some further act done, in addition to the criminal trespass, in the prosecution of the murderous intention, it can rarely happen that the evidence will suffice for a conviction under this section.¹⁷

See page 86, where a list of offences punishable with death is given.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.¹⁸

(2) That the same was committed in order to commit an offence punishable with death.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follow —

¹³ Vide s. 441, sup.

¹⁴ Durgaiya, (1882) 1 Weir 524.

¹⁵ Mewa Lal, (1927) 8 P. L. J. 147.

¹⁶ Rameshwar Singh, (1925) 4 Pat. 438.

¹⁷ M. & M. 404.

¹⁸ Vide, s. 442, sup.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed house-trespass by entering into [or remaining in] the building of AB, used as a human dwelling in order to the commission of an offence punishable with death, to wit—, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 449 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

450. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence punishable with transportation for life, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with transportation for life.

COMMENT.

This section is similar to the last section. It deals with house-trespass committed with intent to commit an offence punishable with transportation for life.

As to offences punishable with transportation for life, see page 86.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.¹⁹

(2) That the same was committed in order to commit an offence punishable with transportation for life.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—See s. 449, supra.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

451. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence¹ punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to seven years.

House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.

COMMENT.

This section is similar to ss. 449 and 450. It provides punishment for house-trespass committed with intent to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment. In order to constitute an offence under this section the prosecution must first establish that an offence of simple house-trespass has been committed and then satisfy the Court, in the particular case before it, that the house-trespass was committed with the object of committing a further offence punishable with imprisonment.²⁰

It is not necessary that the Court should be in a position to say which specific offence the accused intended to commit. It is sufficient if the evidence leaves no room for reasonable doubt that the accused intended to commit an offence.²¹

1. 'Offence'.—For the purposes of this section, an offence punishable under the Code is an 'offence' even though it is not punishable with imprisonment for more than six months. It is only an offence which is punishable under a special or a local law that must be punishable with imprisonment of six months or more before it can be considered to be an offence within the meaning of this section.²²

CASES.

Where the accused was convicted of house-breaking, his object being to have ¹⁹ Vide, s. 442, supra.

²⁰ Mansur Hussain, (1919) 41 All. 587, 589.

²¹ Samban, (1881) 1 Weir 583.

²² Harkishan Lal, (1981) 82 Cr. L. J. 732.

sexual intercourse with the complainant's wife, it was held that the conviction was valid.²³ Similarly, where the accused was caught at night in the courtyard of the complainant's premises under circumstances which showed that he had come there to commit theft of cattle, it was held that he was guilty under this section.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.²⁵

(2) That the same was committed in order to commit theft, or an offence punishable with imprisonment.

When the prospective offence is that of adultery, it is necessary to show that there has been no consent or connivance on the part of the husband of the woman, the intent to commit adultery with whom is charged against the accused.¹ Where it has been shown that the husband was absent in the legitimate pursuit of his occupation, it may safely be presumed that such husband neither consented to nor connived at any adultery or immorality on the part of his wife. It seems obvious that he would be wholly ignorant of what was going on in his house and that, therefore, he could neither consent to nor connive at the same.²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class, if theft was committed. If any other offence punishable with imprisonment was committed, then cognizable, warrant, bailable, compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending, and triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

House trespass for adultery.—A Magistrate is right in refusing to convict when the husband declines to complain.³ But the omission of the husband to prosecute for adultery does not absolve the accused from criminal liability under s. 457.⁴

Charge.—The charge must charge the accused with committing house-trespass with intent to commit some specific offence punishable with imprisonment.⁵ It should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed house-trespass by entering into (or remaining in) the building of AB, used as a human dwelling (or for the custody of property), in order to commit the offence of—(or theft), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 451 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra. Under this section it is not necessary to impose a sentence of fine along with a sentence of imprisonment.⁶

452. Whoever commits house-trespass, having made preparation

House-trespass after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint.

for causing hurt¹ to any person or for assaulting² any person, or for wrongfully restraining³ any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt, or of assault, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

²³ (1875) 8 M. H. C. (Appx.) 6, 1 Weir 532; Khanon Ram, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 266, [1920] AIR (L) 62; Anant Ram, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 118, [1920] AIR (L) 464.

²⁴ Budha, (1916) P. R. No 21 of 1916, 17 Cr. L. J. 304, [1916] AIR (L) 425.

²⁵ Vide s. 442, supra.

¹ Brij Basi, (1896) 16 All. 74.

² Khanon Ram, supra; Kala Ram, (1924)

26 Cr. L. J. 1343.

³ (1869) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 5, 1 Weir 532.

⁴ Bandhu, (1894) Cr. R. No. 11 of 1894, Unrep. Cr. C. 689.

⁵ Mehar Dowalia, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 53 [63].

⁶ Cr. Ref. No. 73 of 1929, decided by Patkar and Wild, JJ., on September 12, 1929 (Unrep. Bom.).

COMMENT.

Section 451 prescribes penalty for house-trespass committed with intent to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment. In this way it envelops the provisions of this section. But the object of the Legislature in enacting this section is to provide severer punishment where house-trespass is committed in order to cause hurt to, or to assault, or to wrongfully restrain, any person.

1. 'Hurt'.—See s. 319, supra. Where the accused entered the complainant's house for the purpose of beating his (accused's) wife, who had taken refuge in it, it was held that the beating not being justifiable, that is, lawful, the entry amounted to criminal trespass, and a conviction under this section was good.⁷

2. 'Assault'.—See s. 351, supra.

3. 'Wrongful restraint'.—See s. 339, supra. Where a man went with a forged warrant of arrest into a house, and took away one of the inmates against his will under the authority of such warrant, he was held guilty of house-trespass, by putting such person in fear of wrongful restraint under this section.⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.⁹

(2) That the same was committed after making preparation for causing hurt to, or for assaulting, or for wrongfully restraining, some person; or for putting some person in fear of hurt, assault, or wrongful restraint.

The fact that the accused trespassed into the shop for the purpose of assaulting the complainant, is not sufficient to support a conviction under this section, though it is for a conviction under s. 448.¹⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed house-trespass by entering into [or remaining in] the building of AB, used as a human dwelling, having made preparation for causing hurt, etc., to AB; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 452 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

453. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.

COMMENT.

This section provides penalty for the offences defined in ss. 443 and 444.

In all "house-breaking" there must be "house-trespass" and in all "house-trespass" there must be "criminal trespass". Unless, therefore, the intent necessary to prove the offence of criminal trespass is present, the offence of house-breaking or house-trespass cannot be committed.

'Offence', in this section, means a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

English law.—According to English law to constitute house-breaking there must be an actual or constructive breaking of some part of the house.

⁷ Katakam Narasingadu, (1882) Weir (3rd. Edn.) 329.

⁸ Nund Mohun Sirkar, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 33.

⁹ Vide s. 442, sup.

¹⁰ Fakir Chandra De, (1921) 38 C. L. J. 161, 25 Cr. L. J. 168, [1921] AIR (C) 556.

“The word ‘break’ means

(a) the breaking of any part, internal or external, of the building itself, or the opening by any means whatever (including lifting, in the case of things kept in their places by their own weight) of any door, window, shutter, cellar flap, or other thing intended to cover openings to the house, or to give passage from one part of it to another, and getting down the chimney ;

(b) obtaining an entrance into the house by any threat or artifice used for that purpose, or by collusion with any person in the house.

The word ‘enter’ means the entrance into the house of any part of the offender’s body, or of any instrument held in his hand for the purpose of intimidating any person in the house or of removing any goods, but does not include the entrance of part of an instrument used to break the house open”.¹¹

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—For lurking house-trespass prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.¹²

(2) That the accused took precaution to conceal the same.

That such concealment was from some person who had a right to exclude or eject the accused from the building, tent, or vessel which was the subject of the trespass.

For house-breaking, prove (1) that the accused committed house-trespass.¹³

(2) That he effected his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the six ways mentioned in s. 445 ; or if he was in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence, he quitted it in any of those six ways.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.¹⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the —day of—, at—, committed lurking house-trespass [or house-breaking] by entering into a building belonging to AB and used as a human dwelling, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 453 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

454. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and, if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to ten years.

Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.

C O M M E N T .

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section : the aggravation being the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment.

Intention is the sine qua non and the gist of the offence under this section. Where intention is not proved, no conviction under this section can take place.¹⁵

The latter portion of this section is framed to include the cases of house-trespassers, and house-breakers, who have not only intended to commit, but have actually committed, theft.¹⁶

The accused was seen leaving the house of one S and was seized on an outcry made by a female inmate of the house. He had on him jewels belonging to the female, ¹¹ Stephen’s Dig. of Cr. L., Art. 34].

¹² Id. s. 448, sup.

¹³ Ibid.

¹⁴ Act 1 of 1908.

¹⁵ Brij Mohan Lal, [1947] All. 152; Gaya Bhar, (1916) 38 All. 517.

¹⁶ Zor Singh, (1887) 10 All. 146.

which were ordinarily kept in an earthen receptacle in the house. The time was after-noon, before sunset. Upon these facts the District Magistrate convicted the accused of "lurking house-trespass by day for the purpose of committing theft" under this section. It was held that there was no evidence against the accused of house-breaking, nor of the essential element of lurking house-trespass, that the offence committed by the accused was theft in a dwelling-house, and that the conviction must be under s. 380.¹⁷ The accused was found inside the house of the complainant at about midnight. There was nothing to show that he had gone there to commit theft. It was likely that he had gone to the house to meet a female servant. It was held under the circumstances that the case did not come within the mischief of this section.¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.¹⁹

(2) That he did so in order to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.²⁰

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed lurking house-trespass, by entering into [or remaining in] a building belonging to AB, and used as a human dwelling, in order to the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment, to wit—, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 454 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra. As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, 1898, s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II.

455. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass, or house-breaking, having made preparation for causing hurt to any person, Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint.

or for assaulting any person, or for wrongfully restraining any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt or of assault or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The relationship between this section and s. 453 is the same as that between ss. 452 and 450.

This section is similar to s. 458. The only difference is that this section deals with trespass committed by day : whereas s. 458 deals with trespass committed during night.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.²¹

(2) That he did so after making preparation for causing hurt, or assaulting or wrongfully restraining some person, or for putting some person in fear of hurt, assault, or wrongful restraint.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable y Court of Session, or Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

¹⁷ Khuda Bakhsh, (1886) P. R. No. 10 of 886.

¹⁸ Brij Mohan Lal, [1947] All. 152.

¹⁹ Vide ss. 443, 445, 453, supra.

²⁰ Act I of 1903.

²¹ Vide, ss. 443, 445, 453, supra.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed lurking house-trespass (or house-breaking) by entering into (or unlawfully remaining in) the building in the possession of AB and used as a human dwelling (or for the custody of property) having made preparation for causing hurt to the said AB (or for assaulting any person or for wrongfully restraining any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt or assault or wrongful restraint), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 455 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

456. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for lurking house-trespass or housebreaking by night.

COMMENT.

Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking is punishable under s. 453 ; but when it is committed at night this section is applicable. Unless the intent necessary to prove the offence of criminal trespass is present, the offence under this section cannot be committed. Where the accused persons, execution creditors, broke open the complainant's door before sunrise with intent to distrain his property, for which they were convicted on a charge of lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, it was held that as they were guilty of the offence of criminal trespass, they could not be convicted under this section.²²

CASES.

Scaling a wall.—Effecting an entrance into a house at night by scaling a wall amounts to house-breaking by night.²³

Departure through doorway.—The accused entered into a house at night and effected his departure with a vessel under his arm from the house after knocking down a person who stood in the doorway. It was held that the conviction for house-breaking by night was good.²⁴

Entry for adultery.—Where a stranger, uninvited and without any right to be there, effected an entry in the middle of the night into the sleeping apartment of a woman, a member of a respectable household, and, when an attempt was made to capture him, used great violence in his efforts to make good his escape, it was held that the Court should presume that the entry had been made with such an intent as was provided for by this section.²⁵ The accused unchained the outer door of the courtyard of M's house at night and was passing through it in order to reach the adjoining house occupied by a married woman, with whom he had intimacy, with the object of committing adultery with her when he was seen by M's wife who raised an alarm and he was arrested while in M's courtyard. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section as he had committed criminal trespass within the meaning of the first part of s. 441 as he entered into or upon property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence.¹

Where the accused was found at night inside the complainant's house where he had gone for the purpose of visiting the latter's widowed daughter-in-law, a woman of loose character, with whose knowledge and consent he had in all probability entered the room, it was held that the accused could not be convicted under this section as he had none of the intentions necessary to constitute the offence described in s. 451 and ²² Jotharam Daway, (1878) 2 Mad. 30.

²³ Emdad Ally, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 65.

²⁴ Solai alias Kattayan, (1892) 1 Weir 530.

²⁵ Koiltash Chandra Chakrabarty, (1889) 16 Cal. 657; Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391; Premamundo Shaha v.

Brindabun Chung, (1895) 22 Cal. 994; Karali Prasad Guru, (1916) 44 Cal. 358; Ram Rang, (1904) P. R. No. 18 of 1905, 2 Cr. L. J. 279; Mohammad Nasiruddin, (1925) 4 Pat. 459.

¹ Mohammad Yar, (1938) 19 Lab. 462, F.B.

could hardly have had the intention of committing the offence described in s. 509.² If a man enters the house of another person with the intention of committing clandestine adultery with a widow by invitation and actually commits adultery and the woman is in joint possession of the house not only does he not intend to insult or annoy any other person in the house, but he desires above all things that his presence should not be known to the other occupants and in such a case he cannot be held to be guilty under this section.³

Entry for theft.—The accused was found inside the house of the complainant at midnight, and his presence was discovered by the wife of the complainant crying out that a thief was taking away her hansli (neck ornament). The evidence of the complainant clearly showed that the accused was not there with the consent or at the invitation or for the pleasure of the complainant. It was held that the accused was properly convicted under this section, it being for him to show that his intention was under the circumstances innocent.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—For lurking house-trespass by night prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass.⁵

(2) That the same was committed after sunset and before sunrise.

For house-breaking at night prove (1) that the accused committed house-breaking.⁶

(3) That the same was committed after sunset and before sunrise.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

The splitting up of one aggravated offence into separate minor offences is prohibited, e.g. a conviction for lurking house-trespass and theft under this section and s. 380, instead of for lurking house-trespass in order to commit theft under s. 457.⁷

A conviction under this section may be made even though the accused is charged with the commission of an offence under s. 457.⁸

Charge.—A conviction under this section is not bad for want of the specification of the intention in the charge, but one under s. 457 cannot be sustained without such specification. In a charge under the former section, though a guilty intention must be proved, it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s. 441, though it may not be certain which it was.⁹ But if the accused pleads that his intention was an innocent one, it is for him to say what it was, as the burden of proving it is on him, the knowledge of that intent being specially within his knowledge.¹⁰ Where, however, it appears that the accused has been prejudiced by the omission to frame a charge and to specify the intent, the conviction must be set aside and re-trial ordered.¹¹

The charge should run as follows:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed lurking house-trespass by night [or house-breaking by night] by entering into the building belonging to AB, and used as a human dwelling, after the hour of sunset and before

² Lajje Kum, (1898) P. R. No. 12 of 1898; Milkh Ram, (1919) 20 P. L. R. 97.

³ Takbirullah Wahidullah, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 96, [1941] AIR (P) 79.

⁴ Ishri, (1906) 29 All. 46; Mulla, (1915) 37 All. 395; J.P. Henzie, (1909) 3 S. L. R. 86, 10 Cr. L. J. 410. It is not necessary in such cases that the husband should bring a specific charge of adultery: Mulla Teli, (1904) 16 C. P. L. R. 182. See (1869) 5 M. H. C. Appx. 5, 1 Weir 532, which conflicts with (1868) 1 Weir 531, which lays down that entry into a house with the object of committing adultery will constitute this offence though the husband alone can prosecute. See Bandhu, (1894) Unrep. Cr. C.

689, Cr. R. No. 11 of 1894, which also lays down that the omission of the husband to prosecute for adultery does not absolve the accused from criminal liability.

⁵ Vide s. 443, sup.

⁶ Vide s. 445, sup.

⁷ Ramcharan Katri, (1866) Beng. L. R. Sup. Vol. 488, 6 W. R. (Cr.) 39, F.B.

⁸ Karali Prasad Guru, (1916) 20 C. W. N. 1075, 17 Cr. L. J. 424.

⁹ Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391.

¹⁰ Ishri, (1906) 29 All. 46.

¹¹ Jadav Mahton, (1920) 2 P. L. T. 140.

the hour of sunrise, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 456 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court, (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

457. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to fourteen years.

Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section.

"In order to support a conviction under s. 457... it is necessary to prove that the lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night was committed 'in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment': but the criminal intention which is thus made the essential element of the offence can, generally speaking, only be inferred from the circumstances of the case, and it is from those circumstances that the Court trying an offender must find whether the intention to commit some such offence as is contemplated by the section is made out, or not".¹²

The latter portion of this section is framed to include the cases of house trespassers, and house-breakers, by night, who have not only intended to commit, but have actually committed, theft.¹³

CASES.

Where the door of a shop was found broken open, it was held that the conviction should have been for house-breaking by night, and not simply lurking house-trespass by night.¹⁴ A, with a view to support a fraudulent claim of title to a house, broke into it at night during the temporary absence of the owner, assaulted the owner's servant who was in charge of the house, and took forcible possession of it. It was held that A was guilty under this section as he intended to use criminal force to the servant in possession, and, therefore, intended to commit an offence.¹⁵ The accused, a previous convict, made his way into an open thorned enclosure in which goats and sheep were kept. He was disturbed and therefore ran away. It was held that on these facts the accused could not be convicted of lurking house-trespass under this section, but only of attempted theft under ss. 379 and 511.¹⁶ Where a temple was broken into and the idols were removed for celebrating a festival and the taking was not dishonest, a conviction under this section and s. 380 was held to be not sustainable.¹⁷

Where the accused entered during night the complainant's house in order to have sexual intercourse with a woman whom he knew was the wife of the complainant, it was held that he was guilty under this section and that it was not necessary that the complainant should bring a specific charge of adultery.¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass by night,¹⁹ or house-breaking by night.²⁰

¹² Per Rattigan, J., in Sher Singh, (1888) P. R. No. 14 of 1883, at p. 23; Gaya Bhar, (1916) 38 All. 517.

¹³ Zor Singh, (1887) 10 All. 146.

¹⁴ Kenaram Bousee, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 19.

¹⁵ Sellamuthu Servaigaran v. Pallamuthu Karuppan, (1911) 35 Mad. 186.

¹⁶ Ghasita, (1918) P. R. No. 13 of 1919, 20 Cr. L. J. 492.

¹⁷ Perumal Konan, [1940] M. W. N. 873, [1940] 52 L. W. 347, 42 Cr. L. J. 263, [1941] AIR (M) 71 (2).

¹⁸ Kangla, (1900) 23 All. 82. See Chatter Singh Damai, (1919) 8 U. B. R. 194, 21 Cr. L. J. 435, [1920] AIR (UB) 50.

¹⁹ Vide ss. 444, 456, sup; Chhadami, [1940] A. L. J. R. 77.

²⁰ Vide ss. 446, 456, sup.

(2) That the same was committed to commit theft, or an offence punishable with imprisonment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compounadable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

An attempt to commit an offence under this section is punishable under s. 511 and not under Chapter XII or XVII of the Code.²¹

A charge of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery can be entertained without a complaint by the husband or person having care of the woman.²² The Court has got to be satisfied that there was no consent or connivance by the husband.²³

Separate convictions for separate offences.—An accused person was convicted of house breaking by night in order to commit an offence (mischief and assault) and also under ss. 426 and 352 for the offences of mischief and assault and punished separately for each offence. It was held that the sentences were legal.²⁴ The Bombay High Court has held that where a person is accused of committing house breaking and theft he should be charged under this section alone as only one offence is committed.²⁵ The Patna High Court has held that an accused person convicted of house-breaking followed immediately by theft is liable to punishment under this section only.¹ But this view is not followed by the Chief Court of Oudh which has held that where a person commits house-breaking or lurking house-trespass by night and thereafter commits theft, he may be charged with and tried, at the same trial, for both the offences of lurking house-trespass and theft under this section and s. 380 and convicted under both the sections.² The Madras High Court has also held that under such circumstances separate sentences could be awarded.³ For further cases, see Comment on s. 71.

Where offences under this section and s. 380 are committed in one transaction, it is very desirable that formal convictions under both sections be recorded, in order that, if the accused subsequently commits another theft, technical difficulties may not arise.⁴ A person accused of an offence under this section can by virtue of s. 329 (e), Criminal Procedure Code, be legally charged and tried with persons accused of receiving or retaining the stolen property.⁵

Charge.—In drawing up a charge the offence intended with a view to which trespass was committed should be entered in the charge.

Where the accused was convicted of house-breaking by night and of house-trespass in respect of the same acts, it was held that the second head of the charge was superfluous, inasmuch as it involved the same intention substantially as the first, which intention ought not be applied to support two different charges.⁶

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed lurking house-trespass by night [or house-breaking by night] by entering into the building belonging to AB, and used as a human dwelling, after the hour of sunset and before the hour of sunrise, in order to the commission of a certain offence punishable with imprisonment, to wit, the offence of—; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 457 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

Burglary is a serious crime and whenever it is detected the person concerned must be given a deterrent punishment. It is not proper to release the burglars on

²¹ Harnam, (1907) P. R. No. 17 of 1907, 6 Cr. L. J. 378.

²² Subz Ali, (1876) P. R. No. 2 of 1877; Bandhu, (1894) Cr. R. No. 11 of 1894, Unrep. Cr. C. 689.

²³ Balaram Kundu, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1186, [1925] AIR (C) 160.

²⁴ Nirichan, (1888) 12 Mad. 36.

²⁵ Mahavir Ajodhya, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 69.

¹ Makhru Dusadh, (1926) 5 Pat. 464.

² Sital, (1941) 17 Luck. 513.

³ Natesa Mudaliar, [1945] Mad. 896.

⁴ Nga Pan Bee, (1908) 2 B. L. T. 19; see also Sheobhajan Ahir, (1920) 2 P. L. T. 125.

⁵ Nawab, (1936) 18 Lah. 62.

⁶ Khandu, (1886) Cr. R. No. 50 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 302.

probation of good conduct. Such sentence means no punishment and emboldens persons to commit the crime because they rightly think that they can easily escape.⁷ Where a policeman committed burglary and was sentenced to five months' rigorous imprisonment, it was held that the sentence was not by any means excessive.⁸

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

Whipping.—In the case of a conviction of attempting to commit house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, a sentence of whipping was annulled as being illegal.⁹

458. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, having made preparation for causing hurt¹ to any person, or for assaulting² any person, or for wrongfully restraining³ any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt, or of assault, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint.

COMMENT.

This section is analogous to ss. 452 and 455. It only applies to the house-breaker who actually has himself made preparation for causing hurt to any person, etc., and not to his companions as well who themselves have not made such preparation.¹⁰

1. 'Having made preparation for causing hurt'.—See s. 319, supra, as to the definition of 'hurt'.

2. 'Assault'.—See s. 351, supra.

3. 'Wrongfully restraining'.—See s. 339, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass by night,¹¹ or house-breaking by night.¹²

(2) That he did as above after having made preparation for causing hurt, or for assaulting, or for wrongfully restraining some person, or for putting some one in fear of hurt, assault or wrongful restraint.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—See s. 457, supra.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

459. Whoever, whilst committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, causes grievous hurt¹ to any person or attempts² to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, shall be punished with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Grievous hurt caused whilst committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section.

⁷ Sardara, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 215, 33 Cr. L. J. 500, [1932] AIR (L) 258.

⁸ Sardara, (1930) 31 Cr. L. J. 877, [1930] AIR (L) 667.

⁹ Yella valad Parshia, (1866) 3 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 37.

¹⁰ Ghulam, (1923) 4 Lah. 399.

¹¹ Vide s. 444, sup.

¹² Vide s. 446, sup.

Scope.—This and the section following provide for a compound offence, the governing incident of which is that either a 'lurking house-trespass' or 'house-breaking' must have been completed in order to make a person who accompanies that offence either by causing grievous hurt or attempt to cause death or grievous hurt responsible under those sections. This section and s. 460 are not applicable where the principal act done by the accused person amounts to no more than a mere attempt to commit lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.¹³ The accused one early morning were disturbed by a watchman while engaged in making a hole in the wall of the house of the complainant. Immediately upon being so disturbed they attempted to make good their escape, one of the accused firing off a pistol and the other two attempting to prevent their apprehension by using their sticks. The first accused was convicted under this section and the two others under s. 460. The former Chief Court of the Punjab quashed the conviction under these sections and recorded them under ss. 452 and 511.¹⁴

This section is applicable not only to the particular burglar who is shown to have caused grievous hurt but to all who have taken part in the burglary.¹⁵

1. 'Grievous hurt'.—The grievous hurt must be caused, or the attempt must be made, during the time that the house-breaking is being committed, and not after that offence is completed, and the offender has left the premises.¹⁶ The offence of house-breaking is complete when entry into the house is effected and any grievous hurt, subsequently caused by the persons breaking into a house, cannot be said to be grievous hurt caused while they were committing the house-breaking. This section will not, therefore, apply where the causing of grievous hurt succeeds the entry, or indication of such intention; that is to say, it will not apply to a trespass committed by remaining on.¹⁷ When a person commits lurking house-trespass and also inflicts grievous hurt in the courtyard, but it is not clear whether the courtyard is a part of the house into which trespass was committed, the offence established is one under s. 457 and not under this section.¹⁸ For the meaning of the term 'grievous hurt', see s. 320, supra.

2. 'Attempt'.—See s. 511, infra.

Premeditation to cause hurt, etc., not essential.—If in the commission of the lurking house-trespass or house-breaking a personal injury of the kind here mentioned is caused or attempted to be caused, it is immaterial that it was without premeditation and sudden.¹⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass,²⁰ or house-breaking.²¹

(2) That he caused grievous hurt, or attempted to cause death or grievous hurt, to some person.

(3) That he did as above whilst engaged in committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, while committing lurking house-trespass (or house-breaking) caused grievous hurt to AB (or attempted to cause the death of AB or grievous hurt to AB), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 459 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448, supra.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

¹³ Ismail Khan, (1886) 8 All. 649.

¹⁴ Imamuddin, (1876) P. R. No. 17 of 1876; Jaffir, (1881) P. R. No. 2 of 1882.

¹⁵ Janu, (1928) 30 P. L. R. 125, 30 Cr. L. J. 838.

¹⁶ Ismail Khan, (1886) 8 All. 649.

¹⁷ Said Ahmad, (1927) 49 All. 864.

¹⁸ Enayet Ali, (1933) 38 C. W. N. 446, 36 Cr. L. J. 619, [1934] AIR (C) 557.

¹⁹ M. & M. 407.

²⁰ Vide s. 443, sup.

²¹ Vide s. 445, sup.

460. If, at the time of the committing of lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night,¹ any person jointly concerned in lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night punishable where death or grievous hurt caused by one of them. guilty of such offence shall voluntarily² cause or attempt³ to cause death⁴ or grievous hurt⁵ to any person, every person jointly concerned in committing such lurking house-trespass by night⁶ or house-breaking by night, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the constructive liability of persons jointly concerned in committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in the course of which death or grievous hurt to any one is caused. It is immaterial who causes the death or grievous hurt. Every person jointly concerned in committing such house-trespass or house-breaking shall be punished in the manner provided in the section.²²

This section when read with ss. 445 and 441 demands that the offence of house-breaking shall have been completed to bring an offender within its terms. The accused must be "guilty of such offence", viz. house-breaking by night. The accused and another person attempted to break into a house by night for the purpose of committing theft, and were interrupted by the inmates, one of whom was killed by one of the accused. There was no evidence to show which of the accused caused the death. It was held that the accused could not be punished with transportation for life as the offence of house-breaking was attempted only and not committed.²³

1. 'At the time of the committing of . . . house-breaking by night'.—This expression "is to some extent vague, but . . . it must be limited to the time during which the criminal trespass continues which forms an element in house-trespass, which is itself essential to house-breaking and cannot be extended so as to include any prior or subsequent time".²⁴ The accused broke into the house of one T at night with intent to commit theft, being armed with deadly weapons, left the house on an alarm being raised and in the courtyard stabbed R who tried to seize them, injuring him so that he died later on. They were pursued and captured. It was held that as the stabbing was done after the house-breaking was complete this section did not apply, but that the accused were guilty of offences under ss. 457, 458 and 326.²⁵ The accused was one of a party of four men who broke into the house of the complainant by night and, being discovered, were running away when a neighbour caught hold of the accused whereupon some of his companions inflicted injuries upon the neighbour of which he died on the spot. It was held that this section was not applicable as the offence of house-breaking by night had been completed when the neighbour arrived on the scene.¹ A number of persons armed with lathis entered a house at dead of night with the primary intention of abducting a woman. While abducting the woman some of them, whose identity was not established, attacked an inmate with lathi blows which resulted in his death and also caused grievous hurt to another. Having done this they went away, after scaling the wall of the courtyard of the house. It was held that an offence under this section was committed and a conviction for an offence under s. 302 or 304 (1) was not sustainable.²

A man who, in the commission of lurking house-trespass by night, voluntarily attempted to cause grievous hurt to the owner of the house who tried to capture him, was held punishable under this section and not under ss. 457 and 324.³

2. 'Voluntarily'.—See s. 39, supra. 3. 'Attempts'.—See s. 511, infra.

4. 'Death'.—See s. 46, supra. 5. 'Grievous hurt'.—See s. 320, supra.

²² Chatur, (1911) 8 A. L. J. R. 574, 12 Cr. L. J. 895.

²³ Saifuddin, (1874) P. R. No. 16 of 1874; Jowala Singh, (1880) P. R. No. 12 of 1880, explained in Umar Din, (1891) P. R. No. 12 of 1891.

²⁴ Per Plowden, J., in Jaffir, (1881) P. R.

No. 2 of 1882.

²⁵ Sed Rasul, (1916) P. R. No. 27 of 1916 18 Cr. L. J. 350, [1917] AIR (L) 319.

¹ Muhammad, (1921) 2 Lah. 342.

² Mohammada, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 1150, 38 Cr. L. J. 80, [1936] AIR (L) 911.

³ Lukhun Doss, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 62.

6. 'Every person jointly concerned in committing such lurking house-trespass by night'.—This section applies to those persons who have actually committed lurking house-trespass at night and not to those who may have accompanied their associates but did not commit the offence. It applies to actual doers, and not to others. The act of causing death or grievous hurt by any one of the intruders would certainly make others, who did not themselves cause the death or the grievous hurt, equally liable.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed lurking house-trespass by night;⁵ or house-breaking by night.⁶

(2) That he caused, or attempted to cause, death or grievous hurt.⁷

(3) That he did as above whilst engaged in committing lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, jointly with certain other person, to wit—, committed lurking house-trespass by night [or house-breaking by night] by entering into the building belonging to AB, and used as a human dwelling, and that one of the said persons, to wit—, at the time of committing such offence voluntarily caused [or attempted to cause] death [or grievous hurt] to—, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 460 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see s. 448.

Bombay Act LI of 1947 empowers enhanced punishment where an order of restriction or of settlement has been made (s. 19).

461. Whoever dishonestly,¹ or with intent to commit mischief,² breaks open or unfastens any closed receptacle³ which contains or which he believes to contain property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonestly
breaking open receptacle containing property.

COMMENT.

This section and the following section provide for the same offence. As soon as the receptacle is broken open or unfastened the offence is complete.

1. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra. 2. 'Mischief'.—See s. 425, supra.

3. 'Receptacle'.—This may include not only a room, a part of a room or closet, etc., but a box or closed package.⁸ T, being an inmate of his uncle's house, broke open a chest and took out property from it. He was convicted of an offence under s. 457. It was held that he could not properly be convicted under that section, but should have been convicted under this section and s. 378.⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the receptacle was closed or fastened.

(2) That it contained property, or that the accused believed that it contained property.

(3) That the accused broke open or unfastened it.

(4) That he did so dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief.

⁴ Faiz Bakhsh, (1946) 48 P. L. R. 425, 48 Cr. L. J. 269.

⁵ Vide s. 444.

⁶ Vide s. 446.

⁷ See Fatta, (1919) 1 L. L. J. 253.

⁸ M. & M. 408.

⁹ Tasuduk Hossein, (1874) 6 N. W. P. 301.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the First or Second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, dishonestly [or with intent to commit mischief] broke open [or unfastened] a certain closed receptacle, to wit—, which contained [or which you believed to contain] certain property, to wit—; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 461 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

462. Whoever, being entrusted with any closed receptacle which contains or which he believes to contain property, without having authority to open the same, dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief, breaks open or unfastens that receptacle, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for same offence when committed by person entrusted with custody.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the same offence as is punishable under the preceding section. The punishment under it is higher as there is a breach of trust on the part of the person to whom the receptacle is entrusted.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (4) as for s. 461; and

- (5) That the accused was entrusted with such receptacle.
- (6) That he was so entrusted with it, in a closed or unfastened state.
- (7) That he had no authority to open the same.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being entrusted with a certain closed receptacle, to wit—, which contained [or which you believed to contain] certain property, to wit—, on or about the—day of—, at—, dishonestly [or with intent to commit mischief] broke open [or unfastened] the said receptacle, without having authority to open the same; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 462 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO DOCUMENTS AND TO TRADE OR PROPERTY MARKS.

463. Whoever makes any false document or part of a document,¹ with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person,² or to support any claim or title,³ or to cause any person to part with property,⁴ or to enter into any express or implied contract,⁵ or with intent to commit fraud⁶ or that fraud may be committed, commits forgery.

Making a false document.

464. A person is said to make a false document—

First.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document or part of a document, or makes any mark denoting the execution of a document,¹ with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document was made, signed, sealed or executed by or by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed,² or at a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed;³ or

Secondly.—Who, without lawful authority, dishonestly or fraudulently, by cancellation or otherwise, alters a document in any material part thereof, after it has been made or executed either by himself or by any other person, whether such person be living or dead at the time of such alteration; or

Thirdly.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently causes any person to sign, seal, execute or alter a document, knowing that such person by reason of unsoundness of mind or intoxication cannot, or that by reason of deception practised upon him, he does not know the contents of the document or the nature of the alteration.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A has a letter of credit upon B for Rs. 10,000, written by Z. A, in order to defraud B, adds a cipher to the 10,000, and makes the sum 1,00,000, intending that it may be believed by B that Z so wrote the letter. A has committed forgery.

(b) A, without Z's authority, affixes Z's seal to a document purporting to be a conveyance of an estate from Z to A, with the intention of selling the estate to B and thereby of obtaining from B the purchase money. A has committed forgery.

(c) A picks up a cheque on a banker signed by B, payable to bearer, but without any sum having been inserted in the cheque. A fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of ten thousand rupees. A commits forgery.

(d) A leaves with B, his agent, a cheque on a banker, signed by A, without inserting the sum payable and authorizes B to fill up the cheque by inserting a sum not exceeding ten thousand rupees for the purpose of making certain payments. B fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of twenty thousand rupees. B commits forgery.

(e) A draws a bill of exchange on himself in the name of B without B's authority, intending to discount it as a genuine bill with a banker and intending to take up the bill on its maturity. Here, as A draws the bill with intent to deceive the banker by leading him to suppose that he had the security of B, and thereby to discount the bill, A is guilty of forgery.

(f) Z's will contains these words—"I direct that all my remaining property be equally divided between A, B and C." A dishonestly scratches out B's name, intending that it may be believed that the whole was left to himself and C. A has committed forgery.

(g) A endorses a Government promissory note and makes it payable to Z or his order by writing on the bill the words "Pay to Z or his order" and signing the endorsement. B dishonestly erases the words "Pay to Z or his order," and thereby converts the special endorsement into a blank endorsement. B commits forgery.

(h) A sells and conveys an estate to Z. A afterwards, in order to defraud Z of his estate, executes a conveyance of the same estate to B, dated six months earlier than the date of the conveyance to Z, intending it to be believed that he had conveyed the estate to B before he conveyed it to Z. A has committed forgery.

(i) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and, by representing to Z that he has prepared the will according to his instructions, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

(j) A writes a letter and signs it with B's name without B's authority, certifying that A is a man of good character and in distressed circumstances from unforeseen misfortune, intending by means of such letter to obtain alms from Z and other persons. Here, as A made a false document in order to induce Z to part with property, A has committed forgery.

(k) A without B's authority writes a letter and signs it in B's name certifying to A's character, intending thereby to obtain employment under Z. A has committed forgery, inasmuch as he intended to deceive Z by the forged certificate, and thereby to induce Z to enter into an express or implied contract for service.

Explanation 1.—A man's signature of his own name may amount to forgery.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A signs his own name to a bill of exchange, intending that it may be believed that the bill was drawn by another person of the same name. A has committed forgery.

(b) A writes the word "accepted" on a piece of paper and signs it with Z's name, in order that B may afterwards write on the paper a bill of exchange drawn by B upon Z, and negotiate the bill as though it had been accepted by Z. A is guilty of forgery; and if B, knowing the fact, draws the bill upon the paper pursuant to A's intention, B is also guilty of forgery.

(c) A picks up a bill of exchange payable to the order of a different person of the same name. A endorses the bill in his own name, intending to cause it to be believed that it was endorsed by the person to whose order it was payable, here A has committed forgery.

(d) A purchases an estate sold under execution of a decree against B. B, after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z, executes a lease of the estate to Z at a nominal rent and for a long period, and dates the lease six months prior to the seizure, with intent to defraud A, and to cause it to be believed that the lease was granted before the seizure. B, though he executes the lease in his own name, commits forgery by antedating it.

(e) A, a trader, in anticipation of insolvency, lodges effects with B for A's benefit, and with intent to defraud his creditors; and in order to give a colour to the transaction, writes a promissory note binding himself to pay to B a sum for value received, and antedates the note, intending that it may be believed to have been made before A was on the point of insolvency. A has committed forgery under the first head of the definition.

*Explanation 2.*⁴—The making of a false document in the name of a fictitious person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by a real person, or in the name of a deceased person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by the person in his lifetime, may amount to forgery.

ILLUSTRATION.

A draws a bill of exchange upon a fictitious person, and fraudulently accepts the bill in the name of such fictitious person with intent to negotiate it. A commits forgery.

465. Whoever commits forgery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The offence of forgery is defined in ss. 463 and 464 of the Code. Under s. 463 the making of a false document with any of the intents therein mentioned is forgery and s. 464 sets forth when a person is said to make a "false document" within the meaning of the Code.

The definition of forgery in the Code is not as simple and clear as it is in common law. Forgery in England is not defined by statute. It is defined in common law as the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another man's right.¹

Section 463. Scope.—Section 463 "contemplates two classes of intents, and it is clear...that it is not an essential quality of the fraud mentioned in the section that it should result in or aim at the deprivation of property. If this be so, it cannot be supposed that the definition of a false document, [s. 464] which is but a part of the definition of forgery, requires as a condition of criminality an intent different in its quality and its aims from that prescribed by s. 463".²

Ingredients.—The elements of forgery are :—

1. The making of a false document or part of it.
2. Such making should be with intent to
 - (a) cause damage or injury to (i) the public, or (ii) any person ; or
 - (b) support any claim or title ; or
 - (c) cause any person to part with property ; or
 - (d) enter into any express or implied contract ; or
 - (e) commit fraud or that fraud may be committed.

1. 'Whoever makes any false document or part of a document'.—To constitute the offence of forgery the simple making of a 'false document' is sufficient. What amounts to the making of a 'false document' is explained in s. 464. The person who makes a 'false document' commits forgery. A person who is not the writer of a forged document cannot be charged with committing the substantive offence of forgery. If he has caused such a 'false document' to be made he will be guilty of abetment.³ It is not necessary that the document should be published or made in the name of a really existing person.⁴ But "it is essential that the false document, when made, must either appear on its face to be, or be in fact, one which, if true, would possess some legal validity, or in other words must be legally capable of effecting the fraud intended".⁵ A writing, which is not legal evidence of the matter expressed, may yet be a 'document' if the parties framing it believed it to be, and intended it to be, evidence of such matter.⁶ Thus, forging a deed will amount to this offence, although a statute requires the deed in a particular form, or to comply with certain requisities, and the forged deed is not in the form, or does not comply with those requisites.⁷

¹ Blackstone, Vol. IV, p. 245.

² Abbas Ali, (1897) 25 Cal. 512, 521, F.B., overruling Haradhan's case, (1892) 10 Cal. 380.

³ Haidar Ali Pradhania, (1912) 17 C.W. N. 354, 14 Cr. L. J. 129.

⁴ Vide Explanation 1.

⁵ 2 Bishop 508 ; Jawala Ram, (1895) P. R. No. 12 of 1895.

⁶ Sheefait Ally, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 61, 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 12.

⁷ Lyon's Case, (1868) Russ. & Ry. 255 ; Mackintosh's Case, (1800) 2 Leach 883.

The assertion of a false claim in a document does not constitute the document a false one, when it is executed by the party who purports to execute it and there is no intention of causing a belief that it was executed by some other person, real or fictitious. A, who was not the son, natural or adopted, of the deceased B, executed a deed of mortgage of certain properties of B in favour of C. In the body of the document A was described as the son of B, though no such description appeared in the signature. A was known to C for a long time, and A had no intention of causing it to be believed that the document was executed by any other person than himself. It was held that A was not guilty of making a 'false document'.⁸

"Forgery supposes the possibility of a genuine document, and that the false document is not as good as the genuine document, and that the one is not as efficacious for all purposes as the other".⁹ "Every forgery is a counterfeit".¹⁰ But every concoction of a document is not forgery. Supposing A says to B he has got a promissory note from B, and threatens to sue him if he does not pay the money due upon it. B finds that the document in possession of A purports to be a copy of a promissory note by B. If B had never given a promissory note, A cannot be convicted of forgery or of uttering a forged document, but of cheating he may be.

If the false document is incomplete in such a material way as no one will be deceived there will be no conviction for forgery. Where the accused drew a bill upon the treasurer of the navy payable to blank or order, and signed it in the name of a navy surgeon, it was held that forging an instrument payable to blank or order was not sufficient, there must be a payee.¹¹ The instrument should be complete. But if a forged document is not wholly void for want of certain form the maker of it will be guilty of forgery.¹²

2. 'Intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person'.—

When a false document is made, with 'intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person', it is not sufficient to prove that in making the document the accused knew that the document might injure, but it must be proved that it was his intention that it should injure another.¹³ It is immaterial whether damage, injury or fraud is actually caused or not. It is sufficient that there should be the intention of causing it.¹⁴ The phrase "intend to cause damage or injury" does not govern the other intents mentioned in the section. It is an intent complete in itself. The definition in s. 463 is itself subject to the definition in s. 464 in which the two essential elements are that the act should be done "dishonestly or fraudulently." In other words, whichever of the intents given in s. 463 may be applicable, the act itself must be done dishonestly or fraudulently to sustain a conviction for forgery. The use by the Legislature of words "dishonestly or fraudulently" in the alternative obviously means that they are not tautological but must be given different meanings. The intention to defraud is something other than the intention to cause wrongful gain or loss.¹⁵ If a person in order to make good a false defence and to cause justice to miscarry, fabricates a document, by putting false dates and spurious postmarks on an envelope, he does it with one of the intents referred to in s. 463.¹⁶

The element of injury or risk of injury to an individual or to the public is an essential ingredient in the definition of forgery. Where a Sub-Inspector of Police altered his case-diary as evidence in his favour after the institution of proceedings against him under ss. 380 and 348 of the Code, it was held that his act in altering the diary so as to show that he had not kept certain persons under surveillance did not amount to forgery, inasmuch as there was no risk of loss or injury to any individual and the element of 'fraud' as defined in s. 2 was absent.¹⁷ The mere signing a telegram in another's name, where it is not shown to have been done with intent to injure him and where it does not actually injure him, does not constitute the offence of forgery,

⁸ Adaikalammai v. Raman, (1908) 82 Mad. 90.

⁹ Per Bramwell, B., in Smith, (1858) 8 Cox. 32, 37.

¹⁰ Per Byles, J., in ibid., p. 37.

¹¹ Richard's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 193; Randall's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 195; Pate-man's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 455; Butterwick, (1839) 2 Mood. & Rob. 196.

¹² Lyon's Case, (1818) Russ. & Ry. 255.

¹³ Feda Hossein, (1881) 10 C. L. R. 184.

¹⁴ Chunku, [1930] A. L. J. R. 1451, 32 Cr. L. J. 559, [1931] AIR (A) 258; Kalyanmal, [1937] Nag. 45.

¹⁵ Abdul Hamid, (1943) 46 P. L. R. 255, 46 Cr. L. J. 341, [1944] AIR (L) 380.

¹⁶ Ahmad Khan, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 905, [1943] AIR (S) 46.

¹⁷ Sanjiv Ratnappa, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 1090, 56 Bom. 488.

even though the signature may have been made without the authority of such person.¹⁸ Where in a proceeding in a Court of justice the accused having an access to the record, inserted a document on the record and made interpolations in the list of documents, it was held that he was guilty of forgery under this clause as well as under the clause relating to commission of fraud because there was an intent on the part of the accused to commit a fraud on the Court and to cause damage to the other side.¹⁹

As to the meaning of the word 'injury', see s. 44; of 'public', s. 12; and of 'person', s. 11, supra.

The purpose with which a false document may have been prepared is a matter of inference. The inference that the intention was that the false document should be used in a judicial proceeding, even though such a proceeding is not in fact instituted is a reasonable one.²⁰

3. 'Support any claim or title'.—"There is no warrant for saying that in order to constitute forgery the document must be intended to support a false claim, or a false title. If in order to support a true claim or a genuine title a false document is created, it is a forgery...Whether a document is a false document or not does not depend upon the adjudication of the Court on the claim or title which is intended to be propped up by the false document."²¹ Even if a man has a legal claim or title to property, he is guilty of forgery if he counterfeits documents in order to support it.²² Any false document purporting to create, extend, transfer or otherwise to support a right or alleged right is included. See illustrations (f), (g), (h) and (i). An actual intention to convert an illegal or doubtful claim into an apparently legal one makes an action dishonest.²³

The term 'claim' is not limited in its application to a claim to property. It "may be a claim to anything, as, for instance, a claim to a woman as the claimant's wife, a claim to the custody of a child as being the claimant's child, or a claim to be admitted to attendance at a law class in a college, or to be admitted to a university or other examination, or a claim to the possession of immoveable or any other kind of property".²⁴

4. 'To cause any person to part with property'.—"It is not...necessary to constitute a forgery under s. 463 that the 'property' with which it is intended that the false document shall cause a person to part, should be in existence at the time when the false document was made. For example, if A gave an order to B to buy the material for making and to make a silver tea service for him, and C, before the tea service was made or the materials for making it had been bought, were to make a false letter purporting, but falsely, to be signed by A, authorising B to deliver to D the tea service when made, C would have committed forgery within the meaning of s. 463 by making that false document with intent to cause B to part with property, namely, the tea service, when made".²⁵ A written certificate has been held to be 'property' within the meaning of this section.¹

5. 'To enter into any express or implied contract'.—The false document under this clause must be to enable the person making it to enter into any express or implied contract. Creating of contractual rights by a false document is covered by this clause.

6. 'Intent to commit fraud'.—Dishonesty or fraud is a necessary ingredient of this offence.² "The offence [of forgery] is complete if a document, false in fact, is made with intent to commit a fraud, although it may not have been made with any one of the other intents specified in s. 463."³

¹⁸ Kali Prasad Banerjee, (1914) 16 Cr. L. J. 76, [1915] AIR (C) 786 (2).

¹⁹ Mahesh Chandra Prasad, (1948) 22 Pat. 292.

²⁰ Ahmed Ali, (1925) 42 C. L. J. 215, 26 Cr. L. J. 1574, [1926] AIR (C) 224.

²¹ Per Devadoss, J., in Sivananda Mudali, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 994, 995, [1926] AIR (M) 1072.

²² Dhunun Kasee, (1882) 9 Cal. 53.

²³ Kalyanmal, [1937] Nag. 45.

²⁴ Per Edge, C. J., in Soshi Bhushan, (1893)

15 All. 210, 217; Kotamraju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, 98, F.B.; Khandusingh, (1896) 22 Bom. 768; Chanon Singh, (1928) 10 Lah. 545.

²⁵ Per Edge, C. J., in Soshi Bhushan, (1893) 15 All. 210, 218.

¹ Ibid.

² Sudarsan Behra, (1926) 8 P. L. T. 104, 27 Cr. L. J. 1263, [1927] AIR (P) 87.

³ Per Sir Arnold White, C. J., in Kotamraju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, 95, F.B.

"By fraud, I understand an intention to deceive; whether it be from any expectation of advantage to the party himself, or from ill-will towards the others is immaterial".⁴ It has been held in a Bombay case that the term 'fraud' is used in this section in its ordinary and popular acceptation.⁵ Stephen⁶ says: "... whenever the words 'fraud' or 'intent to defraud' or 'fraudulently' occur in the definition of a crime two elements at least are essential to the commission of the crime: namely, first, deceit or an intention to deceive or in some cases mere secrecy; and, secondly, either actual injury or possible injury or an intent to expose some person either to actual injury or to a risk of possible injury by means of that deceit or secrecy. This intent, I may add, is very seldom the only or the principal intention entertained by the fraudulent person, whose principal object in nearly every case is his own advantage. The injurious deception is usually intended only as a means to an end... A practically conclusive test as to the fraudulent character of a deception for criminal purposes is this: Did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which he could not have had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that that advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss, or risk of loss, to some one else; and if so, there was fraud". "It must be remembered that the loss contemplated by law is not confined to a deprivation of property and that the word would cover the infringement of any right possessed by a person".⁷ "Where, therefore, there is an intention to deceive and by means of the deceit to obtain an advantage there is a fraud, and if a document is fabricated with such intent, it is a forgery".⁸ The majority of the Judges of the Madras High Court in a full bench case⁹ seem to be of opinion that an intention to secure a benefit or advantage to the party deceiving by means of the deceit constitutes an intention to defraud. Sir Arnold White, C. J., while observing that it was not necessary to decide this point, said "that either an intention to secure a benefit or advantage on the one hand, or cause loss or detriment on the other, by means of deceit, is an intent to defraud". He also observed: "Intending to defraud means, of course, something more than deceiving. A tells B a lie and B believes him. B is deceived but it does not follow that A intended to defraud B. But, as it seems to me, if A tells B a lie intending that B should do something which A conceives to be to his own benefit or advantage, and which, if done, would be to the loss or detriment of B, A intends to defraud B". The object for which the deceit is practised has to be considered. The advantage intended to be secured or the harm intended to be caused need not have relation to property or be such as is implied in the term 'dishonestly' but it must be something to which the party perpetrating the deceit is not entitled either legally or equitably. Where the accused altered a document without the authority of the executant after its execution, and it was proved that the alteration was made to prevent other people from setting up a claim to property which was admittedly in the possession of the accused, the object could not be said to be dishonest and the man was not guilty of forgery.¹⁰

The expression "intend to defraud" involves an intent to cause injury. It involves something more than mere deceiving.¹¹ It implies conduct coupled with intention to deceive and thereby to injure; in other words, "defraud" involves two conceptions, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived; that is, infringement of some legal right possessed by him, but not necessarily deprivation of property.¹² The addition of a name to the list of attesting witnesses of an instrument which need not in law be attested¹³ or the forging of names of certain persons or notices which the accused, a process server, had to serve, with a view to save himself trouble or possibly ⁴ Per Le Blanc, J., in Haycraft v. Crazy, (1801) 2 East 92, 108, followed with approval in Vithal Narayan, (1886) 13 Bom. 515n., 517, which is followed in Lalit Mohan Sarkar, (1894) 22 Cal. 318.

⁵ Balkrishna Waman, (1913) 37 Bom. 666, 15 Bom. L. R. 708.

⁶ History of Criminal Law, Vol. II, p. 121. This extract is quoted with approval in several Indian cases.

⁷ Robinson, (1921) 22 Cr. L. J. 681, 682.

⁸ Per Bannerji, J., in Muhammad Saeed Khan, (1898) 21 All. 113, 115.

⁹ Kotamraju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, 96, 97, F.B. The majority of the Court have expressed their non-concurrence with the case of C. Srinivasan, (1902) 25 Mad. 726.

¹⁰ Manicka Asari, [1915] M. W. N. 278, 16 Cr. L. J. 246.

¹¹ Nga Tun Sein, (1935) 30 Cr. L. J. 1025, [1935] AIR (R) 203.

¹² Surendra Nath Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 75; Ahmed Ali, (1925) 42 C. L. J. 215, 26 Cr. L. J. 1754, [1926] AIR (C) 224; Ram Chand Gurdala, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1383.

¹³ Surendra Nath Ghose, ibid.

to hide the fact that he had neglected his duty,¹⁴ does not amount to making a false document.

From the intention that the false document should deceive others into a belief that it is genuine it may generally be inferred that there was an intention to damage or injure.¹⁵ An intent to defraud may be inferred from the wilful use of a forged instrument to support a genuine claim.¹⁶

Deprivation of property, actual or intended, does not constitute an essential element of an intention to defraud.¹⁷ It is immaterial that the deception does not succeed, or that if it had succeeded it could not have exposed the accused to an action for damages.¹⁸

Intent to defraud any particular person not necessary.—A general intention to defraud, without the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another, would, if proved, be sufficient to support a conviction; and such an intention is a necessary inference which the jury should be directed to draw, if they are satisfied that the accused has uttered a forged document as a true one meaning it to be taken as such, and knowing it to be forged.¹⁹ It is not required, in order to constitute in point of law an intent to defraud, that the party committing the offence should have had present in his mind an intention to defraud a particular person, if the consequence of the act would necessarily or possibly be to defraud any person; but there must, at all events, be a possibility of some person being defrauded by the forgery.²⁰ It is not necessary that there should have been some person defrauded. "A man may have an intent to defraud, and yet there may not be any person who could be defrauded by his act. Suppose a person with a good account at his bankers, and a friend, with his knowledge, forges his name to a cheque either to try his credit, or to imitate his handwriting, there would be no intent to defraud, though there would be parties who might be defrauded; but where another person has no account at his bankers, but a man supposes that he has, and on that supposition forges his name, there would be an intent to defraud in that case, although no person could be defrauded."²¹

Cases.—Intent to defraud.—If a person have the authority of another to write the name of that other to an acceptance, it is no forgery; neither is it if he had no such authority, provided that he had fair ground for considering that he had such authority, and did so consider, and wrote the acceptance, not meaning to defraud or injure any one.²² Even if there is no previous authority of the person whose name is put on a bill of exchange, still if that person has been informed of it at the time and he does not repudiate it, it does not amount to forgery.²³ But if A puts the name of B on a bill of exchange as acceptor without B's authority, expecting to be able to meet it when due, or expecting that B will overlook it, this is forgery.²⁴ Similarly, if a person having the blank acceptance of another, be authorised to write on a bill of exchange for a certain limited amount, and he writes on it a bill of exchange for a larger amount with intent to defraud either the acceptor or any other person, this is forgery.²⁵ A forged cheque on the W bank was presented for payment at the S Bank, where the supposed drawer never kept cash. It was held that this was sufficient evidence of an intent to defraud the partners of the S Bank, although there was no probability of their paying the cheque, even if it had been genuine.¹

In a case of forgery, the fact that the accused had given guarantees to his bankers, to whom he paid a forged note, to a larger amount than the note, was held not to negative an intent to defraud.² If a person knew the acceptance of a bill of exchange to be forged, and uttered it as true, and believed that his bankers, to whom he uttered it, would advance money on it, which they would not otherwise, that is ample evidence of an intent to defraud, and evidence upon which a jury ought to act; and a person is not the less guilty of forgery because he may intend ultimately to take up the forged

¹⁴ Nga Tun Sein, (1935) 36 Cr. L. J. 1025, [1935] AIR (R) 203.

¹⁵ M. & M. 416.

¹⁶ Samuel Hopley, (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 248.

¹⁷ Abbas Ali, (1897) 25 Cal. 512, F.B.; Kotam-raju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, F.B.

¹⁸ Mahesh Chandra Prasad, (1943) 22 Pat. 292.

¹⁹ Dhnum Kazee, (1882) 9 Cal. 58.

²⁰ Marcus, (1846) 2 C. & K. 356; Trenfield, (1858) 1 F. & F. 43; Mazagora's Case, (1815)

Russ. & Ry. 291.

²¹ Per Maule, J., in Nash's Case, (1852) 2 Den. Cr. C. 493, 499, 21 L. J. (M. C.) N. S. 147.

²² Parish, (1837) 8 C. & P. 94.

²³ Smith, (1862) 3 F. & F. 504.

²⁴ Forbes, (1835) 7 C. & P. 224.

²⁵ Hart, (1836) 7 C. & P. 652, (1837) 1 Mood. 486.

¹ Crowther, (1832) 5 C. & P. 316.

² James, (1836) 7 C. & P. 558.

bill, and may suppose that the party whose name is forged will be no loser, and the fact that the bill has been since paid by the accused will make no difference, if the offence has once been complete at the time of the uttering.³ The accused was convicted on an indictment at common law for forging and uttering a diploma of the College of Surgeons. The jury found that the accused forged the document with the general intent to induce the belief that it was genuine and that he was a member of the College; and he showed it to certain persons with intent to induce such belief in them; but that he had no intent in forging or in uttering to commit any particular fraud or specific wrong to any individual. It was held that the conviction was wrong as it was not proved that the act was done with intent to defraud.⁴ Where the husband of a woman who had given him general permission to file papers in Court on her behalf, forged her signature in a plaint to save the suit from becoming barred by limitation and filed it in Court on the last day of limitation, it was held that the husband was not guilty of forgery as there was no intention to defraud anybody, though his act was an improper one.⁵ In this case the wife whose signature was fabricated had authorised her husband to do such acts on her behalf. Where the accused fraudulently brought into existence a registered sale deed, said to have been executed by the widow of B, intending to deceive and also to injure the reversioners of B, it was held that their convictions under s. 467, as also under s. 82, Registration Act, must be maintained.⁶ Where it was the duty of a school teacher to enter in the diary the work done by him each day in accordance with a circular issued by the School Board and he altered the dates in the diary, with a view to disguising the fact that on certain dates the diary had not been kept and thus escaping the penalty which was in the form of loss of pay, it was held that there was, if not actual dishonesty, such an intention on the part of the teacher to obtain an advantage to himself and a corresponding disadvantage to the School Board, as would constitute fraud and that he was guilty of an offence under this section.⁷

The accused executed a sale-deed in respect of his entire property in favour of his wife, but did not register it. He then executed a mortgage of the same property in favour of one F. Before the mortgage transaction was completed, F had made all necessary inquiry in the Registration Department as to any prior incumbrance. The accused then put in the sale-deed in favour of his wife for registration and soon after the mortgage-deed was also registered. When the matter came to light, F charged the accused with cheating. During the trial it was found that the mortgage-deed bore an endorsement of payment although there was no such endorsement on the date when it was filed in Court. It was held that the accused was guilty of fabricating false evidence as well as of forgery.⁸

Copy.—The offence of forgery may be committed by a person who fabricates a false document purporting to be a copy of another document for the purpose of the same being used in evidence. The accused, in a suit for possession of land, to support his pedigree, put in a deed of dower, and a deed of security purporting to be copies of the original documents filed in a previous suit, but it was found that both the copies contained two more names of witnesses than the original. It was held that the accused had committed forgery.⁹ Similarly, a person was convicted of using as genuine a document which he knew to be forged, though he, in the first instance, produced only a copy of a copy of it.¹⁰ It has been held that a copy of a false document is not a false document within the meaning of this section.¹¹ The making of a copy of a forgery does not constitute forgery unless the maker of the copy was authorised to make the copy.¹²

The accused was convicted of forgery on the ground that he sent an imperfect copy of his diary to the Superintendent of Police. The High Court reversed the conviction on the ground that the two lines not embodied in the copy sent were evidently interpolations in the original diary, subsequently struck through with the pen; and that no forgery could be established unless it was proved that those interpolations were extant in the diary and had not been struck through at the time the copy was made.¹³

³ Geach, (1840) 9 C. & P. 409.

⁴ Hodgson's Case, (1856) Dears. & Bell. 3.

⁵ Apariti Charan Ray, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 1126.

⁶ Ganga Dibya, (1942) 22 Pat. 95.

⁷ Mg. Ko Gyi, (1936) 37 Cr. L. J. 1059.

⁸ Abdul Rashid Khan, (1913) 12 A. L. J. R. 104, 15 Cr. L. J. 221.

⁹ Essan Chunder Dutt v. Baboo Prannauth

Chowdhry, (1863) W. R. (F. B.) 71, Marsh. 270.

¹⁰ Nujum Ali, (1886) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 41. See

Naro Gopal, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 56.

¹¹ Gopalkrishna Heggade, (1910) 20 M. L. J. 534, 11 Cr. L. J. 401.

¹² Lachman Lal, (1918) 4 P. L. J. 16, 20 Cr. L. J. 142.

¹³ Shiddungowda, (1868) Unrep. Cr. C. 12.

Section 464, clause 1.—The first clause says that a person makes a false document if he

(1) dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document, or part of a document, or makes any mark denoting the execution of a document; or

(2) does as above with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document was made, signed, sealed or executed

(a) by or by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority it was not so made, signed or executed, or

(b) at a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed.

1. 'Dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document, etc.'—There is an obvious difference between "dishonestly" and "fraudulently". "In order to do a thing dishonestly there must be the intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain of property, but in order to do a thing fraudulently it is not necessary that there should be the intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain of property. The Legislature advisedly uses the terms 'dishonestly' and 'fraudulently'...[they are] used to denote two different things...The intention to defraud need not necessarily be to obtain something to which a person is not legally or equitably entitled. It is sufficient if by means of the perpetration of the fraud somebody is defrauded...in order to do a thing fraudulently it is not necessary that the person doing it should intend, or the doing of it should have the necessary consequence of, causing wrongful loss to any person. It is sufficient if the doing of it is intended to defraud some one without ultimately acquiring unlawful gain or causing wrongful loss".¹⁴ A person is said to do a thing 'fraudulently' if he does that thing with intent to defraud, but not otherwise (s. 25). This "word is used in ss. 471 and 464 together with the word 'dishonestly' and presumably in a sense not covered by the latter word. If, however, it be held that fraudulently implies deprivation either actual or intended, then apparently that word would perform no function which would not have been fully discharged by the word dishonestly and its use would be mere surplusage. So far as such a consideration carries any weight, it obviously inclines in favour of the view that the word 'fraudulently' should not be confined to transactions of which deprivation of property forms a part".¹⁵ "Those decisions...which proceed on the ground that an act is not fraudulent unless it causes or is intended to cause loss or injury to some one would seem to take too narrow a view of the meaning of the word 'fraudulently' as used in the Code".¹⁶ The Patna High Court has held that it is not necessary for a thing to be done 'dishonestly' that there should be an intention to cause both wrongful gain and wrongful loss. Except so far as loss or detriment is almost necessarily involved when an advantage is obtained, any intention of causing loss is a matter of remote inference.¹⁷

The making of a document untrue in certain particulars for the mere purpose of deceiving, does not amount to making a false document. It must be shown that it was made with such an intention as is implied in the term 'fraudulently' or in the term 'dishonestly'.¹⁸ A person cannot be convicted of fabricating a false document where his object in antedating a deed is simply to clear up matters and not fraudulent and no wrongful loss or wrongful gain is caused to any person thereby.¹⁹ Where a hand-note bearing a certain date bore the genuine thumb impression of the executant, but it was found in fact to have been executed subsequently, and there was absence of evidence that the antedating by the creditor was done with the object of making any wrongful gain to himself or causing wrongful loss to the executant, it was held that the necessary element of fraud or dishonesty was wanting in the case and that therefore the offence of forgery had not been committed.²⁰

¹⁴ Per Devadoss, J., in Sivamanda Mudali, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 994, 996, 999, [1926] AIR (M) 1072; Abdul Hamid, (1943) 46 P. L. R. 255, 46 Cr. L. J. 341, [1944] A. I. R. (L) 380.

¹⁵ Abbas Ali, (1896) 25 Cal. 512, 521, F.B., overruling Haradhan, (1892) 19 Cal. 380, which is followed in Bala, (1892) Unrep. Cr. C. 627.

¹⁶ Per Benson, J., in Kotamraju Venkat-rayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, 113, F.B., contra, Subrahmanya Ayyar, J., in ibid., p. 103.

¹⁷ Baijnath Bhagat, (1940) 21 P. L. T. 206, [1940] P. W. N. 474, 41 Cr. L. J. 427, [1940] AIR (P) 486.

¹⁸ Gudappa, (1879) 1 Weir 542.

¹⁹ Sudarsan Behra, (1926) 8 P. L. T. 104, 27 Cr. L. J. 1263, [1927] AIR (P) 87.

²⁰ Gobind Singh, (1926) 5 Pat. 573.

"To execute false valuable securities in order to render inoperative genuine valuable securities, is an act which is, . . . an act done with a fraudulent intent. It does not . . . cease to be fraudulent merely because the genuine document may by a distinct act of fraud be withheld from the rightful owner. The true description of such a transaction is that fraud is committed in order to counteract fraud, a description which is of no avail to the person by whom the false documents are made".²¹

'Fraudulently': 'intent to commit fraud, etc'.— "Possibly a distinction may be drawn between doing a thing 'with intent . . . that fraud may be committed' (s. 463) and doing a thing 'fraudulently' (s. 464). Such a distinction seems to be recognised in s. 239 of the Code. But to my mind no distinction can be drawn between doing a thing 'with intent to commit a fraud' (s. 463) and doing a thing 'fraudulently' (s. 464). Although the words 'with intent to commit a fraud' are not expressly defined, I think they mean the same thing as 'fraudulently', that is to say, 'with intent to defraud'. It follows that if it is established that a person does a thing 'with intent to commit a fraud' he does it with one of the intents specified in s. 463, and he also does it 'fraudulently' within the meaning of s. 464. It also follows, as it seems to me, that the offence is complete if a document, false in fact, is made with intent to commit a fraud, although it may not have been made with any one of the other intents specified in s. 463".²²

The Patna High Court has held that the word 'fraudulently' is equivalent to 'intent to defraud'. In order to convict a person of an attempt to defraud, it is not necessary that any person should be in a situation to be defrauded. A man may have an intent to defraud, and yet there may not be any person who could be defrauded by the act. Deprivation, actual or intended, is not a necessary ingredient of 'intent to defraud' referentially imported into s. 464 and s. 471.²³

'Makes'.—The simple making of a false document constitutes forgery.²⁴ "The 'making' of a document, or part of a document, does not mean 'writing' or 'printing' it, but signing or otherwise executing it; as in legal phrase we speak of 'making an indenture' or 'making a promissory note', by which is not meant the writing out of the form of the instrument, but the sealing or signing it as a deed or note. The fact that the word 'makes' is used in the section in conjunction with the words 'signs', 'seals', or 'executes' or 'makes any mark', 'denoting the execution, &c.' seems to me very clearly to denote that this is its true meaning. What constitutes a false document, or part of a document, is not the writing of any number of words which in themselves are innocent, but the affixing the seal or signature of some person to the document, or part of a document, knowing that the seal or signature is not his, and that he gave no authority to affix it. In other words, the falsity consists in the document, or part of a document, being signed or sealed with the name or seal of a person who did not in fact sign or seal it".²⁵ Stokes¹ in reference to this case says: "Why then were 'makes' and 'made' used as well as 'signs', 'executes', 'signed', 'executed'?" In an English case it has also been held that the taking of a positive impression on glass by photography is a making although such impression is evanescent, and cannot be printed or engraved from until it has been converted into a negative.² The Bombay High Court has distinguished this case in a case in which the accused counterfeited marks on a tree, and it was held that this amounted to making a false document.³ The Lahore High Court taking the same view has held that the word 'makes' does not mean anything other than makes, that is to say, creates or brings into existence. Where a document purporting to be a will was never completed and remained ineffective for want of dates, it was held that it was "made" within the meaning of s. 464.⁴

Making a false document does not consist in writing without doing anything towards its execution.⁵

The meaning given to the word 'making' in English law is very wide.

²¹ Per Plowden, J., in Fakir Muhammad, (1884) P. R. No. 4 of 1885, at p. 9.

²² Per Arnold White, C. J., in Kotamraju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad. 90, 95, F.B.

²³ Baijnath Bhagat, (1940) 21 P. L. T. 206, [1940] P. W. N. 474, 41 Cr. L. J. 427, [1940] AIR (P) 486.

²⁴ Sheefait Ally, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 61, 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 12.

²⁵ Per Garth, C.J., in Riasat Ali, (1881) 7 Cal. 352, 355.

¹ Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. I, p. 260.

² Rinaldi's Case, (1863) L. & C. 380.

³ Krishappa Khandappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 599, 26 Cr. L. J. 1014, [1925] AIR (B) 827.

⁴ Chatru Malik, (1928) 10 Lah. 265.

⁵ Lim Hoe, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 279.

In England it has been held that it is forgery to make a deed fraudulently, with a false date, when the date is a material part of the deed, although the deed is in fact made and executed by and between the persons by and between whom it purports to be made and executed.⁶ The antedating of a document is not forgery, unless it has or could have operated to the prejudice of anyone.⁷

'Signs, seals or executes'.—Signing or sealing a document completes its execution. Putting a seal to a genuine signature to a document which is invalid without a seal is a forgery.⁸ This offence may be complete though no use whatever has been made or attempted to be made of the document.⁹

Forgery at common law must be of some writing or document, and, therefore, the putting the name of a painter upon the copy of one of his pictures, in order that it may be passed off as the original, is not a forgery at common law, but is cheating.¹⁰ Under the Code this will amount to forgery.

2. 'With the intention of causing it to be believed that such document. . . was made. . . by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made. . . , etc.'—The making of a false document should be for one of the two purposes specified in this clause. The document should not have been made, etc., by the authority of the person by whom it is alleged to have been made or if it is made by his authority then it must not be at a time at which it is alleged that it was made, signed, etc.

3. 'At a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed'—These words are to be read distributively and are not governed by the preceding words 'by or by the authority, etc.'¹¹ To execute, with fraudulent intent, a document purporting to have been executed on a date other than the one on which it was actually executed, is a forgery.¹² Antedating a document to save an appeal constitutes forgery.¹³ It is forgery to make a deed fraudulently with a false date when the date is a material part of the deed, although the deed is in fact made and executed by and between the person by and between whom it purports to be made and executed.¹⁴

Cases.—Clause 1.—False document must have been actually made.—Where a person gave orders for the printing of certain receipt forms similar to those used by a certain company, and corrected the proof of the same, it being his intention to use the receipt forms in order to commit a fraud, it was held that he could not be convicted of forgery until one of the printed forms had been converted by him into a false document, nor of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document; until a form had been converted into a document, all that was done consisted in the mere preparation for the commission of an offence.¹⁵ But this case has not been followed by the Allahabad High Court in MacCrea's case,¹⁶ the charge in which was approved by the Privy Council.¹⁷

The mere fact that a document bearing a certain date was written on paper bearing an embossed stamp with a figure denoting a later date was held not sufficient to support a charge of forgery in the absence of evidence that the paper could not have been manufactured at the date the document bore.¹⁸

The accused went to the market and after making some purchases tendered a cheque to the shopkeeper who called a poddar who cashed it for a small commission. On being presented the cheque was dishonoured by the bank. The accused was tried in the High Court Sessions on charges of forgery and cheating and convicted. It appeared that the brother of the accused, G. R. Martindale, had an account with the bank and the signature on the cheque was only Martindale. The evidence was that he made an alteration in the date on the cheque in the presence of the shopkeeper and the poddar as though he were the drawer but made no representation about G. R. Martindale. It was held that inasmuch as the accused had no intention of inducing

⁶ Ritson, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 200.

⁷ Gobind Singh, (1926) 5 Pat. 573.

⁸ Collins, (1844) 1 Cox 57.

⁹ Mad. H. C. Pro.

¹⁰ Closs, (1857) 7 Cox 494.

¹¹ Ganesh Bhikaji, (1895) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 772.

¹² Rangaswami Chettyar v. Maung Po Ku, (1927) 6 Ran. 49.

¹³ Sookmoy Ghose, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 23; Taylor, (1843) 1 C. & K. 213. But see Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali Sircar, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 278, 1 Cr. L. J. 124, F.B.

¹⁴ Ritson, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 200.

¹⁵ Riasat Ali, (1881) 7 Cal. 352.

¹⁶ (1893) 15 All. 173.

¹⁷ MacCrea, (1898) 20 I. A. 90, 15 All. 310.

¹⁸ Sesha Charlu, (1891) 1 Weir 540.

in the minds of the shopkeeper and the poddar the belief that the cheque had been signed by his brother and had no such intention in regard to the bank, the cheque in question was not a false document and consequently the charge of forgery failed; that in the circumstances of the case there was dishonest concealment of facts on the part of the accused and he was guilty of cheating.¹⁹

Where the accused counterfeited letters or marks imprinted on trees and intended to be used as evidence that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger of a forest, it was held that he was guilty of making a false document.²⁰

Entries.—The accused made certain entries in his ledger which consisted of rough loose sheets, showing that certain sums of money had been paid to the prosecutor, which, in fact, had not been paid. It was held that he was guilty of forgery.²¹

A beat constable who wrote in his note-book the signature of a headman whose village he had not visited was held thereby not to have committed this offence.²² The accused who supervised labourers employed in repairing a public road made entries of payment in muster-rolls in excess of the actual payments, it was held that he was not guilty of forgery.²³ Where the accused was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts, instead of making this entry as requested, he entered in a language not known to the complainant that the sum had been paid to the complainant, it was held that he had committed not forgery but an attempt to cheat.²⁴ The accused sold for Rs. 40 a bullock to the complainant who paid him one rupee as earnest money and promised to pay the balance at a certain time. An entry to this effect was made in the accused's account book and was thumb-marked by the complainant. Subsequently, a clause was added by the accused on the credit side of the account book without the sanction of the complainant which said that if the amount was not paid as agreed upon, the creditor would take one and a half times the principal, including interest. It was held that no false document had been made by the accused within the meaning of s. 464.²⁵

The accused transferred the whole of his property in favour of his wife but before registering the sale-deed mortgaged the property to F. The sale-deed was, however, registered after the mortgagee had made all necessary inquiry at the Registration Office. After the registration of the sale-deed the mortgage-deed was also registered. The accused was charged for cheating the mortgagee. It appeared during the trial that the mortgage-deed, filed by the complainant, bore on it an endorsement of the return of the consideration although there was no such endorsement on it when it was filed in Court. The accused was thereupon further charged for fabricating false evidence and forgery. It was held that the accused was guilty of fabricating false evidence and cheating, as he must be presumed to know the probable result of his action and it obviously could not have been absent from his mind when he forged the endorsement that he was thereby attempting to defraud the mortgagee of his money.¹

The accused made unauthorised entries in books showing certain donees of land as proprietors of their holding merely without any share in the shamilat, whereas previously they were shown as full proprietors. The deeds of gifts made no mention of the shamilat and it was therefore a moot point whether the gifts covered a share in the shamilat or not and prima facie the new entries made by the accused were correct. It was held that as it could not be said that the accused (who acted apparently bona fide) made the entries with intent to defraud, or dishonestly, he did not make a false document.²

Unauthorised signature.—A petition praying that a fishery lease might be transferred from A to B, and purporting to be signed by A and B, was presented to the Deputy Commissioner by A. B was not present but his son was, and admitted

¹⁹ Martindale, (1924) 52 Cal. 347.

²⁰ Krishnappa Khandappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 599, 26 Cr. L. J. 1014, [1925] AIR (B) 327.

²¹ (1865) 1 Mad. Jur. 11, 1 Ind. Jur. N. S.

²² Nga Aung Ba, (1899) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 356.

²³ Ram Ghulam Singh, [1929] A. L. J. R. 592, 30 Cr. L. J. 408, [1929] AIR (A) 396.

²⁴ Kunju Nayar, (1888) 12 Mad. 114; Balwant, (1892) Cr. R. No. 15 of 1892, Unrep. Cr. C. 595; Jawalla Ram, (1895) P. R. No. 12 of 1895.

²⁵ Badan Singh, (1922) 3 Lah. 373.

¹ Abdul Rashid, (1913) 12 A. L. J. R. 104, 15 Cr. L. J. 221, [1914] AIR (A) 337.

² Muhammad Sirdar, (1914) P. R. No. 25 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 19, [1914] AIR (L) 586.

In England it has been held that it is forgery to make a deed fraudulently, with a false date, when the date is a material part of the deed, although the deed is in fact made and executed by and between the persons by and between whom it purports to be made and executed.⁶ The antedating of a document is not forgery, unless it has or could have operated to the prejudice of anyone.⁷

'Signs, seals or executes'.—Signing or sealing a document completes its execution. Putting a seal to a genuine signature to a document which is invalid without a seal is a forgery.⁸ This offence may be complete though no use whatever has been made or attempted to be made of the document.⁹

Forgery at common law must be of some writing or document, and, therefore, the putting the name of a painter upon the copy of one of his pictures, in order that it may be passed off as the original, is not a forgery at common law, but is cheating.¹⁰ Under the Code this will amount to forgery.

2. 'With the intention of causing it to be believed that such document... was made... by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made... , etc.'—The making of a false document should be for one of the two purposes specified in this clause. The document should not have been made, etc., by the authority of the person by whom it is alleged to have been made or if it is made by his authority then it must not be at a time at which it is alleged that it was made, signed, etc.

3. 'At a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed'.—These words are to be read distributively and are not governed by the preceding words 'by or by the authority, etc.'¹¹ To execute, with fraudulent intent, a document purporting to have been executed on a date other than the one on which it was actually executed, is a forgery.¹² Antedating a document to save an appeal constitutes forgery.¹³ It is forgery to make a deed fraudulently with a false date when the date is a material part of the deed, although the deed is in fact made and executed by and between the person by and between whom it purports to be made and executed.¹⁴

Cases.—Clause 1.—False document must have been actually made.—Where a person gave orders for the printing of certain receipt forms similar to those used by a certain company, and corrected the proof of the same, it being his intention to use the receipt forms in order to commit a fraud, it was held that he could not be convicted of forgery until one of the printed forms had been converted by him into a false document, nor of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document; until a form had been converted into a document, all that was done consisted in the mere preparation for the commission of an offence.¹⁵ But this case has not been followed by the Allahabad High Court in MacCrea's case,¹⁶ the charge in which was approved by the Privy Council.¹⁷

The mere fact that a document bearing a certain date was written on paper bearing an embossed stamp with a figure denoting a later date was held not sufficient to support a charge of forgery in the absence of evidence that the paper could not have been manufactured at the date the document bore.¹⁸

The accused went to the market and after making some purchases tendered a cheque to the shopkeeper who called a poddar who cashed it for a small commission. On being presented the cheque was dishonoured by the bank. The accused was tried in the High Court Sessions on charges of forgery and cheating and convicted. It appeared that the brother of the accused, G. R. Martindale, had an account with the bank and the signature on the cheque was only Martindale. The evidence was that he made an alteration in the date on the cheque in the presence of the shopkeeper and the poddar as though he were the drawer but made no representation about G. R. Martindale. It was held that inasmuch as the accused had no intention of inducing

⁶ Ritson, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 200.

⁷ Gobind Singh, (1926) 5 Pat. 573.

⁸ Collins, (1844) 1 Cox 57.

⁹ Mad. H. C. Pro.

¹⁰ Closs, (1857) 7 Cox 404.

¹¹ Ganesh Bhikaji, (1895) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 772.

¹² Rangaswami Chettyar v. Maung Po Ku, (1927) 6 Ran. 49.

¹³ Sookmoy Ghose, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 23; Taylor, (1843) 1 C. & K. 213. But see Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali Sircar, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 278, 1 Cr. L. J. 124, F.B.

¹⁴ Ritson, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 200.

¹⁵ Riasat Ali, (1881) 7 Cal. 352.

¹⁶ (1893) 15 All. 173.

¹⁷ MacCrea, (1898) 20 I. A. 90, 15 All. 310.

¹⁸ Sesha Charlu, (1891) 1 Weir 540.

in the minds of the shopkeeper and the poddar the belief that the cheque had been signed by his brother and had no such intention in regard to the bank, the cheque in question was not a false document and consequently the charge of forgery failed; that in the circumstances of the case there was dishonest concealment of facts on the part of the accused and he was guilty of cheating.¹⁹

Where the accused counterfeited letters or marks imprinted on trees and intended to be used as evidence that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger of a forest, it was held that he was guilty of making a false document.²⁰

Entries.—The accused made certain entries in his ledger which consisted of rough loose sheets, showing that certain sums of money had been paid to the prosecutor, which, in fact, had not been paid. It was held that he was guilty of forgery.²¹

A beat constable who wrote in his note-book the signature of a headman whose village he had not visited was held thereby not to have committed this offence.²² The accused who supervised labourers employed in repairing a public road made entries of payment in muster-rolls in excess of the actual payments, it was held that he was not guilty of forgery.²³ Where the accused was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts, instead of making this entry as requested, he entered in a language not known to the complainant that the sum had been paid to the complainant, it was held that he had committed not forgery but an attempt to cheat.²⁴ The accused sold for Rs. 40 a bullock to the complainant who paid him one rupee as earnest money and promised to pay the balance at a certain time. An entry to this effect was made in the accused's account book and was thumb-marked by the complainant. Subsequently, a clause was added by the accused on the credit side of the account book without the sanction of the complainant which said that if the amount was not paid as agreed upon, the creditor would take one and a half times the principal, including interest. It was held that no false document had been made by the accused within the meaning of s. 464.²⁵

The accused transferred the whole of his property in favour of his wife but before registering the sale-deed mortgaged the property to F. The sale-deed was, however, registered after the mortgagee had made all necessary inquiry at the Registration Office. After the registration of the sale-deed the mortgage-deed was also registered. The accused was charged for cheating the mortgagee. It appeared during the trial that the mortgage-deed, filed by the complainant, bore on it an endorsement of the return of the consideration although there was no such endorsement on it when it was filed in Court. The accused was thereupon further charged for fabricating false evidence and forgery. It was held that the accused was guilty of fabricating false evidence and cheating, as he must be presumed to know the probable result of his action and it obviously could not have been absent from his mind when he forged the endorsement that he was thereby attempting to defraud the mortgagee of his money.¹

The accused made unauthorised entries in books showing certain donees of land as proprietors of their holding merely without any share in the shamilat, whereas previously they were shown as full proprietors. The deeds of gifts made no mention of the shamilat and it was therefore a moot point whether the gifts covered a share in the shamilat or not and prima facie the new entries made by the accused were correct. It was held that as it could not be said that the accused (who acted apparently bona fide) made the entries with intent to defraud, or dishonestly, he did not make a false document.²

Unauthorised signature.—A petition praying that a fishery lease might be transferred from A to B, and purporting to be signed by A and B, was presented to the Deputy Commissioner by A. B was not present but his son was, and admitted

¹⁹ Martindale, (1924) 52 Cal. 347.

²⁰ Krishnappa Khandappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 599, 26 Cr. L. J. 1014, [1925] AIR (B) 327.

²¹ (1865) 1 Mad. Jur. 11, 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 46.

²² Nga Aung Ba, (1899) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 356.

²³ Ram Ghulam Singh, [1929] A. L. J. R. 592, 30 Cr. L. J. 408, [1929] AIR (A) 396.

²⁴ Kunju Nayar, (1888) 12 Mad. 114; Balwant, (1892) Cr. R. No. 15 of 1892, Unrep. Cr. C. 595; Jawalla Ram, (1895) P. R. No. 12 of 1895.

²⁵ Badan Singh, (1922) 3 Lah. 373.

¹ Abdul Rashid, (1913) 12 A. L. J. R. 104, 15 Cr. L. J. 221, [1914] AIR (A) 337.

² Muhammad Sirdar, (1914) P. R. No. 25 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 19, [1914] AIR (L) 586.

having signed his father's name. He was subsequently prosecuted, although no attempt was made to show that he had acted fraudulently and without his father's authority, and was convicted of fabricating false evidence. It was held that the conviction was bad because the writing of B's name by his son did not constitute a false entry and there was no intention that it should appear in evidence in any proceeding.³ Accused, a clerk of one S, filed a plaint on behalf of S, and verified it in the words "S. ba kalam khas". S accepted the plaint, gave evidence in support of it and obtained a decree on its basis. During the suit accused admitted that the plaint had been verified by him, but that he had authority from S. S did not deny this. It was held that the accused was not guilty of forgery inasmuch as he did not make the signature of S on the plaint dishonestly or fraudulently.⁴ A, who was not the son, natural or adopted, of the deceased B, executed a deed of mortgage of certain properties of B in favour of C. In the body of the document A was described as the son of B, though no such description appeared in the signature. A was known to C for a long time, and A had no intention of causing it to be believed that the document was executed by any other person than himself. It was held that A was not guilty of making a false document within the meaning of s. 464. The assertion of a false claim in a document will not constitute the document a false one, when it is executed by the party who purports to execute it and there is no intention of causing a belief that it was executed by some other person, real or fictitious.⁵

False attestation.—If a person falsely puts his name down as an attesting witness to the signature of somebody who he knows has never signed at all, he is guilty of forgery just as well as the scribe.⁶

Personation at examination.—A falsely represented himself to be B at a University examination, got a hall ticket in B's name, and headed and signed answer papers to questions with B's name. It was held that A had committed the offence of forgery and cheating by personation.⁷

Vakalatnamah.—The signing of a vakalatnamah in the name of co-decreeholders without their authority to do so, and delivering it to a Vakil with instructions to file a petition, stating that the debt had been satisfied, and praying that the case may be struck off the file, is held to be a forgery.⁸

Voting paper.—Where a person obtains a voting paper by putting a thumb impression in the name of another and passes it on in that name he commits forgery.⁹

Signing petition in another's name.—Where A signed B's name to a petition presented by C to a Mamlatadar, requesting his summary assistance under Bombay Regulation XVII of 1827, for recovery of rents from B's tenants, it was held that even if A had no authority from B to sign his name, and even if A wished to deceive the Mamlatdar into the belief that it was B himself who had signed the petition, still if there had been no intention to defraud anybody, or if no wrongful gain or wrongful loss could have been caused to A or B, A's act did not constitute forgery. Avoidance of litigation is no wrongful loss to Government.¹⁰

Fabricating letter or certificate for service.—The accused, who was a copyist in the Sub-divisional Office at B, applied for a clerkship then vacant in that office. An endorsement on his application, recommending him for the post and purporting to have been made by the Sub-divisional Officer of B, was found to have been falsely made by the accused. The application was accompanied by a letter, also fabricated by the accused, purporting to be from the Collector to the Sub-divisional Officer at B, informing the latter officer that he, the Collector, had selected the accused for the vacant post. The Sub-divisional Officer, having some suspicions as to the genuineness of this letter, wrote a demi-official letter to the Collector to ascertain whether he had really written it; and this being posted in the local post office the accused fabricated a third document, purporting to be a letter from the Sub-divisional Officer to the post-

³ Po Shin, (1906) 4 L. B. R. 45, 6 Cr. L. J. 283.

⁴ Ram Sarup, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 236, [1918] AIR (P) 640.

⁵ Adaikalammai v. Raman, (1908) 32 Mad. 90.

⁶ Ambar Ali, (1929) 31 Cr. L. J. 564, [1929]

AIR (C) 539.

⁷ Appasami, (1889) 12 Mad. 151; Ashwani Kumar Gupta, [1937] 1 Cal. 71.

⁸ Gyanee Ram, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 78.

⁹ Ram Nath, (1924) 47 All. 268.

¹⁰ Bhavanishankar, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 3.

master asking him to stop the despatch of the demi-official letter. It was held that the accused had committed forgery with regard to the first two documents but with regard to the third, it could not be said that he falsely made it either dishonestly or fraudulently within the meaning of s. 464.¹¹ The accused applied to the Superintendent of Police at Poona for employment in the Police force. In support of his application he presented two certificates which he knew to be false. One of these certificates was a wholly fabricated document, whilst the other was altered by several additions made subsequently to the issue of the certificate. It was held that the accused was guilty of offences under ss. 463 and 471.¹² Where a private candidate for the Matriculation examination of the University of Madras, for the purpose of being admitted to the examination, forwarded to the Registrar of the University, as required by by-laws, a certificate that he was of good character and that he had completed his twentieth year which purported to be signed by the Head Master of a recognised school but was in fact not signed by him, but was signed by the candidate in his own writing, it was held that the certificate was a forged document within the meaning of ss. 467 and 464.¹³ A submitted to the proper authority an application for an appointment in the Land Records Department. This application contained false statements and to it was attached a forged certificate. It was held that A had attempted to obtain wrongful gain and that he had acted 'dishonestly'.¹⁴

English case.—The Corporation of the Trinity House were in the habit of examining persons voluntarily submitting to an examination, touching their nautical skill, and granting them certificates to act as masters. In order to enable persons to be examined and procure such certificates, it was necessary to produce to the examiners certificates of service, sobriety, and good conduct at sea, for not less than six years. The accused forged certificates for the purpose of inducing the examiners to pass him. It was held that he had committed forgery.¹⁵

Fabricating false kabin-nama.—Where a Mahomedan with the intention of making a claim to a woman's property alleged marriage with her and to support his claim executed a false kabin-nama in her favour, it was held that the document was not a false document.¹⁶

Fabricating receipt for debt written off as irrecoverable.—The accused, in order that he might obtain the annulment of an order adjudicating him an insolvent, and thereafter that he might be in a position to tender for municipal contracts, produced before the receiver in insolvency a document which purported to be a receipt from a creditor for payment of debt which the creditor had in fact written off as irrecoverable. It was held that in respect of the use of this receipt the accused was guilty under this section read with s. 471.¹⁷

Giving false name and address.—A person lawfully entitled to possess arms and ammunitions signed the prescribed certificate of purchase of the same in the name of another with an address not his own, and thereby deceived the gunsmith and the Government and defeated the object of the certificate. It was held that he was guilty of forgery. The act of the accused was not 'dishonest' but he acted 'fraudulently'.¹⁸

Fabricating order purporting to have issued from superior to subordinate officer.—One Piari, the wife of Amir, left her husband's house. Amir put in a petition at the police-station asking that a search might be made for the missing woman, and he also employed a pleader, one Ali Zohad, to assist him, in discovering the whereabouts of Piari. Ali Hassan, the son of Ali Zohad, and a clerk employed in the office of the District Superintendent of Police, forged two orders purporting to be orders of the District Superintendent of Police, the first intimating that the woman Piari was with one Sibni, the wife of Ghisu, weaver, and that the Sub-Inspector should be directed to hand her over to the petitioner (Amir), and the second directing the Sub-

¹¹ Abdul Hamid, (1886) 13 Cal. 349. A part of this decision is doubted in Rash Behari Das, (1908) 35 Cal. 450; Abdul Razak, (1894) P. R. No. 2 of 1895. See Fazal Din, (1906) P. R. No. 1 of 1907, where on similar facts the offence committed was held to be attempt to cheat.

¹² Khandus Singh, (1896) 22 Bom. 768; Moah's Case, (1858) Dears. & Bel. 550.

¹³ Kotamraju Venkatrayadu, (1905) 28 Mad.

90, F.B.; Chanan Singh, (1928) 10 Lah. 455.

¹⁴ Nga Ba Thein, (1922) 4 U. B. R. 174, 25 Cr. L. J. 129.

¹⁵ Toshack, (1849) 4 Cox 38.

¹⁶ Gunjar Mohammad v. Shuruz Ali, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 723.

¹⁷ Abdul Ghafur, (1920) 43 All. 225.

¹⁸ Causley, (1915) 48 Cal. 421.

Inspector of Kydganj to hand the woman over to the petitioner. It was held that in fabricating these two documents Ali Hassan had acted fraudulently and had committed forgery.¹⁹

Where a police constable's character and service roll in his custody was found to have been tampered with in this way, that a page, apparently containing unfavourable remarks to the constable, had been taken out, and a new page with favourable remarks, purporting to have been written and signed by various superior officers of police, had been inserted in its place, the intent being to favour the chances of his promotion; it was held that this interpolation amounted to forgery, but that, inasmuch as it was not proved that the constable himself prepared and inserted the false page, he was guilty of abetment only.²⁰

But a person consenting to act under a mookhteearnamah (power-of-attorney) and attaching his name in token of such consent, does not become a maker of the mookhteearnamah or a forger if it turns out to be forged.²¹

Second clause.—This clause requires dishonest or fraudulent concellation or alteration of a document in any material part without lawful authority after it has been made or executed by a person who may be living or dead.

The alteration must be in a material part of the document. Thus the interpolation of the name of a person as an attesting witness to a document not required by law to be attested subsequent to its execution and registration is not an alteration of the document in a material part.²²

Where the date in a bond was altered, even though the alteration was not required to bring the claim within limitation;²³ where the dates in a certified copy of a decree were altered in order to bring it within time for execution and this was done on an erroneous impression that the decree was time-barred,²⁴ and where a document was deliberately tampered with to support a just claim in Court and to counteract a fraud perpetrated by the opposite party,²⁵ this offence was held to have been committed. But where the vendees of a plot of land altered the number by which the land was described in the deed of sale, because such number was not the right number, and used it as evidence in a suit; the alteration of the deed was held not to amount to forgery. The Court said: "The identity of the property which the deed of sale purported to convey could not possibly be affected by the alteration of the figures, and the substitution of one number for the other could not possibly defraud any one or have the effect of causing wrongful loss or wrongful gain to any person. If the object of the alteration were to make it appear that the property intended to be conveyed by the sale-deed was other than that which it actually did purport to convey, the case would of course have been different. . . The identity of the property which the sale-deed purported to convey being unaffected, the alteration cannot fall under the definition of making a false document".¹ Similarly, where the date of a document, which would otherwise not have been presented for registration within time, was altered for the purpose of getting it registered, the offence committed was not forgery but fabricating false evidence because there was nothing to show that the act was done dishonestly or fraudulently as the bond was genuine and the accused did not intend to support a false claim by a false bond.² A promissory note expressed no time for payment, and while it was in the possession of the payee, the words "on demand" were added without the assent of the maker. In an action by the payee against the maker it was held that as the alteration only expressed the effect of the note as it originally stood, and was therefore immaterial, it did not affect the validity of the instrument.³

A Mukhtear who appeared for the plaintiff in an ejectment suit before a Rent Court, in open Court but without the permission of the Court, or even of the officer of the Court in whose custody the record was, took the plaint in the case and altered it so as to represent the plaintiff as claiming ejectment of the defendant from one field more in addition to those mentioned originally in the plaint. It did not appear whether ¹⁹ Ali Hasan, (1906) 28 All. 358.

²⁰ Muhammad Saeed Khan, (1898) 21 All.

113; Ramgopal Dhur, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

²¹ Burjo Barick, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 70.

²² Surendra Nath Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 75.

²³ Ram Narain, (1881) P. R. No. 14 of 1881.

²⁴ Baijnath Bhagat, (1940) 21 P. L. T. 206,

[1940] P. W. N. 474, 41 Cr. L. J. 427, [1940] AIR (P) 486.

²⁵ Gobinda Mal, (1895) P. R. No. 6 of 1895.

¹ Fateh, (1882) 5 All. 217, 220.

² Mir Ekrair Ali, (1880) 6 Cal. 482.

³ Aldous v. Cornwell, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 573.

the plaintiff was or was not entitled to eject the defendant from that field, but inasmuch as the alteration was made openly and the prosecution had not established that it was made fraudulently or dishonestly, it was held that upon those facts the Mukhtear could not properly be convicted of forgery.⁴

Third clause.—This clause requires that a person must fraudulently or dishonestly cause any person to sign, seal, execute, or alter a document knowing that such person could not by reason of (a) unsoundness of mind, or (b) intoxication, or (c) deception know the contents of the documents or the nature of the alteration.

Where the accused obtained a genuine signature upon a false document, by inserting the document in a heap of papers placed for signature before the person signing it, it was held that the accused had not committed an offence under this section, on the ground that no deception was practised on the person signing it to prevent him from knowing the nature of the document.⁵ It must be shown that the accused practised deception, so as to prevent a person from knowing the nature of the document, before the accused can be found guilty. Where the accused, a mohurrir, in a Registry Office, was charged with making false endorsements of registry on the back of certain deeds which endorsements were signed by the Registrar, it was held that, before he could be convicted of forgery, it must be shown that the Registrar, in consequence of deception practised upon him by the accused, did not know the contents of the document he was signing.⁶

4. Explanation 1.—There may be a sufficient falsity in a man's merely signing his own name, if he do this in order that it may be mistaken for the signature of another person of the same name. If a bill of exchange payable to A or order, set into the hand of another person of the same name as the payee, and such person, knowing that he was not the real person in whose favour it was drawn, indorse it, he is guilty of forgery.⁷

It is a false document if the offender makes it falsely in the name of any other person, although that name happens also to be the offender's own name. A man who makes a promissory note in his own name without any false description or addition and with an honest intention, if he afterwards uses or attempts to use the note, pretending that it is signed by another person of the same name, does not by this false representation make the promissory note 'a false document'. It was a genuine document where he signed it and does not become false by his subsequent use of it for the purpose of cheating. In such cases as those mentioned in illustrations (d) and (e) a man signs or executes a document in his own name which is false in a material part, and is calculated to induce another to give credit to it as genuine and authentic when it is false and deceptive.⁸

5. Explanation 2.—"As to the charge of forgery it is wholly immaterial whether the name forged is that of a fictitious person who never existed or of a real person. It is as much a forgery in the one case as in the other provided the fictitious name is assumed for the purpose of fraud in the particular case under trial... There is, however, no doubt that an intention to defraud is an essential ingredient; but it is sufficient to show that there was an intention to defraud generally. Whether there was an intention to defraud or not is a question of fact to be determined with reference to the special circumstances of each case."⁹ A document will be a forgery even if it is a false document in the name of a fictitious or non-existent person. The definition of "person" in s. 11 is not exhaustive and must be taken to include artificial or juridical persons as well. An idol is a juridical person capable of owning property and therefore a "person" as defined in the Penal Code. The fact that the forged signature in a document is that of an idol would not make it any the less a forged document.¹⁰

As to how far personating the true man or assuming a fictitious character will affect this offence, the following principles, as laid down in Dunn's case,¹¹ are briefly summarised by East.¹² "First that if a person give a note or other security as his

⁴ Bisheshar Dayal, (1905) 25 A. W. N. 93, 2 Cr. L. J. 234.

⁵ Nujeebutoollah, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 20.

⁶ Dwarkanath Ghose, (1878) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

⁷ Mead v. Young, (1790) 4 T. R. 28.

⁸ M. & M. 415.

⁹ Per Muttusami Ayyar and Parker, JJ., in Pera Raju, (1889) 13 Mad. 27, 31; Sheefait Ally, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 61, 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 12.

¹⁰ Vadivelu Arsuthiyar, [1944] Mad. 685.

¹¹ (1765) 1 Leach 57, 59.

¹² Pleas of the Crown, Vol. II, p. 961.

own note or security, and the credit thereupon be personal to himself without any relation to another, his signing such a note with a fictitious name may indeed be a cheat, but will not amount to forgery: for in that case it is really the instrument of the party whose act it purports to be, and the creditor had no other security in view. But secondly, that if a note be given in the name of another person either really existing or represented so to be, and in that light it obtain a superior credit, or induce a trust which would not have been given to the party himself, it is then a false instrument, and punishable as forgery. Thirdly, that the law would be the same, though the note or security were thus falsely subscribed in the presence of him who lent his money upon it, if the impostor and the party whose name is made use of were both strangers to him; for then he could not know that such impostor was not really the person whose name he assumed, and therefore the other would be equally deceived." The first of these propositions was followed in a case where the accused, Robert Martin, in payment for a pony and cart purchased by him from the prosecutor, drew a cheque in the name of William Martin in the presence of the prosecutor upon a bank at which he, the accused, had no account, and gave it to the prosecutor as his own cheque drawn in his own name.¹³ But if a person authorize another to sign a note in his name, dated at a particular place, and made payable at a banker's; and the person, in whose name it is drawn, represent it to be the name of another person, with intent to defraud, and no such person as the note and the representation import exist, this is forgery.¹⁴ Signing a bill in an assumed name is a forgery, if the name was assumed to defraud the person to whom such bill is given, though such person would equally have taken the bill had the accused used his real name.¹⁵

Cases.—Document in name of fictitious person.—The accused was alleged by the prosecution to have advertised that a work on English idioms by Robert S. Wilson, M.A., was ready, stating that the price was Rs. 2-4 and that intending purchasers might remit it by money order to Robert S. Wilson, Council House Street, Calcutta: to have then requested the postal authorities at Calcutta by a letter signed Robert S. Wilson, to have the money orders redirected to him as above at Rajam: to have similarly requested the post-master at Rajam to pay the money orders to his clerk, Seshgiri Rau: to have subsequently received the value of money orders made out in favour of Robert S. Wilson from the post-master at Rajam signing receipts as Seshgiri Rau: Robert S. Wilson and Seshgiri Rau were alleged to be fictitious persons, and it was also alleged that the accused had no book on English idioms ready to be despatched to purchasers: it was held that the above allegations supported charges of cheating and forgery.¹⁶ Where certain persons signed a bail bond with names which were not their own, it was held that the persons were not guilty of an offence under this section as they had before signing the bond informed the Magistrate that their names were the names they afterwards signed to the bail bond and that, therefore, they could not be held to have intended to cause the Magistrate to believe that the bail bond was signed by any person real or fictitious other than the accused.¹⁷

Document made to conceal previous dishonest, or fraudulent, or negligent act.—The Calcutta High Court has laid down that if the intention with which a false document is made is to conceal a fraudulent or dishonest act which has been previously committed, that intention cannot be other than an intention to commit fraud; and if the intention is to commit fraud, the making of a false document with that intention will come within the definition of forgery.¹⁸ It has also held that the making of false entries in a book or register by any person in order to conceal a previous fraudulent or dishonest act falls within the purview of s. 477A inasmuch as the intention is to defraud.¹⁹ In a subsequent case, however, the same Court held that the alteration of accounts so as to show the receipt of a sum of money criminally misappropriated and in order to remove evidence of such misappropriation was not an offence either under s. 465 or s. 477A, there having been no intention to commit fraud. The cases of Lolit Mohan Sarkar and Rash Behari Das were distinguished on the ground that ¹³ Martin, (1879) 5 Q. B. D. 84.

¹⁴ Parker's Case, (1796) 2 Leach 775, 2 East P. C. 963, 965.

¹⁵ Francis's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 209; Peacock's Case, (1814) Russ. & Ry. 278; Whiley's Case, (1805) Russ. & Ry. 90; Bontien's Case, (1813) Russ. & Ry. 260.

¹⁶ Pera Raju, (1889) 13 Mad. 27.

¹⁷ Venkaraju Venkatasami, [1910] M. W. N.

232, 11 C. L. J. 440.

¹⁸ Lolit Mohan Sarkar, (1894) 22 Cal. 313, 321; W. C. Das, (1909) U. B. R. (P. C.) 29 11 Cr. L. J. 185.

¹⁹ Rash Behari Das, (1908) 35 Cal. 450, dissenting from Jivanand, (1882) 5 All. 221, Girdhari Lal, (1886) 8 All. 653, and Abdul Hamid, (1886) 13 Cal. 349, 351.

the entry in this case showed that the accused was liable and it was a statement of the true position of affairs, whereas in those cases the accounts were framed in such a way as to conceal liability and to present an untrue state of affairs.²⁰

The Madras High Court is of the same opinion. It has held that a debtor who forges a release to screen himself from liability to pay the debt is guilty of forgery, because he intended by the forgery to cover a dishonest purpose.²¹ Where a process-server prepared and filed into Court a false attakshi with forged signatures with a view to defraud a District Munsiff into excusing his delay in returning processes and his absence from duty for a period of seven days, it was held that he was guilty of offences under ss. 468 and 471.²²

The Bombay High Court has also held, adopting the Calcutta view, that a man who deliberately makes a false document with false signatures in order to shield and conceal an already perpetrated fraud is himself acting with intent to commit fraud. It is a fraud to take deliberate measures in order to prevent persons already defrauded from ascertaining the fraud practised on them and thus to secure the culprit who practised the fraud in the illicit gains which he secured by the fraud. In this case a village Kulkarni misappropriated certain sums which the rayats had paid to him for irrigation cesses. To prevent the rayats from complaining and to protect the fraud, he forged with the help of the accused certain challans showing that the sums had been paid over to the Government Treasury. The accused was paid Rs. 25 for the work. He was, on these facts, charged with the offence of forgery. The Sessions Judge acquitted him on the ground that the forgery was committed to conceal the fraud which had already been fully committed, whereas s. 468 required that forgery should be "with intent to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed". It was held, setting aside the order of acquittal, that the offence of forgery was complete although it was effected to conceal a fraudulent or dishonest act previously committed.²³

A falsification of a record made in order to conceal a previous act of negligence, not amounting to fraud, does not amount to forgery.²⁴

The Allahabad High Court has ruled that falsification of records made in order to conceal previous acts of fraud,²⁵ or negligence,¹ do not amount to forgery as no one would be defrauded or injured by them. Following these decisions it has decided that a clerk who, after committing criminal breach of trust, makes false entries in an account book, with the intention of concealing such offence, does not commit forgery.² Similarly, where a public servant, in charge as such of certain documents, having been required to produce them, and being unable to do so, fabricated and produced similar documents, with the intention of screening himself from punishment, it was held that such fabricated documents, not having been made with the intent specified in s. 468, were not forgeries.³ With respect to a charge under s. 465 the accused's immediate and more probable intention, and not his remoter and less probable intention should be attributed to him. Where the intention is to conceal a fraud which has been previously committed, it is not the kind of intention which that section refers to.⁴ Where the accused in order to save himself from the consequences of misappropriations made by him, made false entries in the accounts, it was held that he could not be convicted of forgery.⁵ Latterly the Allahabad High Court has laid down that making a false document with a view to prevent persons already defrauded from ascertaining that misappropriations had been committed, and thus to enable the person who committed the misappropriations to retain the wrongful gain which he had secured, amounts to the commission of a fraud and brings the case under s. 477A. If the intention with which a false document is made is to conceal a fraudulent or dishonest act which had been previously committed, the intention cannot be other than an intention to defraud. The concealment of an already committed fraud is a fraud. A document that is made with the intention of concealing a dishonest act already committed is made ²⁰ Jyotish Chandra Mukerjee, (1909) 36 Cal. 955.

²¹ Sabapati, (1888) 11 Mad. 411.

²² Kamatichinatha Pillai, (1919) 42 Mad. 558.

²³ Balkrishna Vaman, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 708, 37 Bom. 666.

²⁴ Shankar, (1880) 4 Bom. 657.

²⁵ Jageshur Pershad, (1873) 6 N. W. P. 56.

¹ Lal Gumul, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 11.

² Jivanand, (1882) 5 All. 221.

³ Mazhar Hussain, (1888) 5 All. 585.

⁴ Girdhari Lal, (1886) 8 All. 658.

⁵ Shuja-ud-din Ahmad, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 662, 23 Cr. L. J. 610, [1922] AIR (A) 485.

"dishonestly" within the meaning of s. 24, read with s. 23 as it facilitates the retention of the wrongful gain already made.⁶

The Rangoon High Court has adopted the view of the Madras High Court. Where a Bench Clerk received a sum of money paid in as fine and misappropriated it, and made a false receipt to cover up such misappropriation, it was held that the offence came under the provisions of ss. 467 and 471.⁷

Joint act.—If several persons combine to forge an instrument, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals.⁸ Each is a principal, though he does not know by whom the other parts are executed, and though it is finished by one alone, in the absence of others.⁹ Thus, the makers of the paper and plate respectively for the purpose of forging a note, afterwards filled up by a third person, are principals in the forgery with that person.¹⁰

Abetment.—A person taking an active part in the preparation of a document, but no part in the forgery of the name of the executant, does not commit forgery, but simply abets the offence.¹¹ To prepare in conjunction with others a copy of an intended false document, and to buy a stamped paper for the purpose of writing such false document, and to ask for information as to a fact to be inserted in such false document do not constitute forgery, or an attempt to commit it, but would amount to abetment.¹²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, signed, sealed, or executed the document, or any part of it, or made a mark denoting execution.

(2) That he did as in (1) with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document was made, signed, sealed, or executed by, or by the authority of, another person; or (2) that it was executed at a particular time.

(3) That such other person did not so execute, or did not authorize such execution, or that such execution was not at that particular time.

(4) That the accused knew that it was not so executed, either by such person, or by the authority of such person, or at that time.¹³

(5) That he did as in (1) and (2) dishonestly or fraudulently, or with intent (a) to cause damage or injury, or (b) to support any claim or title, or (c) to cause a person to part with property, or (d) to cause any person to enter into any express or implied contract, or (e) to commit a fraud, or that a fraud might be committed.

Or prove (1) the making or executing of the document by some one.

(2) That the accused afterwards altered such document by cancellation or otherwise.

(3) That such alteration was in a material part of the document.

(4) That the accused had no lawful authority to make such alteration.

(5) That he did so dishonestly, or fraudulently, or with intent, etc., as in (5) above.

Or prove (1) that the accused caused a person to sign, seal, execute, or alter the document.

(2) That such person when doing as in (1) was ignorant of the contents of the document, or of the nature of the alteration.

(3) That such ignorance was due to (a) unsoundness of mind, or (b) intoxication, or (c) a deception practised upon him.

(4) That the accused knew of such ignorance, and the reason thereof.

(5) That he, when causing such person to sign, etc., acted dishonestly or fraudulently, or with intent, etc., as in (5) above.

Where it is alleged on behalf of the prosecution that a deed is forged, it is not sufficient for the prosecution to prove that it is improbable that the deed is genuine, but it must prove for a certainty that the deed is forged.¹⁴

⁶ Ragho Ram, (1933) 55 All. 783; Shuja-ud-din Ahmad, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 662, 23 Cr. L. J. 610, [1922] AIR (A) 435, Jivanand, (1882) 5 All. 221, and Girdhari Lal, (1886) 8 All. 653, dissented from.

⁷ Nga Ba Sein, (1924) 3 B. L. J. 113, 25 Cr. L. J. 1378, [1924] AIR (R) 331.

⁸ Bingley's Case, (1821) Russ. & Ry. 446.

⁹ Kirkwood's Case, (1831) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 304.

¹⁰ Dade's Case, (1831) 1 Mood. Cr. C. 307.

¹¹ Kashi Nath Naek, (1897) 25 Cal. 207.

¹² Padala Venkatasami, (1881) 3 Mad. 4.

¹³ Ramgopal Dhur, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

¹⁴ Bayaji Natha, (1897) Unrep. Cr. C. 917.

Complaint.—A complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence of forgery is committed or of the Court to which such Court is subordinate is necessary.¹⁵ This provision has no application when the document which is alleged to be forged is produced at the trial of the person alleged to have forged it, not having been produced in any independent proceeding.¹⁶

Expert's opinion as to handwriting.—The Court is competent to use its own eyes for the purpose of deciding whether certain handwritings placed before it are similar or not and the opinion of an expert is only a piece of evidence whereas the opinion of the Judge is the decision in the case.¹⁷ The opinion of the expert should be substantially corroborated before making it the basis of a conviction.¹⁸ To base a conviction upon the opinion of an expert in handwriting is, as a general rule, very unsafe. Where it was sought to convict a clerk, employed in an office, of forgery, upon the supposed similarity between his handwriting and that of some fragmentary pieces of writing upon which the charge was based, it was held that the prosecution should make an attempt to show that the accused was the only man in the office who could have written the forged document.¹⁹ It is dangerous to come to a conclusion on the question of forgery on a mere comparison of the writing in a disputed document with the writings in admitted documents. One of the most useful tests in considering a case of forgery is to see whether a clear dissimilarity of habit can be traced through the documents tendered. If there exists such a dissimilarity, then it is difficult to say that the same person wrote them all. The judicial mind has constantly taken advantage of the characteristic peculiarities of individuals when a question has been raised whether their writings have been forged, such peculiarities being most commonly manifested in the formation of an idea or in the mode of spelling particular words.²⁰

A conviction for forgery can seldom be based solely on non-resemblance of handwriting.²¹ A person is not entitled to give evidence as an expert in handwriting if his only knowledge on the subject is acquired in the course of a case.²²

Expert's opinion as to finger, thumb, palm, or foot impression.—Evidence of comparison of handwriting is often extremely dangerous. Of all methods of proving a document that of comparison of handwriting by an inexperienced witness is the most unsatisfactory.²³ A man should not ordinarily be convicted of the offence of forgery solely upon the evidence of a finger-print expert relating to similarity of thumb-impression;²⁴ but it is permissible to base a conviction on comparison of thumb-impressions of the accused with his thumb-impression on the document in question.²⁵ The comparison of thumb-impressions has become an exact science and great weight can be attached to the evidence of an expert.¹ The opinion of an expert as to the identity of a palm impression is admissible in evidence.² The expert's opinion must not be taken for granted but the Court must examine the evidence in order to satisfy itself that there can be no mistake, and the responsibility is all the greater when there is no other evidence to corroborate the expert.³ The Court must satisfy itself as to the value of the evidence of a finger print expert in the same way as it must satisfy itself of the value of other evidence. The evidence of a finger print expert need not be corroborated but the Court must be careful not to delegate its authority to a third party.⁴ When a finger print expert tells the Court that it is impossible to find so many cha-

¹⁵ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195 (1) (c).

¹⁶ Sanjiv Ratnappa, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 1000, 56 Bom. 488.

¹⁷ Uohab Santara, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 74.

¹⁸ Girdhari Lal, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 174, 26 Cr. L. J. 929, [1925] AIR (O) 413; Prabh Dial, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 697, 33 Cr. L. J. 593.

¹⁹ Srikant, (1904) 2 A. L. J. R. 444, 2 Cr. L. J. 353. See Venkata Row, (1911) 36 Mad. 159.

²⁰ Bhoru Lal Chodhury v. Mr. W. A. Vincent, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 653; Mohammad Kabir Uddin, (1919) 20 Cr. L. J. 534; Uohab Sanatra, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 74.

²¹ Sagarmal Agarwalla, (1924) 40 C. L. J. 135, 28 C. W. N. 947, 25 Cr. L. J. 1217, [1934] AIR (C) 960.

²² Rickard, (1918) 26 Cox 318.

²³ Suresh Chandra Banerjee, (1927) 47 C. L. J. 471, 476, 29 Cr. L. J. 705; [1928] AIR (C)

L. C.—73

309.

²⁴ Jassu Ram, (1923) 4 Lah. 246; Jitendra Nath Gupta, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 818, [1937] AIR (C) 99.

²⁵ Public Prosecutor v. Kandasami Thevan, (1923) 50 Mad. 402, dissenting from Bazari Hajam, (1921) 1 Pat. 242, which laid down that thumb-impression of an accused person should not be taken during trial.

¹ Dileddad, (1928) 30 Cr. L. J. 52.

² Babulal Behari, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 321, 52 Bom. 223.

³ Harendra Nath Sen, (1931) 54 C. L. J. 107, 35 C. W. N. 883, 3 Cr. L. J. 1001, [1931] AIR (C) 441; Saqilain Ahmad, [1936] A. L. J. R. 317, 37 Cr. L. J. 263, [1936] AIR (A) 165.

⁴ Fakir Mahomed, (1935) 38 Bom. L. R. 160, 60 Bom. 187.

racteristics identical in the finger prints of two persons and when that statement entirely agrees with what one has read on the subject in scientific books, the Court need not hesitate in accepting the opinion.⁵

Though the science, if it could be so called, of footprints has not yet progressed very far, evidence of similarity of the impressions of the foot, shod or unshod, is admitted by the Courts and such evidence comes under the head of circumstantial evidence.⁶ Evidence of a person capable of distinguishing and identifying foot-prints is admissible.⁷ Such evidence is not sufficient to bring home the offence to the accused, in the absence of further knowledge regarding differences between one foot and another.⁸

In order to secure evidentiary value to footmarks, it is not enough to show that the footmarks tally with the shoes of the accused. The evidence must go further and show that the marks have some peculiarity which is found in the shoes of the accused and will not be found in most other shoes.⁹

An expert's opinion is valuable but it must be supported by statements of fact, the accuracy or otherwise of which can be verified by the Judge.¹⁰

Non-admissibility of civil judgment in criminal trial.—In a suit by A against the obligors of a bond, the Court held, for the reasons stated in its judgment, that the signatures of the obligors were not genuine, and directed the prosecution of A on a charge of forgery. On the trial of A before a jury, this judgment of the civil Court was put in evidence on behalf of the prosecution, and its contents commented on by the Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury. It was held that the judgment could not be admitted.¹¹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Complaint.—No Court shall take cognizance of any offence described in s. 463 when such offence is alleged to have been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding, except on the complaint in writing of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.¹² If the prosecution is confined to offences connected with the document committed prior to its production in Court, such prosecution is within the law and requires no sanction.¹³ The offences connected with forgery, which are referred to in s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, are offences committed by parties to proceedings. That a witness does not fall within this description is laid down by the Allahabad High Court,¹⁴ but that he does come under it is held by the Bombay High Court.¹⁵

A Sub-Registrar is not a Court, and, therefore, his sanction is not necessary for a prosecution for forgery in respect of a forged document presented for registration in his office.¹⁶ But the Income-tax Collector is a Court, and his sanction is necessary.¹⁷

Where it is alleged that the Subordinate Judge, before whom a suit was proceeding, has himself abetted an offence under s. 193 and has also committed offences under ss. 465 and 466, no complaint by the Court is necessary so far as offences under ss. 465 and 466 are concerned as he could not be said to be a party to the proceedings before the Court.¹⁸

Autrefois acquit.—The accused was charged with having forged leases A and B bearing the same date and adduced in evidence by him in the same suit. No mention

⁵ Fakir Mahomed, (1935) 38 Bom. L. R. 160, 60 Bom. 187.

⁶ Myliwami, [1938] Mad. 262.

⁷ Sidik Soomar, [1941] Kar. 525.

⁸ Oomayun, [1942] M. W. N. 293, (1941) 55 L. W. 231 (1), 43 Cr. L. J. 702, [1942] AIR (M) 452 (2).

⁹ Bhika Gober, (1943) 45 Bom. L. R. 884, 45 Cr. L. J. 221, [1943] AIR (B) 458.

¹⁰ Baliya Pullayya, [1940] M. W. N. 761, (1939) 52 L. W. 198, 42 Cr. L. J. 316, [1941] AIR (M) 88.

¹¹ Gogun Chunder Ghose, (1880) 6 Cal. 247.

¹² Section 195 (1) (c), Criminal Procedure Code. See Noor Mahomed v. Kaikhosru, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 268; Gulabchand Rupji, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1039, 49 Bom. 799.

¹³ Lalta Prasad, (1912) 34 All. 654. A District Judge is not entitled to complain in respect of the user of a forged document in the Court of an Additional District Judge: Hari Das Shahu v. Dulal Chandra Sadhukhan, [1942] 2 Cal. 456.

¹⁴ Mathura Das, (1892) 16 All. 80, 83.

¹⁵ Devji valad Bhavani, (1893) 18 Bom. 581; Bhau Vyankatesh, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 607, 49 Bom. 608.

¹⁶ Tulja, (1887) 12 Bom. 36.

¹⁷ Punamchand Maneklal, (1914) 38 Bom. 642, 16 Bom. L. R. 446, F.B., overruling Katidas Rewadas, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 477, 4 Cr. L. J. 34. See also Nataraja Iyer, (1912) 36 Mad. 72.

¹⁸ Behari Lal v. Abdul Qadir Hamyari, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 843, [1940] AIR (L) 292.

of any charge as to lease B was made in the order of commitment, and the accused having been acquitted on an indictment for forging lease A, it was held that the plea of autrefois acquit was inadmissible on a subsequent trial of the accused for forging lease B.¹⁹

Joint trial.—The joint trial of the scribe and attesting witnesses of an alleged forged document for giving false evidence in support of that document is illegal, and vitiates the trial.²⁰

Where more persons than one are charged with forging and using as genuine certain letters and cheques, and cheating a bank by cashing those cheques and with conspiracy in committing these offences, they can be tried at one trial for all the offences, inasmuch as the charges are based on a series of acts alleged to have been committed by the accused with one continuous purpose and design and the acts are also so connected together in point of time that they really form one transaction.²¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, forged a certain document, to wit——(describe it), with intent to cause damage or injury to AB, [or to support a certain claim or title, to wit——; or to cause AB to part with certain property, to wit——; or to enter into a certain contract with AB with regard to (mention the object); or with intent to commit fraud (state the fraud)]; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 465 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

466. Whoever forges a document,¹ purporting to be a record or proceeding of or in a Court of Justice,² or a register of birth, baptism, marriage³ or burial, or a register kept by a public servant as such, or a certificate or document purporting to be made by a public servant⁴ in his official capacity, or an authority to institute or defend a suit, or to take any proceedings therein, or to confess judgment, or a power of attorney, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

To bring the act of the accused under this section or s. 471 the elements of fraud or dishonesty, as explained in the Code,²² must be present in his mind.

Scope.—This section “is not intended to apply to cases where a public officer, or a person acting for a public officer, whose duty it is to make entries in a public book, knowingly makes a false entry, but to cases where a certificate or other document is forged by some unauthorized person with a view to make it appear that it was duly issued by a public officer. As, for instance, where a man forges a marriage-certificate duly issued by the officer who ought to have issued it”.²³ But the former Chief Court of the Punjab held that whoever, whether a public servant or a private individual, so tampers with a public register, as to commit forgery, is punishable under this section.²⁴ Intent to defraud is, however, essential.²⁵

1. ‘Document’.—See s. 29, supra.

2. ‘Court of Justice’.—See s. 20, supra. If a Judge fabricates any record in a pending case, he commits an offence under this section.¹ Where an accused in order that he might successfully practise a fraud upon the Court persuades or bribes some ¹⁹ Dwarkanath Dutt, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 15, F.B.

²⁰ Gunwant, (1916) 13 N. L. R. 35, 18 Cr. L. J. 339.

²¹ Ramrao Burde, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 598, 56 Bom. 304.

²² Reithy, (1901) 28 Cal. 434.

²³ Per Garth, C.J., in Juggun Lall, (1880) 7 C. L. R. 356, 361.

²⁴ Mul Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 13 of 1895.

²⁵ Hari Chand, (1908) 5 P. L. R. 15, 1 Cr. L. J. 41.

¹ Sivaramakrishna Ayyar v. Seshappa Naidu, (1928) 52 Mad. 347.

clerk in the office of the Munsif to permit him to have access to the record and makes an interpolation in the list of documents filed and inserts a document in the record he is guilty under this section.²

3. 'Register of...marriage'.—This section applies to the forging of a document purporting to be a Register of marriage, although the Register is a private one and not one kept by the public servant as such, e.g. a Register of Marriages of Mahomedans kept by a Kazi.³

4. 'Document purporting to be made by a public servant'.—A document is a document purporting to be made by a public servant, notwithstanding the illegibility of the seal and signature on it, if it appears on the face of it to have come from a public servant.⁴

'Public servant'.—See s. 21, supra.

Copy.—Where a person who is bound to give a true copy of any document gives a true copy of such document, he cannot be legally convicted of the offence of forgery punishable under this section, merely because the original of which he gives a true copy contains a statement which is false, and is known or believed by him to be such.⁵

CASES.

Fraudulent intent of forger.—A person who, at the request of another sent to trap him, fabricates a document purporting to be a notice under the seal and signature of a Deputy Collector, he being informed that the notice was required by such other person for the purpose of being used in a pending suit (there being, however, in reality no such suit in existence) is guilty of forgery, it not being necessary that the intention of fraudulently using the document should exist in the mind of any other person than the person fabricating the document.⁶

Alteration in certificate.—The alteration of name and age in an educational certificate and the use thereof by the person altering to obtain an official appointment, which the officer appointing would have withheld if he had known of the alterations, constitute, in the absence of satisfactory explanation, offences under ss. 466 and 471.⁷

Alteration in Government correspondence.—A Government tumar (correspondence), in which accused Nos. 2 and 3 were interested, was kept by a Mamlatdar at the house of his clerk. During the absence of the clerk from his house, accused No. 1, another clerk in the Mamlatdar's office, removed the tumar without anybody's consent. In the company of accused Nos. 2 and 3 he went with it to a neighbouring town to show it to the pleader of accused Nos. 2 and 3 in connection with some proceeding. Accused No. 1 left the tumar with the pleader and went away. Later he brought the tumar back and stealthily replaced it from where it was taken. It was afterwards discovered that some papers had disappeared from the tumar, whilst others had either been mutilated or altered. It was held that accused No. 1 was guilty of theft as he had removed the tumar without the consent of its custodian and accused Nos. 2 and 3 were guilty of abetment of theft; and that accused Nos. 2 and 3 were also guilty of offences under this section and s. 193, in respect of the alteration of the document.⁸

Alteration in register.—Certain goods were consigned to the complainant and on arrival of the goods at their destination the complainant was required by the station-master to unload the goods within a certain period. After the complainant had unloaded the goods, the accused, a goods clerk, entered the time of the unloading in the register. The station-master subsequently discovered that in unloading the goods the complainant had blocked the line on which the wagon was standing and called upon the complainant to clear the line. After the line had been cleared the station-master directed the accused to alter the time of the unloading of the goods from that previously entered in the register to that at which the line had been cleared. It was

² Mahesh Chandra Prasad, (1942) 22 Pat. 292.

³ Bacha Miah, (1892) 1 Weir 541. A person who personates another before a Registrar of Marriages and signs a document of divorce in the name of that other person is guilty of an offence under this section: Yasin Sheikh, (1904) 9 C. W. N. 69, 2 Cr. L. J. 8.

⁴ Prosunno Bose, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 96.

⁵ Marigawada, (1891) Cr. R. No. 42 of 1891, Unrep. Cr. C. 583.

⁶ Haradhan Maiti, (1887) 14 Cal. 513, F.B.

⁷ Nga Pye, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 316, 1 Cr. L. J. 1124.

⁸ Vallabhram Ganpatram, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1391, 27 Cr. L. J. 689, [1926] AIR (B) 122.

held that even if the station-master's view as to the correct time when the goods had been unloaded was erroneous, the accused was not guilty of this offence.⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused forged the document.¹⁰

(2) That the document forged is one of the kinds specified in this section.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

A person can be convicted of abetment of forgery committed by a person or persons unknown.¹¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, forged a certain document, to wit—, which purported to be a record (or proceeding of a Court of Justice, etc.), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 466 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

467. Whoever forges a document¹ which purports to be a valuable security,² or a will,³ or an authority to adopt a son, or which purports to give authority to any person to make or transfer any valuable security, or to receive the principal, interest or dividends thereon, or to receive or deliver any money, moveable property,⁴ or valuable security, or any document purporting to be an acquittance or receipt acknowledging the payment of money, or an acquittance or receipt for the delivery of any moveable property or valuable security, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The offence described in this section is an aggravated form of the offence dealt with in s. 466. The section provides punishment for forgery not only of a document purporting to be a valuable security but also of any document which purports to give authority to any person "to receive or deliver any money."¹²

To support a conviction under this section, the forged document must be one of those mentioned in the text.¹³ It must be shown that the document is a false document within the meaning of s. 464, and that it was forged by the accused with some intent mentioned in s. 463. It is not sufficient that some possible intent may be inferred from the facts but it is necessary that such intent should be established by evidence.¹⁴ A mere fraudulent preparation of a deed of sale, with intent to cause injury to certain persons, does not amount to forgery of a valuable security, unless that document be a false document.¹⁵

1. 'Forges a document'.—See s. 29, supra, as to 'document'. The fraudulent alteration of a collectorate return is forgery of a document within the meaning of this section.¹⁶ Forgery of a document, even if the person for whom it is forged has no intention of using it, is an offence under this section.¹⁷ Before the writer of a forged receipt can be convicted it must be shown that he was present at the execution

⁹ Gulab Singh, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 1233, [1926] AIR (A) 751.

¹⁰ Vide s. 465, sup.

¹¹ Thakur Shah, (1943) 70 I. A. 196, 46 Bom. L. R. 514.

¹² Sachchidanand Prasad, (1933) 14 P. L. T. 580, 34 Cr. L. J. 892, [1933] AIR (P) 488.

¹³ (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9.

¹⁴ Kailas Chandra Das, (1902) 6 C. W. N.

382, not followed in Somasundram Pillay, (1909) 10 Cr. L. J. 367, the facts of which are stated under s. 474, infra.

¹⁵ (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 2.

¹⁶ Hurish Chunder Bose, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 22.

¹⁷ Surat Bahadur alias Bharihi, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 362, 25 Cr. L. J. 1162.

of the receipt or that he helped any person to use it.¹⁸ Where C, a witness to a forged will, in addition to his signature had written an attestation clause to the effect that he had put his signature to the will at the instance of the alleged testator, it was held that, having regard to the definition of 'document,' this attestation was not only a part of the document purporting to record the attested will, but was in itself also a document.¹⁹ Where the accused, who was a paid supervisor of a society connected with the co-operative movement, debited Rs. 2 as the pay of a sweeper woman, took the thumb impression of his nephew against the debit entry, certified the thumb impression to be that of the sweeper woman, and appropriated the amount to himself, it was held that the accused had committed the offence of forgery under this section as he had caused to be affixed to the debit entry the thumb impression of his nephew.²⁰

2. 'Valuable security'.—See s. 30, supra. An unregistered document, though not a valuable security until the registration is completed, still purports to be a valuable security within the meaning of this section.²¹ Similarly, two documents with forged signatures, one of which was intended to be filled up as a promissory note and the other as a receipt, but the spaces for particulars of the amount, the name of the person in whose favour the documents were executed, the date and place of execution, and the rate of interest were not filled in, were held to be valuable security.²² But a sanad conferring a title of dignity on a person is not a valuable security.²³ A blank paper, or a bond barred by limitation, is not a document of the kind described in this section.²⁴ But forgery may be committed of a promissory note on an unstamped paper even though a statute prohibits the stamp to be annexed afterwards,²⁵ of a hundi,¹ or of a kabuliyat.² It is no objection to the charge of forgery that the instrument is not available by reason of some collateral objection not appearing upon the face of it.³ The accused was found in possession of two documents; one was a registered conveyance in respect of certain lands from A to the wife of the accused; the second purported to be a conveyance in respect of the same lands from the same vendor to the accused himself, but this was not registered. The accused requested a school boy to have the registration endorsement from the former copied on to the latter and was thereupon arrested and charged under this section read with s. 116 and under s. 474. At the trial A deposed that he never executed the second conveyance but as regards the first he said that he had executed it in favour of the accused's wife but that the accused was in possession of the lands and had also paid him the consideration money. The High Court held that as it was not shown that the second document was made with any of the intents mentioned in s. 463 or that it was intended to be fraudulently or dishonestly used, a conviction under any of the above sections was not maintainable.⁴ Accused No. 1 was the creditor of a person for Rs. 38. To pay off his debt, the debtor got out the sum from his father by a postal money order drawn in his name. When the money order arrived at the place, accused No. 1 received the money direct from the postman and had the acknowledgment signed by accused No. 2 under the representation that accused No. 2 was the payee. Neither accused informed the debtor of the money order or the receipt of the money. It was held that the accused were guilty of forging a valuable security, e.g. the money order acknowledgment, an offence punishable under this section.⁵ Where the accused fraudulently brought into existence a registered sale-deed, said to have been executed by the widow of B, intending to deceive and also to injure the reversioners of B, it was held that they were guilty under this section and also s. 82 of the Registration Act.⁶ If an accused having no title to the property represents himself as the person who is the real owner, receives the consideration and transfers the same by himself executing a sale-deed and the real owner then sues for a declaration that the transaction was a fraud, the liability of the accused under this sec-

¹⁸ Mazher Ahmed, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1253, [1924] AIR (C) 192.

¹⁹ Chatru Malik, (1928) 10 Lah. 265.

²⁰ Keshavrao, (1934) 36 Bom. L. R. 1120, 36 Cr. L. J. 522, [1935] AIR (B) 30.

²¹ Kashi Nath Naek, (1897) 25 Cal. 207; Ramasami, (1888) 12 Ma. 148; Govind Ramappa, (1899) Cr. R. No. 25 of 1899, Unrep. Cr. C. 467.

²² Jawahir Thakur, (116) 38 All. 430.

²³ Jan Mahomed, (1884) 10 Cal. 534.

²⁴ Rughoonundur Pottanuvees, (1871) 15 W.

R. (Cr.) 19.

²⁵ Morton's Case, (1795) 2 East P. C. 955.

¹ Lekhraj, (1910) P. R. No. 31 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 639.

² Ismail Panju, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 1115, [1925] AIR (N) 337.

³ M'Intosh's Case, (1800) 2 East P. C. 956, 2 Leach 883.

⁴ Kailas Chandra Das, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 382.

⁵ Jogidas Babu, (1921) 24 Bom. L. R. 99, 23 Cr. L. J. 264, [1922] AIR (B) 82.

⁶ Ganga Dibya, (1942) 22 Pat. 95.

tion is not avoided even on the assumption that the person to whom representation was made knew that the accused was not the person he represented himself to be since he is hit by all the ingredients of the offence though it was clear in the case in question that he had no such knowledge.⁷

Material alteration of incomplete document.—An agreement in writing, which purported to be entered into between five persons, was signed by only two of them; it was altered by the addition of some material terms by the accused who was one of the two executants without the consent or knowledge of the other executant and was not signed by the other parties to the agreement. The accused was in possession of the instrument which was altered by him. It was held that the accused was guilty of the offence of forgery of a valuable security under s. 467, or of being in possession of a forged document under s. 474.⁸

3. 'Will'.—See s. 31, supra.

4. 'Moveable property'.—See s. 22, supra. The forging of a document which purports on the face of it to be a copy only, and which, even if a genuine copy, would not authorize the delivery of moveable property, is not punishable under this section.⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused committed forgery.¹⁰

(2) That the document forged is one of the kinds mentioned in this section.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

But when the valuable security is a promissory note of the Central Government—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—The word 'forgery' is used as a general term in s. 463, and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code so as to embrace all the species of forgery afterwards provided for as to punishment and this includes a case falling under this section.¹¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, forged a certain document purporting to be a valuable security, to wit—, [or a will made by—; or an authority to adopt given by—to—, or an authority given to—to make or transfer a certain valuable security, to wit—] with intent—; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

The charge must set out the intention of the accused.¹²

Punishment.—Where the forged documents are alternative drafts of any document they do not call for separate punishment.¹³ In a conviction under this section a sentence of imprisonment should be inflicted. The sentence of fine alone is not legal.¹⁴

468. Whoever commits forgery, intending that the document¹ forged shall be used for the purpose of cheating,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery for purpose of cheating.

COMMENT.

Forgery, though a substantive offence, partakes of the nature of an attempt. It is usually an act done in furtherance of some other criminal design. If it can be proved ⁷ Onkar, [1945] N. L. J. 231.

⁸ Ramaswami Ayyar, (1917) 41 Mad. 589.

⁹ Naro Gopal, (1868) 5 B. H. S. (Cr. C.) 56

¹⁰ Vide s. 465, sup.

¹¹ Tulja, (1887) 12 Bom. 36, 41; Teni Shah v. Belahi Shah, (1909) 14 C. W. N. 479, 11 Cr. L. J. 280.

¹² Haidar Ali Pradhania, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 354, 14 Cr. L. J. 120.

¹³ Surat Bahadur, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 302, 25 Cr. L. J. 1162.

¹⁴ Vira Reddy, [1939] M. W. N. 514, 41 Cr. L. J. 11, [1939] AIR (M) 780.

that the purpose of the offender in committing the forgery is to obtain property dishonestly, or, if his guilty purpose comes within the definition of cheating, he is punishable under the present section. The intention of the forger may be fairly inferred in most cases from the contents of the forged documents.¹⁵

If the cheating is complete, and the subsequent forgery is for the purpose of concealing that offence, this section does not apply.¹⁶

To establish fraudulent intention under this section it is not essential to prove pecuniary advantage.¹⁷

1. 'Document'.—See s. 29, supra. A hammer for marking sleepers is a document within the meaning of this section.¹⁸

2. 'Cheating'.—See s. 415, supra.

CASES.

Falsifying account-books.—Where a person's object was to deceive his employer by falsifying account-books which were in his custody, such deception being likely to cause damage to his employer, it was held that he had committed forgery with intent to cheat under this section, and not an offence under s. 465.¹⁹

Making false register.—Forgery of a school attendance register, for the purpose of obtaining a Government grant, is punishable under this section.²⁰ The entry of an excess payment in a muster-roll will not make the muster-roll a forged document.²¹

Making false return.—Where a process-server prepared and filed into Court a false return with forged signatures with a view to defraud a District Munsiff into excusing his delay in returning processes and his absence from duty for a period of seven days, it was held that he was guilty of offences under this section and s. 471.²²

Preparing false bill.—The accused, a Talati, prepared a full week's bill for distribution of doles in his village, while staying out of the village, on the basis of the bill for the foregoing week, in utter ignorance of what had happened in the village and in order to avoid the trouble of going to the village personally. The bill was sent to the Circle Inspector, who, on comparing it with the original register kept at the village, found that no doles had been distributed for four out of the seven days of the week. It was held that the accused was not guilty of an offence under this section as he had no criminal intention to commit fraud which was requisite to complete the offence of forgery under this section.²³

Sending false telegram.—The accused sent a telegram to the complainant in America purporting to be from her husband, asking her to remit money. It was held that the accused was guilty of three distinct offences, namely, (1) an offence under this section which he committed when he filled in the telegram form, (2) an offence under s. 29 of the Indian Telegraph Act which he committed when he sent the false telegram, and (3) an offence of cheating when the receiver of the telegram sent the money, each offence being complete before the other.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document is a forgery.

(2) That the accused forged the document.²⁵

(3) That he did as above intending that the forged document would be used for the purpose of cheating.¹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

¹⁵ M. & M. 418; Jagan Nath, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 461. In this case the accused had forged a letter of recommendation purporting to have been written by the Governor of the Punjab.

¹⁶ Hurmukh Rai, (1876) P. R. No. 15 of 1876.

¹⁷ Madhavlal Chaganlal, Crim. Appln. for Rev. No. 195 of 1920, decided on September 9, 1920, per Shah and Crump, JJ., (Unrep. Bom.).

¹⁸ A. V. Joseph, (1924) 3 Ran. 11.

¹⁹ Banessur Biswas, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

²⁰ Kuppana Pillai, (1885) Weir (3rd. Edn.)

330.

²¹ Ram Ghulam Singh, [1929] A. L. J. R. 592, 30 Cr. L. J. 403.

²² Kamatchinatha Pillai, (1918) 42 Mad. 558.

²³ Madhavlal Chaganlal, Crim. Appln. for Rev. No. 195 of 1920, per Shah and Crump, JJ., decided on September 9, 1920 (Unrep. Bom.).

²⁴ Mahomed Rafiq, (1930) 25 S. L. R. 9, 33 Cr. L. J. 41, [1931] AIR (S) 116.

²⁵ Vide s. 465, sup.

¹ Vide s. 417, sup.

Complaint.—A complaint in writing of the Court, before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate, is necessary.² An offence under s. 463 mentioned in clause (c) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, covers an offence under this section, the object of mentioning s. 463 in s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, being to include all cases of forgery whatever the nature of the fraudulent intention may be.³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, forged a certain document, to wit—, intending that it shall be used for the purpose of cheating, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 468 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

469. Whoever commits forgery, intending that the document¹ forged shall harm the reputation² of any party, or knowing that it is likely to be used for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery for purpose of harming reputation.

COMMENT.

The making of a false document for the purpose of injuring the reputation of any person is punishable under this section. For instance if A, with the intention of harming B's reputation or knowing that what he does is likely to have this effect, writes a letter in imitation of B's hand-writing purporting to be addressed to a confederate in some disgraceful or dishonest transaction and shows this letter to other persons, he commits this offence.

1. 'Document'.—See s. 29, supra.

2. 'Harm the reputation'.—See s. 499, infra. A person, who forged a draft petition, with the intention of using it as evidence and which contained false statements calculated to injure the reputation of another person, was held guilty of this offence.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document in question is a forgery.⁵

(2) That the accused forged it.

(3) That he did so intending that the document forged would harm the reputation of some one, or knew that it was likely to be used for that purpose.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, forged a certain document to wit—, intending that it shall be used for harming the reputation of—, or knew that it was likely to be used for that purpose, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 469 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

470. A false document made wholly or in part by forgery is designated "a forged document".

² Crim. Pro. Code, s. 195 (1) (c).

³ Assistant Sessions Judge, North Arcot v. Ramaremal, (1911) 36 Mad. 387.

⁴ Sheefait Ally, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 61, 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 12.

⁵ Vide s. 465, sup.

471. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly uses as genuine any document¹ which he knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document,² shall be punished in the same manner as if he had forged such document.

Using as genuine a forged document.

COMMENT.

This section lays down that the sentence that can be imposed for the offence of using a forged document as genuine is the same as the sentence that can be imposed for the offence of forgery.⁶

The use of a forged document which is contemplated by this section is such use as causes wrongful gain or wrongful loss. That is to say, the section applies to the case of a person who appears before some other person, or before a Court with a document and endeavours to induce that person or Court to do some act which he or it would not do if it was known to be a forgery.⁷ The offence is complete once the document is produced or given in evidence.⁸ Where in a judicial inquiry under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code, against a person accused of having forged a document, the accused stated before the inquiring Magistrate that the document was genuine, it was held that he could not be said to have used the document so as to make himself amenable to the provisions of this section even though he knew the document to be a forged one.⁹

Scope.—The Allahabad High Court is of opinion that this section is directed against some person other than a person proved to be the actual forger. A forger cannot be punished both for forging a document (s. 465) and for using it as genuine (s. 471).¹⁰ The Madras High Court has dissented from this view and held that a person who both forged a document and used it as genuine can be sentenced for both the offences.¹¹ But it has also held that an abettor of the forgery of a document cannot be convicted of the offence of using it as genuine.¹² The decisions of the former Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur are conflicting.¹³

Ingredients.—Under this section there must be—

1. Fraudulent or dishonest use of a document as genuine.
2. Knowledge or reasonable belief on the part of the person using the document that it is a forged one.

1. 'Fraudulently or dishonestly uses as genuine any document'.—The use of a document as genuine must be fraudulent or dishonest.¹⁴ "The word, 'fraudulently' is used in ss. 471 and 464 together with the word 'dishonestly' and presumably in a sense not covered by the latter word. If, however, it be held that fraudulently implies deprivation either actual or intended, then apparently that word would perform no function which would not have been fully discharged by the word dishonestly and its use would be mere surplusage. So far as such a consideration carries any weight, it obviously inclines in favour of the view that the word 'fraudulently' should not be confined to transactions of which deprivation of property forms a part".¹⁵ If the Court is satisfied that the accused uttered the forged document as a true one, meaning it to be taken as such, and at that time knew it to be forged, the Court ought to find, as a necessary consequence of law, that the accused intended to defraud.¹⁶ When a document, known or believed to have been forged, is used as genuine with the ⁶ Sriramulu Naidu, (1928) 52 Mad. 532.

⁷ Asimuddi Sheikh, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 838, 5 C. L. J. 454, 5 Cr. L. J. 351.

⁸ Fasal Iahvi v. Mohan Lal, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 388.

⁹ Asimuddi Sheikh, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 838, 5 C. L. J. 454, 5 Cr. L. J. 351.

¹⁰ Umrao Lal, (1900) 23 All. 84; Pirbhu Dial, (1912) P. R. No. 4 of 1913, 14 Cr. L. J. 183. See Badri Prasad, (1912) 35 All. 63, where Umrao's case was not pointed out and the Court expressed the opinion that an accused person could be convicted at the same trial of forging a document and using that document as forged. See Gajanan Sakharan, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 473, [1924] AIR (N) 162 (1).

¹¹ Sriramulu Naidu, (1928) 52 Mad. 532; Madu Chinnagi Reddi, (1915) 17 Cr. L. J. 73,

[1917] AIR (M) 147.

¹² Authone Valappil Syed Ahmad Musaliyar, (1914) 15 Cr. L. J. 568, [1914] AIR (M) 144 (2).

¹³ Gajanan Sakharan, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 473, [1924] AIR (N) 162 (1), laid down that a forger could be convicted both of forgery and of using as genuine that forged document; Digambar, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 1275, and Ismail Panju, (1925) 26 Cr. L. J. 1387, 21 N. L. R. 152, [1926] AIR (N) 187, laid down that he could not be convicted for both the offences.

¹⁴ Sudarsan Behra, (1926) 8 P. L. T. 104, 27 Cr. L. J. 1263, [1927] AIR (P) 87.

¹⁵ Per Maclean, C. J., in Abbas Ali, (1897) 25 Cal. 512, 521, F.B.

¹⁶ Hill, (1838) 8 C. & P. 274, Chunku, [1930] A. L. J. R. 1451, 32 Cr. L. J. 559, [1931] AIR (A) 258.

intent that some person should thereby be deceived, and that by such deception either an advantage should accrue to the person so using it, or injury should befall some other person, it is used 'fraudulently'.¹⁷ A person cannot be convicted of fabricating a false document if his intention is simply to clear up matters and is not fraudulent and no wrongful loss or gain is caused to any person thereby.¹⁸

'Uses'.—To constitute a 'use' it is not necessary that the forged document should be used as evidence in a Court. It is sufficient that it is used in order that it may ultimately appear in evidence or used dishonestly or fraudulently.¹⁹ The nature of the use is not material.²⁰ It is not necessary that the Court should accept the document produced before it or filed in Court. If a person puts forward a document as supporting his claim in any matter, whether that document is acted upon by the Court, or used in evidence, is immaterial for the purpose of constituting use of the document by the party within the meaning of this section.²¹ The use of a forged document will be fraudulent and dishonest under this section, even though the document itself is unnecessary for the case of the party who uses it, and though, in fact, he has a perfectly good title without it.²²

The Madras High Court is of opinion that the use of the document must be for one of the purposes mentioned in s. 463. Thus an involuntary production of a document in Court in obedience to an order to produce it is no use of it.²³ In such a case it is immaterial even if the person producing the document has deposed as a witness to its genuineness. The giving of false testimony with a fraudulent intention by itself cannot amount to a fraudulent user of a document with reference to which that evidence is given. A mere statement that a document is genuine does not amount to using it as genuine.²⁴ These two cases have been dissented from by the Calcutta High Court which has held that where a person fraudulently or dishonestly presents a document to another person as being what it purports to be, or causes the same to be so presented, knowing or having reason to believe that it is forged, the document is used as genuine within the meaning of this section. It is immaterial whether it was produced by the accused of his own motion or under the order of a Court if in the event he uses it as genuine. If a person summoned to produce a document fails to disclose that he believes it to have been forged, and fraudulently or dishonestly puts it forward as being a genuine document, he is not acting involuntarily, but is deliberately using it for a criminal purpose.²⁵

A mere reference in a written statement of an accused to a document which is produced and put in evidence by the prosecution is not "user" by the accused; and if the pleader for the accused cross-examines the prosecution witness who produces the document upon his evidence, including the evidence which he has given about the written document, such cross-examination is not "user".¹ The filing of forged documents with a plaint is user of them.² The filing of a forged document as the basis of a plaint or as a necessary sequel to the pleas in the plaint constitutes a user of it.³ Similarly, putting in of a document in the course of the hearing is a user.⁴ It is also a user by a party to a suit to file receipts and place them before the other side for admission or denial.⁵ The presentation of a forged document for ¹⁷ Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, (1925) 52 Cal. 881, disapproving Surendra Nath Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 75.

¹⁸ Sudarsan Behra, (1926) 8 P. L. T. 104, 27 Cr. L. J. 1263, [1926] AIR (P) 87.

¹⁹ Ramappa Hebbara, (1890) 1 Weir 550.

²⁰ Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Daulatram Mudi, (1932) 59 Cal. 1233.

²¹ Bansi Sheikh, (1923) 51 Cal. 469; Ibrahim, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 849; Hampana Gowd, [1935] M. W. N. 1346, 70 M. L. J. 109, 43 L. W. 226, 37 Cr. L. J. 421, [1936] AIR (M) 280. The head-note of Ambika Prasad Singh, (1908) 35 Cal. 820, is declared to be wrong in this case and also in Rati Jha, (1911) 39 Cal. 463. See also Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, (1925) 52 Cal. 881, where it is adversely commented on, and Krishna Proshad v. Rabinendra Nath, (1911) 13 Cr. L. J. 6.

²² Dhunum Kazee, (1882) 9 Cal. 58; Bans

Sheikh, (1923) 51 Cal. 469; Daya Ram, (1885) P. R. No. 16 of 1885.

²³ Assistant Sessions Judge, North Arcot v. Ramammal, (1911) 36 Mad. 387; Kedar Nath, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 46, [1935] AIR (A) 940.

²⁴ Muthiah Chetty, (1911) 36 Mad. 392. See also Mobarak Ali, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 94, 13 Cr. L. J. 440.

²⁵ Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, (1925) 52 Cal. 881.

¹ Taralnath Baidya, (1935) 63 Cal. 481; Abdul Sattar Abdul Aziz, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 592, [1938] AIR (R) 194.

² Idu Golaha, (1917) 3 P. L. J. 386, 19 Cr. L. J. 709, [1918] AIR (P) 274.

³ Mobarak Ali, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 94, 13 Cr. L. J. 440.

⁴ Rati Jha, (1911) 39 Cal. 463; Baju Jha, (1928) 9 P. L. T. 800, 30 Cr. L. J. 236, [1929] AIR (P) 60.

⁵ Kedar Nath, [1935] A. L. J. R. 493, 36 Cr. L. J. 1199, [1935] AIR (A) 521.

registration, and obtaining registration is a using of that document.⁶ The production of a forged document in proceedings before the manager under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act is a user.⁷ A person who actively participates in the process of presentation of a forged document for registration can be convicted of this offence even though he does not physically present it for registration.⁸

It is user of a document whether the party files the document personally or, as more usually happens, through a legal representative. Further, such legal representative will be presumed to have filed a document with the knowledge and authority of his client until the contrary is shown.⁹

A presented a document for registration before a Sub-Registrar alleging that S had executed it. S having denied execution, the Sub-Registrar reported the matter to the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate ordered a judicial inquiry, and the Deputy Magistrate who was conducting the same called upon A to state whether the document was genuine or forged. A appeared and stated that the document was genuine, but the Deputy Magistrate held otherwise. A was, thereafter, tried and convicted under this section. It was held that A was not guilty as it was impossible to say that he 'used' the document.¹⁰ The accused was charged with having fraudulently or dishonestly used a document which purported to be a receipt granted to him by the manager of a ward's estate for certain papers and which receipt was alleged to be false. Subsequently, some of the papers mentioned in the receipt were on search found in the estate office, while the other papers had not been searched for. It was held that those facts were not sufficient to show that the user of the document was fraudulent or dishonest or that the accused had committed any offence.¹¹ The accused, who was the plaintiff in a rent suit, himself filed a kabulayat which was forged and which purported to be filed by the complainant, the defendant in the rent suit. It was held that the act constituted a user within the meaning of this section.¹²

The accused was told to produce copies of revenue records in support of his complaint of trespass and he knowingly produced forged copies as genuine. It was held that this was not an involuntary production of a document in Court and that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section.¹³ A person tendering, during the course of a police investigation, a forged document to the investigating officer, and thereby causing that officer to do something which he would otherwise not have done, is guilty of having used a forged document within the meaning of this section.¹⁴ Where in order to support a false claim, a forged document is so mentioned in another document that it can be easily identified, it constitutes the offence of using a forged document within the meaning of this section.¹⁵ The production of a forged title-deed in answer to a citation in which no particular deed is specified and giving evidence in regard to it amounts to user within the meaning of this section.¹⁶ Where two persons were jointly tried in a case and the pleader of the first accused filed a forged document in the case under the instruction of the second accused for the common benefit of both and both of them took advantage of the document, it was held that there was a user of the document by the second accused also within the meaning of this section.¹⁷

'Document'.—A hammer for marking sleepers is a document within the meaning of this section.¹⁸

Conditional uttering.—A conditional uttering of a forged instrument is as much a crime as any other uttering. Where a person gave a forged acceptance to the manager of a banking company where he kept an account, saying that he hoped the bill would satisfy the bank as a security for the debt he owed, and the manager replied that that ⁶ Azimooddeen, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 15; Cheta Mahto, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1482.

⁷ Kewal Ram, (1935) 15 Pat. 69, 81.

⁸ Sriramulu Naidu, (1928) 52 Mad. 532.

⁹ Ali Ahmed, (1932) 55 C. L. J. 336, 34 Cr. L. J. 39, [1932] AIR (C) 545; Hampana Gowd, [1935] M. W. N. 1346, 70 M. L. J. 109, 43 L. W. 226, 37 Cr. L. J. 421, [1936] AIR (M) 280.

¹⁰ Asimuddi Sheikh, (1907) 5 C. L. J. 454, 11 C. W. N. 838, 5 Cr. L. J. 351.

¹¹ Ram Prasad Maity, (1908) 8 C. L. J. 317, 12 C. W. N. 1113, 8 Cr. L. J. 418.

¹² Asrabuddin Sarkar v. Katidayal Mullik,

(1914) 19 C. W. N. 125, 16 Cr. L. J. 309, [1915] AIR (C) 596.

¹³ Ishar Das, (1924) 6 Lah. 50.

¹⁴ Sajanlall Biswas, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 274, [1920] AIR (P) 800.

¹⁵ Sithava Naik, (1915) 16 Cr. L. J. 703, [1916] AIR (M) 1049.

¹⁶ Digambar Chakravarti v. Ram Taran Mitter, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 839, [1917] AIR (C) 35.

¹⁷ Baju Jha, (1928) 9 P. L. T. 800, 36 Cr. L. J. 236, [1929] AIR (P) 60.

¹⁸ A. V. Joseph, (1924) 3 Ran. 11.

would depend on the result of inquiries respecting the acceptors, it was held that this was a sufficient uttering.¹⁹

2. 'Knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document'.—The person using the document must have specific knowledge that the document is a forgery. The words 'knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document' are of general application. The mere fact that a pleader's suspicions ought to have been aroused by the sight of a forged document is not prima facie evidence that he knew, or had reason to believe, the document to be forged. A pleader is under no higher obligation than any other agent would be, and to justify his prosecution it should be shown that he had been a party to the concoction of the document, or that he had the knowledge that it was concocted.²⁰

The accused purchased one-ninth share of 437 kanals 12 marlas land, this one-ninth share being set out in the deed as amounting to 48 kanals 12 marlas. Eleven years after, the deed was presented to the Putwari by the accused with a request that he should enter up mutation "according to the terms set out in the deed", the deed being previously tampered with so as to make the one-ninth share appear to be a two-ninths share, but the other recitals and figures in the deed remained untouched. It was not established that the accused had himself made the alteration. The Putwari entered up mutation of 97 kanals 4 marlas, that is, two-ninths share. On the mutation coming before the Tahsildar for sanction, the alteration in the deed came to light. It was held that though the accused had used the deed as a genuine document, it was not shown that he had so used it fraudulently or dishonestly knowing or having reason to believe it to be a forged document; and that the alteration made in the deed did not, in the face of the figures given therein, make it a sale of anything more than 48 kanals 12 marlas.²¹

'Reason to believe'.—See s. 26, supra.

Copy.—A person may be convicted of using as genuine a document which he knows to be forged, though he, in the first instance, produced only a copy of a copy of it.²² Where a person took copies of a forged document and put these copies forward as evidence in support of his title, it was held that this was a use by him of the forged document.²³ When forgeries were committed by a person inside the record room and copies reproducing the false entries were put up in a suit to establish a claim, the use of such certified copies is a use of forged documents when they are put in the case. The mere circumstance that the documents had been forged would not be sufficient to justify a conviction. It is necessary to prove that the use has been fraudulent or dishonest and in addition that the person putting in the copies knew, or had reason to believe, that the originals were forged.²⁴

The Calcutta High Court has held that it is doubtful whether the mere filing of a copy is the user of a forged document. But it is otherwise where the offender used the copy knowing or having reason to believe that the entries in the original documents were forgeries and intending to use them for fraudulent purposes. A certified copy of a forged document is not a forged document.²⁵ The making of a copy of a forgery does not constitute forgery unless the maker of the copy was authorized to make the copy.¹ The accused was told to produce copies of revenue records in support of his complaint of trespass and he knowingly produced forged copies as genuine. It was held that this was not an involuntary production of a document in Court and that he was, therefore, guilty of an offence under this section.²

Proceedings ultra vires.—If during the course of proceedings which were ultra vires and illegal, any offence under this section was committed, it could be said that it was committed in or in relation to, or by a party to any judicial proceedings, in which evidence could be legally taken, and therefore any complaint under s. 195, Criminal

¹⁹ Cooke, (1838) 8 C. & P. 582.

²⁰ Ranchhodas Nagardas, (1896) 22 Bom. 317; Abdul Rahim Khan, [1940] N. L. J. 183, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 753, [1940] AIR (N) 300.

²¹ Karim Dad, (1913) P. R. No. 25 of 1913, 14 Cr. L. J. 687, [1914] AIR (L) 577.

²² Nujum Ali, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

²³ Mulai Singh, (1909) 28 All. 402; Girdhari

Lal, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 174, 26 Cr. L. J. 929, [1925] AIR (O) 413; Hayat Khan, (1931) 26 S. L. R. 73, 33 Cr. L. J. 452, [1932] AIR (S) 90.

²⁴ Mathura Prasad, (1925) 1 Luck. 306.

²⁵ Krishna Govinda Pal, (1915) 48 Cal. 783.

¹ Lachman Lal, (1918) 4 P. L. J. 16, 20 Cr. L. J. 142.

² Ishar Das, (1924) 6 Lah. 50.

Procedure Code, by the Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain such proceedings, must be dismissed.³

C A S E S .

Altering document without fraudulent intent.—The creditors of a police constable applied to the District Superintendent of Police that Rs. 2 might be deducted monthly from the debtor's pay until the debt was satisfied. Upon an order being passed, directing that the deduction asked for should be made, the debtor produced a receipt purporting to be a receipt for Rs. 18, the whole amount due. It subsequently appeared that the receipt was one for Rs. 8, which the debtor had altered by the figure "1" so as to make it appear that the receipt was for Rs. 18. It was held that the real intent in the accused's mind being to induce his superior officer to refrain from the illegal act of stopping a portion of his salary, the Court, in a criminal case, ought not to speculate as to some other intent over and above this that might have presented itself to him; that it did not necessarily follow that he contemplated setting up the altered receipt to defeat his creditors' claim; and that, therefore, he was not guilty under this section.⁴

The accused made a change in a document so that it might be taken in evidence. The document related to certain transactions which the Settlement Officer could not take into consideration but would not have been bound by what it stated. In fact the accused's case was ruined. It was held that the accused acted improperly but not dishonestly and could not be convicted of an offence under this section.⁵

Certificate.—The accused applied to the Superintendent of Police at Poona for employment in the Police force. In support of his application he presented two certificates which he knew to be false. One of these certificates was a wholly fabricated document, whilst the other was altered by several additions made subsequently to the issue of the certificate. It was held that the accused was guilty of offences under s. 463 and this section.⁶ Where the accused used a forged certificate of competency as an engine-room first tindal, he was held guilty under this section and s. 463.⁷ With a view to qualify for appearing at the competitive P. C. S. Examination the accused presented to the Punjab University a certified copy of the certificate granted to him by the University at his Matriculation examination, in which the date of birth had been altered from "5th January 1901" to "15th January 1904." It was held that he had committed an offence under this section inasmuch as the document presented, being a false document, was used with intent to cause damage and injury to the other candidates in the competitive examination and to support accused's claim to appear.⁸

Plaint.—The accused gave his pleader a copy of a document which had been falsified by an interpolation being made in it for the purpose of its being used in the trial of his suit. It was held that he was guilty not of an attempt to commit an offence under this section but of the offence itself.⁹ If a party to a suit sets up two different titles and supports one of them with a false document he is guilty of this offence even if it be found that the other title is good.¹⁰

Fabrication of receipts.—Where it was found that four forged receipts for the payment of rent, used by the accused, had been fabricated in lieu of genuine receipts which had been lost, it was held, with reference to the definitions of the terms 'dishonestly' and 'fraudulently' in ss. 24 and 25, that the accused had not committed this offence.¹¹ This case lays down bad law in view of several cases noted under ss. 24 and 25. Where the accused gave forged receipts to his pleader and asked him to produce them in Court in support of his defence to a suit, it was held that this amounted to using the receipts as genuine.¹²

A declared insolvent wishing to obtain some contract work was asked to produce an order to the effect that he was solvent. In order to obtain the necessary certi-

³ Sumat Prasad, [1942] All. 42.

⁴ Syed Husain, (1885) 7 All. 403.

⁵ Kali Din, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 872, 20 Cr.

L. J. 573, [1919] AIR (A) 387.

⁶ Khandusingh, (1896) 22 Bom. 768.

⁷ Abbas Ali, (1897) 25 Cal. 512, F.B.

⁸ Chanan Singh, (1928) 10 Lah. 545.

⁹ Lala Ojha, (1899) 26 Cal. 863; Jiwan,

(1887) 7 A. W. N. 195; Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, (1925) 52 Cal. 881.

¹⁰ Sivananda Mudali, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 994, [1926] AIR (M) 1072.

¹¹ Sheo Dayal, (1885) 7 All. 459.

¹² Hampana Gowd, [1935] M. W. N. 1346, 70 M. L. J. 109, 43 L. W. 226, 37 Cr. L. J. 421, [1936] AIR (M) 280.

ificate of solvency he produced before the Official Receiver a forged receipt showing that he had paid up a certain debt which the creditor had written off as a bad debt. It was held that the intention of the accused was by means of deceit to obtain a wrongful gain for himself, so that he had acted dishonestly, and was therefore guilty of an offence under this section.¹³ Where a Bench Clerk received a sum of money paid in as fine and misappropriated it, and made a false receipt to cover up such misappropriation, it was held that the offence came under the provisions of s. 467 and this section.¹⁴

Where the accused by obtaining a forged letter acknowledging the receipt of money and using the letter was not only protecting himself from punishment but was also rendering it probable that other persons would suffer loss, it was held that the act of the accused was a criminal act within the provisions of s. 467 and this section.¹⁵

Diary.—False alteration of a police diary by a head constable will fall under this section as the forgery of a document made by a public servant.¹⁶

Sanad.—The accused, in order to obtain a recognition from a Settlement Officer that they were entitled to the title of 'loskur', filed a sanad before that officer purporting to grant that title. This document was found not to be genuine. The Sessions Judge convicted them under this section and s. 464. It was held that even supposing they had used the document knowing it not to be genuine, they could not be found guilty as their intention was not to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one, their intention being to produce a false belief in the mind of the Settlement Officer that they were entitled to the dignity of 'loskur', and that this could not be said to constitute "an intention to defraud."¹⁷

Decree.—Where the accused, a pleader's clerk, altered the date in the copy of a decree in order to hide his fault in not filing the execution petition in time and filed it with the copy of the altered decree, it was held that the accused was not guilty under s. 467 the copy of the decree not being a valuable security, but was guilty of offences under s. 193 and this section.¹⁸

Making false return.—Where a process-server filed into Court a false return with false signatures in order to defraud a District Munsiff into excusing his delay in returning processes and his absence from duty, it was held that he was guilty under s. 468 and this section.¹⁹

Prescription.—Where the accused obtained a prescription from a medical man for one tube of morphia and altering the words "one tube" to "four tubes" presented the prescription to a chemist and obtained four tubes of morphia from him, it was held that he had committed this offence.²⁰

English cases.—Uttering.—If A exhibits a forged receipt to B, a person with whom he is claiming credit for it, this is an uttering.²¹ Delivering a box containing, among other things, forged stamps to the party's own servant that he might carry them to an inn to be forwarded by a carrier to a customer in the country, was an uttering.²² But showing a man an instrument the uttering of which would be criminal, though with an intent of raising a false idea in him of the party's substance, was not uttering.²³ Where the accused placed a forged receipt for poor rates in the hands of the prosecutor for the purpose of inspection only, in order, by representing himself as a person who had paid his rates, fraudulently to induce the prosecutor to advance money to a third person, it was held that this was an uttering.²⁴ The accused, being the secretary of an enrolled benefit society of which his wife was a member, and having received a sum of money belonging to the members with directions to pay it into a certain savings bank, uttered what purported to be a bank pass-book containing a false entry of the receipt of the money, knowing it to be forged, in order to induce the members of the society to believe that he had paid the money into the bank when he had not done so.

¹³ Abdul Ghafur, (1920) 43 All. 225.

¹⁴ Nga Ba Sein, (1924) 3 B. L. J. 113 25 Cr. L. J. 1378, [1924] AIR (R) 331.

¹⁵ Chandu Lal, [1940] A. L. J. R. 759, (1940)

42 Cr. L. J. 247, [1940] AIR (A) 551.

¹⁶ Rughoo Barrick, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 44.

¹⁷ Jan Mahomed, (1884) 10 Cal. 584. Is it not supporting a claim to a title to which he is not legally entitled?

¹⁸ Godlavedu Balayya, (1902) 1 Weir 551.

¹⁹ Kamatchinatha Pillai, (1918) 42 Mad. 558.

²⁰ Robison, (1921) 22 Cr. L. J. 681.

²¹ Radford's Case, (1844) 1 Den. 59; Adikanda Swami, (1945) 47 Cr. L. J. 317.

²² Collicott's Case, (1812) Russ. & Ry. 212.

²³ Shukard's Case, (1811) Russ. & Ry. 200.

²⁴ Ion, (1852) 6 Cox 1; Fitchie's Case, (1857) Dears. & B. 175.

It was held that he was guilty of uttering a forged writing.²⁵ Where the accused forged a bill payable to his own order, and uttered it without endorsement as a security for a debt, he was held guilty of uttering.¹ Where a person presented a bill of exchange for payment with a forged endorsement upon it of a receipt by the payee, and the clerk, to whom he presented it, objected to a variance between the spelling of the payee's name in the bill and the endorsement, upon which the person altered the endorsement into a receipt by himself for the drawer, it was held that the act of presenting the bill to the clerk previous to his objection was sufficient to constitute the offence of uttering the forged endorsement.²

If an engraving of a forged note be given to a party as a pattern or specimen of skill, the party giving it not intending that the particular note should be put in circulation, it is not uttering.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document was a forged one.⁴

(2) That the accused used such document.

(3) That he used it as a genuine one.⁵

(4) That he knew, or had reason to believe, that it was a forged one and used it fraudulently or dishonestly.⁶

In a case in which the accused was charged with dishonestly using as genuine a lease which he knew to be forged, and in which there was a fraudulent intention, it was held that it was not necessary to prove that he personally inserted the word, but it was sufficient if it was inserted with his knowledge.⁷

In a case for uttering forged bills, the guilty knowledge of the accused was proved by producing other forged bills on the same house in the possession of the accused.⁸ If the possession of other forged instruments is offered in evidence to prove a guilty knowledge, there must be regular evidence that such instruments were forged.⁹ Evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment is not admissible unless upon the issue whether the acts charged against the accused were designed or accidental, or unless to rebut a defence otherwise open to him.¹⁰ In a charge for administering dhatura with the intention of robbing the victim, the fact that the accused had dhatura in his possession months afterwards in no way helps the prosecution, because it cannot possibly be inferred from the fact that he was in possession of dhatura that he was at a place where and on the date when, the alleged administration of dhatura had taken place.¹¹ See also ill. (c) to s. 159 of the Indian Evidence Act.

(5) That he used it dishonestly or fraudulently.¹²

In deciding whether there has been a 'using as genuine' of the document, the Court will advert to the nature of the document. Some documents, such as receipts, are intended to remain in the holder's possession, other documents, such as cheques or promissory notes, must be tendered to the persons who are to pay them. Whatever the document, the dealing with it by the accused person must be such as to satisfy the Court that he intended to defraud, but it is not necessary that wrongful gain or wrongful loss should actually be caused by the use.¹³

On an indictment for uttering a forged will, which, together with writings in support of it, it was suggested, had been written over pencil marks which had been rubbed out, it was held that evidence of an engraver, who had examined the paper with a mirror and traced the pencil marks, was admissible on the part of the prosecution.¹⁴

Where a party to a judicial proceeding relies on a forged document in support of his case a witness who states that he saw the execution of the document by the person ²⁵ Moody's Case, (1862) L. & C. 173.

¹ Birkett's Case, (1805) Russ. & Ry. 86.

² Arscott, (1834) 6 C. & P. 408; Moni Lal Mitter, (1939) 72 C. L. J. 46.

³ Harris, (1836) 7 C. & P. 428.

⁴ Vide s. 465, sup.

⁵ Jaha Bux, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 81; Muker Srinivasa Padyachi, (1889) 1 Weir 550.

⁶ Bholay Pramanick, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 32; Radhika Prasad Singh, (1936) 38 Cr. L. J. 235; Bajinath Bhagat, (1940) 21 P. L. T. 206, [1940] P. W. N. 474, 41 Cr. L. J. 427, [1940] AIR (P.) 486.

⁷ Hemoruddi Mundul, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 22.

⁸ Hough's Case, (1896) Russ. & Ry. 120. See Ball's Case, (1807) Russ. & Ry. 132; Colclough, (1882) 15 Cox 92.

⁹ Millard's Case, (1813) Russ. & Ry. 215.

¹⁰ Makin v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, [1894] A. C. 57.

¹¹ Ramsumiran Pande, (1941) 43 Cr. L. J. 413, [1942] AIR (P) 291.

¹² Kishen Pershad, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 202.

¹³ M. & M. 419.

¹⁴ Williams, (1838) 8 C. & P. 434.

by whom it purports to have been executed, intentionally aids by his deposition the using of the document as genuine and is liable to prosecution for an offence under this section read with s. 109, although he could not be charged with abetment of forgery itself.¹⁵

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by the same Court as that by which the forgery is triable.

When the forged document is a promissory note of the Central Government—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed, or some other Court to which such Court is subordinate, is necessary.¹⁶ No such complaint is required for the prosecution of a person in respect of a forged document when he is not a party to the proceeding in which the forged document is produced,¹⁷ or where subsequent to the complaint a suit was instituted in a Court on the document in question.¹⁸

If a complaint is filed under this section and it appears that some other offence has also been committed, it is not necessary to have a fresh complaint.¹⁹

Sanction.—Where a postman, being a person employed in connection with the affairs of the Government of India forged the thumb impression of the payee on a money-order form for misappropriating the amount of money entrusted to him and used the forged document by returning it to the post office in token of payment, it was held that the sanction of the Governor-General was necessary under s. 270, cl. 1, of the Government of India Act, 1935, but that there was no ban to the trial of offences under ss. 409 and 467.²⁰

Sections 467 and 471.—Where owing to some reason (e.g. absence of jurisdiction) the accused cannot be charged under s. 467, he can be charged and convicted under s. 471.²¹ Where the accused was charged under s. 467, but it appeared in evidence that he had committed an offence under s. 471 for which he might have been charged under s. 236 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it was held that although he was not charged with it, he could be convicted of an offence under s. 471.²² When a person is convicted under ss. 467 and 109 for having abetted the forging of a document, he cannot be further convicted and sentenced under s. 471 for using that document as genuine.²³

Sections 471 and 466.—A conviction under s. 471 of a person convicted in respect of the same document under ss. 466 and 109 cannot stand. It is immaterial that the latter conviction is under s. 109 and s. 466, not under s. 466 alone, and an abettor of forgery cannot be punished under both the sections any more than the forger can be so punished. He may be punished as if he were the forger.²⁴

Sections 471 and 474.—Convictions under s. 471 and s. 474 cannot stand together.²⁵

Sections 471 and 196.—The using of a forged document is punishable under this section and not under s. 196.¹ The accused used as true or genuine evidence a receipt acknowledging the receipt of a certain sum in cash by the complainant which he knew to be forged. He was charged and tried under s. 196. It was held that the accused should have been charged under s. 471 and not under s. 196.²

Sections 471 and 167.—The offence of a public servant framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury under s. 167 is included in the offence of forging a document and using it as genuine under ss. 467/471 and a conviction both under the provisions of s. 167 and ss. 467/471 is not maintainable.³

¹⁵ Gajadhar Prasad, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 707, 26 Cr. L. J. 1587, [1925] AIR (O) 610.

¹⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195 (1) (c); Kanhaiya Lal v. Bhagwan Das, (1925) 48 All. 60.

¹⁷ Sessions Judge of Cuddapah v. Konditi Obalesu, (1914) 26 M. L. J. 220, 15 Cr. L. J. 242.

¹⁸ Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Biswambhar Brahmin, (1929) 56 Cal. 1041.

¹⁹ Jamuna Singh v. Laldhari Singh, (1934) 15 P. L. T. 694, 36 Cr. L. J. 26, [1934] AIR (P) 586; contra, Ram Samajh, (1926) 1 Luck. 523.

²⁰ Sannaya, [1941] Mad. 258.

L. C.—74

²¹ Bhagavatty Perumal Pillay, (1912) 13 Cr. L. J. 862.

²² Jagdeo Parshad, (1920) 21 Cr. L. J. 410. But see Harun Rashid, (1925) 53 Cal. 466.

²³ Ismail Panju, (1925) 21 N. L. R. 152, [1926] AIR (N) 137.

²⁴ Mokand Lal, (1901) P. R. No. 26 of 1901.

²⁵ Nuzur Ali, (1873) 6 N. W. P. 39.

¹ Kherode Chunder Mozumdar, (1880) 5 Cal. 717.

² Hara Mohun Das, (1926) 44 C. L. J. 113, 30 C. W. N. 840, 27 Cr. L. J. 871.

³ Gulzari Lal, (1926) 3 O. W. N. 760, 28 Cr. L. J. 90.

Separate charges.—The accused was charged with using as genuine eleven forged receipts which were put in by him in sets on three separate occasions, each set with a written statement in three suits pending against him. A charge was framed against him in respect of the using of each set of receipts, and he was tried on those three charges and convicted and sentenced. On appeal, it was contended that a separate charge should have been framed in respect of each of the documents as the using of each document constituted a distinct and separate offence and that consequently the trial was illegal and should be set aside, the accused having been tried for more than three offences in one and the same trial. It was held that as the 'using' charged was the putting in of each set of documents with the respective written statements in three suits, and as there was nothing to show that any of the documents had been used at any other time, there was only one using in respect of each set of documents and that there was, therefore, no valid ground for questioning the conviction.⁴

Charge.—This section does not specify the punishment, but declares that using a forged document shall be punished like forgery, and a charge for using a forged document should make mention of it coupled with one or other of s. 465, 466, or 467, according to the nature of the document forged.⁵ The definition of forgery should not be entered in the charge: simply describing the offence as one of using a forged document is sufficient.⁶

The charge should run thus:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, fraudulently (or dishonestly) used as genuine a certain document, to wit——, which you knew, or had reason to believe, at the time you used it, to be a forged document; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 465 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—The offence of uttering forged documents requires to be punished with the severest punishment allowed by law.⁷ If a document is used fraudulently and dishonestly and if it purports to be a valuable security, the punishment provided by s. 467 and not that provided by s. 465 will be that to which the accused will be liable under this section.⁸

472. Whoever makes or counterfeits¹ any seal, plate, or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under section 467 of this Code, or, with such intent, has in his possession² any such seal, plate or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable under section 467.

COMMENT.

The making or counterfeiting or possession of any seal, plate, or instrument for forging valuable securities, etc., specified in s. 467, is made punishable under this section. In the Chapter of offences relating to Coin and Government Stamps, there are similar provisions. This section and the section following are akin to ss. 235, 255 and 256.

1: 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra. 2: 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

⁴ Raghu Nath Das, (1893) 20 Cal. 413.

⁵ (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. L.) 10; (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr. L.) 8; Gangaram Malji, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 43; Tikaram Lohar, (1893) 8 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 1.

⁶ (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 7.

⁷ Mohesh Chunder Sircar, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 13.

⁸ Sagarmal Agarwalla, (1924) 40 C. L. J. 135, 28 C. W. N. 947, 25 Cr. L. J. 1217, [1924] AIR (C) 960.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made or counterfeited the seal, plate, etc., or that he had such seal, etc., in his possession, and that he knew it to be counterfeit.

(2) That such seal, etc., was made in order to produce impressions.

(3) That he intended to use such seal, etc., for the purpose of committing forgery.

(4) That such forgery was punishable under s. 467.

Counterfeit seals and forged documents were found in the accused's possession; and as he could give no satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them, it was inferred that he kept them with the intention of using them fraudulently.⁹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, made (or counterfeited) a seal, (or plate, or instrument) for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery punishable under s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code, [or had in your possession the seal (or plate, or instrument) intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery], and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 472 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

473. Whoever makes or counterfeits any seal, plate or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under any section of this chapter other than section 467, or, with such intent, has in his possession any such seal, plate or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable otherwise.

COMMENT.

If the forgery is not of such a serious nature as is punishable under s. 467, then it will be punishable under this section.

Where counterfeit seals and forged documents are found in the accused's possession, and he can give no satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them, it can be inferred that he is keeping them with the intention of using them fraudulently.¹⁰ Where the accused was in possession of a counterfeit stamp for making an impression by letters or marks on trees in order to indicate that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger of a forest, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (3) as those for s. 472; and further—

(4) That such forgery was punishable under any section of this Chapter.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Separate offences.—Where several seals of different descriptions were found in the possession of the accused with intent to commit forgery, it was held that there was a complete and separate offence committed in respect of every seal found, and that the accused could be legally convicted of a separate offence in regard to each seal,

⁹ Kisto Soonder Deb, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

¹⁰ Ibid.

¹¹ Krishappa Khandappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 509, 26 Cr. L. J. 1014, [1925] AIR (B) 827.

unless it appeared that several such seals were in their possession for the purpose of committing one particular forgery.¹²

Charge.—See s. 472, supra.

474. Whoever has in his possession¹ any document,² knowing the same to be forged, and intending that the same shall fraudulently³ or dishonestly⁴ be used as genuine, shall, if the document is one of the description mentioned in section 466 of this Code, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the document is one of the description mentioned in section 467, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Having possession of document described in section 466 or 467, knowing it to be forged and intending to use it as genuine.

COMMENT.

Persons who have in their possession forged documents of any description knowing that they are forged, are guilty of this offence if they intend that the document shall be used for a fraudulent or dishonest purpose. It does not signify whether such fraudulent use will be by themselves or by other persons to whom they may dispose of the documents for the purpose of such fraudulent use. It may be reasonably inferred that a person in whose possession several forged documents are found has an intention to use them fraudulently, unless he can give a satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them and as to the purpose for which he retains them in his possession.¹³

A person cannot be convicted under this section when the document fabricated by him does not fall within the description given in s. 466 or 467. Nor can he be convicted of forgery when he does not make it with any of the intents mentioned in s. 468. In the absence of a complaint by the Court the offence of attempting to fabricate evidence cannot be proceeded with when the offence is committed in relation to a proceeding in Court.¹⁴

This section resembles ss. 242, 243 and 259.

1. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra. Where a person took a forged document into a Court in connection with a case, but did not actually use it, although he intended to do so, if necessary, he was held guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁵

The accused were charged with and convicted of the offence of having fabricated a document purporting to have been executed by one M in their favour while, as a fact, M had not executed it. The accused pleaded that the property comprised in the document already belonged to them by virtue of some documents executed in the name of M benami for them, and that the document in question was only intended to confirm their already existing title to the property. It was held that the accused were rightly convicted of forgery and that it made no difference that the fabricated document was intended to confirm an already existing title.¹⁶

2. 'Document'.—See s. 29, supra. 3. 'Fraudulently'.—See s. 25, supra.

4. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document was a forged one.¹⁷

(2) That the accused had it in his possession.

(3) That he knew it to be forged when he had it in his possession.

(4) That he intended that it should be used as a genuine document.

¹² Goluck Chunder, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

¹³ M. & M. 421; Kisto Soonder Deb, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 5

¹⁴ Radha Kishan, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 95, 26 Cr. L. J. 847, [1925] AIR (L) 327.

¹⁵ Hatim Moonshree, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 11

¹⁶ Somasundram Pillay, (1909) 10 Cr. L. J. 367.

¹⁷ Vide s. 465, sup.

(5) That he intended as above dishonestly or fraudulently.

Prove also whether the forged document is one of the description mentioned in s. 466 or 467.¹⁸

It is not sufficient for a conviction to say that the accused might possibly have used an altered document; the guilty intent must be proved, not inferred.¹⁹ But where forged documents were found in the possession of the accused and he could not give satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them it was inferred that he kept them with the intention of using them.²⁰

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

475. Whoever counterfeits¹ upon, or in the substance of, any Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit marked material.

material, any device or mark used for the purpose of authenticating any document² described in section 467 of this Code, intending that such device or mark shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to any document then forged or thereafter to be forged on such material, or who, with such intent, has in his possession³ any material upon or in the substance of which any such device or mark has been counterfeited, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The commencement of the forgery of bank-notes and other similar securities where it has proceeded to the length which is described in this section, is treated as a substantive offence and punished. Also the possession of the prepared material, etc., is punished.

This section supplements the provisions of s 472.²¹

The document must be of a nature mentioned in s. 467.²²

1. 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra. 2. 'Document'.—See s. 29, supra.

3. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) that the accused counterfeited upon or in the substance of any material, a device or mark.

(2) That such device or mark is used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467.

(3) That the accused intended to use such device or mark for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to some document.

(4) That such document was forged or was thereafter to be forged.

Or prove—

(1) That the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge;

(2) that the device or mark was counterfeited on them;

(3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and

(4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents, either then forged or thereafter to be forged.²³

As to the admissibility in evidence of other forged documents, see *Queen-Empress v. Abaji Ramchandra*²⁴ and Reg. v. Parbhudas.²⁵

¹⁸ Abaji Ramchandra, (1891) 16 Bom. 165.

¹⁹ Lokenath Shah, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 12.

²⁰ Kisto Soonder Deb, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

²¹ M. & M. 421.

²² Rughoonundun Puttronupees, (1871) 15 W.

R. (Cr.) 19.

²³ Abaji Ramchandra, (1891) 16 Bom. 165; Rughoonundun Puttronupees, supra.

²⁴ (1890) 15 Bom. 189.

²⁵ (1874) 11 B. H. C. 90.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—A complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed, or some other Court to which such Court is subordinate, is necessary.¹

Charge.—In the trial of an accused person on a charge under this section, the charge should be so framed as to specify distinctly that part of the section which is applicable to the case, and should distinctly specify the particular papers bearing a counterfeit mark or device which the accused was alleged to have had in his possession with the intent mentioned in the section.²

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, counterfeited upon (or in the substance of) any material, to wit——, a device (or mark), to wit——, used for the purpose of authenticating any document, [or that you were in possession of any material, to wit——, upon] (or in the substance of) which device (or mark) was used for the purpose of authenticating a document, intending that such device (or mark) shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to some document then forged (or thereafter to be forged on such material), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 475 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

476. Whoever counterfeits¹ upon, or in the substance of, any material, any device or mark used for the purpose of authenticating any document² other than the documents described in section 467 of this Code, intending that such device or mark shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to any document then forged or thereafter to be forged on such material, or who, with such intent, has in his possession³ any material upon or in the substance of which any such device or mark has been counterfeited, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents other than those described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit marked material.

COMMENT.

This section is similar to the last section, but as the document, the counterfeit of which is made punishable, is not of so much importance as in the last, the punishment is not so severe.

1. 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra.
2. 'Document'.—See s. 29, supra.
3. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as those for s. 475, showing in (2) that such device or mark is used for the purpose of authenticating any document other than the document described in s. 467.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed, or some other Court to which such Court is subordinate, is necessary.³

¹ See Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195 (1) (c).

² Abaji Ramchandra, (1890) 15 Bom. 189.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195 (1) (c).

477. Whoever fraudulently¹ or dishonestly,² or with intent to cause damage or injury³ to the public⁴ or to any person,⁵ cancels, destroys or defaces, or attempts to cancel, destroy or deface, or secretes or attempts to secrete any document⁶ which is or purports to be⁷ a will,⁸ or an authority do adopt a son, or any valuable security,⁹ or commits mischief¹⁰ in respect to such document, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section applies when the document tampered with or destroyed is either a will, or an authority to adopt, or a valuable security. Owing to the great importance of documents of this kind the punishment provided is severe. The document must be a genuine one. The offence under this section cannot be committed in respect of a document which is a forgery.⁴

1. 'Fraudulently'.—See s. 25, supra. 2. 'Dishonestly'.—See s. 24, supra.

3. 'Injury'.—See s. 44, supra. Where the accused was convicted under this section for destroying a patta but the prosecution failed to prove that the act was done with intent to cause damage or injury, it was held that the act might have been a very foolish act but the conviction under this section could not be maintained.⁵

4. 'Public'.—See s. 12, supra. 5. 'Person'.—See s. 11, supra.

6. 'To secrete any document'.—See s. 29, supra, as to the meaning of the word 'document'. A person may 'secrete' a document not only when the existence of the document is unknown to other persons and for the purpose of preventing the existence of the document coming to the knowledge of anybody, but also when the existence of the document is known to others. In the latter case, he may secrete it for the purpose, for example, of preventing it being produced in evidence or for the purpose of raising difficulties in the way of its being produced in evidence. But it is not necessarily enough to show that, upon an occasion on which it became his duty to produce the document, he failed to discharge that duty, though this may be a cogent piece of evidence in certain circumstances. The fact that a man perjures himself by denying the existence of a document which, to his knowledge, is in his custody would be a still more cogent piece of evidence. But whether the offence of secreting the document is committed or not must depend in each case upon the facts.⁶

7. 'Purports to be'.—These words make the law of India upon this matter what it has in a long succession of cases been held to be in England, namely, that the absence of a stamp is insufficient to deprive the document of its character of a valuable security in the view of penal law.⁷

8. 'Will'.—See s. 31, supra. Where a will is fraudulently concealed, the grant of letters of administration which operates as a judgment in rem and presupposes the non-existence of the will, is no bar to a prosecution for this offence.⁸

9. 'Valuable security'.—See s. 30, supra. Tearing up of a lease,⁹ a promissory note,¹⁰ or a rough account showing a liability on the part of the accused¹¹ amounts to the destruction of a valuable security, within the meaning of this section, even though the document may not be stamped, and is therefore inadmissible to enforce any legal claim. A person tearing to pieces a registered conveyance is guilty under this section although the document is invalid for want of consideration.¹²

⁴ Akbar Hossain, (1938) 43 C. W. N. 222.

⁵ Ram Barakh Pathak, (1925) 48 All. 140.

⁶ Susenbihari Ray, (1930) 58 Cal. 1051, 1061, s.b.; Nukur Chandra Sarcar v. Ranjit Kumar Mullick, (1938) 58 C. L. J. 283. 35 C. L. J. 716, [1934] AIR (C) 217.

⁷ (1873) 7 M. H. C. (Appx.) 26, 1 Weir 552.

⁸ Mali Muthu Servay, (1926) 4 Ran. 251.

⁹ Nittar Mundle, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 88.

¹⁰ Madurai, (1888) 12 Mad. 45.

¹¹ Ramasami, (1888) 12 Mad. 148; Ram Parshad v. Dhanna, (1938) 41 P. L. R. 198.

¹² Kotha Goundan, (1890) 1 Weir 554.

An administrative order passed by the Criminal Superintendent of a Court of Session directing the Nazir of the Court to release an accused on bail is not a valuable security.¹³

10. 'Mischief'.—See s. 425, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document in question is, or purports to be, a will, or an authority to adopt, or a valuable security.¹⁴

(2) That the accused has cancelled, destroyed, defaced, or secreted the same or has attempted to do so, or that he has committed mischief in respect of it.

(3) That he did as above fraudulently or dishonestly or to cause damage or injury to the public, or to some person.¹⁵

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Sections 467 and 477.—Where the act of the accused which constitutes forgery is the same as the act which amounts to fraudulent destruction or defacement or cancellation of the document, he cannot be convicted of separate offences under ss. 467 and 477.¹⁶

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, fraudulently [or dishonestly, or with intent to cause damage or injury to AB (or to the public)] cancelled [or destroyed, or defaced, or attempted to cancel, destroy, deface, or secreted, or attempted to secrete, or committed mischief, in respect of] a document, to wit——, which is [or purports to be] a will [or an authority to adopt, or valuable security], and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 477 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

477A. Whoever, being a clerk, officer or servant, or employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer or servant,¹ wilfully, and with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates or falsifies any book, paper, writing, valuable security or account² which belongs to or is in the possession of his employer,³ or has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer, or wilfully, and with intent to defraud, makes or abets⁴ the making of any false entry in, or omits or alters or abets the omission⁵ or alteration of any material particular from or in, any such book, paper, writing, valuable security or account, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—It shall be sufficient in any charge under this section to allege a general intent to defraud without naming any particular person intended to be defrauded or specifying any particular sum of money intended to be the subject of the fraud, or any particular day on which the offence was committed.

COMMENT.

This section speaks of two offences: (1) falsification of accounts; and (2) making of false entry, or omitting or altering, or abetting the omission or alteration of an entry. These two offences are distinct and not interdependent.¹⁷

¹³ Sher Alam Khan, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 1062, 35 Cr. L. J. 479, [1933] AIR (B) 494.

¹⁴ Ibid.

¹⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 2.

¹⁶ Firbhu Dial, (1912) P. R. No. 4 of 1913,

¹⁴ Cr. L. J. 183.

¹⁷ Prafulla Chandra Kharghoria, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 925, 32 Cr. L. J. 318, [1931] AIR (C) 8.

This section makes the falsification of books and accounts punishable even though there is no evidence to prove misappropriation of any specific sum on any particular occasion.

Object.—This section was introduced by Act III of 1895, s. 4. It is intended to meet a glaring defect in the law which was proved to exist in Shama Churn Sen's case,¹⁸ in which a man was charged with defrauding a bank to the extent of three lakhs of rupees. He was acquitted because it could not be shown that the three lakhs had been abstracted upon any one particular occasion or in any particular sum. The present section is intended to meet such cases and to make the falsification of books punishable even though no particular sum of money or particular occasion can be shown. It is, with some verbal alterations, the same in substance, as s. 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875,¹⁹ which runs thus :—

“That if any clerk, officer, or servant, or any person employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer, or servant, shall wilfully and with intent to defraud, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account which belongs to or is in the possession of his employer, or has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer, or shall wilfully and with intent to defraud, make or concur in making any false entry in, or omit or alter, or concur in omitting or altering, any material particular from or in any such book, or any document, or account, then in every such case the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and be liable to be kept in penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years.”

Scope.—The marginal note to this section indicates that the section only applies where there is falsification of accounts. The Explanation to the section imports the same idea, namely, that the section refers to something in the way of book-keeping or written accounts. This point was raised but not decided in Emperor v. Bibudhananda Chakravarti,²⁰ where it was held that the removal of new Court-fee stamps from documents and substitution in their places of used stamps, with alterations of figures on them, did not fall within the scope of this section.

Ingredients.—The section requires the following essentials :—

1. The person coming within its purview must be a clerk, officer, or servant, or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer or servant.

2. He must wilfully and with intent to defraud—

(i) destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account which

(a) belongs to, or is in possession of, his employer, or

(b) has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer ; or

(ii) make or abet the making of any false entry in, or omit or alter or abet the omission or alteration of any material particular from or in, any such book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account.

1. ‘Clerk, officer or servant employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, etc.’—See ss. 381 and 408, supra. Where a partner in a firm is appointed as such to manage the business of the firm or to write its account, he acts as its servant ; and if he falsifies accounts he is liable to be punished under this section.²¹ The mere fact that he is a partner and not a clerk or a servant is no answer to a charge of falsification of accounts.²²

The words ‘acting in the capacity of a clerk or servant’ include a person who undertakes to perform and does perform the duties of a clerk or servant whether in fact he is a clerk or servant or not, and though he is under no obligation to perform such duties and receives no remuneration.²³

Payment by percentage of gross takings is no bar to the relation of master and servant.²⁴

2. ‘Wilfully, and with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates or falsifies any book, paper, etc.’—‘Wilfully’ means that the act is done deliberately ¹⁸ Calcutta case, Unreported.

¹⁹ 38 & 39 Vic., c. 24.

²⁰ (1919) 47 Cal. 71, 74.

²¹ Lalloo Ghella, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 558, 1 Cr. L. J. 757; Mahomed v. Mahomed Idris, (1924) 18 S. L. R. 274, 26 Cr. L. J. 1101, [1925]

AIR (S) 328.

²² Monindra Mohan Biswas v. Srish Chandra Das, (1981) 36 C. W. N. 303, 33 Cr. L. J. 597, [1932] AIR (C) 464.

²³ Annasami Aiyangar, (1901) 1 Weir 554.

²⁴ Alfred Solomons, (1909) 2 Cr. App. R. 288.

and intentionally, not by accident or inadvertence, but so that the mind of the person who does the act goes with it.²⁵

'Intent to defraud'.—See Comment on s. 25, supra, as to the meaning of this expression.

The Rangoon High Court has held, differing from the Bombay High Court and agreeing with the Allahabad and the Calcutta High Courts, that the meaning of the term 'with intent to defraud' is not restricted to cases of "deceit and injury to person deceived." The term means either an intention to deceive and by means of deceit to obtain an advantage or an intention that injury should befall some person or persons. Advantage which is intended must relate to some future occurrence or, in other words, must be of a prospective nature.¹ The Bombay High Court has held that the term 'intent to defraud' is restricted to cases of "deceit and injury to the person deceived."²

Even if the intention with which the false entries are made is to conceal a fraudulent or dishonest act previously committed, the intention will be to defraud.³ Making a false document with a view to prevent persons already defrauded from ascertaining that misappropriations had been committed, and thus to enable the person who committed the misappropriations to retain the wrongful gain which he had secured, amounts to the commission of a fraud and brings the case under this section.⁴ The issuing of a false statutory report of a company calculated to deceive the public and intended to induce them to invest their money in the company which they would not otherwise have invested is an act done with intent to defraud.⁵ Where a talati committed a breach of a departmental rule that he was to pay small sums collected by him into the treasury within five days, but paid them beyond time, and altered dates in his books to show that payments were made within time, it was held that he was not guilty of this offence as he had no fraudulent intent.⁶

'Falsifies'.—The expression 'falsify' applies to the preparation of an entirely new document containing false information. To 'falsify' means to 'render false' and a new document containing false information is correctly described as false document and the act of preparing such a document is called the falsification of the document.⁷

'Valuable security'.—See s. 30, supra.

'Account'.—The offence is complete when accounts are falsified with intent to defraud.⁸ An alteration of the accounts made after embezzlement will come within the section, if it is a part of the scheme to deprive another of his moneys.⁹ But the alteration of accounts so as to show the receipt of a sum of money criminally misappropriated and in order to remove evidence of such misappropriation is not an offence under this section, there being no intent to commit fraud. The accused were the post-master and treasurer of a post office. The post-master despatched to a person four sacks of waste-paper forms of the post office kept in his custody and appropriated the proceeds of the sale which amounted to Rs. 10. The fact was discovered and an inquiry was set on foot. The post-master, to cover his failure to credit the proceeds of the sale, with the help of the treasurer, changed the accounts. The post-master was charged and convicted under ss. 409, 465, 471 and this section and the treasurer, under ss. 465, 471 and this section. It was held, on appeal, that the conviction of the post-master under s. 465 and this section was wrong, as there was no intent to commit fraud. The cases of *Lalit Mohan Sarkar v. Queen-Empress*¹⁰ and *Emperor v. Rash Behari Das*¹¹ were distinguished on the ground that in this case the entry showed that the post-master was liable and that it was a statement of the true position of affairs, whereas in the two above-mentioned cases the accounts were framed in such a way as to conceal liability and to present an untrue state of affairs.¹²

²⁵ Senior, [1899] 1 Q. B. 288, 290; Ryan, (1914) 24 Cox 185, 187.

¹ Maung Tint, ((1938) 40 Cr. L. J. 552, [1932] AIR (R) 156; Muhammad Saeed Khan, (1898) 21 All. 118; Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, (1925) 52 Cal. 881.

² Harjivan Valji, (1925) 50 Bom. 174, 28 Bom. L. R. 115; Sanjiv Ratnappa, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 1090, 56 Bom. 488.

³ Rash Behari Das, (1908) 35 Cal. 450.

⁴ Ragho Ram, (1933) 55 All. 788.

⁵ Ram Chand Gurwala, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 88, 1387, (1926) AIR (L) 385.

⁶ Kashinath Ramchandra Davari, (1931) Crim. Appeal No. 525 of 1930, decided by Beaumont, C. J., and Murphy, J., on January 7, 1931 (Unrep. Bom.).

⁷ Ram Chand Gurwala, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1383, 1387, [1926] AIR (L) 385.

⁸ Narain Dat Tiwari v. Rudra Dat Bhat, (1925) 47 All. 948.

⁹ Annasami Aiyangar, (1901) 1 Weir 554.

¹⁰ (1894) 22 Cal. 313.

¹¹ (1908) 35 Cal. 450.

¹² Jyotish Chandra Mukerjee, (1909) 33 Cal. 955.

The word 'account' includes any contrivance for registering words or figures. The figures on an automatic taximeter may be an account. An offence under this section is committed if a servant wilfully and with intent to defraud tampers with a mechanical instrument used by his employer for registering figures from which an account is subsequently prepared. There are now in use a number of mechanical means for counting money and calculating sums received or paid, and it would be a serious thing to say that to falsify the mechanical means whereby an account is brought into existence is not to falsify an account. A company were the owners of certain motor-cabs and had in their service a number of cab-drivers. Each cab was fitted with a taximeter, that is, a mechanical instrument which, when in action, registers upon a dial the amount earned by the driver from persons hiring the cab. The taximeter was put into and out of action by the driver depressing and raising a lever respectively. From the figures appearing on the dial at the end of the day an account was prepared stating the proportions due to the company and to the driver for the use of the cab. For several successive days a driver in the company's service took certain passengers on a definite round, receiving from them on each day the same fare. While taking the passengers on this round, the driver, wilfully and with intent to defraud, drove the cab with the lever of the taximeter raised, so that the instrument was put out of action and registered nothing. It was held that the driver was guilty of falsifying an account.¹³

3. 'Belongs to or is in the possession of his employer'.—The account which an accused person renders false must belong to, or be in the possession of, his employers.¹⁴ Documents containing accounts, in respect of which falsifications were alleged to have been made, were prepared by an agent but were never made over to the employer, who was many thousand miles away in another country, and there was no falsification after they reached the hands of the complainant, it was held that it did not amount to an offence under this section as the documents could not be said to be belonging to or in possession of the employer.¹⁵

4. 'Abets'.—See s. 107, supra.

5. 'Omission'.—See s. 33, supra.

CASES.

Alteration or falsification in book, register, etc.—The accused, a Forest clerk, made alterations in the cash book and the office register of his office, so as to make it appear from the books that certain moneys due in respect of "compounding fees" were in fact paid into the Government treasury, when they had been embezzled by the Forest Guard whose duty it was to collect them. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section inasmuch as the false entries were made with a view to conceal the embezzlement, and thereby to deprive the Government of their money.¹⁶ The accused was a sub-overseer in the Wards and Encumbered Estates Department and his duty was to prepare estimates of repair works to buildings, etc., of the estates under administration, to supervise the works, to measure and certify the amount of work done and calculate what was due to the contractor to whom payment was made on bills prepared by him. He prepared a bill purporting to be based on measurements made on March 25, 1986. The bill contained a certificate that the work had been satisfactorily completed and had been measured by the accused on that date, the measurements being entered in his measurement book. On the basis of the certificate the bill was passed and paid. The accused, having been prosecuted on a charge under this section, admitted that the entries in the measurement book were fictitious and that he had not in fact measured up the work. His defence was that if the whole of the work done by the contractor had been measured up, it would have been found that the contractor in fact had not been overpaid but had done work in excess of the amount billed for. It was held that the accused having wilfully falsified the measurement book and bill with the intent that the contractor's bill might be passed without actual measurement, he wilfully exposed the estate to risk of loss, and his act amounted to a 'fraudulent' falsification of account, and that it was no answer to the charge for ¹³ Solomons, [1909] 2 K. B. 98C.

¹⁴ Palin, [1906] 1 K. B. 7.

¹⁵ E. A. Morely, (1936) 37 Cr. L. J. 927, [1936] AIR (R) 299.

¹⁶ Annasami Aiyangar, (1901) 1 Weir 554.

the accused to say that he did not know that wrongful loss would be caused to Government or wrongful gain to the contractor, when he certified the correctness of a claim which he believed was not exaggerated.¹⁷

False entries in register.—Certain sums of money were received at a Munsifi for payment into the Government treasury but they were never paid. The accused, an accountant in the Munsifi's Court, did not enter these sums in the Chelan Register. But after the commencement of an inquiry into the matter, he, for the purpose of concealing the non-payment, made false entries in the register showing that these sums had been paid to the credit of the Collector. It was held that inasmuch as the accused, in making the false entries, was in reality furthering the fraud which had been committed upon the Government, he acted fraudulently and was guilty under this section.¹⁸ Where a postal clerk was alleged to have retained money, the proceeds of a V. P. P. sale, for three months, and made a false entry in his register of V. P. P.'s to the effect that the parcel had been refused by the addressee and returned to the vendor, and then after he had been transferred to another station, to have remitted the money, to the vendor, it was held that an offence under this section had been committed.¹⁹ The accused a sub-postmaster, received a V. P. letter to be delivered to a person on payment of the V. P. amount. He handed over the letter to that person without getting payment on or before October 20, 1925, and then altered his accounts so as to make it appear that he only handed over the letter on October 24, 1925. It was held that the accused was guilty of falsification of accounts.²⁰

The accused made unauthorised entries in a book showing certain donees of land as proprietors of their holding merely without any share in the shamilat, whereas previously they were shown as full proprietors. The deeds of gift made no mention of the shamilat and it was therefore a moot point whether the gifts covered a share in the shamilat or not and prima facie the new entries made by the accused were correct. It was held that it could not be said that accused (who acted bona fide) fraudulently altered any book or register within the meaning of this section.²¹ The accused, the managing director of a bank, wishing the bank to make a better show than the real facts of its working would warrant, in order to maintain the confidence of the shareholders and the public and so to make possible a project for increasing largely the bank's capital, on December 17, 1912, got his son to present a pro-note for Rs. 3,000 as a pro tanto addition to the profits for 1912 by reducing on paper to that extent his remuneration account from Rs. 4,050, which he had actually drawn, to Rs. 1,050, and thus deceiving the shareholders as to the real profits, induced them to declare a dividend of 6 per cent. instead of some 3 per cent. which would otherwise have been the most possible. Later, in January 1913, i.e., after the close of the financial year, the whole thing was readjusted and matters returned to the status quo ante December 17, 1912. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section inasmuch as he falsified the balance-sheet of 1912 and the books of the bank by showing as profits Rs. 3,000 which were not profits and that he falsified them none the less because he first manufactured a pro-note in order to give the falsified balance-sheet and books an appearance of correctness.²² Where the accused, who was a paid supervisor of a society connected with the co-operative movement, debited Rs. 2 as the pay of a sweeper woman, took the thumb impression of his nephew against the debit entry, certified the thumb impression to be that of the sweeper woman, and appropriated the amount to himself, it was held that the accused had committed the offence of falsification of accounts under this section as he had made a false debit entry.²³

English cases.—B, a collector in the employment of N, collected on February 22, from S £8 14s. 10d., due to N. The ordinary course of business was for B, at the end of each day, to account to E, N's cash clerk, for moneys collected during the day, E's duty being to enter payments accounted for by B in the cash-book. On the evening of February 22, B gave E a slip of paper on which he had written, "Shepard, on ac-

¹⁷ Sukhamoy Maitra, (1937) 16 Pat. 688.

¹⁸ Rash Behari Das, (1908) 35 Cal. 450.

¹⁹ W. C. Das, (1909) 1 U. B. R. (P. C.) 29, 11 Cr. L. J. 185.

²⁰ Kandasami Aiyar, (1926) 52 M. L. J. 703, 25 L. W. 656, 28 Cr. L. J. 552, [1927] AIR (M) 626.

²¹ Muhammad Sirdar, (1914) P. R. No. 25 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 19, [1914] AIR (L) 586.

²² Daulat Rai, (1915) P. R. No. 28 of 1915, 16 Cr. L. J. 473.

²³ Keshav Rao, (1934) 36 Bom. L. R. 1120, 36 Cr. L. J. 522, [1935] AIR (B) 30.

count, £5", which E copied into the cash-book, believing that it represented the whole amount collected by B from Shepard. It was held that B was rightly convicted under s. 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act.²⁴ The accused was employed by a firm carrying on business in London, to manage their branch in Paris. It was his daily duty to enter on slips an account of all sums received by him in Paris for his employers, and to transmit those slips to them in London in order that the amounts might be entered up in a cash book kept in London. On a certain day the accused received three sums in Paris, which he fraudulently appropriated to his own use, and omitted to enter the receipt thereof on the slips sent by him on that day to London, knowing and intending that the same would in consequence be omitted from the cash-book, as was the case. It was held that the accused was guilty under s. 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act.²⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified the book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account in question.

(2) That the accused was a clerk, officer, or servant, or acted in any such capacity.

(3) That the book, paper, etc., belonged to, or was in the possession of, his employer, or had been received by him for or on behalf of his employer.

(4) That the accused did as in (1) wilfully and with intent to defraud.

Or prove (1) that the accused made or abetted the making of any false entry in or omitted or altered or abetted the omission or alteration of some material particular from or in such book, paper, etc.

(2), (3) and (4) as above.

It is necessary to show not merely false entries in the books of accounts, but that such false entries were made with intent to defraud.¹ It is not necessary to prove that any person or persons was or were actually deceived; it is quite sufficient if it is proved that the false statutory report by a company had that tendency.²

When a person is charged with falsification of accounts, any number of falsifications may be proved in order to sustain the principal charge of falsification.³

Although one accused is charged for the whole offence, he can be convicted under this section for having done one of the acts which make up the offence committed in furtherance of the common intention of himself and his co-actors.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Sanction.—No sanction is required for institution of a prosecution under this section with regard to a document produced in Court as this section is not covered by the provisions of s. 195 (1) (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁵

Where the accused, a Sub-Assistant Surgeon, was charged with an offence under this section for wilfully and with intent to defraud omitting to record certain entries in a stock book of medicines belonging to the hospital where he was employed and in his possession, it was held that the consent of the Governor as required for the institution of proceedings under s. 270 (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935, as he did the act in the execution of his duty.⁶ Where a public servant withdrew money from the cash in his keeping and misappropriated it and made false entries in the cash book showing sums totalling this amount as paid to certain forest guards, it was held that the sanction for the prosecution of an offence under this section was necessary.⁷

Charge.—Each act of falsification of a distinct document amounts to a separate offence; and an accused person can only be charged with and tried at one trial in respect of any number of such falsifications not exceeding three committed in the space of one year.⁸ The alteration in the law by s. 222 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to a charge under this section. It applies only to criminal breach of ²⁴ Butt, (1884) 15 Cox 564.

²⁵ Oliphant, [1905] 2 K. B. 67.

¹ Drewett, (1904) 21 T. L. R. 164.

² Ram Chand Gurwala, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1383, [1926] AIR (L) 385.

³ Prafulla Chandra Kharghoria, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 925, 32 Cr. L. J. 318, [1931] AIR (C) 8.

⁴ Satyamnarayan, (1943) 22 Pat. 681.

⁵ Jethmal Lalchand, (1931) 25 S. L. R. 471,

33 Cr. L. J. 328.

⁶ Hori Ram Singh, [1939] F. C. R. 159.

⁷ Mangharam Ghumanmal, [1941] Kar. 328.

⁸ Fitzmaurice, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 793, [1926] AIR (L) 193; Manant K. Mehta, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1343, 49 Bom. 892; G. S. Ramsheshan, (1935) 31 N. L. R. 337, 36 Cr. L. J. 1216, [1935] AIR (N) 178.

trust or dishonest misappropriation of money.⁹ A series of falsification of accounts made to cover a single act of defalcation may be laid in one charge.¹⁰ The terms of this section indicate that a certain elasticity is permissible in framing a charge under it, and it is not necessary to confine the charge to one particular false entry. A general falsification of specified books, papers, or accounts may be alleged in combination with an allegation of fraudulent intent, no details of the person affected by the fraud or the amount involved, or the date or dates on which the offence was committed being required. A number of falsifications can be included in a single charge provided they are connected with the same fraud; that is to say although it is possible to regard them as separate offences, the law provides that they may also be regarded as one offence. A charge under s. 408, combining a number of offences of criminal breach of trust under s. 222 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, can be combined with a charge under this section, of falsification of accounts relating to that charge generally and covering a large number of false entries in account books, provided that the offence alleged under this section can be said to have been committed in the course of the same transactions as the offence under s. 408.¹¹ But where the prosecution selected more than three charges under this section although by the device adopted by the public prosecutor twenty-eight charges were condensed into four by using sub-headings under each charge, it was held that the charges as framed were illegal.¹² The offences of criminal breach of trust by misappropriating public money, and of falsifying muster-rolls month after month for a full year can be tried together.¹³

The accused was charged with three distinct offences of criminal breach of trust under s. 409 in respect of three items received by him and with three distinct offences of falsification of accounts under this section. It was held that the case was not covered by ss. 234 and 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and consequently under s. 233, Criminal Procedure Code, there should have been separate charges and every charge should have been tried separately.¹⁴

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being a clerk (or officer, etc.), to AB, wilfully, and with intent to defraud, destroyed (or altered, mutilated, etc.), a certain book (or paper, writing, etc.) to wit—, which belonged to (or which was in the possession of) the said AB, your employer; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 477A of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Of Trade, Property and Other Marks.

Sections 478 to 489 were substituted for the original sections by the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), s. 3.

Object.—The Madras High Court has observed: “Ordinarily the infringement of a trade mark is rather a civil than a criminal wrong, but as civil proceedings may require much time and expenditure to bring them to a conclusion, the Legislature, in its anxiety to protect traders, has allowed of resort to the criminal Courts to provide a speedy remedy in cases where the aggrieved party is diligent and does not by his conduct show that the case is not one of urgency. If, therefore, the person aggrieved fails to resort to the criminal Courts within a year of the offence coming to his knowledge, the law assumes that the case is not one of urgency, and it leaves him to his civil remedy by an action for injunction”.¹⁵ This view has been preferred by the Bombay High Court¹⁶ to the contrary view taken by the Calcutta High Court.¹⁷

⁹ Mati Lal Lahiri, (1899) 26 Cal. 560; Raman Behari Das, (1913) 41 Cal. 722; Kalka Prasad, (1915) 38 All. 42.

¹⁰ Mangal Sen, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 958, [1929] AIR (L) 843.

¹¹ Debi Prasad, [1944] O. W. N. 1, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 538, [1944] AIR (O) 122.

¹² Ramautar Lal, (1941) 21 Pat. 113.

¹³ Dubri Misir, (1930) 6 Luck. 441.

¹⁴ Bhu Prakash, [1940] A. L. J. R. 796.

¹⁵ Ruppell v. Porinusami Tevan, (1899) 22 Mad. 488, 490.

¹⁶ Abdulsatar Khan, (1935) 37 Bom. L. R. 580, 59 Bom. 551.

¹⁷ Akshoy Kumar Dey, (1928) 32 C. W. N. 699, 30 Cr. L. J. 252, [1928] AIR (C) 495; Nagendranath Shaha, (1929) 57 Cal. 1158.

A person aggrieved by the infringement of his trade-mark has two remedies open to him : (1) he can institute criminal proceedings under the Code, or (2) he can bring an action for an injunction and damages ; and, although the criminal Court has a discretion in view of the peculiar circumstances of a particular case, e.g. if there exists a bona fide dispute as to the right to use a trade-mark, or where there has been undue delay in commencing criminal proceedings, to stay its own hands, and direct the complainant to establish his rights in a civil Court it is nowhere laid down by the Legislature that an aggrieved person should seek his remedy in a civil Court and not in a criminal Court.¹⁸

Abetment.—"If any person, being within British India, abets the commission, without British India, of any act which, if committed in British India, would ...under any section of that part of Chapter XVIII of the Indian Penal Code which relates to trade, property and other marks, be an offence, he may be tried for such abetment in any place in British India in which he may be found, and be punished therefor with the punishment to which he would be liable if he had himself committed in that place the act which he abetted."¹⁹

478. For the purposes of this Code, the expression "trade mark" includes a trade mark registered under the Trade Marks Act, 1940, and any mark used in relation to goods for the purpose of indicating or so as to indicate a connection in the course of trade between the goods and some person having the right to use the mark.

Trade Mark.

COMMENT.

This section was substituted in the place of the old section by Act II of 1941, s. 12.

A trade-mark is some symbol, consisting in general of a picture, label, word, or words, which is applied or attached to a trader's goods, so as to distinguish them from similar goods of other traders, and to identify them as his goods or as those of his successors in the business in which they are produced or put forward for sale.

The Trade Marks Act (V of 1940) has been passed to provide for the registration and more effective protection of trade marks.²⁰ British India has now a system of registration of trade-marks similar to the English Trade Marks Act. The provisions of the Act are in addition to, and not in derogation of, the provisions of any other law for the time being in force (s. 3). The Act does not affect rights of action against any person for passing off goods as the goods of another person or the remedies in respect thereof (s. 20 (2)).

A trade-mark may be acquired by adoption and user upon a vendible article, and when such user has been proved, the property of the person using the trade-mark will be protected. Property in or right in respect of a mark may be acquired by user.²¹ If a photographer applies a trade mark to photographs which he sells, the provisions of this section are as applicable to such trade-mark as they are to trade-marks on other goods and vendible articles.²² A person may to some extent appropriate to his own use a name suggested by his trade, without infringing the law relating to trade-marks or trade descriptions.²³

Scope.—The section deals with trade-marks and not with cases analogous to those of trade-marks. The Bombay High Court has held that the general resemblance or get-up, irrespective of the circumstance that the registered trade-mark is different, does amount to counterfeiting a trade-mark.²⁴ Similarly, the Calcutta High Court has laid down that the expression 'trade-mark' must not be confined to the trade-

¹⁸ Banarsi Das, (1928) 9 Lah. 491; Muham-mad Raza, (1930) 6 Luck. 183.

¹⁹ Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), s. 22.

²⁰ The Act came into force on June 1, 1942, G. I. Extraordinary, 1942, p. 684. Notification No. 405-Ind. (1) 142.

²¹ P. A. Pakir Mahomed, [1929] Cr. C. 498;

Hafizullah v. Sheikh Papa, (1933) 30 N. L. R. 45, 35 Cr. L. J. 373, [1933] AIR (N) 344.

²² Klier v. Ahuja, (1907) 6 Cr. L. J. 392.

²³ Bakaulah Mallik, (1904) 31 Cal. 411.

²⁴ Ganpat Sitaram Mukadam, (1914) 16 Bom. L. R. 78, 15 Cr. L. J. 522, [1914] AIR (B) 128; P. A. Pakir Mahomed, [1929] Cr. C. 498.

mark of the complaining party registered in England, but must include the whole design and label.² The former Chief Court of Lower Burma had held a contrary opinion.³

1. 'Mark'.—A mark to be a trade-mark must be a mark used for denoting that the goods are the manufacture or the merchandise of a particular person.⁴ A trade-mark must be some visible and concrete device or design affixed to goods to indicate that they are the manufacture of the person whose property the trade-mark is.⁵ A mark in order to be trade-mark must be 'distinctive', that is to say, adapted to distinguish the goods of the proprietor of a trade-mark from those of other persons. A mark which merely describes the quality or origin of an article or is such as is commonly used in the trade to denote goods of a particular kind is not 'distinctive'. To determine whether a mark has become a trade-mark, the Court has to take into consideration the extent to which its user has rendered the mark in fact distinctive of the goods in question.⁶ A label which, from long use, has come to be associated in the market with goods manufactured by a particular person is his trade-mark.⁷ "The right which a manufacturer has in his trade-mark is the exclusive right to use for the purpose of indicating where, or by whom, or at what manufactory, the article to which it is affixed was manufactured."⁸ A mark which has been used by the complainant in the market for six years can become his trade-mark.⁹ "A man may mark his own manufacture, either by his name, or by using for the purpose any symbol or emblem, however unmeaning in itself, and if such symbol or emblem comes by use to be recognised in trade as the mark of the goods of a particular person, no other trader has a right to stamp it upon his goods of a similar description".¹⁰ "A man is not to sell his own goods under the pretence that they are the goods of another man; he cannot be permitted to practise such a deception, nor to use the means which contribute to that end. He cannot therefore be allowed to use names, marks, letters, or other indicia, by which he may require purchasers to believe, that the goods which he is selling are the manufacture of another person".¹¹ It is immaterial whether the deception arises from the use of a name which is, as it happens, the name of the defendant, or whether it arises from the use of any other description which in a sense may be accurate of that which he sells. For, if the article which he sells has come to be known in the market as meaning something made by somebody other than himself, it is impossible for him to sell it simpliciter by that name, although it be his own, without misleading purchasers.¹²

Where a manufacturer has no exclusive right to manufacture a certain article or even articles of a particular brand, all that he can claim is that no other manufacturer should so mark such articles as to pass them off as the former's when they are not.¹³

Property in a trade-mark is "the right to the exclusive use of some mark, name, or symbol in connexion with a particular manufacture, or vendible commodity; consequently, the use of the same mark in connexion with a different article is not an infringement of such right of property. If, therefore, the trade-mark includes in itself a clear and distinct description of the commodity to which it is affixed, it is not pirated by the use of a mark which, although in other respects similar, does not contain or give the same description, and which is impressed upon an article which is not of the nature or quality so described".¹⁴ There can be no right to the exclusive ownership of any symbol or mark universally in the abstract. Thus, an iron-founder who uses a particular mark for his manufactures in iron could not restrain the use of the same mark when impressed upon cotton or woollen goods: for the property in a trade-

² Nilmoney Nag v. Durga Pada Banerji, (1915) 19 C. W. N. 957, 16 Cr. L. J. 719, [1916] AIR (C) 538.

³ Petley & Son v. S. Ah Kyan, (1903) 2 L. B. R. 159, sub-nom. Stephen Ah Kyan v. James Petley, (1903) 1 Cr. L. J. 375.

⁴ Anookool Chunder Nundy, (1900) 27 Cal. 776.

⁵ Anath Nath Dey, (1912) 40 Cal. 281.

⁶ Loke Nath Sen v. Ashwini Kumar De, [1938] 1 Cal. 665.

⁷ Sri Narayan v. Mohammad Abu Saleh, [1940] 2 Cal. 1, 2.

⁸ Per Lord Cranworth in Leather Cloth Company v. American Leather Cloth Company, (1865) 11 H. L. C. 523, 533, 534.

⁹ Lakhan Chandra, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1098,

[1925] AIR (C) 149.

¹⁰ Per Lord Kingsdown in Leather Cloth Company v. American Leather Cloth Company, (1865) 11 H. L. C. 523, 538.

¹¹ Per Lord Langdale in Perry v. Truefitt, (1842) 6 Beav. 66, 73.

¹² Valentine Meat Juice Co. v. Valentine Extract Co., Ltd., (1900) 83 L. T. 259. See Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company v. Dunlop Motor Company, Limited, [1907] A. C. 430; Eno v. Dunn, (1890) 15 App. Cas. 252.

¹³ Ananth Nath Dey, (1912) 40 Cal. 281.

¹⁴ Per Lord Chancellor Westbury in The Leather Cloth Company (Limited) v. American Leather Cloth Company (Limited), (1863) 33 L. J. Ch. 199, 201, on appeal, (1865) 11 H. L. C. 523.

mark consists in the exclusive right to the use of that mark as applied to some particular manufacture or vendible 'commodity'.¹⁵

A letter or a combination of letters may constitute a trade-mark.¹⁶ But it is doubtful whether a bottle itself could be considered a trade-mark.¹⁷

A design or pattern, which covers the whole body of the goods and appears to be part and parcel of the goods, is not a trade-mark, or trade description.¹⁸

2. 'Merchandise'.—Merchandise is not synonymous with goods and in connection with trade-marks clearly conveys the idea of goods offered for sale by some person or persons concerned in or connected with the origin or history of the goods, of whose guarantee as to the reliability of the goods the trade-marks are a symbol. Merchandise implies goods not only offered for sale but also selected and so to say guaranteed by the proprietor of the trade-mark.¹⁹

Mark of importer of goods.—A distinctive mark may be adopted by a person who is not the manufacturer but the importer of goods, and he will acquire property in that mark as indicating that all goods which bear it have been imported by him. Where the complainants, importers of hand-made sugar, used a distinctive mark denoting that the sugar contained in the bags so marked had been imported by them (their customers accepting the mark as a guarantee that the sugar was hand-made), and the accused were found as having used the same mark whereby the complainants had established a special trade, it was held that the accused were guilty of using a false trade-mark.²⁰ A merchant importing goods is entitled to the same protection of his trade-mark as the manufacturer, and the selector-importer who affixes his name or other trade-mark to the goods is a person whose merchandise they are. Such goods, if bought by a person for selling them again, do not become his merchandise in the same sense. The name of an importer duly appended to the goods can be a valid trade-mark; so also a number having nothing to do with the cloth except as an indication of its manufacturer or importer.²¹ Where in the course of a user extending over a large number of years, goods were sold by a firm bearing a certain mark which had been known to purchasers by that mark, it was held that a prosecution would lie at the instance of the firm.²²

479. A mark used for denoting that moveable property belongs to a particular person is called a property mark.

COMMENT.

The distinction between 'trade-mark' and 'property-mark' is not recognized in English law.

480. Whoever marks any goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle with any mark thereon,¹ in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked, or any goods contained in any such receptacle so marked,² have a connection in the course of trade with a person with whom they have not any such connection, is said to use a false trade mark.

COMMENT.

This section says what constitutes the user of a false trade mark.

It is good law as well as common sense that no man has a right to put off his goods

¹⁵ Per Lord Chancellor Westbury in Hall v. Barrows. (1868) 33 L. J. Ch. 204, 207-8.

¹⁶ See Banarsi Das, (1928) 9 Lah. 491.

¹⁷ E. S. Olpadavalla v. James Wright, (1928) 32 C. W. N. 1115, 30 Cr. L. J. 832, [1928] AIR (C) 873.

¹⁸ Narumal Khemchand v. The Bombay Co., Ltd., (1914) 8 S. L. R. 89, 15 Cr. L. J. 670, [1914] AIR (S) 109.

¹⁹ J. M. Dunbar v. The Holland Bombay Trading Co., (1918) 12 S. L. R. 129, 20 Cr. L. J. 277, [1914] AIR (S) 98.

²⁰ Latif, (1916) 39 All. 123.

²¹ J. M. Dunbar v. The Holland Bombay Trading Co., (1918) 12 S. L. R. 129, 20 Cr. L. J. 277, [1914] AIR (S) 98.

²² P. A. Pakir Mahomed, [1929] Cr. C. 498.

for sale as the goods of a rival trader, and with the object to use names, marks, letters or other indications by which he may induce purchasers to believe that the goods which he is selling are the manufacture of another person's. Still less is he entitled to use marks containing a falsehood on their face for the purpose of deceiving purchasers and palming off upon them an article other than that which they believed they were contracting to buy.

Ingredients.—This section has two essentials :—

1. Marking any goods or any case,²³ package, or receptacle, containing goods ; or using any case, package, or receptacle, with any mark thereon.

2. Such marking or using must be in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked, or the goods in the marked receptacle, are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not.

1. 'Whoever marks any goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, etc.'—If the goods of a manufacturer have from the mark he has used come to be known by a particular name, the adoption by a rival trader of any mark which would cause his goods to bear the same name in the market, may be as much a violation of the rights of that rival as an actual copy of his device. In such cases dissimilarity of the rival marks is not a complete defence.²⁴ The word 'goods' includes books.²⁵ On a complaint alleging that the accused printed and sold an unauthorised edition of a book with the contents, outer cover and title-page being exactly the same as in the authorised edition, it was held that in order to bring the case under this section it must be shown that the accused had marked the book he was selling in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that it was the manufacture or merchandise of, or that it belonged to, a person whose manufacture or merchandise it was not, or to whom it did not belong. If this is shown it will be on the accused to show that it was not done to defraud any one.¹

2. 'In a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed, etc'.—The test of the infringement of a trade-mark is whether the acts alleged as an infringement are likely to mislead the public into dealing with the alleged infringer under the belief that they are dealing with a person who first used the mark.² How is this to be tested? Lord Herschell said: "It seems to me...that the eye must be the judge in such a case as this, and that the question must be determined by placing the designs side by side, and asking whether they are the same, or whether the one is an obvious imitation of the other".³ Mere "differences in detail do not prevent the two designs being essentially the same".⁴ "The imitation of a man's trade-mark, in a manner liable to mislead the unwary, cannot be justified by shewing, either that the device or inscription upon the imitated mark is ambiguous, and capable of being understood by different persons in different ways, or that a person who carefully and intelligently examined and studied it might not be misled."⁵ Thus, it is by no means necessary that there should be absolute identity. What degree of resemblance is necessary from the nature of things, is a matter incapable of definition a priori. All that the Court of Justice can do is to say that no trader can adopt a trade-mark so resembling that of a rival, as that ordinary purchasers, purchasing with ordinary caution, are likely to be misled. Actual physical resemblance of the two marks is not the sole question for consideration.⁶ The proper test is whether the 'get-up' of the accused's goods is likely to deceive a purchaser who is acquainted with the complainant's 'get-up', but who trusts to his memory. It is to be assumed that the purchaser will look fairly at the goods without the distinguishing features being concealed and the Court must ²³ Manavala Chetty, (1906) 29 Mad. 569.

²⁴ Abdul Majid, (1916) 9 L. B. R. 31, 17 Cr. L. J. 488, [1917] AIR (LB) 149.

²⁵ Kanai Das Bairagi v. Radha Shyam Basack, (1898) 26 Cal. 232; Raghavulu Naidu v. Sundramurthi Mudali, (1907) 31 Mad. 512.

¹ Raghavulu Naidu v. Sundramurthi Mudali, (1907) 31 Mad. 512.

² Hall v. Barrows, (1863) 33 L. J. Ch. 204; Leather Cloth Company v. American Leather Cloth Company, (1865) 11 H. L. C. 523; Taridas Durlabhdas, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 732, 6 Cr. L. J. 75.

³ Hecla Foundry Co. v. Walker, Hunter & Co., (1889) 14 App. Cas. 550, 555.

⁴ Per Lord Herschell in John Harper & Co., Limited v. Wright and Butler, & Co., Limited, [1896] 1 Ch. 142, 147. Nugendranath Shaha, (1929) 57 Cal. 1153.

⁵ Per Lord Selborne, L. C., in Singer Manufacturing Company v. Loog, (1882) 8 App. Cas. 15, 18.

⁶ Seizo v. Provezende, (1865) L. R. 1 Ch. 192, 196; Johnstone v. Ewing, (1882) 8 App. Cas. 219. See also John Smidt v. Reddaway & Co., (1905) 32 Cal. 401; Nemi Chand v. Wallace, also have regard to the class of purchasers by whom the goods would normally be bought.⁷ The question is not whether a purchaser would be deceived if he had the two articles side by side but the matter must be considered from the point of view of the ordinary unwary purchaser.⁸

Mere imitation is no offence unless there is an attempt to pass off goods as goods of another dealer or manufacturer either by using a false trade-mark or false description or a trade-mark or description likely to deceive purchasers by a deliberate imitation of a genuine mark or description or by falsely giving out goods as the goods of some other dealer or manufacturer.⁹

If the mark complained of is found likely to deceive customers, it is not necessary to bring evidence of any person who is actually deceived.¹⁰

The question whether the trade mark, the subject-matter of the prosecution, is a colourable imitation of another trade-mark is one of fact and the Court must come to its own conclusion after having placed itself in the position of an unwary customer. It is enough that there should be such similarity that an unwary customer may not be able to distinguish the one from the other, especially when he sees the one without having the other before him. The question is not whether anyone has been deceived in fact, but whether an average customer can be deceived and for this, the Court must form its own opinion.¹¹

Amendment.—The words “have a connection in the course...connection” were added by Act II of 1941, s. 13, for the words “are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not.”

CASES.

Calendars.—The complainant, a descendant of Shri Chandu, used to prepare calendars bearing the name of “Shri Chandu Panchang” at Jodhpur and sent each year the copy of such calendar to the publishers in different parts of India allowing them to use the name of “Shri Chandu Panchang” to denote calendars prepared in Jodhpur by the descendants of Chandu. These calendars had acquired the reputation that they were prepared by those descendants and under their authority. The defendant, a publisher in Bombay, published a calendar and used the words “Shri Chandu Panchang” on the cover, although it was not prepared by the descendants of Chandu. The complainant, thereupon, proceeded against the defendant under this section. It was held that the defendant's act could not come under this section, for the title “Shri Chandu Panchang” could not fall within the definition of ‘trade-mark’ under s. 478.¹²

Labels.—The complainants, the Holland Bombay Trading Co., used to import white shirting bearing the mark “H. B. T. C. 40,000”, a label with a design of a lion and snake and an oval stamp containing written in it the words “Sole Importers, Holland Bombay Trading Company, Limited”, and a buff heading. The accused had in their possession for purposes of sale some packages of white shirtings bearing the mark H. P. F. C. 40,000, a label with two lions and two snakes and an oval stamp containing written in it the words “Sole Importers, Holland Export Company,” and a buff heading. The letters H. B. T. C. in the complainant's and H. P. F. C. in the accused's mark were printed in similar types and were similar in size and colour. The colour and size of the labels, as also the colour, size and type of the oval stamps in both were similar. It was held (where it was proved that the complainants had a property in their marks) that the accused had used a false trade-mark and were liable (1907) 34 Cal. 495; Nga Po Saing, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 192, 7 Cr. L. J. 113; Nallaya Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 556. In a Madras case though there was considerable resemblance to the get-up of the complainant's mark yet the High Court set aside the conviction holding that the dispute was one which might be fitly decided in a civil Court: Rassolkhan Saheb, [1912] M. W. N. 85, 13 Cr. L. J. 175. See Ganpat Sitaram Mukadam, (1914) 16 Bom. L. R. 78, 15 Cr. L. J. 522.

⁷ A. M. Mahumiar & Company v. Finlay Fleming & Company, (1929) 7 Ran. 189; Roshan Singh, [1940] All. 751.

⁸ Aswini Kumar Pal, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 524, 32 Cr. L. J. 187, [1930] AIR (C) 728; Faqir Chand, (1934) 16 Lah. 114.

⁹ Hafizullah v. Shekh Papa, (1933) 30 N. L. R. 45, 35 Cr. L. J. 373, [1933] AIR (N) 344; Walkins Mayor & Co. v. Ramji Lal, [1942] O. W. N. 117.

¹⁰ Lakhan Chandra, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 1098, [1925] AIR (C) 149.

¹¹ Girdharilal Marwari, (1936) 17 P. L. T. 667, 38 Cr. L. J. 35, [1936] AIR (P) 579.

¹² Radha Krishna v. Kissonlal, (1901) 3 Bom. L. R. 883, 26 Bom. 289.

to conviction under ss. 482 and 486.¹³ The complainant had for many years carried on business as a vendor of ground coffee. He sold this in cylindrical tin boxes, each containing one pound of coffee. On the outside of the cylindrical portion of each box he had affixed a paper label on which was printed, inter alia, a picture of a railway engine and carriage. Over the lid and round each box vertically he had pasted an orange-coloured paper band, and on this, in the portion crossing the lid, a facsimile of his signature was printed. The accused sold coffee in similar tin boxes, bearing a similar band, though of a shade of pink, and a label on which was printed a picture of a steamer, the pink band purporting to be a facsimile of the accused's signature in the same position as that in which the complainant's facsimile signature appeared on his boxes. It was held that on the complainant's boxes the chief trade-mark was the picture of a railway train; that he might have a trade-mark in his facsimile signature, but the trade-mark could not reasonably be held to be infringed by the use of a signature of another person of a very different name; and that consequently a prosecution based on the use of what purported to be a facsimile of the accused's name could not succeed. It was held, further, that the band round the boxes vertically did not constitute a trade-mark as defined in the Penal Code and such band was merely a part of the 'get-up' of the boxes.¹⁴ The complainant firm had been manufacturing hair dyes since 1924 and introduced a hair dye styled "Horse Brand Shining Black Hair Dye" to the market in 1927. In addition to these words the figure of a horse was also printed on the labels. About the middle of 1932, the accused commenced to turn out a hair dye styling it the "Arabic Horse Shining Black Hair Dye." The design on it was also a horse, but there was a rider on the horse and the colours were not the same. It was held that a person asking for "Ghora Marka" hair dye might easily be given the brand of the accused though it was written on it that it was "Arabi Ghora marka" hair dye. The similarity of the get-up would also help in this deception, and that could be taken into consideration even though the complainant firm could not claim protection for the general get-up.¹⁵

Gold bars.—The mere fact that a bank imported and sold gold bars with a particular mark impressed upon them, a mark which was not originally theirs, but belonged to a bank that had ceased to exist, and where there was no proof of any transfer of assignment of the mark, or that the new bank succeeded the other in the sense either that it was a continuation of that bank under another name, or that it succeeded to the business or acquired the goodwill of that bank, was held not to be sufficient to establish that the mark was the trade-mark of the new bank.¹⁶

General name cannot be trade-mark.—The appellants, who sold fish-hooks in boxes similar to those of the respondents with a design of one fish with its head and tail turned up, were held not to have infringed the trade-mark of the respondents, who also sold fish-hooks with the design of two fish crossed, with their heads and tails turned up. It was held further that where the public had chosen a name for its own use such as "mash Marka" (fish mark), that fact could not be held to prevent other persons from applying a mark to fish-hooks, which might be generally known by the same term.¹⁷

Use of same receptacle.—A sold illuminant kerosene oil of his own refining in tins originally issued with oil of the same description by B and bearing B's trade-mark. The tins had been altered in minor particulars, and paper labels indicating the true manufacturer of the oil had been fixed. The bodies of the tins, however, on which B's trade-mark appeared, remained unaltered. It was held that A had committed this offence.¹⁸ According to an agreement between oil companies it was settled that one company could use the tins of another company, provided the company so using the tins put on the cap a distinctive mark showing that the oil was not the manufacture of the company whose tins were being used. In pursuance of this agreement the Burma Oil Company could use the tins of the Standard Oil Company (U.S.) by ¹³ Holland Bombay Trading Company v. Bukear Mull, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 421, 1 Cr. L. J. 300.

¹⁴ Stephen Ah Kyan v. James Pelley, (1903) 1 Cr. L. J. 375, sub-nom. Pelley & Son v. S. Ah Kyan, (1903) 2 L. B. R. 159.

¹⁵ Faqir Chand, (1934) 16 Lah. 114.

¹⁶ Anookool Chunder Nundy, (1900) 27 Cal. 776. See Dahyabhai Chakasha, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 513, 1 Cr. L. J. 581.

¹⁷ Bakaullah Mallik, (1904) 31 Cal. 441.

¹⁸ Po Saing, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 192, 7 Cr. L. J. 113.

putting on the cap the word "Victoria". The accused sold eight tins of kerosene oil, but only two of the tins had the word "Victoria" on the tin caps and the other six had plain tin caps. At the time of selling he had told the purchaser that the tins contained oil of the Burma Oil Company and the price agreed upon was the price of the Burma Oil Company as prevailing in the market. It was held that although the accused was guilty of using a false trade-mark so far as the six tins with plain caps were concerned, yet (in the absence of a conspiracy between the purchaser and the accused), the accused could not be convicted of using a false trade-mark, as he had acted without intent to defraud.¹⁹

481. Whoever marks any moveable property or goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing moveable property or goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle having any mark thereon,¹ in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the property or goods so marked, or any property or goods contained in any such receptacle so marked, belong to a person to whom they do not belong,² is said to use a false property mark.

COMMENT.

This section defines the offence of using a false property-mark.

A property-mark is intended to denote ownership over all moveable property belonging to a person whether it is all of one kind or of different kinds. So long as the person owns moveable properties his property-marks impressed upon them remain his, though any particular article out of it may after such impression pass out of his hands and cease to be his.²⁰

The function of a property-mark to denote certain ownership is not destroyed because any particular property on which it was impressed has ceased to be of that ownership.²¹

Ingredients.—This section requires two essentials:—

1. Marking any moveable property or goods or any case, package or receptacle containing goods; or using any case, package or receptacle, with any mark thereon.

2. Such marking or using must be in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the property or goods so marked, or the property or goods contained in such receptacle belonged to a person to whom they did not belong.

1. 'Marking any moveable property or goods, etc.'—"The term 'moveable property'...was intended by the Legislature to include a class or category of properties falling under one ownership, not merely the parts of it which may pass from the hands of the owner into other hands. The class is stable, though the units are ambulatory. The class may be likened to a chain with a multitude of links some of which from time to time drop off but there are others left or those extinct are replenished by fresh links to keep the chain going. So long as the chain remains, the moveable property represented by it is there, though its component parts fluctuate. The term 'moveable property'...was intended to include collective class nouns, i.e., nouns that express a number of objects of the same class collected together."²²

2. 'In a manner reasonably calculated to cause, etc.'—See Comment on s. 480, p. 1186.

Trade-mark and property-mark.—The term 'property-mark' is one unknown to English law, and the description of its wrongful use as given in s. 481 would, in most cases, if not in every possible case, be within the scope of English law, viewing the wrong either as a crime or a civil injury. The distinction in the Penal Code between a 'trade-mark' and a 'property-mark' is, that the former denotes the manufacture or quality of the goods to which it is attached, and the latter denotes the ownership

¹⁹ Abdul Rashid, (1918) 18 A. L. J. R. 476, 19 Cr. L. J. 722, [1918] AIR (A) 109.

²⁰ Dahyabhai Chakasha, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 513, 1 Cr. L. J. 581.

²¹ Ibid.

²² Dahyabhai Chakasha, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 513, 515, 1 Cr. L. J. 581.

of them; or more briefly, the former concerns the goods themselves, the latter the proprietor of them. From s. 481 it may be gathered that the result of this distinction is to secure greater precision of definition, rather than to extend the law of trade-marks as known to English lawyers. Thus, if A is known not to be the maker or manufacturer of the goods he sells, but only to have selected and put them up and he uses a certain mark to indicate to his customers that they will thus have the benefit of his skill in selection, then, in the terminology of the Penal Code, the mark would be a property and not a trade-mark: but if the main purpose of the mark were to indicate the quality of the goods, then even though A was not the maker of them, it would be a trade-mark and not a property-mark. On the other hand, a mark may be applied to a natural product as distinguished from a manufactured one and though such mark would then probably be called in Indian law a property-mark, it would be equally protected by English law as a trade-mark.

The words "The National Bank of India" impressed on gold bars imported by the bank constituted their "trade-mark" and not their "property-mark," for the object of the mark was not to inform the public that the gold belonged to the bank but to give an assurance that the gold no matter whose property it might be for the time being was imported and was guaranteed by the bank.²³

482. Whoever¹ uses any false trade mark or any false property mark shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for using a false trade mark or property mark.

COMMENT.

The use of false trade-mark (with 'intent to defraud') constitutes the offence under this section. If the maker of an article puts on it the trade-mark of another maker and he does this with the intention that purchasers may be induced to believe that the article was made by such other maker, he commits this offence. It will be no defence to show that the article is in every respect equal or even superior to similar articles made by the other maker, if the offender intended to practise deception and used the mark for this purpose. Where the trade-marks are so different that no one would be misled, no offence is committed.

1. 'Whoever'.—This word means the same thing as "every person who" and shows that the provisions of the section apply to persons generally. In law a corporation is a person. A limited company or a corporation is liable for using a false trade-mark or property-mark.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—For using a false trade-mark prove (1) that the accused marked the goods in question, or some case, package, or receptacle containing goods; or that he used some case, package, or receptacle bearing some mark.

(2) That the accused did as above in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked, or the goods contained in the receptacle so marked, were the manufacture or merchandise of some person.

(3) That such goods are not the manufacture or merchandise of that person.

The complainant must prove that the goods sold under his label and get-up, were goods which had a reputation in the market as being goods manufactured or sold by him of which the label and get-up were distinctive and well-known in the particular market.²⁵

For using a false property-mark prove (1) that the accused marked moveable property or goods in question, or some case, package, or receptacle containing moveable property or goods; or that he used some case, package, or receptacle bearing some mark.

²³ Lokumal, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 199, 16 Cr. L. J. 230.

²⁴ Seena M. Haniff & Co. v. Liptons Ltd., (1914) 7 L. B. R. 306, 15 Cr. L. J. 337; P. A.

Pakir Mahomed, [1929] Cr. C. 408.

²⁵ Ma Pan Ei, (1938) 40 Cr. L. J. 546, [1939] AIR (R) 145.

(2) That the accused did as above in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the property or goods so marked, or the property or goods contained in the receptacle so marked, belonged to some person.

(3) That such property or goods did not belong to that person.

Onus.—An important alteration of principle has been made in regard to offences under this section. Ordinarily, it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that the person charged had acted with intent to defraud; under this section it is incumbent on the person charged to prove that he acted innocently or that he acted without intent to defraud.¹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

See ss. 8 and 9 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), the former of which provides for unintentional contravention of the law relating to marks and description, and the latter for forfeiture of goods when a person is convicted under this section. They run as follows:—

8. Where a person is accused under s. 482 of the Indian Penal Code of using a false trade mark or property mark by reason of his having applied a mark to any goods, property or receptacle in the manner mentioned in s. 480 or s. 481 of that Code, as the case may be, or under s. 6 of this Act of applying to goods any false trade description, or under s. 485 of the Indian Penal Code of making any die, plate or other instrument for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark, and proves—

(a) that in the ordinary course of business he is employed, on behalf of other persons, to apply trade marks or property marks, or trade descriptions, or, as the case may be, to make dies, plates or other instruments for making or being used in making, trade marks or property marks, and that in the case which is the subject of the charge he was so employed and was not interested in the goods or other thing by way of profit or commission dependent on the sale thereof, and

(b) that he took reasonable precautions against committing the offence charged, and

(c) that he had, at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, no reason to suspect the genuineness of the mark or description, and

(d) that, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons in whose behalf the mark or description was applied, he shall be acquitted.

9. (1) When a person is convicted under s. 482 of the Indian Penal Code of using a false trade mark, or under s. 486 of that Code of selling, or exposing or having in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things with a counterfeit trade mark applied thereto, or under s. 487 or s. 488 of that Code of making, or making use of, a false mark, or under s. 6 or s. 7 of this Act of applying a false trade description to goods or of selling, or exposing or having in possession or sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things to which a false trade description is applied, or is acquitted on proof of the matter or matters specified in s. 486 of the Indian Penal Code or s. 7 or s. 8 of this Act, the Court convicting or acquitting him may direct the forfeiture to Her Majesty of all goods and things by means of, or in relation to, which the offence has been committed or, but for such proof as aforesaid, would have been committed.

(2) When a forfeiture is directed on a conviction, and an appeal lies against the conviction, an appeal shall lie against the forfeiture also.

(3) When a forfeiture is directed on an acquittal and the goods or things to which the direction relates are of value exceeding fifty rupees, an appeal against the forfeiture may be preferred, within thirty days from the date of the direction, to the Court to which in appealable cases appeals lie from sentences of the Court which directed the forfeiture.

Civil action.—When a bona fide dispute exists between the parties as to the right to use a trade-mark, action should be taken before a civil and not before a criminal

¹ Abdul Shakur, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 528, [1936] AIR (R) 96.

Court.² One of the tests which is always applied as to whether a dispute between the parties over trade marks and commercial designs should be allotted to a civil Court or to a criminal Court, is the question of diligence in bringing the action. Another point which has to be considered is the question of abandonment of user. The real practical test, as to the difference controlling prosecutions with regard to statutory crimes for counterfeiting trade marks and civil actions is this, that the Criminal Procedure Code is only to be used in simple and clear-cut cases where a very speedy relief is required by the prosecution. In all cases where complicated matters of registration, abandonment of user and some sort are concerned, it is very much better that the dispute should be given to the civil Courts.³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, counterfeited a trade-mark (or property-mark), to wit—, to denote that certain goods were the manufacture of AB, whose manufacture they were not (or were the property of AB, whose property they were not) in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that such goods were the manufacture (or property) of AB; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 482 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—The measure of punishment should be the damage caused to the complainant.⁴

Burma.—The period of limitation prescribed by s. 15 of the Burma Merchandise Marks Act for prosecuting an offender under the Penal Code for the use of a false trade mark is three years from the date of the commission of the offence charged or one year from the date of the discovery by the prosecutor of the offence charged, whichever is less.⁵

483. Whoever counterfeits¹ any trade mark or property mark used by any other person shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark used by another.

COMMENT.

Where the trade-mark of the complainant's goods contains a name to which there might be no right of exclusive use, and another person using a similar trade-mark with the same name is charged with selling goods marked with a counterfeit mark, a material circumstance that has to be considered in the case is what the general effect of the trade-mark adopted by the accused is and whether an incautious purchaser would be led to believe that he is buying the complainant's goods.⁶

1. 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra.

A trader cannot, even with some claim to the mark or name, adopt a trade-mark which will cause his goods to bear the same name in the market as that of a rival trade. But this rule does not mean that the physical resemblance between the two marks is not to be taken into consideration at all, and it does not mean that the fact that one mark might in the market be known under the same name as another was necessarily a violation of rights of the owner of the first mark. There must be some inherent similarity in the marks themselves which justifies the use of the same name for both.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused counterfeited the mark in question.

(2) That such mark is the trade-mark or property-mark of some person.

² Surja Prasad v. Mohabir Prasad Tribedy, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 887, 6 Cr. L. J. 151.

³ Asutosh Das v. Keshav Chandra Ghosh, (1936) 64 C. L. J. 539, Cr. L. J. 143, [1936] AIR (C) 488.

⁴ Girdharilal Marwari, (1936) 17 P. L. T. 607, 38 Cr. L. J. 35, [1936] AIR (P) 579.

⁵ Mohammad Cassim v. Shaikh Thumby, [1940] Ran. 244.

⁶ Nallaya Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 556.

⁷ Abdul Shakur, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 528, [1936] AIR (R) 96.

(3) That it was so used by that person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you] (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, counterfeited a trade-mark or property-mark, to wit—, used by AB, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 483 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

484. Whoever counterfeits¹ any property mark used by a public servant,² or any mark used by a public servant to denote that any property has been manufactured by a particular person or at a particular time or place, or that the property is of a particular quality or has passed through a particular office, or that it is entitled to any exemption, or uses as genuine any such mark knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the preceding one. An enhanced punishment is, therefore, given where a property-mark used by a public servant is counterfeited.

1. 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra. 2. 'Public servant'.—See s. 21, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused counterfeited the property-mark, or some other mark in question.

(2) That such mark is used by some public servant.

(3) That it was used to denote that the property had been manufactured by a particular person; or at a particular time or place; or that the property was of a particular quality, or had passed through a particular office, or was entitled to some exemption.

Or prove—

(1) That the accused used the property-mark, or some other mark in question.

(2) and (3) as above.

(4) That he used the mark as genuine.

(5) That when he used it he knew the same to be counterfeit.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of,— at—, counterfeited any mark (or property-mark), to wit—, used by a public servant, to wit—, to denote that some property was manufactured by AB [or at a particular time or place, to wit—, or that the property was of a particular quality, to wit—, or had passed through a particular office, to wit—, or that it was entitled to a certain exemption, to wit—] [or used as genuine a mark, to wit—, knowing the same to be counterfeit], and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 484 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

485. Whoever makes or has in his possession any die, plate or other instrument for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark, or has in his possession a trade mark or property mark for the purpose of denoting that any goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not, or that they belong to a person to whom they do not belong, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Making or possession of any instrument for counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark.

COMMENT.

The making or possession of instruments for counterfeiting a trade-mark or property-mark is hereby punished. This section resembles ss. 285, 256 and 472.

As to the definition of "possession," see s. 27, supra.

Where a trade-mark consisted of an impression moulded in glass of which bottles were made together with label and the accused was found in possession of the mould with the intention of counterfeiting that trade mark, although the apparatus for counterfeiting the label which would complete the trade-mark had not been found, it was held that he could be convicted under this section.⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, or had in his possession the die, plate, or instrument in question.

(2) That such die, etc., was for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade-mark or property-mark.

Or prove—

(1) That the accused had in his possession the trade-mark or property-mark in question.

(2) That he possessed such trade-mark or property-mark for the purpose of denoting that goods bearing such mark were the manufacture or merchandise of some person, or that they belonged to some person.

(3) That such goods were not the manufacture or merchandise of that person or that they did not belong to that person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

See ss. 8 and 9 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, set out under s. 482, supra.

486. Whoever¹ sells, or exposes, or has in possession² for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or thing with a counterfeit trade mark³ or property mark affixed to or impressed upon the same or to or upon any case, package or other receptacle in which such goods are contained, shall, unless he proves—

(a) that, having taken all reasonable precautions against committing an offence against this section, he had at the time of the commission of the alleged offence no reason to suspect the genuineness of the mark, and

(b) that, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons from whom he obtained such goods or things, or

(c) that otherwise he had acted innocently, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

⁸ Abdul Sovan v. Ramani Mohan, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 136, [1930] AIR (C) 664.

COMMENT.

This section saves from punishment persons dealing with goods bearing false trade-marks if they are able to prove that after taking reasonable precautions they had no ground to suspect the genuineness of the mark, and that they gave all the information in their power as to the source from which the goods were obtained or that otherwise they had acted innocently in the matter. Thus they are saved from punishment, and it becomes possible to trace the goods to the importer. Section 17 of the Merchandise Marks Act may be compared with this section. See the Appendix where it is set out in full.

Object.—The provisions of this section are aimed at a retailer who connives with a fraudulent wholeseller or manufacturer in palming-off on an unsuspecting public goods which purport to be other than what they are.⁹

Scope.—This section does not extend to persons who act as commission agents and intermediaries only between the importers and manufacturers and order out goods marked with a counterfeit trade-mark, which is seized on the way and which never reaches the place of business.¹⁰

For the purpose of this section it is not necessary that the mark in question should be the exclusive property of anybody. The only consideration which is of importance is whether the mark has come to be so identified with the merchandise of the person using the mark as to be regarded as a distinctive mark to denote that particular merchandise.¹¹

1. 'Whoever'.—This word includes a limited liability company or a corporation.¹²

2. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

3. 'Counterfeit trade-mark' is one by means of which resemblance to a genuine one is intended to deceive and to lead a purchaser to imagine that the counterfeit is in reality the genuine article.¹³ A general resemblance constitutes infringement.¹⁴ The word 'counterfeit' does not connote an exact reproduction of the original counterfeited and the difference between the counterfeit and the original is not therefore limited to a difference existing only by reason of faulty reproduction. A person, for instance, convicted of counterfeiting the King's coin would not be able to avoid conviction on the ground that he had deliberately made a small alteration in the design or omitted a letter from the superscription surrounding the Monarch's head. The same principle would apply in the counterfeiting of a trade-mark.¹⁵ The distinction between a "false" trade mark and a "counterfeit" trade mark is somewhat subtle; it depends on the degree of resemblance between the false and the genuine trade marks. As laid down in expln. 1 to s. 28, it is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact; but a thing is not ordinarily said to be counterfeit unless it bears on the face of it the semblance of validity and is such as to deceive the average person on ordinary observation with, presumably, some care.¹⁶ A representation that the goods of the manufacture of A are those of B need not be made orally or in writing, but it may be made by the manner in which the goods are made up by the wrapper or by the name or design. The counterfeit is itself a representation.¹⁷

In trade-mark cases the test of comparison of the marks side by side is not a sound one, since a purchaser will seldom have the two marks actually before him when he makes his purchase and marks with many differences may yet have an element of similarity which will cause deception, more specially if the goods are in practice asked for by a name which denotes the mark or the device on it.¹⁸

⁹ Local Government v. Seth Motilal Jain, [1988] Nag. 192, 200.

¹⁰ Hargobind v. Greaves Cotton & Co., Bombay, (1902) P. R. No. 32 of 1902.

¹¹ Sri Narayan v. Mohammad Abu Saleh, [1940] 2 Cal. 1.

¹² Seena M. Haniff & Co., v. Liptons Ltd., (1914) 7 L. B. R. 306, 15 Cr. L. J. 887.

¹³ Hargobind v. Ralli Brothers, (1902) P. R. No. 85 of 1902.

¹⁴ Ganpat Sitaram Mukadam, (1914) 16 Bom.

L. R. 78; contra, Pelley & Sons v. S. Ah Kyun, (1908) 2 L. B. R. 159, sub-nom. Stephen Ah Kyun v. James Pelley, (1908) 1 Cr. L. J. 875.

¹⁵ Local Government v. Seth Motilal Jain, (1938) Nag. 192, 195.

¹⁶ Roshan Singh, [1940] All. 751.

¹⁷ Tapidas Durlabhdas, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 782, 6 Cr. L. J. 75.

¹⁸ Kimatrai Tarachand v. Chellaram Jhanguldas, (1942) 48 Cr. L. J. 927, [1943] AIR (S) 55.

Where a person sold books with a counterfeit property-mark, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁹

Where the accused used marks on his bars which were likely to deceive an ignorant and unwary purchaser, but which did not bear a resemblance close enough to deceive a person of ordinary observation comparing the two marks side by side, it was held that the accused was guilty of using a false trade-mark under s. 482 and not of using a counterfeit trade-mark under this section.²⁰ K, a merchant of Calcutta, ordered certain goods from Europe, but refused to take delivery of the consignment on its arrival in Calcutta. The goods were thereupon sold in the market with the labels of the firm of K attached thereto, and were purchased by M, a dealer in piece-goods. M sold the goods without removing the labels of K and was convicted under this section for selling the goods with a counterfeit trade-mark. It was held that no offence had been committed by M either under s. 482 or under this section.²¹ The accused was in possession of certain goods which bore the complainant's trade-mark. The manufacturers of the goods in Japan had by mistake either put the complainant's trade-mark on the goods or had forwarded the goods to a wrong party from whom the accused had purchased them in good faith. It was held that the accused had not committed an offence under this section because the mark was not counterfeit as defined by s. 28, nor could it be said that he had committed an offence under ss. 480 and 482 because there was no intention on his part to defraud.²² The complainant and the accused were manufacturers of aerated waters. At the place where the parties carried on their business it was a common practice for various kinds of bottles to be used by different mineral-water manufacturing firms indiscriminately, i.e., bottles of one firm were sent by customers to another firm for being filled with mineral water. The accused firm thus came to use the bottles of the complainant firm. It was held that since there was no intention to do anything harmful, the accused firm was not guilty of any offence.²³

As to the meaning of the word 'counterfeit', see s. 28, supra.

Clauses (a) and (b).—These are linked together for the purpose of defence.

Clause (c).—This clause permits the accused to offer any evidence he chooses as to his innocence when once he admits that he was not deceived into thinking the label to be a genuine one.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused sold, or exposed or had in possession for sale or some purpose of trade or manufacture, the goods or things in question.

The signature of the accused in the forwarding note does not necessarily prove that he was in possession of the goods and his conviction under this section cannot be sustained.²⁵

(2) That such goods or things had some trade-mark or property-mark affixed to, or impressed upon, them, or had some trade-mark or property-mark affixed to, or impressed upon, some case, package, or other receptacle in which they were contained.

(3) That such trade-mark or property-mark was counterfeit.

Where a person is charged with the commission of an offence under this section and the facts mentioned in the first paragraph thereof are proved, there are two alternative defences open to the accused: the first being that indicated by clauses (a) and (b) of the section read together, and the second being that indicated by clause (c). The first defence presupposes that the person charged believed the trade-mark in question to be a genuine one. The second defence presupposes that the person charged did not know that the trade-mark in question was the trade-mark of any firm or person.¹

The defence cannot be restricted to the proof of ignorance concerning the infringement of the trade mark.²

¹⁹ Kanai Das Bairagi v. Radha Shyam Basack, (1898) 26 Cal. 232.

²⁰ Lokumal, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 199, 16 Cr. L. J. 230.

²¹ Motilal Premeek v. Kanhai Lal Dass, (1905) 32 Cal. 969.

²² Syon Premeek & Co. v. R. Solomon, (1925) 4 Ran. 16.

²³ E. S. Olpadcalla v. James Wright, (1928) 32 C. W. N. 1115, 30 Cr. L. J. 832, [1928] AIR

(C) 873.

²⁴ Local Government v. Seth Motilal Jain, [1938] Nag. 192, 197.

²⁵ Kollapalli Subramanyam, [1940] M. W. N. 535, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 28, [1940] AIR (M) 822.

¹ Ilahi Bakhsh, (1897) 17 A. W. N. 99.

² Local Government v. Seth Motilal Jain, [1938] Nag. 192.

Onus.—The onus is not on the complainant to show that the accused acted dishonestly, but on the accused to show that he has not committed any offence under this section.³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

In Dowlat Ram v. King-Emperor,⁴ Maclean, C. J., said: "It seems to me that when a case of this class [counterfeiting a trade-mark] is brought into a Criminal Court, if the Magistrate is of opinion that there is a bona fide dispute as to whether the complainant has any trade-mark at all or whether the accused is or is not entitled to use the mark he is using, I say, if the Magistrate is satisfied that there is this bona fide dispute, he should not deal with the matter as a criminal matter, but leave it to the complainant to maintain, if he can, in a civil Court the right which he claims. If after the decision of the civil Court it be found that he has a trade-mark, and that the accused is fraudulently counterfeiting that trade-mark, the case could then be properly brought into a criminal Court under the section [s. 486] to which I have referred."

A person can be legally convicted under both ss. 482 and 486 simultaneously. If a false trade mark has been used, and it amounts to a counterfeit trade mark and goods having such mark are sold or exposed for sale, it is perfectly legal to sustain a conviction under both the sections.⁵

Jurisdiction.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to try an offence under this section, although the sale, or the trade, or the manufacture, be not intended to take place within the jurisdiction of a Court in which the complaint is lodged. Possession of certain tins of clarified butter at Howrah, bearing a counterfeit trade-mark though intended for sale in Rangoon, was held to constitute an offence committed at Howrah.⁶

Limitation.—Prosecution should be instituted either before the expiration of three years after the commission of the offence or within one year from the first discovery of it by the prosecutor.⁷ The limitation runs from the date of the infringement complained of, and "offence" means the offence charged.⁸ A prosecution for using a counterfeit trade-mark need not be instituted within three years of the first of the series of offences committed by the accused but can be instituted within three years of the specific offence complained against.⁹

For period of limitation in Burma, see the Burma Merchandise Marks Act.

Forfeiture.—See s. 9 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, set out in the Appendix.

It would not be proper for the High Court in revision to pass any order for confiscation of goods or for costs of prosecution in a trade mark case, where no such order was passed by the lower Courts and there were no materials on the record to assess the costs and the rights of third parties might be affected by an order of confiscation.¹⁰

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, sold (or exposed or had in possession for sale, etc.), certain goods, to wit——, with a counterfeit trade mark [or property-mark], to wit——, affixed to [or impressed upon] the said goods, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 486 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

487. Whoever makes any false mark upon any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause any public servant or any other person to believe that such receptacle contains goods which it does not contain or that it

Making a false mark upon any receptacle containing goods.

³ Holland Bombay Trading Company v. Buktair Mull, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 421, 1 Cr. L. J. 300; Local Government v. Seth Motilal Jain, [1988] Nag. 192.

⁴ (1905) 32 Cal. 431, 436.

⁵ Roshan Singh, [1940] All. 751.

⁶ Yusuf Mahomed Abaruth v. Bansidhar Strangi, (1898) 25 Cal. 639.

⁷ Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, s. 15;

Ruppell v. Ponnusami Tevan, (1890) 22 Mad. 488; Akshoy Kumar Dey, (1919) 82 C. W. N. 699, 30 Cr. L. J. 252, [1928] AIR (C) 495.

⁸ Nagendranath Shaha, (1929) 57 Cal. 1153.

⁹ Muhammad Ahmad v. Bezvada Venkanna, [1930] M. W. N. 1263, 32 Cr. L. J. 809, [1931] AIR (M) 276.

¹⁰ Roshan Singh, [1940] All. 751.

does not contain goods which it does contain, or that the goods contained in such receptacle are of a nature or quality different from the real nature or quality thereof, shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud,¹ be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The fraudulent making of false marks of any description on goods for the purpose of deceiving public servants such as customs officers, is punishable under this section. Thus, importation of contraband goods under false marks will come under the purview of this section. The section is more comprehensive than ss. 482 and 486.

1. 'Intent to defraud'.—See ss. 45 and 486, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made some mark upon some case, package, or other receptacle containing goods.

(2) That such mark was a false mark.

(3) That he did so in a manner reasonably calculated to cause some public servant or some other person to believe (a) that such receptacle contained goods which it did not contain, or (b) that it did not contain goods which it did contain, (c) that the goods contained in such receptacle were of a nature or quality different from the real nature or quality thereof.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Forfeiture.—See s. 9 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, set out in the Appendix.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, made a false mark, to wit——, upon a case, to wit——, (or package or other receptacle containing goods), in a manner reasonably calculated to cause a public servant, to wit——, (or AB) to believe that such case contained goods, to wit——, which it did not contain [or that it did not contain goods which it did contain (or that the goods contained in such receptacle were of a nature or quality different from the real nature or quality thereof)], and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 487 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

488. Whoever makes use of any such false mark in any manner prohibited by the last foregoing section shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud,¹ be punished as if he had committed an offence against that section.

Punishment for making use of any such false mark.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the making use of a false mark. The foregoing section punishes the making of such a mark.

1. 'Intent to defraud'.—See ss. 45 and 486, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made use of some mark upon some case, package, or receptacle containing goods.

(2) and (3) same as for s. 487.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Forfeiture.—See s. 9 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, set out in the Appendix.

Charge.—See s. 487, supra.

489. Whoever removes, destroys, defaces or adds to any property mark, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury¹ to any person,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Tampering with property mark with intent to cause injury.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the tampering with of a property-mark. Criminal intention or knowledge on the part of the accused is required under it.

1. 'Injury'.—See s. 44, supra. 2. 'Person'.—See s. 11, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the mark in question is a property-mark.

(2) That the accused removed, destroyed, or defaced, or added to, such mark.

(3) That he did so intending thereby to cause injury to some person; or that he did so knowing that he might thereby cause injury to some person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, removed (or destroyed, defaced or added to) a property-mark, to wit——, intending [or knowing it to be likely] that you might thereby cause injury to AB, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 489 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

489A. Whoever counterfeits,¹ or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of sections 489B, 489C and 489D, the expression "bank-note" means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to, or as a substitute for, money.

COMMENT.

This section is similar to ss. 231 and 255.

Object.—Sections 489A, 489B, 489C and 489D were introduced by the Currency Notes Forgery Act (XII of 1899), s. 2, in order to provide more adequately for the protection of currency-notes and bank-notes from forgery. Under the Indian Penal Code, which was passed prior to the existence of a paper currency in India, currency notes were not protected by any special provisions but merely by the general provisions applying to the forgery of valuable securities. Before these sections were introduced, charges for forging currency-notes had to be preferred under s. 467, for uttering them, under s. 471, and for making or possessing counterfeit plates, under s. 472. The provisions of s. 467 afforded sufficient means of dealing both with forgery generally and with forgery of currency-notes. But it was at times difficult to obtain conviction under the other sections.

1. 'Counterfeits'.—See s. 28, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the note in question is a currency-note or bank note.

(2) That the accused counterfeited it, or knowingly performed any part of the process of counterfeiting it.

A conviction under this section cannot be maintained unless it is provided that the accused really intended to counterfeit and either did counterfeit or perform any part of the process of counterfeiting.¹¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, counterfeited (or knowingly performed a part of the process of counterfeiting, to wit——), a currency-note (or a bank-note) (state the value of the note), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 489A of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

489B. Whoever sells to, or buys or receives from, any other person, or otherwise traffics in or uses as genuine,¹ any forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Using as genuine, forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

COMMENT.

The object of the Legislature in enacting this section is to stop circulation of forged notes by punishing all persons who, knowing or having reason to believe them to be forged, do any act would lead to their circulation.

This section resembles ss. 239, 241 and 258. A person who knowingly sells a forged note to a person who also knows it to be forged is guilty under this section.¹²

1. 'Uses as genuine'.—The words "as genuine" govern only the verb "uses" and not any other verb.¹³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the currency-note or bank-note in question was forged or counterfeited.

(2) That the accused sold to, or bought or received from, some person, or trafficked in, or used as genuine, such currency-note or bank-note.

(3) That when he did so he knew or had reason to believe that it was forged or counterfeited.

Where the accused is charged with using as genuine a forged note, the burden is on the prosecution to prove that at the time when the accused was passing the note he knew that it was a forged one, and the mere possession of it by him does not place the burden on him to account for its possession and to prove his innocent possession thereof.¹⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

¹¹ Meera, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 362, [1917] AIR (LB) 105.

¹² Rannun, (1926) 7 Lah. 84.

¹³ Bhika Ram, (1925) 7 Lah. 80.

¹⁴ Habu, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 935.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, sold to AB (or bought from AB, etc.) a forged (or counterfeit) currency-note, to wit——, knowing (or having reason to believe) the same to be forged (or counterfeit), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 489B of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

489C. Whoever has in his possession¹ any forged² or counterfeit³ currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit and intending to use the same as genuine or that it may be used as genuine, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

COMMENT.

This section deals with possession of a forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged and intending to use it as genuine. It resembles ss. 242, 248 and 259.

1. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra. Where thirty-eight counterfeit currency-notes were found in the possession of the accused, it was held that the only reasonable presumption that could be drawn was that the accused was in possession of those notes with the intention of using them as genuine.¹⁵

2. 'Forged'.—See ss. 463, 464 and 470, supra.

3. 'Counterfeit'.—See s. 28, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the currency-note or bank-note in question was forged or counterfeited.

(2) That the accused was in possession of it.

(3) That he at the time of his possession knew, or had reason to believe, that it was forged, or counterfeited.

(4) That he intended to use it as genuine or that it might be used as genuine.

The onus lies on the prosecution to prove circumstances which lead clearly, indubitably and irresistibly to the inference that the accused had the intention to foist the notes on the public. Such intention can be proved by collateral circumstances such as that the accused had palmed off such notes before, or that he was in possession of such and similar notes in such large numbers that his possession for any other purpose is inexplicable.¹⁶

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, had in your possession a forged (or counterfeit) currency-note (or bank-note), to wit——, knowing (or having reason to believe) the same to be forged (or counterfeit) and intending to use the same as genuine or that it may be used as genuine, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 489C of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

¹⁵ Public Prosecutor v. Kondalrao, [1938] M. W. N. 1121, 48 L. W. 754, 40 Cr. L. J. 458, L.C.—70

[1939] AIR (M) 96.

¹⁶ Bur Singh, (1930) 11 Lah. 555.

489D. Whoever makes, or performs any part of the process of making, or buys or sells or disposes of, or has in his profession,¹ any machinery, instrument or material for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for forging or counterfeiting² any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

COMMENT.

This section is analogous to ss. 233, 234, 256, 257 and 485. It was introduced by Act XII of 1899.

1. 'Possession'.—See s. 27, supra.

2. 'Counterfeiting'.—See s. 28, supra. For a thing to be termed counterfeit there should be some sort of resemblance sufficient to cause deception. In a case of counterfeiting currency-notes, where the ability of the accused persons and the capacity of the materials with which they worked were not such as to produce a currency-note which would take in even the most ignorant villager, it was held that there could be no conviction under this section read with s. 511 of the Code. The Court observed: "In the case of the counterfeiting of a currency note both ability and materials of a particular kind are required. If those materials and ability are not present it cannot be said that an act performed without the ability to counterfeit and without materials which may help to a useful counterfeiting would be an attempt".¹⁷ Where the opinion of an expert witness was that with the use of the materials found in possession of the accused a five-rupee note could be counterfeited and it was further discovered that the accused, who was a man of small means, had destroyed a five-rupee note while treating it chemically, it was held that it might safely be presumed that the intention of the accused was to counterfeit a five-rupee note with the materials produced in Court.¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the thing in question was machinery, instrument or material necessary for or used in forging or counterfeiting a currency-note or bank-note.

"In some cases a mere inspection of the articles would satisfy the court that they are capable of being used in the making of counterfeit notes. But where that is not the case, it is the duty of the Crown to adduce evidence of a competent and qualified witness who would be able to explain to the court the process by which the instruments or materials in question could be used in making a counterfeit note...Instruments and materials which may be useful in making correct drawing of the outlines of the designs and figures of a currency-note may be of no use whatever in manufacturing counterfeit notes".¹⁹

(2) That the accused made, or performed, some part of the process of making the machinery, instrument, or material, in question; or that he bought, sold, or disposed of it; or that he had it in his possession.

(3) That the object of the accused was that such machinery, instrument, or material might be used for the purpose of forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes; or that he knew, or had reason to believe, that the same was intended to be used for such purpose.

Before the Court could come to the conclusion that the accused had the objects in question for the purpose of counterfeiting, the Crown should establish that he had formed in his mind the purpose or intention of counterfeiting currency-notes. The onus of doing so is on the Crown according to the language of the section—unlike the ¹⁷ Jwala, (1928) 51 All. 470, 472.

¹⁸ Ayyub, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 1891, 30 Cr. L. J. 47, [1928] AIR (A) 759.

¹⁹ Per Abdur Rahim, J., in Abdul Rahiman, (1911) 21 M. L. J. 766, 768, 769, 12 Cr. L. J. 337, F.B.

English law wherein the case of a similar offence with respect to the counterfeiting of Bank of England notes the onus is laid on the accused of proving a lawful excuse "for knowingly having in his custody or possession any plate, stone or other material or any instrument or device for engraving a bank note." But "if the purpose and intention of the accused be proved, it is not necessary that all the articles required for counterfeiting should be found on him to hold him guilty of an offence under the section ... A man may not be able to command all the articles required for the purpose but he may be actually proved to be in possession of only some. This would not deter the court from convicting him of an offence under the statute".²⁰

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or performed any part of the process of making, or bought or sold or disposed of, or had in your possession) an instrument (or material) to wit—, for the purpose of being used (or knowing or having reason to believe that it was intended to be used) for forging (or counterfeiting a currency-note (or a bank-note), to wit—, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 489D of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

489E. (1) Whoever makes, or causes to be made, or uses for any purpose whatsoever, or delivers to any person, any document purporting to be, or in any way resembling, or so nearly resembling as to be calculated to deceive, any currency-note or bank-note shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

(2) If any person, whose name appears on a document the making of which is an offence under sub-section (1), refuses, without lawful excuse, to disclose, to a police-officer on being so required the name and address of the person by whom it was printed or otherwise made, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

(3) Where the name of any person appears on any document in respect of which any person is charged with an offence under sub-section (1) or on any other document used or distributed in connection with that document it may, until the contrary is proved, be presumed that that person caused the document to be made.

COMMENT.

This section was added by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (VI of 1948), s. 2. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons it was observed: "Photo-prints and other reproductions of currency-notes and bank-notes, though printed for innocent purposes, have passed into circulation in a number of cases and it is considered undesirable that in a country like India, with a large mass of illiterate and ignorant persons such reproductions should be permitted to go unchecked before it menaces the safety of the currency. It is proposed, therefore, to put a stop to this practice by making it a punishable offence.

2. While the counterfeiting of any currency-note or bank-note constitutes a criminal offence under section 489A read with section 28 of the Indian Penal Code, there is no legal provision prohibiting the reproduction, or the production of imitations of currency and bank-notes for such purposes as advertisement and the like where there is no intention to practise deception on any one nor even a knowledge that deception is likely to be practised with the help of imitations. The Bill is designed to fill this lacuna in the present law".

²⁰ Per Sundara Aiyar, J., in Abdul Rahiman, (1911) 21 M. L. J. 766, 773, 776, 12 Cr. L. J. 337, F. B.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CRIMINAL BREACH OF CONTRACTS OF SERVICE.

Object.—The authors of the Code say : “We agree with the great body of jurists in thinking that in general a mere breach of contract ought not to be an offence, but only to be the subject of a civil action.”

“To this general rule there are, however, some exceptions. Some breaches of contract are very likely to cause evil such as no damages or only very high damages can repair, and are also very likely to be committed by persons from whom it is exceedingly improbable that any damages can be obtained. Such breaches of contract are, we conceive, proper subjects for penal legislation.”¹

490. (Breach of contract of service during voyage or journey Repealed by s. 2 and schedule of Act III of 1925.)

491. Whoever, being bound by a lawful contract¹ to attend on or to supply the wants of any person who, by reason of youth, or of unsoundness of mind, or of a disease or bodily weakness,² is helpless or incapable of providing for his own safety or of supplying his own wants, voluntarily omits³ so to do, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of helpless person.

COMMENT.

Object.—The authors of the Code say : “We...think that persons who contract to take care of infants, of the sick and of the helpless lay themselves under an obligation of a very peculiar kind, and may with propriety be punished if they omit to discharge their duty. The misery and distress which their neglect may cause is such as the largest pecuniary payment would not repair ; they generally come from the lower ranks of life, and would be unable to pay anything. We therefore propose to add to this class of contracts the sanction of the penal law”.²

Ingredients.—This section requires three essentials :—

1. Binding of a person by lawful contract.
2. Such contract must be to attend on or to supply the wants of a person who is helpless or incapable of providing for his own safety or of supplying his own wants by reason of (i) youth, or (ii) unsoundness of mind, or (iii) disease, or (iv) bodily weakness.

3. Voluntary omission to perform the contract by the person bound by it.

1. ‘Whoever, being bound by a lawful contract’.—Under this section it is not the breach of contract towards the other party to the contract that is to be regarded, but the breach of the legal obligation towards the incapable person, which has been accepted and transferred by the contract.

2. ‘To attend on or to supply the wants of any person who, by reason of youth, etc’.—The Law Commissioners observe : “We are not prepared to punish as a criminal every menial servant, who quits his employer without a certain notice upon the expiration of the term for which he is hired, under ordinary circumstances. But we conceive that Clause 465 [s. 491] may be improved in one respect. It seems as it stands, not to be applicable to any but those servants who have contracted specially to attend upon the sick, insane, &c., but we think it should be made to apply to servants who are or ought to be in attendance upon a sick or insane master, though they may have only contracted with him in the ordinary way, while he was of sound body and mind, and to servants, whether engaged specially for the purpose or not, who by the lawful command of their employers have been ordered to take care of young children and have not objected to do so".³ The accused, a cook, on a morning whilst the complainant's wife was ill and unable to supply her own wants, left his service without a warning or permission. It was alleged that the illness of the complainant's wife was aggravated thereby. It was held that the accused was engaged only as an ordinary cook to a family, and was not bound to attend on, or to supply the wants of, any helpless person, and that, therefore, this section did not apply to such a case.⁴

¹ Note P, p. 170.

² Note P, p. 171.

3. 'Voluntarily omits'.—The omission to perform the contract must be without any reasonable cause. A person who is disabled by illness cannot be said to voluntarily omit. As to the meaning of the word 'voluntarily', see s. 39, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused entered into a contract to attend on, or supply the wants of, the person in question.

(2) That such contract was a lawful one.

(3) That such person was helpless or incapable of providing for his own safety or of supplying his own wants.

(4) That such helplessness or incapableness was due to youth, or unsoundness of mind, disease or bodily weakness.

(5) That the accused omitted to attend on such person, or to supply his wants.

(6) That he did so voluntarily.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

492. [Breach of contract to serve at distant place to which servant is conveyed at master's expense. Repealed by s. 2 and schedule of Act III of 1925.]

³ 2nd Rep., s. 329, p. 437.

⁴ Solomon, (1887) Cr. R. No. 43 of 1887, Unrep. Cr. C. 354.

CHAPTER XX.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO MARRIAGE.

493. Every man who by deceit causes any woman who is not lawfully married to him to believe that she is lawfully married to him and to cohabit or have sexual intercourse with him in that belief, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section punishes the offence committed when a man, either married or unmarried, induces a woman to become, as she thinks, his wife, but in reality his concubine. The form of the marriage ceremony depends on the race or religion to which the person entering into the marriage belongs. When races are mixed as in India, and religion may be changed or dissembled, this offence may be committed by a person falsely causing a woman to believe that he is of the same race or creed as herself and thus inducing her to contract a marriage, in reality unlawful, but which, according to the law under which she lives, is valid. Suppose a person half English half Asiatic by blood, calls himself a Mahomedan or Hindu and by this deception causes a Mahomedan or a Hindu woman to go through the ceremony of marriage, in a form which she deems valid and to cohabit with him, he has committed this offence. A man who deceives a woman into the belief that a certain ceremony which he causes to be performed by some accomplice, constitutes a valid marriage and thus induces the woman to cohabit with him may be punished under this section.¹

The act falling within the purview of this section will also come under cl. (4) of s. 375.

Ingredients.—The section has two ingredients:—

1. The deceit that causes a false belief in the existence of a lawful marriage.
2. Cohabitation or sexual intercourse with the person causing such belief.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused caused the woman in question to believe that she was lawfully married to him.

- (2) That he induced that woman to cohabit with him under that belief.
- (3) That he caused such belief by deceit.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint by person aggrieved necessary.—No Court shall take cognizance of this offence except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by it.²

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, by deceit caused a certain woman, to wit AB, who was not lawfully married to you, to believe that she was lawfully married to you, in that belief, cohabited or had sexual intercourse with her; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 493 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

¹ M. & M. 432.

494. Whoever, having a husband or wife living,¹ marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Exception.—This section does not extend to any person whose marriage with such husband or wife has been declared void by a Court of competent jurisdiction, nor to any person who contracts a marriage during the life of a former husband or wife, if such husband or wife, at the time of the subsequent marriage, shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years, and shall not have been heard of by such person as being alive within that time, provided the person contracting such subsequent marriage shall, before such marriage takes place, inform the person with whom such marriage is contracted of the real state of facts so far as the same are within his or her knowledge.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the offence known to English law as bigamy. It makes the offence of bigamy punishable both as regards a person, having a wife living, marrying another and as regards a wife, having her husband living, remarrying, in any case in which such remarriage would be void by reason of its taking place during the life of such a wife or husband. The person to whom the woman has remarried cannot be punished under this section. He can only be charged with abetment of that offence.³

Scope.—This section does not apply to Hindu or Mahomedan males, who are allowed to marry more than one wife, except in the Province of Bombay where a Hindu cannot marry a second wife only under certain circumstances owing to the promulgation of the Bombay Prevention of Bigamous Marriage Act (Bom. XXV of 1946 as amended by Bom. Act XXXVIII of 1948). It applies to Hindu and Mahomedan females and to Christians⁴ and Parsis⁵ of either sex.

Ingredients.—This section requires :—

1. Existence of the first wife or husband when the second marriage is celebrated.
2. The second marriage being void by reason of the subsistence of the first according to the law applicable to the person violating the provisions of the section.

1. 'Having a husband or wife living'.—The validity of a marriage in the case of Hindus, Mahomedans, Jews, Budhists, Sikhs and Jains will be determined in accordance with their religious usages. In the case of Christians it will be determined by Act XV of 1872, and of Parsis by Act III of 1936. The validity of a marriage celebrated under the Special Marriage Act⁶ will be determined by its provisions.

If the first marriage is not a valid marriage no offence will be committed by contracting a second marriage. For instance, if A marries B, a person within prohibited degrees of affinity, and during B's lifetime marries C, A has not committed bigamy.⁷

A "marriage, good by the laws of one country, is held good in all others where the question of its validity may arise. For the question always must be, Did the parties intend to contract marriage? And if they did that which in the place they were in is deemed a marriage, they cannot reasonably, or sensibly, or safely, be considered otherwise than as intending a marriage contract".⁸ But a union formed between a man and a woman in a foreign country, although it may there bear the name of mar-

³ Munir, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 155, 27 Cr. L. J. 101, [1926] AIR (A) 189.

⁴ Act XV of 1872.

⁵ Act III of 1936.

⁶ Act III of 1872, as amended by Act XXX of 1923.

⁷ Chadwick, (1847) 11 Q. B. 205. See Kay, (1887) 16 Cox 292.

⁸ Warrender v. Warrender, (1835) 2 Cl. & F. 488, 580; Brinkley v. Attorney General, (1880) 15 P. D. 76.

riage, and the parties to it may there be designated husband and wife, is not a valid marriage according to the law of England unless it be formed on the same basis as marriages throughout Christendom, and be in its essence the voluntary union for life of one man and one woman to the exclusion of all others.⁹

'Living'.—It must be shown that the husband or wife is alive at the date of the second marriage.

A nikah marriage¹⁰ or *sagai*¹¹ or *pat*¹² marriages or anand marriage by a Hindu professing Sikh religion though a mona,¹³ falls within the purview of this section, but not jhingara.¹⁴ It is doubtful if a marriage between an Oriya male and Telugu female is valid;¹⁵ but a marriage between a Jat male and a Mazhabi female is valid.¹⁶ A marriage between a Sikh belonging to the Brahmin caste and a Hindu Brahmin girl according to Hindu rites is a valid marriage.¹⁷

Mahomedan law allows minor to repudiate marriage on attaining puberty.—

"Under the Mahomedan law, when a child is given in marriage by any person other than the father or grandfather, he or she has the option of either ratifying it or repudiating it on attaining puberty (Radd-ul-mukhtar, Vol II, Egypt edition, p. 500. and the Sharaya-ul-Islam, p. 300). This is called the Khyar-ul-balugh, or option of puberty. Under the Shiah law such a marriage is of no effect, and produces no legal consequences until it has been ratified by the minor upon his or her attaining majority. The Shafees agree with the Shiahs in this view. There is no evidence in this case to show to which sect the girl belongs. Assuming, however, that she is a Hanafi Sunni, how would the matter stand? The only difference between the Sunni and the Shiah law on the question of option of puberty is that whereas according to the latter school a marriage contracted for a minor by a person other than the father or grandfather is wholly ineffective until it is ratified by the minor on attaining puberty, according to the (Hanafi) Sunni school it continues effective until it is cancelled by the minor. Both schools give to the minor an absolute power either to ratify or to cancel the unauthorized marriage. The (Hanafi) Sunni law presumes ratification when the girl after attaining the age of puberty has remained silent and has allowed the husband to consummate the marriage. In the present case the man to whom the girl is said to have been married was in jail where she attained puberty. It was not necessary for her, therefore, to signify her assent or dissent. After attaining puberty she entered into a contract of marriage with the second accused. This is sufficient indication in my opinion that she never ratified the unauthorised marriage, which was never consummated".¹⁸ B, a Mahomedan girl, whose father was dead, was alleged to have been given in marriage by her mother to J, some years before she attained puberty. Prior to her attaining puberty, J was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft. While he was in jail, B, after she had attained puberty, contracted a marriage with P. The marriage with J was never consummated. On J being released from jail, he proceeded to prosecute B and P for bigamy and abetment of bigamy, and also charged P with adultery. It was held that B and P had not committed any offence, because, assuming that B was properly married to J by B's mother when B was a child, B had the option of either ratifying or repudiating such marriage on attaining puberty.²⁰ Where a minor, a Mahomedan girl, before attaining puberty, entered into a contract of marriage arranged by her father, who did not formally appear as her guardian at the

⁹ Bethell: Bethell v. Hildyard, (1888) 38 Ch. D. 220; Nachimson v. Nachimson, [1930] P. 217.

¹⁰ Jadoo Mussulmanee, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

¹¹ Mussamut Chamia, (1880) 7 C. L. R. 354; Bissuram Koiree, (1878) 3 C. L. R. 410.

¹² Karsan Goja, (1864) 2 B. H. C. 117; Ramjee Teli v. Ragho Teli, (1899) 12 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 19.

¹³ Walu Ram, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 1269, [1925] AIR (L) 168.

¹⁴ Gigal v. Phio, (1888) P. R. No. 25 of 1888.

¹⁵ Ramanathan, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 268.

¹⁶ Sohan Singh v. Kabla Singh, (1928) 10

Lah. 372.

¹⁷ Inder Singh v. Sadhu Singh, [1944] 1 Cal. 233

¹⁸ Badal Aurat, (1891) 19 Cal. 79, 82; Rahmat Ali v. Mst. Allah Ditti, (1929) 11 Lah. 172; Abdul Karim v. Aminabai, (1934) 37 Bom. L. R. 398.

²⁰ Badal Aurat, ibid.; Ghulam Mohammad, (1932) 33 P. L. R. 1062, 34 Cr. L. J. 77. See Nainsukh, (1874) 1 O. D. 44, where the Court held that if a child marriage was not consummated by cohabitation, a civil action for damages would lie but not a prosecution under this section.

time of the marriage, she could, on attaining puberty, exercise her option of repudiating that marriage under the Mahomedan law provided no circumstance be present which would disentitle her to the exercise of that right.²¹ It is not necessary for repudiation by a Muhammadan minor girl, of her marriage, which has not been consummated, and which has not been performed by her father, on her attaining puberty, that the repudiation should be something akin to oral repudiation before witnesses. Marrying some other man, on attaining puberty, is enough to constitute repudiation.²²

Marriage during iddat.—In a Bombay Sessions case it was held that a Mahomedan woman marrying again during the lifetime of a husband who had divorced her but within the period of iddat was not guilty of bigamy.²³ The Calcutta High Court holds the same view. It has laid down that under Mahomedan law the marriage of a man, who subsequently embraces Christianity, becomes ipso facto void, notwithstanding his reconversion to Islam during the period of iddat; and the wife, in contracting a second marriage during such period, does not commit bigamy under this section. A second marriage contracted by the wife during the period of her iddat is not void by reason of its taking place during the life of the first husband but by reason of a special doctrine of the Mahomedan law with which the Penal Code has nothing to do.²⁴ The former Chief Court of the Punjab had decided that a second marriage contracted with a woman whose husband was dead and who was in the stage of observing her iddat being unlawful under the Mahomedan law, no conviction under this section was sustainable.²⁵

Divorce.—Divorce dissolves a valid marriage, and the parties obtaining such dissolution can remarry. Divorce is unknown to Hindu law though it is customary amongst lower classes of the Hindus. But recently in the Province of Bombay the Bombay Hindu Divorce Act (Bom. Act XXII of 1947) has been promulgated to provide for a right of divorce among all communities of Hindus in certain circumstances. Divorce is allowed amongst the Mahomedans, the Parsis,¹ and the Native Christians.²

2. 'Marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife'.—Where a person, already bound by an existing marriage, goes through with another person a form of marriage known to, and recognized by, the law as capable of producing a valid marriage, such person is guilty of bigamy, notwithstanding any special circumstances which, independently of the bigamous character of the marriage, may constitute a legal disability in the parties, or make the form of marriage resorted to inapplicable to their case.³ It is immaterial even if the second marriage is void on another ground besides that of its being bigamous.⁴

The word 'marry' implies going through a form of marriage whether the same is in fact valid or not.⁵ The accused, a married man, accompanied a woman to Scotland and there in the presence of witnesses they declared themselves to be man and wife. Such a marriage by declaration is only valid in Scotland if one of the parties has been resident there for a period of twenty-one days, which condition was not fulfilled by the accused. The accused contended that the second marriage ceremony being invalid, the offence of bigamy had not been committed. It was held that the validity of the second marriage was immaterial, and the accused was guilty of bigamy.⁶ Under the provisions of the Indian Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872), the first accused who was a Roman Catholic Indian Christian married the complainant who was a Protestant, in a Protestant Church, the ceremony being performed by a Protestant pastor, and subsequently, after obtaining a release deed from her, he married the second accused in a ²¹ Jay Gunnessa Bibi v. Mahammad Ali Baswas, [1938] 1 Cal. 139.

²² Shafi-ullah, [1934] A. L. J. R. 387, 35 Cr. L. J. 1053, [1934] AIR (A) 589.

²³ Sabiha, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. J. 207.

²⁴ Abdul Ghani v. Azizul Huq, (1911) 39 Cal. 409.

²⁵ Musst. Bibi, (1882) P. R. No. 43 of 1882.

¹ The Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act, III of 1936.

² The Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act, XXI of 1866.

³ Allen, (1872) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 387; Brawn,

(1848) 1 C. & K. 144. This view is not adopted in the Irish case of Fanning, (1866) 10 Cox 411, where it is said that English cases are distinguishable as the bigamous marriages in them were void for consanguinity and not for fornication.

⁴ Gurbaksh Singh v. Shama Singh, (1876) P. R. No. 19 of 1876.

⁵ Sant Ram, (1929) 11 Lah. 178; Local Government v. Soni, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 161, [1936] AIR (N) 13.

⁶ Robinson, (1888) 26 Cr. App. R. 129, [1938] 1 A. E. R. 301.

Roman Catholic church, the ceremony being performed by a Roman Catholic priest. It was held that the first accused had committed an offence of bigamy punishable under this section. The release deed executed by the complainant did not operate as a dissolution of the marriage between the first accused and herself. The marriage between the first accused and the complainant was a legal and valid marriage and, as it was subsisting when the first accused married the second accused, the marriage of the first accused with the second accused was void by reason of its taking place during the life of the complainant.⁷ Even where divorce and remarriage are recognized by the caste custom, a second marriage of a Hindu woman during the lifetime of her first husband without the first marriage being annulled by divorce or in some formal manner recognized by the caste usage as equivalent to divorce amounts to this offence. If the second marriage was an offence at the time it was performed, that offence cannot be obliterated by a subsequent divorce from the husband or by a settlement with him even though such may be the caste usage.⁸

The word 'void' is not used in the technical sense in which it is used in Mahomedan law. The Code makes no distinction between a void and an invalid marriage and the term 'void' as used in this section covers marriages of both classes.⁹

It is immaterial whether the ceremony of the second marriage takes place within or beyond the King's dominions.¹⁰

Good faith and mistake of law are no defences to a charge of bigamy.¹¹ It is no defence in law to an indictment for bigamy that the accused, at the time of the alleged bigamous marriage, believed, in good faith and on reasonable grounds, that he had been divorced from the bond of his first marriage, if in fact he had not been divorced.¹²

Publication of banns of marriage.—The act of causing the publication of banns of marriage is an act done in the preparation to marry but does not amount to an attempt to marry. Where, therefore, a man having a wife living, caused the banns of marriage between him and a woman to be published, it was held that he could not be punished for an attempt to marry again during the lifetime of his wife.¹³

Whether custom good defence to prosecution.—The Bombay High Court has ruled that Courts will not recognize the authority of a caste to declare a marriage void, or to give permission to a woman to remarry. Bona fide belief that the consent of the caste made the second marriage valid does not constitute a defence to a charge of marrying again during the lifetime of the first husband.¹⁴ A custom of the Talapada Koli caste, that a woman could be permitted to leave the husband to whom she has been first married, and to contract a second marriage (natra) with another man during the lifetime of her first husband, and without his consent, was held to be invalid, as being entirely opposed to the spirit of the Hindu law; and that such marriage was "void by reason of its taking place during the lifetime of such husband", and therefore punishable, as regards the woman, under this section.¹⁵ Accused No. 1 was married to the complainant but the marriage was not consummated. Some time after the marriage, the complainant went to South Africa, and during his absence there he did not write to his wife, nor did he furnish her with maintenance. The accused obtained, according to the custom of her caste, a release dissolving the marriage (fargati) from her caste people and married accused No. 2. It was held that the release was inoperative and that both the accused were guilty of bigamy.¹⁶

The Calcutta High Court has, however, upheld a caste custom which allowed a wife to undergo a nikah or sagai marriage after she was relinquished by her husband.¹⁷ Strict proof of such custom is essential.¹⁸ According to the Madras High Court evidence

⁷ Gnanasoundari v. Nallathambi, [1946] Mad, 367.

⁸ Gedalu Narayana, (1932) 36 L. W. 237, [1932] M. W. N. 1082, 38 Cr. L. J. 647.

⁹ Allah Di, (1928) 29 P. L. R. 533, 29 Cr. L. J. 701, [1928] AIR (L) 844; Hamad, (1931) 32 Cr. L. J. 1210, [1931] AIR (L) 194.

¹⁰ The Trial of Earl Russell, [1901] A. C. 446.

¹¹ Narantakath Avullah v. Parakkal Mammu, (1922) 45 Mad. 986.

¹² Thomas Wheat, [1921] 2 K. B. 119.

¹³ Peterson, (1876) 1 All. 316.

¹⁴ Sambhu Raghu, (1876) 1 Bom. 347. See Sankaralingam Chetti v. Subban Chetti, (1894)

17 Mad. 479, where it is decided that there is nothing immoral in a caste custom by which divorce and re-marriage are permissible on mutual agreement, on one party paying to the other the expense of the latter's original marriage.

¹⁵ Karsan Goja, (1864) 2 B. H. C. 117; Keshav v. Bai Gandhi, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 534, 39 Bom. 538.

¹⁶ Bai Ganga, (1916) 19 Bom. L. R. 56, 18 Cr. L. J. 468, [1916] AIR (B) 97.

¹⁷ Jukni, (1892) 19 Cal. 627.

¹⁸ Fagu Tanti v. Chotelal Tanti, (1925) 7 P. L. T. 448, 27 Cr. L. J. 867, [1926] AIR (P) 846.

of any such custom should be allowed by Courts.¹⁹ A communal custom permitting divorce on the ground of disagreement between the spouses is valid if such divorce is to be effected on the consent of both the parties and is not forced by one on the other.²⁰ In Empress v. Umi,²¹ the Bombay High Court did give countenance to the custom of a caste which allowed a husband for a sufficient reason to divorce his wife. In this case a member of the Ajanya Rajput Guzars caste executed a deed of divorce to his wife. The Court held on the evidence that the deed was proved; that in that caste a husband was, for a sufficient reason, such as incontinence, allowed to divorce his wife; that the deed had not been executed for a sufficient reason; and that, consequently, the parties entering into a second marriage were guilty of an offence under this section.

Conversion from Hinduism.—According to Hindu law an apostate is not absolved from all civil obligations, the matrimonial bond remaining indissoluble. A non-Christian marriage is not dissolved by the mere fact of the conversion of one or both of the parties to Christianity.²² Hindu law does not recognize polygamy on the part of a woman. A Hindu married woman who having a Hindu husband living marries a Mahomedan²³ or a Christian²⁴ even after becoming a Mahomedan or Christian, as the case may be, commits bigamy. The Calcutta High Court held in a case that a Hindu married woman can after adopting Mahomedanism ask her Hindu husband to become Mahomedan or apply to a competent Court for dissolution of her marriage. If this is done she can marry without being guilty of any offence.²⁵ This view was subsequently dissented from in another case in which it held that a marriage solemnized in India according to personal law could be dissolved according to another personal law, simply because one of the parties had changed his or her religion.¹ A Special Bench of the Calcutta High Court after reviewing all the authorities has held that the rule of Mahomedan law that if one of the married parties adopts Mussalman faith in a foreign country, the marriage is automatically dissolved if the other spouse does not also adopt the same faith before the completion of three menstrual periods, does not apply to the case of non-Muslim nationals of a country whose state religion is not Islam, e.g., India. A Hindu wife who has embraced Islam since her marriage but whose husband has not done so although three menstrual periods have elapsed since the conversion is not entitled to a declaration that in the circumstances the marriage stands dissolved under the Mahomedan law. Under Hindu law, the apostasy of one of the spouses does not dissolve the marriage.²

The Lahore High Court has held that the nature and incidents of a vedic marriage bond, between the parties is not in any way affected by the conversion to Christianity of one of them and the bond will retain all the characteristics of a Hindu marriage notwithstanding such conversion unless there shall follow upon the conversion of one party, repudiation or desertion by the other, and unless consequential legal proceedings are taken and a decree is made as provided by the Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act.³ The Nagpur High Court has also held that the conversion of a Hindu wife to Mahomedanism does not ipso facto dissolve her marriage with her husband; she cannot, during his life-time, enter into a valid contract of marriage with another person. Hence a person having sexual intercourse with a Hindu wife converted to Islam, knowing that she was a married woman, commits adultery whether it was with or without her consent.⁴

Conversion from Christianity.—The Madras High Court once held that a Hindu Christian convert relapsing into Hinduism and marrying a Hindu woman can-¹⁹ Tholasingham, (1896) 1 Weir 568.

²⁰ Thangammal v. Genguyammal, (1945) 58 L. W. 239.

²¹ (1882) 6 Bom. 126.

²² Ram Kumari, (1891) 18 Cal. 264; Mussamat Gholam Fatima, (1870) P. R. No. 32 of 1870.

²³ The Government of Bombay v. Ganga, (1880) 4 Bom. 330; Budamsa Rauther v. Fatema Bi, [1914] M. W. N. 278, 26 M. L. J. 260; Mst. Nandi, (1919) 1 Lah. 440. See Jamna Devi v. Mul Raj, (1907) P. R. No. 49 of 1907.

²⁴ Millard, (1887) 10 Mad. 218; Gobardhan Dass v. Jasadamoni Dass, (1891) 18 Cal. 252. Such a marriage can only be dissolved under the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869).

²⁵ Ram Kumari, (1891) 18 Cal. 264; Mst. Nandi, (1819) 1 Lah. 443; Musst. Ayesha Bibi v. Bireswar Ghosh, (1929) 33 C. W. N. clxxix; Ayesha Bibi v. Subodh Ch. Chakravarty, (1945) 49 C. W. N. 439. See an article on the same subject in 33 C. W. N. clxxxvii.

¹ Sayed Khatoon v. M. Obaidiah, (1945) 49 C. W. N. 745.

² Rakya Bibi v. Anil Kumar, (1947) 52 C. W. N. 142.

³ Amar Nath v. Mrs. Amarnath, (1946) 49 P. L. R. 147, F.B.

⁴ Gul Mahomed, [1947] Nag. 205.

not be convicted of bigamy on the ground that he has another wife living whom he married while a professed Christian.⁵ It was so held on the ground that the Hindu law allowed polygamy on the part of a husband. The same High Court doubted the correctness of this ruling in a subsequent case in which a Native Christian, having a Christian wife living, married a Hindu woman according to Hindu rites without renouncing his religion. The Court held that he was guilty of bigamy and expressed an opinion that it would have made no difference even if he had renounced the Christian religion before contracting the second marriage.⁶ But in a later case the former ruling is followed and the latter dissented from. In the later case a Hindu convert had married a Christian woman according to the rites of the Roman Catholic religion. Subsequently, and during the lifetime of his Christian wife, he reverted to Hinduism and married a Hindu woman in accordance with the rites of the class to which the parties belonged. It was held that he was not guilty of bigamy.⁷

A Christian cannot by embracing Mahomedanism marry a second time during the lifetime of his first wife.⁸ The Calcutta High Court has held that in that case there was some doubt whether the parties were really converted to Mahomedanism or merely pretended to be so in order that they might take advantage of the Mahomedan law. A married Christian domiciled in India, after his conversion to Islam, is governed by Mahomedan law, and is entitled, during the subsistence of his marriage with his former Christian wife, to contract a valid marriage with another woman according to Mahomedan rites.⁹ The accused, a Christian woman, who had married a Christian according to Christian rites and during the lifetime of her husband had become a Mahomedan and married a Mahomedan according to Mahomedan rites was guilty of an offence under this section, notwithstanding the provisions of the Mahomedan law.¹⁰ Whether a change of religion, made honestly after marriage with the assent of both spouses, without any intent to commit a fraud upon the law, will have the effect of altering rights incidental to the marriage, such as that of divorce is a question of importance, and of nicety not decided as yet.¹¹

If one of the parties to a marriage becomes Christian he or she must get his or her marriage dissolved under the Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act (XXI of 1866) before marrying again.

Conversion from Mahomedanism.—A Mahomedan who becomes an Ahmediyan (a sect of Mahomedans) does not become an apostate and his wife is guilty of bigamy if she marries another during his lifetime.¹² A Mahomedan marriage was immediately dissolved on one of the parties to that marriage renouncing the faith of Islam.¹³ But under the Dissolution of Muslim Marriage Act (VIII of 1939) the renunciation of Islam by a born Muslim married woman or her conversion to a faith other than Islam does not dissolve her marriage (s. 4). She can, however, obtain a decree for the dissolution of her marriage on any of the grounds mentioned in s. 2.

Conversion from Zoroastrianism.—Conversion from Zoroastrianism does not dissolve the marriage tie.¹⁴ Conversion of one of the parties, who were married according to the Zoroastrian rites, to the Islamic faith does not dissolve the marriage.¹⁵

Conversion after marriage under Special Marriage Act.—Where a marriage is solemnized under the Special Marriage Act and both husband and wife subsequently become converted to Islam, the marriage not being one in the Mahomedan sense cannot be dissolved in the Mahomedan manner. It can only be dissolved under the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act. The same principle applies even when one of the parties alone becomes a convert to Islam.¹⁶

⁵ (1866) 3 M. H. C. (Appx.) 7; Michael, (1866) 1 Weir 563.

⁶ Lazar, (1907) 30 Mad. 550.

⁷ Antony, (1910) 33 Mad. 371.

⁸ Skinner v. Orde, (1871) 14 M. I. A. 309, 324.

⁹ John Jiban Chandra Datta v. Abinash Chandra Sen, [1939] 2 Cal. 12.

¹⁰ Mussamat Ruri, (1918) P. R. No. 5 of 1919, 20 Cr. L. J. 3.

¹¹ Robert Skinner v. Charlotte Skinner, (1897) 25 Cal. 537, 546. See Noor Jehan v. Eugene Tiscenko, (1941) 45 C. W. N. 1047, on appeal

(1941) 46 C. W. N. 465.

¹² Narantakath Avullah v. Parakkal Mammu, (1922) 45 Mad. 986.

¹³ Karan Singh, [1933] A. L. J. R. 733, 34 Cr. L. J. 869, [1933] AIR (A) 433.

¹⁴ The Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act, III of 1936, s. 52 (2).

¹⁵ Robasa Khanum v. Khodadad Irani, (1946) 48 Bom. L. R. 864.

¹⁶ Andal Vaidyanathan v. Abdul Allam Vaidya, [1947] Mad. 175.

Exception.—The Exception speaks of (1) the first marriage having been declared void by a Court; and (2) seven years' absence on the part of a spouse in a manner not heard of by the other party. Under the English law there is a third element, viz. bona fide belief in the spouse's death,¹⁷ which is not adopted in this Exception. The proviso to this exception confines its application to cases in which the accused before the second marriage discloses the real state of the case, and such knowledge as he or she may have concerning the circumstances, to the person about to be married.

If the accused bona fide believed that the earlier marriage was set aside by the Court he would not be guilty.¹⁸

If it is proved that the accused and his first wife have lived apart for the seven years preceding the second marriage, it is incumbent on the prosecution to show that during that time he was aware of her existence; and, in the absence of such proof, the accused is entitled to be acquitted.¹⁹ Even where the absence is the result of wilful desertion, it lies on the prosecution to show, not merely that the person charged had the means of knowledge, but the person knew that the first consort was living.²⁰ But it has been held in two Indian cases that a woman, who, having the means of acquiring knowledge of the death of her first husband, does not choose to make use of them, and marries, commits bigamy.²¹

The doctrine of a certain school of Mahomedan divines in regard to the competency of a woman to marry again after the absence of her husband for four years does not entitle a woman so remarrying to the benefit of the Exception.²²

Under this Exception it is incumbent on the person contracting the second marriage, if it is contracted within seven years, to inform the other party about the first marriage.²³

Bona fide belief as to earlier marriage being void.—A certain girl was married by her grandfather to one B. On attaining puberty she brought a suit to have the marriage declared void, as she wished to repudiate it, and obtained an ex parte decree which was, however, set aside and later on the suit was withdrawn. Some time after she went through a form of marriage with K, who was charged with having committed an offence under this section and s. 114. It was found that at the time of the marriage K did not know that the ex parte decree had been set aside and believed that it held good. It was held that inasmuch as by reason of a mistake of fact K thought that the previous marriage had been declared void by a Court of competent jurisdiction, he had not committed any offence.²⁴

Absence for seven years.—Where the accused's first wife had left him for sixteen years and it was proved by the second wife that she had known him for nine years, living as a single man, and that she had never heard of the first wife, who, it appeared, had been living seventeen miles from where the accused resided, it was held that the accused ought to be acquitted.²⁵ The accused's first husband had been continually absent from her for seven years next preceding the second marriage, on which occasion she represented herself as a single woman, and was married by her maiden name. The jury found that they had no evidence that, at the time of her second marriage, she knew that he was alive, but that she had means of acquiring knowledge of that fact, had she chosen to make use of them. It was held that on that finding the conviction could not be supported.¹ Where it was proved that the accused had married W in 1865, and lived with her after the marriage, but for how long was not known; that in 1882 W being still alive, he had gone through the form of marriage with another woman, but there was no evidence as to the accused and W having ever separated or as to when, if separated, they last saw each other, it was held that the accused was rightly convicted.² Lord Coleridge, C. J., said: "There is proof of the existence of a state of things and no evidence of the cessation of that state of things, consequently, the presumption is that the existing state continued."

¹⁷ Tolson, (1880) 23 Q. B. D. 168.

¹⁸ Karim Bakhsh, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 680, [1918] AIR (L) 217.

¹⁹ Curgerwen, (1865) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 1; Heaton, (1863) 3 F. & F. 819.

²⁰ Faulkes, (1903) 19 T. L. R. 250.

²¹ Enai Beebe, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Must. Muhammad Nissa, (1899) P. R. No. 1 of 1900.

²² Alam Shah v. Jewan, (1878) P. R. No. 27 of 1878.

²³ Enai Beebe, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 25.

²⁴ Karim Bakhsh, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 680, [1918] AIR (L) 217.

²⁵ Thomas Jones, (1842) Car. & Mar. 614.

¹ Mary Briggs, (1856) 26 L. J. (M. C.) 7.

² Jones, (1888) 11 Q. B. D. 118, 119.

In 1864 W married A. In 1868 he was charged with bigamy in marrying B, his wife A being then alive, and was convicted. In 1879 he married C and in 1880, C being then alive, he married D. Afterwards, upon a charge of bigamy in marrying D, C being then alive, W was convicted, it being held by the presiding Judge that there was no evidence that A was alive when W married C, or that the marriage with C was invalid by reason of A being then alive. It was held that the conviction could not be sustained, as the question should have been left to the jury whether upon the above facts A was alive or not when W married C.³

Persons present at bigamous marriage.—Mere consent of persons to be present at an illegal marriage, or their presence in pursuance of such consent, or the grant of accommodation in a house for the marriage, does not necessarily constitute abetment of such marriage.⁴

Abetment.—A man may be guilty of abetment although the girl herself may be, from want of intelligence or knowledge, incapable of committing this offence.⁵ For abetment there must be evidence that the person accused of abetting knew that the person he married was the wife of another man.⁶ In order that there may be a conviction of abetment of the offence under this section it must be found as a fact that the convicted person abetted the woman intentionally.⁷ The wife of the first accused having left his house with her minor daughter performed the marriage of the daughter with a boy. The first accused hearing of this applied to a Magistrate for a warrant under s. 100, Criminal Procedure Code, and thereupon the girl was handed over to him, and a few months later she was married by him to the second accused. Both the accused were then prosecuted for abetting the offence of bigamy. It was held that although a Hindu father was the proper person to give his daughter in marriage, the rule was firmly established that a marriage, which was duly solemnised and was otherwise valid, was not rendered void because it was brought about without the consent of the guardian in marriage or even in contravention of an express order of the Court; that even if the marriage was brought about by fraud and might on that account be declared invalid, it was not a nullity and was binding until it was set aside by a competent Court, and that unless it was declared to be invalid it could sustain an indictment for bigamy.⁸ Where a Mahomedan guardian of a married female infant, while her husband was living, caused a marriage ceremony to be gone through in her name with another man, but without her taking any part in the transaction, it was held that he did not commit the offence of abetment under s. 109 and this section.⁹ This case does not seem to lay down sound law.

Priest officiating at bigamous marriage.—The priest who officiates at a bigamous marriage is an abettor under this section and s. 109.¹⁰

Statutes relating to marriage and divorce.—Act III of 1936 (Parsis); Act XXI of 1866 (Act to legalize the dissolution of marriages of Native Converts to Christianity); Act IV of 1869 (Act to amend the law relating to Divorce and Matrimonial Causes); Act III of 1872 (Special form of Marriages) as amended by Act XXX of 1923; Act XV of 1872 (Christians); Act VII of 1909 (Sikhs); Muslim Marriages Dissolution Act (VIII of 1939), (Mahomedans); Bombay Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriage Act (Bom. XXV of 1946, amended by Bom. XXXVIII of 1948); Bombay Hindu Divorce Act (Bom. Act XXII of 1947) (Hindus).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the following facts:—

(1) That the accused had already been married to some person.¹¹

The provision of s. 50 of the Indian Evidence Act shows that where marriage is an ingredient of an offence, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved.¹² Proof of actual marriage is always necessary; proof of marriage by cohabitation, reputation

³ Willshire, (1881) 6 Q. B. D. 306.

⁴ Umi, (1882) 6 Bom. 126.

⁵ Nand Lal Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 343;
Hub Ali, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 187.

⁶ Hamad, (1931) 32 Cr. L. J. 1210, [1931] AIR (L) 194.

⁷ Talep Ali v. Sabdar Khan, (1940) 45 C. W. N. 84.

⁸ Gajja Nand, (1921) 2 Lah. 288.

⁹ Abdool Kureem, (1878) 4 Cal. 10.

¹⁰ Umi, (1882) 6 Bom. 126; Millard, (1887) 10 Mad. 218.

¹¹ Birbul v. Sawan, (1874) P. R. No. 4 of 1874; Alam Shah v. Jewan, (1878) P. R. No. 27 of 1878; Makandi v. Mohri, (1893) P. R. No. 17 of 1893.

¹² Pitambur Singh, (1879) 5 Cal. 566, F.B., overruling Wazira, (1872) 8 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 68, 17 W. R. (Cr.) 5; Shivana, (1883) Unrep. Cr. C. 190; Kalku, (1882) 5 All. 288.

and other circumstances from which a marriage may be inferred is not sufficient.¹³ An admission by the accused that he married the woman or the statement of a witness that he was present at the marriage does not prove formal marriage so as to warrant a conviction under this section read with s. 109.¹⁴ A mere statement on the part of the accused that he had committed bigamy is not sufficient.¹⁵ The Court should require some better evidence of the marriage than the mere statement of the complainant and the woman.¹⁶ The Madras High Court has expressed its opinion that a husband or wife is not precluded from proving his or her marriage. Where, therefore, the complainant, a woman, and her mother swore to the fact of the marriage, it was held that the marriage was sufficiently proved.¹⁷ A marriage may be established by preponderating repute and by conduct, even though the repute may be divided.¹⁸ Where there is prima facie evidence of cohabitation as man and wife, and a long course of treatment of the woman as wife and the children as legitimate, the presumption of marriage can be repelled only by evidence of the clearest character. Much weight must be attached to reputation among the relations on both sides, among all the friends and among all the acquaintances in the locality where the parties resided. The evidence of resemblance of a child to the putative father is admissible.¹⁹

Evidence of the identity of the accused on the occasions both of the first and of the second marriage is necessary. On an indictment for bigamy, a photographic likeness of the first husband was allowed to be shown to the witnesses present at the first marriage, in order to prove his identity with the person mentioned in the marriage certificate.²⁰ But, except under very special circumstances, the Court will not act upon identification by a photograph only.²¹

It is also incumbent upon the prosecution to prove the validity of the first marriage.²² A civil marriage between persons professing the Roman Catholic faith is valid.²³

Where the first marriage took place not within any part of the British dominions but in a foreign country, and there is a question concerning the validity of such marriage, the law of the foreign country must be ascertained. On an indictment for bigamy the validity of a foreign marriage must be proved by the evidence of a professional lawyer or of a person who is to be deemed by reason of his office to be skilled in the law of the country where it was celebrated.²⁴ The general principle with regard to marriage contracted in a foreign country is, that between persons of full age, marriage is to be decided by the law of the place where it is celebrated. If valid there, it is valid everywhere. If invalid there, it is equally invalid everywhere. But there are exceptions to this rule. On the one hand a Christian country would not recognize, as lawful, polygamy or some incestuous marriages contracted by Christians while residing in Mahomedan or other countries. On the other hand, where there is a local necessity from the absence of laws or the presence of prohibitions or obstructions not binding upon other countries, or from peculiarities of religious opinions, or conscientious scruples or from circumstances of exemption from local jurisdiction, marriages will be allowed to be valid according to the law of the native country. Thus, persons residing in factories, in conquered places and in desert or barbarous countries, or in countries of an opposite religion, are allowed to contract a marriage there according to the laws of their country.²⁵

If a marriage is performed in British India and has come before the British Courts, its validity is to be determined by the law prevailing in British India.¹

Proof of marriage amongst English.—To constitute a valid marriage by the common law of England, it must have been celebrated in the presence of a clergyman in holy orders; the fact that the bridegroom is himself a clergyman in holy orders there being ¹³ Morris v. Miller, (1767) 4 Burr. 2057, 2059.

¹⁴ Talep Ali v. Sabdur Khan, (1940) 45 C. W. N. 84.

¹⁵ Flaherty, (1847) 2 C. & K. 782; Lindsay, (1902) 18 T. L. R. 761. Contra, Newton, (1843) 2 M. & Rob. 503.

¹⁶ Dal Singh, (1897) 20 All. 166.

¹⁷ Subbarayan, (1885) 9 Mad. 9, 11.

¹⁸ Lyle v. Ellwood, (1874) L. R. 19 Eq. 98; Sastry Velalader Aronegary v. Sembecutty Vagale, (1881) 8 App. Cas. 364.

¹⁹ Imambandi v. Molasuddi, (1911) 15 C. L.

J. 621.

²⁰ Tolson, (1864) 4 F. & F. 103.

²¹ Frith v. Frith, [1896] P. 74.

²² Kay, (1887) 16 Cox 292.

²³ Saldanha v. Saldanha, (1929) 32 Bom. L. R. 17; Saldana, (1929) Criminal Appeal No. 32 of 1929, decided by Blackwell and K. Kemp, JJ., on September 19, 1929 (Unrep. Bom.).

²⁴ Moscovich, (1927) 44 T. L. R. 4.

²⁵ M. & M. 433.

¹ Budamsa Routhier v. Fatema Bi, [1914] M. W. N. 278, 26 M. L. J. 260.

no other clergyman present, will not make the marriage valid.² In English Courts a marriage is usually proved by the production of the parish or other register, or a certified extract therefrom, but, if celebrated abroad, it may be proved by any person who was present at it, though circumstances should also be proved, from which the Court may presume that it was a valid marriage according to the law of the country in which it was celebrated. If the marriage is proved by a person present at it, it is not necessary to prove the registration, or license, or banns.³

Proof of marriage amongst Hindus.—There is no statutory marriage law for the Hindus, and the validity of any particular marriage depends chiefly on the usages of the caste to which the parties belong.⁴

A marriage between a Sikh and a Hindu woman according to Hindu rites is valid, provided that both parties belong to the same caste.⁵

Proof of marriage amongst Mahomedans.—At a marriage between Mahomedans, a Mullah, with the necessary witnesses and vakils, is always present to read the sigha. He should, therefore, be called as a witness. The sigha recited at the marriage of minors is different from that recited at the marriage of adults. There should be evidence to show that akd was performed.⁶ Where, however, the father of a minor girl is present at her marriage and is a consenting party no special recitations are necessary to make a valid marriage under the Hanafi law.⁷

Proof of marriage amongst Parsis.—This can be proved by the production of the certificate given under s. 6 of the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (III of 1936) or a certified extract from the register of marriages under s. 7 of the Act.

Proof of marriage amongst Native Christians.—This can be proved by a certified copy of any entry of a marriage in the Marriage Register under s. 80 of the Indian Christian Marriage Act.⁸

Proof of marriage amongst Jews.—In order to prove a Jewish marriage it is not sufficient to produce a witness who was present at the religious ceremony in the synagogue, a written contract (katuba) between the parties being essential to the validity of the marriage, production and proof of the execution of such document is necessary.⁹ Jews domiciled in England cannot validly contract a marriage within the degrees prohibited by English law.¹⁰

(2) That the person to whom he had married was still living. The prosecution must prove to the satisfaction of the Court that the husband or wife, as the case may be, was alive at the date of the second marriage. This is purely a question of fact. The existence of the party at an antecedent period may or may not afford a reasonable inference that he was living at the subsequent date. If, for example, it were proved that he was in good health on the day preceding the second marriage, the inference would be strong, almost irresistible, that he was living on the latter day, and the Court would in all probability find that he was so. If, on the other hand, it were proved that he was then in a dying condition, and nothing further was proved, the Court would probably decline to draw that inference. The law makes no presumption either way. The Legislature sanctions a presumption that a person who has not been heard of for seven years is dead;¹¹ but this affords no ground for the converse proposition, viz. that when a party has been seen or heard of within seven years, a presumption arises that he is still living.¹²

Whether evidence is necessary, on the part of the prosecution, to show that the accused married, knowing his second wife to be alive, depends upon the particular facts of each case.¹³ Positive proof that at the time of his second marriage the accused knew that his first wife was alive is not absolutely necessary.¹⁴

(3) That the accused married another person.

² Beamish v. Beamish, (1859) 9 H. L. C. 274.

³ Allison's Case, (1806) Russ. & Ry. 109.

⁴ Subbarayan, (1895) 9 Mad. 9.

⁵ Inder Singh v. Sadhu Singh, (1943) 47 C. W. N. 669, 77 C. L. J. 327, 44 Cr. L. J. 643, [1943] AIR (C) 479.

⁶ Badal Aurat, (1891) 19 Cal. 79.

⁷ Sheikh Alimuddin, (1906) C. W. N. 982, 4 Cr. L. J. 152.

⁸ Act XV of 1872.

⁹ Althausen, (1893) 17 Cox 630. See Nathan v. Wolf, (1890) 16 T. L. R. 250; Benjamin v. Benjamin, (1925) 50 Bom. 369, 28 Bom. L. R. 328.

¹⁰ De Wilton: De Wilton v. Montefiore, [1900] 2 Ch. 481; Benjamin v. Benjamin, supra.

¹¹ See the Indian Evidence Act, s. 108.

¹² Lumley, (1869) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196, 198.

¹³ Ellis, (1858) 1 F. & F. 309.

¹⁴ Jones, (1869) 11 Cox 358.

The celebration of the second marriage is proved in the same manner as that of the first.

(4) That the second marriage was void by reason of its taking place during the life of the first spouse.¹⁵

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Complaint by person aggrieved necessary.—Under s. 198 of the Code of Criminal Procedure no Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under this section except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence. This section is intended to prevent Magistrates from inquiring into cases coming under ss. 493 to 496, unless the husband or some person aggrieved lodges a complaint. It is not necessary, however, that a complainant should state precisely the section of the Code under which the accused shall be charged. It is sufficient if the complainant lays before the Magistrate matters which, if proved, would be sufficient to warrant a commitment under this section.¹⁶

The brother of a lunatic husband is not a 'person aggrieved' by the wife's bigamy, and he is not competent to complain.¹⁷ Similarly, the brother of the second (bigamous) husband¹⁸ or the father of the first husband¹⁹ of the accused is not a 'person aggrieved.' The person aggrieved is either the first husband or the second.²⁰

Venue.—The proper Court to try a charge under this section is the Court which has territorial jurisdiction at the place where the offence was committed. Persons accused of abetting the commission of the offence are triable by the Court within whose territorial jurisdiction the abetment takes place.²¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) her eby charge you (name o accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, having a wife [or husband] to wit——, living, married again AB, and such marriage being void by reason of its taking place during the lifetime of the said wife [or husband], and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 494 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (if the case is tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.²²

Punishment.—Where a woman who has been left largely to her fate by her husband and has been living in adultery with a paramour, marries that paramour, she is guilty only of a technical offence and deserves only nominal punishment.²³ As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation, 1901, ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

495. Whoever commits the offence defined in the last preceding section having concealed from the person with whom the subsequent marriage is contracted, the fact of the former marriage, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Same offence with concealment of former marriage from person with whom subsequent marriage is contracted.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section provides a higher penalty when the fact of the former marriage is concealed from the person with whom the subsequent marriage is contracted.

The authors of the Code say : " The act which in the English law is designated as bigamy is always an immoral act. But it may be one of the most serious crimes

¹⁵ Musst. Bibi, (1882) P. R. No. 43 of 1882; (1870) 1 Weir 565, F.B.

¹⁶ Ali, (1902) 25 All. 209; Ujja Bewa, (1878) 1 C. L. R. 523.

¹⁷ Bai Rukshmoni, (1886) 10 Bom. 340.

¹⁸ Imtiazan, (1902) 25 All. 132.

¹⁹ Lala, (1909) 32 All. 78.

²⁰ The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Sarna

Kahmi, (1899) 26 Cal 336; Lala, (1909) 32 All. 78; Banamali Tripathi, (1942) 22 Pat. 268.

²¹ Mussammat Bhagwati, (1924) 3 Pat. 417; Goverdhan Riddharan, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 887 29 Cr. L. J. 538, [1928] AIR (B) 140.

²² (1876) 8. W.R. (Cr. L.) 9.

²³ Ritha, (1925) 8 N. L. J. 178, 27 Cr. L. J. 74, [1926] AIR (N) 127.

that can be committed. It may be attended with circumstances which may excuse though they cannot justify it.

"The married man who, by passing himself off as unmarried, induces a modest woman to become, as she thinks, his wife, but in reality his concubine, and the mother of an illegitimate issue, is guilty of one of the most cruel frauds that can be conceived. Such a man we would punish with exemplary severity..

"But suppose that a person arrives from England, and pays attentions to one of his countrywomen at Calcutta. She refuses to listen to him on any other terms than those of marriage. He candidly owns that he is already married. She still presses him to go through the ceremony with her. She represents to him that if they live together without being married, she shall be an outcaste from society, that nobody in India knows that he has a wife, that he may very likely never fall in with his wife again, and that she is ready to take the risk. The lover accordingly agrees to go through the forms of marriage.

"It cannot be disputed that there is an immense difference between these two cases. Indeed, in the second case the man can hardly be said to have injured any individual in such a manner as calls for legal punishment. For what individual has he injured? His second wife? He has acted by her consent, and at her solicitation. His first wife? He has certainly been unfaithful to his first wife. But we have no punishment for mere conjugal infidelity. He will often have injured his first wife no more than he would have done by keeping a mistress calling that mistress by his own name, introducing her into every society as his wife, and procuring for her the consideration of a wife from all his acquaintances. The legal rights of the first wife and of her children remain unaltered. She is the wife; the second is the concubine. But suppose that the first wife has herself left her husband, and is living in adultery with another man. No individual can then be said to be injured by this second invalid marriage. The only party injured is society, which has undoubtedly a deep interest in the sacredness of the matrimonial contract, and which may therefore be justified in punishing those who go through the forms of that contract for the purpose of imposing on the public.

"The law of England on the subject of bigamy appears to us to be in some cases too severe, and in others too lenient. It seems to bear a close analogy to the law of perjury. The English law on these two subjects has been framed less for the purpose of preventing people from injuring each other, than for the purpose of preventing the profanation of a religious ceremony. It therefore makes no distinction between perjury which is intended to destroy the life of the innocent, and perjury which is intended to save the innocent; between bigamy which produces the most frightful suffering to individuals and bigamy which produces no suffering to individuals, at all. We have proceeded on a different principle. While we admit that the profanation of a ceremony so important to society as that of marriage is a great evil, we cannot but think that evil immensely aggravated when the profanation is made the means of tricking an innocent woman into the most miserable of all situations. We have therefore proposed that a man who deceives a woman into believing herself his lawful wife when he knows that she is not so, and induces her, under that persuasion, to cohabit with him, should be punished with great severity.

"There are reasons similar, but not exactly the same, for punishing a woman who deceives a man into contracting with her a marriage which she knows to be invalid. For this offence we propose a punishment which, for reasons too obvious to require explanation, is much less severe than that which we have provided for a similar deception practised by a man on a woman."²⁴

The authors of the Code intended to punish with greater severity only the man who deceived a woman. But the section as it stands applies to either party.

CASES.

Concealment of fact of first marriage when contracting second.—A woman, who does not use all reasonable means in her power to inform herself of the fact of her first husband's alleged demise, and contracts a second marriage within sixteen months after cohabitation with her first husband, without disclosing the fact of the former marriage to her second husband, is liable to enhanced punishment under this section.²⁵

²⁴ Note Q, pp. 171; 172.

²⁵ Enai Bébec, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 25.

Infant marriage.—Where a child of ten years was married again during the lifetime of her husband, the marriage being negotiated and caused to be performed by the mother of the accused, it was held that the child had not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of her conduct on the occasion of the second marriage.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points (1) to (4) as those for s. 494; and further—(5) That the accused, when marrying the second person, concealed from such person the fact of the former marriage.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint by person aggrieved necessary.—See s. 493, supra.²

496. Whoever, dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention, goes through the ceremony of being married,¹ knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials:—

1. Dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention going through the ceremony of marriage.

2. Knowledge on the part of the person going through the ceremony that he is not thereby lawfully married.

1. ‘Dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention, goes through the ceremony of being married’.—The essence of this offence is that the marriage ceremony should be fraudulently gone through and that there should be no lawful marriage.

See s. 24 as to the meaning of ‘dishonestly’, and s. 25, as to that of ‘fraudulent intention’.

2. ‘Knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married’.—The accused must have the knowledge that there is no marriage. A case of bigamy is not contemplated by this section. Where it is intended that there should be a valid marriage and that there should be only a show of marriage for some ulterior and fraudulent purpose, the case does not come under this section.³ The section punishes mock marriages. It applies to cases in which a ceremony is gone through which would in no case constitute a marriage, and in which one of the parties is deceived by the other into the belief that it does constitute a marriage or in which effect is sought to be given by the proceeding to some collateral fraudulent purpose. Where the ceremony gone through does, but for the previous marriage, constitute a valid marriage, and both parties are aware of the circumstances of the previous marriage, s. 494 applies.⁴ The accused, who wanted to marry a girl but was rejected, waylaid her and pushed her down and tied a tali round her neck. He was convicted of an offence under this section. On a perusal of the calendar of the High Court, it was held that the act of the accused in tying the tali round the neck of the girl in the circumstances did not amount to going through the ceremony of being married, knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married within the meaning of this section and hence the conviction should be set aside. Moreover the accused must be presumed to have known full well that according to the custom of the community that act did not constitute a ceremony of being married.⁵

An abuse of marriage ceremony where no deceit is practised on the woman and no dishonest or fraudulent intent is proved, is not an offence under this section.

¹ Godi, (1896) Cr. R. No. 55 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 876.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 198.

³ Sheikh Alimuddin, (1907) 10 C. W. N. 982, 4 Cr. L. J. 152.

⁴ Rama Sona, (1873) Cr. R. July 1873, Unrep. Cr. C. 77.

⁵ Vellai Mudali, [1946] 2 M. L. J. 428, [1946] M. W. N. 762, 48 Cr. L. J. 842.

Section 493 and 496.—The two sections are somewhat alike; the difference appears to be that under s. 493 deception is requisite on the part of the man, and cohabitation or sexual intercourse consequent on such deception. The offence under s. 496 requires no deception, cohabitation, or sexual intercourse as a sine qua non, but a dishonest or fraudulent abuse of the marriage ceremony. In the latter case the offence can be committed by a man or a woman, in the former, only by a man.

Abetment.—The mere act of allowing the marriage to take place at one's house does not amount to an abetment of illegal marriage.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused went through the ceremony of marriage.

(2) That when he went through such ceremony he knew that he was not thereby lawfully married to the complainant.

(3) That he did as in (1) dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention.⁷

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint by the person aggrieved is necessary.—See s. 493, supra.⁸

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, dishonestly (or fraudulently) went through the ceremony of being married to AB, knowing that you were not thereby lawfully married, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 496 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

497. Whoever has sexual intercourse with a person who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man,¹ without the consent or connivance of that man,² such sexual intercourse not amounting to the offence of rape,³ is guilty of the offence of adultery, and shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both. In such case the wife shall not be punishable as an abettor.

COMMENT.

The framers of the Code did not make adultery an offence punishable under the Code. But the Second Law Commission, after giving mature consideration to the subject, came to the conclusion that it was not advisable to exclude this offence from the Code. Adultery figures in the penal law of many nations and some of the most celebrated English lawyers have considered its omission from the English law as a defect.

This section applies to Europeans who are in British India.⁴

Ingredients.—The section requires the following essentials:—

1. Sexual intercourse by a man with a woman who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man.

2. Such sexual intercourse must be without the consent or connivance of the husband.

3. Such sexual intercourse must not amount to rape.

1. 'Sexual intercourse with a person who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man'.—The Law Commissioners have limited the cognizance of this offence to adultery committed with a married woman, and the male offender alone has been made liable to punishment. Thus, under the Code, adultery is an offence committed by a third person against a husband in respect

⁶ Kudum, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 13.

⁷ Kudum, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 13.

⁸ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 198.

⁹ E. G. Hunter, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 382.

of his wife. It is not committed by a man who has sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman, or with a widow, or even with a married woman whose husband consents to it. In s. 483 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the word 'adultery' is used in the wide and ordinary sense of voluntary sexual connection between either of the parties to the marriage and some one, married or single, of the opposite sex other than the offender's own spouse. It is used in the popular sense of the term, viz. a breach of the matrimonial tie by either party.¹⁰

Why wife not punished as abettor.—The authors of the Code say: "Though we well know that the dearest interests of the human race are closely connected with the chastity of women and the sacredness of the nuptial contract, we cannot but feel that there are some peculiarities in the state of society in this country which may well lead a humane man to pause before he determines to punish the infidelity of wives. The condition of the women of this country is unhappily very different from that of the women of England and France; they are married while still children; they are often neglected for other wives while still young. They share the attentions of a husband with several rivals. To make laws for punishing the inconstancy of the wife, while the law admits the privilege of the husband to fill his zenana with women, is a course which we are most reluctant to adopt. We are not so visionary as to think of attacking, by law, an evil so deeply rooted in the manners of the people of this country as polygamy. We leave it to the slow, but we trust the certain, operation of education and of time. But while it exists, while it continues to produce its never failing effects on the happiness and respectability of women, we are not inclined to throw into a scale, already too much depressed, the additional weight of the penal law."¹¹

The reasons given above for not punishing a wife as an abettor seem neither convincing nor satisfactory. It would be more consonant with Indian ideas, if the woman also were punished for adultery. Manu has provided punishment for her, and in France and in China she is punished.

In the Punjab Frontier Districts, in the North West Frontier Province and in Baluchistan, a married woman is punishable for adultery.¹²

'Reason to believe to be the wife of another man'.—See s. 26, supra, as to the meaning of the expression 'reason to believe'. Where a prisoner accused of adultery set up in defence a natra, contracted with the woman with whom he was alleged to have committed adultery, in accordance with the custom of his caste, it was held that the question the Court had to determine was, whether or not the accused honestly believed, at the time of contracting the natra, that the woman was the wife of another man.¹³ Where the accused, after abducting the wife of another, lived with her in adultery and, subsequently, remarried her in the nikah form with her consent, it was held that the accused was guilty of offences under this section and s. 109 read with s. 494.¹⁴

It is not necessary that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is, provided he knew she was a married woman.¹⁵ A nekai wife is a wife within the meaning of this and the following section.¹⁶

2. 'Without the consent or connivance of that man'.—'Consent' here is a permission to the paramour on the part of the husband to have connection with his wife.

'Connivance' is the willing consent to a conjugal offence, or a culpable acquiescence in a course of conduct reasonably likely to lead to the offence being committed.¹⁷ Connivance is an act of the mind, it implies knowledge and acquiescence. As a legal doctrine, connivance has its source and its limits in the principle, volenti non fit injuria, a willing mind, this is all that is necessary.¹⁸ To constitute 'connivance' there "must be something more than mere negligence; than mere inattention; than over-confidence; than dullness of apprehension; than mere indifference: It must be intentional concur-

¹⁰ Gantapalli Appalamma v. Gantapalli Yella-yya, (1897) 20 Mad. 470, F.B.

¹¹ Note Q, p. 175. See Khark Singh, (1881) P. R. No. 36 of 1881.

¹² See Frontier Crimes Regulation, III of 1901, ss. 12 and 30.

¹³ Manohar Raiji, (1898) 5 B. II. C. (Cr. C.) 17.

¹⁴ Munir, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 155, 27 Cr. L. J. 101, [1926] AIR (A) 189.

¹⁵ Madhub Chunder Giri Mohanti, (1873) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 13.

¹⁶ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 1.

¹⁷ Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, Vol. I, p. 374.

¹⁸ Boulting v. Boulting, (1864) 33 L. J. (P. M. & A.) 81.

rence".¹⁹ Connivance is a figurative expression meaning a voluntary blindness to some present act or conduct, to something going on before the eyes, or something which is known to be going on without any protest or desire to disturb or interfere with it.²⁰ "To establish connivance it is requisite, not that the party conniving should be actually an accessory before the fact, so as to have taken any active measure to bring about the result of adultery, but that he should be cognizant that such a result would follow from certain transactions that he approved of and consented to."²¹ The mere fact that the husband, on being informed by the police that his wife had been discovered at a certain place, expressed his unwillingness to take her back on the ground that she had lost her religion, was not evidence of the husband having connived at her living a life of adultery with the accused.²²

3. 'Such sexual intercourse not amounting to the offence of rape'.—In rape the consent of the woman is wanting. Under this section the offence is committed even though the woman is a consenting party. In rape the woman may be a married woman or not, under this section the woman must be the wife of another man. Rape may be committed even by a husband when the wife is under thirteen years of age.

See s. 375, supra.

Attempt.—Adultery being an act which requires the consent of both the parties, it appears that for a man to be guilty of an attempt it is not sufficient that he was found in a place in which adultery might have been committed and that he was minded to commit it.²³ Where a married woman went to visit a man, but before adultery was committed, she was taken away by her husband, it was held that the man could not be convicted of an attempt to commit adultery.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused had sexual intercourse with the woman in question.

The sexual intercourse required for adultery being the same identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape, the evidence of sexual intercourse on a charge of adultery must not be stronger than that in a suit for divorce. The best proof available must always be produced, but in both cases evidence of opportunities sought for and obtained and of familiarities which point strongly to an inference of guilt, are sufficient to establish the fact of sexual intercourse.²⁵

Evidence of having lived with the wife of an absent person for several weeks and moreover of having slept in the same bed for a number of days and of considerable attachment between the accused and the woman where there is no allegation that the accused is impotent, is, although circumstantial, sufficient evidence to prove sexual intercourse between them.¹

(2) That she was then the wife of another man.

Strict proof is necessary of the marriage of the woman.² The actual fact of the marriage between the complainant and the woman must be proved in some way or another.³ Any inference of tacit admission on the part of the accused will not avail the prosecution if they fail to prove that relationship strictly. In India where no registration prevails, it is necessary to set out the facts and circumstances surrounding the alleged ceremony of the marriage in order to enable the Court to determine the ¹⁹ Per Sir John Nicholl in Rogers v. Rogers, (1880) 3 Hagg. Eco. 57, 59; Phillips v. Phillips, (1844) 1 Rob. 144; Allen v. Allen, (1859) 30 L. J. (P. M. & A.) 2.

²⁰ Gipps v. Gipps, (1864) 11 H. L. C. 1; Munir, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 155, 27 Cr. L. J. 101, [1926] AIR (A) 189.

²¹ Glennie v. Glennie, (1862) 32 L. J. (P. M. & A.) 17, 20.

²² Munir, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 155, 27 Cr. L. J. 101, [1926] AIR (A) 189.

²³ Basava Chary, (1889) 1 Weir 569.

²⁴ Ghulam Mahomed, (1879) P. R. No. 13 of 1879; Patra Ram, (1902) P. R. No. 25 of 1902.

²⁵ Madhub Chunder Giri Mohunt, (1873) 21

W. R. (Cr.) 13; E. G. Hunter, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 382.

¹ E. G. Hunter, ibid.

² G. R. Smith, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 31; (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 10; Pitambar Singh, (1879) 5 Cal. 536, F.B.; Danesh Sheikh v. Tajfir Mandal, (1902) 7 C. W. N. 143; Akbar Khan, (1882) P. R. No. 40 of 1882; Gopal, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 651, [1925] AIR (R) 328; Raghupat Singh, (1927) 4 O. W. N. 172, 28 Cr. L. J. 311, [1927] AIR (O) 140; Aziz Khan, (1936) 18 P. L. T. 166, [1936] P. W. N. 865, 38 Cr. L. J. 213, AIR (P) 219.

³ Bhagu Dhondi, (1914) 17 Bom. L. R. 57, 16 Cr. L. J. 213, [1915] AIR (B) 294.

question whether the marriage in fact took place and whether the relationship of husband and wife in fact existed at the time of the prosecution.⁴

(3) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that she was the wife of another man.

The question the Court has to determine is, whether or not the accused honestly believed that the woman was the wife of another man.⁵

(4) That such man did not consent to, or connive at, such intercourse.

A person may call the woman with whom he is accused of having had sexual intercourse as a witness on his behalf.⁶

The admission of a man and a woman coupled with the evidence of the witnesses to the effect that the two lived together as man and wife leads to the inevitable presumption that acts of adultery must have been committed.⁷ Adultery need not and generally speaking cannot be proved by direct evidence.⁸

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Death of husband does not end prosecution.—The death of the husband does not necessarily put an end to a prosecution under this section.⁹ This relates to the death during the pendency of the case and not before its institution.

Complaint by person aggrieved necessary.—No Court shall take cognizance of the offence except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or, in his absence, by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed.¹⁰ The words “the husband of the woman” in s. 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code are simply intended to point to the particular person who has the right to start proceedings in respect of such offences mentioned in the section, and a man does not cease to be “the husband of the woman” within the meaning of this section merely because the marriage tie has been dissolved subsequent to the commission of the offence complained of. In other words, the dissolution of the marriage tie does not take away from the complainant the right to lodge a complaint in respect of an offence committed before the marriage tie was dissolved.¹¹

Although a man cannot be charged with adultery except by the husband of the woman with whom he commits it, yet he may be charged with and convicted of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery, without the husband himself making the charge, if there is no consent or connivance on the part of the latter.¹² In a case the accused was found in the complainant's house by night, and he stated that he was there for the purpose of carrying on an intrigue with the complainant's wife. The complainant refused to lay a complaint of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery. It was held that the Magistrate was right in refusing to convict him of a charge which the husband refused to make.¹³ Where an accused person was committed to the Sessions Court to stand his trial on a charge preferred by a husband under s. 376, and the Sessions Judge at the trial added a charge of adultery under this section and acquitted the accused under s. 376, but convicted him under this section, it was held that the Sessions Judge had acted without jurisdiction.¹⁴ The Court of Session may add charges under this section and s. 498, in the manner indicated in s. 226 and the sections following of the Code of Criminal Procedure, when the complaint of the husband was not merely of offences involving the use of force but was also a specific complaint of the offence punishable under the aforesaid sections.¹⁵ Where in a prosecution under s. 366 the

⁴ Ganga Patra, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 1045, [1928] AIR (P) 481.

⁵ Manohar Raiji, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 17.

⁶ Sheikh Bechoo, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 92.

⁷ Kallychurn Potial, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 50.

⁸ Sita Devi v. Gopal Saran Narayan Singh, (1928) 9 P. L. T. 397.

⁹ (1869) 4 M. H. C. (Appx.) 55, 2 Weir 235; Mauj Din, (1922) 4 Lah. 7; Nur Mahomed, (1907) 1 S. L. R. 72, 8 Cr. L. J. 190.

¹⁰ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 199. See Luckhy Narain Nagory, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 18; Fiaz Ahmed, (1878) P. R. No. 5 of 1879; Hashmat, (1882) P. R. No. 19 of 1882; Kahmatulla, (1888) P. R. No. 10 of 1888; Jit Mal, (1887) P. R.

No. 4 of 1888; Piran Ditta, (1895) P. R. No. 23 of 1895; Kallu, (1882) 5 All. 238; Nga Po Thaw, (1912) U. B. R. 155, 14 Cr. L. J. 284.

¹¹ Dhanna Singh, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 402, [1922] AIR (L) 477; W. J. Phillips, [1935] O. W. N. 1015, 36 Cr. L. J. 1298. The brother of a married woman, who is discarded by her husband, is not a proper complainant: Raminarayan Kapur, (1936) 39 Bom. L. R. 61, [1937] Bom. 244.

¹² (1868) 3 Mad. Jur. 285.

¹³ (1869) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 5, 1 Weir 532.

¹⁴ Chemoni Garo, (1902) 29 Cal. 415.

¹⁵ Rajani Kuntia Shahu v. Idris Thakur, (1921) 48 Cal. 1105.

husband of the woman appeared as a witness and asked the Magistrate to drop the proceedings under s. 366 as he intended to prosecute the accused under s. 498, it was held that the statement made by the husband, as a witness, fell within the definition of complaint as defined in s. 4, cl. (h), of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and therefore a conviction under s. 498, treating the statement made by the husband as a complaint, was legal.¹⁶

Withdrawal of charge.—Where the husband of a woman, with whom the accused was alleged to have committed adultery, professed himself unwilling to proceed with the prosecution, and the Judge thereupon ordered the accused to be discharged, the High Court, in the exercise of its discretion, declined to interfere.¹⁷ But in an Allahabad case it has been ruled that a charge of adultery cannot be withdrawn by a complainant with the Magistrate's consent.¹⁸

Order for re-trial.—In an inquiry into a case of alleged adultery and enticing away a married woman for illicit purposes, the complainant refused to examine his wife as to the marriage. The Deputy Magistrate declined to frame a charge and discharged the accused. The Sessions Judge directed a re-trial to be held by another Deputy Magistrate and ordered that the evidence of the wife should be taken as to the marriage. It was held that the Sessions Judge in ordering a re-trial had not exercised a proper discretion, he having admitted that the prosecution had failed to prove the marriage, and it not being alleged that any evidence was tendered by the prosecution and not taken by the Deputy Magistrate.¹⁹

Conviction for every fresh act.—Where a man who has been convicted of adultery with another man's wife, continues his adulterous intercourse, he will be liable to a second conviction and punishment for the fresh act, notwithstanding that the woman has not returned to the protection of her husband after the conviction of her paramour.²⁰ The offence of adultery is not a continuing offence. Every act of sexual intercourse amounts to an offence of adultery.²¹ The Nagpur High Court has accepted this view. But it has opined that it is undesirable that there should be successive prosecutions against the accused for an offence under this section. Successive prosecutions should not be encouraged.²²

Mayne is of opinion that a man cannot be convicted of adultery a second time in respect of the same woman, if she has not been taken back by her husband. But there is nothing in the section to support this view.

Charge.—A charge of adultery, alleging commission of offences between two dates, is legal where it is impossible, in the circumstances of the case, to assign particular dates on which sexual intercourse took place.²³

It should run thus—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, committed adultery with AB, knowing or having reason to believe her to be the wife of CD, and without the consent or connivance of the said CD; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 497 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (if the case is tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation, 1901, ss. 11 (3) (d), and 12 (2).

498. Whoever takes or entices away any woman who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man,¹ from that man, or from any person having the care of her on behalf of that man, with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman.

¹⁶ Bhawani Dat, (1916) 38 All. 276.

¹⁷ Ramlo Jerio, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 27.

¹⁸ Gumbheer, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 234.

¹⁹ Chunder Nath Ghose v. Nundololl Chatterji, (1884) 11 Cal. 81.

²⁰ Emaji, (1880) Cr. R. October 28, 1880,

Unrep. Cr. C. 150.

²¹ Shanker Tulshiram, (1928) 30 Bom. L. R. 1435, 1436, 53 Bom. 69.

²² Rewa, [1941] N. L. J. 606.

²³ Bhola Nath Mitter, (1924) 51 Cal. 468.

any person,² or conceals or detains with that intent any such woman,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section and the preceding one are evidently intended for the protection of husbands, who alone can institute prosecutions for offences under them. The gist of the offence under this section consists in depriving the husband of his proper control over his wife for the purpose of illicit intercourse. Any disposition or consent or willingness on the part of the wife is perfectly immaterial to the guilt of the accused.²⁴

Sections 361 and 366 may be compared with this section which comes into operation when the two former sections fail to apply.

Ingredients.—The section requires three things:—

1. Taking or enticing away or concealing or detaining the wife of another man from (a) that man, or (b) any person having the care of her on behalf of that man.
2. Knowledge or reason to believe that she is a wife.
3. Such taking, enticing, concealing or detaining must be with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person.²⁵

1. ‘Takes or entices away any woman who is and whom he knows...to be the wife of any other man’.—The expression “takes or entices away” does not include the taking of a woman with the consent of the person who has the care of her.¹ “Taking” does not mean taking by force and means something different from enticing.² If the accused personally and actively assists the wife to get away from her husband’s house or from the custody of any person who was taking care of her on behalf of the husband, this would amount to taking.³ There must be some influence emanating from the accused and operating on the woman or co-operating with her inclination—some act or assistance—in order to constitute taking.⁴ ‘Taking away’ of a married woman implies that there is some influence, physical or moral, brought to bear by the accused to induce the wife to leave her husband. There must be some influence operating on the woman, or co-operating with her inclination at the time the final step is taken which causes a severance of the woman from her husband, for the purpose of causing such step to be taken.⁵ ‘Enticing’ implies some blandishment or coaxing. It is the taking or enticing of the wife from the husband or the person having the care of her on behalf of the husband for the illicit purpose that constitutes the offence. It is none the less taking, although the advances and solicitations proceeded from the woman and the accused had for some time refused to yield to her request.⁶ The fact that the woman accompanied the accused of her own free-will does not diminish the criminality of the act.⁷ If in point of fact the husband had, previously to the accused’s alleged act of taking or enticing away the woman, turned his wife out of his house, it cannot be said that, under such circumstances, she was taken from her husband within the meaning of the section, which evidently contemplates that the woman should be at the time living under the protection of her husband or of someone acting on his behalf.⁸

It is the enticement or taking away from the husband and not the enticement to any person which constitutes the offence. If, therefore, it is clearly proved that a man has enticed the woman away from her husband’s control with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person, and she has actually left her husband’s control without any definite intention to return or with the intention to remain away from her husband’s protection indefinitely, the offence is complete as regards the person who has so enticed the woman, who may, as a matter of fact, not be her paramour

²⁴ Hossaini Methor, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 931, 65 C. L. J. 421, 38 Cr. L. J. 986, [1937] AIR (C) 460.

²⁵ Ganesh Ram v. Gyan Chand, (1919) 21 Cr. L. J. 139, [1920] AIR (P) 522.

¹ Abdul Rahman, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1055, 37 Cr. L. J. 1155.

² Jnanendra Nath Dey v. Khitish Chandra Dey, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1280, 37 Cr. L. J. 28.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Hossaini Methor, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 931,

65 C. L. J. 421, 38 Cr. L. J. 986, [1937] AIR (C) 460.

⁵ Mahadeo Rama, (1942) 45 Bom. L. R. 295, 44 Cr. L. J. 584, [1943] AIR (B) 179.

⁶ Kumarasami, (1865) 2 M. H. C. 381, 1 Weir 569.

⁷ Jan Mahomed, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 435; Jnanendra Nath Dey v. Khitish Chandra Dey, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 1280, 37 Cr. L. J. 28.

⁸ Mihan Singh, (1888) P. R. No. 15 of 1888 at p. 26.

at all, but some third person, even though the woman and her paramour should never meet at all.⁹ For the purposes of a conviction under this section there must be an intention that the woman should leave her husband's control without any definite intention that she should return to him, or an intention that she should remain away indefinitely.¹⁰

'Whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man'.—The woman must be the wife of another man. If the marriage is voidable then this section does not apply.¹¹

If a particular union between two persons is recognised as marriage, then the taking or enticing away the woman from a party to such union will amount to an offence under this section.¹² Where the accused enticed away a woman, who was the illegitimate daughter of a Brahmin father and Bania mother and who had married a Bania, it was held that the accused was guilty as such a marriage was recognized by the caste to which the husband belonged and was not invalid according to Hindu law.¹³ Where by custom a marriage with a widow is valid and the accused abducted a woman so married with knowledge of the marriage, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁴

Mahomedan law.—According to Mahomedan law if a woman marries before the expiry of iddat the marriage is null and void. Where a woman had married her husband's brother during her iddat and subsequently married the accused, it was held that the accused had committed no offence under this section.¹⁵

The complainant, a Mahomedan, alleged that he had been married six times; that all the wives were living, but that he kept two of the first four partially divorced, (i.e. by pronouncing the words of divorce only once or twice and not thrice) in order to legalize his marriage with the fifth and the sixth, and so kept within the law which permitted him to have four wives. The accused was charged with abducting or committing adultery with the sixth wife. It was held that the woman in question was not the wife of the complainant.¹⁶

A Mahomedan marriage was considered to have been dissolved on one of the parties to that marriage renouncing the faith of Islam. Where the wife of a Mahomedan, who had neglected and abandoned her, after renouncing her religion and accepting the faith of the accused, left her father's house accompanied by the accused and began to live with him, it was held that as the woman had ceased to be the wife of the Mahomedan, the accused was at liberty to take her away from the house of her father without committing an offence under this section.¹⁷ Under the Dissolution of Muslim Marriage Act (VII of 1939) the renunciation of Islam by a married Muslim woman does not dissolve her marriage (s. 4.).

Where a wife, who was deserted by her husband, went of her own free will, to live with another man, a conviction under this section was set aside, as there was no enticing or taking away.¹⁸

'Woman'.—See s. 10, supra.

'Reason to believe'.—See s. 26, supra.

2. 'With intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person'.—

Intention is the gist of this offence. The intention must be that the woman should have unlawful intercourse with a person.

A person who entices away a married woman from her husband's house with intent that he may dispose of her in marriage to some one else commits an offence under this section, because sexual intercourse between the woman and any other person to whom she has thus been given in marriage, during the lifetime of her husband, would be illicit intercourse within the meaning of this section.¹⁹ Though according to the

⁹ Gaman, (1899) P. R. No. 9 of 1899.

¹⁰ Ahmad, (1917) 18 P. L. R. 402, 19 Cr. L. J. 441, [1918] AIR (L) 346.

¹¹ Bulunda, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 664.

¹² Aslop, [1930] A. L. J. R. 1492, 82 Cr. L. J. 315, [1930] AIR (A) 884.

¹³ Madan Gopal, (1912) 34 All. 589; Anandaw, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 868, [1927] AIR (R) 261.

¹⁴ Gobindu, (1918) P. R. No. 10 of 1919, 20 Cr. L. J. 554.

¹⁵ Isa v. Ranon, (1911) 13 P. L. R. 258, 13

Cr. L. J. 136.

¹⁶ Rab Nawaz Khan, (1874) P. R. No. 1 of 1875.

¹⁷ Karan Singh, [1933] A. L. J. R. 733, 34 Cr. L. J. 869, [1933] AIR (A) 433.

¹⁸ Pochun Chung, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 35; Pahlwan, (1914) 16 P. L. R. 340, 16 Cr. L. J. 216, [1915] AIR (L) 461.

¹⁹ Naurang, (1915) 18 A. L. J. R. 251, 16 Cr. L. J. 815, [1915] AIR (A) 120.

Mahomedan law the remarriage of a married woman is only invalid and not void, yet as that woman does not become the wife of the person she remarries, any intercourse between the remarried woman and the person she remarries is illicit and as the intention of the person enticing away the woman is to remarry her the intent would, therefore, be that she should have illicit intercourse.²⁰

Where a procuress induced a married woman of twenty to leave her husband, and the fact showed that the wife had made her deliberate choice and was determined, of her own free-will, to leave her husband and become a prostitute in Calcutta, the High Court held that the procuress could not be convicted of kidnapping under s. 366, but was guilty of enticing away a married woman under this section, for, whatever the wife's secret inclinations were, she would have had no opportunity of carrying them out had not the accused interposed.²¹ The complainant alleged that his father-in-law had detained his wife, and that with the help of his father-in-law the accused married his wife who was since then kept in the accused's house. The accused was convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was bad inasmuch as there was no evidence whatever to show that the accused enticed away the complainant's wife from her husband's or her father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her.²²

3. 'Or conceals or detains with that intent any such woman'.—The word "detains" in this section means, by derivation and according to the ordinary use of language, "keeps back". The keeping back need not necessarily be by physical force; it may be by persuasion or by allurements and blandishments. The use of the word requires that there should be something in the nature of control or influence which can properly be described as a keeping back of the woman. To constitute detention, proof of some kind of persuasion is necessary.²³ It cannot properly be said that a man detains a woman if she has no desire to leave and on the contrary wishes to stay with him.²⁴ The word 'detention' is ejusdem generis with enticement and concealment. It does not imply that the woman is being kept against her will but there must be evidence to show that the accused did something which had the effect of preventing the woman from returning to her husband.²⁵ The words 'conceals or detains' are intended to be applied to the enticing or inducing a wife to withhold or conceal herself from her husband, and assisting her to do so, as well as to physical restraint or prevention of her will or action. Depriving the husband of his proper control over his wife, for the purpose of illicit intercourse, is the gist of the offence, and a detention occasioning such deprivation may be brought about simply by the influence of allurements and blandishments.¹ Detention does not necessarily imply that it is against the consent of the person detained. Where a married woman left her husband's house and went to another man's and lived with him as his wife, it was held that the man with whom she lived had committed an offence under this section.² If a man keeps the wife of another under his protection in a house he detains her within the meaning of this section.³ But there can be no detention where the woman is living with a man of her own free-will and refuses to go back with her husband,⁴ or if she is an absolutely free agent to go away from the person with whom she is living whenever she likes.⁵ A married woman was taken by her brother from the house of her husband during his absence, and was given away in natra marriage to the accused who lived in another village. The woman lived in the accused's house openly and freely as his wife. The accused having been charged with detaining a married woman, it was held that he had

²⁰ Hamad, (1931) 32 Cr. L. J. 1210, [1931] AIR (L) 194.

²¹ Srimottee Poddee, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 45.

²² Jasimuddin Sheikh v. Ichohak Mistri, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 498.

²³ Mahiji Fula, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 1046, 58 Bom. 88; Harnam Singh, (1938) 41 P. L. R. 487, 40 Cr. L. J. 760, [1939] AIR (L) 295; Bipad Bhanjan Sarkar, [1940] 2 Cal. 98.

²⁴ Ramnarayan Kapur, (1936) 39 Bom. L. R. 61, 68, [1937] Bom. 244.

²⁵ Prithi Missir v. Harak Nath Singh, [1937] 1 Cal. 166.

¹ Sundara Dass Tevan, (1868) 4 M. H. C. 20, 1 Weir 571; Mohammad Aslam Khan, (1936) 39 P. L. R. 488, 38 Cr. L. J. 576, [1937] AIR (L) 617.

² (1872) 7 Mad. Jur. 138.

³ Bansi Lal, (1913) 14 P. L. R. 1067, 16 Cr. L. J. 595; Ganesh Prasad v. Tulshi Ram, (1933) 10 O. W. N. 784, 34 Cr. L. J. 729; Banarsi Raut, (1937) 19 P. L. T. 795, [1938] P. W. N. 817, 39 Cr. L. J. 952, [1938] AIR (P) 432.

⁴ Lachman Chamar, (1920) 18 A. L. J. R. 311, 21 Cr. L. J. 417, [1920] AIR (A) 43; Ochachal Ahir, (1927) 26 A. L. J. R. 403, 29 Cr. L. J. 273, [1928] AIR (A) 194; Mohammad Husain Khan v. Lekhai, (1934) 11 O. W. N. 672, 35 Cr. L. J. 932, [1934] AIR (O) 258; Abdul Wahid Khan, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 703; Mahiji Fula, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 1046, 58 Bom. 88; Ramnarayan Kapur, (1936) 39 Bom. L. R. 61, 68, [1937] Bom. 244.

⁵ Mabarakh Sheikh, (1939) 43 C. W. N. 980

not committed any offence.⁶ A married young woman, who was discarded by her husband, lived with her father and brother in Madras. She became intimate with the accused who was her next door neighbour. The two ran away from Madras in a motor car, flew to Bangalore in an aeroplane, and eventually settled in Bombay. The woman's brother filed a complaint against the accused in Bombay, charging him with an offence under this section. The Magistrate convicted the accused of the offence charged as well as of the offence of adultery (s. 497 of the Code). The High Court on appeal held that the conviction of the offence under this section could not be sustained in the absence of evidence that the woman had been taken or enticed from a person having the care of her on behalf of her husband, and that it could not be said that the woman was kept back or "detained" by the accused either from her husband or from the complainant, for she was a free agent and stayed with the accused because she wished to do so; and that as to the charge of adultery there was no legal complaint of the offence, and that in the absence of necessary averments no offence could be alleged against the accused.⁷

The words 'such woman' do not mean such woman as has been so enticed away as mentioned in the section, but means such woman whom the accused knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man; the detention of such a woman with the particular intent defined in the section is one of the offences made punishable under the section.⁸ In an earlier case the same High Court had expressed the opinion, though the point had not been specifically discussed, that a person could not be convicted of detaining an enticed woman until the enticing had been proved.⁹ This interpretation gives the go-bye to the latter part of the section which makes concealment or detention of such woman punishable and is not followed by Straight, J., in Niadar's case above referred to.

"A wife living in her husband's house, or in a house hired by him for her occupation, and at his expense, is, during his temporary absence, living under his protection so as to bring the case within the meaning of s. 498—provided, of course, that ...he knew, or had reason to know, that she was the wife of the man from whose protection he took her, or on whose behalf the person from whom he took her had charge of her, and also provided that he took her with the intent specified in the Act. To hold otherwise would be to declare the worst cases of seduction not punishable under the Penal Code".¹⁰ The mere fact that the woman was seen outside the accused's house is not sufficient.¹¹

Sections 366 and 498.—For an offence under s. 366 there must be kidnapping or abduction as defined in s. 362. For an offence under s. 498 there need be no compulsion or deceit. Section 366 applies to cases where, at the time of the abduction, the woman has no intention of marriage or illicit intercourse at the time when the abduction takes place, but it is the intention of the person abducting her to compel her afterwards to marry any person against her will, or to force or seduce her afterwards to illicit intercourse. Section 498 applies to cases where the object of the taking or enticing is that the woman may have illicit intercourse with some other person, even though, as it generally happens, she is quite aware of the purpose for which she is quitting her husband, and is an assenting party to it.

Again, an offence punishable under s. 498 is a minor offence as compared with an offence punishable under s. 366.¹²

Wife cannot be punished as abettor.—In the case of adultery it is distinctly enacted that the wife is not punishable as an abettor; it is, therefore, inconsistent to punish her as an abettor of the minor offence mentioned in this section.¹³ It has been left an open question whether a woman can be convicted of abetting the 'taking away' of herself within the meaning of this section.¹⁴ Enticement denotes a state of passivity

⁶ Mahiji Fula, (1933) 35 Bom. L. R. 1046, 58 Bom. 88.

⁷ Ramnarayan Kapur, (1936) 39 Bom. L. R. 61, 68, [1937] Bom. 244.

⁸ Niadar, (1888) 10 All. 580; Ala Bakhsh, (1891) P. R. No. 61 of 1891; Jagannath, [1937] A. L. J. R. 547, 38 Cr. L. J. 621, [1937] AIR (A) 353; Bipad Bhanjan Sarkar, [1940] 3 Cal. 93.

⁹ Tika Singh, (1880) 3 All. 251.

¹⁰ Per Jackson and Glover, JJ., in Mutty Khan v. Mungloo Khansama, (1866) 5 W. R.

(Cr) 50.

¹¹ Deonandan, (1920) 21 Cr. L. J. 383, [1920] AIR (A) 83.

¹² Jatra Shekh v. Reazat Shekh, (1892) 20 Cal. 483.

¹³ Phalla v. Jivan Singh, (1871) P. R. No. 6 of 1871; Mohun v. Gunsham, (1871) P. R. No. 8 of 1871, overruling Syul Al mud, (1868) P. R. No. 17 of 1868.

¹⁴ Balambal, (1902) 26 Mad. 463.

on the part of the woman, and hence does not come within the three clauses of s. 107 which imply a certain degree of activity in the abettor. If a woman requested a man to take her away her act would probably be covered by s. 107, cl. (1).

Alyasantana law.—The cohabitation of man and woman under the Alyasantana system is not considered to be a marriage so as to render punishable a person who entices away the woman with the intent specified in the section.¹⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the woman in question is the wife of another man.

The provisions of s. 50 of the Indian Evidence Act show that where marriage is an ingredient in an offence the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved.¹⁶ It is not sufficient for the prosecution to prove that the complainant and the woman in respect of whom the charge is made lived together as man and wife.¹⁷ Strict proof of marriage is necessary;¹⁸ it cannot be presumed.¹⁹ Long cohabitation may raise a presumption of marriage but a conviction cannot be based on such presumption.²⁰ The admission by the accused that the woman is the wife of the prosecutor is not enough.²¹ The Court should require some better evidence of the marriage than the mere statement of the complainant and the woman.²² The Madras High Court has, however, held that the evidence of the husband and wife is sufficient to prove the marriage.²³ So had formerly the Chief Court of the Punjab.²⁴ Although in some cases there may be danger in relying solely upon the interested evidence of a spouse, nevertheless a conviction based upon the evidence of a spouse is not illegal.²⁵ The fact and the legality of the marriage are material elements in a case of enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman and must be proved as strictly as any other material facts, but it is not necessary that they should be proved in any particular way.¹ There must be proof that the marriage had been celebrated strictly in accordance with the requirements of custom and law applicable to the parties. Mere presumption that the accused must have known that the woman was married without proof of such knowledge is not enough.² The law presumes in favour of marriage and against concubinage when a man and woman have cohabited continuously for a number of years and at the time of the commencement of cohabitation a marriage between them was possible. This presumption of law can be repelled only by strong, distinct and conclusive evidence, and the mere fact that the direct evidence of the marriage which took place many years ago is unsatisfactory cannot displace this presumption. Marriage is evidence, not constituted, by habit and repute, and in a case where no valid marriage is possible no amount of evidence as to habit and repute can establish it.³

The fact that the marriage of the enticed woman with the complainant was voidable at her option is not a defence unless it is shown that that option was exercised before the enticement.⁴

(2) That she was under the care of her husband, or of some one on his behalf.

(3) That the accused took or enticed her away from her husband⁵ or that other person, or concealed, or detained her.

¹⁵ Koraga, (1883) 6 Mad. 374.

¹⁶ Pitambur Singh, (1879) 5 Cal. 506, F.B.

¹⁷ Arshed Ali, (1883) 13 C. L. R. 125.

¹⁸ Sobrat v. Jungli, (1898) 2 C. W. N. 245; Raghupat Singh, (1927) 4 O. W. N. 172, 28 Cr. L. J. 311, [1927] AIR (O) 140; M. Peters, (1908) 2 S. L. R. 22, 10 Cr. L. J. 235; Bechar, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 270, 13 Cr. L. J. 541; Ramanathan, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 268; Prahlad Barman, (1929) 34 C. W. N. 227, 31 Cr. L. J. 1091. An Arora Hindu cannot contract a valid marriage with his maternal aunt. Marriage by Chadar Andazi is not recognized by Hindu law as a valid marriage: Saudagar, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 210, [1928] AIR (L) 165; Ramdhani Gope, (1941) 42 Cr. L. J. 553, [1941] AIR (P) 526.

¹⁹ Mokandi v. Mohri, (1893) P. R. No. 17 of 1893.

²⁰ Vir Singh, (1920) 30 P. L. R. 643, 30 Cr. L. J. 1051, [1930] AIR (L) 230.

²¹ Phikku, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 586, 26 Cr. L. J.

1376, [1925] AIR (O) 701.

²² Dal Singh, (1897) 20 All. 166; Kallu, (1882) 5 All. 233; Santok Singh, (1898) 18 A. W. N. 186; Padam Singh, (1906) 3 A. L. J. R. 224a; Budhu, (1920) 42 All. 401; Pirithi, (1900) 3 O. C. 342; Phikku, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 586, 26 Cr. L. J. 1376, [1930] AIR (O) 701.

²³ Subharayan, (1885) 9 Mad. 9.

²⁴ Wadhwa, (1893) P. R. No. 5 of 1893.

²⁵ Syed Munir, (1917) 14 N. L. R. 28, 18 Cr. L. J. 1016, [1917] AIR (N) 76.

¹ Nazir Khan, (1913) 36 All. 1.

² Akshay Kumar Maiti, (1933) 38 C. W. N. 113, 115, 34 Cr. L. J. 1092, [1933] AIR (C) 880.

³ Indar Singh v. Thakar Singh, (1921) 22 P. L. R. 322.

⁴ Fazal Dad, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 762, [1928] AIR (L) 898.

⁵ Norman O'Connor, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 73, [1935] AIR (C) 345.

It is not enough to show that the woman left her husband's house or that she was afterwards seen passing along with the accused. It must be shown that she left by reason of some act or assistance proceeding from the accused.⁶

(4) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that she was the wife of another man.

There must be evidence of some kind from which the inference could be drawn that the accused knew the woman to be a married woman: mere presumption that he must have known it is not sufficient.⁷ The omission to state in the charge that the accused had the knowledge or reason to believe is not by itself fatal to the charge.⁸

(5) That the accused did as above with intent that she might have illicit intercourse with some person.

The Code does not exonerate a man merely because there is connivance by the husband.⁹

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Complaint by aggrieved person necessary.—No Court shall take cognizance of this offence unless upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or, in his absence, by some person who had care of such woman.¹⁰ A complaint by a man who has purchased a married woman is not competent.¹¹ A Mahomedan husband cannot file a complaint after divorcing his wife.¹²

The intention of the law is to prevent Magistrates inquiring, of their own motion, into cases connected with marriage unless the husband or other person authorized moves them to do so. A specific complaint under this section is necessary.¹³ Where an accused person was committed to the Sessions to stand his trial on a charge preferred by a husband under s. 376 and the Sessions Judge at the trial added a charge of adultery under s. 497 and acquitted the accused under s. 376, but convicted him under s. 497, it was held that the Sessions Judge had acted without jurisdiction.¹⁴ The accused was tried on charges under ss. 363 and 366. At the conclusion of the case, the Court added a charge under this section and convicted the accused on all the three charges. It was held that the procedure in the case was not regular; and the additional charge framed at the stage it was framed was prejudicial to the accused. The Court set aside the conviction under this section and ordered an inquiry into the remaining charges.¹⁵ Where, in a case in which the complaint was of the offences of kidnapping a minor girl and theft of her jewels, there was no allegation even in the sworn statement of the complainant that the accused's purpose was to have illicit intercourse with her daughter, and there was not even a statement as to puberty; it was held that there was no complaint of an offence under this section, so as to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to try and convict the accused of such an offence.¹⁶ Where an accused is charged on a charge under s. 366A he cannot be convicted of an offence under this section in the absence of a complaint made by the husband under that section. The fact that the husband appeared and gave evidence for the prosecution at the trial under s. 366A cannot take the place of a complaint by the husband which is necessary.¹⁷ In a later case the same High Court has held that if a petition contains an allegation of facts which, if proved by evidence, would constitute an offence under this section, such petition is clearly a complaint by the husband of an offence under this section, for which he desires the ⁶ Hossaini Methor, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 931, 65 C. L. J. 421, 38 Cr. L. J. 986, [1937] AIR (C) 460.

⁷ Batiram Koet v. Bhandaram Koet, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 412, [1920] AIR (C) 979.

⁸ Allah Din, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 419, [1927] AIR (L) 432.

⁹ Ganesh Ram v. Gyan Chand, (1919) 21 Cr. L. J. 139, [1920] AIR (P) 522.

¹⁰ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 199; Nihala, (1909) 11 P. L. R. 28, 11 Cr. L. J. 155; Ram-narayan Kapur, (1936) 39 Bom. L. R. 61, [1937] Bom. 244; Ishwar Din, [1942] O. W. N. 431, (1942) 43 Cr. L. J. 643, [1942] AIR (O) 434; Banamali Tripathy, (1942) 22 Pat. 263.

¹¹ Mughlu, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 382.

¹² Hukam Din, (1879) P. R. No. 27 of 1879.

¹³ Chemon Garo, (1902) 29 Cal. 415; Tara

Prosad Laha, (1903) 30 Cal. 910, F.B.; Isap Mahmad, (1906) 9 Bom. L. R. 148, 31 Bom. 218; Kallu, (1882) 5 All. 233; Jagdamba Prasad, (1933) 55 All. 871; Bangaru Asari, (1903) 27 Mad. 61; Bhana, (1910) P. R. No. 32 of 1910, 12 Cr. L. J. 50; Roda Singh, (1917) P. R. No. 2 of 1918, 19 Cr. L. J. 300, [1918] AIR (L) 385; Mahandi, (1933) 36 Cr. L. J. 423, [1934] AIR (L) 122; Khusal Singh, (1904) 17 C. P. L. R. 105, 1 Cr. L. J. 763. Contra Bhawani Dat, (1916) 38 All. 276.

¹⁴ Chemon Garo, (1902) 29 Cal. 415.

¹⁵ Isap Mahmad, supra.

¹⁶ Arunachalam Chetty, (1928) 45 M. L. J. 548, [1928] M. W. N. 876, 24 Cr. L. J. 837, [1924] AIR (M) 323.

¹⁷ Jagdamba Prasad, (1933) 55 All. 871; Haidar Ali, [1940] A. L. J. R. 97, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 409, [1940] AIR (A) 201.

accused named by him to be prosecuted. The fact that there are other allegations in the petition which, by themselves or in conjunction with those relating to an offence under this section, constitute a more serious offence, such as one under s. 366, will not make the complaint any the less a complaint under this section.¹⁸ Though a person having the care of a woman on behalf of her husband can lodge a complaint he cannot compound the offence and an acquittal based on such a compounding is erroneous.¹⁹

A prosecution under this section does not abate merely on account of the death of the injured party.²⁰

Detention of a married woman is a continuing offence and a person committing such an offence is always liable to prosecution except for any period in respect of which he has been found innocent. Acquittals in respect of previous detentions are no bar to a fresh charge for a subsequent detention.²¹

A person who is prosecuted under ss. 366 and 376 cannot be held to be guilty of having committed an offence under this section, if the offences with which he was charged are not established.²²

Sections 497 and 498.—A person convicted of adultery under s. 497 of the Code need not be convicted also under this section.²³

Finding.—A finding exactly in the words of this section—that the accused took or enticed away a married woman from her husband, or some person having the care of her on his behalf, with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person, or concealed or detained such woman with a like intent—though not actually illegal, when it is doubtful which of the several offences has been committed, is a finding which ought not to be resorted to if it can be avoided, and it can be determined under which part of the section the accused is guilty.²⁴

Place of trial.—A complaint under this section for detaining a woman for the purpose of illicit intercourse can be inquired into only in the district where such detention occurs.²⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, took away (or enticed away, or concealed, or detained) a certain woman, to wit AB, whom you knew or had reason to believe to be the wife of CD, from the said CD, [or from EF who had the care of the said AB on behalf of CD], with intent that the said AB might have illicit intercourse with some person; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—Where the accused was convicted of an offence under this section and it appeared that the woman being not on good terms with her husband went to the accused of her own accord, a sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment was considered to be too severe.¹ A light sentence is sufficient to meet the ends of justice when the abducted woman is an active abettor,² or where the husband did not care much about his wife and did not take any action against the accused for a number of months after her abduction.³

¹⁸ Mohan Singh, (1933) 36 Cr. L. J. 404, [1934] AIR (A) 472.

¹⁹ Fateh Muhammad, (1919) 4 L. L. J. 448; Mir Alam, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 690.

²⁰ Mauj Din, (1922) 4 Lah. 7; Nur Mahomed wd. Kadan, (1907) 1 S. L. R. 72, 8 Cr. L. J. 190.

²¹ Nadar, (1920) 24 Cr. L. J. 636, [1921] AIR (L) 186.

²² Haider Ali, [1940] A. L. J. R. 97, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 409, [1940] AIR (A) 201.

²³ Pochun Chung, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 85.

²⁴ Mothoora Nath Roy, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.)

72.

²⁵ Jaswant Singh, (1916) 19 P. L. R. 188, 19 Cr. L. J. 438, [1918] AIR (A) 357.

¹ Rasul Khan, (1910) 11 P. L. R. 72, 11 Cr. L. J. 597.

² Lal Khan, (1914) 15 P. L. R. 403, 15 Cr. L. J. 524, [1914] AIR (L) 101; Chandgi, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 642, 28 Cr. L. J. 52, [1927] AIR (L) 91.

³ Gahra, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 429, 27 Cr. L. J. 192, [1926] AIR (L) 176; Ram Chand, (1911) P. L. R. No. 224 of 1911, 12 Cr. L. J. 500.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF DEFAMATION.

499. Whoever by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations,¹ makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person² intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm, the reputation of such person,³ is said, except in the cases hereinafter excepted, to defame that person.

Defamation.

Explanation 1.—It may amount to defamation to impute anything to a deceased person, if the imputation would harm the reputation of that person if living, and is intended to be hurtful to the feelings of his family or other near relatives.

Explanation 2.—It may amount to defamation to make an imputation concerning a company or an association or collection of persons as such.

Explanation 3.—An imputation in the form of an alternative or expressed ironically, may amount to defamation.

Explanation 4.—No imputation is said to harm a person's reputation, unless that imputation directly or indirectly, in the estimation of others, lowers the moral or intellectual character of that person, or lowers the character of that person in respect of his caste or of his calling, or lowers the credit of that person, or causes it to be believed that the body of that person is in a loathsome state, or in a state generally considered as disgraceful.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A says—"Z is an honest man; he never stole B's watch": intending to cause it to be believed that Z did steal B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the Exceptions.

(b) A is asked who stole B's watch. A points to Z, intending to cause it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the Exceptions.

(c) A draws a picture of Z running away with B's watch, intending it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the Exceptions.

First Exception.—It is not defamation to impute anything which is true concerning any person, if it be for the public good that the imputation should be made or published. Whether or not it is for the public good is a question of fact.

Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published.

Second Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, or respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Public conduct of public servants.

Third Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of any person touching any public question, and respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

ILLUSTRATION.

It is not defamation in A to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting Z's conduct in petitioning Government on a public question, in signing a requisition for a meeting on a public question, in presiding or attending at such meeting, in forming or joining any society which invites the public support, in voting or canvassing for a particular candidate for any situation in the efficient discharge of the duties of which the public is interested.

Fourth Exception.—It is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a Court of Justice, or of the result of any such proceedings.

Explanation.—A Justice of the Peace or other officer holding an enquiry in open Court preliminary to a trial in a Court of Justice, is a Court within the meaning of the above section.

Fifth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the merits of any case, civil or criminal, which has been decided by a Court of Justice, or respecting the conduct of any person as a party, witness or agent, in any such case, or respecting the character of such person, as far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A says—"I think Z's evidence on that trial is so contradictory that he must be stupid or dishonest". A is within this exception if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses respects Z's character as it appears in Z's conduct as a witness, and no further.

(b) But if A says—"I do not believe what Z asserted at that trial because I know him to be a man without veracity". A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character, is an opinion not founded on Z's conduct as a witness.

Sixth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion respecting the merits of any performance which its author has submitted to the judgment of the public, or respecting the character of the author so far as his character appears in such performance, and no further.

Explanation.—A performance may be submitted to the judgment of the public expressly or by acts on the part of the author which imply such submission to the judgment of the public.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A person who publishes a book, submits that book to the judgment of the public.

(b) A person who makes a speech in public, submits that speech to the judgment of the public.

(c) An actor or singer who appears on a public stage, submits his acting or singing to the judgment of the public.

(d) A says of a book published by Z—"Z's book is foolish; Z must be a weak man. Z's book is indecent; Z must be a man of impure mind". A is within this Exception, if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z respects Z's character only so far as it appears in Z's book, and no further.

(e) But if A says—"I am not surprised that Z's book is foolish and indecent, for he is a weak man and a libertine". A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not found on Z's book.

Seventh Exception.—It is not defamation in a person having over another any authority, either conferred by law or arising out of a lawful contract made with that other, to pass in good faith any censure on the conduct of that other in matters to which such lawful authority relates.

Censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another.

ILLUSTRATION.

A Judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness, or of an officer of the Court; a head of a department censuring in good faith those who are under his orders; a parent censuring in good faith a child in the presence of other children; a schoolmaster, whose authority is derived from a parent, censuring in good faith a pupil in the presence of other pupils; a master censuring a servant in good faith for remissness in service; a banker censuring in good faith the cashier of his bank for the conduct of such cashier as such cashier—are within this exception.

Eight Exception.—It is not defamation to prefer in good faith an accusation against any person to any of those who have lawful authority over that person with respect to the subject-matter of accusation.

Accusation preferred in good faith to authorized person.

ILLUSTRATION.

If A in good faith accuses Z before a Magistrate; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a servant, to Z's master; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a child, to Z's father—A is within this exception.

Ninth Exception.—It is not defamation to make an imputation on the character of another, provided that the imputation be made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it, or of any other person, or for the public good.

Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, a shopkeeper, says to B, who manages his business—"Sell nothing to Z unless he pays you ready money, for I have no opinion of his honesty." A is within the exception, if he has made this imputation on Z in good faith for the protection of his own interests.

(b) A, a Magistrate, in making a report to his own superior officer, casts an imputation on the character of Z. Here, if the imputation is made in good faith, and for the public good, A is within the Exception.

Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith, to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed, or of some person in whom that person is interested, or for the public good.

Caution intended for good of person to whom conveyed or for public good.

500. Whoever defames another shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for defamation.

COMMENT.

In the words of the authors of the Code, "the essence of the offence of defamation consists in its tendency to cause that description of pain which is felt by a person who knows himself to be the object of the unfavourable sentiments of his fellow-creatures, and those inconveniences to which a person who is the object of such unfavourable sentiments is exposed."¹

The criminal law of this country with regard to defamation depends on the construction of s. 499, not on what may be the English law on the same subject.² According to the theory of the criminal law of England the essence of the crime of private libel consists in its tendency to provoke a breach of the peace. Under the Penal Code, defamation has been made an offence without any reference to its tendency to cause acts of illegal violence. The authors of the Code observe: "It appears to us evident that between the offence of defaming and the offence of provoking to a breach of the peace, there is a distinction as broad as that which separates theft and murder. Defamatory imputations of the worst kind may have no tendency to cause acts of violence. Words which convey no discreditable imputation whatever may have that tendency in the highest degree. Even in cases where defamation has a tendency to cause acts of violence, the heinousness of the defamation, considered as defamation, is by no means proportioned to its tendency to cause such acts: nay, circumstances which are great aggravations of the offence, considered as defamation, may be great mitigations of the same offence, considered as a provocation to a breach of the peace. A scurrilous satire against a friendless woman, published by a person who carefully conceals his name, would be defamation in one of its most odious forms. But it would be only by a legal fiction that the satirist could be said to provoke a breach of the peace. On the other hand, an imputation on the courage of an officer contained in a private letter, meant to be seen only by that officer and two or three other persons, might, considered as defamation, be a very venial offence. But such an imputation would have an obvious tendency to cause a serious breach of the peace."³

Ingredients.—The section requires three essentials:—

1. Making or publishing any imputation concerning any person.
2. Such imputation must have been made
 - (i) by words, either spoken or intended to be read; or
 - (ii) by signs; or
 - (iii) by visible representations.
3. Such imputation must have been made with the intention of harming, or with knowledge or reason to believe that it will harm the reputation of the person concerning whom it is made.

1. 'Makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person'.—Every one who composes, dictates, writes or in any way contributes to the making of a libel, is the maker of a libel. "If one dictates, and another writes, both are guilty of making it, for he shews his approbation of what he writes. So, if one repeats, another writes a libel, and a third approves what is written, they are all makers of it, as all who concur and assent to the doing of an unlawful act are guilty; and murdering a man's reputation by a libel may be compared to murdering a man's person, in which all who are present and encourage the act are guilty, though the wound was given by one only."⁴ Where a person merely describes the thumb impressions of signatories by writing their names opposite their thumb-impressions on a defamatory petition, he cannot be said to have made it.⁵

¹ Note R, p. 175.

² Greene v. Delaney, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 27; Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh, (1900) 22 All. 234; Ganga Prasad, (1907) 29 All. 685; Champa Devi v. Pirbhu Lal, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 329; 27 Cr. L. J. 253, [1926] AIR (A) 287; Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388, F.B.; Nagarji Trikamji, (1894) 19 Bom. 340; Abdul Hakim v. Tej Chandar Mukarji, (1881) 3 All. 815; Tiruveng

gadu Mudali v. Tripurasundari Ammal, (1926) 49 Mad. 728, F.B.

³ Note R, pp. 175, 176.

⁴ Bacon's Abrid., Vol. IV, p. 457; Paine, (1696) 5 Mod. 163, 165.

⁵ Lingangaudu Basangaudu Patil, Criminal Appeal No. 173 of 1927, decided by Patkar and Baker, JJ., on September 22, 1927 (Unrep. Bom.).

'Publishes.'—The making known the defamatory matter after it has been written to some person other than the person of whom it is written, is publication in its legal sense. The defamatory matter must be published, that is, communicated to some person other than the person to whom it is addressed.⁶ Communicating defamatory matter to the person defamed only is not publication.⁷ But when it is proved that the writer knew that the person defamed could not read when he sent the letter and the person defamed gets it read by a third person, it must be held that there is evidence of a publication to a third person, for, in such a case the writer must have known that the letter would be read to the person defamed by some third person.⁸ It is sufficient if the accused intentionally does an act which has the quality of communicating to a third person or persons generally the alleged libel. It is not necessary for the prosecution either to allege or to prove that the act of the accused was directed at communicating the libel to any specified person or persons or that the libel, as a matter of fact, was brought to the notice of such person or persons.⁹ A notice under s. 185 of the Municipalities Act was issued by the President of a Notified Area to a certain person, who sent a reply containing defamatory allegations against the President. This reply was put on the official file by the President and it was read by the members of the Notified Area Committee. It was held that there was publication of the defamation. The placing of the reply on the official file was not a gratuitous or voluntary act on the part of the President but it was his duty to do so, and the accused knew or must have known that the contents of his reply would be necessarily communicated to the persons connected with the office of the Notified Area.¹⁰ The action of a person who sent to a public-officer by post, in a closed cover, a notice containing imputations on the character of the recipient, but which was not communicated by the accused to any third person, was held to be not such a 'making' or 'publishing' of the matter complained of as to constitute this offence.¹¹ Where a number of persons meet and resolve not to associate with a person for good reasons there is no defamation, nor does the sending a copy of the resolution to the person in question make it defamation. But it would be a different matter if a copy of the resolution is published.¹² If A and B conspire to draw up a document defaming Z and leave it with B there is no publication.¹³

According to the English law, defamatory matter, even if published only to the person defamed, will support an indictment, provided it is likely to provoke a breach of the peace.¹⁴ This view of the English law is met by s. 504.

It is immaterial whether the person publishing the defamatory statement intended to publish it or not, provided he did so publish it in fact.¹⁵ "Everything printed or written, which reflects on the character of another, and is published without lawful justification or excuse, is a libel, whatever the intention may have been".¹⁶ Defamatory matter written on a post-card,¹⁷ or transmitted in a telegram,¹⁸ or printed on papers distributed broadcast¹⁹ constitutes publication. So are filing in Court a petition containing defamatory matter concerning a person with the intention that it should be read by other persons,²⁰ and swearing of an affidavit containing defama-

⁶ Varnakote Illath v. Kotalmana Keshavan, (1900) 1 Weir 579; Khima Nand, [1937] A. L. J. R. 128, 38 Cr. L. J. 806.

⁷ Mohamed Ismail Khan v. Mahomed Tahir, (1873) 6 N. W. P. 38; Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, F.B.; Bishwa Nath Das v. Keshab Gandhabanik, (1902) 30 Cal. 402; Komul Chunder Bose v. Nobin Chunder Ghose, (1868) 10 W. R. 184; Jalishen Das v. Sher Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 10 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 281; Burke v. Skipp, (1928) 45 M. L. J. 754, 18 L. W. 718, [1923] M. W. N. 913, 25 Cr. L. J. 641, [1924] AIR (M) 840; Nga On Thin, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 240, [1921] AIR (R) 16; Sadashiv Atmaram, (1893) 18 Bom. 205; Abdul Aziz, (1935) 61 C. L. J. 205, 37 Cr. L. J. 133, [1935] AIR (C) 736.

⁸ Kundanmal, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 105, [1943] AIR (S) 196.

⁹ Bhikhchand, (1926) 21 S. L. R. 130, 27 Cr. L. J. 1276, [1927] AIR (S) 54.

¹⁰ Sukhdeo, (1932) 55 All. 253.

¹¹ Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, F.B. The learned dissenting judgment of Duthoit, J., may be read with great interest.

¹² Nga On Thin, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 240, [1921] AIR (R) 16.

¹³ Doraiswami Naidu v. Kannappa Chetty, [1931] M. W. N. 366, 32 Cr. L. J. 767, [1931] AIR (M) 487.

¹⁴ Adams, (1888) 22 Q. B. D. 66.

¹⁵ Periyasami Kotasawmi Tever, (1866) 1 Weir 580.

¹⁶ Per Parke, B., in O'Brien v. Clement, (1846) 15 M. & W. 435, 437.

¹⁷ Sankara Narasimha Bharathi, (1883) 6 Mad. 381; Robinson v. Jones, (1879) L. R. 4 Ir. 391.

¹⁸ Whitfield v. South Eastern Railway Company, (1858) El. Bl. & El. 115.

¹⁹ Thiagaraya v. Krishnasami, (1892) 15 Mad. 214.

²⁰ Greene v. Delanney, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 27; Abdul Hakim v. Tej Chandar Mukarji, (1881) 3 All. 815.

tory words before a Court Commissioner and using it in Courts.²¹ Where a person presents a defamatory petition to a superior public officer, who, in the ordinary course of official routine, sends it to some subordinate officer for inquiry, there is a publication of the latter at the place where he may receive it, and a publication for which the original writer may prima facie be held responsible, whether or not he expressly asks for an inquiry.²² Communication to a husband or wife of a charge against the wife or husband is a publication,²³ but uttering of a libel by a husband to his wife is not.²⁴

Where there is a duty which forms the ground of privileged occasion, the person exercising the privilege is entitled to take all reasonable means of so doing, and those reasonable means may include the introduction of third persons where that is reasonable and in the ordinary course of business. A solicitor, acting on behalf of his client, wrote and sent to the plaintiff a letter containing defamatory statements regarding her. The letter was dictated to a clerk in the office and was copied into the letter-book by another clerk. In an action against the solicitor for libel it was held that the publication to his clerks was necessary and usual in the discharge of his duty to his client.²⁵ But when there is no such duty the act of dictating a letter even to a shorthand writer will amount to publication.¹

The accused in reply to a notice from the complainant's pleader calling upon him to pay money lent to him by the complainant wrote a letter to the pleader containing defamatory statements about the complainant. The complainant thereupon charged the accused with defamation. The lower Courts held that the letter having been sent to the complainant's pleader must be considered to have been addressed to the complainant himself and therefore there was no publication to a third person. On revision the former Chief Court of the Punjab had held that as the defamatory statements contained in the accused's letter to the complainant's pleader were wholly irrelevant to, and unconnected with, the question of the alleged loan mentioned in the pleader's letter, the pleader must be held to be a third person as far as those statements were concerned, and that, therefore, there had been publication within the purview of this section.²

Where a libel is printed, the sale of each copy is a distinct publication, and a fresh offence; and a conviction or acquittal on an indictment for publishing one copy will be no bar to an indictment for publishing another copy.³

The person who publishes the imputation need not necessarily be the author of the imputation. The person who publishes, and the person who makes, an imputation are alike guilty.⁴ It is not necessary that the accused himself must actually utter the words; it is enough if somebody else utters the words and the accused by his conduct and by words adopts as his own the words reported by the other.⁵ "In considering whether there has been publication of it by him [the person who is not the printer or the first or main publisher of a work which contains a libel, but has only taken a subordinate part in disseminating it], the particular circumstances under which he disseminated the work must be considered. If he did it in the ordinary way of his business, the nature of the business and the way in which it was conducted must be looked at; and, if he succeeds in shewing (1) that he was innocent of any knowledge of the libel contained in the work disseminated by him, (2) that there was nothing in the work or the circumstances under which it came to him or was disseminated by him which ought to have led him to suppose that it contained a libel, and (3) that, when the work was disseminated by him, it was not by any negligence on his part that he did not know that it contained the libel, then, although the dissemination of the work by him was prima facie publication of it, he may nevertheless, on proof of the before-

²¹ Bhikhchand, (1926) 21 S. L. R. 130, 27 Cr. L. J. 1276, [1927] AIR (S) 54.

²² Raja Shah, (1889) P. R. No. 14 of 1889.

²³ Wenman v. Ash, (1853) 13 C. B. 836, 839; Shoobhagee Koeri v. Bokhori Ram, (1906) 4 C. L. J. 390.

²⁴ Wennhak v. Morgan, (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 635; Jaikishen Das v. Sher Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 10 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 281.

²⁵ Boxsius v. Goblet Freres, [1894] 1 Q. B. 842. See, to the same effect, Edmondson v. Birch & Co., Limited, [1907] 1 K. B. 371.

¹ Pullman v. Hill & Co., [1891] 1 Q. B. 524.

² Jaikishen Das v. Sher Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 10 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 281.

³ Pundit Mokand Ram, (1883) P. R. No. 12 of 1883.

⁴ Janardhan Damodhar Dikshit, (1894) 19 Bom. 703; Leandro Mascarenhas, (1895) Cr. R. No. 34 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 769.

⁵ Appanna v. Akkanna, (1924) 20 L. W. 921, 47 M. L. J. 746, 26 Cr. L. J. 521, [1925] AIR (M) 320.

mentioned facts, be held not to have published it".⁶ An accidental publication is no publication at all.⁷

Repetition.—The Code makes no exception in favour of a second or third publication as compared with the first. If a complaint is properly laid in respect of a publication which is prima facie defamatory, the Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of the complaint, and deal with it according to law.⁸ Repetition of rumours, however prevalent, is not an excuse.⁹

The doctrine of merger has no place in criminal law, and the circumstance that a person has in the first instance made a defamatory statement out of Court and has afterwards, by repeating such defamatory statement, when examined as a witness in Court, committed the offence of perjury, can be no bar to a prosecution for defamation in respect of the defamatory statement made out of Court.¹⁰ The accused made certain defamatory statements about an officer in a memorial to the Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces who ordered an inquiry. The accused was called by two officers, one after another, who were appointed to inquire into the truth of the allegations and repeated the statements. It was held that the conviction of the accused on three separate charges for making and publishing the statement was good.¹¹

Publication of defamatory matter in newspaper.—The publisher of a newspaper is responsible for defamatory matter published in such paper whether he knows the contents of such paper or not.¹² The editor of a journal is in no better position than an ordinary subject with regard to his liability for libel. He is bound to take due care and caution before he makes a libellous statement.¹³ It would be sufficient answer to a charge of defamation against the editor of a newspaper if he proved that the libel was published in his absence and without his knowledge, and that he had in good faith entrusted the temporary management of the paper during his absence to a competent person.¹⁴ But he is bound to give evidence as to who the actual printer of the paper in his absence was.¹⁵ Under the common law of England the proprietor of a newspaper was criminally responsible for the publication of a libel in its columns, whether the libel was inserted with or without his knowledge. Statute 6 & 7 Vic., c. 96, was, therefore, passed to mitigate the rigour of the common law, and to give the proprietor the benefit of the presumption that when one person employs another to do a lawful act, he is to be taken to authorize him to do it in a lawful and not in an unlawful manner, and that the statute declared for the purpose that it was competent to the proprietor to prove that the libel was published without his authority, consent or knowledge, and that the publication did not arise from want of due care or caution on his part.¹⁶

The publication of a notice in a newspaper conveying an imputation that the complainant is dishonest in the management of the affairs of a company and tries to conceal the dishonesty by methods that are themselves dishonest, is defamation.¹⁷

The sending of a newspaper containing defamatory matter by post from Calcutta, where it is published, addressed to a subscriber at Allahabad, is publication of such defamatory matter at Allahabad.¹⁸ To prove the publication of libel through newspaper it is sufficient to prove that the newspaper was delivered within the postal area over which the Court had jurisdiction and it is not necessary to go further and show that the article was read by some particular person since a newspaper is a commodity printed for the purpose of being read and it must be assumed that it was so read.¹⁹

⁶ Per Romer, L. J., in Vizetelly v. Mudie's Select Library Limited, [1900] 2 Q. B. 170, 180.

⁷ Per Wills, J., in Munslow, [1895] 1 Q. B. 758, 765; Emmens v. Pottle, (1885) 16 B. Q. D. 354.

⁸ Howard, (1887) 12 Bom. 167.

⁹ Waithman v. Weaver, (1822) 11 Price 257n.

¹⁰ Periyasami Kotasami Tevar, (1886) 1 Weir 580.

¹¹ Jai Debi, (1915) 18 A. L. J. R. 681, 16 Cr. L. J. 482, [1915] AIR (A) 162.

¹² McLeod, (1890) 3 All. 342.

¹³ Balasubramania Mudaliar v. Rajagopalachariar, (1944) 46 Cr. L. J. 71, [1944] M. W. N.

322, [1944] AIR (M) 484.

¹⁴ Ramasami v. Lokanadu, (1886) 9 Mad. 387; Pundit Mokand Ram, (1883) P. R. No. 12 of 1883.

¹⁵ Har Swarup v. Muhammad Siraj, (1928) 50 All. 806.

¹⁶ Holbrook, (1878) 4 Q. B. D. 42.

¹⁷ Madhorao Gangadhar Chitnavis v. Narayan Bhaskar Khare, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1119, [1927] AIR (N) 17.

¹⁸ McLeod, (1880) 3 All. 342; Girjashankar Kashiram, (1890) 15 Bom. 286; Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, 120; Kally Doss Mitter, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 44.

¹⁹ Jhabbar Mal, (1927) 26 A. L. J. R. 196, 207, 30 Cr. L. J. 530, [1928] AIR (A) 222.

'Imputation concerning any person.'—An imputation ordinarily implies an accusation, or something more than an expression of a suspicion. It is, however, rather difficult to draw the line. An expression of a suspicion may have the same effect on the mind of the person to whom the suspicion is communicated as an accusation would have.²⁰ Where the accused made a report at the police-station that some property of his had been stolen from his threshing floor, and that he suspected the complainant and two others, and the complainant prosecuted the accused for defamation in respect of that report, it was held that an expression of suspicion might have the same effect on the mind of the person to whom the suspicion was communicated as an accusation would have, and as in this case the suspicion resulted in the police searching the complainant's house, the accused was guilty of defamation.²¹ To give out that a woman had miscarriage without any knowledge whether she was married or not would amount to defamation.²²

The words complained of must contain an imputation concerning some particular person or persons whose identity can be established. If the words complained of contain no reflection upon a particular individual or individuals, but may equally apply to others although belonging to the same class, an action will not lie. Where the accused published in his paper an account of an outrage on a woman alleged to have been perpetrated by two constables within the jurisdiction of the Begunia thana, in which four constables were stationed, it was held that, in the absence of proof that it was intended to charge any particular and identifiable constables with the alleged offence, the accused was not guilty of defamation.²³

The Rangoon High Court has held that a newspaper does not come within the term 'person' and therefore, it is not a criminal offence to defame a newspaper. Defamation of a newspaper may in certain cases involve defamation of those responsible for its publication. It might, for instance, amount to defamation of the person responsible for a newspaper to say that its policy was influenced or dictated by a particular person, if that person was disreputable.²⁴

It is immaterial whether the libel imputes crime, etc., to the prosecutor, in a direct manner, or indirectly, by such hints or modes of expression as are likely to convey the intended meaning to the person to whom the libel was published. And so also where the imputation is conveyed obliquely, or indirectly, or by way of question, conjecture, or exclamation, or by irony,²⁵ or by feigned names.¹ An imputation, even if it be true, is not by itself good ground for making it.²

The words "a coward, dishonest man, and something worse than either",³ or the words to the effect that the complainant and others were preparing to bring false charges against the accused,⁴ or words imputing insolvency against a person in the way of his trade⁵ are held to be defamatory. Where a newspaper wrote that the conduct of the complainant on the question of the acceptance of a ministerial office was inconsistent and topsyturvy it was held that the use of the expression topsyturvy was defamatory.⁶ It is not open to one member of a caste to call another an outcaste.⁷ Words which impute unworthiness to remain a member of the caste are defamatory.⁸ To say at a caste meeting that the complainant's wife had been married before to another person would amount to defamation.⁹

It may amount to defamation to impute anything to a deceased person if the imputation would harm the reputation of that person if living, and is hurtful to the feelings of his family (Explan. 1); or to make an imputation concerning a company

²⁰ Thambu, (1926) 27 P. L. R. 171, 27 Cr. L. J. 899, [1926] AIR (L) 278.

²¹ Ibid.

²² Kashi Ram, [1930] A. L. J. R. 1121, 23 Cr. L. J. 435, [1930] AIR (A) 493.

²³ Government Advocate, B. & O. v. Gopabandhu Das, (1922) 1 Pat. 414; Pratap Chandra Guha Roy, (1925) 29 C. W. N. 904, 42 C. L. J. 178, 26 Cr. L. J. 1530, [1925] AIR (C) 1121.

²⁴ Maung Sein, (1926) 4 Ran. 462.

²⁵ See for authorities Archbold, 30th Edn., pp. 1273-74.

¹ William Tayler, (1869) 26 C. L. J. 345.

² Gopalsao v. Mt. Piari Bi, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 55.

³ McCarthy, (1887) 9 All. 420.

⁴ Shibo Prosad Pandah, (1878) 4 Cal. 124.

⁵ Bhikhchand, (1926) 21 S. L. R. 130, 27 Cr. L. J. 1276, [1927] AIR (S) 54; Robinson v. Merchant, (1845) 7 Q. B. 918.

⁶ U Po Hnyin v. U Tun Than, (1930) 41 Cr. L. J. 271, [1940] AIR (R) 21.

⁷ Babulal v. Tundilal, (1931) 28 N. L. R. 106, 33 Cr. L. J. 835, [1932] AIR (N) 97; Bhanwar Singh v. Sukhram Singh, [1940] N. L. J. 410, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 585, [1940] AIR (N) 283.

⁸ Coopposami Chetty v. Duraisami Chetty, (1909) 33 Mad. 67. See Venkayya v. Venkatarajah, (1914) 2 L. W. 446, 28 M. L. J. 58.

⁹ Hari Pada Baidya, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 580, 31 Cr. L. J. 1225.

or an association or collection of persons as such (Explan. 2). Ironical expressions may amount to defamation (Explan. 3).

Imputation against dead person.—It has been held, with regard to libels on the memory of persons deceased, that a writing reflecting on the memory of a dead person not alleged to be published with a design to bring a scandal or contempt on the family of the deceased, is not punishable as a libel. (See Explanation 1). “Now to say, in general, that the conduct of a dead person can at no time be canvassed: to hold that, even after ages are passed, the conduct of bad men cannot be contrasted with the good, would be to exclude the most useful part of history. And, therefore, it must be allowed that such publications may be made fairly and honestly. But let this be done whenever it may, whether soon or late after the death of the party, if it be done with a malevolent purpose, to vilify the memory of the deceased, and with a view to injure his posterity, . . . then it becomes illegal”.¹⁰

Where the defamation consists in imputing matters concerning a deceased person, “the essence of the offence of defamation consists in its tendency to cause that description of pain which is felt by a person who knows himself to be the object of the unfavourable sentiments of his fellow-creatures, and those inconveniences to which a person who is the object of such unfavourable sentiments is exposed.”¹¹

A prosecution may be maintained for defamation of a deceased person, but no suit for damage will lie in such a case. Where, therefore, a suit was brought by the heir and nearest relation of a deceased person for defamatory words spoken of such deceased person, and alleged to have caused damage to the plaintiff as a member of the same family, it was held that the suit was not maintainable.¹²

Imputation against combination of persons.—Explanation 2 includes “a company or an association or collection of persons as such within the word ‘person’ as used in the definition so that the latter should not be limited to individuals.”¹³ Explanation 2 which finds a parallel in the English law gives a legal remedy to a combination of persons, when, by defamation of that combination, many individual persons might be injured.¹⁴

It has been held in a series of cases that an action of libel will lie at the suit of an incorporated trading company in respect of a libel calculated to injure its reputation in the way of its business.¹⁵ The words complained of must attack the corporation or company in the method of conducting its affairs, must accuse it of fraud or mismanagement, or must attack its financial position.¹⁶ A corporation cannot bring a prosecution for words which merely affect its honour or dignity or reputation. A corporation has no reputation apart from its property or trade.¹⁷

In a case in which the Explanation is properly called into use the identity of the company or association or collection of persons must be maintained throughout with reference to the imputation said to have been made concerning them as such with the intention of harming their reputation so that thereby they are defamed. An imputation concerning a company or association of persons as such cannot by virtue of this Explanation justify a charge of defaming an individual and a charge cannot combine the Explanation with the definition for such a purpose.¹⁸ It is doubtful if the police force at a particular place is such an association or collection of persons as is contemplated in Explanation 2.¹⁹

Where a collection of persons is defamed the defamatory words must apply to all the class. The libel need not name the class as such: it is sufficient if the words can only be interpreted in such a way as to reflect on all the members of that class.²⁰ “If a man wrote that all lawyers were thieves, no particular lawyer could sue him

¹⁰ Per Lord Kenyon in E. Topham, (1791) 4 T. R. 126, 129. See Labouchere, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 320.

¹¹ Note R, p. 175, quoted in Parwari, (1919) 41 All. 311, 314.

¹² Luckumsey Rowji v. Hurbun Nursey, (1881) 5 Bom. 580.

¹³ Per Buckland, J., in Pratap Chandra Guha Roy, (1925) 29 C. W. N. 904, 917, 42 C. L. J. 178, 194, 26 Cr. L. J. 1539, 1548, [1925] AIR (C) 1121.

¹⁴ See Williams, (1882) 5 B. & Ald. 595.

¹⁵ South Hetton Coal Company v. North Eastern News Association, [1894] 1 Q. B. 133.

¹⁶ Per Lopes, L. J., in ibid., p. 141; Maung Chit Tay v. Maung Tun Nyun, (1935) 13 Ran. 297.

¹⁷ Maung Chit Tay v. Maung Tun Nyun, ibid.

¹⁸ Pratap Chandra Guha Roy, (1925) 29 C. W. N. 904, 42 C. L. J. 178, 26 Cr. L. J. 1539, [1925] AIR (C) 1121.

¹⁹ Ibid.

²⁰ See Mahim Chandra Roy v. A. H. Watson, (1928) 55 Cal. 1280.

unless there is something to point to the particular individual".²¹ Where a writing inveighs against mankind in general, or against a particular order of men, as, for instance, men of the gown, it is no libel, but it must descend to particulars and individuals to make it a libel,²² e.g. the religious society called the S. Nunnery²³ "or certain persons lately arrived from Portugal and living near Broad Street".²⁴ The imputation must be capable of being brought home to a particular individual or collection of individuals as such.²⁵ Where a defamatory matter appears only to apply to a class of individuals, if the description in such matters is capable of being, by innuendo, shown to be directly applicable to any one individual of that class, an action may be maintained.¹ Where a defamatory article implied that the girls of a college were habitually guilty of the misbehaviour described in the article, it was held that all the girls in the college collectively and each girl individually must suffer in reputation and the writer was guilty of defamation.² If a well-defined class is defamed each and every member of that class can file a complaint. In other cases the defamatory words must refer to some ascertained and ascertainable person and that person must be the complainant.³

Ironical expressions.—Explanation 3 which finds a corresponding parallel in the English law makes ironical expressions, if defamatory, punishable. Where it has been sarcastically said of a lawyer, with intent to convey an entirely opposite idea as that "he is an honest lawyer", this Explanation will apply.

Imputation concerning caste.—The accused, who were members of the Reddi caste, convened a meeting of their caste in the village and stated at such meeting to the members of the caste that the members of another caste in the village, viz., the Baliyas, were inferior to their caste, that they (the Reddies) should have no intercourse with the Baliyas, and that the village servants should not serve the latter. The village servants consequently refused to serve the Baliyas, and the Reddies abstained from associating with them. It was held that the acts of the accused did not amount to such an imputation on the complainant, who was a member of the Baliya caste, as would warrant a conviction for defamation. The Court said: "No conduct affecting the complainant's status as a member of the Baliya caste or involving in it a transgression of the rules of his caste and tending to lower his reputation as a Baliya among his castemen or the general public, appears to have been imputed".⁴

2. 'Words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations'.—An essential difference between the Indian and the English law is that the former recognizes 'words, spoken as a mode of defamation' and the latter does not. By the English law, defamation is a crime only when it is committed by writing, printing, engraving or some similar process. Spoken words reflecting on private character, however atrocious may be the imputations which these words convey, however numerous may be the assembly before which such words are uttered, furnish ground only for a civil action.⁵ Under the English law "no indictment will lie for words spoken and not reduced into writing. . . unless they are seditious, blasphemous, grossly immoral or obscene or uttered to a magistrate in the execution of his office, or uttered as a challenge to fight a duel, or with an intention to provoke the other party to send a challenge".⁶ The Penal Code makes no distinction between written and spoken defamation.⁷ In it the term 'defamation' is used to embrace both libel and slander. The authors of the Code say: "Herein the English law is scarcely consistent with itself. For if defamation be punished on account of its tendency to cause breach of the peace, spoken defamation ought to be punished even more severely than written defamation, as having that tendency in a higher degree. A person who reads in a pamphlet a calumnious reflection on himself, or on some one for whom he is interested, is less likely to take a violent revenge than a person who hears the same ²¹ Per Willes, J., in Eastwood v. Holmes, (1858) 1 F. & F. 347, 349; Osborn, (1732) 2 Barnard (K. B.) 138, 166.

²² Alme, (1690) 3 Salk. 224.

²³ Gathercole's Case, (1838) 2 Lew. 237.

²⁴ Osborn, (1732) 2 Barnard (K. B.) 138, 166, Kel. (J.) Pl. 183, 230.

²⁵ Government Advocate, B. & O. v. Gopabandhu Das, (1922) 1 Pat. 414.

¹ Pratap Chandra Guha Ray, (1925) 29 C. W. N. 904, 42 C. L. J. 178, 26 Cr. L. J. 1539,

[1925] AIR (C) 1121.

² Wahid Ullah, (1935) 57 All. 1012.

³ Ankaran Subharaya, [1937] A. L. J. R. 781, 38 Cr. L. J. 1086, [1937] AIR (A) 677.

⁴ Venkata Reddi, (1885) 1 Weir 575, 576.

⁵ Note R, p. 176.

⁶ See Archbold, 30th Edn., p. 1272.

⁷ Parvathi v. Mannar, (1884) 8 Mad. 175; Mohunt Pursoram Doss, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 36.

calumnious reflection uttered. Public men who have, by long habit, become callous to slander and abuse in a printed form, often show acute sensibility to imputations thrown on them to their faces. Indeed, defamatory words, spoken in the presence of the person who is the object of them, necessarily have more of the character of a personal affront, and are, therefore, more likely to cause breach of the peace than any printed libel.

"The distinction which the English criminal law makes between written and spoken defamation is generally defended on the ground that written defamation is likely to be more widely spread and to be more permanent than spoken defamation. These considerations do not appear to us to be entitled to much weight. In the first place it is by no means necessarily the fact that written defamation is more extensively circulated than spoken defamation. Written defamation may be contained in a letter intended for a single eye. Spoken defamation may be heard by an assembly of many thousands. It seems to us most unreasonable that it should be penal to say, in a private letter, that a man is dissipated, and not penal to stand up at the town hall, and there, before the whole society of Calcutta, falsely to accuse him, of poisoning his father.

"In the second place, it is not necessarily the fact that the harm caused by defamation is proportioned to the extent to which the defamation is circulated. Some slanders,—and those slanders of a most malignant kind,—can produce harm only while confined to a very small circle, and would be at once refuted if they were published. A malignant whisper addressed to a single hearer, and meant to go no further, may indicate greater depravity, may cause more intense misery, and may deserve more severe punishment than a satire which has run through twenty editions. A person, for example, who, in private conversation, should infuse into the mind of a husband suspicions of the fidelity of a virtuous wife, might be a defamer of a far worse description than one who should insert the lady's name in a printed lampoon.

"It must be allowed that, in general, a printed story is likely to live longer than a story which is only circulated in conversation. But, on the other hand, it is far easier for a calumniated person to clear his character, either by argument or by legal proceedings, from a charge fixed in a printed form, than from a shifting rumour, which nobody repeats exactly as he heard it. In general, we believe, a man would rather see in a newspaper a story discreditable to him which he had the means of refuting, than know that such a story, though not published, was current in society".⁸

'Intended to be read'.—"Where the words containing the imputation are in writing, it is necessary, . . . that the maker of the imputation shall intend that the words shall be read, that is, read by some other person than the person defamed, or in other words, that they shall be made public, for the essence of the offence . . . is the intention to harm reputation, and that unnecessarily requires publicity to be given to the imputation".⁹

'By signs or by visible representations'.—This is a class of defamation likely to do as much mischief as any written production, and it has always been considered by the English law to be a serious offence. Anything published of a man which renders him ridiculous or contemptible, is as much a libel as serious charges are, and very often has a wider effect. The words 'visible representations' will include every possible form of defamation which ingenuity can devise. "For instance, a statute, a caricature, an effigy, chalk marks on a wall, signs, or pictures may constitute a libel".¹⁰

3. 'Intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm the reputation of such person'.—It is not necessary to prove that the complainant actually suffered directly or indirectly from the scandalous imputation alleged: it is sufficient to show that the accused intended or knew, or had reason to believe, that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant,¹¹ irrespective of whether harm is actually caused or not.¹² No intent to ⁸ Note R, pp. 176, 177.

⁹ Per Oldfield, J., in Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, 222, B.F.

¹⁰ Per Lopes, L. J., in Monson v. Tussauds, Limited, [1894] 1 Q. B. 671, 692.

¹¹ Thakur Dass, (1874) 6 N. W. P. 86; Gobinda Persad Pandey v. Garth, (1900) 28 Cal.

63; (1883) 1 Weir 575; V. Madanjit, (1910) 12 Cr. L. J. 129; Alex Pimento, (1920) 22 Bom. L. R. 1224, 22 Cr. L. J. 58, [1920] AIR (B) 339.

¹² Ram Narain, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 630, 26 Cr. L. J. 23, [1924] AIR (A) 566; Bhikshchand, (1926) 21 S. L. R. 130, 27 Cr. 868, [1926] AIR (S) 258.

defame is necessary.¹³ It is not necessary that there should be an intention to harm the reputation, it is sufficient if there was reason to believe that the imputation made would harm the reputation.¹⁴ If the words are not likely to harm the reputation no prosecution would lie.¹⁵ If a person is asked by the police if he had heard anything relating to a matter and he in good faith states what he had heard it will not amount to defamation.¹⁶

An imputation against another person, although made in the absence of actual ill-will, is not on that account to be accepted as being made bona fide. Conscious violation of law to another's prejudice is sufficient, though there may be no malice in fact.¹⁷ Where defamatory words, prima facie libellous, were used in a street quarrel and were mere vulgar abuse, it was held that in the circumstances there was no deliberate intention to harm the reputation of the person defamed.¹⁸

'Harm the reputation'.—"The meaning which should be attached to 'harm' is not the ordinary sense in which the word is used...by 'harm' is meant imputations on a man's character made and expressed to others, so as to lower him in their estimation, and that anything which lowers him merely in his own estimation, certainly does not constitute defamation".¹⁹ To impute dishonesty to a company doing business would amount to defamation.²⁰ A person who commits defamation is not to be excused from the penalties attached to the offence merely because he has comported himself in respect of the mode of giving expression to the defamatory matter in such a way that the little real injury results from the offence.²¹ The word 'harm' is used in the definition of 'injury' (s 44).

A man's reputation is his property, and if possible of more value than other property. But a man's opinion of himself cannot be called his 'reputation'.²² A man has no 'reputation' to himself and therefore communication of defamatory matter to the person defamed is no publication. It is no defence to say that the reputation of the complainant is so good or that of the accused is so bad that serious injury to the reputation was not in fact caused.²³

The use of common abuses cannot be regarded as conveying any such imputation as can in any way harm the reputation of the person towards whom it is used and it therefore does not constitute this offence.²⁴ But if obscene and insulting words are used regarding any person after an altercation with him is over, the person using such words would be guilty of defamation.²⁵

Explanation 4 specifies the various ways in which the reputation of a person may be harmed. It says that the imputation must directly or indirectly lower the moral or intellectual character of the person defamed. "The words 'directly' or 'indirectly'...mean that the person defamed must either be abused in express terms, or the wording of the communication must convey such imputations as any person reading it must understand to impute misconduct or bad character. The words cannot...be understood to mean that the person libelled should himself be the direct means of publishing the libel to others".¹ This Explanation does not apply where the words used, and forming the basis for a charge, are per se defamatory; though when the meaning of words spoken or written is doubtful and evidence is necessary to determine the effect of such words and whether they are calculated to harm a particular person's reputation, it is possible that the principle enunciated in the Explanation might and ¹³ U Aung Pe, [1938] Ran. 404, F.B.

¹⁴ Kewala Nandgir, (1913) 14 P. L. R. 1062, 14 Cr. L. J. 606.

¹⁵ Genda Ram, [1936] A. L. J. R. 66, 37 Cr. L. J. 258, [1936] AIR (A) 143.

¹⁶ Jainarain, [1940] P. W. N. 684, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 814, [1941] AIR (P) 9.

¹⁷ Palani Asari, (1882) 1 Weir 613.

¹⁸ Anthony Rodgers, (1887) 1 Weir 607.

¹⁹ Per Mahmood, J., in Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, 220, 221, F.B.

²⁰ Narayanan Chettyar, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 328, [1935] AIR (R) 509.

²¹ Senthinathaiyar v. Gnanamuthu Nadan, (1884) 1 Weir 594.

²² Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, 221, F.B.

²³ Ram Narain, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 639, 26 Cr. L. J. 23, [1924] AIR (A) 566.

²⁴ Behari, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 30; Amir Hasan, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 107.

²⁵ Raja Ram Singh, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 408, 19 Cr. L. J. 669; Inayat Shah, (1928) 30 Cr. L. J. 4.

¹ Per Mahmood, J., in Taki Husain, (1884) 7 All. 205, 221, F.B.

would with propriety be applied.² The complainant, one Scott, was a Chairman of a Municipal Board. At a meeting of the Board, which was presided over by the complainant, a resolution was passed calling on the accused to pay certain taxes due by her to the Municipality and was signed by the complainant. A copy of the resolution, signed by the Secretary, was sent to the accused, who returned it after writing upon it the words, "Mrs. MacCarthy will take no notice of anything written by H. G. Scott, he already having shown himself a coward, dishonest man, and something worse than either". It was held that the accused was guilty of defamation. The Court said: "In this case there is no question as to the significance or meaning of the words written. They are distinctly defamatory within the meaning of s. 499, and, as such, whether they were written in haste or in anger, the respondent is clearly responsible."³ The wording of this Explanation is very loose. Anything calculated to lower the reputation of a person may come under this provision. Thus, an accusation of anonymous letter-writing may amount to defamation.⁴ An imputation that a Mahomedan had killed a cow in his compound is not one which can be said to harm his reputation.⁵ In reply to a book written by the complainant attacking Vaishnavism and its founders, the accused retorted by a similar publication and both books dealt with highly controversial religious matters. Very violent language was used in the latter about the complainant. It was held that it did not amount to defamation, as the personal character or respectability of the complainant was not in any way assailed.⁶ Where the complainant was invited by the accused to a feast at the latter's house along with a large number of other people and when he sat down to dinner he was asked by the accused to leave the place without giving any reason or making any imputation whatever, it was held that as there was no imputation calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant the charge of defamation could not be established.⁷ But where a Hindu lodged a complaint of defamation alleging that at the time of the feast of the brotherhood the accused declared that he had been outcasted and was not fit to sit down at the feast and proved that the allegation was false and had operated to his prejudice, it was held that the accused was guilty of defamation.⁸ Where the accused referred to the complainant, who was Parsutia Kaisth, as a Kori Chamar with the result that none of the priests attended the religious ceremony which had to be performed at the complainant's house, it was held that the accused were guilty of defamation.⁹ Where a complainant was described as a man with whom not even Turks, let alone Brahmins, could associate and the wedding of his daughter was characterised as a sinful carnival worthy of perdition—a moral end involving a disgrace, degradation and degeneration—it was held that the language used was unrestrained, the object of the writer being to hold the complainant up to public execration.¹⁰ In the course of an election contest, the accused issued and published a poster against the complainant, his rival candidate, who was a Barrister, saying "The hallowness of Mr.—'s capacity as a Barrister has been exposed". It was held that the accused was guilty of defamation as the imputation was calculated to lower in the estimation of others the intellectual qualities and the aptitude for his profession of the complainant as a Barrister.¹¹ Accused sent a petition to the Forest authorities saying that the village Munsif was a very rich man and that he had won over the Range Officer to his side and had been illicitly grazing goats in the reserve, and urging an enquiry by some officer, other than the Range Officer. It was held that the accused was guilty of the offence of defamation, inasmuch as the language employed by him was calculated to harm the village Munsif and lower the Range Officer in the estimation of his subordinates and the public and that Exceptions 8 and 9 of this section could not apply to the case inasmuch as the accused had acted recklessly and without due care and caution.¹²

² McCarthy, (1887) 9 All. 420; Mohan Lal v. Ram Charan, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 361, 29 Cr. L. J. 451, [1928] AIR (A) 213.

³ McCarthy, ibid., p. 426.

⁴ (1872) 7 Mad. Jur. 253.

⁵ Sikandarkhan v. Jammu, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 53.

⁶ Kumaragurudasa Swamigal v. Krishna-swami Mudaliar, (1924) 47 M. L. J. 664, [1924] M. W. N. 768, 26 Cr. L. J. 464, [1924] AIR (M) 808.

⁷ Faqir, (1926) 24 A. L. J. R. 893, 27 Cr. L. J. 1390, [1926] AIR (A) 711.

⁸ Mohan Lal v. Ram Charan, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 361, 29 Cr. L. J. 451, [1928] AIR (A) 213.

⁹ Bachcha Paragwal, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 413.

¹⁰ V. Madanjit, (1910) 12 Cr. L. J. 129.

¹¹ Panna Lal, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 1033, [1936] AIR (L) 294.

¹² Madappa Goundan, (1916) 19 Cr. L. J. 115, [1918] AIR (M) 343.

It is not defamation for a number of persons to meet and resolve for good reasons not to associate with a particular person. But they should not publish the resolution.¹³

Explanation 2.—An imputation affecting a body of persons may amount to defamation. Where the defamatory matter, published in a newspaper, related to the alleged habitual immoral conduct of the girls of a particular college, but no particular girl or girls were named in or identifiable from the articles, and the complaint was filed by a number of girls of the college, it was held that the author of the articles was guilty of defamation, inasmuch as the inevitable effect of the articles on the mind of the reader must be to make him believe that it was habitual with the girls of the college to misbehave in the ways mentioned, so that all the girls in the college collectively and each girl individually must suffer in reputation.¹⁴

Exceptions—There are occasions when a man is allowed to speak out or write matters about others which would ordinarily be defamatory. These occasions are reduced to the following ten Exceptions :—

1. Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published.
2. Public conduct of public servants.
3. Conduct of any person touching any public question.
4. Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts.
5. Merits of a case decided in Court or conduct of witnesses and others concerned.
6. Merits of a public performance.
7. Censure passed in good faith by a person having lawful authority over another.
8. Accusation preferred in good faith to an authorized person.
9. Imputation made in good faith by a person for the protection of his or other's interests.
10. Caution intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed or for public good.

Unlike a civil suit, in which the Court is confined more or less to the pleadings, in a criminal case, before a conviction is recorded, it has always to be seen whether the proved or admitted facts bring the case within an exception, which takes it out of the offence defined, the burden of proving such facts being on the accused.¹⁵

A defamatory statement does not fall within any of the Exceptions by reason merely of the fact that it is punishable as an offence under s. 182 or any other section of the Code.¹⁶

Exception 1.—This and Exception 4 require that the imputation should be true and be for public good. The remaining Exceptions require that the imputation should be made in good faith. "For", say the authors of the Code, "to require in these cases that the imputation should be true, would be to render these exceptions mere nullities. Whether a public functionary is or is not fit for his situation; whether a person who has bestirred himself to get up a petition in favour of a public measure ought to be considered as an enlightened and public-spirited citizen, or as a foolish meddler; whether a person who has been tried for an offence was or was not guilty; which of two witnesses who contradicted each other on a trial ought to be believed; whether a portrait is (life) like; whether a song has been well sung; whether a book is well written;—these are questions about which honest and discerning men may hold opinions diametrically opposite; and to require a man to prove to the satisfaction of a Court of law that the opinion which he has expressed on such a question is a right opinion is to prohibit all discussion on such questions. The same may be said of those private communications which we propose to allow. It is plainly desirable that a merchant should disclose to his partners his unfavourable opinion of the honesty of a person with whom the firm has dealings. It is desirable that a father should caution his son against marrying a woman of bad character. But if the merchant is permitted to say to his partners, if the father is permitted to say to his son, only what can be legally proved before a Court, it is evident that the permission is worth nothing".¹⁷

¹³ Nga On Thin, (1921) 23 Cr. L. J. 240.

¹⁴ Wahid Ullah Ahrari, (1935) 57 All. 1012.

¹⁵ Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazli Karim,

(1929) 56 Cal. 1013.

¹⁶ U. Aung Pe, [1938] Ran. 404, F.B.

¹⁷ Note R, pp. 183, 184.

'Public good'.—Public good is the good of the general public as contradistinguished from that of an individual.¹⁸ The truth of the imputation complained of shall amount to a defence if it was for the public benefit that the imputation should be published but not otherwise. The authors of the Code observe: "A person who has been guilty of gross acts of swindling at the Cape comes to Calcutta, and proposes to set up a house of agency. A person who has been forced to fly from England on account of his infamous vices repairs to India, opens a school, and exerts himself to obtain pupils. A captain of a ship induces natives to emigrate, by promising to convey them to a country where they will have large wages and little work. He takes them to a foreign colony, where they are treated like slaves, and returns to India to hold out similar temptations to others. A man introduces a common prostitute as his wife into the society of all the most respectable ladies of the presidency. A person in a high station is in the habit of encouraging ruinous play among young servants of the Company. In all these cases, and in many others which might be named, we conceive that a writer who publishes the truth renders a great service to the public, and cannot, without a violation of every sound principle, be treated as a criminal.

"There are undoubtedly many cases in which the spreading of true reports, prejudicial to the character of an individual, would hurt the feelings of that individual, without producing compensating advantage in any other quarter. The proclaiming to the world that a man keeps a mistress, that he is too much addicted to wine, that he is penurious in his house-keeping, that he is slovenly in his person; the raking up of ridiculous and degrading stories about the youthful indiscretions of a man who has long lived irreproachably as a husband and a father, and who has attained some post which requires gravity and even sanctity of character, can seldom or never produce any good to the public sufficient to compensate for the pain given to the person attacked, and to those who are connected with him."¹⁹

The onus of proving the statement or at least of showing that he had reasonable ground for believing it to be true, and was actuated in making such statement not by malicious motives, but by an intelligent zeal for the public interest, lies on the person making the statement.²⁰

The person making the imputation cannot escape liability, if in addition to statements which would be protected, he goes further and makes false and uncalled for statements, for he cannot then be regarded as acting in good faith.²¹ Where at a public auction of Government forest produce, the officer made some statement to the effect that the contractors who did not wish to bid should go away, and the accused said in the presence of witnesses that the complainant was turned out by the officer, it was held that the words used by the accused 'nikal diya' to the effect that the complainant was turned out, were defamatory, and justification could not be pleaded within the meaning of this Exception.²²

A Court may find that an imputation is true, and made for the public good, but on considering the manner of the publication (e.g., in a newspaper) it may hold that the particular publication is not for the public good, and is, therefore, not privileged.²³ A privilege does not justify publication in excess of the purpose or object which gives rise to it.²⁴ An editor of a newspaper does not act in good faith and for the 'public good', when he publishes every foul rumour, however ill-founded and however much pain it may give to those concerned, which comes to his ears, and he states that he does not vouch for the truth of the rumour. The discharge of journalistic duties does not justify the publication of all cases of rumours, injustice, and oppression, which may have the effect of seriously injuring the reputation of others, without the least inquiry into its truth.²⁵

¹⁸ V. Madanjit, (1910) 12 Cr. L. J. 129.

¹⁹ Note R, pp. 178. 179.

²⁰ Atter Hoosein v. Tusud-dook Hoosein, (1867)

2 Agra 87; Jaffer Fadu, (1910) 4 S. L. R. 67, 11 Cr. L. J. 586.

²¹ Ramanand, (1881) 3 All. 664.

²² Samrathmal, (1931) 34 Cr. L. J. 154, [1932] AIR (N) 158.

²³ Janardhan Damodhar Dikshit, (1894) 19 Bom. 708; Leandro Mascarenhas, (1895) Cr. R. No. 34 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 769; Gopalsao v.

Mt. Piari Bi, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 55
Vinayak Almaram v. Shantaram Janardhan, (1941) 43 Bom. L. R. 737, 43 Cr. L. J. 174. [1941] AIR (B) 410.

²⁴ Sanhara Narasimha Bharati, (1883) 6 Mad. 311, 395.

²⁵ Government Advocate, B. & O. v. Gopabandhu Das, (1922) 1 Pat. 414, 420; Purna Chandra Ghose, (1924) 28 C. W. N. 579, 26 Cr. L. J. 71, [1924] AIR (C) 611.

Cases.—Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made.—C was put out of caste by a panchayat of his caste-fellows on the ground that there was an improper intimacy between him and a woman of his caste. Certain persons, members of the panchayat, circulated a letter to the members of their caste generally, in which, stating that C and such woman had been put out of caste, and the reason for the same, and requesting the members of the caste not to receive them into their houses, or to eat with them, they made certain statements, applying equally to C or such woman. Such statements were defamatory. It was held that, if such persons were careless enough to use language which was applicable to C, they did so at their peril and they could not escape the responsibility of having defamed C by saying that they intended such language to apply to such woman; that had such persons contented themselves with announcing the determination of the panchayat, and the grounds upon which such determination was based, they would have been protected; but inasmuch as they did not so content themselves, but went further and made false and uncalled for statements regarding C, they had not acted in good faith.¹ The denouncing of a Brahmin for providing alcoholic refreshment at a wedding reception for those of his guests who desired to partake of such beverages is not for the "public good".²

In discussing the claims of a councillor for a Municipal office, a person is entitled to make remarks in the interests of the public, so long as he abstains from aspersing the private character of the former.³

Exception 2.—As to 'public servant' and 'good faith' see ss. 21 and 52, respectively. "Every subject has a right to comment on those acts of public men which concern him as a subject of the realm, if he does not make his commentary a cloak for malice and slander. A writer in a public paper has the same right as any other person, and it is his privilege, if indeed it is not his duty, to comment on the acts of public men which concern not himself only but which concern the public, and the discussion of which is for the public good. And where a person makes the public conduct of a public man the subject of comment and it is for the public good, he is not liable to an action if the comments are made honestly, and he honestly believes the facts to be as he states them, and there is no wilful misrepresentation of fact or any misstatement which he must have known to be a misstatement if he had exercised ordinary care".⁴

Men in public positions, even though official, can claim no immunity from criticisms which may be made within some limits. Similarly the press and authors and publishers of books have no special privilege and are in no better position than any other man. If the assertions as opposed to comments made are defamatory the assertions must either be justified or in the limited cases specified in Excep. 9; it must be shown that the attack on the character of another was made in good faith and for public good.⁵

If a person undertake to criticise the acts of a public man, he must take care not to assert that which is not true as the basis of his criticism and he is bound not to conceal wilfully anything which would show that the criticism is not well-founded.⁶ The opinion expressed must be expressed in good faith and must not contain only the half truth. The accused, an editor of a newspaper, published an article in which the following passage, admittedly referring to the complainant, occurred:—"Has his (the complainant's) character been inquired into? Does no one remember that this very man was sent by the Subordinate Judge of Sholapur to be prosecuted? Are not the proceedings instituted by the Subordinate Judge to be found on the record?" The Magistrate found that it was literally true that the complainant had been sent to be prosecuted, but that it was also true that the prosecution had, to the accused's knowledge, been ordered to be withdrawn by the District Judge. It was held that although the statement contained only the truth, it was incomplete and misleading: and that, as the accused was well aware that the prosecution referred to had been withdrawn, and did not injuriously affect the complainant's character, he could not plead that the im-

¹ Ramanand, (1881) 3 All. 664.

² V. Madanjit, (1910) 12 Cr.L. J. 129.

³ Subroya Iyer: Moulvi Kadar v. Rowthu Abdul Kadar, [1914] M. W. N. 351 15 Cr. L. J. 357.

⁴ Per Couch, J., in F. I. Howard v. M. Mull, (1866) 1 B. H. C. (Appx.) 85, 91; Kelu Nair v. Thirumampu, [1947] M. W. N. 607.

⁵ Khare v. Massani, [1948] Nag. 347.

⁶ William Tayler, (1869) 26 C. L. J. 345.

putation made by him on the complainant's character was made in good faith, or for the public good.⁷ The complainant stood for election to the Municipal Council. It was found that during his period as chairman, certain irregularities were committed in connection with the construction of a market and the auditor and Government had made some strong remarks thereon. They were reproduced in pamphlet form by the accused who also added "Is there a greater fraud than this", "Is any other evidence necessary as to the daylight robbery in respect of the market building. Consider whether it is just to again vote and elect (the complainant) who was the cause of all these, as councillor". Complainant charged the accused with defamation. It was held that the pamphlet was only intended to warn the voters against voting for the complainant and that the expressions were only opinions made in good faith respecting the conduct of the complainant and came within this Exception.⁸

The expression 'opinions in good faith' means that in order to express an opinion in good faith the person who holds it must have taken care and attention in forming it.⁹ In dealing with the question of good faith, the proper point to be decided is not whether the allegations put forward by the accused in support of the defamation are in substance true, but whether he was informed, and had good reason, after due care and attention, to believe that such allegations were true.¹⁰ The mere absence of ill-will does not of itself prove that the imputation was made in good faith.¹¹ In determining the question of good faith the Court should have to take into account the intellectual capacity of the person, his predilections and the surrounding facts.¹²

Where the editor of a newspaper made certain allegations against the Jail Superintendent after hearing certain prisoners, but without giving the Jail Superintendent an opportunity to refute them, it was held that he could not be said to have acted with due care and attention and, therefore, in good faith so as to bring himself within this and ninth Exceptions.¹³

A member of Parliament to whom a written communication is addressed by one of his constituents asking for his assistance in bringing to the notice of the appropriate Minister a complaint of improper conduct in relation to his office on the part of some public official acting in that constituency has sufficient interest in the subject-matter of the complaint to render the occasion of such publication an occasion of qualified privilege.¹⁴ Under the Code such a case would be covered by this Exception.

Newspaper criticism.—A newspaper has a public duty to ventilate abuses and if an official fails in his duty, a newspaper is absolutely within its rights in publishing facts derogatory to such official and making fair comment on them, but it must get hold of provable facts.¹⁵ The editor, however, should be most watchful not to publish defamatory attacks upon individuals unless he first takes reasonable pains to ascertain that there are strong and cogent grounds for believing the information which is sent to him to be true—that proof is readily available and that in the particular circumstances his duty to the public requires him to make the facts known.¹⁶ Where imputations are made against a public officer for acts of oppression and bribery in a newspaper, it is for the Court to see, whether they are made in 'good faith' or not. The opinion of the superior officer of the public servant is not decisive on the point. The fact that the writer did not wait before publishing the article till he received a reply to his petition to the superior officer, making the same allegations, does not negative good faith.¹⁷

Exception 3.—As to the meaning of 'public', see s. 12, supra. The authors of the Code say: "There are public men who are not public functionaries; persons who hold no office may yet...take a very active part in urging or opposing the adoption of measures in which the community is deeply interested. It appears clear to us that every person ought to be allowed to comment, in good faith, on the proceedings of these volunteer servants of the public, with the same freedom with which we allow

⁷ B. Kakde, (1880) 4 Bom. 298.

⁸ Rangaraju v. Khan Bahadur Abdul Razack Saheb, [1935] M. W. N. 253.

⁹ Banks, (1869) 26 C. L. J. 401.

¹⁰ Shibo Prosad Pandah, (1878) 4 Cal. 124. See s. 52.

¹¹ Palani Asari, (1882) 1 Weir 613.

¹² Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazley Karim, (1929) 56 Cal. 1013, 1021.

¹³ K. Rama Rao, [1942] O. W. N. 530, (1942) 44 Cr. L. J. 33.

¹⁴ Rule, (1937) 30 Cox 598.

¹⁵ Jhabbar Mal, (1927) 26 A. L. J. R. 196, 30 Cr. L. J. 530, [1928] AIR (A) 222.

¹⁶ Mohammad Nazir, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 509, 30 Cr. L. J. 766, [1928] AIR (A) 821.

¹⁷ Kelu Nair v. Thirumampu, [1947] 2 M. L. J. 325, 60 L. W. 621.

him to comment on the proceedings of the official servants of the public".¹⁸ The comment must be such that a fair mind would use under the circumstances, and it must not misstate facts, because a comment cannot be fair which is built upon facts which are not truly stated, and further, it must not convey imputations of an evil sort, except so far as the facts truly stated warrant the imputation.¹⁹ A fair comment must be based upon facts and a writer is not entitled to invent facts and express his opinions upon such invented facts. Nor can the conduct of a public man or of a person in his public character be assailed as dishonest simply because the writer fancies such conduct is open to suspicion.²⁰

In *Campbell v. Spottiswoode*²¹ Cockburn, C. J., said: "It seems to me that a line must be drawn between hostile criticism on a man's public conduct and the motives by which that conduct may be supposed to be influenced; and that you have no right to impute to a man in his conduct as a citizen,—even although it be open to ridicule or disapprobation,—base, sordid, dishonest, and wicked motives, unless there is so much ground for the imputation that a jury shall be of opinion, not only that you may have honestly entertained some mistaken belief upon the subject, but that your belief is well founded and not without cause... It has been said in argument that it is for the interest of society that a man's public conduct shall be criticised without any limit, except that which it is admitted on all hands must be imposed—namely, that the writer must only write according to what he thinks just and true. But, it seems to me that the public at large have an equal interest in the maintenance of public character, without which public affairs could never be conducted with a view to the welfare and the best interests of our country; and I think that we ought not to sanction attacks upon public men, which if allowed would be destructive of their character and honour, unless such attacks are well founded. Where the public conduct of a public man is made the subject of observation, and the writer who is commenting upon it makes imputations of motives which fairly and properly and legitimately arise out of the conduct itself, and the jury shall be of opinion, not only that the criticism was honest, but also well founded, there I should be prepared to say that the imputation so made would not be the subject of an action. But I do not think we should be laying down the law according to what has always been understood to be essential to the best interests of the community, if we were to say because a writer may fancy that the conduct of a public man is open to the suspicion of dishonesty, that therefore he is entitled to denounce that man as dishonest".

The comment should be made in 'good faith'. It is not using "due care and attention" to publish defamatory statements about a person and also to publish his denial and let the public take their choice.²²

Where in a newspaper report the main aspersion of the accused against the complainant is true, the fact that there is some exaggeration or departure from strict truth does not deprive the accused of the protection provided in this Exception. Mere exaggeration, or even gross exaggeration, does not make a comment unfair. Where the matter is of public interest, the Court ought not to weigh any comment on it in a fine scale and some allowance must be made for even intemperate language, provided, however, that the writer keeps himself within the bounds of substantial truth and does not misrepresent or suppress any fact.²³

Case.—Conduct of person touching public question.—Where M, a medical man, and the editor of a medical journal, said in such journal of an advertisement published by H, another medical man, in which H solicited the public to subscribe to a hospital of which he was the surgeon in charge, stating the number of successful operations which had been performed:—"The advertiser is certainly entitled to be congratulated on his marvellous success; but it is hardly consistent with the feelings and usages of the medical profession to herald them forth in this fashion. We are not surprised to find that the line he has elected to adopt has not met with the approval of ¹⁸ Note R, pp. 182, 183.

¹⁹ Joynt v. Cycle Trade Publishing Company, [1904] 2 K. B. 292, 294.

²⁰ Appa v. Maricar, (1917) 19 Cr. L. J. 129, [1918] AIR (LB) 26; Bhagwan Das, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 1361, [1927] AIR (A) 116.

²¹ (1863) 32 L. J. Q. B. 185, 199, 200, 3 B. &

S. 769, 776, 777.

²² J. M. Chatterji, [1933] A. L. J. R. 1493 34 Cr. L. J. 926, [1933] AIR (A) 434.

²³ Murlidhar Jeramdas v. Narayendas, (1913) 16 Cr. L. J. 141, 8 S. L. R. 143, [1914] AIR (S) 85, Edmondson v. Birch & Co. Ltd., [1907] 1 K. B. 371, 380, followed.

his brother officers serving in the same province, and we have no hesitation in pronouncing his proceeding in this matter unprofessional". It was held that inasmuch as such advertisement had the effect of making such hospital a "public question" and of submitting it to the "judgment of the public", and M had expressed himself in good faith, M was within the third, sixth and ninth Exceptions.²⁴ Where the accused published a letter in a newspaper purporting to be a verbatim account of what had transpired at a meeting of the Municipal Corporation, which was admittedly true in substance, it was held that the accused was protected under this Exception.²⁵

Exception 4.—As to the definition of 'Court of Justice', see s. 20, supra. "Where there are judicial proceedings before a properly constituted judicial tribunal exercising its jurisdiction in open Court, then the publication, without malice, of a fair and accurate report of what takes place before that tribunal is privileged."²⁶ If the proceedings are such as will result in a final decision being given, a fair and accurate report may be published before the final decision is given.² Though the publication of such proceedings may be to the disadvantage of the particular individual concerned, yet it is of vast importance to the public that the proceedings of Courts of Justice should be universally known. The general advantage to the country in having these proceedings made public, more than counterbalances the inconveniences to the private persons whose conduct may be the subject of such proceedings.³ It is immaterial whether the proceedings were ex parte or not,⁴ or whether the Court had jurisdiction or not.⁵ But a report of judicial proceedings cannot be published if a Court has prohibited the publication of any such proceedings,⁶ or where the subject-matter of the trial is obscene⁷ or blasphemous.⁸ In England there is an Act to regulate the publication of reports of judicial proceedings in such manner as to prevent injury to public morals.⁹

The privilege of publishing reports of judicial proceedings is not confined to newspapers only. There is no difference between the privilege of a newspaper and of a pamphlet. The privilege is the same as a matter of law for newspapers as for private individuals. In both cases a fair report of the trial is all that is necessary.¹⁰ A newspaper has not greater privilege in such a matter than any ordinary person—any person is privileged in publishing such a report if he does so merely to inform the public.¹¹

The reporter, however, who gives the account of judicial proceedings ought not to mix up with it comments of his own; and if any comments are made, they should not be made as a part of the report. The report should be confined to what takes place in Court and the two things, report and comment, should be kept separate.¹² The report must not be one-sided or highly coloured.¹³

Case.—Publication of proceedings of Courts of justice.—An accused person, who was the trustee of a temple, was convicted of defamation, the alleged defamatory statement being that the complainant, who performed the worship in a temple, had been convicted and sent to jail for the theft of idols belonging to the temple. At the time when the statement was made, an appointment was in question in connection with the temple. It was held that the accused was justified in making the statement either in the interest of the temple, or because the statement was no more than a publication of the result of proceedings in a Court of Justice.¹⁴

Exception 5.—The authors of the Code say: "We have allowed all persons freely to discuss in good faith the proceedings of courts of law, and the characters of parties, agents and witnesses as connected with those proceedings. It is almost universally acknowledged that the courts of law ought to be thrown open to the pub-

²⁴ McLeod, (1880) 3 All. 342. See Subroya Iyer v. Moulvi Kadar Rowthu Abdul Kadar, [1914] M. W. N. 351, 15 Cr. L. J. 357.

²⁵ Murlidhar v. Naraindas, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 143, 16 Cr. L. J. 141, [1914] AIR (S) 85.

¹ Per Lord Esher, M. R., in Kimber v. The Press Association, [1893] 1 Q. B. 65, 68.

² Ibid., p. 71.

³ Per Lawrence, J., in J. Wright, (1799) 8 T. R. 298, 298.

⁴ Kimber v. The Press Association, [1893] 1 Q. B. 65, 68.

⁵ Usill v. Hales, (1878) 3 C. P. D. 319.

⁶ Clement, (1821) 4 B. & Ald. 218.

⁷ Hicklin, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 360; Steele v. Brannan, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 261; "Evening News," (1886) 3 T. L. R. 255.

⁸ Carlile, (1819) 3 B. & Ald. 167.

⁹ 16 & 17 Geo. V, c. 61.

¹⁰ Milissich v. Lloyds, (1877) 13 Cox 575.

¹¹ Salmon v. Isaac, (1869) 20 L. T. 885, 886.

¹² Andrews v. Chapman, (1853) 3 C. & K. 286; Fleet, (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 379.

¹³ Stiles v. Nokes, (1806) 7 East 493, 497.

¹⁴ Singaraaju Nagabhushanam, (1902) 26 Mad. 464.

lic; but the advantage of throwing them open to the public will be small indeed, if the few who are able to press their way into a court are forbidden to report what has passed there to the vast numbers who were absent, or if those who are allowed to know what has passed are not allowed to comment on what has passed".¹⁵

"The administration of justice is matter of universal interest to the whole public. The direction of the judge, the verdict of the jury, . . . may be all made subjects of free comment. . . . But in commenting on such matters a public writer, as much as a private writer, is bound to attend to the truth, and to put forward the truth honestly and in good faith and to the best of his knowledge and ability. It is not to be expected that in discharging this duty of a public journalist he will always be infallible. His judgment may be biassed, one way or the other, without the slightest reflection upon his good faith; and, therefore, if his comments are fair, no one has a right to complain. . . it is well that the conduct of the judge or jury should, if necessary, be brought to the bar of public opinion, like all other matters of public concern. . . that the administration of justice should be made a subject for the exercise of public discussion is a matter of the most essential importance. But. . . it behoves those who pass judgment, and call upon the public to pass judgment, on those who are suitors or witnesses in courts of justice, not to give reckless vent to harsh and uncharitable views of the conduct of others; but to remember, that they are bound to exercise a fair, an honest, and an impartial judgment upon those whom they hold up to public obloquy".¹⁶ Writers in public papers are of great utility, and do great benefit to the public interests by watching the proceedings of the Courts of Justice, and fairly commenting on them if there is anything that calls for observation; but they should be careful, in discharging that function, that they do not wantonly assail the character of others, or impute criminality to them, and if they do so, and do not bring to the performance of the duty they discharge that due regard for the interests of others which the assumption of so important a censorship necessarily requires, they must take the consequences.¹⁷

Exception 6.—The object of this Exception is that the public should be aided by comment in its judgment of the public performance submitted to its judgment. All kinds of performances in public may be truly criticised, provided the comments are made in good faith. "Liberty of criticism," says Lord Ellenborough,¹⁸ "must be allowed, or we should neither have purity of taste nor of morals. Fair discussion is essentially necessary to the truth of history and the advancement of science. That publication therefore I shall never consider as a libel, which has for its object, not to injure the reputation of any individual, but to correct misrepresentations of fact, to refute sophistical reasoning, to expose a vicious taste in literature, or to censure what is hostile to morality".

"What is the meaning of a 'fair comment'? I think the meaning is this: is the article in the opinion of the jury beyond that which any fair man, however prejudiced or however strong his opinion may be, would say of the work in question? Every latitude must be given to opinion and to prejudice, and then an ordinary set of men with ordinary judgment must say whether any fair man would have made such a comment on the work. It is very easy to say what would be clearly beyond that limit; if, for instance, the writer attacked the private character of the author. But it is much more difficult to say what is within the limit. That must depend upon the circumstances of the particular case. . . Mere exaggeration, or even gross exaggeration, would not make the comment unfair. However wrong the opinion expressed may be in point of truth, or however prejudiced the writer, it may still be within the prescribed limit. The question which the jury must consider is this—would any fair man, however prejudiced he may be, however exaggerated or obstinate his views, have said that which this criticism has said of the work which is criticised?"¹⁹

A fair comment upon a literary work, or other such production, submitted to the judgment of the public, that is to say, a comment which is the expression of honest opinion and does not go beyond the limits of what may fairly be called 'criticism', is no libel.²⁰ A fair comment is a comment which is true, or which, if false, expresses the real opinion of its author, such opinion having been formed with a reasonable degree

¹⁵ Note R, p. 183.

¹⁶ Per Cockburn, C. J., in Woodgate v. Ridout, (1865) 4 F. & F. 202, 216, 217, 223.

¹⁷ Per Cockburn, C. J., in Tanfield, (1878) 42 J. P. 423, 424.

¹⁸ Tabart v. Tipper, (1808) 1 Camp. 350, 351.

¹⁹ Per Lord Esher, M. R., in Merivale v. Carson, (1887) 20 Q. B. D. 275, 280, 281.

²⁰ McQuire v. Western Morning News Company, [1903] 2 K. B. 100.

of care and on reasonable grounds. The right of fair comment involves two essentials : first, that the imputation should be a comment on the work criticised, and, second, that it should be fair, that is to say, if it professes to be an inference drawn from the contents of that work, it must be an inference which it is possible to draw therefrom. It would be monstrous, for instance, for a critic to suggest as an inference from a mere grammatical inaccuracy in a work, that its author was a swindler or a libertine.²¹ An imputation on an author made by a critic without reference to the work under criticism, if in terms so general as to be capable of conveying an unfavourable impression of him apart from what appears in his work, cannot be justified by the critic on the ground that his intention was to base his imputation solely on the work reviewed, and that he had in his mind passages therein supporting the imputation. The responsibility of the critic is to be gauged by the effect which his comment is calculated to produce and not by what he says was his intention.²²

'Good faith' under this Exception requires not logical infallibility but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution must in each case be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question. It is only to be expected that the honest conclusions of a calm and philosophical mind may differ very largely from the honest conclusions of a person excited by sectarian zeal untrained to habits of precise reasoning. Good faith in the formation or expression of an opinion can afford no protection to an imputation which does not purport to be based on that which is the legitimate subject of public comment.²³

As to the definition of 'public', see s. 12, supra.

Exception 7.—This exception allows "a person under whose authority others have been placed, either by their own consent or by the law, to censure, in good faith, those who are so placed under his authority, as far as regards matter to which that "authority relates".²⁴ But if his privilege is exceeded in any way the offence will be established. "A privilege does not justify publication in excess of the purpose or object which gives rise to it. A man may in good faith complain of the conduct of a servant to the master of the servant even though the complaint amounts to defamation, but he is not protected if he publishes the complaint in a newspaper. A spiritual superior, in pronouncing and publishing a sentence of excommunication, may be protected by privilege so long as the publication is not more extensive than is required to effectuate the purpose for which the privilege is conceded to him for the censure of a member of the sect in matters appertaining to religion or the communication of a sentence he is authorized to pronounce to those who are to guide themselves by it".²⁵ Caste associations are autonomous, the powers vested in their constituted heads being, subject to any custom, those necessary for the protection of the interests committed to their charge. The Court's only duty is to see that those powers are exercised in accordance with the principles of natural justice, that is, after the person to be affected by their exercise has been heard and his defence has received fair consideration.¹

Cases.—Imputation made by person in authority.—Where the guru (spiritual guide) of the caste to which K belonged, issued a letter to K's fellow villagers to the effect that as K's wife had been caught intriguing with a man of a lower caste, no one of her co-religionists should have any social intercourse with her, and that she should be outcasted, it was held that the statements contained in the letter had been made in good faith for the protection of the social and spiritual interests of the community.² The headman of a caste issued a notice to a member of that caste, intimating that a complaint had been received by the caste that his daughter had committed adultery with a certain person, and requiring him to appear before the caste with his daughter in order to clear her character. It was held that the notice did not amount to defamation.³ Where a Swami issued a temporary interdict against two members of his caste on the

²¹ Abdool Wadood Ahmed, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 230, 235, 31 Bom. 293.

²² Ibid., p. 236.

²³ Ibid., pp. 235, 236.

²⁴ Note R, p. 183.

²⁵ Per Turner, C. J., in Sankara Narasimha Bharathi, (1883) 6 Mad. 381, 395; (1871) 6 M. H. C. (Appx.) 46, 1 Weir 574; Sahib Jotindra Nath Mukharji v. Radha Krishna Budhya, (1934)

15 P. L. T. 507, 36 Cr. L. J. 285, [1934] AIR (P) 548.

¹ Sukratendra Thirtha Swamiar v. Prabhu, (1922) 17 L. W. 500, 45 M. L. J. 116, 24 Cr. L. J. 325, [1923] AIR (M) 587.

² Basumati Adhikarini v. Budram Kolita, (1894) 22 Cal. 46.

³ Bhikaji, (1888) Cr. R. No. 39 of 1888, Unrep. Cr. C. 387.

ground of their alleged inter dining with Pariahs and the interdict was issued ex parte in view of the apprehension that they might take part in the temple feasts coming off immediately and there was nothing to show that the Swami was not going to follow up the temporary interdict with his final decision after hearing the person affected ; it was held that the Swami was not guilty of defamation.⁴

Exception 8.—The authors of the Code observe : “We allow a person to prefer an accusation against another, in good faith, to any person who has lawful authority to restrain or punish the accused”.⁵

To obtain the protection given by this Exception (1) the accusation must be made to a person in authority over the party accused, and (2) the accusation must be preferred in good faith.⁶ This Exception does not formulate, according to the Calcutta High Court, any rule of absolute privilege.⁷ If, without express malice, a person makes a defamatory charge which he bona fide believes to be true, against one whose conduct in the respect defamed has caused him injury, to one whose duty it is to inquire into and redress such injury, the occasion is privileged, because the person making the charge has an interest in its subject-matter and the person to whom the communication is made has, on hearing it, a duty to discharge in respect of it.⁸

The accusation must be preferred in good faith—that is to say, with such reasonable care and attention on the part of the person making it, in first satisfying himself of the truth and justice of his charge, as an ordinary man should be expected to exercise.⁹ There can be no good faith where there is express malice or evidence of culpable negligence or recklessness in the dissemination of a libel.¹⁰ If an officer maliciously makes to his superior a defamatory report against any person he will be guilty.¹¹ Absence of reasonable cause for making an imputation is evidence of the absence of good faith.¹² In determining whether the accused acted in good faith, it is material to consider who he was, and whether he had any concern in the matter complained of which would justify him in making the statement.¹³ Honesty of purpose is essential to protect communications made in fulfilment of a duty. The purport of such communications must also be believed to be true.¹⁴ Complaints made to Magistrates are not protected if they are not made in good faith.¹⁵ A complaint to a police constable is not privileged.¹⁶ A letter written by a Brahman to the Brahman community of the neighbourhood, with a view to obtain their decision on a matter affecting his own religious interests, and that of the Brahman community, if written in good faith, comes under this Exception and Exception 10.¹⁷

See s. 52, supra, as to the meaning of ‘good faith’. In determining the question of good faith the Court should take into account the intellectual capacity of the accused, his predilections and the surrounding facts.¹⁸

Case.—Accusation preferred in good faith to authorized persons.—Where a public servant, in the course of a departmental inquiry, made a statement to the head of his department that the complainant, another public servant, borrowed moneys for his immediate superior, it was held that such statement would be defamatory, if it was untrue and if it was made under such circumstances as would lead the officer to believe ⁴ Sukratendra Thirtha Swamiar v. Prabhu, (1922) 17 L. W. 500, 45 M. L. J. 116, 24 Cr. L. J. 325, [1923] AIR (M) 587.

⁵ Note R, p. 183.

⁶ Dhum Singh, (1884) 6 All. 220; Raghavendra v. Kashinathbhat, (1894) 19 Bom. 717; Anand Rao Balkrishna, (1914) 17 Bom. L. R. 82, 16 Cr. L. J. 177; Nobin Dome, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 35; Jangelal v. Dewajee Patel, (1893) 7 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 20.

⁷ Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388, s.b.

⁸ Poona, (1916) 8 L. B. R. 440, 446, 17 Cr. L. J. 213; Waring v. M'Caldin, (1855) 25 L. J. Q. B. 25, 29.

⁹ Dhum Singh, (1884) 6 All. 220, 222; Menta Kondubhothu v. Chalamcherla Subbayya, (1891) 1 Weir 608.

¹⁰ Lingangauda Basangauda Patil, Crim. Appeal. No. 173 of 1927, decided on September 22, 1927. Cor. Patkar and Baker, JJ., (Unrep.

Bom.).

¹¹ Abdur Razak v. Gauri Nath, (1909) 11 Cr. L. J. 205, Sher Singh, (1880) P. R. No. 23 of 1880, distinguished.

¹² (1890) 1 Weir 607.

¹³ Venkappa Rai v. Ibrahim Beary, (1892) 1 Weir 608.

¹⁴ H. Grant, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 390, 392, 5 Cr. L. J. 160.

¹⁵ Abdul Hakim v. Tej Chandar Mukarji, (1881) 3 All. 815; Tiruvengada Mudali v. Tripurasundari Ammal, (1926) 49 Mad. 728, F.B., overruling Muthusami Naidu, (1912) 37 Mad. 110.

¹⁶ Kakumara Anjaneyalu, (1916) 17 Cr. L. J. 381, [1917] AIR (M) 600.

¹⁷ Kashinath Bachaji Bagul, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 168. See Venkata Reddi, (1885) 1 Weir 575.

¹⁸ Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazley Karim, (1929) 56 Cal. 1018.

that the complainant had borrowed money for his superior from persons connected with the department.¹⁹ The accused, in appealing against the levy of assessment by the complainant (a Mamlatdar) by sale of movable property, alleged that the complainant acted towards him unjustly and spitefully, that in passing the order appealed against he was actuated by personal ill-will and malice towards the accused, and had exercised his authority with a view to cause harassment and loss to the accused. It was held that the accused was protected by Exceptions 8 and 9 in making the statements as they were made in good faith.²⁰ Certain paddy traders sent to the Traffic Manager of the Burma Railways a telegram containing an allegation that a station-master was giving preferential treatment to charcoal dealers and setting forth particulars in support of their allegation. The railway authorities after an inquiry into the allegation held that it was not substantiated, and the station-master prosecuted the paddy traders for defamation. They showed that when they sent their telegram they had good reasons for supposing their allegation to be true. It was held that they were entitled to the protection of this Exception.²¹ Where the accused told his friend E and subsequently at the instance of E wrote to the superior officer of the complainant to the effect that the complainant and the wife of E had been seen behaving on a certain night in such a manner and under such circumstances as to render unavoidable the conclusion that acts of impropriety took place between them and it was found that the accused honestly believed in the truth of the statements, it was held that the accused was not guilty of defamation.²² Where a petition was presented to a Sub-Inspector of Police against the complainant alleging that he was in the habit of getting drunk and abusing people and threatening to do evil by the use of black art and praying for protection against the complainant, it was held that the persons who presented the petition were protected by this Exception as their intention in presenting the petition was to protect their own interest.²³

Where the creditors of an unadjudicated insolvent suspecting that the complainant was carrying property given to him by their debtor, accused him of being in possession of stolen property, it was held that they had not made the imputation in good faith within the meaning of either Exception 8 or 9 and were guilty of defaming the complainant.²⁴

Accusation made to unauthorized persons.—Where the right to a plot of land was in dispute between the complainant and the accused, and the latter, in a petition presented by him to the Municipal Council of his town about the land, made a statement that the complainant was convicted and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, it was held that the statement to the Municipal Council, though true, was not privileged.²⁵

Exception 9.—The Exception relates to private communications which a person makes, in good faith, for the protection of his own interests or of any other person, or for the public good. The truth of the imputations need not be proved by an accused person claiming the privilege of the Exception.¹ There is no justification for reading the Exception as meaning that if the person making the imputation believes in good faith that he has been acting for the protection of the interest of himself or any other person he is not liable.² This Exception is nothing more than a reproduction of the canon or guiding principle which was stated by Lord Campbell, C. J., in Harrison v. Bush,³ namely, "A communication made bona fide upon any subject matter in which the party communicating has an interest, or in reference to which he has a duty, is privileged, if made to a person having a corresponding interest or duty, although it contains criminary matter which, without this privilege, would be slanderous and actionable".

Any one, in the transaction of business with another, has a right to use language bona fide, which is relevant to that business, and which a due regard to his own interest makes necessary, even if it should directly, or by its consequences, be injurious

¹⁹ Krishna Row v. Appaswami Aiyar, (1891) 1 Weir 585.

²⁰ Anand Rao Balkrishna Rangnekar, (1914) 17 Bom. L. R. 82, 16 Cr. L. J. 177, [1915] AIR (B) 28.

²¹ Poona, (1916) 8 L. B. R. 440, 17 Cr. L. J. 213.

²² H. Grant, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 390, 5 Cr. L. J. 160.

²³ Subba Rao v. Venkatachalanathi, [1938] M.

W. N. 871, [1938] 2 M. L. J. 397, 48 L. W. 320.

²⁴ Bulchand, (1914) 8 S. L. R. 55, 15 Cr. L. J. 675.

²⁵ Ramasami Naidu v. Ramachendrudu, (1895) 1 Weir 612.

¹ Kuruppanna Goundan v. Kuppuswami Mudaliar, [1935] M. W. N. 365.

² Col. Bholanath, (1928) 51 All. 313, 327.

³ (1855) 5 E. & B. 344, 348.

or painful to another.⁴ The rule of public policy on which this principle is based is that honest transactions of business and of social intercourse would otherwise be deprived of the protection which they should enjoy.⁵

According to the Calcutta High Court this Exception does not formulate any rule of absolute privilege. Good faith on the part of the person who makes or publishes the imputation must be established.⁶

'Good faith' requires not, indeed, logical infallibility but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution must, in each case, be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question.⁷ In considering whether there was 'good faith,' i.e. due care and attention, the position of the person making the imputation must be taken into consideration.⁸ The standard of care and caution required by the expression 'good faith' varies with the circumstances of each case.⁹ The plea of good faith may be negatived on the ground of recklessness indicative of want of due care and caution if the imputations in question had been made as categorical statements of facts.¹⁰ If good faith is not established it is not necessary to consider whether public good is involved.¹¹ There is no difference in principle in the question of "good faith" between Exceptions 3 and 9. Exception 3 protects, in certain circumstances, an expression of opinion concerning the conduct of any person touching any public question and respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and Exception 9 protects, under certain circumstances, imputations concerning the character of another.¹² Where certain imputations were made by the accused only as a matter of opinion in good faith and for public good after taking due care and caution, the accused was protected by this Exception though the imputations made against the complainant (who was a prominent public man) were baseless and incorrect. A police-officer is guilty of defamation if he maliciously makes to his superior officer a defamatory report against any person unless he can show that he is protected by some special statutory privilege. No such privilege is created by the Legislature in favour of police-officers.¹⁴

This Exception includes the first Exception. It refers to any imputation made in good faith, whereas the first Exception applies only to true imputations made for the public good. It is not essential that, before a person can be held entitled to the privilege of having made a statement in good faith for the protection of his interests, he should establish that every word he has spoken or written is literally true. If, having regard to certain facts and circumstances within his knowledge, he might, as an ordinarily reasonable and prudent man, have drawn the conclusions which he has expressed in defamatory language for the protection of his own interests, he may fairly be held to have made out his good faith.¹⁵

A person making defamatory expressions for the protection of his son's interests is not privileged, unless the imputation is made in good faith.¹⁶ Where it appeared that the accused in filing his petition of complaint containing defamatory allegations acted with a desire to protect himself by an appeal to the Magistrate, rather than to injure others, it was held that it was not defamation.¹⁷

⁴ E. M. Slater, (1890) 15 Bom. 351, 363; Jaikishen Das v. Sher Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 10 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 281; Bishunath Singh, (1934) 11 O. W. N. 382, 35 Cr. L. J. 703, [1934] AIR (O) 169.

⁵ Venkata Narasimha v. Kottayya, (1889) 12 Mad. 374, 377.

⁶ Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal 388, s.b.

⁷ Abdool Wadood, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 230, 31 Bom. 293, 298; Promotha Nath Mukhopadhyay, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 389, 403; Yadali v. Gaya Singh, (1929) 57 Cal. 843, 847; Bhagolelal, [1940] N. L. J. 309, (1940) 41 Cr. L. J. 734, [1940] AIR (N) 240.

⁸ Nagarji Trikamji, (1894) 19 Bom. 340, 347; Sealy v. Ramnarain Bose, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 22.

⁹ Yadali v. Gaya Singh, (1929) 57 Cal. 843.

¹⁰ Balasubramania Mudaliar v. Rajagopalachariar, (1944) 40 Cr. L. J. 71, [1944] M. W. N. 322, [1947] AIR (M) 484.

¹¹ Purna Chandra Ghose, (1924) 28 C. W. N. 579, 26 Cr. L. J. 71, [1924] AIR (C) 611.

¹² Abbasi, [1941] Kar. 336.

¹⁴ Abdur Razzak v. Gauri Nath, (1909) P. W. R. No. 4 of 1910, 11 Cr. L. J. 205.

¹⁵ Abdul Hakim v. Tej Chander Mukarji, (1881) 3 All. 815, 817; Kamayya Tripurantakum, (1914) 1 L. W. 239, 15 Cr. L. J. 281.

¹⁶ Pursoram Doss, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 45; Col. Bholanath, (1928) 51 All. 313.

¹⁷ Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazley Karim, (1929) 56 Cal. 1030.

Where the accused slandered a married woman by stating that her husband was impotent and that the child born to her was by another man, it was held that the burden was on the accused to establish a plea of justification and not on the complainant to prove that the statements were false.¹⁸

Comments.—Where a matter is of public interest, the Court ought not to weigh any comment on it in a fine scale; some allowance must be made for even intemperate language, provided, however, the writer keeps himself within the bounds of substantial truth, and does not misrepresent or suppress any facts.¹⁹ The comment must be based on admitted or proved facts. Where comment is made on allegations of facts which do not exist, the very foundation of the plea disappears.²⁰ In order that a comment may be fair (a) it must be based on facts truly stated, (b) it must not impute corrupt or dishonourable motives to the person whose conduct or work is criticised except in so far as such imputations are warranted by the facts, (c) it must be the honest expression of the writer's real opinion made in good faith, and (d) it must be for the public good. The question to be considered in such cases is: would any fair man, however prejudiced he might be, or however exaggerated or obstinate his views, have written the criticism? ²¹

Communications by member of caste.—There is a dividing line between the passing of a resolution at a caste meeting and its communication by the authorities of the caste to its members in the discharge of their social duty. If any member of a caste publish to all its members a caste resolution in such discharge of duties the law will hold the occasion of the publication to be privileged. The member who publishes it is bound to publish it and the members of the caste have an interest in hearing it. But there must be good faith on the part of the member who publishes, that is, it must be proved that the publication was made with due care and attention.²² If a person really was outcasted, a statement to the members of the brotherhood that he was outcasted is the kind of statement contemplated by the expression "public good".²³ According to the practice of a caste committee, a member who absented himself, when summoned to answer a charge, would be excommunicated and the fact reported to all other committees of the caste. Where the accused, who were members of the caste committee, so excommunicated the complainant, and reported that fact to all other committees, it was held that there was nothing to show that the accused were not acting in good faith.²⁴ Where the complainant had been put out of caste for having taken water from the hands of a certain person and the accused warned certain other members of the caste that if they took water from the hands of the complainant they would also be liable to be put out of caste, it was held that the action of the accused was protected.²⁵ The accused having suspected that the complainants were given to drinking liquor, made an application to the caste calling for an inquiry into their conduct. For this they were convicted of defamation. It was held that the accused were not guilty, for, as members of the caste, they had every right to do what they had done, so long as they acted in good faith and for the protection of the interests of the caste: and that the communication was privileged inasmuch as it was not communicated to anybody beyond the caste and all that the accused did was to complain to the caste which had jurisdiction to inquire into the complaint.¹ A communication by the panchas to the members of a community, incorporating the resolution of the panchayat excommunicating the complainant (who absented himself when summoned to answer a charge), made in good faith and without malice, was deemed to be privileged, even though the resolution was not worded in a regular and formal manner.² Where the accused were found to have told different persons of the same caste that if they associated with one M, they would refuse to smoke or drink with them as M had become a sweeper by reason of his having shaken hands and associated with sweepers in a certain procession in which various classes of persons including some sweepers had joined, it was held that ¹⁸ Sukhdoyal v. Saraswati, [1936] Nag. 217, dissenting from Umed Singh, (1924) 46 All. 64.

¹⁹ Fernandez, (1911) 13 Bom. L. R. 1187, 1188, 12 Cr. L. J. 595.

²⁰ Mir Allahbux Khan, (1929) 23 S. L. R. 216, 30 Cr. L. J. 548, [1929] AIR (S) 90.

²¹ Khare v. Massani, [1943] Nag. 347.

²² Virji Bhagwan, (1909) 11 Bom. L. R. 638, 10 Cr. L. J. 372; Baga Mahar, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 169.

²³ Umed Singh, (1923) 46 All. 64.

²⁴ Ayyaswami Iyer v. Thirumala Iyer, (1924) 19 L. W. 639, 47 M. L. J. 8, 26 Cr. L. J. 215, [1924] AIR (M) 670.

²⁵ Umed Singh, (1923) 46 All. 64, 67.

¹ Padman Babul Mhatre, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 585, 13 Cr. L. J. 687.

² Dasai, [1932] A. L. J. R. 75, 33 Cr. L. J. 472; Bhagwant, (1938) 10 O. W. N. 778, 35 Cr. L. J. 180, [1938] AIR (O) 377.

it could not be said that if M had joined the procession or shaken hands with the sweepers, he had thereby become a sweeper, and the effect of the imputation must, therefore, undoubtedly have been to lower his position or character in the estimation of his caste fellows. The imputation would have been privileged if a panchayat of the caste had been held to discuss the matter and its decision communicated to the persons interested therein. Inasmuch as no panchayat had been held, accused's statements could not be regarded as privileged.³ Where the accused at a caste meeting made the statement that the complainant's wife had been married before to another person, it was held that the allegation amounted to defamation.⁴ Where a libellous communication is made regarding a member of a caste, the mere fact that the person making such communication is a member of the caste, will not of itself suffice to make the communication privileged.⁵

The accused on receiving information that a theft had been committed at his house by the complainant, and, on satisfying himself about the truth of the information, communicated that information to the leaders of his caste, who called a panchayat and outcasted the complainant. The complainant charged the accused with defamation. It was held that although the imputation was of an offence, it would nevertheless be an imputation on the character of the complainant. If the accused believed in good faith, as he did, then there was nothing objectionable in his warning other people about the conduct of the complainant so as to put others on their guard against her.⁶

Caste is not entirely confined to Hindus. It applies to any class of persons who keep themselves socially distinct or inherit exclusive privileges. The fact that all Mahomedans belong generally to one class does not make it the less defamatory to speak of a Mahomedan as having been "outcaste".⁷

Publication in newspapers.—Where the accused was called upon by the Panjibhai Jamayat of Khojas to whom he at one time belonged, to show cause why he should not be excommunicated, and he communicated his reply by publishing it in the local papers of which he was the proprietor, in which he alleged that the Jamayat was "a dangerous society giving every encouragement to murder and assassinations" and that the object of the notice was "to incite and arouse the intolerance and murderous feelings of the ignorant, deluded and fanatic members of the society to the necessary pitch for and for the express object of taking" his life, it was held that the accused could not claim exemption under Exceptions 1 and 9 even though he may have been under a vague apprehension that the effect of his excommunication might be that an ignorant and fanatical adherent of the community might take it into his head to try and murder the accused. There was nothing to connect the community with such fanatics, and the privilege, if any, had been exceeded by its publication in the local newspapers.⁸ At a meeting of the community, to which both the complainant and the accused belonged, resolutions were passed that the complainant should not be invited to any function of the community and that if he attended any such function he should be turned out. In publishing those resolutions in a newspaper which circulated mainly among the members of the community and some outsiders also, the accused went somewhat beyond the strict limits of the resolutions. On a prosecution for defamation the accused relied on the protection afforded by Excep. 1. It was held that the Exception had no application, because assuming that the newspaper article gave a substantially correct account of the resolutions, it could not be said that their publication was for the public good. It was further held that excessive publication took the case out of the privileges conferred by Exceps. 9 and 10, for it could not be said that it was necessary for the protection of the interest of the accused or other members of the community that the resolutions should be published in a newspaper.⁹

³ Khamani, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 171, 27 Cr. L. J. 296, [1926] AIR (A) 306.

⁴ Hari Pada Baidya, (1980) 84 C. W. N. 540, 31 Cr. L. J. 1225, [1980] AIR (C) 645.

⁵ Coopposami Chetty v. Duraisami Chetty, (1909) 38 Mad. 67. See Venkayya v. Venkataramiah, (1914) 2 L. W. 446, 28 M. L. J. 58, [1915] AIR (M) 908; Bishambhar Das v. Gobind Das, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 552; Komari Pothuraja Setty v. Krishnapatam Padda Poliah, (1988) 49 L. W. 268, [1989] M. W. N. 127, [1989] 1 M.

L. J. 414, 40 Cr. L. J. 385, [1939] AIR (M) 382.

⁶ Dularibai v. Sahul Bania, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 845, 18 N. L. J. 204.

⁷ Yusuf Beg Sahib v. Maliq Mahomed Sayed Sahib, (1926) 25 L. W. 357, 28 Cr. L. J. 207, [1927] AIR (M) 397.

⁸ Jaffer Fadu, (1910) 4 S. L. R. 67, 11 Cr. L. J. 588.

⁹ Vinayak Atmaram v. Shantaram Janardan, (1941) 43 Bom. L. R. 787, 43 Cr. L. J. 174, [1941] AIR (B) 410.

A person who never was, or has ceased to be, a member of a caste, cannot be excommunicated from the caste for the offence of re-marrying a widow against the rules of the caste. Such an order of excommunication amounts to a defamation of the person outcasted.¹⁰

Privilege of club.—The Committee members of a social club, even if wrong, deserve and are given the protection embodied in this exception, without which it would be impossible for such a body to function. This is especially so when a complaint has to be issued not to a member himself about his own conduct but to a member relating to the conduct of another person. Honest freedom of expression must be preserved unless committees are always to have the threat of criminal proceedings hanging over them. Where the respondent, who was the wife of a member of a social club and was privileged to use the club under one of its rules, preferred a complaint against the members of the committee for defaming her in a letter addressed by them to her husband, it was held that as the committee had acted in good faith even if they were mistaken, and did not act without due care and attention, they were entitled to be acquitted.¹¹

Privileges of Judges, etc.—The privileges of Judges, parties, counsel, attorneys, pleaders, and witnesses, come under this Exception. So, also, statements made in pleadings and in reports to superior officers are protected by it. (As to civil action, see the authors' "The English and Indian Law of Torts", 14th Edn.)

In India the law regarding defamatory statement made, in the course of judicial proceedings, by judges, counsel or pleaders, witnesses, and parties is in an unsettled condition. The Madras High Court has, in earlier cases, adopted the English rule of absolute immunity in all cases. The Bombay High Court has not followed the English rule in cases of criminal prosecutions on the ground that English law could not be resorted to where it went beyond the terms of s. 499; but in civil actions it has followed the dictum of the Privy Council in Baboo Gunnesh Datt Singh v. Mugneeram Chawdhry.¹² The Allahabad High Court has gone a step further and held that cases of defamation under the Code as well as civil suits for damages must be decided in accordance with the provisions embodied in the Penal Code and the Indian Evidence Act. The Calcutta High Court has held that the liability of a person prosecuted for defamation must be determined by the application of the provisions of the Penal Code and not otherwise.¹³ The Patna High Court has adopted the Calcutta view.¹⁴

Judge.—Section 77, no doubt, protects Judges for acts done when acting judicially, and the illustration to Exception 7 of this section protects a Judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness. The existence of Exceptions to this section indicates that the provisions of s. 77 cannot by themselves cover the cases of remarks made by a Judge or Magistrate in the course, of his office so as to exempt him from any liability under this section. Where the words complained of are themselves prima facie defamatory and do not bear directly on the matter in hand, there is a prima facie case and the complaint should be admitted even if s. 77 were held to apply.¹⁵

There is no reported Indian criminal case touching the absolute immunity of Judges.

It has been the English law that a Judge can't be put to answer, "civilly or criminally, for words spoken in office".¹⁶ An action for defamation cannot be maintained against a Judge for words used by him whilst trying a cause in Court, even though such words are alleged to be false, malicious, and without reasonable cause.¹⁷ "The ground alleged from the earliest times as that on which this rule rests is that if such an action would lie the judges would lose their independence, and that the absolute freedom and independence of the judges is necessary for the administration of justice."¹⁸

¹⁰ Champaklal Girdharlal Parekh v. Dipchand Permanand Desai, Criminal Revision No. 148 of 1941, decided by Beaumont, C.J., and Sen, J., on August 7, 1941, (Unrep. Bom.).

¹¹ Beckett v. Norris, [1945] Mad. 749.

¹² (1872) 11 Beng. L. R. (P. C.) 321, 17 W. R. (P. C.) 283.

¹³ Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal 388, s.b.; C. H. Crowdy v. L. O. Reilly, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 354.

¹⁴ Karu Singh, (1926) 7 P. L. T. 587, 27 Cr.

L. J. 1320, [1926] AIR (P) 425.

¹⁵ Kamla Patel v. Bhagwandas, (1934) 30 N. L. R. 234, 236, 237, 35 Cr. L. J. 947, [1934] AIR (N) 123.

¹⁶ Per Lord Mansfield in Skinner, (1773) Lofft. 55, 56.

¹⁷ Raman Nayar v. Subramanya Ayyan, (1893) 17 Mad. 87; Kurree v. Sandys, (1856) Boul. 1; Anderson v. Gorrie, [1895] 1 Q. B. 668.

¹⁸ Per Lord Esher, M. R., in Anderson v. Gorrie, ibid., p. 670.

This provision of the law is not intended for the protection or benefit of a malicious or corrupt Judge, but for the benefit of the public, whose interest it is that the Judges do exercise their functions with independence and without fear of consequences.¹⁹ In Madras it has been held that the English authorities on the subject apply to Judges and Courts in India.²⁰

Nor does any privilege or protection attach to the public acts of a Judge which exempts him, in regard to these, from free and adverse comment. He is not above criticism, his conduct and utterances may demand it. Freedom would be seriously impaired if the judicial tribunals were outside of the range of such comment.²¹

Counsel, pleader, etc.—According to common law no action will lie against an advocate for defamatory words spoken with reference to, and in the course of, an inquiry before a judicial tribunal, although they are uttered by the advocate maliciously and not with the object of supporting the case of his client, and are uttered without any justification or even excuse and from personal ill-will or anger towards the person defamed arising out of a previously existing cause, and are irrelevant to every issue of fact which is contested before the tribunal.²² The rule is made so wide not to protect counsel who deliberately and maliciously slander others, but in order that innocent counsel who act bona fide may not be “unrighteously harassed with suits”.

The advocate “is trusted with interests and privileges and powers, almost to an unlimited degree. His client must trust to him at times for fortune and character and life. The law trusts him with a privilege in respect of liberty of speech which is in practice bounded only by his own sense of duty, and he may have to speak upon subjects concerning the deepest interests of social life, and the innermost feelings of the human soul...his words and acts ought to be guided by a sense of duty—that is to say, duty to his client—binding him to exert every faculty and privilege, and power in order that he may maintain that client’s right, together with duty to the Court and himself, binding him to guard against the abuse of the powers and privileges entrusted to him, by a constant recourse to his own sense of right”.²³

In Sullivan v. Norton,²⁴ the Madras High Court has applied the common law principle to advocates in this country. Collins, C.J., in this case said: “I think that the advocates in this country have and should have the same privileges in respect of liberty of speech (bearing always in mind the remarks of Erle, C. J., in Kennedy v. Brown) they have so long enjoyed in England; and that in this country it would be beyond measure embarrassing to the advocate and disastrous to the interests of the client, if the advocate was exposed to the liability of a criminal or civil charge for defamation for words uttered in Court. . .

“I disagree with the learned Acting Advocate-General that an advocate is bound to consider the position in life of the person whose conduct he is condemning. His words and acts ought only to be guided by a sense of duty—duty to his client—and by a constant recourse to his own sense of right to guard against the abuse of the powers and privileges entrusted to him”.

Wallace, J., had doubted this full bench ruling in a case in which he laid down: “When a lawyer is acting in the course of his professional duties and is thus compelled, subject to the disciplinary action of the Court, to put forward everything which may assist his client, good faith is to be presumed, and bad faith is not to be assumed merely because the statement is prima facie defamatory, but that there must be some independent allegation and proof of private malice from which in the circumstances of the case the Court considers itself justified in inferring that the statement was not made because it was necessary in the interests of the client but that the occasion was wantonly seized as an opportunity to vent private malice. . .I take it that this principle implies and carries with it this other principle, that even the presence of malice will not override the presumption of good faith, where the statement made was obviously necessary in the interests of the client, and where the lawyer could not omit to make it with-

¹⁹ Raman Nayar v. Subramanya Ayyan, (1893) 17 Mad. 87, 88; Scott v. Stansfield, (1868) L. R. 3 Ex. 226; Fray v. Blackburn, (1863) 3 B. & S. 576.

²⁰ Sullivan v. Norton, (1886) 10 Mad. 28, F.B. See also the judgment in Nagarji Trikamji, (1894) 19 Bom. 340.

²¹ Channing Arnold, (1914) 41 I. A. 149, 41 Cal. 1023, 16 Bom. L. R. 544.

²² Munster v. Lamb, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 588.

²³ Per Erle, C. J., in Kennedy v. Brown, (1863) 32 L. J. (C. P.) 137, 146, 147.

²⁴ (1886) 10 Mad. 28, 35, F.B.

out gravely imperilling the interests of his client and would in fact not be discharging his duty to his client unless he made it; that is, that, even though some private malice is gratified by the publication of the statement, if such publication was imperatively called for in the interests of his duty to his client, the presence of such malice will not negative the presumption of good faith".²⁵ Where a pleader was charged with the offence of defamation punishable under this section in that he unnecessarily in cross-examination put to the complainant, who was a witness in a criminal case, certain questions which imputed immoral character and there was no allegation, and much less proof, that the pleader in putting the questions was actuated by any motive of private malice and was not acting in the interests of his clients, it was held that the pleader was entitled to the benefit of this Exception and the charge which imputed no ill faith but merely referred to the questions as having been put unnecessarily could not stand.¹

The Bombay High Court has, however, observed that Sullivan v. Norton is not an interpretation of s. 499, which should be construed without reference to the English law. It has held that where express malice is absent (and it ought not to be presumed) a Court, having due regard to public policy, should be extremely cautious before it deprived the advocate of the protection of this Exception.² But, in a subsequent full bench case it has expressly laid down that in this country an advocate enjoys the same measure of license as he enjoys in England; that he cannot be punished for acting on the instructions given him when he did not and could not know that they were false; and that he has the fullest liberty of speech so long as his language is justified by his instructions, or by the evidence, or by the proceedings on the record. The mere fact that his words are defamatory, or that they are calculated to hurt the feelings of another, or that they ultimately turn out to be absolutely devoid of all solid foundation will not make him responsible nor render him liable in any civil or criminal proceeding.³ The trend of the later cases is that an advocate does not enjoy absolute privilege. When a pleader is charged with defamation in respect of words spoken or written while performing his duty as a pleader, the Court ought to presume good faith and not hold him criminally liable unless there is satisfactory evidence of actual malice and unless there is cogent proof that unfair advantage was taken of his position as a pleader for an indirect purpose.⁴ An advocate who makes defamatory statements in the conduct of a case has no wider protection than a layman, that is to say, he has to bring his case within the terms of this Exception, and under s. 105 of the Indian Evidence Act the burden of proof is normally upon him. In practice, however, an advocate is entitled to special protection, and if an advocate is called in question in respect of defamatory statements made by him in the course of his duties as an advocate, the Court ought to presume that he acted in good faith and upon instructions and ought to require the other party to prove express malice. There are limits to the advocate's privilege, especially where the person against whom the imputations are made is neither a party nor a witness. If an advocate makes such an imputation on the strength of instructions from his client and the instructions turn out to be untrue, it is the duty of the advocate to withdraw the imputation.⁵

The Calcutta High Court has held that it is not defamation for a pleader to put a question in cross-examination to a witness, for the purpose of impeaching his credit, even if it appears that the question assumed a state of facts to be true, which was not really so, if it is based on facts known to the pleader, which knowledge was used in apparent good faith, entirely in the interests of his client and not for his own ends. The Court said: "It seems to us, especially in the mofussil of this country, where instructions, to the personal knowledge of one of us, are very commonly inaccurate and misleading, that a pleader would certainly be at least as much justified in acting on his own recollection as on specific instructions, and we do not think that, because he has drawn merely a wrong inference from a fact, that of itself, in the absence of any

²⁵ Mir Anwaruddin v. Fatim Bai Abidin, (1926) 50 Mad. 667, 670-1. See Saukhi Gope v. Uchit Rai, (1947) 48 Cr. L. J. 997.

¹ Bhashyam Ayyangar v. Andal Ammal, [1934] M. W. N. 481.

² Nagarji Trikamji, (1894) 19 Bom. 340, followed in Upendra Nath Bagchi, (1909) 36 Cal.

375.

³ Bhaishankar v. L. M. Wadia, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 3, F.B.

⁴ Purshottamdas Ranchhodas, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 1287, 6 Cr. L. J. 387.

⁵ Tulsidas v. Billimoria, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 910, 33 Cr. L. J. 740, [1932] AIR (B) 490.

malice, should take him out of the ninth Exception to s. 499".⁶ Following this case it has further held that a question put to a witness in cross-examination by a pleader making an imputation affords no ground for a criminal prosecution. A pleader is entitled to the presumption that the questions he asks in cross-examination are asked in good faith for the protection of the interest of his client. To rebut this presumption there must be convincing evidence that the pleader was actuated by an improper motive personal to himself and not by a desire to protect or further the interests of his client in the cause. It is the duty of the pleader to present his client's case, but it is not his duty to inquire whether it is true or false, so far, at any rate, as the purposes of a prosecution for defamation are concerned. The Court said: "It is for the public good that a person charged with the responsibility of an advocate should, so far as may be, feel unfettered by any control other than that of the presiding Judge, in the use of every weapon placed at his disposal by the law for the defence of the liberty of his client. The provisions of the ninth Exception to s. 499... must be interpreted accordingly".⁷ A pleader must use a certain amount of common sense and caution in putting defamatory questions. There may be cases where, under proper instructions, he may ask such questions to impeach the credit of the witness, unless he knows of the latter's good character and reputation. But where the questions were put with utter recklessness, and without regard to seeing whether there was any truth in them and with absolute disregard of whether he was entitled to ask them or not, and they were not put for the good of the suit but to injure the reputation of the witness publicly, they were held to have been asked in absolutely bad faith. Where a pleader asked a witness, who was a defendant in a civil suit in the capacity of a mukhia, whether he was a thief and gambler and dined with prostitutes, and whether his wife was leading the life of a prostitute, it was held that the pleader, in putting the questions, had acted in bad faith, inasmuch as he had asked the witness to compromise the suit and had threatened him on his refusal; that the witness was admittedly a mukhia, and the question as to his wife was irrelevant; that the witness was well known in the town where the pleader resided, so that the latter must have known of his reputation and character, and that he was guilty of defamation.⁸ In a later case the Court observed: "So far as the English law is concerned, it is settled that advocates have absolute and unqualified privilege in respect of questions asked in cross-examination. So far as advocates in this country are concerned, by which expression I include vakils as well as pleaders, they have not such unqualified and absolute privilege as is accorded to their brethren in England... It is not defamatory to make imputation on the character and position in life of a witness, provided that the imputation is made in good faith and for the protection of the client, who has engaged the advocate [see s. 499, Exception 9]. The presumption, therefore, is that a question asked in cross-examination, making an imputation as regards a witness, affords no ground ordinarily for a criminal prosecution, and that it is the duty of a Court, when complaint is made against an advocate for having used defamatory words, that it should ordinarily be presumed that the remark or question objected to was made on instructions and in entire good faith. No doubt there may be circumstances which may show that the question or remark objected to was made wantonly, or from malice or from private motive, but the greatest care ought to be taken to enquire into the circumstances, and, as stated in the Rangoon case (McDonnell v. King-Emperor),⁹ an opportunity should be given to the party accused of such offence to offer explanations before summons is issued".¹⁰

A pleader who files a petition containing defamatory statements on behalf of his client, cannot be prosecuted where there is no allegation of any malice or absence of good faith on his part.¹¹

The Patna High Court has held that the liability of an advocate charged with defamation in respect of words spoken or written in the performance of his professional duty depends on the provisions of this section; the Court will presume good ⁶ Upendra Nath Bagchi, (1909) 36 Cal. 375, 383.

⁷ Nikunja Behari Sen v. Harendra Chandra Sinha, (1913) 41 Cal. 514, 517.

⁸ Fakir Prasad Ghose v. Kripasindhu Pal Bhuti, (1926) 54 Cal. 137.

⁹ (1925) 3 Ran. 524.

¹⁰ Per Ghose J. in M. Banerjee v. Anukul

Chandra Mitra, (1927) 55 Cal. 85, 89; Nazir Ahmad v. Jogeshchandra Banerjee, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 889; Narayan Chandra Ganguli v. Harish Chandra Saha, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 865, [1933] AIR (C) 185.

¹¹ Nazir Ahmad v. Jogeshchandra Banerjee, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 889.

faith unless there is cogent proof to the contrary. The privilege is not absolute but qualified, but the burden is cast upon the prosecution to prove absence of good faith. The common law of England, under which an advocate can claim absolute privilege for words uttered in the course of his professional duty, is not applicable to India. An advocate in this country, therefore, is not entitled to claim absolute privilege, and in cases of prosecution for defamation, his liability must be determined on reference to the provisions of this section.¹²

The Allahabad High Court has held, after reviewing the whole case-law on the subject, that on grounds of public policy, an advocate, acting professionally in a cause, is absolutely protected from a suit for defamation for words spoken or written in his professional capacity in the course of the administration of the law in respect of that cause, even though the words are uttered without justification and maliciously and are irrelevant to any issue then before the Court. And until it has been shown that what an advocate says or writes in the course of the administration of a suit is not said or written 'in reference to' that suit, and is in that broad sense 'irrelevant', it must be held that, in his client's interest rather than his own, he enjoys an absolute privilege.¹³

The Lahore High Court has held that in India counsel cannot claim an absolute privilege but is only entitled to a qualified one under this exception. It is clear that a counsel who signs a pleading containing serious allegations lays himself open to a prosecution for defamation. He cannot, however be prosecuted successfully unless it is shown that he acted in bad faith or maliciously. Counsel can rely on this exception but he loses that defence if he has abused his position and made the allegations maliciously or for his own purpose. On the other hand if the allegations are made honestly and in the discharge of his duty to his client, then it is clear that he cannot be convicted. A Court must presume that a counsel who has signed a pleading has acted bona fide and without malice and no counsel should be called upon to answer a complaint for defamation merely because he has signed a pleading which contains defamatory matter. It must be presumed that the counsel acted honestly and without malice. Further no summons should issue against him for defamation unless the Magistrate who directs the summons to issue has some facts before him which suggest that counsel has acted in bad faith or maliciously. If there are no materials except proof of the defamatory statement, then no summons should issue.¹⁴

The Rangoon High Court has held that the English law of absolute privilege does not apply to statements of advocates in judicial proceedings. Legal practitioners are subject to the criminal law of defamation in this section. When a complaint is made against an advocate or legal practitioner for defamation in respect of a statement made in the course of a judicial proceeding, it is the duty of the Court to presume that the statement was made on instruction and in good faith and for the protection of his client's interest and that unless circumstances clearly show that the statement complained of as defamatory was made wantonly or from malicious or private motive, the complaint should not be entertained.¹⁵ An advocate cannot shelter himself behind his clients, when he allows himself to be made the medium of reckless imputations on a Court of Justice.¹⁶

Liability of client.—If the publication of an imputation concerning a third person is by the lawyer, the client cannot be charged directly with the offence of defamation, because the client, at most, is an abettor. It may happen in a particular case that the lawyer has a good defence whereas the client might be still liable for abetment.¹⁷

Cross-examination.—In cross-examination questions may be asked for which there are only reasonable grounds for thinking that imputations contained in them are well-founded; it is not necessary that before the questions are put, the person putting them should be in a position to establish the truth of the imputations beyond all doubt. Something which may be permissible to be put under the Indian Evidence Act cannot be punishable under the Penal Code. Where an imputation is made in open Court, no

¹² Nirsu Narayan Singh, (1926) 6 Pat. 224.

¹³ Sumat Prasad Jain v. Sheodah Sharma, [1945] All. 702.

¹⁴ Muhammad Taqi v. M. A. Ghani, (1944) 47 P. L. R. 8, 46 Cr. L. J. 530, [1944] AIR (L) 97.

¹⁵ McDonnell, (1925) 3 Ran. 524; U San Win v. U Hla, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 934, [1931]

AIR (R) 83; Ahmed Ali Khan v. Wali Mohamed, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 229; U Pike v. Ma Khin Thein, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 480, [1940] AIR (R) 77.

¹⁶ A. P. Pennell, (1903) 2 L. B. R. 130, F.B.

¹⁷ Rebecca Mondal, (1945) 48 Cr. L. J. 15, 50 C. W. N. 545.

question of protection under s. 126 can arise. In such a case, the party at whose instance the question is put cannot be charged directly with defamation, he can at most be charged as an abettor. It may happen in a particular case that the lawyer putting the question has a good defence wherever the client may still be liable for abetment.¹⁸

Witness.—According to English law a witness in a Court of Justice is absolutely privileged as to anything he may say as a witness having reference to the inquiry on which he is called as a witness. A statement as to another matter, made to justify the witness in consequence of a question going to the witness' credit, has reference to the inquiry within the above rule.¹⁹ But a remark made by a witness in the box, wholly irrelevant to the matter of inquiry, uncalled for by any question of counsel and introduced by the witness maliciously for his own purposes, would not be privileged. An observation made by a witness while waiting about the Court, before or after he has given his evidence, is not privileged.²⁰

The High Courts in India have not adopted the English rule of absolute privilege. All the High Courts have held that a person giving evidence in a Court of law is not entitled to an absolute privilege in respect of the statements which he makes and, consequently, that he is not immune from a complaint of defamation by reason of words uttered on oath in the witness-box.

The Bombay High Court in a full bench case has laid down that relevant statements made by a witness on oath or solemn affirmation in a judicial proceeding are not absolutely privileged on a prosecution for defamation, but are governed by the provisions of s. 499.²¹ Relevant statements made by a witness on oath or solemn affirmation in a judicial proceeding are not protected by the proviso to s. 132 of the Indian Evidence Act, in cases where the witness has not objected to answering the question put to him.²²

The Calcutta High Court has ruled that a witness who, being actuated by malicious motives, makes a voluntary and irrelevant statement, not elicited by any question put to him while under examination, to injure the reputation of another, commits an offence under this section.²³ If the statements are irrelevant to the issue in the case under inquiry no prosecution for defamation would lie.²⁴ Where the accused, shortly after the disposal of a criminal case against him brought by one B, stated openly in answer to a query of his pleader in that case that the origin of the criminal case was due to the fact that some one of the accused's party had said at a social gathering that B's daughter-in-law had eloped, and he was subsequently prosecuted for defamation for making a statement defamatory of B, it was held that the statement of the accused did not constitute this offence as it was not made with the intention of harming the reputation of anybody, but was made in answer to a natural question put to him by his legal adviser at a time when the relationship of legal adviser and client continued.²⁵ This principle has been extended to a person for what he states in answer to questions put to him by a police-officer conducting an investigation under the Code of Criminal Procedure.¹ Subsequently, however, the Judges felt disposed to refer the question to a full bench but it was not referred.²

The Madras High Court, following the English law, had laid down that statements of witnesses made in the witness-box were absolutely privileged. If they were false the remedy was by indictment for perjury and not for defamation.³ But the High Court has subsequently dissented from this view and held that statements made ¹⁸ Rebecca Mondal, [1945] 48 Cr. L. J. 15, 50 C. W. N. 545.

¹⁹ Seaman v. Netherclift, (1876) 1 C. P. D. 540, on appeal, 2 C. P. D. 53; Goffin v. Donnelly, (1881) 6 Q. B. D. 307.

²⁰ Trotman v. Dunn, (1815) 4 Camp. 211; Lynnam v. Gowing, (1880) 6 L. R. Ir. 250.

²¹ Bai Shanta v. Umrao Amir Malik, (1925) 50 Bom. 162, 28 Bom. L. R. 1, F.B., overruling Babaji, (1892) 17 Bom. 127, and Balkrishna Vithal, (1893) 17 Bom. 573. See Karigowda, (1894) 19 Bom. 51.

²² Bai Shanta v. Umrao Amir Malik, (1925) 50 Bom. 162, 28 Bom. L. R. 1, F.B.

²³ Haidar Ali v. Abu Cal, (1905) 32 Cal. 756; Moher Sheikh, (1893) 21 Cal. 382; Mohunt

Pursoram Doss, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 36; Pursoram Doss, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 45. See, however, Kali Nath Gupta v. Gobinda Chandra Basu, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 293.

²⁴ Woolfun Bibi v. Jesarat Sheikh, (1899) 27 Cal. 262.

²⁵ Debendra Nath Shahu v. Bhagirath Shahu, (1909) 13 C. W. N. 1087, 10 Cr. L. J. 475.

¹ Methuram Dass v. Jaggannath Dass, (1901) 28 Cal. 794. See Gobinda Pillai, (1892) 16 Mad. 235, to the same effect.

² Prafulla Kumar Ghose v. Harendra Nath Chatterjee, (1916) 44 Cal. 970.

³ Manjaya v. Sesha Shetti, (1888) 11 Mad. 477, 479; Alraja Naidu, (1906) 30 Mad. 222.

by a witness are entitled not to an absolute but only to a qualified privilege.⁴ A witness who is prosecuted for defamation in respect of statements made by him has two courses open to him. He may plead in bar of the prosecution the protection given to him under s. 132, Evidence Act. If he did not claim the protection of s. 132 when he gave his evidence he can claim only the limited privilege given by this Exception or any other Exception.⁵

The Allahabad High Court has held that if a witness whilst giving evidence makes a statement concerning any person which amounts to defamation, he may be prosecuted under this section in respect of such statement, and it lies upon him to show that the statement which he has made falls within one or other of the Exceptions or that he is protected from prosecution by the proviso to s. 132 of the Evidence Act. In this case one Ganga Prasad was a witness for the defence on the trial of one Birbal for theft. When put into the witness-box he was asked what he knew about Birbal's case. He replied that he knew nothing; but he added of his own accord that he knew that Birbal had stolen his watch eight years ago and that he had to give Rs. 10 to one Banke Lal, whom he pointed out as one of the persons present in the Court, before he got the watch back. He said, further, that if his house was searched, "thousands of rupees worth stolen property would be found". It was found that Banke Lal was a respectable Zemindar, and that he was a drug contractor and paid Rs. 400 as income-tax. It was held that Ganga Prasad was guilty of defamation.⁶

The Nagpur⁷ and the Rangoon⁸ High Courts have followed the Bombay, the Calcutta and the Madras rulings.

The former Chief Court of the Punjab⁹ and the former Judicial Commissioner's Court of Upper Burma¹⁰ had adopted the reasoning of the Calcutta and the Allahabad High Courts.

The former Judicial Commissioner's Court in Sind had taken the same view.¹¹

Parties.—According to English law no action can be brought for any statement made by parties during the conduct of a case.

The Bombay High Court has held that a complainant who, when asked by the Magistrate to state his grievance, deliberately makes a defamatory statement without any justification, is not protected by this Exception.¹² Whilst an application and a counter-application to prevent a breach of the peace were being investigated into by the police, the accused called the complainant a 'rogue'. It appeared that some four months previously the complainant was convicted and fined at the instance of the accused. The accused having been convicted of defamation, it was held that the accused was protected by this Exception inasmuch as the statement was made apparently for the protection of his own interests and when his application was under investigation by the police, and that the statement was made by him in good faith.¹³

The Madras High Court in a case observed: "We fully recognise the great importance of allowing the utmost freedom to counsel, parties, and witnesses during the progress of a case, and if the counsel for Mr. Hayes, or Mr. Hayes [the accused] if he had been defending himself, had asked Mr. Christian in cross-examination whether in consequence of cheating... he had not been turned out of the ministry, the question could not have been made the subject of a civil action, nor would any criminal proceeding lie for defamation".¹⁴ Where, therefore, a person who was being defended by a counsel on a criminal charge interfered in the examination of a witness and made a defamatory statement with regard to his character, it was held that he was guilty of defamation.¹⁵ But where, in the course of a criminal trial, the pleader

⁴ Peddabba Reddi v. Varada Reddi, (1928) 52 Mad. 482; Anthony Udayar v. Velluswami Thevar, [1948] M. W. N. 413.

⁵ Peddabba Reddi Varada Reddi, ibid.; Gopal Doss, (1881) 8 Mad. 271, F.B.

⁶ Ganga Prasad, (1907) 29 All. 685, F.B.; Kallu v. Sital, (1918) 40 All. 271; Chamap Devi v. Pirbhu Lal, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 329, 27 Cr. L. J. 253, [1926] AIR (A) 287; Mohammad Isa, [1940] All. 31. See also Muhammad Sher Ali Khan v. Ghasi Ram, (1920) 22 Cr. L. J. 159.

⁷ Chotelal v. Phulchand, [1937] Nag. 425; Surajmal v. Ramnath, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 956, [1928] AIR (N) 58.

⁸ Rasool Bhai v. Lall Khan, [1939] Run. 479.

⁹ Maya Das, (1893) P. R. No. 14 of 1893; Phundi Ram, (1910) 12 Cr. L. J. 193; Miran Shah, (1912) P. R. No. 5 of 1913, 13 Cr. L. J. 414.

¹⁰ Meer Birks v. Maung Hla Pe, (1918) 3 U. B. R. 101, 20 Cr. L. J. 125, [1919] AIR (UB) 30.

¹¹ Kakmal Gelomal v. Kismal Issardas, [1934] 36 Cr. L. J. 881, [1935] AIR (S) 81.

¹² Dinshaw Edalji v. Jehangir Cowasji, (1922) 47 Bom. 15, 24 Bom. L. R. 400.

¹³ Esufalli Abdul Hussein, (1918) 20 Bom. L. R. 601, 19 Cr. L. J. 731, [1917] AIR (B) 192.

¹⁴ Hayes v. Christian, (1892) 15 Mad. 414, 415.

¹⁵ Ibid.

who defended the accused put a question to the complainant who was examined therein as a witness, conveying an insinuation of being implicated in a crime, it was held that the accused was not guilty of defamation.¹⁶ A statement of a defamatory character made by an accused in the course of the statement which he is invited to make under s. 342, Criminal Procedure Code, is privileged.¹⁷ In a full bench case the Madras High Court held that the statement of a person charged with an offence in answer to a question by the Court trying him, "what have you to say", is absolutely privileged and he is not liable to be punished in respect thereof for defamation under the Penal Code. The privilege is not merely a qualified privilege, i.e. it is not subject to the condition that it should be made in good faith. The Court further said that the law of defamation as laid down in the Penal Code did not exclude the application of the doctrine of absolute privilege from the law of defamation in India; and that the English rule of common law, that anything said in the course of a judicial proceeding before a Court of competent jurisdiction by counsel, witness or party was absolutely privileged, applied in India.¹⁸ This case has been considered in another full bench case and the High Court has dissented from the view expressed therein, observing: "The privilege defined by the Exceptions to s. 499... must be regarded as exhaustive as to the cases which they purport to cover and that recourse cannot be had to the English Common Law to add new grounds of exception to those contained in the statute".¹⁹ Where a defamatory statement is made before an officer, who is neither a judicial officer nor a Court, e.g., a registration officer, it has been held that it is not absolutely privileged.²⁰ Where the accused was charged with defamation because his vakil put a defamatory question to the complainant and the vakil gave evidence that he did so on the instructions of his client (the accused), it was held that the instructions of the accused to his vakil were inadmissible under s. 126, Indian Evidence Act, and that the accused was not guilty of defamation committed as it were by proxy through the mouth of his vakil.²¹

The Calcutta High Court has laid down that a defamatory statement, on oath or otherwise, by a party to a judicial proceeding falls within s. 499, and is not absolutely privileged. Under cl. 30 of the Letters Patent, 1865, the provisions of such Code must be followed, and the Court cannot engraft thereon exceptions derived from the common law of England or based on public policy. The civil liability for defamation does not stand on the same basis as the criminal. A suit for damages for a defamatory statement, made on oath or otherwise, by a party to a judicial proceeding, in the absence of statutory rules on the subject, is governed by the principles of justice, equity and good conscience, which, according to a large preponderance of judicial opinion, are identical with the corresponding relevant rules of English common law.²² If imputation is made by the accused against the complainant in a petition to a Magistrate in good faith with a view to protect himself by an appeal to the Magistrate, no offence is committed.²³

Where, in a prosecution for defamation in respect of statements, made by the accused as complainant in a criminal case, the accused pleaded inter alia his privileges as a suitor, the Allahabad High Court held that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the doctrine of absolute privilege of statements made by suitors did not apply in India to criminal proceedings for defamation under the Penal Code.²⁴

The former Chief Court of the Punjab had adopted the view of the Allahabad High Court.²⁵ The former Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court had taken the same view.¹

¹⁶ Venkata Narasimham v. Venkatasubarayadu, (1888) 1 Weir 587; Pundamarazu Pantulu v. Venkataramana Aiyer, (1908) 19 M. L. J. 217, 9 Cr. L. J. 385.

¹⁷ Payini Chellaya, (1909) 9 Cr. L. J. 276.

¹⁸ Venkata Reddy, (1912) 36 Mad. 216, 233, F.B.

¹⁹ Tiruvengada Mudali v. Tripurasundari Ammal, (1926) 49 Mad. 728, 737, F.B.; Venkata Reddy, (1912) 36 Mad. 216, overruled.

²⁰ Krishnamal v. Krishnaiyengar, (1912) 23 M. L. J. 50, [1912] M. W. N. 473, 13 Cr. L. J. 508, F.B.

²¹ Palaniappa Chettiar, [1935] M. W. N. 460.

²² Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388, S.B.; Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh, (1900) 22 All. 234; McGill v.

Byrne, (1911) 5 S. L. R. 138, 13 Cr. L. J. 25; Baija v. Babu, (1918) 19 Cr. L. J. 641, [1918] AIR (N) 221.

²³ Yadali v. Gaja Singh, (1929) 57 Cal. 843, 848.

²⁴ Gajadhar, (1890) 10 A. W. N. 170; Mohammad Samiullah Khan v. Bishu Nath, (1927) 26 A. L. J. R. 760. But see the judgment of Subrahmanya Ayyar, J., in Nadu Gounden v. Nadu Gounden, (1899) 1 Weir 589.

²⁵ Fateh Muhammad, (1889) P. R. No. 34 of 1889; Kirpal Singh v. Hukam Singh, (1889) Note to P. R. No. 34 of 1899, at p. 131; Phundi Ram, (1911) 12 Cr. L. J. 198.

¹ Hoondray Mithomal, (1921) 16 S. L. R. 150, 26 Cr. L. J. 234, [1921] AIR (S) 92.

The former Chief Court of Lower Burma had laid down that the statement of a person accused of a criminal offence was not privileged. The statement in that case, however, was not a statement made by an accused person on his trial for committing an offence, but in a written statement filed in proceedings, which, though before a Magistrate, partook largely of a civil nature, by a person who was not only a competent witness, but who clearly ought to have gone into the witness-box.² The Rangoon High Court has held that a party who gives evidence on his own behalf in a judicial proceeding may be prosecuted for any defamatory statement made in the course of his evidence. He may, however, plead this Exception in defence.³

Pleadings.—Authority is strongly against the absolute immunity from prosecution for defamatory statements contained in applications, pleadings and affidavits.

The Allahabad High Court has held in a full bench case that the defamatory statements made by a party in a petition presented to a criminal Court are absolutely privileged in a civil action for damages based on libel.⁴ In an application for the transfer of a criminal case the applicants alleged, with some apparent reason, that the case had been falsely got up against them by the complainant at the instigation of one U, in order to prejudice them in their defence in a civil suit which U had caused to be brought against them. It was held that this statement did not amount to defamation as it fell within the ninth Exception.⁵ The same High Court has subsequently held in a case in which the accused was prosecuted for making a defamatory imputation in a written statement that there is a distinction between criminal and civil liability for defamation. Civil liability is to be determined by the principles of English law but criminal liability is governed by the provisions of the Penal Code and by those provisions alone.⁶

The Calcutta High Court is of opinion that defamatory matter appearing in a plaint is not privileged. It convicted the accused in a case for describing the complainant in his plaint by a wantonly offensive designation.⁷ A person is guilty of defamation for making a defamatory statement in an affidavit if the statement is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry to which the affidavit relates.⁸ The act of filing in Court a petition containing imputations concerning a person calculated to harm his reputation amounts to making or publishing the imputation.⁹ The procedure of the Courts of Justice should not with impunity be used as the means of indulging in feelings of personal spite. Where a person, without any reasonable ground, filed a petition before a Magistrate to the effect that certain persons were preparing to bring false charges against him, he was convicted of defamation.¹⁰ It has held in a case that statements made by a complainant before a Magistrate by way of a complaint are absolutely privileged.¹¹ In a subsequent case, after distinguishing this decision on the ground that the privilege claimed there was not in a criminal prosecution but in a suit for damages, it was held that there was no absolute privilege for a defamatory statement made in bad faith in an application filed before a District Magistrate by an accused for the transfer of his case; that the question of privilege must be decided by the terms of s. 499 which was exhaustive and if a defamatory statement did not come within the exceptions, it was not privileged; and that the English common law doctrine of absolute privilege did not obtain in the mofussil in India.¹² But on similar facts another Division

² N. S. Iyer v. T. Mudaliar, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 1019.

³ Sayed Ali, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 648, [1925] AIR (R) 360.

⁴ Chunni Lal v. Narsingh Das, (1917) 40 All. 341, F.B., overruling Abdul Hakim v. Tej Chandar Mukarji, (1881) 3 All. 815. Information or a report made to the police does not come within this principle: Majju v. Lachman Prasad, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 597.

⁵ Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh, (1900) 22 All. 234.

⁶ Champa Devi v. Pirbhu Lal, (1925) 24 A. L. J. R. 329, 27 Cr. L. J. 253, [1926] AIR (A) 287, Ganga Prasad, (1907) 29 All. 685, followed; Til Kanchan Gir, (1910) 11 Cr. L. J. 594; Murli Pathak, (1927) 50 All. 169.

⁷ Kali Nath Gupta v. Gobinda Chandra Basu, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 293; Augada Ram Shaha v.

Nemai Chand Shaha, (1896) 23 Cal. 867.

⁸ Giribala Dassi v. Pran Krishna Ghosh, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 292, 1 Cr. L. J. 122.

⁹ Greene v. Delanney, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 27; Mohunt Pursoram Doss, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 36.

¹⁰ Shibo Proshad Pandah, (1878) 3 C. L. R. 122.

¹¹ Golap Jan v. Bholanath Khettry, (1911) 38 Cal. 880. So far as civil Courts are concerned the High Court has decided that defamatory statements in pleadings are not absolutely privileged: Augada Ram Shaha v. Nemai Chand Shaha, (1896) 23 Cal. 867; H. P. Sandyal v. Bhaba Sundari Devi, (1910) 15 C. W. N. 995. These decisions do not appear to have been brought to the notice of the learned Judges who decided Golap Jan's case.

¹² Kari Singh, (1912) 40 Cal. 433.

Bench of the same High Court had previously held that a complainant making untrue statements in such an application could not be convicted of defamation.¹³

The Bombay High Court has held that relevant statements made by an accused under s. 342, Criminal Procedure Code, or contained in a written statement filed by an accused with the Court's permission, are not absolutely protected from being the subject of a prosecution under s. 500, but are governed by the provisions of s. 499.¹⁴ In a civil action it has held that statements in pleadings are not actionable.¹⁵

The Madras High Court remarked in *Hinde v. Baudry*¹⁶: "If they [defendants] were rightfully making an application in the suit, the principle of public policy which guards the statement of a party or witness against an action would protect them whether the statement was malicious or not". It is of opinion that here is no difference between evidence given in the box and the evidence on affidavits, in that they are both absolutely privileged and no suit for damages will lie in respect of evidence given therein.¹⁷ But in a full bench case it has decided that a defamatory statement in a complainant to a Magistrate is not absolutely privileged.¹⁸

The Patna High Court has held, following the Calcutta view, that a defamatory statement, whether on oath or otherwise, falls within s. 499, and is not absolutely privileged. Where in a plaint the accused described the complainant (defendant No. 3) as the "kept woman" of defendant No. 1 without any foundation, it was held that he was guilty of defamation.¹⁹

The former Chief Court of the Punjab had laid down that a person who made defamatory statements in petitions might be convicted of defamation.²⁰ The former Chief Court of lower Burma was also of the same view.²¹

The Rangoon High Court has held that in criminal prosecutions for defamation, whether a statement was made on an occasion of privilege or not is to be decided with reference to the provisions of s. 105 of the Evidence Act and s. 499.²²

According to English law no action lies for any statement made in the pleadings.²³

Report.—The report of an officer, in the execution of his duty, under his superior's orders, which contain defamatory imputations against others, but which does not appear to have been made recklessly or unjustifiably is covered by this Exception. An Inspector of Police sent to inquire whether it was true that a certain person was the leader of dacoits, reported that it was false, but the Baniyas of the village were trying to get the man punished from an ill-feeling, and added: "I learn from private enquiries that there is scarcely a woman in the house of the Baniyas who had not passed a night or two with the defendant". It was held that he was not protected by this Exception.²⁴

Press.—No kind of privilege attaches to the profession of the press as distinguished from the members of the public. The freedom of the journalist is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever length the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist, but apart from statute law his privilege is no other and no higher. The responsibilities which attach to his power of dissemination of printed matter may, and in the case of a conscientious journalist do, make him more careful; but the range of his assertions, his criticisms, or his comments is as wide as, and no wider than, that of any other subject. No privilege attaches to his profession.²⁵

Cases.—Statement made to protect interest of another.—Where a man who was ¹³ Kari Singh, (1912) 40 Cal. 441, foot-note.

¹⁴ Bai Shanta v. Umrao Amir, (1925) 28 Bom. L. R. 1, 50 Bom. 162, F.B.

¹⁵ Nathi Muleshwar v. Lalbhai Ravidat, (1889) 14 Bom. 97.

¹⁶ (1876) 2 Mad. 13, 14.

¹⁷ Adapala Adivaramma v. Rabula Ramachandra Reddy, [1910] M. W. N. 155, 21 M. L. J. 85.

¹⁸ Tiruvengada Mudali v. Tripurasundari Ammal, (1926) 49 Mad. 728, F.B., overruling Venkata Reddy, (1912) 36 Mad. 216, F.B.; Muthusami Naidu, (1912) 37 Mad. 110.

¹⁹ Karu Singh, (1926) 7 P. L. T. 587, 27 Cr. L. J. 1820, [1926] AIR (P) 425, following Kari Singh, (1912) 40 Cal. 433.

²⁰ Kirpa Ram, (1887) P. R. No. 21 of 1887.

²¹ Maung Mya Thi v. Henry Po Saw, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 205, 5 Cr. L. J. 382.

²² Ma Mya Shwe v. Maung Maung, (1924) 2 Ran. 333; Subramonia Iyer v. Thirumudi Mudaliar, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 1019, [1918] AIR (LB) 116; Mull Chand v. Buga Singh, (1930) 8 Ran. 359.

²³ Revis v. Smith, (1856) 18 C. B. 126.

²⁴ Rajnarain Sein, (1870) 6 Beng. L. R. (Appx.) 42, 14 W. R. (Cr.) 22. See Sher Singh, (1880) P. R. No. 23 of 1880; Mohammad Samiullah Khan v. Bishu Nath, (1927) 26 A. L. J. R. 760.

²⁵ Channing Arnold, (1914) 41 I. A. 149, 41 Cal. 1023, 1068, 16 Bom. L. R. 544; J. M. Chatterji, [1933] A. L. J. R. 1493, 34 Cr. L. J. 926, [1933] AIR (A) 434.

watching a case on behalf of his partner informed the Judge, while the hearing was going on, that the complainant was tampering with the witness and asked that the complainant might be directed to sit in Court, and it appeared that there was no malice or bad faith in making the imputation, it was held that the case fell within this Exception.¹ K, a creditor of J, of the firm of J. S. & Co., found his claims against J resisted until he sued and got decrees against him. K came to know that V, a member of J's firm, had presented his petition in insolvency. K also knew that V at the time of filing his petition, had claims against J's firm. K thereupon circulated amongst persons who had dealings with the firm of J. S. & Co., a letter warning them not to make payments to the firm and containing the following statements: (1) that a member of the firm V had filed his petition under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, "the object being to collect the outstandings and defeat the creditors"; (2) that the other members were not entitled to collect the outstandings and were not in a position to give an effectual discharge to persons making payments; and (8) that K was taking steps to have all the other members declared insolvents. It was found that the firm of J. S. & Co. was without capital, and that subsequently to writing the letter K did file a petition of insolvency against the other members of the firm, though unsuccessfully. It was held that there was no defamation as the case fell under ill. (a) to this Exception.²

Statement made to protect interest of maker.—The heads of the caste, to which both the complainant and the accused belonged, prohibited the members of the caste from holding intercourse with the complainant. In ignorance of this prohibition, the complainant's niece invited the complainant to a family ceremony. The accused, observing the complainant, asserted that she had been put out of caste, and insisted that she should retire. It was held that they had made the statements in good faith to protect themselves from caste penalties, and were not guilty of defamation.³ Where a person called upon by a panchayat, conveyed by complainant's relatives to explain why he had applied the epithet 'pariah dog' to the complainant, made a statement by way of explanation, it was held that such statement was privileged.⁴ Where a person was charged before a panchayat with having beaten the complainant who also alleged that he had been molesting her for three or four years for immoral purposes and he stated that he had kept her for ten or eleven years, it was held that the statement made by him before the panchayat was made in good faith in order to explain his beating of the complainant and was covered by Exceptions 8 and 9.⁵

The complainant charged the accused with forgery. The accused in his statement before the Magistrate stated that the complainant was kept by him as his concubine for some years and was afterwards in the keeping of another person. It was held that the statement was privileged as it was made for the purpose of defence by way of showing the motive for the complainant and for the evidence of one of the witnesses.⁶ Where the accused, when on his trial on a criminal charge, was asked by the Magistrate if he wished to say anything with reference to the evidence that had been given against him, in reply stated that his grandfather had at one time kept the wife of the complainant as his concubine, and it was found that the statement was made by the accused for the protection of his interest but was false and not made in good faith, it was held that he was not protected under this or any other Exception.⁷ Subrahmaniam Ayyar, J., who held a contrary opinion, said: "As to... parties it must be borne in mind that there is no real difference between the case of witnesses and that of civil suitors. For neither witnesses nor suitors need say what they do not know to be true, and if they knowingly say what is not true, they are equally liable to be proceeded against for the false statements made in the evidence or in the verified pleadings. No doubt, an accused person cannot be indicted for perjury for false statements made by him in the course of defence. This immunity given in consideration of the difficult position occupied by those who are accused of crimes is surely an argument in favour of their case being viewed as entitled to a more lenient treatment than the

¹ Purshotam Kala, (1885) 9 Bom. 269.

² Cassem Kurrim v. Jonas Hadjee Seedick, (1904) 9 C. W. N. 195, 2 Cr. L. J. 47.

³ Chalil Kothali, (1882) 1 Weir 609; Vinjamuri Subramania Aiyar v. Mudambi Krishnamachari, (1900) 1 Weir 613.

⁴ Govindappa Nayak, (1883) 7 Mad. 36.

⁵ Nanhey v. Pyari Bahu, (1926) 27 Cr. L. J. 938, [1926] AIR (N) 504.

⁶ Murugesu Pillai v. Papatli Ammal, (1897) 1 Weir 612.

⁷ Nadu Gounden v. Nadu Gounden, (1899) 1 Weir 589, 592.

case of witnesses or civil suitors. It seems to me, therefore, that in principle there is no solid distinction between the respective cases of counsel, witness and party with reference to the matter under discussion". Where the complainant served a lawyer's notice on the accused who was her deceased husband's nephew charging him with theft and criminal breach of trust with regard to properties left by her husband and threatening him with civil and criminal proceedings, and the accused in reply to the notice sent a letter, also through his lawyer, alleging that the complainant was living an adulterous life, that her daughter was not born to her husband, that she had been discarded by him during his lifetime, and that she had lost all right to his property, and he relied on a will made by the deceased in his favour in which the testator had stated that there was none to protect him, it was held that the accused was protected by this Exception, as there was a matter of common interest between the complainant and the accused relating to the title to property left by the deceased giving rise to qualified privilege and there was no malice or want of bona fides or presence of improper motive in the accused.⁸ Where the accused, who was doing the same kind of business as the complainant, in a notice published by him, referred to an employee of the complainant as having no knowledge of the business from his experience about him, and stated that the business could not have improved by the employment of such a man, it was held that the notice was not defamatory of the complainant.⁹ Where the accused made a statement in answer to a requisition by an investigating officer under s. 16, Criminal Procedure Code, and for the protection of his own interest, it was held that he was protected under this Exception.¹⁰

The accused, who was an inhabitant of S and an elector, wrote to one of the members of Parliament for S with the object of inducing him to help the accused to bring certain matters, at first unspecified, to the attention of the Home Secretary of the Minister of Health. The Member of Parliament replied that it was impossible for him to ask the Home Secretary for an appointment unless he had first intimated to him what the purpose of the appointment was. The accused thereupon wrote two letters to the member of Parliament containing allegations of grave and criminal conduct against a detective sergeant of police of the S. Police force and a justice of the peace for S. The accused was charged with publishing defamatory libels and was convicted. It was held that the letters were written on a privileged occasion, and, in the absence of proof of malice, the conviction ought to be quashed.¹¹

Statement made without good faith.—The complainant desired a Magistrate to ask a witness if he had not been previously convicted. The question was objected to and, before the Magistrate had decided whether it should be put, the witness cried out: "I was convicted because I had Casim Saheb's wife in my house", and, though warned by the Magistrate not to repeat it, he did so. It was held that he was guilty of defaming Casim Sahib's wife.¹²

Imputations made by pleaders.—Where a pleader, in addressing a Mamlatdar on behalf of the accused, commented on some of the witnesses for the prosecution, and called them 'loafers', and was prosecuted for defamation, it was held that, in the absence of express malice (which was not to be presumed), the pleader was protected by this Exception, and that in considering whether there was good faith, the position of the person making the imputation must be taken into consideration.¹³ A pleader representing a complainant wrote to the trying Magistrate to inquire when the latter would take up the case for trial; and in the letter described the accused as a notorious 'wrong-doer'. On a prosecution for defamation it was held that the pleader was guilty as the libel was not uttered by him in the discharge of his duty as a pleader.¹⁴ The accused, a mookhtiyar, at the request of one B, drew out a petition containing certain defamatory charges against C, and declining to accept the mookhtiyarnama on B's behalf, gave him the petition to present it. It was held that although a mookhtiyar was not liable for defamation if, relying on the statements of his clients, he introduced into a pleading in good faith a defamatory averment, yet as the accused was not employed as a mookhtiyar in that case, and by his refusing to accept a mookhtiyarnama, ⁸ Sankamma v. Govinda Chetty, (1924) 20 L. W. 709, 26 Cr. L. J. 428, [1925] AIR (M) 246.

⁹ Madan Singh, (1888) 1 Weir 593.

¹⁰ Ramaswami Mudaliar, [1938] M. W. N. 217, 47 L. W. 186.

¹¹ Rule, [1937] 2 K. B. 375.

¹² Syed Hussain, (1881) Weir (3rd Edn.) 357.

¹³ Nagarji Trikamji, (1894) 19 Bom. 340.

¹⁴ Purshottamdas Ranchhodas, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 1287, 6 Cr. L. J. 387.

it was shown that the defamation of which he had been convicted was not published in the discharge of any duty, this Exception did not apply.¹⁵ Where a pleader, immediately after the close of a trial in which his client lost his case, wrote a letter to the client stating that there was a rumour prevalent that the Judge had received a bribe from the opposite party, and that the complainant, who had conveyed the bribe, had appropriated a portion of the same, it was held that, if a rumour really existed, the pleader would have been justified in communicating it with due care and attention; but that the pleader having, as it appeared, taken no pains to ascertain the truth of the rumour before repeating it, and having also taken very little pains to prevent the client, to whom the letter was addressed, from disclosing the statement to others, had not acted with the care and attention necessary to constitute good faith, and that he was not, therefore, protected by Exceptions 9 and 10.¹⁶

Exception 10.—"To bring this case within Exception X...it must be proved that the accused intended in good faith to convey a caution to one person against another, that such caution was intended for the good of the person to whom it was conveyed, or of some person in whom that person was interested, or for the public good, and that the caution should be conveyed by the proper means".¹⁷ But the conduct of the accused should not go beyond a legitimate desire to protect the interests of those to whom he made the imputation. If the accused speaks about the complainant violently and publicly he would not be protected.¹⁸

Cases.—Want of good faith.—The complainant, a Brahman, who had been put out of caste, was re-admitted by the executive committee of the caste after performing expiatory ceremonies. This re-admission was not approved of by the accused who formed a faction of the caste; and they, after an interval of six months, distributed in the bazaar to all classes of the public printed papers in which the complainant was described as a doshi, or sinner, which signified that he was a person unfit to be associated with. The accused were charged with the offence of defamation. They pleaded privilege, and it was admitted that they had acted without malice. It was held that the accused had not acted in good faith, and that the publication was not, under the circumstances, privileged and protected by this Exception.¹⁹ U, a woman, left her first husband and contracted a secret pat marriage with J, but the then swami of the community, to which the parties belonged, declared the connection as adulterous. Some years after, another swami of the community declared the second marriage valid. Certain members of the community, however, disapproved of this action of the swami, and addressed him several communications which elicited no reply from him. Thereupon, twelve of the villagers of the place published in a newspaper a notice which began by stating that "J having kept a concubine by name U has had offspring by her". It was held that they were guilty of defamation, for conceding that the allegations were made for the benefit of a portion of the public, still the accused had no privilege to disseminate them to a circle of readers wider than those who could possibly be interested in the allegations.²⁰ Where the accused published a circular purporting to say that at a panchayat held at a certain place it was resolved that the complainant who had been to England was not to be taken into caste and that those of their community, who associated with him, could be taken into the caste only on their undergoing a penance and on consenting to give up all connection with the complainant, and where it was found that no panchayat was actually held and the publication was not made in good faith, it was held that the accused was rightly convicted of the offence of defamation. The publication of the circular lowered the character of the complainant in respect of his caste as it represented the complainant to be one with whom to associate would entail excommunication on the members of his brotherhood associating with him.²¹

Caution conveyed in good faith.—The accused, with a number of other persons at a caste meeting, passed a resolution to the effect that "the Nilgiri people do not belong

¹⁵ Chrestien, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 473.

¹⁶ Senthinathaiyar v. Gnanamuthu Nadan, (1884) 1 Weir 594.

¹⁷ Per Collins, C. J., in Thiagaraya v. Krishnasami, (1892) 15 Mad. 214, 217.

¹⁸ Palani Asari, (1882) 1 Weir 613.

¹⁹ Thiagaraya v. Krishnasami, (1892) 15 Mad. 214, 217.

²⁰ Shiogouda, (1901) 3 Bom. L. R. 188.

²¹ Mukund Ram, (1909) 6 A. L. J. R. 472, 9 Cr. L. J. 535.

to the caste" (to which the accused and the Mahrattas belonged), but that the complainant "seems to belong to the Rangari caste". It was admitted that the complainant was a Mahratta living in the Nilgiris. The members of the meeting arrived at this conclusion after making inquiries. The complainant had notice of the meeting and the resolution was recorded in a book kept by the caste panchayat. It was held that under the circumstances the accused were not guilty of defamation.²² A person was put out of caste by a meeting of his caste fellows for having taken water from the hands of a certain other person. The accused told some members of the caste not to take water from the hands of the person outcasted, as, if they did so, they would be liable to be excommunicated. It was held that the accused was protected by this Exception and was not guilty of defamation.²³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the imputation in question consisted of words, spoken or intended to be read, or of signs, etc.

Although it cannot be laid down "as a universal proposition, that in no case where the actual words used have not been proved a conviction for defamation by word of mouth cannot be maintained, it must be conceded that in the majority of cases it should be so... When the question arises as to whether the words used were intended to harm or had the effect of harming the reputation, the court must be put in possession not only of the words used, but also of the context in which they were used, in order to find the intention and the effect of the words. If the court should accept, instead of the words and the context, the 'impression' (of the words used, and of the general conversation) 'left on the minds of the witnesses', it would be yielding its own duty to witnesses, with the result that the accused person will have no benefit of the opinion of the court itself".²⁴ In the same case, King, J., remarked: "It is unnecessary to prove the exact words used by the accused, for the purpose of supporting a conviction for oral defamation. It is sufficient to prove the purport or substance of the defamatory imputations. No honest witness would profess to remember the exact words used by a person who has been speaking for even 15 minutes. At the most he may remember some striking phrase or expression. But a witness's failure to recall the exact words used or the exact context in which they were spoken is immaterial, provided that he can give a sufficiently clear account of the purport of the defamatory remarks".²⁵

Where a charge of defamation is based on an answer to a question much turns upon the precise form of the question and the precise form of answer. If a Court is not satisfied on these matters, it is impossible to maintain a conviction. It is not sufficient for a Court to come to the conclusion that substantially something was said. The Court must be satisfied that certain words were used.¹

(2) That the imputation concerned the complainant.

It is not necessary that the whole world should read the subject-matter of the complaint as a libel, but the question is whether those who knew the parties, by putting a reasonable construction on the subject-matter, would consider it to refer to the complainant.²

(3) That such imputation emanated from the accused.

(4) That he made or published the same.

There must be evidence to show that the publication was made by the accused.³ The prosecution must affirmatively prove that the defendant published the libel complained of. Admissions as to publication in the written statement of the accused cannot be used to fill up the gap in the prosecution evidence.⁴ In a prosecution for libel the only evidence adduced of publication was that the particular issue of the journal containing the libel bore the statement that it was printed and published by the accused. The sworn complaint also stated that the accused published it, and the accused

²² Salar Mannaji Row v. C. Herojee Row, (1887) 1 Weir 614.

²³ Umed Singh, (1923) 46 All. 64.

²⁴ Per Mukerji, J., in Col. Bholanath, (1928) 51 All. 313, 317.

²⁵ Ibid., p. 330.

¹ Jainarain, (1940) P. W. N. 684, (1940) 41

Cr. L. J. 814, [1941] AIR (P) 9.

² Kali Prasanna Kabyabisharad, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 465.

³ P. A. Mariano, (1904) 10 Burma L. R. 304.

⁴ Jeremiah v. Vas, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 576, 22 M. L. J. 73, 12 Cr. L. J. 585.

said in the lower Court in his written statement that what was published was a substantially true report without any malicious intention and he did not deny that he published the libel. It was held that there was no legal evidence of publication.⁵

It is incumbent on the complainant to produce evidence to show that the accused made or published the imputation complained of notwithstanding the accused admits the publication when examined under s. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. A Magistrate is neither empowered under that section to put questions to the accused if the prosecution has not let in evidence implicating him in the offence nor is his statement admissible in evidence to fill the gap in the absence of such evidence.⁶

On the prosecution of the editor of a newspaper for defamation by publishing a libel in his paper, an attested copy of a declaration made by the editor under s. 5 of Act XXV of 1867, to the effect that he was the printer and publisher of the newspaper was produced in evidence by the complainant. It was held that the declaration was prima facie proof of publication by the editor.⁷ If the manuscript of a libel be proved to be in the handwriting of the accused, and it be also proved to have been printed and published, this is sufficient evidence to show that it was published by the accused, although there be no evidence given to show that the printing and publication were by the direction of the accused.⁸ Publication is sufficiently proved by the production of a printed copy.⁹

In the case of the editor of a paper "there is ground for the supposition that in the ordinary course he would keep in touch with what was going on in connection with this paper",¹⁰ during the temporary absence from the headquarters.

Every publication or circulation of libel constitutes a fresh and distinct act and therefore a separate offence.¹¹

(5) That he intended thereby to harm the reputation of the complainant, or that he knew or had reason to believe that it would do so. The intention of the accused must be gathered from the document complained of as a whole.¹² Intention like any other psychological fact has to be inferred from the act itself. The jury has to see whether the natural result of the act is not to harm the reputation of the persons attacked.¹³

The question of the physical and moral as distinguished from the legal character of the act of a person accused under this section is, like those which arise under other sections of the Code, one to be determined by considerations and inferences drawn from the common experience rather than from rules of legal construction.¹⁴

It is not an error in law for a Judge to require the accused to prove several distinct imputations contained in a libellous article published by him with the same strictness with which he would be required to prove them if he were the defendant in a civil action.¹⁵

Raising of inconsistent pleas.—It is open to the accused to raise different and inconsistent pleas. In a defamation case, the accused can plead that the passage was not defamatory because it bore a different significance or meaning from the one attributed to it by the complainant, and can also take the other alternative plea that it was defamatory because it bore the meaning given to it by the prosecution, it was an honest expression of opinion made in good faith and for the good of the public.¹⁶ It is open to an accused, in a case under this section, to adduce evidence and prove, even where the accused had denied having made the statement alleged to be defamatory, that the statement was true and made in good faith.¹⁷

Exceptions.—The Exceptions to the sections should be considered by the Court

⁵ Jeremiah v. Vas, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 576, 22 M. L. J. 73, 12 Cr. L. J. 505.

⁶ Devi Dayal, (1922) 4 Lah. 55.

⁷ Ramasami v. Lokanada, ((1886) 9 Mad. 387. See Stanger, (1871) L. R. 6 Q. B. 352; Hart, (1808) 10 East 94.

⁸ Lovett, (1839) 9 C. & P. 462.

⁹ S. Soosai Naidu v. Revd. Father Darri-entort, (1891) 1 Weir 579.

¹⁰ Per Fawcett, J., in Manilal Harilal, Crim. Rev. No. 160 of 1927, decided by Fawcett and Mirza, JJ., on November 14, 1927 (Unrep. Bom.).

¹¹ Sardar Diwan Singh, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 744, [1935] AIR (N) 90.

¹² Laidman v. Hearsey, (1885) 7 All. 906.

¹³ Kali Prasanna Kabayabisharad, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 465.

¹⁴ Pitamber, (1879) Unrep. Cr. C. 140.

¹⁵ Kikabhai Parbhudas, (1872) 9 B. H. C. 451.

¹⁶ Balasubramania Mudaliar v. Rajagopalachariar, (1944) 46 Cr. L. J. 71, [1944] M. W. N. 322, [1944] AIR (M) 484.

¹⁷ Mohd. Husain, [1945] A. L. J. R. 425, [1945] O. W. N. (H. C.) 334. (1), 47 Cr. L. J. 541, [1946] AIR (A) 146.

even if the accused does not specifically rely on them provided that the facts give rise to a consideration of these Exceptions.¹⁸

Truth as defence.—Where the accused intends to bring evidence to prove the truth of the defamatory matter, his advocate should cross-examine the complainant upon every matter upon which evidence is intended to be brought. If he does not do so, it is a subject of serious consideration whether he should subsequently be allowed to tender proof as to the material incidents of which he was not cross-examined.¹⁹ The accused is entitled to call evidence to prove that the allegations are true, even though he has denied making such allegations.²⁰

The Allahabad High Court has held that in a prosecution for defamation it is for the complainant to prove, irrespective of whether the accused has or has not specifically pleaded justification on the ground of public good, that the statement was false and that, if it was true, it was for the public good.²¹ The Nagpur High Court dissenting from this view has held that the burden is on the accused to establish a plea of justification and not on the complainant to prove that the statements complained of were false.²²

Where the accused having publicly charged a woman with being pregnant by adultery, requested the Court to have the complainant, the woman, medically examined in order that the truth or falsehood of the matter alleged might be satisfactorily established, it was held that there was no law which empowered the Courts to order such an examination in such a case.²³

Good faith.—The authors of the Code say : “Whether an imputation be or be not made in good faith is a question for the Courts of law. The burden of the proof will lie sometimes on the person who has made the imputation, and sometimes on the person on whom the imputation has been thrown. No general rule can be laid down. Yet scarcely any case could arise respecting which a sensible and impartial judge would feel and doubt. If, for example, a public functionary were to prosecute for defamation a writer who had described him in general terms as incapable, the court would probably require the prosecutor to give some proof of bad faith. If the prosecutor had no such proof to offer, the defendant would be acquitted. If the prosecutor were to prove that the defendant had applied to him for money, had promised to write in his praise if the money were advanced, and had threatened to abuse him if the money were withheld, the court would, probably, be of opinion that the defendant had not written in good faith, and would convict him.

“On the other hand, if the imputation were an imputation of some particular fact, or an imputation which, though general in form, yet implied the truth of some particular fact which, if true, might be proved, the court would probably hold that the burden of proving good faith lay on the defendant. Thus if a person were to publish that a collector was in the habit of receiving bribes from the zemindars of his district, and were unable to specify a single case, or to give any authority for his assertion, the courts would probably be of opinion that the imputation had not been made in good faith.

“Again, if a critic described a writer as a plagiarist, the courts would not consider this as defamation, without very strong proof of bad faith. But if it were proved that the critic had, like Lauder, interpolated passages in old books in order to bear out the charge of plagiarism, the court would doubtless be of opinion that he had not criticised in good faith, and would convict him of defamation.²⁴

Relevant facts.—A sues B for libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose, and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts, though they do not contain the libel itself.²⁵

A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A ; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true. The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in ¹⁸ Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazley Karim, (1929) 56 Cal. 1013.

¹⁹ Dhum Singh, (1884) 6 All. 220.

²⁰ Abdul Aziz v. Fazal Rahman, (1928) 30 Cr. L. J. 239.

²¹ Umed Singh, (1923) 46 All. 64.

²² Sukhdayal v. Saraswati, [1936] Nag. 217.

²³ Pudmon, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 474, Cr. R. No. 33 of 1889.

²⁴ Note R, p. 184.

²⁵ Indian Evidence Act, s. 6, ill. (c).

issue. The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B.¹

A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B. The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill-will on the part of A towards B is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question. The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B.²

Admissibility of evidence.—A sues B for libel expressed in a painted caricature exposed in a shop window. The question is as to the similarity of the caricature and its libellous character. The remarks of a crowd of spectators on these points may be proved.³

A and B separately sue C for a libel which reflects upon each of them. C in each case says that the matter alleged to be libellous is true, and the circumstances are such that it is probably true in each case, or in neither. A obtains a decree against C for damages on the ground that C failed to make out his justification. The fact is irrelevant as between B and C.⁴

Evidence of the complainant having previously acted as alleged in the libel is admissible.⁵ When defamation affects a person's general character then evidence of the general reputation of that person may be given to show that there was a reasonable ground for the imputation and thus to reduce the sentence.⁶ The accused was convicted for having defamed a public servant by publishing an imputation that the latter had compelled him to pay a bribe in order to avoid a prosecution for a certain offence. The accused wanted to produce evidence as to the complainant having taken bribes on other occasions, and general evidence as to the complainant's reputation, but this was disallowed by the trial Court. It was held that evidence as to the complainant having taken bribes on other specific occasions would be irrelevant, but that the accused was entitled to produce evidence to show that the complainant had the reputation of being a bribe-taker.⁷

Where on a charge for defamatory statements made by the accused in cross-examination, in a previous proceeding, the Courts below found that accused did utter the defamatory words which were not denied by him in his examination under s. 342, Criminal Procedure Code, it was held that the fact that the Magistrate in the previous proceeding did not record the exact question and answer relevant to the charge was immaterial.⁸

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Where a complaint shows that an imputation against the complainant's character has been made and that such imputation is prima facie defamatory, a Magistrate is bound to issue summons and is not at liberty to anticipate a case of privilege unless the privilege is distinctly admitted by the complainant.⁹ The examination and cross-examination of the complainant should be held in the presence of the Magistrate who has seisin of the case and passes final orders therein.¹⁰

A person who alleges that he has been defamed by a statement made on oath by a witness in a proceeding to which he has not been a party can move a Magistrate to entertain a complaint in respect of defamation without moving the Court in which the statement was made to make a complaint under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of perjury committed before it. The Courts, however, should be slow to admit complaints of defamation where the circumstances are such that the accusation is really one of perjury; in such case the Court should be moved to make a complaint.¹¹

The Calcutta High Court has held that where an offence, though described as an offence under this section, still remains an offence punishable under s. 211, process should not issue under the former section on the application of a person discharged

¹ Indian Evidence Act, s. 9, ill. (b).

² Ibid., s. 14, ill (e).

³ Ibid., s. 32, ill. (n).

⁴ Ibid., s. 43, ill. (a).

⁵ Laidman v. Hearsey, (1885) 7 All. 906.

⁶ Chedi Lal, (1888) 2 C. P. L. R. 198.

⁷ Devi Dyal, (1922) 4 Lah. 55.

⁸ Shoo Karan Lal v. Bandi Prasad, (1942)

21 Pat. 778.

⁹ Periyasami Kotasami Tarre, (1886) 1 Weir 580.

¹⁰ Brindaban Chander Das v. Ishaquddin Chowdhry, (1909) 13 C. W. N. 556, 16 Cr. L. J. 492.

¹¹ Chotelal v. Phulchand, [1937] Nag. 425.

or acquitted, when the Court has refused sanction under the latter section.¹² The Nagpur High Court has dissented from this view holding that a Court is not justified in refusing process for the offence of defamation merely because a report to the police may also disclose an offence under s. 211.¹³

Jurisdiction.—Where the publication of the defamatory matter is outside British India, the British Courts have no jurisdiction to try the offence.¹⁴ To maintain a prosecution for defamation in a particular Court, there must be a publication of the libel within the local limits of the jurisdiction of that Court. Where the alleged libel was said to be contained in a letter purporting to be written from Bangalore to England, it was held that to maintain a prosecution in the Bangalore Court, there must be evidence that the letter was handed over to somebody at Bangalore to be taken to the addressee or that it was posted at Bangalore.¹⁵ Where a defamatory letter was despatched from Hyderabad to Karachi and was received at Karachi there would be publication at Karachi and hence the Karachi Court has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint with regard to the offence of defamation.¹⁶

Complaint by aggrieved person necessary.—No Court shall take cognizance of the offence except upon a complaint made by the person aggrieved.¹⁷

A charge of defamation not contained in the complaint presented to the Magistrate, but added subsequently by the Magistrate upon statements made by the complainant, is not a legal complaint made by the aggrieved person.¹⁸

The new proviso to s. 198 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down that any person may with the leave of the Court make a complaint on behalf of a woman who ought not to be compelled to appear in public.¹⁹

Husband.—A husband is entitled to be a complainant where the alleged offence is defamation imputing unchastity to his wife.²⁰

Brother.—A brother, with whom lived his widowed sister, a Hindu lady, is entitled to complain about the defamation of his sister.²¹

Brother-in-law.—Where a person prosecuted another for defaming his sister-in-law, it was held that as there was no imputation made against the complainant there was no defamation of him, and his sister-in-law, being the person defamed, ought herself to have made the complaint.²²

President of Municipality.—The president of a Municipality is not a 'person aggrieved' within the meaning of s. 198 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the defamation of his subordinate officers.²³

Official superior.—A complaint made not by the person aggrieved but by his official superior should not be accepted.²⁴

High Priest.—The High Priest of the Borah community, if defamed, must himself file a complaint. The complaint cannot be filed by a member of the community empowered by the Priest.²⁵

Death of complainant.—Where in the course of a trial for defamation the com-

¹² Prafulla Kumar Ghose v. Harendra Nath Chatterjee, (1916) 44 Cal. 970.

¹³ Mst. Pinia, [1937] Nag. 338.

¹⁴ Varnakole Illath Krishnan Nambudri v. Kotalmana Keshavan Embunitri, (1900) 1 Weir 579.

¹⁵ Burke v. Skipp, (1923) 45 M. L. J. 754, 18 L. W. 718, [1923] M. W. N. 913, 25 Cr. L. J. 641, [1924] AIR (M) 340.

¹⁶ Kundanmal, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 105, [1943] AIR (S) 196.

¹⁷ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 198.

¹⁸ Deokinandan, (1887) 10 All. 39.

¹⁹ Sheo Karan Lal v. Bandi Prasad, (1942) 21 Pat. 778.

²⁰ Chotalal Lallubhai v. Nathabhai Bechar, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 665, 25 Bom. 151, F.B., overruling Kustantini, (1887) Cr. R. No. 14 of 1887, Unrep. Cr. C. 327; Chellam Naidu v. Ramasami, (1891) 14 Mad. 379; Anantha Goundan, (1904) 15 M. L. J. 224, 2 Cr. L. J.

381; Appanna v. Akkanna, (1924) 20 L. W. 921, 47 M. L. J. 746, 26 Cr. L. J. 521, [1925] AIR (M) 320; Gurdit Singh, (1924) 5 Lah. 301; Dwijendra Nath v. Makhon Lal, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 123, [1943] AIR (C) 564. In David, (1884) P. R. No. 22 of 1884, the husband prosecuted the accused for defaming himself though the imputation was said to have been made concerning his wife and the former Chief Court of the Punjab held that the conviction could not be sustained.

²¹ Thakur Das Sar v. Adhar Chandra Missri, (1904) 32 Cal. 425.

²² Lakshman, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 392, Cr. R. No. 48 of 1888.

²³ Beauchamp v. Moore, (1902) 26 Mad. 43.

²⁴ Gaya Barhai, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 641, [1923] AIR (O) 4.

²⁵ Hussainbhai Ismailji, (1934) 29 S. L. R. 39, 36 Cr. L. J. 975, [1935] AIR (S) 98.

plainant dies, the Magistrate need not discharge the accused but can continue with the trial. Such a course would ordinarily be desirable where the defamation alleged is against the complainant in his public capacity.¹

Complaint by Court.—A complaint for defamation in respect of a statement made during judicial proceedings can be made by a private person without the sanction of the Magistrate before whom the alleged defamatory statement was made. The Magistrate on his own authority cannot take any initiative under s. 198, Criminal Procedure Code.² The Madras High Court has taken the same view.³

Dismissal of complaint by Court.—A Magistrate cannot dismiss a complaint on oath on the ground that there is a possibility that the accused will be able to shelter himself behind some explanations to the section. All that the Magistrate should direct his attention to at that stage is to ascertain whether there is any reason for disbelieving the complaint on oath and not whether there is some possibility that the accused might have some defence to the complaint, if true.⁴

Sanction to prosecute Judge for words uttered on bench.—The Madras High Court has held that a complaint against a Judge, who has used defamatory language to a witness during the trial of a suit cannot be entertained by a Magistrate in the absence of sanction of Government or the High Court under s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁵ Similarly, the former Chief Court of the Punjab had held that a charge against a Munsiff of using defamatory language while he was sitting in his Court as a Judge and the complainant's case was actually before him could not be entertained by a Magistrate, without the previous sanction of Government.⁶ The Calcutta High Court has, however, decided, where a pleader applied for sanction to prosecute a Magistrate for using defamatory language towards him in the course of a trial of a case, that no such sanction was necessary, unless the Judge or public servant committed an offence in his judicial or official capacity.⁷

Sanction.—A prosecution for defamation of the complainant in a criminal case at the instance of the accused, on the ground that the former had brought a false charge of theft against the latter of which he had been acquitted cannot be refused or quashed on the ground that it had the intention or effect of avoiding s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, when no sanction was asked for or refused.⁸

The sanction of the Court appointing a receiver is not necessary in order to proceed against him for defamation.⁹

Sections 182 and 500.—A complaint for defamation [cannot be dismissed on the technical ground that the offence of defamation charged merged in an offence punishable under s. 182 and that no sanction was obtained for prosecution under the latter section as required by s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁰ Such complaint can be entertained notwithstanding that the accused could have been prosecuted on the same facts under s. 182 on the complaint of a public servant.¹¹ An acquittal on a charge of giving false information to a public servant, under s. 182, on the ground that the person to whom the information was given was not a public servant, is no bar to a trial under s. 500 for defamation.¹² The refusal of an application for sanction to prosecute a party to a judicial proceeding, under ss. 182 and 193, is not a bar, under s. 403, Criminal

¹ U Tin Maung, [1941] Ran. 224.

² Mohammad Isa v. Nazim Husain, [1940] All. 314; Chotelal v. Phulchand, [1937] Nag. 425; Satish Chandra Chakravarty v. Ram Doyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388, s.b.

³ Nallappa Gounden v. Chinnammal, [1942] Mad. 158, overruling Shanmugasundaram Pillai v. Manicka Mudaliar, (1938) 49 L. W. 102, [1939] M. W. N. 192 (1), [1939] 1 M. L. J. 412, Ganapathy Asari v. Kuppuswamy Asari, [1939] 1 M. L. J. 614, [1939] M. W. N. 320, (1939) 46 L. W. 456, 40 Cr. L. J. 757, [1939] AIR (M) 493, and Ramaswami Konar v. Nachiar Ammal, [1940] M. W. N. 867.

⁴ Shreedani Pathak v. Budheshwar Dubey, (1939) 21 P. L. T. 608, 41 Cr. L. J. 504, [1940] AIR (P) 179.

⁵ Gulam Muhammad Sharif-ud-daulah, (1886) 9 Mad. 439.

⁶ Amir Singh, (1904) P. R. No. 29 of 1904, 2 Cr. L. J. 119.

⁷ Nando Lal Basak v. Mitter, (1899) 26 Cal. 852. See Parshram Keshav, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 61, and Lakshman Sakharam, (1877) 2 Bom. 481.

⁸ Guru Prasad v. Rameshwar, (1938) 42 C. W. N. 674.

⁹ Nagendra Nath Srimoney v. Jogendra Nath Srimoney, (1912) 13 Cr. L. J. 491.

¹⁰ Krishna Row v. Appasaewami Aiyar, (1891) 1 Weir 585.

¹¹ U Aung Pe, [1938] Ran. 404, F.B.

¹² Ramsebak Lal v. Muneshwar Singh, (1910) 37 Cal. 604; U Aung Pe, [1938] Ran. 404, F.B.

Procedure Code, to his prosecution for defamation.¹³ Section 500 is not included in the list of sections contained in s. 95 (1) (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁴

Sections 193 and 500.—A complaint by the Court is necessary for a prosecution for an offence under s. 193 and the parties cannot be permitted to evade that provision of law by filing a complaint for defamation.¹⁵

Sections 211 and 500.—Where an offence, though described as an offence under s. 500, still remains an offence “punishable” under s. 211, process should not issue under the former section on the application of a person discharged or acquitted, when the Court has refused sanction under the latter section.¹⁶

Petition containing defamatory allegations against a Magistrate.—Where a prisoner applied to the High Court to be admitted to bail, pending the disposal of his appeal, and the petition contained defamatory allegations, consisting inter alia of irrelevant attacks on the trying Magistrate and other officers in the service of the Government, the Court refused to allow the petition to be filed, and ordered it to be returned.¹⁷

Charge.—In framing a charge it is not necessary to negative the Exceptions contained in this section.¹⁸ But the charge should specify directly the persons whose reputation is injuriously affected.¹⁹ It must set forth the particular occasions on which the defamation was said to have been committed, so as to give the accused an opportunity of defending himself with reference to each act alleged to have been committed by him.²⁰ Where a document alleged to contain defamatory matter contains a multitude of statements it is not correct to incorporate the whole of the document in the charge and thus to leave it to the accused to find out which exactly are the imputations that were intended or believed to cause harm to the reputation of the opposite party.²¹

It should run thus:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, defamed AB, by making or publishing to CD a certain imputation concerning the said AB, to wit (state the defamatory matter), by means of spoken words [or writing or signs or visible representations], intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation would harm the reputation of the said AB; and you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 500 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Destruction of defamatory matter.—Where certain passages in a book were charged to be defamatory and were so found, the proper order is that those passages should be destroyed and an order directing the destruction of the book cannot be sustained.²²

Punishment.—Where abusive words were used by a person about another in the heat of passion owing to a quarrel having taken place between them, the offence was held not to require a severe sentence.²³ But where there is no substantial defence, an immediate apology in the widest and most unreserved terms may fairly be presumed to lessen the punishment.²⁴

The mere circumstance that the accused is not the writer of the article or is a dummy editor is no ground by itself for reduction of the sentence. Ordinarily, a ¹³ Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Poyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388, s.b.; Ghamandi Nath v. Babu Lal, (1929) 51 All. 977.

¹⁴ U Aung Pe, [1938] Ran. 404, F.B.

¹⁵ Kalkumatham Gurubasayya v. Sanna Setra Siddalingappa, [1940] 1 M. L. J. 689, [1940] M. W. N. 392, [1939] 51 L. W. 401, 41 Cr. L. J. 906, [1940] AIR (M) 677.

¹⁶ Prafulla Kumar Ghose v. Harendra Nath Chatterjee, (1916) 44 Cal. 970.

¹⁷ Clive Durant, (1889) 15 Bom. 488.

¹⁸ Kikabhat Parbhudas, (1872) 9 B. H. C.

451.

¹⁹ Weir, 3 Edn., 357.

²⁰ Bishwanath Das v. Keshab Gandhabnaik, (1902) 30 Cal. 402; Ali Mahomed, (1929) 30 Cr. L. J. 1073, [1930] AIR (S) 62.

²¹ Muhammad Gul v. Haji Fazley Karim, (1929) 56 Cal. 1013.

²² Sumitramma v. Krishnamurthi Sastri, [1940] M. W. N. 532.

²³ Maung Maung, (1928) 2 B. L. J. 10.

²⁴ Mohammad Nazir, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 509, 30 Cr. L. J. 766, [1928] AIR (A) 321.

person who for monetary or other consideration allows himself to be used as a 'blind' for concealing the identity of the 'real' editor and thus assists the latter in deceiving the public and defeating the law cannot be heard to argue in mitigation of his guilt that he was a mere figure-head and must bear the full consequence of his acts.²⁵

501. Whoever prints or engraves any matter, knowing or having good reason to believe that such matter is defamatory of any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Printing or engraving matter known to be defamatory.

COMMENT.

This is a distinct offence from the one under s. 500.¹ The person printing or engraving defamatory matter abets the offence. This section makes such abetment a distinct offence.

Ingredients.—This section requires two things:—

1. Printing or engraving of any matter.
2. Knowledge or reason to believe that such matter is defamatory.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the matter in question is defamatory (vide s. 499).

(2) That the accused printed or engraved it.

(3) That when he did so he knew or had reason to believe that such matter was defamatory.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Destruction of libellous matter.—On a conviction under this section the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted.²

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, printed or engraved some matter, to wit—, knowing or having good reason to believe that the same was defamatory, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 501 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (if the case is tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

502. Whoever sells or offers for sale any printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter, knowing that it contains such matter, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter.

COMMENT.

This section supplements the provisions of the previous section by making the seller of defamatory matter punishable under it.

Ingredients.—This section has two essentials:—

1. Selling or offering for sale any printed or engraved substance.
2. Knowledge that such substance contains defamatory matter.

"It is, no doubt, necessary in order to substantiate a charge under s. 502 to prove that the seller of a printed substance knows its contents, which imports proof that he understands the language used, and to prove that its contents are defamatory, but there appears to be no need, if the contents are defamatory, to prove further that he knows them to be defamatory. In cases where it is necessary to prove against a person that he has committed defamation by publishing an imputation, when the matter published is per se defamatory, all that the prosecution is bound to prove, in the first instance, is the fact of publication. When the tendency of the imputation published concerning any person, is to harm the reputation of that person, a Court is fully justified in inferring from the terms of the matter itself that the publisher intended to harm or knew or had reason to believe that such imputation would harm his reputation... But is there no mens rea in the definition of the offence falling under s. 502? The definition requires knowledge that the printed substance sold contains defamatory matter. A person who conducts a business in the course of which he is liable to sell books or papers, or the like, which may contain matter which is injurious to the reputation of another person, and may be in fact defamatory as defined in the Penal Code, is bound by reason of the penalty imposed by this section, if not otherwise, to abstain from selling any book or the like, which to his knowledge contains matter which is defamatory. If he sells in ignorance of the contents, he is not guilty of an offence under this section. If he sells, notwithstanding knowledge of the contents, and the contents are defamatory, he is guilty. The seller in India is, if I rightly understand the English law on the subject, in a better position than persons in England, who, in the course of their business, sell books or paper containing defamatory matter, for the latter are liable criminally as well as civilly, whether or not they know the contents of the printed substance sold".³

²⁵ Azis Ahmad, (1928) 29 Cr. L. J. 684, [1928] AIR (L) 865.

¹ Uma Shankar, (1889) P. R. No. 18 of 1889.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521 (1).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the matter is defamatory (vide s. 494).

(2) That it is printed or engraved on the substance in question.

(3) That the accused sold, or offered for sale, that substance.

(4) That he then knew that it contained such defamatory matter.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Destruction of libellous matter.—See s. 521, Criminal Procedure Code.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, sold or offered for sale any printed (or engraved) substance, to wit—, containing defamatory matter knowing that it contained such matter, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 502 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (if the case is tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

* Per Plowden, J., in Sardar Dayal Singh, (1891) P. R. No. 8 of 1891, at pp. 25, 26.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT AND ANNOYANCE.

503. Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested,¹ with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat,² commits criminal intimidation.

Explanation.—A threat to injure the reputation of any deceased person in whom the person threatened is interested, is within this section.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, for the purpose of inducing B to desist from prosecuting a civil suit, threatens to burn B's house. A is guilty of criminal intimidation.

COMMENT.

Criminal intimidation is closely analogous to extortion. In extortion, the immediate purpose is obtaining money or money's worth; in criminal intimidation, the immediate purpose is to induce the person threatened to do, or abstain from doing, something which he was not legally bound to do or omit.

Ingredients.—This section has the following essentials:—

1. Threatening a person with any injury
 - (i) to his person, reputation, or property; or
 - (ii) to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested.
2. Threat must be with intent
 - (a) to cause alarm to that person, or
 - (b) to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, or
 - (c) to cause that person to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat.

1. 'Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, etc'.—The gist of the offence is the effect which the threat is intended to have upon the mind of the person threatened, and it is clear that before it can have any effect upon his mind it must be either made to him by the person threatening or communicated to him in some way. The threat referred to in this section must be a threat communicated, or uttered with the intention of its being communicated, to the person threatened for the purpose of influencing his mind.¹

The question whether the threat amounts to a criminal intimidation or not, does not depend on the nerves of the individual threatened; if it is such a threat as may overcome the ordinary free will of a firm man, or whatever the nature of the threat, if it is made with the intention mentioned in the section, it is an offence.²

The threat need not be addressed to the prosecutor direct. It is sufficient if the threat, though addressed to third parties, was intended to reach the prosecutor as the party threatened,³ e.g. threat to a person's pleader.⁴ To advise others not to deal with a man is an injurious act but does not amount to a threat, and the harm

¹ Gunga Chunder Sen v. Gour Chunder Banikya, (1888) 15 Cal. 671, 673.

² M. & M. 540.

³ (1865) 1 Weir 622; Palani Goundan, (1892)

1 Weir 623.

⁴ Syed Mahomed v. Sarwarkhan, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 50.

caused thereby is not to property already possessed by that man but rather to his opportunities of future gain.⁵

A firm cannot commit this offence.⁶

'Injury'.—See s. 44, supra. There can be no criminal intimidation where the injury of which complaint is made is the hardship arising from a conventional punishment which a spiritual superior, acting in the exercise of his authority as regulated by the custom of the caste, is competent to inflict.⁷ The harm threatened must be illegal.⁸ A certain President of a self-constituted Arbitration Court caused a notice to be issued over his signature to a certain person requesting the latter to be present on a given date and arrange for amicable settlement of a certain claim. The notice concluded with the statement that if the defendant did not give an answer (or file a written statement) on that date, the suit would be decreed ex parte. It was held that a threat of a decree is a threat of harm to an individual in his person, reputation or property. That the tribunal is incompetent to execute its decree is immaterial. This section says nothing about the capacity of the person making the threat to carry it into execution. Nor does the section say anything about the effect upon the person threatened, and whether or not the complainant knew that the notice was innocuous is equally immaterial. Under s. 44, injury denotes harm illegally caused. By no legal process or means could the Court make or give effect to such a decree as it was the intention of the notice to cause the complainant to believe would be made if he failed to comply with it. Therefore, in that the notice threatened the complainant with such a decree, it threatened the complainant with harm to be caused illegally. The accused was, therefore, held guilty of the offence of criminal intimidation.⁹

'Person'.—That is, the individuality of a human being; individual character or station; bodily...form or substance.

A notice for service was taken to the accused by a constable and when the accused proceeded to write something on it, the constable said that nothing should be written on the back of the notice, except signature in acknowledgment of service. The accused threw away the notice and threatened the constable by saying, "go away, otherwise I shall break your hands and feet. I have seen many such notices". It was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁰

'Reputation'.—That is, credit, honour, character, good name.¹¹

'Or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested'.—In the case of injury to a third person in whom the person threatened is interested, the injury should be to his person or reputation. Injury to the property only of the third person does not come within the purview of the section, though injury to the property of the person threatened does.

2. 'Intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act...as the means of avoiding the...threat'.—The threat must be with intent to cause alarm to that person or to cause that person to do or omit to do any act as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat. See s. 43, supra, for the meaning of 'legally bound to do'.

A letter written by a firm of solicitors on behalf of a lay client, warning a person of criminal proceedings if he continued to make defamatory statements but offering not to take any action if he undertook to discontinue making such statements, does not bring the client under this section or s. 506 of the Code.¹²

Threat of vengeance.—A constable was sent to fetch to a Police Inspector some persons from whom the latter wished to make inquiries regarding an offence. While the constable was taking two persons with him, the accused came up and threatened

⁵ Ghisa Mal, (1888) 1 O. D. 215.

⁶ T. G. Studdert v. J. F. Logan, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 881, 38 Cr. L. J. 924, [1937] AIR (C) 387.

⁷ Sankara Narasimha Bharathi, (1883) 6 Mad. 881.

⁸ Nga Shwe Waing, (1900) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 352.

⁹ Priyanath Gupta v. Lal Jhi Chowkidar,

(1923) 27 C. W. N. 479, 37 C. L. J. 526, 24 Cr. L. J. 896, [1923] AIR (C) 590.

¹⁰ Mohammad Ahmad Khan, [1936] A. L. J. R. 195, 37 Cr. L. J. 212, [1936] AIR (A) 171.

¹¹ Wharton, 14th Edn., p. 871.

¹² T. G. Studdert v. J. F. Logan, (1937) 41 C. W. N. 831, 38 Cr. L. J. 924, [1947] AIR (C) 387.

them both and the constable with the head constable's vengeance, and as a consequence the two persons refused to accompany the constable who had to go without them. It was held that the accused had committed this offence.¹³

Threat of excommunication.—Where the accused told the complainant, a member of their caste, that he should give up his field or else they would put him out of caste, it was held that this offence had not been committed.¹⁴

Threat of killing.—Where the accused and his brother having had a quarrel, the former ran off and fetched a sword, but was seized by other persons and was disarmed, he then asserted his intention of killing his brother if he was let go, it was held that the words used by the accused could not be construed into a threat within the meaning of this section.¹⁵

Threat of imprisonment.—Where the accused went to the complainant, a brother of an adult woman, and told him that he had come from the Government, and would get him six months' imprisonment if he did not let his sister go, it was held that those words did not constitute criminal intimidation, there having been no threat of an injury within the meaning of the Code or any other offence.¹⁶ But where a person held out threats to several persons to get them implicated and imprisoned if they kept to the terms of an ikrarnama (entered into by parties to keep the peace during Moharram festival), he was held guilty of this offence.¹⁷

Threat of dismissal.—Where the accused held out a threat of getting a head constable of police dismissed from service, it was held that this did not amount to a threat of injury as was punishable under this section.¹⁸

Threat of ruining by cases.—Where the accused who threatened to ruin the complainant by cases was convicted of criminal intimidation, it was held that the conviction could not stand. The Court said that had the threat been to ruin the complainant by false cases, the offence would have been committed; but as the threat was to ruin him by cases, it could not be assumed that by cases was meant false cases.¹⁹ A threat, in order to be indictable, must be made with intent to cause alarm to the complainant. Mere vague allegation by the accused that he was going to take revenge by false complaints could not amount to criminal intimidation.²⁰ A threat by a person, who was called upon to pay house-tax under a warrant for the attachment of his brother's property, that he would take legal steps, was not a threat of injury as defined in the Code.²¹

Threat of picketing.—The accused gave a notice to a shopkeeper requiring him to execute an agreement not to import for one year any foreign cloth for sale at his shop and intimating that on his failure to do so his shop would be picketed. At that time picketing was not an offence. The proposed agreement did not prohibit the sale of foreign cloth already in stock. It was held that the accused were guilty of criminal intimidation. Prohibition from importing for one year the articles in which the shop dealt would, in the ordinary course of business, cause injury to the property of the shopkeeper.²²

Threat of social boycott.—Where the conviction of the accused was based only on the two threats uttered by him, viz. (1) that the complainant would be socially boycotted, and (2) that on his death no one would carry his dead body to the place of burial if he continued to deal in foreign cloth, such threats did not amount to offences under this section and the conviction was not sustained. The fact that the complainant was a pious Mahomedan was immaterial.²³

Public servant threatened to draw up false document.—Where the accused in offering resistance to a police-officer compelled him to draw up a document to the ¹³ Purshotam Vanamali, (1896) Unrep. Cr. C. 850, Cr. R. No. 18 of 1896.

¹⁴ Alya Dhurma, (1870) Unrep. Cr. C. 37, Cr. R. August 17, 1870; Fakirappa, (1882) Unrep. Cr. C. 186.

¹⁵ Data Ram, (1882) P. R. No. 45 of 1882.

¹⁶ Moroba Bhaskarji, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 101.

¹⁷ Ata Husain, (1885) 6 A. W. N. 41.

¹⁸ Dada Hanmant Dani, (1895) 20 Bom. 794.

¹⁹ Jowahir Pattak v. Parbhoo Ahir. (1902) 30

Cal. 418; Chithraputtra Pillai v. Parvati, (1896) 1 Weir 623.

²⁰ Govind Raoji Thosur, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 55.

²¹ Dayabhai Narottamdas, (1906) Crim. Ref. No. 67 of 1906. Cor. Batty and Heaton, JJ., decided on November 22, 1906 (Unrep. Bom.).

²² Raghobar Dayal, (1930) 53 All. 407.

²³ Ghulam Muhammad, (1931) 32 Cr. L. J. 1716.

effect that a search was conducted and nothing incriminating was found, it was held that they were guilty of an offence under this section.²⁴

Person informed about threatened injury to another person must be interested in that person.—The accused sent a fabricated petition to the Revenue Commissioner, S. D., containing a threat that a certain Forest Officer would be killed, if he were not removed elsewhere. It was found that the Commissioner had neither official nor personal interest in the Forest Officer. It was held that, as the person to whom the petition was addressed was not interested in the person threatened, the act intended and done by the accused did not amount to criminal intimidation.²⁵ A threat to commit suicide is not within the section unless the other person be interested in the person making the threat.¹

504. Whoever intentionally insults,¹ and thereby gives provocation to any person,² intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace,³ or to commit any other offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section is intended to deal with persons who are as responsible for breaches of the peace or the commission of offences as those who openly abet or incite them.² An imputation not defamatory may be uttered in the hearing of the person who is the object of it, for the purpose of provoking that person to break the public peace. If so, it is punishable under this section. A person also comes within the ambit of the section if the provocation offered by him is of such a character as to cause the person provoked “to commit any other offence.”³ The authors of the Code observe: “There are many cases in which it is fit that unpleasant truth should be told respecting an individual. But there is no case in which it is desirable that such truth should be told in such a way that the telling of it is a gross personal outrage. A person who has detected, or thinks that he has detected, a dishonest misrepresentation in a book has a right to expose it publicly. But he cannot be allowed to intrude into the presence of the author of the book, and to tell him to his face that he is a liar. A person who knows the mistress of a female school to be a woman of infamous character deserves well of society if he states what he knows. But he cannot be allowed to follow her through the streets calling her by opprobrious names, though he may be able to prove that all those names were merited. A person who brings to notice the malversation of a public functionary deserves applause. But a person who hangs a public functionary in effigy at that functionary’s door, with an opprobrious label, does what cannot be permitted, even though every word on the label, and every imputation which the exhibition was meant to convey, may be perfectly true.”⁴

This section provides a remedy for using abusive and insulting language.⁵ It requires an intention to insult and thereby to give provocation to the person insulted and an intention that such provocation should cause or the knowledge that that provocation is likely to cause the person so insulted to break the public peace or commit any other offence.⁶

Sections 499 and 504.—The difference between an offence under s. 504 and s. 499 lies in the fact that in the latter publication to the prosecutor alone is not sufficient, as such an imputation could not be said to harm the reputation of the person; but according to the former this would be a complete offence. Section 504 corresponds ²⁴ Nirmal Singh, (1919) 42 All. 67.

²⁵ Mangesh Jiraji, (1887) 11 Bom. 376.

¹ Nubi Buksh v. Must. Oomra, (1866) P. R. No. 109 of 1866; Chikati Gururadu, (1881) Weir (3rd Edn.) 890.

² Subbiah v. Venkata Subbamma, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 101, [1942] M. W. N. 437, (1942) 55 L. W. 421, 45 Cr. L. J. 10, [1942] AIR (M) 672.

³ Gul Muhammad v. Akbar Ali, (1926) 28 Cr. L. J. 172, [1927] AIR (L) 129 (2); Vaz v. Dias, (1929) 32 Bom. L. R. 103.

⁴ Note R, p. 185.

⁵ See Girish Chunder Mitter v. Jatadhari Sadukhan, (1899) 26 Cal. 653, 663, F.B.

⁶ Chairat Valtam, (1935) 36 Cr. L. J. 1401, [1935] AIR (S) 107 (1).

precisely with those cases in which, under the English law, defamatory matter published to the prosecutor alone would be indictable as libellous.

Ingredients.—This section requires :—

1. Intentional insult.
2. The insult must be such as to give provocation to the person insulted.
3. Intention that such provocation should cause, or knowledge that such provocation was likely to cause, the person so insulted to break the public peace or to commit any other offence.

1. 'Intentionally insults'.—There is nothing in this section which confines the "insult" to spoken words as distinguished from words written in a letter.⁷ An "insult" is no less intentional because it is incidental to another insult or even to another statement or proceeding which is not insulting. But to insult another intentionally is not an offence unless the offender intends by that insult to provoke the other person into breaking the public peace, by assaulting him or getting him assaulted or reviling him in loud or angry tones or in any other way, or at least knows that such a disturbance is a probable result of his insult.⁸ The word 'insult' signifies, to treat with offensive disrespect, to offer indignity to. Such insult may be inferred not merely from the words used, but also from the tone and manner in which the words are spoken.⁹ If the insult alleged consisted of spoken words only, it would be essential that the words should be stated in order to ascertain whether or not the words so used would constitute an insult to the mind of an ordinary person, but insult may arise out of the conduct or action of a man, irrespective of spoken words.¹⁰ An insult even if a gross insult is not an offence in itself under this section.¹¹ The section refers to an insult intentionally inflicted and which is likely to result in a breach of the peace.¹² As to what constitutes an insult depends on the calm, dispassionate opinion of the Judge, whether the act complained of, from its nature and attendant circumstances, was calculated to insult, and was done with intent to insult, the complainant, and it did not depend on the sensitive feelings of the complainant. The offence is not made to depend upon the sensitive feelings or excitable temper of the person insulted, but on the intention or knowledge of the offender. Whatever the previous provocation, a man who pulls the beard of a Mahomedan in a public street, intentionally insults him and thereby causes him provocation, knowing that such provocation is likely to cause a breach of the public peace.¹³ Abusive words.—Mere abuse unaccompanied by an intention to cause a breach of the peace or knowledge that a breach of the peace is likely does not come within this section.¹⁴ If abusive language is used in such circumstances that the Court comes to the conclusion that it cannot possibly have been intended, and cannot have been understood by those to whom it was addressed to have been intended, to be taken literally, the language does not amount to an intentional insult. It may no doubt be that the use of abusive language may form an important part of an insult by conduct.¹⁵ If abusive language is used intentionally and is of such a nature as would, in the ordinary course of events, lead the person insulted to break the peace or to commit another offence under the law, the case is not taken away from the purview of this section, merely because the insulted person exercised self-control, or being terrified by the insult, or overawed by the personality of the offender, did not actually break the peace, or commit another offence.¹⁶ The Court has not to judge the temperament or the idiosyncracies of the individual concerned. The Court should try to find out what, in the ordinary circumstances, would have been the effect of the abusive language used. The mere fact that the complainant was a Bania (belonging to a peaceful com-

⁷ Vaz v. Dias, (1929) 32 Bom. L. R. 108.

⁸ Per Hallifax, A. J. C., in R. M. Siffles v. M. R. Dixit, (1928) 25 Cr. L. J. 1079, 7 N. L. J. 57, [1924] AIR (N) 121; Vaz v. Dias, ibid.

⁹ Jaykrishna, (1916) 24 C. L. J. 187, 188, 21 C. W. N. 95, 97, 18 Cr. L. J. 17.

¹⁰ Habib Khan v. Mazharul Haque, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 463, [1917] AIR (P) 658.

¹¹ Subbiah v. Venkata Subbamma, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 101, [1942] M. W. N. 437, (1942) 55 L. W. 421, 45 Cr. L. J. 10, [1942] AIR (M) 672.

¹² Moti Lal, (1901) 24 All. 155.

¹³ Bhagwan Das v. Saddiq Ahmad, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R. 73, 26 Cr. L. J. 703, [1925] AIR (A) 318.

¹⁴ Vaz v. Dias, supra.

¹⁵ Rangel, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 282, 56 Bom. 196.

¹⁶ Kanshi Ram v. Fazal Mohammad, (1932) 14 Lah. 92; Vaz v. Dias, supra; Subbiah v. Venkata Subbamma, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 101, [1942] M. W. N. 437, (1942) 55 L. W. 421, 45 Cr. L. J. 10, [1942] AIR (M) 672.

munity) was no reason to hold that no breach of the peace could possibly result if he was insulted.¹⁷ Where abusive words are used it is necessary to know what those words are in order to decide whether the using of those words amounted to intentional insult.¹⁸

2. 'Thereby gives provocation to any person'.—It is sufficient if the insult is of a kind calculated to cause the other party to lose his temper and say or do something violent. The public peace can be broken by angry words as well as by deeds.¹⁹

3. 'Intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace'.—An offence under this section does not necessarily involve a breach of the peace. It involves only an intention to provoke a breach of the 'public peace', or knowledge that the provocation given is likely to cause a breach of the peace.²⁰ Mere abuse will not do without an intention to cause breach of the peace or knowledge that a breach of the peace is likely.²¹ The law makes punishable the insulting provocation which, under ordinary circumstances, would cause a breach of the peace to be committed, and the offender is not protected from the consequences of his act because the person insulted does not accept the provocation in the manner intended. Where, therefore, A abused B to such an extent as to reduce B to a state of abject terror, it was held that A having given to B such provocation as would, under ordinary circumstances, have caused a breach of the peace, was guilty of this offence.²² But where the accused, who was one of the proprietors of a hall, came on the stage and remarked, "The contractor has taken away the money. All of them have left. If you ask us for money we will beat you with shoes,"²³ and where the accused said to an Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police, during an investigation, "You are a tyrant. Justice cannot be expected from you,"²⁴ this offence was not committed. The insult again may be of such a character that a person of ordinary temperament would not complain of the abuse and the abuse might come within the terms of s. 95.²⁵

If the provocation is not of such a character as to cause the person provoked to break the public peace or to commit any other offence no offence under this section is committed. Where a furniture dealer was alleged to have insulted a European lady customer by not getting up when she entered into the shop and by refusing to give her some pieces of furniture which her husband had on the previous day asked him to supply on hire, it was held that although his conduct might be very discourteous, rude and insolent, yet that could not be sufficient to bring him within the purview of this section.¹ Where a photographer prepared some prints, at the instance of another person, in which there was a black spot where the picture of the complainant should have appeared but there was no evidence of publication to the complainant, that is to say, there was no evidence to show that the photographer brandished the photograph before the complainant or that he transmitted it to him, it was held that the offence under this section had not been committed by the photographer.²

C A S E S .

Refusal to have social intercourse.—A complaint by certain Hindu goldsmiths, members of a sect known as shumsees, in which it was alleged that the other Hindu inhabitants of the village, in which they resided, refused to have any social intercourse with them, as Hindus, and excluded them from the use of wells used by the Hindus, was held not to be maintainable under this section.³

¹⁷ Guran Ditta, (1930) 31 P. L. R. 892, 32 Cr. L. J. 62, [1930] AIR (L) 344 (2).

¹⁸ Karumuri Venkataratnam, [1947] 1 M. L. J. 359, [1947] M. W. N. 279, 6 L. W. 271, 48 Cr. L. J. 970.

¹⁹ Chunibhai Dahyabhai, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 78.

²⁰ Sadho Ram, (1931) 7 Luck. 578.

²¹ Kuppuswami Aiyar, (1915) 39 Mad. 561; Mahadeo Jagoba v. Ramlal Gowardhan Das, (1984) 85 Cr. L. J. 1420, [1934] AIR (N) 239.

²² Jogayya, (1887) 10 Mad. 353; Sooraparazu Singayya, (1894) 1 Weir 621; Syed Mahomed, (1900) 1 Weir 622; Mi Te, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 290.

²³ Surayya, [1935] M. W. N. 819.

²⁴ Nasir Khan, (1935) 86 Cr. L. J. 1210, [1935] AIR (Pesh.) 122.

²⁵ Vaz v. Dias, (1929) 32 Bom. L. R. 103; Rangel, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 282, 56 Bom. 196; J. Nash Fireman v. Mrs. V. Vanspall, (1935) 37 Cr. L. J. 296, 18 N. L. J. 170.

¹ Rahim Baksh, (1920) 18 A. L. J. R. 515, 21 Cr. L. J. 451, [1920] AIR (A) 10.

² Gaurishanker v. Backha Singh, [1938] P. W. N. 812, 19 P. L. T. 892, 39 Cr. L. J. 980 (1), [1939] AIR (P) 27.

³ Ramditta v. Kirpa Singh, (1882) P. R. No. 8 of 1883.

Abuse.—A police constable asked the complainant not to create any disturbance on a public road. Upon the complainant's declining to do so, he demanded his name and address, which were not given. The constable thereupon called the complainant soowar, and arrested and dragged him to the police-station and detained him there till his name and address were ascertained. It was held that the constable was guilty of an offence under this section.⁴ Where the accused used the expression pelhe moonha se bako (blurt out first) to a police-officer who had been ordered by the District authorities to serve notices upon the shopkeepers of a certain bazaar, and who attempted to serve a notice on the accused, it was held that as the use of the expression was intentionally insulting and likely to provoke a breach of the peace, the accused was guilty of this offence.⁵ Using the words "go to hell" to a person after an altercation with him amounted to this offence.⁶ Calling a man beiman and badmash constituted an offence under this section;⁷ but calling an arora a kirar (vermin) on provocation was too trivial to be an offence.⁸ Where a bill collector in the course of a discussion with another person shouted "shameless fellow, I will shoe you", it was held that this did not amount to an offence under this section.⁹ Where the accused abused another person and her agents in the course of a speech but in their absence, no offence was held to have been committed.¹⁰

The accused was digging earth from a tank whereupon the complainant having objected, the accused filthily abused him. The accused was tried for an offence under this section, and his defence was that the tank was in his possession and belonged to him. The Magistrate held that the complainant had failed to prove his possession of the disputed tank and therefore "the accused was justified under s. 104, Penal Code, in voluntarily causing the harm, i.e. using abusive language" to the complainant; and acquitted the accused, but the acquittal was set aside and a retrial ordered.¹¹

Where the accused deliberately, i.e. intentionally, set themselves to prevent the complainant from irrigating his land, and when remonstrated with, offered abuse and threatened to strike, it was held that although the words of abuse were not set out, an offence under this section was made out, the threat to strike was a threat conveying an intention on the part of the accused that they were desirous of provoking a breach of the peace and amounted to the offering of an insult.¹²

Where the accused wrote an insulting letter to the complainant who was away in another town, it was held that no offence was committed, for it was highly improbable that the complainant would travel a journey in order to create a disturbance.¹³

At a meeting of the shareholders of a company requisitioned by the accused, a proposal was made to expel the accused from the company. The accused became angry at the proposal, and as he was leaving the room of the meeting he muttered: "you damn bloody bastards and cads", which was overheard by some of the members present. The accused having been charged with an offence under this section, it was held that he had committed no offence, for there was no intention to insult, as the words used were not intended to be taken literally but were intended as mere abuse.¹⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused insulted some person.

(2) That he did so intentionally.

(3) That he thereby gave provocation to that person.

(4) That he intended, or knew that it was likely, that such provocation would cause that person to break the public peace, or to commit any other offence.

⁴ Goolab Rasul, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 597.

⁵ Shankar Lal, (1927) 9 Lah. 280.

⁶ Bhimji Naranji Dalal, (1927) Criminal Revision No. 344 of 1927, decided by Fawcett and Mirza, JJ., on December 16, 1927 (Unrep. Bom.).

⁷ Bakhawar Lal, (1922) 23 P. L. R. 137, [1922] AIR (L) 459.

⁸ Muhammad Bakhsh, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 171, [1922] AIR (L) 455.

⁹ Pitchai Pillai v. Ramaswami Aiyangar, [1940] 1 M. L. J. 655 (1), [1940] M. W. N. 300 (2), (1940) 51 L. W. 516, 42 Cr. L. J. 48, [1940] AIR (M) 681.

¹⁰ Sivalinga Prasad, [1941] M. W. N. 373, [1941] 1 M. L. J. 610, (1940) 53 L. W. 566, 42 Cr. L. J. 827, [1941] AIR (M) 683.

¹¹ Rakhai Das Roy v. Kailash Banu, (1909) 11 C. L. J. 113, 11 Cr. L. J. 218.

¹² Habib Khan v. Mazharul Haque, (1917) 18 Cr. L. J. 463, [1917] AIR (P) 658.

¹³ R. M. Siffles v. M. R. Dixit, (1923) 25 Cr. L. J. 1079, 7 N. L. J. 57, [1924] AIR (N) 121.

¹⁴ Rangel, (1931) 34 Bom. L. R. 282, 56 Bom. 196.

Where the words which constitute the insult are not found or disclosed a conviction under this section cannot be sustained.¹⁵

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

The offence under this section can be tried by the summary procedure, but the rules laid down for the trial of warrant cases must be adopted in the absence of any rules under the summary procedure chapter modifying it. Failure to ask the accused to state at the commencement of the hearing of the case whether he wishes to cross-examine and, if so, which of the prosecution witnesses whose evidence has been taken, is a serious irregularity.¹⁶

Security for keeping the peace.—Security can be demanded under s. 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code when a person is convicted under this section, according to the Bombay¹⁷ and the Allahabad¹⁸ High Courts; but not according to the Calcutta¹⁹ and the Madras²⁰ High Courts.

Charge.—The failure of the Magistrate to specifically mention the objectionable words in the charge does not vitiate the trial where the accused has not in any way been prejudiced by such omission.²¹

It should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc..) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, intentionally insulted and thereby gave provocation to—, intending (or knowing it to be likely) that such provocation will cause the said person to break the public peace (or to commit the offence of—), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 504 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Statements conducting to public
mischief.

505. Whoever makes, publishes or circulates any statement, rumour or report,—

(a) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, any officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of Her Majesty or in the Imperial Service Troops to mutiny or otherwise disregard or fail in his duty as such; or

(b) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, fear or alarm to the public or to any section of the public whereby any person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity;¹ or

(c) with intent to incite, or which is likely to incite, any class or community of persons to commit any offence against any other class or community;²

shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—It does not amount to an offence, within the meaning of this section, when the person making, publishing or circulating ¹⁵ Sugartham Ammal v. Vedavalli Ammal, [1940] M.W.N. 389.

¹⁶ Subbiah v. Venkata Subbamma, [1942] 2 M. L. J. 101, [1942] M. W. N. 437, (1942) 55 L. W. 421, 45 Cr. L. J. 10, [1942] AIR (M) 672.

¹⁷ Sayed Yacoub, (1918) 21 Bom. L. R. 270, 43 Bom. 554.

¹⁸ Manik Rai, (1911) 33 All. 771.

¹⁹ Arun Samania, (1902) 30 Cal. 366; Asoke Prasanna Bal, (1930) 34 C. W. N. 651, 32 Cr. L. J. 359, [1930] AIR (C) 802.

²⁰ Muthiah Chetti, (1905) 29 Mad. 190.

²¹ Shankar Lal, (1927) 9 Lah. 280.

any such statement, rumour or report, has reasonable grounds for believing that such statements, rumour or report is true and makes, publishes or circulates it without any such intent as aforesaid.³

COMMENT.

This section was substituted by the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act (IV of 1898). The Select Committee in their Report said: "We have inserted the clause proposed by the Government, but we have altered and enlarged the scope of the Exception to the clause. No doubt the statements, rumours and reports referred to are of a highly mischievous character, but, having regard to the conditions, under which modern journalism and the discussion of public questions are necessarily carried on, we think that, when the statement, rumour, or report is published without any criminal intent, it is going too far to require the person who published it to prove its actual truth. To require such proof might be throwing an impossible burden upon him, and it should be sufficient for him to show that he had reasonable grounds for believing it, as for instance, by showing that he made due inquiry before he published it".²²

In explaining the scope of this section, the Law Member in charge of the Bill said: "In s. 505 the Select Committee have made a considerable modification. As the clause now stands, I think it need cause no apprehension to any speaker or journalist who acts in good faith. It must be borne in mind that the clause does not strike at mischievous and mendacious reports generally. It is aimed only at reports calculated to produce mutiny or to induce one section of the population to commit offences against another. If a man takes upon himself to circulate such a report, he surely cannot complain if he is asked to show that his intentions were innocent, and that he had reasonable grounds for believing the report".²³

This section instead of being inserted in Chapter VII, which deals with offences relating to the Army, Navy, or Air Force, appears in this Chapter, apparently because the repealed section contained some of the provisions contained in the present section and was not limited to offences relating to the Army, Navy or Air Force.

This section deals with the liberty of the subject and must be construed very strictly in favour of the defence.²⁴

1. Clause (b).—Under this clause the fear or alarm should be caused in such circumstances as to render it likely that a person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity.²⁵

As to 'offences against the State', see Chapter VI, supra.

2. Clause (c).—This clause is directed towards preventing clashes between real classes and real communities and not purely imaginary people. A speech by which the speaker is trying to foment a strike, when no strike has yet been started, and is attempting to incite prospective strikers against what are commonly known as black-legs, does not come under this clause, but under s. 117.¹

3. 'Without any such intent as aforesaid'.—If the statement, rumour, or report is true and is published without any such intent as is specified in cl. (a), (b) or (c) a conviction cannot lie. Where the writer of an article complained in a sober language free from exaggeration and incisive comments for the consideration of public officers and others concerned with a view to their taking necessary action to prevent a repetition of what had previously taken place and the article contained no such statement, expression or comment, as might fall within the purview of this section, it was held that he could not be convicted.²

Amendments.—The words "or airman" and "or Air Force" were inserted by the Repealing and Amending Act (X of 1927). The words "or in the Royal Indian Marine" after the words "His Majesty" in cl. (a) were omitted by s. 2 and sch. of Act XXXV of 1934.

²² Gazette of India, 1898, Part V, p. 14.

²³ Ibid., Part VI, p. 26.

²⁴ Shib Nath Banerji, [1937] 1 Cal. 309.

²⁵ Manbir, (1898) 3 C. W. N. 1.

¹ Shib Nath Banerji, [1937] 1 Cal. 309.

² Deshbandhu Gupta, (1924) 25 Cr. L. J. 976; [1924] AIR (L) 502.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, published or circulated the statement, rumour, or report, in question.

(2) That he did so with intent to cause, or which was likely to cause, some officer, soldier, sailor, or airman, to mutiny or otherwise disregard or fail in his duty as such.

(3) That such officer, soldier, sailor, or airman belonged to the Army, Navy or Air Force of His Majesty or to the Imperial Service Troops.

Or prove (1) as above; and

(2) that he did so with intent to cause or which was likely to cause fear or alarm to the public or to some section of the public.

Or prove (1) as above; and

(2) that he did so with intent to incite, or which was likely to incite, some class or community of persons to commit some offence against some other class or community.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Sanction.—Previous sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or published, or circulated), a statement (or rumour, or report), to wit—, with intent to cause, or which was likely to cause, any officer (or soldier, or sailor, or airman), in the Army (or Navy, or Air Force of His Majesty, or in the Imperial Service Troops), to mutiny (or disregard or fail in his duty), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 505 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

If the offence falls within cl. (b) then substitute the following for the second para. of the above charge:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or published, or circulated), a statement (or rumour, or report) with intent to cause, or which was likely to cause, [fear or alarm to the public (or to any section of the public, to wit—)], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 505 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

If the offence falls within cl. (c) then substitute the following for the second para. of the charge:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or published, or circulated), a statement (or rumour, or report) with intent to cause, or which was likely to incite any class or community of persons (viz., specify the class or community) to commit any offence against another class or community (viz. specify the class or community), and thereby committed an offence against s. 505 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

506. Whoever commits the offence of criminal intimidation Punishment for criminal intimidation.

shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both;

and if the threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, or to cause

If threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.

the destruction of any property by fire, or to cause an offence punishable with death or transportation, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or to impute unchastity to a woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

* Criminal Procedure Code, s. 108. See also Swami Dayal, (1907) P. R. No. 8 of 1908, 7 Cr.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the offence of criminal intimidation as defined in s. 503.

CASE.

Where an accused person issued a notice, signed by himself as president of a self-constituted Arbitration Court, to complainant calling on him to appear on a certain date and answer a claim brought against him, failing which an ex parte decree would be passed against him, it was held that the statement in the notice that a decree would be passed in the event of the complainant failing to appear as directed amounted to a threat to harm the person's reputation or property and constituted this offence. The Court remarked: "The learned Sessions Judge has compared the petitioner's action to that of a bully who threatens to shoot a person though he has no license to carry fire-arms. To my mind a better comparison would be that of a person who holds an unloaded pistol at the head of another. The fact that the pistol was unloaded would be no defence to a charge of criminal intimidation if the person threatened was ignorant of this fact. The use of the word 'decree' in the notice implies that an order passed by the Arbitration Court would be enforced. Though the Court had no legal power to enforce its decree, a person in the position of [complainant] would naturally fear that it would be enforced by illegal methods".⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused threatened some person.

(2) That such threat consisted of some injury to his person, reputation or property; or to the person, reputation or property of some one in whom he is interested.

(3) That he did so with intent to cause alarm to that person; or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or omit to do any act which he is legally entitled to do as a means of avoiding the execution of such threat.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class. If threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Separate conviction.—If a person at one time criminally intimidates three different persons and each of those persons brings a separate charge against him the accused may be convicted of an offence as against each person, and be punished separately for each offence.⁵

Withdrawal of prosecution.—Although an offence under the latter portion of this section cannot be legally compounded under s. 345, Criminal Procedure Code, yet a withdrawal from the prosecution may be allowed in a proper case.⁶

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed criminal intimidation by threatening AB with injury to his person [or reputation, or property] with intent to cause alarm to the said AB [or to cause him to do (specify the act intended to be done) or to omit (specify the act intended to be omitted)]; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 506 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to Burma, see the Burma Laws Act, 1898, s. 4 (3) (b) and sch. II. Deterrent punishment should not be passed unless there was any marked popular excitement creating or likely to create breaches of the public peace or public tumult or disorder.⁷

⁴ Per Newbould, J., in Priyanath Gupta v. Lal Jhi Chowkidar, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 479, 481, 87 C. L. J. 526, 529, 24 Cr. L. J. 396, 397, [1923] AIR (C) 590.

⁵ Goolzar Khan, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 80.

⁶ Vithoba, (1887) Unrep. Cr. C. 330, Cr. R. No. 20 of 1887; see Devama, (1875) 1 Bom. 64.

⁷ Gossain Missir, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 596, 22 Cr. L. J. 679.

507. Whoever commits the offence of criminal intimidation by any anonymous communication, or having taken precaution to conceal the name or abode of the person from whom the threat comes, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, in addition to the punishment provided for the offence by the last preceding section.

Criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication.

COMMENT.

This section acts as a corollary to s. 506. If the criminal intimidation is by an anonymous letter, or by a letter signed with a false name, the offence will be subject to higher punishment under this section as it causes great alarm to the recipient of the letter.

For a conviction under this section it must be shown that the accused committed criminal intimidation by using threats of injury which he was in a position to put into execution. The injury need not be one to be inflicted the himself personally, but it is enough if he can cause it to be inflicted by another. Hence a person who extorts money by sending anonymous letters as if from God, conveying threats of Divine punishment if a specified sum of money be not paid to a certain person identifiable by the description given in the letters, cannot be convicted under this section as it does not lie in his power either to inflict the threatened punishment, or cause it to be inflicted.^a

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as those for s. 506; and show further that the offence was committed by some anonymous communication from the accused.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—See s. 506.

508. Whoever voluntarily¹ causes or attempts to cause any person to do anything which that person is not legally bound to do,² or to omit to do anything which he is legally entitled to do, by inducing or attempting to induce that person to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered by some act of the offender an object of Divine displeasure³ if he does not do the thing which it is the object of the offender to cause him to do, or if he does the thing which it is the object of the offender to cause him to omit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Act caused by inducing person to believe that he will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A sits dhurna at Z's door with the intention of causing it to be believed that, by so sitting, he renders Z an object of Divine displeasure. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A threatens Z that, unless Z performs a certain act, A will kill one of A's own children, under such circumstances that the killing would be believed to render Z an object of Divine displeasure. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.

This section is "intended to prevent such practices as those known among the natives by the names of Dhurna and Traga".^a

1. 'Voluntarily'.—See s. 39, supra.

2. 'Legally bound to do'.—See s. 43, supra.

3. 'By some act of the offender an object of Divine displeasure'.—"It must be shown that the respondent [accused] threatened to do a future act or illegally to omit to do an act, and that by such threat he induced or attempted to induce the person threatened to believe that by that act or illegal omission the person threatened, or some one in whom the person threatened was interested, would become an object of Divine displeasure".¹⁰

It is necessary that there should be some act contemplated to be done in future by the offender. The words "by some act of the offender" should be read along with the expressions "will become" and "will be rendered" in the section.¹¹ A mere threat at large that if a debt is not paid, then, by operation of divine laws, displeasure will fall upon the debtor is not sufficient to attract this section, because it contemplates that the person intended to be harmed will be made the object of Divine displeasure by some act of the offender.¹²

A person who is excommunicated does not become an object of Divine displeasure by the act of the priest who pronounces the sentence.¹³

Illustration (a).—This illustration does not mention the thing which it is the object of the offender to cause to be done or omitted. Suppose his object to be the enforcing of a just claim, as if a creditor who has repeatedly in vain urged his debtor to pay him, finding that he has no chance of recovering his money without a troublesome and expensive law-suit, attempts the mode of recovery by sitting dhurna, the creditor may in such a case have adopted improper means for enforcing his just claims, but he does not attempt to cause a person to do what such person is not legally bound to do.¹⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused caused, or attempted to cause, some person (a) to do something that he was not legally bound to do, or (b) to omit to do something that he was legally entitled to do.

(2) That he did so voluntarily.

(3) That he so caused, or attempted to cause, such person to do as above by inducing or attempting to induce him to believe that he or some one whom he has an interest in, would become, or be rendered, an object of Divine displeasure, if he failed to do, etc.

(4) That he induced such person to believe that such Divine displeasure would arise from some act of the accused.

(5) That the object of the accused was thereby to cause such person to so do or to so omit to do, such thing.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, voluntarily caused [or attempted to cause] AB, to do something which the said AB was not legally bound to do, to wit—, by inducing [or attempting to induce] the said AB to believe that he [or some person in whom he was interested] would become by your act, to wit—, an object of Divine displeasure, if the said AB did not do the said thing which it was your object to cause him to do, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 508 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

509. Whoever; intending to insult the modesty of any woman,¹ utters any word, makes any sound or gesture, or exhibits any object,² intending that such word or sound shall be heard, or that such gesture or object shall be seen, by such woman, or intrudes upon the privacy of such woman,³ shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Word, gesture or act intended to insult the modesty of a woman.

¹⁰ Sankara Narasimha Bharathi, (1883) 6 Mad. 381, 394; Mhadnack, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 376.

¹¹ Doraswamy Ayyar, (1924) 47 Mad. 774.

¹² Tanumal, [1943] Kar. 146.

¹³ DeCruz, (1884) 8 Mad. 140.

¹⁴ M. & M. 453.

COMMENT.

Ingredients.—This section requires the following essentials :—

1. Intention to insult the modesty of a woman.

2. The insult must be caused

(i) by uttering any word, or making any sound or gesture, or exhibiting any object intending that such word or sound shall be heard or that the gesture or object shall be seen by such woman, or

(ii) by intruding upon the privacy of such woman.

1. 'Intending to insult the modesty of any woman'.—This section makes intention to insult the modesty of a woman the essential ingredient of the offence.¹⁵ There must be some individual woman or women whose modesty has been outraged. It does not require the woman, whose modesty it is intended to insult, to have either heard the word or seen the action. The intention of the offender that she should see or hear is all that is required. The law allows such intention to be presumed. It will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and of surrounding circumstances.¹⁶ If a man attempts to attract the attention of a woman persistently and publicly and by unusual methods, thereby causing resentment and annoyance, he is very close upon insulting the woman.

The word 'modesty' does not lead only to the contemplation of sexual relationship of an indecent character. The section includes indecency, but does not exclude all other acts falling short of downright indecency.

If a man, intending to outrage the modesty of a woman, exposes his person indecently to her, or uses obscene words intending that she would hear them or exhibits to her obscene drawings, he commits this offence. If such an act is done in a public place it will amount to public nuisance. If it amounts to an assault it will be punishable under s. 354.

2. 'Exhibits any object'.—The word 'exhibit' does ordinarily express the idea of actually showing a thing to a person. On the other hand such showing need not be immediate. 'Exhibit' is practically equivalent to the word 'expose', and a thing can be exhibited or exposed to a person, although at first it may be wrapped in something which prevents that person from actually seeing the object contained in the wrapper.¹⁷ 'Exhibits' means 'displays or causes to be seen' at a place not necessarily a public place.¹⁸ Sending by post a letter containing indecent overtures to a woman comes within the words "exhibits any object".¹⁹

3. 'Intrudes upon the privacy of such woman'.—To constitute intrusion upon the privacy of a woman, the intruder must be "intending to insult the modesty of such woman". The opening words of the section relate to and qualify each one of the acts subsequently mentioned in the section.²⁰

A man can intrude on the privacy of a woman in a public place. Every one carries about with him, even in public, his own privacy, whether it be of thought or person. No one can break in upon another's reflections and society without intruding upon his privacy. It is usually among polite people to beg pardon for doing so.

If the intrusion upon the woman's privacy is by entering her house or rooms, etc., the offence will fall within the definition of 'criminal trespass'.

CASES.

Intrusion upon privacy.—The accused in the middle of the night effected an entry in a room occupied by four women. On an alarm being given and an attempt made to capture him he escaped. He was charged with an offence under s. 456 of the Code. It was held that the act of the accused amounted to an intrusion on privacy within the meaning of this section, and that, therefore, the intent to commit an offence within the meaning of s. 441 was made out.²¹ Where the accused entered ¹⁵ Phiaz Mahamad, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 502.

¹⁶ Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391.

¹⁷ Per Fawcett, J., in Tarak Das Gupta, (1925) 28 Bom. L. R. 99, 100, 56 Bom. 246, 248.

¹⁸ Per Madgavkar, J., in ibid., p. 101, and p. 249.

¹⁹ Per Madgavkar, J., in ibid., p. 101, and

p. 249.

²⁰ Thomas Hopper, (1892) P. R. No. 6 of 1892; Lajje Ram, (1898) P. R. No. 12 of 1898; Phiaz Mahamad, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 502.

²¹ Premamundo Shaha v. Brindaban Chung, (1895) 22 Cal. 994; Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram, (1894) 22 Cal. 391.

in the middle of the night, into the room of the complainant, with whom he had previous acquaintance and who used to speak to strangers and give pan supari to visitors, it was held that this offence had not been committed.²²

The accused followed in his carriage the complainant's unmarried daughter at various places, and laughed and grinned and stared at her while passing and re-passing in his carriage, and stood up in it and shouted her name and so on. He was convicted under this section, and the High Court, in confirming the conviction, observed: "We do not think it proper to draw subtle distinctions to show that these acts do not amount to outraging the modesty of a woman and encroaching upon her privacy. Especially in this country, where women are trying to come out in public, it would be making a farce of the law, if we were to say that the conduct of the appellant did not amount to an offence and that the Magistrate has taken an incorrect view of the section of the Indian Penal Code under which the accused had been convicted and sentenced".²³ These observations were quoted with approval in a case in which the accused, a University graduate, sent by post to the complainant, an English nurse, a letter containing indecent overtures and suggesting that the complainant should take certain action in order to show whether she accepted the terms mentioned in the letter. The complainant informed the police, and in consequence of what they did, the accused was found to be the person who had sent the letter. It was held that in the circumstances an inference arose that the accused intended to insult the modesty of the complainant.²⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused uttered the words, or made the sound or gestures, etc., in question.

(2) That such word, sound, or gesture was intended by the accused to be heard or seen by some woman.

(3) That he thereby intended to insult the modesty of that woman.

There must be some individual woman whose modesty has been outraged and there must be an allegation in the complaint that the action complained of has insulted the modesty of a particular woman or women and not merely of any class or order or section of women. It is however not necessary that the individual woman or women should herself or themselves make a complaint.²⁵

Or prove—

(1) That the accused intruded upon the privacy of some woman.

(2) and (3) as above.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when permission is given by the Court before which the prosecution is pending—Triable by Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, intending to insult the modesty of AB, uttered the words, to wit—(or made some sound or gesture, to wit—, or exhibited some object, to wit—,) intending that the same shall be heard [or seen] by the said AB, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 509 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

510. Whoever, in a state of intoxication appears in any public place, or in any place which it is a trespass in him to enter,¹ and there conducts himself in such a manner as to cause annoyance to any person,² shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to twenty-four hours, or with fine which may extend to ten rupees, or with both.

²² Piaz Mahamad, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 502.

²³ Mahamad Kassam Chisty, (1911) Criminal Appeal No. 454 of 1910, decided on January 18, 1911, per Chandavarkar and Heaton, JJ., (Unrep. Bom.).

²⁴ Tarak Das Gupta, (1925) 23 Bom. L. R. 99, 50 Bom. 246.

²⁵ Khair Mahomed, (1924) 19 S. L. R. 87, 26 Cr. L. J. 904, [1925] AIR (S) 271.

COMMENT.

The immunity from punishment which the Code, through motives of humanity and justice, allows to persons mentally affected, is not extended to him who commits an offence through drunkenness; he shall not be excused, because his incapacity arose from his own default, but is answerable equally as if he had been when the act was done, in the full possession of his faculties, a principle of law which is embodied in the familiar adage, qui peccat ebrius luat sobrius (let him who sins when drunk be punished when sober).

Under the Police Act¹ cases of drunkenness are often punished, and the provisions of this section are rarely applied.

Ingredients.—This section requires two essentials:—

1. Appearance of a person in a state of intoxication in
 - (i) any public place, or
 - (ii) any place which it is a trespass in him to enter.
2. The person so appearing must have conducted himself in such a manner as to cause annoyance to any person.

1. 'In a state of intoxication appears in any public place, or any place which it is a trespass in him to enter'.—The person must be in a state of intoxication caused by liquor or other drinks or drugs. As to the meaning of 'public place', see s. 294, supra; and as to 'trespass', see s. 411, supra.

2. 'Conducts himself in such a manner as to cause annoyance to any person'.—Mere intoxication is not made punishable. It is only when a person appears, in a state of drunkenness, in a public place, as in a street, or goes to a place where he has no right to go, and causes annoyance to the people, that he commits this offence.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused appeared in some public place, or some place which it was a trespass in him to enter.

(2) That he was then in a state of intoxication.

(3) That he conducted himself in such a manner as to cause annoyance to some person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

A private citizen has the right to arrest under the common law any person as to whom there is reasonable apprehension that he would commit a breach of the peace. The accused, a Village Magistrate, arrested a man who was very drunk and who had torn the sacred thread of a person and had bit the accused in the foot. The accused was convicted under s. 341 for wrongful restraint. It was held, quashing the conviction, that there was ample justification for the accused, not as a Village Magistrate but as a private citizen, to put a restraint upon the drunken and disorderly person who was not only threatening to commit a breach of the peace but was a danger to the other villagers.²

¹ Act V of 1861, s. 34 (6).

² Ramaswami Ayyar, (1921) 44 Mad: 918.

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT OFFENCES.

511. Whoever attempts to commit an offence punishable by this Code¹ with transportation or imprisonment,² or to cause such an offence to be committed,³ and in such attempt does any act towards the commission of the offence,⁴ shall, where no express provision is made by this Code⁵ for the punishment of such attempt, be punished with transportation or imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term of transportation or imprisonment which may extend to one-half of the longest term⁶ provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A makes an attempt to steal some jewels by breaking open a box, and finds after so opening the box, that there is no jewel in it. He has done an act towards the commission of theft, and therefore is guilty under this section.

(b) A makes an attempt to pick the pocket of Z by thrusting his hand into Z's pocket. A fails in the attempt in consequence of Z's having nothing in his pocket. A is guilty under this section.

COMMENT.

This is a general provision dealing with attempts to commit offences not made punishable by other specific sections. It makes punishable all attempts to commit offences punishable with transportation or imprisonment and not only those punishable with death, or transportation for life.¹

By s. 10 of the Indian Army (Amendment) Act (XI of 1918) a similar provision is inserted in the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911) as s. 39A.

Scope.—According to the Allahabad High Court this section does not apply to attempts to commit murder which are fully and exclusively provided for by s. 307.² The Bombay High Court has, however, held otherwise in a case³ which has been doubted in a later case.⁴ The former Chief Court of the Punjab had laid down that this section was “in terms much wider than s. 307. Under the last mentioned section [s. 307] the act done must... be one capable of causing death, and it must also be the last proximate act necessary to constitute the completed offence; under s. 511 the act may be any act in the course of the attempt towards commission of the offence”.⁵

This section does not apply to cases of dacoity.⁶

Stages of crime.—In every crime, there is, first, intention to commit; secondly, preparation to commit it; thirdly, attempt to commit it. If the third stage, that is, attempt, is successful, then the crime is complete. If the attempt fails the crime is not complete but the law punishes the person attempting the act. An ‘attempt’ is made punishable, because every ‘attempt’, although it fails of success, must create alarm, which of itself is an injury, and the moral guilt of the offender is the same as if he had succeeded. Moral guilt must be united to injury in order to justify punishment; as the injury is not as great as if the act had been committed, only half the punishment is awarded.⁷

Every attempt to commit a felony or misdemeanour is under common law a misdemeanour.

¹ Dost Mohammad, [1945] Lah. 403, 406.

² Niddha, (1891) 14 All. 38; Tulsha, (1897) 20 All. 143.

³ Cassidy, (1867) 4 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 17.

⁴ Vasudeo Gogte, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 571,

578, 56 Bom. 434.

⁵ Per Rattigan, J., in Jiwan Das, (1904) P. R. No. 30 of 1904, p. 86, 1 Cr. L. J. 1078.

⁶ Koonce, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 48.

⁷ Livingstone.

An attempt to commit a crime is to be distinguished from an intention to commit it ; and from preparation made for its commission.⁸

1. Intention.—Intention is the direction of conduct towards the object chosen upon considering the motives which suggest the choice.⁹ But the law will not take notice of an intent without an act.¹⁰ Mere intention to commit an offence, not followed by any act, cannot constitute an offence.¹¹ The “will is not to be taken for the deed” unless there be some external act which shows that progress has been made in the direction of it, or towards maturing and effecting it. Intention can only be proved by acts, as “juries cannot look into the breast of criminals”.

It is a rule laid down by Lord Mansfield that “so long as an act rests in bare intention it is not punishable by our laws : but immediately when an act is done, the law judges, not only of the act done, but of the intent with which it is done ; and if it is coupled with an unlawful and malicious intent, though the act itself would otherwise have been innocent, the intent being criminal, the act becomes criminal and punishable”.¹² When “a man is charged with doing an act [that is, wrongful act without any legal justification], of which the probable consequence may be highly injurious, the intention is an inference of law resulting from the doing the act”.¹³

Although there is no presumption that a person intends what is merely a possible result of his action or a result which, though reasonably certain, is not known to him to be so, still, it must be presumed that when a man voluntarily does an act knowing at the time that in the natural course of events a certain result will follow he intends to bring about that result.¹⁴

2. Preparation.—Preparation consists in devising or arranging the means or measures necessary for the commission of the offence. It differs widely from attempt which is the direct movement towards the commission after preparations are made.¹⁵ Where a man, having a wife living, caused the banns of marriage between himself and a woman to be published, it was held that he could not be punished for an attempt to commit bigamy, because the act of causing the publication of the banns of marriage was an act done in the preparation to marry, but did not amount to an attempt to marry. The accused might, before any ceremony of marriage was commenced, have willed not to carry out his criminal intention of marrying her.¹⁶ The provisions of the section do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation.¹⁷

Preparation to commit an offence is punishable only when the preparation is to commit offences under s. 122 (waging war against the King-Emperor) and s. 399 (preparation to commit dacoity).

Preparation may amount to an abetment.¹⁸ But preparation to commit an offence which leads to nothing does not amount to an abetment under s. 109.¹⁹

The question whether a certain act is merely one of preparation or one committed in the course of an attempt is a question of fact.²⁰

Purchasing of stamp-paper.—Mere purchasing of a stamp-paper in the name of the person whose name it was intended to forge, did not constitute an attempt.²¹ But in a subsequent case, on similar facts, the same High Court has held otherwise. M instigated Z to personate C and to purchase in C's name certain stamped paper, in consequence of which the vendor of the stamped paper endorsed C's name on such paper as the purchaser of it. M acted with the intention that such endorsement might be used against C in a judicial proceeding. It was held that the offence of fabricating ⁸ Peterson, (1876) 1 All. 316, 317.

⁹ Stephen's General View of the Criminal Law of England, p. 69 (2nd Edn.).

¹⁰ Dugdale, (1853) 1 E. & B. 435.

¹¹ Baku, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 678, 24 Bom. 287.

¹² Scofield, (1874) Cald. 297, 403.

¹³ Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in Dixon, (1814) 3 M. & S. 11, 15; Hicklin, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 360, 375; Martin, (1881) 8 Q. B. D. 54, 58; Lovett, (1889) 9 C. & P. 462.

¹⁴ Luxman Raghunath, (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 280, 26 Bom. 558.

¹⁵ Lakshumi Prasad, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 108, [1923] AIR (P) 307; Jain Lal, (1942) 21 Pat.

L. C.—82

667, [1923] AIR (P) 307.

¹⁶ Peterson, (1876) 1 All. 316; Padala Venkatasami, (1881) 3 Mad. 4, 5. See C. Srinivasan, (1902) 25 Mad. 726.

¹⁷ Ramsarun Chowbey, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 46, 48.

¹⁸ See Padala Venkatasami, supra.

¹⁹ Surat Bahadur alias Bharthi, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 362, 25 Cr. L. J. 1162, [1925] AIR (O) 158.

²⁰ R. MacCrea, (1893) 15 All. 173.

²¹ Ramsarun Chowbey, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 46. See Gulab Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 688, 17 Cr. L. J. 481, [1916] AIR (A) 141.

false evidence had been actually committed, and that M was properly convicted of abetting the commission of such offence.²² The former case was distinguished on the following grounds: "The endorsement of the stamp-vendor forms no part of the document which it may be assumed it was the intention of the person who procured the endorsement to make on the face of the stamp-paper. The offence of forgery had therefore not proceeded beyond the stage of preparation, but in the case now before the Court there had been an actual fabrication: something had been done. It is true that no judicial proceeding had been instituted, but the petitioner's pleader is unable to suggest any other object for which the false endorsement should have been procured. The petitioner had undoubtedly threatened Chatter Singh that he would make him pay Rs. 50. He could not have carried out his threat without the intervention of the Court. The object of the endorsement made by the vendor of a stamp is to afford proof of the person to whom it is sold, and in suits brought on documents written on stamp-paper it is the usual course, when the execution of the documents is denied, to advert to the endorsement and to the stamp-vendor's memory assisted by the endorsement as evidence of the person to whom the stamp was sold, and therefore as evidence of the probability that the document was made by the person by whom the paper was procured. I do not say that in the case cited the accused should have been discharged. Had the point been taken the Court might have held the accused guilty of the offence of which the petitioner has been convicted, but I am of opinion that in the case before the Court the evidence for the prosecution warranted the inference that the petitioner procured the false endorsement for the purpose of thereafter using it in a judicial proceeding, and consequently that the conviction is not open to the objection taken to it".²³

In another case, C, calling himself K, went to a stamp-vendor, accompanied by a man named Kalyan, and purchased from him in the name of K a stamp-paper. The two men then went to a petition-writer, and C again giving his name as K, they asked the petition-writer to write for them a bond for Rs. 50, payable by K to Kalyan. The petition-writer commenced to write the bond, but, his suspicions having been aroused, did not finish it, but took C and Kalyan to the nearest police-station. It was held that Kalyan was guilty of an attempt to commit the offence under s. 467, and C of abetment of the said attempt.²⁴ Ramsarun's case was distinguished on the ground that nothing was written on the stamp-paper in that case.

False document.—In a case the Madras High Court arrived at the same conclusion as that in Ramsarun's case. The accused had conspired with other persons to prepare a document purporting to be a valuable security which he knew would be a false document, and be used for the purposes of fraud. He for that end prepared a draft which he was about to copy on an old stamp-paper produced for the purpose, and applied to a witness to supply the Telugu date corresponding to the English date which the document was to contain. It was held that the accused had not passed beyond the stage of preparation, and was not guilty of an attempt to forge. The Court, however, convicted him of abetment.²⁵

In a Calcutta case, a person gave orders for the printing of certain receipt forms similar to those used by the Bengal Coal Company, and corrected the proofs of the same, it being his intention to use the receipt forms in order to commit a fraud. It was held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document, that until a form had been converted into a document, all that was done consisted in mere preparation for the commission of an offence. Garth, C. J., said: "In my opinion, the printed form was not in itself a false document, and that it would not have become a false document, or part of a document (according to the definition in s. 464) until the seal or signature of the Bengal Coal Company had been forged upon it, so as to make it appear that such seal or signature was that of the Bengal Coal Company. The prisoner, therefore, would not be guilty of the offence of forgery until the printed form had thus been converted into a false document; and for the same reason, I think that he would not be guilty of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document. If, for instance, he had been caught in the act of writing the name of the Company upon the printed form, and had only ²² Mula, (1879) 2 All. 105.

²³ Per Turner, J., in ibid., p. 106.

²⁴ Kalyan Singh, (1894) 16 All. 409.

²⁵ Padala Venkatasami, (1881) 3 Mad. 4.

completed a single letter of the name, I think that he would have been guilty of the offence charged, because, . . . 'the actual transaction would have commenced, which would have ended in the crime of forgery, if not interrupted'. But as it was, all that he did consisted in mere preparation for the commission of the crime. He was no more guilty of an attempt to commit forgery in having the forms printed, than he would have been of an attempt to commit burglary by having a false key made of the house where he intended to commit the offence". Prinsep, J., said: "The acts . . . committed do not amount to an attempt, but at most only to a preparation to commit a forgery which might have proceeded no further. . . There must be something 'commenced which would have ended in the crime if not interrupted'.¹ The definition of 'attempt' as given in the judgment in this case may be regarded as overruled in view of later English decisions on the point.²

Personation.—Where the accused was found carrying a police jacket under his arm with the intent that it should be believed that he was a police constable, it was held that he was not guilty under s. 171 as his act amounted merely to preparation to commit the offence punishable under that section.³

Obtaining certificate by false statement.—Where the accused made a false representation at an octroi office as to the contents of certain vessels with the object of obtaining a certificate entitling him to obtain a refund of octroi duty, but prior to the granting of the certificate the octroi officer found that the representation was false and no certificate, was given, it was held that this amounted to preparation for cheating.⁴

Adulteration.—A contractor for the supply of milk to a regimental hospital was found in the hospital compound with about three gallons of stale milk in his possession going in the direction of the place where the cows were about to be milked, this milk being in a can similar to those in which the cows were milked. It was held that his act did not amount to more than preparation.⁵

Procuring poisonous drug to kill.—The accused asked a native doctor to supply her with the medicine for the purpose of poisoning her son-in-law. It was held that the offence committed was not an attempt to murder, as it was a mere act by way of preparation to commit an offence and was not a transaction which would have necessarily ended in murder if not interrupted, but that such act might be held to be an instigation by the native doctor to abet the accused in the commission of murder, and with reference to s. 108, Explanation 4, might have been punished under ss. 116 and 302.⁶

Administering poison.—Where a woman with a view to poison her husband administered to him a substance which was harmless and which could not in any circumstances bring about his death, but which she believed to be poison, it was held that she could not be convicted under this section read with s. 328, as the administration of the harmless substance was not an act towards the administration of the poisonous substance. Her act which was complete in itself and not constituting an offence could not constitute an attempt to commit an offence.⁷ If a person intending to administer to a pregnant woman something capable of causing a miscarriage, in fact administers a harmless substance or a substance which is not proved to have been capable of causing the intended harm either at all or in the quantity administered, he cannot be convicted of an attempt to cause miscarriage, inasmuch as the act he did was not an "act done towards the commission of the offence" within the meaning of this section.⁸

Arming oneself with weapon to kill another.—The accused, on quarrelling with the complainant, fetched a sword, but was seized and disarmed by others before he could use it. He, however, asserted, while under restraint, his intention of killing the complainant if he were let go. It was held that fetching a sword was not an at-

¹ Riasat Ali, (1881) 7 Cal. 352, 356, 357.

² Brown, (1889) 24 Q. B. D. 357; Ring, (1892) 17 Cox 491.

³ Nga Po Kyau, (1904) 1 U. B. R. (P. C.) 3, 1 Cr. L. J. 554.

⁴ Dhundi, (1886) 8 All. 304.

⁵ Sukha, (1885) P. R. No. 40 of 1885.

⁶ Musli. Bakhtwar, (1882) P. R. No. 24 of 1882.

⁷ Mt. Rupsir Panku, (1895) 9 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 14.

⁸ Asgarali Pradhania, (1933) 61 Cal. 54.

tempt under this section, since it was not "an act of such an approximate nature as would amount to an attempt to commit murder or grievous hurt; there was, it may be conceded, a preparation towards the commission of some such offence, but mere preparation is not sufficient to complete the offence of attempt under s. 511. . . It is quite possible that although the prisoner fetched the sword he might not after all have actually used it against the complainant, who was his own brother".⁹ Similarly, where the accused raised his knife in a threatening manner manifesting an intention to stab, but did not actually try to stab the complainant, it was held that the act fell short of an attempt to stab.¹⁰

Suicide.—A woman ran to a well, stating that she would jump into it, and she was caught before she could reach it. The High Court in holding that she could not be convicted of an attempt to commit suicide remarked: "There is no doubt that the accused intended to commit suicide, and that she prepared to carry out that intention and proceeded to the well. She might have, however, still changed her mind, and she was caught before she did anything which might be regarded as the commencement of the offence."¹¹

Murder.—A young Brahmin widow was confined of a child. The chief constable of police, acting on information that the accused was about to kill the baby, went to search her house with a number of men, and found her lying on the first floor, and discovered on the second floor a living new-born child wrapped up in a cloth with a cooking pot turned over it. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused of attempt to murder. The High Court, on appeal, reversed the conviction, on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to support it.¹²

Theft.—The accused, with another boy, was seen by a policeman to sit together on some door-steps near a crowd, and when a well-dressed person came up to see what was going on, one of the accused made a sign to others, and two of them got up and followed the person into the crowd. One of them was seen to lift the tail of the coat of that man, as if to ascertain if there was anything in the pocket, but making no visible attempt to pick the pocket, and to place a hand against the dress of a woman but no actual attempt to insert that hand into the pocket was observed. They then returned to the door-step and resumed their seats. They repeated this two or three times. It was held that this was not sufficient evidence of an attempt to steal.¹³ Where the accused made some preliminary diggings which were necessary to remove the earth so that he could get at a stone slab fixed to a Buddhist stupa, it was held that the act of the accused amounted to preparation and not to an attempt to commit theft.¹⁴ Accused was caught at night in the vicinity of some cattle which were tethered on complainant's land and near which complainant and his brother were sleeping. It was held that it could reasonably be inferred that accused intended to commit theft and was therefore guilty of an offence of criminal trespass, but that he could not be held guilty of an attempt to commit theft.¹⁵

House-trespass.—A person, who went at night on the roof of the house of another person with a stick and an instrument used for house-breaking, was held to have committed house-trespass under s. 447, and not attempt to commit house-breaking by night. The Court observed: "Mere presence on the roof of the house cannot be construed into an attempt to commit an offence under s. 511. . . In order to apply s. 511 . . . it is necessary not merely that there should be an attempt to commit an offence, but likewise that an act was done as such attempt towards the commission of the offence. Mere passing on the roof of the house cannot in any sense be termed an act towards the commission of the burglary. It is an act of approach towards the house for the purpose of stealthily effecting an entrance into the premises, but can hardly be said to exceed the limits of mere preparation. While on the roof the accused had yet time to make up his mind to recede or attempt an entrance according as he found his opportunity or the state of vigilance inside the premises. It cannot be said that ⁹ Data Ram, (1882) P. R. No. 45 of 1882, at p. 76. See also Shera, (1868) P. R. No. 18 of 1868.

¹⁰ Tha Do Hla, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 264.

¹¹ Per Muttusami Ayyar, J., in Ramakka, (1884) 8 Mad. 5, 6.

¹² Chima, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 164.

¹³ Taylor, (1871) 25 L. T. 75.

¹⁴ Veeriah, [1935] M. W. N. 651.

¹⁵ Nauranga, (1922) 24 Cr. L. J. 248, [1924] AIR (L) 223.

by his presence on the roof of the house he had finally committed himself to committing the offence of house-breaking."¹⁶

Cheating.—The mere taking of thumb impressions on a blank piece of paper may be a preparation to cheat but unless something is written on it, it cannot amount to cheating or attempt to cheat. The Court said: "It is not enough to assume that probably the intention of the petitioners was to convert the blank paper into a written document. Were we to find that the mere presence on the paper of thumb impressions was sufficient to show an intention to use that paper dishonestly, then the hobby of autograph collecting would be a dangerous one."¹⁷ The mere writing out of bogus telegrams with a view to despatch them for the purpose of cheating, amounts only to preparation.¹⁸ The forwarding of fictitious consignment notes by a station-master was held merely to be a preparation to commit the offence of cheating, as it was not done in the attempt to cheat.¹⁹ This view is not sound, though the decision is right as the accused was convicted of abetment. With the object of obtaining money under an insurance policy the accused had recourse to a fraudulent device in order to attract the attention of passers-by and induce them to believe that he had been assaulted, bound, and robbed by burglars. Owing to the intervention of the police, who discovered the fraud, no communication was made to the underwriters, nor was any claim made under the policy. It was held that the accused could not be convicted of an attempt to obtain money by false pretences.²⁰ A debtor sent a parcel containing waste-paper by insured post to his creditor, as if the parcel contained currency-notes, and thus induced the creditor to sign the acknowledgment. It was held that the debtor was not guilty of an attempt to cheat but he had by arming himself with the postal acknowledgment completed his preparations to cheat or attempt to cheat. But as he had filed the postal receipt in Court in support of his defence that he had discharged the debt he had attempted to use as true fabricated evidence (s. 196).²¹ A clerk employed to weigh carts of sugar-cane upon a machine and enter the gross tare and net weights in a register, weighed a cart of sugar-cane and entered its gross weight as 16 maunds, 30 scers, but soon after the cart was re-weighed by a superior officer and found to be only 14 maunds, 20 seers. The clerk had not filled up the other columns fixing the liability absolutely upon the company when he was intercepted and charged for cheating. It was held that the writing of the false figure in the register had not passed from the stage of preparation into that of an attempt to commit the offence of cheating.²²

Adultery.—Preparation or providing an opportunity is a stage of the proceeding short of attempt and is not punishable by law.²³ An opportunity was made for sexual intercourse by a married woman's going to the accused's shop. She was at once followed, and the shop, as it were, besieged. It was held that the acts done amounted only to preparation and were not punishable as an attempt to commit adultery.²⁴ The accused, a member of a municipal committee, wanted a woman to pass the night with, and the committee chaprasi brought a woman to the committee house. The woman's husband found her and the accused together in a room and took her away before the accused had sexual intercourse with her. It was held that the accused had not passed beyond the stage of preparing to commit the offence of adultery, and therefore he could not be convicted of attempt to commit adultery.²⁵

Kidnapping.—The law allows locus penitentie, and will not hold that a person has attempted a crime until he has passed beyond the stage of preparation.¹ An indirect preparation which does not amount to an act which can be held to be a commencement of the offence does not constitute either a principal offence or an attempt or abetment of the same. A minor girl under the age of sixteen years was taken by accused No. 1, under the direction of accused No. 2, from Sholapur to Tuljapur (in

¹⁶ Walidad, (1907) P. R. No. 15 of 1907, at p. 55, 6 Cr. L. J. 444, 445, followed in Batwa Khan, (1919) 18 L. B. R. 51, 20 Cr. L. J. 571, [1919] AIR (LB) 38.

¹⁷ Sheo Prasad, (1926) 7 P. L. T. 772, 774, 27 Cr. L. J. 609, 610, [1926] AIR (P) 267.

¹⁸ Raman Chettiar, (1926) 51 M. L. J. 635, 28 Cr. L. J. 95, [1927] AIR (M) 77.

¹⁹ Raghunath, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 470.

²⁰ Robinson, [1915] 2 K. B. 342.

²¹ Vythinathaswami Aiyer, (1926) 24 L. W.

²² 725, 51 M. L. J. 800, 28 Cr. L. J. 70, [1927] AIR (M) 199; Raman Behari Roy, (1928) 50 Cal. 849; Tula Ram, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 865, 26 Cr. L. J. 209, [1924] AIR (A) 205.

²³ Lakshumi Prasad, (1922) 23 Cr. L. J. 108, [1923] AIR (P) 307.

²⁴ Paira Ram, (1902) P. R. No. 25 of 1902.

²⁵ Ibid.

¹ Ghulam Mahomed, (1879) P. R. No. 18 of 1879.

¹ Padala Venkatasami, (1881) 3 Mad. 4.

the Nizam's territory) and there dedicated to goddess Amba, with intent or knowing it to be likely that the minor would be used for the purpose of prostitution. It was held that the intention of either of the accused while they were staying at Sholapur did not constitute any offence, and their removal with the girl to Tuljapur did not by itself constitute an abetment. Ranade, J., said: "In the present case, beyond the mere intention and indirect preparation, there was no distinct offence by way of instigating the act committed out of British India. Mere intention not followed by any act cannot constitute an offence, and an indirect preparation, which does not amount to an act which amounts to a commencement of the offence, does not constitute either a principal offence, or an attempt or abetment of the same".²

Rape.—Facts amounting to preparation only so far as a particular offence is concerned may independently amount to another offence under certain circumstances. In a case the accused was convicted by the Sessions Judge of an attempt to rape. On appeal, it was contended that the evidence could not be relied on as establishing more than an indecent assault. Melvill, J., said: "The only point on which we entertain any doubt in this case is whether the prisoner's conduct amounted to an attempt to commit rape. In Rex v. Lloyd,³ Patterson, J., in summing up, said:—'In order to find the prisoner guilty of an assault with intent to commit a rape, you must be satisfied that the prisoner, when he laid hold of the prosecutrix, not only desired to gratify his passions upon her person, but that he intended to do so at all events, and notwithstanding any resistance on her part'. We believe that in this country indecent assaults are often magnified into attempts at rape, and even more often into rape itself; and we think that a conviction of an attempt at rape ought not to be arrived at, unless the Court be satisfied that the conduct of the accused indicated a determination to gratify his passions at all events, and in spite of all resistance. In the present case, having regard to the medical evidence, and to the varying statements made at different times by the complainant, we find it impossible to place entire reliance upon her statement; and, as to the extent of the violence to which she was subjected, there is no evidence except her own statement. The Sessions Court has not believed her allegation that penetration took place, and has consequently refused to convict the prisoner of rape. We feel a similar hesitation in coming to the conclusion, on the complainant's unsupported statement, that the prisoner's conduct amounted to an attempt to commit rape. He seems to have desisted before he was interrupted; and no evidence has been given to show that the complainant's person showed marks of violence (while the Civil Surgeon's evidence is to the contrary effect), nor that the clothes, either of the complainant or the prisoner showed any stains which would indicate to what point the prisoner's criminality had proceeded."⁴ The conviction was made under s. 354.

Smuggling.—Where the accused who was given a large quantity of opium by one X at Chidambaram (British territory) with instructions to meet him at Karaikal (French territory) and there give it to him was caught by an excise officer with the opium travelling in a bus to Tranquebar (British territory) and charged under s. 7 read with s. 20 of the Dangerous Drugs Act (II of 1930), it was held that as the accused had to leave the bus at Tranquebar and then to make a journey of six or seven miles before he could get to Karaikal, he must be given the benefit of the doubt that he might have repented of his intention before reaching French territory and there was only a preparation and not an attempt even if the accused intended to transport the opium into French territory.⁵

3. Attempt.—'Attempt' is the direct movement towards the commission after the preparations have been made.⁶ An attempt to commit a crime must be something more than mere preparation.⁷ Acts remotely leading towards the commission of the offence are not to be considered as attempts to commit it, but acts immediately connected with it are.⁸ The difference between mere preparation and actual attempt to commit an offence consists chiefly in the greater degree of determination in 'attempt'

² Baku, (1899) 24 Bom. 287, 291, 1 Bom. L. R. 678, 681.

³ (1836) 7 C. & P. 318, 319.

⁴ Shankar, (1881) 5 Bom. 403, 404.

⁵ Narayanawami Pillai, (1932) 36 L. W. 127, [1932] M. W. N. 545, 33 Cr. L. J. 582, [1932] AIR (M) 507.

⁶ Quoted with approval from Mayne's Criminal Law in Peterson, (1876) 1 All. 316, 317, and Padala Venkatasami, (1881) 3 Mad. 4.

⁷ Robinson, [1915] 2 K. B. 342.

⁸ Eagleton, (1855) 6 Cox 559; Woods, (1930) 29 Cox 165.

as compared with 'preparation',⁹ and such greater degree of determination may be estimated in various ways. Where one step of the accused is decidedly illegal per se, that is a great proof of fixed determination. Where such acts are open and not hidden, that is a further proof of determination.

"Attempt is an act done in part execution of a criminal design, amounting to more than mere preparation, but falling short of actual consummation, and, possessing, except for failure to consummate, all the elements of the substantive crime; in other words, an attempt consists in the intent to commit a crime, combined with the doing of some act adapted to, but falling short of, its actual commission; it may consequently be defined as that which if not prevented would have resulted in the full consummation of the act attempted".¹⁰

The difference between what is a mere preparation, and an attempt, was intended to be distinguished by the authors of the Code,¹¹ who had framed for that purpose the following illustrations:—

(a) A, intending to murder Z by means of a spring gun, purchases such a gun. A has not yet committed the offence defined in this clause. A sets the gun loaded in Z's path, and leaves it there. A has committed the offence defined in this clause.

(b) A, intending to murder Z by poison, purchases poison, and mixes the same with food which remains in A's keeping. A has not yet committed the offence defined in this clause. A places the food on Z's table, or delivers it to Z's servants to place it on Z's table. A has committed the offence defined in this clause.

The Calcutta High Court, in Riasat Ali's case,¹² laid down that a person could not be convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under this section unless the offence would have been committed if the attempt charged had succeeded. It based its decision on the observation of Cockburn, C. J., in M'Pherson's case¹³ (viz. "The word 'attempt' clearly conveys with it the idea, that if the attempt had succeeded, the offence charged would have been committed"), and of Blackburn, J., in Cheeseman's case¹⁴ (viz. "if the actual transaction has commenced which would have ended in the crime if not interrupted, there is clearly an attempt to commit the crime"). In M'Pherson's case the accused was indicted for breaking and entering a dwelling-house and stealing therein certain goods. All those goods had been stolen by other persons before the accused entered the house; but there were other goods of the complainant which the accused might have stolen if he had not been interrupted. The jury acquitted the accused of the felony charged, but found him guilty of breaking and entering the dwelling-house of the complainant and attempting to steal his goods therein. It was held that the conviction was wrong. In Cheeseman's case the accused was entrusted by his master with some meat which was to be weighed out and delivered to a customer. By means of a false weight he kept back a part of the meat with intent to steal it; but the fraud was discovered before he had actually moved away with it. It was held that he had committed an attempt to steal the meat. M'Pherson's case was followed in *The Queen v. Collins*¹⁵ wherein Cockburn, C. J., again said: "An attempt to commit felony can only in point of law be made out where, if no interruption had taken place, the attempt could have been carried out successfully, so as to constitute the offence which the accused is charged with attempting to commit". In this case the accused put his hand into the gown pocket of a lady with intent to steal what he could find there; but the pocket was empty and he could not steal anything. It was held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to steal. But Collins's case had been expressly overruled in *Reg. v. Brown*¹⁶ and Reg. v. Ring,¹⁷ which lay down that in order to prove that an attempt to commit a felony has been committed, it is not necessary to prove that, had the attempt not been frustrated, the felony would have been committed. In Brown's case the accused had pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with having attempted to commit unnatural offences with domestic fowls. In Ring's case the accused were seen to hurry on to the platform of a station just as a train was about to start; they did not go by that train, and separated on ⁹ Mangal, (1884) 1 O. D. 129.

¹⁰ Per Mookerjee, J., in Amritia Bazar Patrika Press Ltd., (1919) 47 Cal. 190, 234, s.b.; Kishen Singh, (1927) 28 P. L. R. 575, 28 Cr. L. J. 663, [1927] AIR (L) 580.

¹¹ Draft Penal Code, Clause 308, p. 53.

¹² (1881) 7 Cal. 352.

¹³ (1857) Dears. & B. 197, 202, 7 Cox 281.

¹⁴ (1862) L. & C. 140, 145.

¹⁵ (1864) 33 L. J. (M. C.) 177, 178.

¹⁶ (1880) 24 Q. B. D. 357.

¹⁷ (1892) 17 Cox 491.

reaching the platform. On the arrival of the succeeding train, they crowded round and hustled a woman who was entering a compartment, and one of them was seen endeavouring to find the pocket of her dress. It was held that they were guilty of an attempt to steal. In *The Queen v. Williams*¹⁸ two Judges expressly say that they do not assent to the notion that a person cannot be convicted of an attempt to do that which the law says he cannot do. However, in a case,¹⁹ decided five years after Brown's case, we find the Calcutta High Court re-affirming its decision in Riasat Ali's case. In a subsequent case²⁰ the Calcutta decisions were reconsidered and the High Court has held that the decisions in M'Pherson's case and Collin's case are not law either in India or in England.

The Allahabad High Court has not followed Riasat Ali's case. It has remarked in *The Queen v. Ramsarun Chowbey*²¹ and in R. MacCrea's case²² that the ruling of English Judges on the criminal law of England are inapplicable to the interpretation of the Indian Penal Code, which the Courts in India must interpret on the same principles of interpretation as they would employ in the interpretation of any other Act of the Legislature. In the latter case A had obtained administration to the estate of his brother H, and had caused a Government promissory note, No. 9764, which belonged to M, to be entered in the letters of administration as part of the estate of the deceased. The note was in the possession of the Controller-General and the accused MacCrea joined A, in an attempt to induce that officer to deliver it to him, or to A. Letters were written by the accused to that officer but they were not relied on; and the Judge directed the attention of the jury to the acts committed by the accused in making use of the letters of administration granted to A, and in the preparation of a so-called copy of the lost note, and its production before the City Magistrate. The scheme failed, and the accused was convicted of an attempt to cheat.²³

In Ramsarun's case²⁴ Turner, J., said: "To constitute then the offence of attempt under this Section, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence.

"Two illustrations of the offence of attempt as defined in this Section are given in the Code; both are illustrations of cases in which the offence has been committed. In each we find an act done with the intent of committing an offence and immediately enabling the commission of the offence, although it was not an act which constituted a part of the offence, and in each we find the intention of the person making the attempt was frustrated by circumstances independent of his own volition.

"From the illustrations it may be inferred that the Legislature did not mean that the act done must be itself an ingredient (so to say) of the offence attempted, and in this respect there appears to me there is a noticeable difference between the definition given in the Section under consideration and that given in Section 307. To convict a person of an attempt to murder under Section 307 it must be shewn that he has done some act with such intention and that if by that act he caused death he would be guilty of murder under Section 307, then the act necessary to constitute the attempt is an act which, if it had not fallen short of its object, would have constituted the offence attempted. Similarly, to constitute an attempt under Section 308, the act proved must be an act which, had the results contemplated by the doer followed would have completed the offence attempted, whereas, under the terms of Section 511, it is only necessary to prove an act done in the attempt towards the commission of the offence, and as the illustrations show an act in itself complete and not falling short of its object, or failing to bring about the result anticipated by the doer.

"The circumstances stated in the illustrations to Section 511... would not have constituted attempts under the English law, and I cannot but think they were introduced in order to show that the provisions of Section 511... were designed to extend to a much wider range of cases than would be deemed punishable as offences under the English law".

In R. MacCrea's case²⁵ Knox, J., observed: "In that case [Riasat Ali's], the learned Chief Justice appears to have acted upon English precedents, and those pre-¹⁸ [1893] 1 Q. B. 320.

¹⁹ Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, (1894)

22 Cal. 181, 188.

²⁰ Asgarali Pradhania, (1893) 61 Cal. 54.

²¹ (1872) 4 N. W. P. 46.

²² (1893) 15 All. 173, 178.

²³ R. MacCrea, (1893) 15 All. 173, 176.

²⁴ (1872) 4 N. W. P. 46, 47, 48.

²⁵ (1893) 15 All. 173, 177, 178.

cedents, precedents of no modern date. So far as I am concerned, I feel myself unable to follow the English law, because there appears to me a wide difference between the meaning of the word 'attempt' as understood by English lawyers in the phrase 'attempt to commit a felony', and the word 'attempt' as actually defined in the Indian Penal Code. With all respect therefore to the learned Judges who decided the case of Riasat Ali, I have no doubt myself that the interpretation laid down by them is not a sound and exhaustive interpretation of the word 'attempt' as used in s. 511". In this case no reference is made to Queen v. Peterson,¹ in which Pearson, J., followed the American rule that "an attempt can only be manifested by acts which would end in the consummation of the offence, but for the intervention of circumstances independent of the will of the party".

Following the above observations, the Madras High Court held that "in the offence of cheating the actual transaction must have begun, and an act to bear upon the mind of the victim must have been done before a preparation can be said to be an attempt".²

In a Bombay case 'attempt' has been defined as "an intentional preparatory action which fails in object—which so fails through circumstances independent of the person who seeks its accomplishment".³ "When a man does an intentional act with a view to attain a certain end and fails of his object through some circumstance independent of his own will, then that man has attempted to effect the object at which he aimed".⁴ All that is necessary to constitute an attempt is some external act, something tangible and ostensible of which the law can take hold as an act showing progress towards the actual commission of the offence. It does not matter that the progress is interrupted.⁵

Stephen⁶ says: "An attempt to commit a crime is an act done with intent to commit that crime, and forming part of a series of acts which would constitute its actual commission if it were not interrupted. The point at which such a series of acts begin cannot be defined; but depends upon the circumstances of each particular case". Attempt is also defined as "an act done in part execution of a criminal design, amounting to more than mere preparation, but falling short of actual consummation and possessing, except for failure to consummate, all the elements of the substantive crime".⁷

1. 'Offence punishable by this Code'.—This leaves untouched attempts to commit, or to cause to be committed, offences under special or local laws which are not also offences under the Code. No criminal liability can be incurred under the Code by an attempt to do an act which, if done, will not be an offence against the Code.⁸

Impossible offence.—"An attempt... is possible, even when the offence attempted cannot be committed; as when a person, intending to pick another person's pocket, thrusts his hand into the pocket, but finds it empty. That such an act would amount to a criminal attempt, appears from the illustrations to section 511. But in doing such an act, the offender's intention is to commit a complete offence, and his act only falls short of the offence by reason of an accidental circumstance which has prevented the completion of the offence... It is possible to attempt to commit an impossible theft, and so offend against the Code, because theft is itself an offence against the Code, and may, therefore, be attempted within the meaning of the Code".⁹

¹ (1876) 1 All. 310, 317.

² Per Jackson, J., in Raman Chettiar, (1926) 51 M. L. J. 635, 636, 28 Cr. L. J. 95, 96, [1927] AIR (M) 77.

³ Per Jenkins, C. J., in Luxman Narayan Joshi, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 280, 296.

⁴ Per Jenkins, C. J. in Vinayek Narayan Bhatye, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 304, 307 308; Jaimal, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1424, [1926] AIR (L) 147.

⁵ Ganesh Balwant Modak, (1909) 34 Bom. 378, 12 Bom. L. R. 21; Rahamat Ali, (1927) 28 Cr. L. J. 680, 681, [1927] AIR (L) 684.

⁶ Dig. of Crim. L., Art. 50 (5th Edn.).

⁷ Vide American and English Encyclopaedia of Law, Vol. III, p. 250 (2nd Edn.), where several definitions of 'attempt' are given.

⁸ Mangesh Jivaji, (1887) 11 Bom. 376, 381;

Boston, (1910) P. R. No. 2 of 1911, 12 Cr. L. J. 116; Ram Charit Ram Bhakat v. Chairman, Rajshahi District Board, [1938] 1 Cal. 420.

⁹ Per Birdwood, J., in Mangesh Jivaji, in ibid., pp. 380, 381. Mt. Rupsir Panku, (1895) 9 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 14, does not lay down sound law. In that case a woman with a view to poison her husband administered to him a substance which was harmless and which could not in any circumstances bring about his death, but which she believed to be poison. It was held that she could not be convicted under this section and s. 328 as the administration of the harmless substance was not an act towards the administration of a poisonous substance; and that the act which was complete in itself and not constituting an offence, could not constitute an attempt to commit an offence.

The trend of recent English decisions is that it is not necessary that it should have been legally or physically possible for the offender to commit the full offence.¹⁰

2. 'With transportation or imprisonment'.—Offences punishable with death only, or fine only, are not contemplated by this section.

3. 'To cause such an offence to be committed'.—This will include an attempt to abet an offence. So it has been held that it is not legally impossible to attempt the abetment of an offence—the abetment of an offence being itself an offence.¹¹ A common form of such attempt is the soliciting of another to commit an offence.¹² The act done towards the commission of the offence consists in the solicitation itself. It will not affect the offence though the person solicited declines the persuasion.

4. 'Does any act towards the commission of the offence'.—These are the vital words. 'Intention alone, or intention followed by preparation are not sufficient to constitute an attempt. But intention followed by preparation, followed by any 'act done towards the commission of the offence,' are sufficient'.¹³ In each of the two illustrations given under this section there is not merely an act done with the intention to commit an offence, which act is unsuccessful because it could not possibly result in the completion of the offence, but an act is done 'towards the commission of the offence', that is to say, the offence remains incomplete only because something yet remains to be done, which the person intending to commit the offence is unable to do by reason of circumstances independent of his own volition. Thus, in ill. (a) the act of breaking open the box is done towards the commission of the theft of the jewels. The theft itself, that is, the actual removal of the jewels, still remains to be done and it remains undone only because it turns out that there are no jewels to remove. In ill. (b) Z fails to comply with the essentials of theft simply because there is nothing in the pocket.

The words 'does any act towards the commission of the offence' must not be construed to include all acts, however remote, which tend towards the commission of the offence. The thing done may be too small or it may proceed too short a way towards the accomplishment of the offence for the law to notice it as an attempt (vide ill. to s. 307). "It is difficult, and perhaps impossible, to lay down a clear and definite rule, to define what is, and what is not such an act done, in furtherance of a criminal intent, as will constitute an offence;... Many cases, coupled with the intent, would not be sufficient. For instance, if a man intends to commit a murder, and is seen to walk towards the place of the contemplated scene, that would not be enough".¹⁴ It has been laid down that "Acts remotely leading towards the commission of the offence are not to be considered as attempts to commit it; but acts immediately connected with it are".¹⁵ "From the moment when an intention is formed to commit an offence, every act done which facilitates the commission of the offence and which is done with that object in view, is in one sense 'an act done towards the commission of the offence', but the doing of every such act does not constitute an attempt to commit the offence. It must in every case be a question depending upon the circumstances whether a particular act done (with the requisite intention) towards the commission of an offence, is sufficiently proximate to its commission to constitute an attempt, or is so remote as to merely constitute preparation for its commission".¹⁶ The act must be one immediately and directly tending to the execution of the principal crime, and committed by the prisoner under such circumstances that he has the power of carrying his intention into execution. Thus, it is a sufficient overt act to render a person liable to be found guilty of attempting to set fire to a stack, if he go to the stack, with the intention of setting fire to it, and light a lucifer match for that purpose, but abandons the attempt because he finds that he is being watched.¹⁷

For a conviction under this section it is not necessary that the accused should complete every stage in the actual offence except the final stage. It is enough if in the attempt he did any act towards the commission of the offence.¹⁷

¹⁰ Brown, (1889) 24 Q. B. D. 357; Ring, (1892) 17 Cox 491; Williams, [1898] 1 Q. B. 320.

¹¹ R. Spier, (1887) P. R. No. 49 of 1887.

¹² Asgarali Pradhania, (1883) 61 Cal. 54, 59, 60.

¹³ Per Jervis, C. J., in Robert's Case, (1855) Dears. Cr. C. 539, 550.

¹⁴ Per Parke, B., in Eagleton, (1855) 6 Cox 559, 571; Robert's Case, (1855) Dears. Cr. C.

539, 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17; Cheeseman, (1862) 9 Cox 100.

¹⁵ Per Plowden, J., in Ghulam Mahomed, (1879) P. R. No. 18 of 1879, at pp. 87, 38.

¹⁶ William Taylor, (1859) 1 F. & F. 511.

¹⁷ Raghunath alias Ram Singh, (1940) 16 Luck. 194.

In a village, incendiarism had occurred on several occasions produced by a ball of rag with a piece of burning charcoal within it. The accused one evening was discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his loincloth which contained burning charcoal. It was held, but not unanimously, that he was guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. Glover, J., said: "Had this ball contained a piece of unlighted charcoal only, I should have considered that there had been no sufficient commencement of any act which tended towards the commission of mischief by fire, and that the prisoner would have been in the same position as a person who, intending to murder some other person whether by shooting or poisoning him, buys a gun or poison and keeps the same by him, such acts being ambiguous, and not so immediately connected with the offence as to make the parties punishable under s. 511... But, in this case, the instrument for causing mischief by fire was completely ready and was not used, only because the party carrying it had no opportunity. It must, I think, be assumed, that a person going about at night provided with an apparatus specially fitted for committing mischief by fire, intends to commit that mischief, and that he has already begun to move towards the execution of his purpose, and that is sufficient to constitute an 'attempt'". Mitter, J., on the other hand, said: "The only fact proved against the prisoner is that he was apprehended with a ball of rag containing a piece of lighted charcoal in his possession; but this fact is no more consistent with the intention of setting fire to a human dwelling than with that of setting fire to a stack of hay or to something else. There is not a particle of evidence on the record to show that the prisoner intended to destroy any particular object by fire, and in the absence of such evidence it is impossible to say that he intended to destroy a building used as a human dwelling... The mere fact of being in possession of a ball, like the one which was found with the prisoner, is by no means sufficient to warrant a conviction for attempting to cause mischief by fire. In order to support a conviction for attempting to commit an offence of the nature described in s. 511, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act 'towards the commission of the offence', but that the act itself should have been done 'in the attempt' to commit it. The Sessions Judge says that the very fact that the prisoner went out of his house with the ball which was found in his possession, was an overt act, 'towards the commission of the offence', but the question is, was there any attempt to commit a particular offence, and if so, was the act done 'in such attempt'. I am of opinion, that both these questions ought to be answered in the negative. Suppose a man goes out of his house into the street with a loaded gun in his possession, and suppose even that there is evidence to show that he did so with the intention of shooting Z. If Z is not found in the street, or when found no attempt is made to shoot him either from fear or repentance, or from any other cause, can it be said that the man is guilty of attempting to murder Z? The going out of one's house with a loaded gun and with the intention of shooting a particular individual might be in one sense considered as an act done towards the shooting of that individual; but so long as nothing further is done, so long as there is no attempt to shoot him, and no overt act done 'in such attempt', it is impossible to hold that there has been an attempt to murder. There can be no doubt that the man, who goes out of his house in such a manner and with such an intention, does an act which is highly reprehensible and improper, and the Legislature might have, if it thought fit, declared it punishable as an offence; but in the absence of such a declaration, it is not for us to say that the author of that act ought not to go unpunished... The distinctions made by the Legislature between the offences of 'attempting to commit dacoity', 'making preparations for dacoity', and 'assembling together for the purpose of committing dacoity', seem to support this view very strongly".¹⁸

An act too remote, or quite foreign to the end proposed, or too small for the law's notice, creates no apparent danger and no perturbation in the peaceful order of things, and therefore is not sufficient in attempt.¹⁹ But where a person does an act, the natural consequence of which is criminal, but such consequence is prevented by extraneous causes, he is nevertheless to be taken to have intended that the natural consequence of his act should result, that is to say, he is to be considered as having intended to commit the crime which would have resulted had he not been prevented from completing his act. Where, therefore, in support of a conviction for attempting to discharge a loaded fire-gun with intent to do grievous bodily harm, the evidence was that the accused had presented a loaded revolver at another person, but had been prevented from discharging it by a third person, it was held that the accused intended to do that which he was prevented from doing; and that there was sufficient evidence to support the conviction.²⁰ Similarly, where the accused pointed at the prosecutor a revolver loaded in some of its chambers with ball cartridges, but not in others, saying that he would shoot him, and he pulled the trigger of the revolver, but the hammer fell upon a chamber which contained an empty cartridge case, it was held that the accused could be convicted of attempting to discharge a loaded fire-arm with intent to murder.²¹ Where the acts committed by the accused consisted in running after the complainant with an axe in his hand and raising it to the shoulder when about four footsteps from the complainant, but before there was time to do anything further in pursuance of his purpose the axe was snatched out of the accused's hands, it was held that the accused was not guilty of an attempt to commit murder as neither of his acts could per se have caused death, but that he was guilty of an offence to cause grievous hurt punishable under this section read with s. 326.²²

¹⁸ Doyal Bawri, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 55, 56, 57.

¹⁹ Bishop's New Criminal Law, Vol. 1, s. 739, (8th Edn.), p. 446.

In The Queen v. Ramsaran Chowbey,²³ Turner, J., said: "I do not hold that the provisions of this Section would extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such acts are doubtless done towards the commission of the offence, they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence in the construction which I think should be put on the term 'attempt' as used in this section. I regard that term as here employed as indicating the actual taking of those steps which lead immediately to the commission of the offence, although nothing be done, or omitted, which of itself is a necessary constituent of the offence attempted". But in R. MacCrea's case,²⁴ Knox, J., after remarking that Turner, J., arrived at that conclusion not without some doubt, observes: "I do not hold, and have no hesitation in saying, that s. 511 was never meant to cover only the penultimate act towards completion of an offence and not acts precedent, if those acts are done in the course of the attempt to commit the offence, are done with the intent to commit it and done towards its commission.

"It is no doubt most difficult to frame a satisfactory and exhaustive definition which shall lay down for all cases where preparation to commit an offence ends and where attempt to commit that offence begins. The question is not one of mere proximity in time or place. Many offences can easily be conceived where, with all necessary preparations made, a long interval will still elapse between the hour when the attempt to commit the offence commences and the hour when it is completed. The offence of cheating and inducing delivery is an offence in point. The time that may elapse between the moment when the preparations made for committing the fraud are brought to bear upon the mind of the person to be deceived and the moment when he yields to the deception practised upon him may be a very considerable interval of time. There may be the interposition of inquiries and other acts upon his part. The acts whereby those preparations may be brought to bear upon the mind may be several in point of number, and yet the first act after preparation completed will, if criminal in itself, be, beyond all doubt, equally an attempt with the ninety and ninth act in the series.

"Again, the attempt once begun and a criminal act done in pursuance of it towards the commission of the act attempted, does not cease to be criminal attempt, in my opinion, because the person committing the offence does or may repent before the attempt is completed. The attempt to defraud a widow of a valuable security commenced by an act of criminal intimidation committed in such attempt and towards the fraud does not cease to be an attempt because the perpetrator repents and abstains from completing the attempt.

"The question whether the act is an act of preparation or an act in the attempt and towards commission is a fact to be determined upon the evidence. It is in most cases a question for the jury to distinguish between an act before attempt has begun, an act after attempt begun, and towards commission of the offence attempted, and an act independent of the attempt altogether".

²⁰ Duckworth, (1892) 17 Cox 495.

²¹ Jackson, (1890) 17 Cox 104.

²² Jivan Das, (1904) P. R. No. 30 of 1904, 1

Cr. L. J. 1078.

²³ (1872) 4 N. W. P. 46, 48.

²⁴ (1893) 15 All. 173, 179.

Blair, J., also in the same case,²⁵ remarks: "The definition of 'attempt' is conveyed in s. 511...It seems to me that that section uses the word 'attempt' in a very large sense; it seems to imply that such an attempt may be made up of a series of acts, and that any one of those acts done towards the commission of the offence, that is, conducive to its commission, is itself punishable, and, though the Act does not use the words, it can mean nothing but punishable as an attempt. It does not say that the last act which would form the final part of an attempt in the larger sense is the only act punishable under the section. It says expressly that, whosoever in such attempt, obviously using the word in the larger sense, does any act, etc., shall be punishable. The term 'any act' excludes the notion that the final act short of actual commission is alone punishable, and the notion that any of the other acts would be without the range of this section is probably derived from the rulings in the English cases..."

"The difficulty with s. 511 might easily have been removed by saying that where in such an attempt, using the words in the larger sense, any person does any act towards the commission of an offence he shall be held to have committed an 'attempt' within the meaning of this section. That I take to be the real meaning and drift of the section, differentiating in a marked manner the definition of 'attempt' in the Indian Penal Code and the accepted English doctrine". The Privy Council on leave to appeal in this case observed: "The learned Judge who tried the case laid down in his charge to the jury that in order to convict the prisoner they must be satisfied, not only that he intended to cheat, but that he had done an act towards that cheating, and the learned Judge clearly had in view the distinction between preparation to commit an offence and acts done towards the commission of the offence".¹

The Bombay High Court, agreeing with the opinion of Knox, J., has held that this section does not relate only to the penultimate act, but to all preceding acts if they were done with the intent to commit or facilitate the commission of the act.²

The Calcutta High Court has, in an early case,³ laid down: "In order to support a conviction for attempting to commit an offence of the nature described in s. 511, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act 'towards the commission of the offence', but that the act itself [that is the overt act] should have been done 'in the attempt' to commit it [that is, the offence]". If an accused, intending to administer something capable of causing a miscarriage, administers a harmless substance, it cannot amount to an "act towards the commission of the offence" of causing miscarriage. He is, therefore, not guilty of an attempt to cause miscarriage. It is different, however, when his failure is not due to any act or omission of his own, but to the intervention of some factor independent of his own volition.⁴

The former Chief Court of the Punjab had decided that "from the moment when an intention is formed to commit an offence, every act done which facilitates the commission of the offence and which is done with that object in view, is, in one sense, 'an act done towards the commission of the offence', but the doing of every such act does not constitute an attempt to commit the offence. It must in every case be a question depending upon the circumstances, whether a particular act done (with the requisite intention) towards the commission of an offence, is sufficiently proximate to its commission to constitute an attempt, or is so remote as to merely constitute preparation for its commission".⁵ An attempt to commit an offence may be committed even though, in order to the completion of the offence, something more remained to be done by the accused.⁶ The view that an attempt to commit an offence is not punishable under this section unless the final act short of actual commission of that offence has been accomplished is an erroneous one.⁷

The Court of Criminal Appeal in England has held that an indictment for attempt to commit a crime cannot be sustained by proof of acts remotely and not im-

²⁵ R. MacCrea, (1893) 15 All. 173, 181, 182.

¹ Per Lord Herschell, L. C., in Macrea, (1893) 20 I. A. 90, 94, 15 All. 310, 314.

² Anant Vinayak Puranik, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 653, 25 Bom. 90.

³ Per Mitter, J., in Doyal Bawri, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 55, 57. See Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali Sircar, (1908) 8 C. W. N. 278, 1 Cr. L. J. 124.

⁴ Asgarali Pradhania, (1933) 61 Cal. 54.

⁵ Per Plowden, J., in Ghulam Mahomed, (1879) P. R. No. 13 of 1879, approved of in Jones, (1925) 27 Cr. L. J. 916, 918, [1925] AIR (R) 247.

⁶ Abdullah, (1914) P. R. No. 14 of 1914, 15 Cr. L. J. 265, [1914] AIR (L) 315.

⁷ Shib Charan, (1928) 10 Lah. 253.

mediately connected with the full offence. Two letters were written by the accused to a man who had advertised for a situation and were sent to him by post. The letters which were couched in obscene and lecherous terms, purported to be written by a woman, and invited the recipient to come to the place where the accused lived, and to have immoral relations. The recipient, on reading them believed they were written by a woman. He did not go to the place where the accused lived and no meeting between them took place. The accused was charged with attempting to procure the commission of an act of gross indecency by the recipient of the letters with himself. It was held that the accused's acts were only remotely, and not immediately, connected with the commission of the offence and that such acts did not in law constitute an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged.⁸

False evidence.—Where the accused dug a hole intending to place salt in it, in order that the discovery of the salt might be used in evidence against the prosecutor in a judicial proceeding, it was held that he was guilty of an attempt to fabricate false evidence, because by digging the pit he did an act towards the commission of the offence.⁹

Counterfeiting coin.—The accused, with intent to coin counterfeit half-dollars of Peru, caused to be made and procured in England dies necessary for the purpose of making such counterfeit coin, but which would not alone produce it, but the accused intended to procure the rest of the necessary apparatus for the purpose and with the intention of using the entire apparatus, when procured, in making the counterfeit coin. It was found that the accused intended to make only a few of the counterfeit coins in England by way of trying whether the apparatus would answer before sending it out to Peru to be there used in making counterfeit coin. It was held that to make a few coins in England with the object stated would be to commit the offence of making counterfeit foreign coin and that the procuring the dies was an act in furtherance of the criminal purpose sufficiently proximate to the offence.¹⁰

Rape.—The accused caught hold of a girl, threw her down, put sand in her mouth, got on her chest and attempted to have intercourse with her. She resisted and cried and her screams attracted a couple of persons seeing whom the accused ran away. It was held that the offence committed was an attempt to commit rape.¹¹

Unnatural offence.—The accused sent to H a letter with intent to incite H to commit an unnatural offence. H was a boy at school and he had received two other letters from the accused which he had read, but he had not read the one on which the charge was framed and which he had handed over to the school authorities. It was held that the sending of the letter proved the attempt to incite, although it might be doubtful whether it could be said to amount to inciting or soliciting, inasmuch as H was not aware of its contents.¹²

Bribery.—Where B, who was employed as a clerk in the Pension Department, in an interview with A, who was an applicant for a pension, after referring to his own influence in that department, and instancing two cases in which, by that influence, increased pensions had been obtained, proceeded to intimate that anything might be affected by payment, and, on the overture being rejected, concluded by declaring that A would rue and repent the rejection of it, it was held that the offence of attempting to obtain a bribe was consummated.¹³ A person who offers to pay gratification to a public servant is punishable under ss. 116, 161 and 511.¹⁴

Cheating.—M wrote a letter to the Currency Office at Calcutta, enclosing the halves of two Government currency-notes, stating that the other halves were lost, and inquiring what steps should be taken for the recovery of the value of the notes. The Currency Office having, upon inquiry, discovered that the amount of the notes had been paid to the holder of the other halves, and that the notes had been withdrawn from circulation and cancelled, sent M the usual form of claim to be filled up and returned to it. It appeared from the evidence that the Currency Office never contemplated paying M in respect of the notes. The form was filled up and signed by M, and re-

⁸ Harry Woods, (1930) 22 Cr. App. R. 41, 29 Cox 105.

⁹ Nunda, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 133.

¹⁰ Robert's Case, (1855) Dears. Cr. C. 539.

¹¹ Bhartu, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 832, 35 Cr. L.

J. 432, [1933] AIR (L) 1002 (1).

¹² Ransford, (1874) 18 Cox 9.

¹³ Baldeo Sahai, (1879) 2 All. 253.

¹⁴ Ahad Shah, (1917) P. R. No. 18 of 1918 19 Cr. L. J. 621, [1918] AIR (L) 152.

turned by him to the Currency Office. It was held that, although there was no intention on the part of the Currency Office to pay the amount of the notes, M was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹⁵ Where the accused posed that he could double a currency note and a police officer knowing that he could not do so but with a view to get him convicted gave him some notes and caught him while, after going through the mock process of doubling notes, he tried to substitute some pages of a book in their place, it was held that the accused went far beyond the stage of preparation and was liable to be convicted of the offence of attempting to cheat.¹⁶ The accused, who was indebted to the complainant, despatched to the latter an envelope insured for Rs. 530 containing two pices of waste-paper, intending to use the receipt for the same as evidence of payment of Rs. 530 towards the liquidation of his debt to the complainant. It was held that the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat.¹⁷ This ruling is of doubtful authority.¹⁸

The accused, having contracted to deliver a certain quantity of good cotton to the complainants, delivered instead for acceptance by the complainants a quantity of bad cotton, that is, cotton heavily adulterated with rubbish in such a manner that the fraud would be likely to escape the ordinary inspection. The complainant's agent, to whom delivery was offered, suspected the character of the goods and declined to accept them. The accused were, on these facts, convicted of the offence of attempting to cheat. On appeal, they were acquitted by the Sessions Judge on the ground that the acts of the accused did not amount to an attempt to cheat but only to a preparation for cheating. It was held, setting aside the order of acquittal, that there was a complete case of an attempt to cheat, and the only reason why the offence stopped short at an attempt and did not proceed to the cheating itself was because the party who was sought to be cheated was cautious and not confiding; and that the accused did all they could to perfect their offence, that is to say, an overt act was begun which would have led to the finished offence, but for an interruption arising independently of the will of the accused.¹⁹ A manufactured spurious trinkets and took them to N saying they were of gold (which they were not) and that they were stolen property (which was also not true) and that he (A) did not like to sell them in the bazaar and asked him to buy. N did not buy, but A was arrested. It was argued that no attempt to cheat had been proved, because more had to be done by A, such as weighing the article etc., before wrongful loss would fall upon N. It was held that the act of A amounted to an attempt to cheat.²⁰ The accused sold three tins of an article known as Flit to the complainant's brother. It was found that the contents of the tin were spurious. The accused went again to the shop of the complainant's brother with four dozen tins of Flit for sale and was arrested. The Chemical Analyser certified that the contents of the tins so brought did not contain the article known as Flit. It was held that the accused was guilty of an attempt at cheating though the complainant and his brother knew that the stuff which the accused was selling was probably not Flit.²¹

The first accused insured his paddy in certain godowns with three Fire Insurance Companies, and, on the godowns being burnt down, he first sent to the Insurance Companies notices informing them of the fire and subsequently presented his claims in which he deliberately made false statements as to the quantity of paddy stored in the godowns and destroyed by the fire. It was held that the sending of the notices was an act of preparation but when the accused followed up these notices with the actual claim papers, he committed himself to a representation of fact which being false to his knowledge must be regarded as an overt act towards the commission of the offence of cheating—an act which had gone beyond the stage of preparation.²² The accused sent two anonymous letters to the complainant, a well-to-do Mahomedan, purporting to come from the Deity at Nagore directing him to pay certain sums of ¹⁵ The Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder Mitter, (1888) 16 Cal. 310; Shib Charan, (1928) 10 Lah. 253.

¹⁶ Raghunath alias Ram Singh, (1940) 16 Luck. 194.

¹⁷ Arura, (1912) P. R. No. 10 of 1913, 14 Cr. L. J. 436.

¹⁸ See Raman Behari Roy, (1923) 50 Cal. 849; Tula Ram, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 865, 26 Cr. L. J. 203, [1924] AIR (A) 205; Vythinathaswami Aiyer, (1926) 24 L. W. 725, 51 M. L. J.

800, 28 Cr. L. J. 70, [1927] AIR (M) 199.

¹⁹ Mansing Daji Patil, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 568, 14 Cr. L. J. 433.

²⁰ Abdullah, (1914) P. R. No. 14 of 1914, 15 Cr. L. J. 265, [1914] AIR (L) 315.

²¹ Kamalnayan Bhawanidutt, (1932) Cr. App. No. 213 of 1932, decided by Beaumont, C. J., and Nanavati, J., on August 13, 1932 (Unrep. Bom.).

²² Maung Po Hmyin, (1923) 2 Ran. 53.

money to a person specified in the letters and threatening him with ruin and death from Divine displeasure if he failed to do so. He showed two more letters to the complainant purporting to have been received by him from the Nagore Deity wherein he was commanded to explain the serious situation and to receive Rs. 300 from the complainant and finally followed it up with a letter saying that that was the last communication that the complainant would receive and that dire consequences would follow without further warning. The complainant complied with the demand though he did not believe the letters. It was held that the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat.²³

Where the accused informed an octroi superintendent that there were sixteen maunds of an article in a cart, whereas there were only six, and by this act he induced the superintendent to grant him a refund of the duty of sixteen maunds of the article instead of six maunds, and where this was discovered before any money was paid to the accused, it was held that the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat.²⁴ Where the accused instigated a muharrir to do an illegal thing, viz., to endorse a refund pass for goods not yet arrived, and to take a bribe for such dereliction of duty, it was held that he was guilty of an attempt to cheat because he did not confine his projects to his own breasts but confided them to another person whom he tried to make his accomplice.²⁵ Where the accused told B that his son had improperly pulled the alarm chain of the train in which he was travelling and broke it, that the driver of the engine in his attempt to stop the train had sustained injuries, that his son had been taken into custody and that he had sent him to bring Rs. 110 to secure his release. The accused took B to a hospital and asked for the money to be given to the driver. B did not give the money. He then took B to another house and going inside brought a paper calling it a release order. He asked B to give money for giving it to the person who had passed the order. B said that he would give the money only after seeing his son. B told the whole story to some other men who called the police and got the accused arrested. It was held that the accused was guilty of attempt to cheat as there was no delivery of any property.¹

English cases.—The accused went into a pawn-broker's shop in the middle of the day, and laid down eleven thimbles on the counter, saying "I want five shillings on them". The pawn-broker's assistant asked him if they were silver, and he said they were. The assistant tested them, and found they were not silver and in consequence did not give him any money, but sent for a policeman, and gave him into custody. It was held that this amounted to an attempt to obtain money under false pretences.² A, who was in the employ of B, a tanner, took skins from a warehouse of B to C, the foreman of B, at another part of the premises, pretending that he had done work on them for which he was to be paid. A intended to return the skins to his master when he had been paid for his pretended work on them. It was held that this was an attempt to obtain money by false pretences and did not amount to larceny.³ The accused was indicted for attempting to obtain money by false pretences in a begging letter. In reply to the letter the prosecutor sent to the accused 5s., but he stated in his evidence at the trial that he knew that the statements contained in the letter were untrue. It was held that the accused might be convicted on this evidence of attempt to obtain money by false pretences. The Court said: "As soon as ever the letter was put into the post the offence was committed."⁴ The accused described himself as the principal of the "British Health Institute" and issued advertisements stating that arrangements had been made for testing urine, if desired, at a nominal fee of 1s. 6d. Two individuals, who suspected the genuineness of the advertisement, forwarded to the appellant a solution of water with colouring ingredients mixed with soap, and asked for an analysis of their "water". Letters were received from the accused advising a course of treatment to cost not less than one guinea in each case. It was held that the accused was guilty of obtaining money by false pretences even though the person to whom the false pretence was made knew it to be false.⁵

Theft.—The accused entered the complainant's cattle enclosure by making a hole in a thorn-hedge with intent to commit theft of the cattle. It was held that he ²³ Doraswamy Ayyar, (1924) 48 Mad. 774.

²⁴ Bhagwan Das, (1905) 2 A. L. J. R. 718, 2 Cr. L. J. 788.

²⁵ Mangal, (1884) 1 O. D. 129.

¹ Chhedai, [1942] All. 889.

² Ball, (1842) Car. & Mar. 249.

³ Holloway, (1849) 8 Cox 241.

⁴ Hensler, (1870) 11 Cox 570, 573.

⁵ Light, (1915) 24 Cox 718.

was guilty of an attempt to commit theft, for the attempt began when entry was effected into the enclosure by making a hole in the hedge.⁶ Accused made his way into an open thorned enclosure in which goats and sheep were kept. He was disturbed and ran away. It was held that he was guilty of attempt to commit theft.⁷

The accused was caught while attempting to steal the purse of P from his pocket. P, however, seized the purse from outside his pocket and also the accused's hand. It was held that although the accused did move the purse for the purpose of committing theft, he did not commit the offence of theft, because he was unable to move the purse from the possession of P. The offence was, therefore, one punishable under this section and not under s. 379.⁸

House-trespass.—Where the accused entered on a verandah and attempted to push open a door, it was held that he was guilty of house-trespass.⁹

House-breaking.—The accused commenced to dig a hole in the wall of the complainant's dwelling-house with intent to make their entry into the house through it and, having so entered, to commit theft in the house. The hole was not in fact completed, that is, it did not completely penetrate from one side of the wall to the other, as the accused were interrupted before they could complete it. The trying Magistrate convicted the accused of the offence of attempting to commit house-breaking by night. On appeal, the Sessions Judge acquitted the accused on the ground that the act of the accused amounted only to a preparation and not to an attempt to commit house-breaking by night. It was held, reversing the order of acquittal, that the accused's acts amounted in law to an attempt, inasmuch as the actual transaction, the distinct overt act, was begun and to a certain extent carried through, though not to completion by reason of the accused being interrupted by other people.¹⁰ Where the accused were disturbed and captured as soon as they opened a door and before they actually effected entry into a shop, it was held that they were not guilty of house-breaking as the offence of house-breaking could not be committed without entry into the house and so they were guilty only of an attempt to commit house-breaking.¹¹ Where the accused went on to the roof of a house and had started to go down the ladder into the courtyard when he retraced his footsteps and jumped down from the back of the roof, it was held that it could not be said that he entered into the building but was guilty of an attempt to commit house-breaking.¹²

Melting sovereigns.—The accused, a professional melter of gold and silver, was found near the heated furnace in his workshop with a crucible containing molten silver and 580 sovereigns close at hand. He was, on these facts, found guilty of the offence of attempting to melt sovereigns punishable under Rules 21A and 28 of the Defence of India Consolidation Rules, 1915. It was held that he was guilty of attempt to melt sovereigns, for the only act that remained unperformed to complete the offence of melting the sovereigns was the final act of putting the sovereigns into the molten silver in the crucible.¹³

Abduction.—Where the accused lifted a woman on her refusing to accompany them from the bed of her husband where she was sleeping on the roof of the house and on alarm being given dropped her there and made good their escape, it was held that the offence of abduction was not completed but the accused were guilty of an attempt to abduct her.¹⁴

5. 'Where no express provision is made by this Code'.—This section does not apply to cases of attempts made punishable by express provisions of the Code. The attempts specially provided for are:—

Sec. 121, attempt to wage war against the Queen.

⁶ Kohmi, (1914) P. R. No. 24 of 1914, 16 Cr. L. J. 1, [1914] AIR (L) 584.

⁷ Gharita, (1918) P. R. No. 13 of 1919, 20 Cr. L. J. 402; Jaimal, (1924) 26 Cr. L. J. 1424, [1926] AIR (L) 147.

⁸ Duraiswamy Mudali, [1942] 1 M. L. J. 491, [1942] M. W. N. 870, (1942) 55 L. W. 297, 54 Cr. L. J. 501, [1942] AIR (M) 521.

⁹ Nga Pan Hlaing, (1914) 16 Cr. L. J. 2.

¹⁰ Chandkha Salabatkhia, (1918) 37 Bom. 553,

15 Bom. L. R. 564.

¹¹ Mohammed Hussain, (1927) 29 P. L. R. 54, 29 Cr. L. J. 4.

¹² Nanhun, (1938) 34 P. L. R. 906, 34 Cr. L. J. 1181.

¹³ Abu Hasan, (1919) 21 Bom. L. R. 747, 20 Cr. L. J. 677.

¹⁴ Altu, (1925) 26 P. L. R. 119, 26 Cr. L. J. 943, [1925] AIR (L) 512.

Sec. 124, attempt wrongfully to restrain the Governor-General and other high officials with intent to induce or compel them to exercise or refrain from exercising any of their lawful powers.

Sec. 125, attempt to wage war against the Government of an Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the King.

Sec. 130, attempt to rescue State prisoners or prisoners of war.

Sec. 161, attempt by a public servant to obtain an illegal gratification.

Sec. 162, attempt to obtain a gratification in order by corrupt or illegal means to influence a public servant.

Sec. 163, attempt to obtain a gratification for exercising personal influence over a public servant.

Sec. 196, attempt to use as true, evidence known to be false.

Secs. 198 and 200, attempt to use as true, a certificate or declaration known to be false in a material point.

Sec. 213, attempt to obtain a gratification to screen an offender from punishment.

Secs. 239 and 240, attempt to induce a person to receive a counterfeit coin.

Sec. 241, attempt to induce a person to receive as genuine a counterfeit coin which, when the offender took it, he did not know to be counterfeit.

Secs. 307 and 308, attempt to commit murder and culpable homicide.

Sec. 309, attempt to commit suicide.

Secs. 385, 387 and 389, attempt to put a person in fear of injury or accusation in order to commit extortion.

Sec. 391, conjoint attempt of five or more persons to commit a dacoity.

Secs. 393, 394 and 398, attempt to commit robbery.

Sec. 460, attempt by one of many joint house-breakers by night to cause death or grievous hurt.

6. 'For a term of transportation...which may extend to one-half of the longest term, etc.'—In calculating fractions of terms of punishment, transportation for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to transportation for twenty years (s. 67).

Section 75.—The offences which fall under this section must be punished entirely irrespective of s. 75.¹⁵ See Comment on s. 75.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused attempted to commit some offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment under the Indian Penal Code, or that he attempted to cause such offence to be committed.

(2) That in such attempt he did some act towards the commission of that offence.

The Court should be satisfied that the offender had in his mind the design to commit a certain offence, and that he had begun to move towards an execution of his purpose: there must also be proof of some act, not of an ambiguous kind, but directly approximating to the commission of the offence. When the offender's design is made manifest by any such act, it becomes an attempt cognizable as an offence, and punishable under this section.

Procedure.—Same as that for the offence attempted.

Where an accused person has been indicted for committing any offence, the jury may find him not guilty of committing, but guilty of attempting to commit, the offence under this section.¹⁶

Charge.—The charge should make mention of this section and the section declaring the punishment for the offence attempted to be committed.¹⁷

It should run thus:—

¹⁵ Bharosa, (1895) 17 All. 123.

¹⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 238.

¹⁷ (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. L.) 10, 11.

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, attempted to commit (specify the offence attempted), and in such attempt did a certain act towards the commission of the said offence, to wit (specify the act done) ; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under section——(specify the section punishing the offence attempted) and s. 511 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—A was convicted of an attempt to commit rape, and was sentenced by the Judge to rigorous imprisonment for seven years, which he commuted, under s. 59, to transportation for the same term. It was held that, under ss. 376 and 511 a sentence of imprisonment for the offence committed could not be for a longer term than five years, and such sentence could not be commuted, under s. 59, to transportation for a longer term.¹⁸

In the case of a conviction of attempting to commit house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, a sentence of whipping was annulled as being illegal.¹⁹

¹⁸ Joseph Meriam, (1868) 1 Beng. L. R. (A2 Cr. J.) 5, 10 W. R. (Cr.) 10.

¹⁹ Yella valad Parshia, (1864) 3 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 37. See the Whipping Act (IV of 1909) set out in the Appendix.

APPENDIX.

THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT.

(Act No. XIX of 1929, as amended by Act VII of 1938 and Act XIX of 1938.)

AN Act to restrain the solemnisation of child marriages.

WHEREAS it is expedient to restrain the solemnisation of child marriages ; it is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas and applies also to—

(a) all British subjects and servants of the Crown in any part of India ; and

(b) all British subjects who are domiciled in any part of India wherever they may be.

(3) It shall come into force on the 1st day of April, 1930.

NOTE.

So far as Hindus are concerned this Act is not ultra vires of the Indian Legislature.¹ The addition of clauses (a) and (b) by Act VII of 1938 overrules the decisions of the Bombay² and the Nagpur³ High Courts which held that this Act was limited in its operation to British India and only struck at marriages contracted in British India.

The fact that persons committing an offence under this Act are subjects of a Native State makes no difference even if such an act is not an offence in that State.⁴

A marriage performed outside British India to evade the provisions of the Child Marriage Restraint Act is not one opposed to public policy and a provision for contribution made in a decree in a partition suit can be enforced in execution, though the marriage was so performed.⁵

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) “child” means a person who, if a male, is under eighteen years of age, and if a female, is under fourteen years of age ;

(b) “child marriage” means a marriage to which either of the contracting parties is a child ;

(c) “contracting party” to a marriage means either of the parties whose marriage is or is about to be thereby solemnised ; and

(d) “minor” means person of either sex who is under eighteen years of age.

Punishment for male adult below twenty-one years of age marrying a child.

3. Whoever, being a male above eighteen years of age and below twenty-one, contracts a child marriage shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

NOTE.

When the marriage of a child is celebrated in contravention of the provisions of this Act, certain penalties are imposed on persons bringing about such a marriage, but the marriage is not declared by the Act to be an invalid marriage.⁶

Punishment for male adult above twenty-one years of age marrying a child.

4. Whoever, being a male above twenty-one years of age, contracts a child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

¹ Jalsi Kuar, (1933) 14 P. L. T. 438, 35 Cr. L. J. 20, [1933] AIR (P) 471.

² Narayan Mahale, (1935) 37 Bom. L. R. 885, 59 Bom. 745. See also Sreeramamurthy v. Ranganayakulu, [1937] M. W. N. 22, [1937] 1 M. L. J. 388, 38 Cr. L. J. 587, 45 L. W. 210, [1937] AIR (M) 273, which held to the contrary.

³ Haider v. Isa Syed, (1937) 39 Cr. L. J. 651, [1938] AIR (N) 335.

⁴ Superintendent & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Radha Kishen, (1935) 39 C. W. N. 656, 37 Cr. L. J. 757.

⁵ Anandaramayya v. Subbayya, [1940] 2 M. L. J. 353, [1940] M. W. N. 832, [1940] AIR (M) 901.

⁶ Moti v. Beni, [1936] A. L. J. R. 1097, 38 Cr. L. J. 301, [1936] AIR (A) 852; Ram Baran v. Sital Pathak, [1939] A. L. J. R. 173, [1939] AIR (A) 340.

5. Whoever performs, conducts or directs any child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both, unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage.

NOTE.

According to the Nagpur High Court this section does not include the bridegroom and the parent or guardian of a minor contracting party. It applies to persons other than the contracting parties to the marriage and their parents and guardians.⁷ The Allahabad High Court has differed from this view and held that this section deals with persons who perform, conduct or direct any child marriage. A marriage between a girl of over fourteen years of age and a boy of less than eighteen years was performed and conducted by their respective fathers. Upon their prosecution, it was contended that there was no valid marriage as the parties belonged to the same gotra, that gauna ceremony had not been performed, and that the girl not being a "child" as defined in the Act, her father could not be convicted under the Act. It was held that the marriage ceremony, having been performed, no question of the validity or the invalidity of the marriage, or of consummation or absence of consummation thereof, could arise; and that the two fathers could be convicted under this section and the fact that the bride was not a "child" did not affect the question of her father's liability as it was he who gave his daughter in marriage and took part in the marriage ceremonies.⁸ The Madras High Court has approved the view of the Nagpur High Court and has dissented from the Allahabad High Court. It has held that the section under which the parents are liable is not this section but s. 6.⁹ The Bombay High Court following the view of the Madras and the Nagpur High Courts has held that the words "performs, conducts or directs" in this section bear the same import and mean working towards the end, that is completing the union; and are used by the Legislature to indicate the solemnization of the marriage. They do not suggest the arranging of marriage merely or attending a marriage ceremony with a view to assisting in the solemnization of the marriage. They are used in relation to the ceremony of marriage. The mere participation in the latter ceremony (e.g. the giving in Kanyadan of a grown-up girl by her parents) does not offend against the provisions of this section.¹⁰

This section contemplates that the person who solemnizes a marriage must make some reasonable enquiry as to the ages of the parties of the marriage and satisfy himself that neither of the participants is a child. It is not enough if he merely looks at the bride and the bridegroom and forms his own opinion. Where there was no proof of enquiry on the part of the priest as to the age of the bridegroom, he was held liable under this section.¹¹

Mere applying for permission to conduct such festivities as dancing (nach), fire-works, etc., on the occasion of a marriage does not amount to an offence under this section.¹²

6. (1) Where a minor contracts a child marriage,¹ any person having charge of the minor, whether as parent or guardian or in any other capacity, lawful or unlawful, who does any act to promote the marriage or permits it to be solemnised, or negligently fails to prevent it from being solemnised, shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both:

Provided that no woman shall be punishable with imprisonment.

(2) For the purposes of this section, it shall be presumed, unless and until the contrary is proved, that where a minor has contracted a child marriage, the person having charge of such minor has negligently failed to prevent the marriage from being solemnised.

NOTE.

This section provides for the offence in cases where a minor himself contracts a child marriage and any person having charge of the minor does any act to promote the marriage or permits it to be solemnised.¹³

This section only aims at permitting or failing to prevent a marriage which is made penal under the earlier sections, and does not impose a penalty for permitting a marriage which is lawful.¹⁴

1. 'Where a minor contracts a child marriage'.—This expression is wide enough to cover a case of a marriage to which both parties are minors as well as to one to which one party is a minor. Where

⁷ Ganpat Rao, (1932) 28 N. L. R. 302, 34 Cr. L. J. 311, [1932] AIR (N) 174.

⁸ Munshi Ram, (1935) 58 All. 402.

⁹ Public Prosecutor v. Rattayya, [1937] Mad. 854.

¹⁰ Fulabhai Joshi, (1940) 42 Bom. L. R. 857, [1940] Bom. 709.

¹¹ Public Prosecutor v. Rattayya, [1937] Mad. 854.

¹² Bachchu Lal, [1936] O. W. N. 480, 37 Cr. L. J. 616, [1936] AIR (O) 311.

¹³ Munshi Ram, (1935) 58 All. 402.

¹⁴ Narayan Mahale, (1935) 37 Bom. L. R. 885, 59 Bom. 745.

a Hindu parent or guardian takes part in a child marriage, he must be deemed to have done an act to promote the marriage, to have permitted the solemnization of the marriage, or to have negligently failed to prevent the solemnization and is liable to punishment under this section and not for two offences under s. 5 and this section respectively.¹⁵ The expression "where a minor contracts a child marriage" should not be construed so as to mean that the section applies only to cases where the child himself or herself entered into an agreement for the marriage. The liability rests on any parent or guardian who is in any way responsible for the marriage of his minor child, by whomsoever the agreement and arrangements for the marriage may be made. Where the father is alive and living with his daughter and is in charge of her the grandfather is not liable under this section even though he may also have made arrangements for the marriage.¹⁶

A creditor who advances money to enable an infant to marry is not punishable under this section or s. 5.¹⁷

Where the father of the bridegroom promotes a marriage, the mother has no authority by law to prevent the marriage and her mere participation in the marriage cannot be regarded as constituting an offence under this section which is confined only to the person who has actual charge of the minor either as parent or as guardian at the time.¹⁸

7. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 25 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or section 64 of the Indian Penal Code, a Court sentencing an offender under section 3 shall not be competent to direct that, in default of payment of the fine imposed, he shall undergo any term of imprisonment.

Imprisonment not to be awarded for offences under section 3.

8. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, no Court other than that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class shall take cognizance of, or try, any offence under this Act.

Jurisdiction under this Act.

NOTE.

An Additional District Magistrate who has been given all the powers of a District Magistrate is empowered to try a case under this Act.¹⁹

9. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Act after the expiry of one year from the date on which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

Mode of taking cognizance of offences.

NOTE.

The phrases "no Court shall take cognizance of any offence" in this section and "no charge as to any such offence shall be enquired into" in s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code are not to be interpreted as meaning one and the same thing. When an offence under this section is alleged to be committed in an Indian State outside British India cognizance of the offence can be taken by a Magistrate in British India, before the production of a certificate from the Political Agent of the Indian State concerned, though the enquiry into the charge will depend on the actual production of the certificate.²⁰

The limitation of one year, substituted in this section by the amending Act XIX of 1938 still holds good despite the repeal of that Act in view of s. 4 of the repealing Act XXV of 1942.²¹

10. The Court taking cognizance of an offence under this Act shall, unless it dismisses the complaint under section 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, either itself make an inquiry under section 202 of that Code, or direct a Magistrate of the first class subordinate to it to make such inquiry.

Preliminary inquiries into offences under this Act.

NOTE.

The Court taking cognizance of an offence under this Act is bound to hold a preliminary enquiry before taking action, unless it dismisses the complaint under s. 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.²² According to the Lahore High Court omission to comply with this mandatory provision is an illegality which vitiates the trial.²³ The Nagpur High Court has held that the failure to hold a preliminary enquiry under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code in compliance with the provisions of this section is not

¹⁵ Ganpat Rao, (1932) 28 N. L. R. 402, 34 Cr. L. J. 311, [1932] AIR (N) 174.

¹⁶ Bhagwat Sarup, [1945] All. 272.

¹⁷ Ram Jash Agarwal v. Chand Mandal, [1937] 2 Cal. 764.

¹⁸ Public Prosecutor v. Rattayya, [1937] Mad. 854.

¹⁹ Abdur Rahiman, [1937] Mad. 1034.

²⁰ Harnarayan v. Govindram, [1942] Nag. 193.

²¹ Amritrao v. Chandrabhan, (1946) 47 Cr. L. J. 794.

²² Chand Mal, (1933) 15 Lah. 63; Harihar Tiwari v. Etwari Gop, [1939] P. W. N. 670, 20 P. L. T. 495, 40 Cr. L. J. 887, [1939] AIR (P) 525.

²³ Mangal Ram v. Kalu, (1930) 12 Lah. 383.

an irregularity in the mode of trial, but is one of procedure only, curable under s. 537 of the Code. It does not vitiate the trial in the absence of any proof of failure of justice when the judgment has been passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, which took cognizance of the case before the stage for ordering preliminary enquiry had been reached.²⁴ The Chief Court of Sind has followed the view of the Lahore High Court.²⁵

The transfer by a District Magistrate of a case under the Child Marriage Restraint Act to a Sub-Divisional Magistrate for disposal according to law without himself making an enquiry under s. 203, Criminal Procedure Code, is illegal.¹

An anonymous petition stating that an offence under the Child Marriage Restraint Act was about to take place is not a complaint nor is a letter written by a police officer to the District Magistrate who had forwarded the petition to him for inquiry, a "complaint". Proceedings initiated by the Magistrate regarding the letter as a complaint are bad by virtue of s. 9 of the Act.²

11. (1) When the Court takes cognizance of any offence under this Act upon a complaint made to it, it may for reasons to be recorded in writing, at any time after examining the complainant and before issuing process for compelling the attendance of the accused, require the complainant to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for a sum not exceeding one hundred rupees, as security for the payment of any compensation which the complainant may be directed to pay under section 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and if such security is not furnished within such reasonable time as the Court may fix, the complaint shall be dismissed.

(2) A bond taken under this section shall be deemed to be a bond taken under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and Chapter XLII of that Code shall apply accordingly.

NOTE.

The mere fact that a security bond furnished by a complainant is found to be defective, does not vitiate the trial under s. 6 as it does not affect the merits of the case.³

12. (1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in this Act, the Court may, if satisfied from information laid before it through a complaint or otherwise that a child marriage in contravention of this Act has been arranged or is about to be solemnised, issue an injunction against any of the persons mentioned in sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of this Act prohibiting such marriage.

(2) No injunction under sub-section (1) shall be issued against any person unless the Court has previously given notice to such person, and has afforded him an opportunity to show cause against the issue of the injunction.

(3) The Court may either on its own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved rescind or alter any order made under sub-section (1).

(4) Where such an application is received, the Court shall afford the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before it either in person or by pleader; and if the Court rejects the application wholly or in part, it shall record in writing its reasons for so doing.

(5) Whoever knowing that an injunction has been issued against him under sub-section (1) of this section disobeys such injunction shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both:

Provided that no woman shall be punishable with imprisonment.

THE CONTEMPT OF COURTS ACT.

(Act No. XII of 1926).

AN Act to define and limit the powers of certain Courts in punishing contempts of Courts.

WHEREAS doubts have arisen as to the powers of a High Court of Judicature to punish contempts of Courts;

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to resolve these doubts and to define and limit the powers exercisable by High Courts and Chief Courts in punishing contempts of Court; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

²⁴ Mehtar, [1940] Nag. 488.

²⁵ Muhammad Hashim, [1940] Kar. 442.

¹ Sivagami Ammal v. Muthu Aiyar, [1939] 1 M. L. J. 111, [1938] M.W. N. 1812, 48 L. W.

774, 40 Cr. L. J. 514 (2), [1939] AIR (M) 274.

² Jagdeo v. Hill, [1938] Ran. 150.

³ Bachchu Lal, [1936] O. W. N. 480, 37 Cr. L. J. 616, [1936] AIR (O) 311.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Contempt of Courts Act, 1926.

(2) It shall extend to the whole of British India.

(3) It shall come into force on such date as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, appoint.

NOTE.

The non-Presidency High Courts in India as superior Courts of Record have an inherent power to punish contempt of themselves and this power has not been taken away or in any wise limited by the Contempt of Courts Act; it has been left undisturbed and consequently the High Courts in India continue to deal with contempt of themselves in the same manner as a Court of Record does under the Common Law of England. It is a necessary incidence of this jurisdiction that such contempts are punishable summarily by committal. There is no limitation imposed on the High Courts in the matter of punishment. Consequently the High Court is competent to pass an order committing a person to custody in jail until he apologises to the High Court and pays into Court the moneys received by him in defiance of the orders of the Court.⁴

The majority of Judges of the Allahabad High Court in a full bench case hold that no power to punish for contempt of an inferior Court now exists independently of the Indian Penal Code and this Act. The minority hold that the High Court has inherent powers to punish contempt of Court committed against either the High Court or a Court subordinate to it.⁵

A High Court Judge has the same powers to commit for contempt in the exercise of his insolvency jurisdiction as in the exercise of his original jurisdiction.⁶

2. (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), the High Courts of Judicature established by Letters Patent shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, powers and authority, in accordance with the same procedure and practice, in respect of contempts of Courts subordinate to them as they have and exercise in respect of contempts of themselves.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), a Chief Court shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, powers and authority, in accordance with the same procedure and practice, in respect of contempt of itself as a High Court referred to in sub-section (1).

(3) No High Court shall take cognizance of a contempt alleged to have been committed in respect of a Court subordinate to it where such contempt is an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code.

NOTE.

Under sub-s. (1) whatever the High Court can do in the case of a contempt of the High Court it can also do in the case of a contempt of a subordinate Court. And since the High Court can act of its own motion in a case of contempt of the High Court, it can also do so in the case of a contempt of a Court subordinate to it.⁷ The Lahore High Court is a Court of Record by virtue of ss. 219 and 220 of the Government of India Act, 1935, and as such the power to commit for contempt is a necessary incident and attribute of the Lahore High Court, and, therefore, it possesses the ordinary jurisdiction of a Court of Record and can proceed summarily to try contempt cases.⁸

The words "subordinate Court" are used in a wide sense as including any Court over which the High Court has superintendence.⁹

Any act done or writing published which is calculated to obstruct or interfere with due course of justice or the legal process of the Court¹⁰ or to bring a Court or a Judge into contempt, or to lower his authority or is likely to prejudice the public for or against a party is contempt of Court.¹¹ Similarly, attacks made on the personal character of a Judge or attributing base or improper motives to the decision of a case amounts to a contempt of Court.¹² But on the other hand Courts should not be too sensitive where no harm has been caused or was intended to be caused.¹³ Any publication, which is calculated to poison the minds of the jurors, intimidate witnesses or parties or create an atmosphere in which the administration of justice would be difficult or impossible, amounts to contempt. It is of the very essence of the offence that proceedings should be pending when the offending publication appears. The offence

⁴ Lala Harkishan Lal, (1936) 17 Lah. 69, S.B.

⁵ Mahant Shantanand Gir v. Mahant Basudevand Gir, (1930) 52 All. 619, F.B.

⁶ Official Assignee, Madras v. Suryakanthammal, (1938) 48 L. W. 462.

⁷ Superintendent and Legal Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bihar v. Murali Manohar Prasad, (1940) 20 Pat. 306.

⁸ K. L. Gauba, [1942] Lah. 441, F.B.

⁹ Advocate-General, Burma v. Maung Chit

Maung, [1940] Ran. 188, S.B.

¹⁰ Government Pleader, Bombay v. Shankar Javedekar, (1937) 40 Bom. L. R. 78, [1938] Bom. 176.

¹¹ Government Pleader, Bombay v. Tulsidas Jadhav, (1937) 40 Bom. L. R. 75, [1938] Bom. 179.

¹² Government Pleader, Bombay v. Tulsidas Jadhav, (1937) 40 Bom. L. R. 75, [1938] Bom. 179.

¹³ F. B. Kolte, [1942] Nag. 506, 510.

of contempt may be committed even if there is no proceeding or cause actually pending provided that such a proceeding or cause is imminent and the writer of the offending publication either knew it to be imminent or should have known that it was imminent.¹⁴ The publication of comments on a case which is pending trial in a Court is contempt of Court if the comments are such as are likely to prejudice the administration of justice in the case. A printer cannot escape liability imposed on him by law by alleging a contract with the owner of the press that he was not to be responsible for the contents of the publication. A journalist should acquaint himself with his duties and liabilities. Youth and inexperience or a subsequent apology would not be an excuse as a rule.¹⁵ Where the article published is calculated to influence the mind of not only the prosecution witnesses but also the general public and is, therefore, highly prejudicial to a fair trial, though very likely no great harm has been actually done the object of writing being to prejudice the public against the merits of the prosecution, the act amounts to a gross contempt of Court.¹⁶ To suggest in a newspaper article that evidence intended to be used in a prosecution, which is either proceeding or is plainly contemplated, has been obtained by improper means and is unreliable, or to suggest that admissions of the accused have been improperly obtained, is conduct calculated to interfere with the due course of justice.¹⁷ Pending a suit for an injunction restraining the defendants from entering the plaintiff's forests and cutting firewood therein, respondent No. 2 wrote and respondent No. 1 published an article accusing the plaintiff of having ruined the defendants and of having concocted false criminal cases against them. The article further accused the plaintiff of using his influence maliciously and to the detriment of the defendants. The article after setting out the defendants' case and inferring the same to be true concluded with an appeal for assistance for the defendants. It was held that the article had the effect of holding up the plaintiff to hatred or contempt and was liable to prejudice the course of justice and hence constituted a contempt of Court, and the belief of the respondents that it would not prejudice the fair trial of the suit was immaterial. The fact that the trial Judge would not be affected by the article had no bearing on the matter.¹⁸ Where, while a criminal case was pending, a public meeting was called and speeches were delivered there with the object of influencing the decision of the criminal Court, preventing witnesses from giving evidence, and bringing pressure on the complainant to withdraw his complaint, it was held that it amounted to contempt of Court.¹⁹ It is gross contempt to attribute to a Judge of the High Court a deplorable lack of experience and sense of responsibility and reasonable want of competence and care as a Judge, and to propose that an inquiry be made into the circumstances under which the "extraordinary" judgment was written because (as was averred) there must have been extraordinary causes for the aberration of the Judge which it was a public duty to expose.²⁰ A criticism of an executive officer, no matter how severe, cannot amount to contempt of Court unless such criticism contains matter calculated substantially to interfere with the due course of justice. It is one thing to say during the pendency of proceedings that an executive officer should not have taken a particular course. It is quite a different thing to say that the course he took was wholly illegal.²¹

Garbled and misleading headlines published in a newspaper, amounting to a criticism of the prosecution case in the guise of a summary of the proceedings in Court, calculated to produce an atmosphere of prejudice in which the proceedings must go on, is contempt of Court. Criticism of a capital sentence case pending confirmation by the High Court may amount to contempt although no appeal has been preferred at the date of such criticism.²²

Where an advocate sent a communication to a Judge, before whom an execution case was pending, that if he did not stay proceedings pending the disposal of a revision application he would run the risk of a suit for damages being brought against him, it was held that the advocate was guilty of contempt of Court under s. 3.²³ A letter written by a party to the Judge seized of the case, while he was exercising jurisdiction in respect of it, containing an imputation that he acted unlawfully and with a view to cause him loss, constitutes contempt of a Court punishable under s. 3 but does not amount to an offence of contempt of Court punishable by the Penal Code.²⁴ An arrangement was arrived at between opposing parties, both sides undertaking not to add to certain embankments or alter them in any way without going to the Collector and getting permission of the Government. A complaint filed by one party alleging breach of the arrangement by the other was dismissed by the District Magistrate who was also the Collector. The complainant's party then wrote a letter to the Collector stating that the opposite ¹⁴ "Tribune", Lahore, [1944] Lah. 111.

¹⁵ Maung Tin Saw, (1927) 6 Ran. 39.

¹⁶ Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi, (1928) 26 A. L. J. R. 1307, 30 Cr. L. J. 217, [1929] AIR (A) 81; Hakim Qari Nasir Ahmad v. Mr. Anis Ahmad Abbasi, (1940) 16 Luck. 506; Anis Ahmad Abbasi v. Hakim Qari Nasir Ahmad, (1941) 16 Luck. 758.

¹⁷ Government Pleader, Bombay v. Shankar Javadekar, (1937) 40 Bom. L. R. 73, [1938] Bom. 176.

¹⁸ Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Rama Naidu, (1937) 48 L. W. 444.

¹⁹ Radha Krishna, Lala v. Raja Ram, (1940) 16 Luck. 61.

²⁰ D. S. Bukhari, (1927) 29 P. L. R. 294, 28 Cr. L. J. 727, [1927] AIR (P) 610, F.B.

²¹ "Tribune", Lahore, [1944] Lah. 111.

²² His Excellency the Governor of Bengal in Council v. Tusharkanti Ghosh, (1932) 60 Cal. 603.

²³ Advocate, in the matter of, [1934] A. L. J. R. 145.

²⁴ Subordinate Judge, Hoshangabad v. Jawa-harlal, [1941] Nag. 304.

party's "people have been emboldened by the view that you have taken in the case and the orders that were passed by you." The Collector taking this as contempt of his authority in his capacity as a District Magistrate when he had dismissed the complaint, referred the matter to the High Court under the Contempt of Courts Act. It was held that there was no judicial matter before the Magistrate at all and the action of the Magistrate was a mere rejection of the complaint; that a criticism that the Magistrate's view of the case had emboldened the accused was not in the nature of a criticism of a judicial decision, and, even if there had been such a criticism, it was not of a kind to bring the Magistrate's Court into contempt or to diminish its authority.²⁵ Where in a pending action the plaintiff's counsel sent a notice to the defendant's guardian that he should withdraw a plea in the written statement the language of which was defamatory per se of the plaintiff's deceased father, and pay a named sum as damages, and in case he failed to comply with the terms of the notice legal action would be taken, it was held that the sending of the notice amounted to a direct interference with the administration of justice and the plaintiff and his counsel were guilty of contempt of Court.¹ Where a letter was addressed by a party to a civil suit to his adversary's counsel threatening legal proceedings in case the counsel failed unconditionally to withdraw certain passages in the statement filed by him for his client, it was held that this amounted to contempt of Court.²

Where in an article on 'The Bar Council Election', which was published in a newspaper, an advocate remarked that "in this connection it is amusing to note that when a comparatively undeserving lawyer is raised to the Bench which is a fairly frequent occurrence in our judicial history", it was held that the passage in question did not contain a fair criticism or comment and was nothing more or less than an insulting reference to the character and capacity of the Judges in an article in which any reference to the High Court was entirely out of place, and the reference amounted to contempt of Court.³ Where at a meeting of the Bar Association, an advocate in the course of his speech said, "the man in the street has lost confidence in the administration of justice in the province", it was held that the use of the expression constituted contempt of Court.⁴

Matter published in a newspaper relating to the past life of an accused or to his antecedent character, particularly if it suggests an offence similar to that with which he is charged, is contempt of Court as it must tend to interfere with the fair trial of that charge. But contempt of Court is not a matter of mere form or technicality but of substance. Even if the observations on the subject-matter of a proceeding may be likely to interfere with the course of justice, and may technically amount to contempt, the Court may not interfere, if it is not satisfied that such comments were calculated to prejudice the fair trial.⁵

An order of the Bombay Court of Small Causes directing the person to do a specific thing within a limited time can, if disobeyed, be enforced by the High Court by proceedings for contempt of Court under the Contempt of Courts Act, 1926.⁶ Where a person had been committed to the Court of Session upon a charge under s. 304 of the Penal Code, and certain articles commenting on the incident of the murder and on the commitment of the accused appeared in a newspaper, from the time of the investigation stage, it was held, considering the articles in question, that they tended to prejudice the case of the accused in the minds of likely jurymen and as such they tended to interfere with the due course of justice and that, therefore, they amounted to contempt.⁷

When an accused person files a written statement in which he makes certain statements which are considered to be defamatory by a third party who gives a notice to him demanding apology and damages, there is no intention to interfere with the proceedings in the criminal Court and the action of the third party in giving the notice does not, therefore, amount to contempt of Court.⁸

Sub-sec. 2.—The Chief Court of Oudh has power to deal with the contempt of Subordinate Courts.⁹ The Chief Court of Sind which is also a Court of Record has a right to punish in a summary way contempt of itself. Where there has been interference with, or disturbance of, the possession of a receiver which constitutes contempt, the Court should order restoration of status quo and should not pass an order which amounts to a condonation of the contempt.¹⁰

Sub-sec. 3.—The meaning of this clause is that where under the Penal Code there is already a provision for punishing a contempt of Court as a contempt of Court, this Act itself shall have no

¹ Girindra Mohan Misra, [1937] P. W. N. 137, 17 P. L. T. 861, 38 Cr. L. J. 392, [1937] AIR (P) 124.

² Rajender Singh v. Uma Pershad, [1935] A. L. J. R. 29.

³ Telhara Cotton Ginning Co. Ltd. v. Kashinath Gangadhar Namjoshi, [1940] Nag. 69.

⁴ Advocate of Allahabad, [1935] A. L. J. R. 125.

⁵ Muhammad Wasim, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 726, [1933] AIR (O) 118.

⁶ S. A. Dange v. S. T. Shepperd, [1938] A. L. J. R. 665, 32 Cr. L. J. 78, [1938] AIR (A) 483.

⁶ Ali Mahomed Adamalli (No. 2), (1941) 44 Bom. L. R. 249, 43 Cr. L. J. 667, [1941] AIR (B) 154 (1).

⁷ Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bihar v. Murali Manohar Prasad, (1940) 20 Pat. 308; Mahadeo Prasad v. Tej Narain Bahadur, [1943] O. W. N. 331, (1943) 45 Cr. L. J. 108, [1944] AIR (O) 14.

⁸ V. B. Kolte, [1942] Nag. 506.

⁹ Mohammad Yusuf v. Imtiaz Ahmad Khan, (1939) 14 Luck. 492.

¹⁰ Ramzan v. Abubucker, [1944] Kar. 396.

application; it does not mean that when the act which has constituted the contempt of Court also constitutes an offence under the Penal Code it may not be punished under this Act. A single act may be both an offence under the Penal Code and may also be a contempt of Court and may be punishable in either or both capacities.¹¹ When an act is punishable under the Penal Code not as contempt of Court but as some other offence, e.g., defamation, the jurisdiction under the Contempt of Courts Act is not barred by this sub-section and the act is one punishable both under that Act and under the Penal Code. The object of proceedings under the Contempt of Courts Act is to vindicate the dignity and honour of the Courts subordinate to the High Court and this purpose cannot be served by the institution of complaints for defamation by the judicial officers in cases where the contempt of Court also amounts to defamation.¹² The prohibitions contained in this sub-section refer to offences punishable as contempt of Court by the Penal Code and not to offences punishable there otherwise than as contempt.¹³

This Act enables the High Court to punish contempt of the inferior Court, notwithstanding that such contempt as is complained of is not an offence (as contempt) against any of the sections of the Penal Code; only those contempts which are punishable by the Code as contempts of Court are excluded from the jurisdiction of the High Court by the Act.¹⁴

The failure to furnish information under s. 6A is an offence under the provisions of the Wakf Act yet it is not an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code. Consequently the High Court is not prohibited from dealing with it by the terms of sub-s. (3) of this section.¹⁵

The standard of care and circumspection to be observed by all Courts before exercising their jurisdiction to commit for contempt cannot be lessened, but it must be remembered that the question of committal or non-committal is one for the exercise of the discretion of the Court before whom the application to commit is brought and unless there is found to be a serious disregard of the principles of natural justice, their Lordships of the Privy Council would be slow to interfere with that discretion.¹⁶

Procedure.—An application in contempt made to the High Court, for the contempt of itself and of a subordinate Court, need not necessarily be dealt with by the Court on the Crown side and in such a case it is not necessary that a party, if represented, must appear through an advocate represented by an attorney.¹⁷ In cases in which a mofussil Court has no jurisdiction in regard to contempt of itself, the correct procedure, in ordinary circumstances, is not an application to that Court followed by an inquiry and a reference to the High Court, but a proper application to the High Court direct by the party aggrieved, the procedure to be followed as to notice, etc., being that on applications to the original side.¹⁸ When the charge is one of contempt of Court no action can be taken where the particular acts of contempt which the party complained against is required to answer to, are not set forth specifically in the petition, although the same might be matters of record and although a rule may already have been issued. Allegations made in affidavit which are stated to be true only to the deponent's information, the source of which is not disclosed, cannot be taken any notice of.¹⁹

The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure are not applicable to summary proceedings taken for punishing a contempt and, therefore, s. 556 does not apply because proceedings for punishing contempt are taken not with a view to protect the Court as a whole or the individual Judges of the Court from a repetition of the attack but with a view to protect the public and specially those who either voluntarily or by compulsion are subject to the jurisdiction of the Court from the mischief they will incur if the authority of the Court be undermined or impaired. The gravamen is an endeavour to shake the confidence of the public in the Court. It is not only the duty of a Judge who has been personally attacked to sit in judgment over the contemnor but he has no other alternative but to do so as it is impossible to vindicate the reputation and prestige of the Court which has been attacked by taking proceedings in any Court for libel or otherwise.²⁰

A contemnor who has been called upon to show cause why he should not be punished for an attack on the Court or its Judges does not occupy the position of a defendant in a libel action where he may plead or prove justification or the position of an accused person in a prosecution for defamation. Even assuming that the writer of a manifesto believes all he states therein to be true, the writer is not permitted to lead evidence to establish the truth of his allegation.²¹

Contempt proceedings are summary and a very arbitrary method of dealing with an offence and, therefore, should be sparingly instituted and a person not convicted unless his conviction is essential in the interests of justice.²²

¹¹ Kaulashia, (1932) 12 Pat. 1; Bennett Coleman & Co. Ltd. v. G. S. Monga, (1936) 38 P. L. R. 1166, 38 Cr. L. J. 73, [1936] AIR (L) 917.

¹² Jagannath Prasad, [1938] All. 548.

¹³ Subordinate Judge, Hoshangabad v. Jawaharlal, [1941] Nag. 304.

¹⁴ Jnanendra Prasad Bose v. Gopal Prasad Sen, (1932) 12 Pat. 172; Narayan Chandra v. Panchu, (1935) 40 C. W. N. 413, 37 Cr. L. J. 65, [1935] AIR (C) 684.

¹⁵ Ali Mahomed Adamali, (1945) 62 I. A. 226, 48 Bom. L. R. 116.

¹⁶ Ibid.

¹⁷ Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Khagendranath Das Gupta, (1930) 58 Cal. 458.

¹⁸ Amulya Chandra Bhaduri v. Satish Chandra Giri, (1931) 35 C. W. N. 1265, 33 Cr. L. J. 444, [1932] AIR (C) 255.

¹⁹ Amulya Chandra Bhaduri v. Satish Chandra Giri, (1931) 35 C. W. N. 1267, 33 Cr. L. J. 369(2).

²⁰ K. L. Gauba, [1942] Lah. 411, F.B.

²¹ Ibid.

²² "Tribune", Lahore, [1944] Lah. 111.

3. Save as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, a contempt of Court may be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, which may extend to two thousand rupees, or with both:

Limit of punishment
for contempt of Court.

Provided that the accused may be discharged or the punishment awarded may be remitted on apology being made to the satisfaction of the Court:

Provided further that notwithstanding anything elsewhere contained in any law no High Court shall impose a sentence in excess of that specified in this section for any contempt either in respect of itself or of a Court subordinate to it.

NOTE.

Where the High Court awarded a punishment of four months' simple imprisonment and also ordered the accused to pay a certain sum as costs of the Crown and of the complainant, it was held that the High Court had jurisdiction to pass the order for payment of costs.²³

The proviso seems to contemplate an apology at a late stage, but where the accused takes such action as any reasonable man must realise to be likely to prejudice the trial of a case and instead of apologising at the earliest opportunity he or his counsel contends most strenuously that no contempt has been committed his apology can only be regarded as an afterthought put forward in the hope of avoiding the wrath to come, it is a gross case of contempt which he must purge by a suitable sentence.²⁴

THE INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT.

(ACT NO. XIV OF 1908).

AN ACT to provide for the more speedy trial of certain offences, and for the prohibition of associations dangerous to the public peace.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the more speedy trial of certain offences, and for the prohibition of associations dangerous to the public peace; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908.

(2) It extends to the Provinces of Bengal and of Eastern Bengal and Assam; but the Provincial Government of any other Province may, at any time, by notification in the Official Gazette, extend the whole or any Part thereof to that Province.

[Sub-section (2) was amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920, s. 2, and Sch. I.]

[Sub-section (3) repealed by Act V of 1922, s. 3]

PART I.

SPECIAL PROCEDURE.

[Repealed by Act V of 1922, s. 3]

PART II.

UNLAWFUL ASSOCIATIONS.

Definitions.

15. In this Part—

(1) "association" means any combination or body of persons, whether the same be known by any distinctive name or not; and

(2) "unlawful association" means an association—

(a) which encourages or aids persons to commit acts of violence or intimidation or of which the members habitually commit such acts, or

(b) which has been declared to be unlawful by the Provincial Government under the powers hereby conferred.

16.* (1) If the Provincial Government is of opinion that any association interferes or has for its object interference with the administration of the law or with the maintenance of law and order, or that it constitutes a danger to the public peace, the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare such association to be unlawful.

Power to declare association unlawful.

²³ Wahid-ullah Ahrari, (1935) 58 All. 374.

²⁴ Hakim Qari Nazir Ahmad v. Mr. Anis

Ahmad Abbasi, (1940) 16 Luck. 506.

* In the Province of Bombay the following section has been inserted by Bom. Act VI of 1947, s. 27:—

16A. If the Provincial Government is of opinion that any association is organized or [Sub-section (2) was repealed by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws and Order), 1937.]

NOTE.

In order to prove that an association has been declared unlawful, the Government must not only insert a declaration in the official Gazette, but must publish the Gazette in the manner usually adopted for publishing such Gazette, and allow a reasonable opportunity to the people concerned to see the Gazette.¹ The accused were members of an association which was declared unlawful by a notification published in the Bombay Government Gazette on October 10, 1930. There was no evidence of the general publication of the Gazette on that day at that place. On October 11, at about 5 A.M. the police went to the place of the association, collected the accused, explained to them the contents of the notification, and arrested them. Two of the accused were convicted under s. 17 (2) and the rest under s. 17 (1) of the Act. It was held that under the circumstances the declaration that the association was unlawful was sufficiently notified to the accused; (2) that there was no evidence to show that the accused continued as members of the association after it had been declared unlawful; (3) that from the fact that the accused were members of an association when it was lawful it could not be presumed that they continued to be members after it was declared unlawful.²

A general notification declaring unlawful all associations, by whatever name known or whether known by any name or not, which have certain specified objects subversive of law, order and peace, is insufficient compliance with this section, read with s. 15.³

17. (1) Whoever is a member of an unlawful association, or takes part in meetings of any such association, or contributes or receives or solicits any contribution for the purpose of any such association, or in any way assists the operations¹ of any such association, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

(2) Whoever manages or assists in the management of an unlawful association, or promotes or assists in promoting a meeting of any such association, or of any members thereof as such members, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

(3) An offence under sub-section (1) shall be cognizable by the police, and notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall be non-bailable.

NOTE.

The accused visited a village and addressed the people at the village gate. He stated that the British raj had come to an end or at any rate was about to do so, and exhorted the people to hold a divan and take steps to establish an independent State at that village. After staying at the village for two or three days he went away and immediately after his departure an unlawful association was formed of which his son was made the Secretary, and his brother, the Vice-President, other office-holders being also appointed. The accused also told the people that he had given Rs. 2,000 towards the movement which had been paid to his son and people could go to the latter to have their names registered. It appeared that Rs. 860 had actually been paid by the accused to his son at that time, which payment was apparently made as a subscription and for the purpose of being utilized for the objects of the association, the formation of which the accused was advocating. The question was whether the accused's words and actions constituted an offence under this Act, or the Penal Code. It was held that the accused's act did not come within the purview of either clause (1) or (2) of this section, as he did not contribute to the funds or assist in the management of an existing association. It was held, however, that the accused 'instigated' the formation of an association which was unlawful under s. 15 (2) (a) of this Act, and, therefore, abetted its formation (ss. 107 and 108 of the Indian Penal Code) and as any

¹ Balkrishna Hirlekar, (1930) 33 Bom. L. R. 82, 55 Bom. 356.

R. 383, 32 Cr. L. J. 725, [1931] AIR (B) 203.

² Dharamanand Kosambi, (1930) 33 Bom. L.

³ Swadesh Ranjan Dutta, (1933) 37 C. W. N. 964, 35 Cr. L. J. 605 (2), [1934] AIR (C) 161.

equipped for the purpose of enabling the members of the association to be employed, or is organized or equipped in such manner as to arouse reasonable apprehension that the members of the association may be employed, in usurping the functions of His Majesty's forces or of any police force or of any force constituted under any law for the time being in force or for the use or display of physical force in furtherance of the common object of the association, the Provincial Government may by notification in the Official Gazette declare such association to be unlawful.

one becoming a member of that association or contributing funds to it would be guilty of an offence under sub-s. (1), accused's act amounted to an abetment of an offence. It was further held that as this abetment was of the commission of an offence by a class of persons exceeding ten, the accused had brought himself within the ambit of s. 117 of the Penal Code and was liable to the punishment provided therein.⁴

There is nothing in this section to impose upon the members of an association declared unlawful the obligation of doing anything specific to terminate their membership; but the Legislature has relied on the general declaration of illegality as bringing the association to an end. In a prosecution under clause (1) the Crown is bound to prove that the accused, who was a member of an association before, continued to be a member of it after, it was declared unlawful. It is not for the accused to prove that he has ceased to be a member of such an association. There is no justification for presuming that because a person is a member of an association which is lawful, he remains a member of that association after it is declared unlawful. The Courts must, on the contrary, presume that when the Local Government declares a particular association to be unlawful the citizens will recognize that declaration and will loyally carry it out and that they will cease absolutely to be members of the association declared unlawful or in any way to act as such.⁵

An offence under s. 117 of the Indian Penal Code read with clause (1) of this section can be tried as a summons case, if the sentence imposed does not exceed imprisonment for six months.⁶

1. 'Assists the operations'.—The publication by a newspaper of a programme of activities of an unlawful association amounts to assisting in the operations of such association.⁷ There must be such a connection between the acts of the accused and the operations of the unlawful association that an intention to assist the operations of such association may be properly inferred. It is not necessary that the accused should be members of the unlawful association or that they should be acting in co-operation with it, or under its orders, or anything of that sort. There must, however, be a sufficient connection between their acts and the operations of the association to enable the Court to infer an intention to assist in those operations. The mere existence of a common aim between the person accused and the unlawful association is not enough to involve assistance. Where one of the regular activities of an unlawful association is to engage in picketing cloth shops in order to persuade people not to buy foreign cloth, and the methods of picketing employed by the association are similar to those employed by the accused who independently picket the shops, there is a sufficient connection between their acts and the operations of the unlawful association to justify an inference that they are assisting and intending to assist in its operations.⁸ Where the only object of an unlawful association is to control processions of a political character early in the morning, the accused who take part in a similar procession, though not affiliated to the unlawful association, are sufficiently connected with its activities to give rise to an inference that they are in fact intending to assist in the operations of the association.⁹ The mere reproduction in a newspaper of a harmless criticism, upon a letter which has been generally circulated, appearing in the Congress Bulletin, published by an unlawful association, does not amount to assisting the operations of an unlawful association. Similarly, the printing of an appeal to merchants to deal only in Indian cloth, made by a person purporting to be the president of an unlawful association, is not an offence under clause (1).¹⁰ The Madras High Court has, however, taken a different view of s. 17. It has held that s. 17 (1) does not make the advocating of boycott, the shouting out of slogans and the carrying of Congress flags an offence. Doing such things does not necessarily amount to assisting the operations of an unlawful association though there is identity of objects. There must be some kind of connection proved between the person and the unlawful association. The words "assisting the operations of an association", would be meaningless unless the operations of the association are in the person's mind and an intention to assist them is also there. Such intention to assist the operations of that association must be inferred from some unambiguous overt act. The accused took part in a demonstration accompanied by a national flag and the singing of political songs. He went to the street wherein foreign cloth and British goods were sold and advocated their boycott. He was charged with having acted in furtherance of the resolution of the All-India Congress Working Committee, an association declared unlawful, and thereby committed an offence under cl. (1) of this section. The accused was not a member of that unlawful association nor was he shown to have taken part in meetings of that association, or contributed or received or solicited any subscriptions for the purposes of that association. It was held that he could not be convicted under this section.¹¹ Where a member of an association declared unlawful made a speech at a meeting organised thereby it was held that he assisted

⁴ Mihan Singh, (1923) 5 Lah. 1.

⁵ Shripad, (1930) 33 Bom. L. R. 90, 55 Bom. 484.

⁶ Narsinha Chandur, (1931) 33 Bom. L. R. 353, 32 Cr. L. J. 718, [1931] AIR (B) 199.

⁷ Sohrab Kapadia, (1930) 33 Bom. L. R. 314, 32 Cr. L. J. 804, [1931] AIR (B) 206.

⁸ Gangubai, (1930) 33 Bom. L. R. 319, 55

Bom. 442.

⁹ Adhikari, (1930) 33 Bom. L. R. 325, 32 Cr. L. J. 723, [1931] AIR (B) 202.

¹⁰ Sadanand, (1931) 33 Bom. L. R. 652, 32 Cr. L. J. 1158, [1931] AIR (B) 413.

¹¹ Iswaradu, [1932] M. W. N. 1263, 34 Cr. L. J. 823, [1933] AIR (M) 369.

in its management or promoted a meeting thereof and was guilty under cl. (2) of this section, even though his speech was not violent.¹² Where the national flag was hoisted over a shop and the date and hour of the hoisting coincided with the date and hour when the public had been requested by certain unlawful associations by means of pamphlets to hoist the flag in celebration of the Independence Day, and the accused refused to take it down when requested by the police to do so, it was held that in the circumstances the hoisting of the flag or the refusal to take it down did not amount to assisting the operations of an unlawful association, and was not an offence under cl. (1) of this section.¹³ The mere display of a Congress flag over a shop and refusal to take it down at the request of the police does not amount to 'assisting the operations of an unlawful association' and is not an offence under cl. (1) of this section. A warning by the District Magistrate by public notification, in the absence of any order forbidding such an act that the public are assisting the operations of the Congress by setting up such flags over their shops, cannot make such an act an offence.¹⁴ The leader of a party which induces boys to take out and publicly exhibit the Congress flags and for which those boys are given clothes and some cash in lieu of services to be rendered by them is guilty under cl. (2) of this section.¹⁵

The word 'assists' means "intentionally assists". Painting on the surface of a road the words "Boycott British Goods" will amount to an offence under clause (1) of this section if there is evidence to show that the person who painted was thereby assisting the operations of an unlawful association.¹⁶

Power to notify and take possession of places used for the purposes of an unlawful association.

17A. (1) The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, notify any place which in its opinion is used for the purposes of an unlawful association.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section 'place' includes a house or building, or part thereof, or a tent or vessel.

(2) The District Magistrate or in a Presidency-town the Commissioner of Police, or any officer authorised in this behalf in writing by the District Magistrate or Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, may thereupon take possession of the notified place and evict therefrom any person found therein, and shall forthwith make a report of the taking possession to the Provincial Government :

Provided that where such place contains any apartment occupied by women or children, reasonable time and facilities shall be afforded for their withdrawal with the least possible inconvenience.

(3) A notified place whereof possession is taken under sub-section (2) shall be deemed to remain in the possession of Government so long as the notification under sub-section (1) in respect thereof remains in force.

17B. (1) The District Magistrate, Commissioner of Police or officer taking possession of a notified place shall also take possession of all moveable property found therein, and shall make a list thereof in the presence of two respectable witnesses.

(2) If, in the opinion of the District Magistrate, or in a Presidency-town the Commissioner of Police, any articles specified in the list are or may be used for the purposes of the unlawful association, he may proceed subject to the provisions hereafter contained in this section to order such articles to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(3) All other articles specified in the list shall be delivered to the person whom he considers to be entitled to possession thereof, or, if no such person is found, shall be disposed of in such manner as the District Magistrate or Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, may direct.

(4) The District Magistrate or Commissioner of Police shall publish, as nearly as may be in the manner provided in section 87 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the publication of a proclamation, a notice specifying the articles which it is proposed to forfeit and calling upon any person claiming that any article is not liable to forfeiture to submit in writing within fifteen days any representation he desires to make against the forfeiture of the article.

(5) Where any such representation is accepted by the District Magistrate or Commissioner of Police, he shall deal with the article concerned in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (3).

(6) Where any such representation is rejected, the representation, with the ¹² Swadesh Ranjan Dutta, (1933) 37 C. W. N. 964, 35 Cr. L. J. 605 (2), [1934] AIR (C) 161.

¹³ Jogendra Mohan Chowdhury, (1933) 37 C. W. N. 992, 34 Cr. L. J. 925, [1933] AIR (C) 695 (1).

¹⁴ Ram Prasad, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 22, [1933]

AIR (A) 95.

¹⁵ Mathra Das, (1933) 34 P. L. R. 923, 34 Cr. L. J. 1178, [1933] AIR (L) 387 (2).

¹⁶ Panduranga Mudali, (1932) 63 M. L. J. 906, [1932] M. W. N. 1357, 63 M. L. J. 906, 34 Cr. L. J. 90, [1933] AIR (M) 35.

decision thereon, shall be forwarded to the District Judge, in the case of a decision by a District Magistrate, or, to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court, in the case of a decision by the Commissioner of Police, and no order of forfeiture shall be made until the District Judge or Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court, as the case may be, has adjudicated upon the representation. Where the decision is not confirmed the articles shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (3).

(7) In making an adjudication under sub-section (6) the procedure to be followed shall be the procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for the investigation of claims so far as it can be made to apply, and the decision of the District Judge or Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court, as the case may be, shall be final.

(8) If the article seized is live stock or is of a perishable nature, the District Magistrate or Commissioner of Police may, if he thinks it expedient, order the immediate sale thereof, and the proceeds of the sale shall be disposed of in the manner herein provided for the disposal of other articles.

17C. Any person who enters or remains upon a notified place without the permission of the District Magistrate, or of an officer authorised by him in this behalf, shall be deemed to commit criminal trespass.

17D. Before a notification under sub-section (1) of section 17A is cancelled, the Provincial Government shall give such general or special directions as it may deem requisite regulating the relinquishment by Government of possession of notified places.

17E. (1) Where the Provincial Government is satisfied, after such inquiry as it may think fit, that any monies, securities or credits are being used or are intended to be used for the purposes of an unlawful association, the Provincial Government may, by order in writing, declare such monies, securities or credits to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(2) A copy of an order under sub-section (1) may be served on the person having custody of the monies, securities or credits, and on the service of such copy such person shall pay or deliver the monies, securities or credits to the order of the Provincial Government :

Provided that, in the case of monies or securities, a copy of the order may be endorsed for execution to such officer as the Provincial Government may select, and such officer shall have power to enter upon and search for such monies and securities in any premises where they may reasonably be suspected to be, and to seize the same.

(3) Before an order of forfeiture is made under sub-section (1) the Provincial Government shall give written notice to the person (if any) in whose custody the monies, securities or credits are found of its intention to forfeit, and any person aggrieved thereby may within fifteen days from the issue of such notice file an application to the District Judge in a district, or to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court in a Presidency-town, to establish that the monies, securities or credits or any of them are not liable to forfeiture, and if any such application is made, no order of forfeiture shall be passed in respect of the monies, securities or credits concerned until such application has been disposed of, and unless the District Judge or Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court has decided that the monies, securities or credits are liable to forfeiture.

(4) In disposing of an application under sub-section (3) the procedure to be followed shall be the procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for the investigation of claims so far as it can be made to apply, and the decision of the District Judge or Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court, as the case may be, shall be final.

(5) Where the Provincial Government has reason to believe that any person has custody of any monies, securities or credits which are being used or are intended to be used for the purposes of an unlawful association, the Provincial Government may, by order in writing, prohibit such person from paying, delivering, transferring or otherwise dealing in any manner whatsoever with the same, save in accordance with the written orders of the Provincial Government. A copy of such order shall be served upon the person to whom it is directed.

(6) The Provincial Government may endorse a copy of an order under sub-section (5) for investigation to any officer it may select, and such copy shall be warrant whereunder such officer may enter upon any premises of the person to whom the order is directed, examine the books of such person, search for monies and securities, and make inquiries from such person, or any officer, agent or servant of such person, touching the origin of and dealings in any monies, securities or credits which the investigating officer may suspect are being used or are intended to be used for the purposes of an unlawful association.

(7) A copy of an order under this section may be served in the manner provided in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the service of a summons, or, where the person to be served is a corporation, company, bank or association of persons, it may be served on any secretary, director or other officer or person concerned with the management thereof, or by leaving it or sending it by post addressed to the corporation, company, bank or association at its registered office, or, where there is no registered office, at the place where it carries on business.

(8) Where an order of forfeiture is made under sub-section (1) in respect of any monies, securities or credits in respect of which a prohibitory order has been made under sub-section (5), such order of forfeiture shall have effect from the date of the prohibitory order, and the person to whom the prohibitory order was directed shall pay or deliver the whole of the monies, securities, or credits forfeited, to the order of the Provincial Government.

(9) Where any person liable under this section to pay or deliver any monies, securities, or credits to the order of the Provincial Government refuses or fails to comply with any direction of the Provincial Government in this behalf, the Provincial Government may recover from such person, as arrears of land-revenue or as a fine, the amount of such monies or credits or the market value of such securities.

(10) In this section, "security" includes a document whereby any person acknowledges that he is under a legal liability to pay money, or whereunder any person obtains a legal right to the payment of money; and the market value of any security means the value as fixed by any officer or person deputed by the Provincial Government in this behalf.

(11) Except so far as is necessary for the purposes of any proceeding under this section, no information obtained in the course of any investigation made under sub-section (6) shall be divulged by any officer of Government, without the consent of the Provincial Government.

17F. Every report of the taking possession of property and every declaration of forfeiture made, or purporting to be made, under this Act, shall, as against all persons, be conclusive proof that the property specified therein has been taken possession of by Government or has been forfeited, as the case may be, and save as provided in sections 17B and 17E no proceeding purporting to be taken under section 17A, 17B, 17C, 17D or 17E shall be called in question by any Court, and no civil or criminal proceeding shall be instituted against any person for anything in good faith done or intended to be done under the said sections or against Government or any person acting on behalf of or by authority of Government for any loss or damage caused to or in respect of any property whereof possession has been taken by Government under this Act.

18. An association shall not be deemed to have ceased to exist by reason only of any formal act of dissolution or change of title, but shall be deemed to continue so long as any actual combination for the purposes of such association continues between any members thereof.

THE SCHEDULE.

(Repealed by Act V of 1922, s. 3.)

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1932.

(ACT No. XXIII OF 1932.)

An Act to Supplement the Criminal Law.

WHEREAS it is expedient to supplement the Criminal Law and to that end to amend the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, and further to amend the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, for the purposes hereinafter appearing ;
It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent,
duration and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

(3) [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

(4) The whole of the Act except section 7 shall come into force at once, and the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct that section 7 shall come into force in any area on such date as may be specified in the notification.

NOTE.

The repeal of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935, by the Repealing and Amending Act (XX of 1937) does not affect the sections of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, which are not repealed.¹

2. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

3. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

4. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

5. (1) Whoever publishes, circulates or repeats in public any passage from a newspaper, book or other document copies whereof have been declared to be forfeited to His Majesty under any law for the time being in force, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine or with both.

(2) No Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under this section unless the Provincial Government has certified that the passage published, circulated or repeated contains, in the opinion of the Provincial Government, seditious or other matter of the nature referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, or sub-section (1) of section 4 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931.

NOTE.

This section makes dissemination of contents of proscribed literature an offence punishable under the Code. It enacts the provisions of s. 28 of Ordinance X of 1932 which ran as follows :—

28. Whoever publishes, circulates or repeats in public any passage from a newspaper, book or other document copies whereof have been declared to be forfeited to His Majesty under any other law for the time being in force, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

6. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

Molesting a person to prejudice of employment or business.

7. (1) Whoever—

(a) with intent to cause any person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such person has a right to do or to abstain from doing, obstructs or uses violence to or intimidates such person or any member of his family or person in his employ, or loiters at or near a place where such person or member or employed person resides or works or carries on business or happens to be, or persistently follows him from place to place, or interferes with any property owned or used by him or deprives him of or hinders him in the use thereof, or shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

(b) loiters or does any similar act at or near the place where a person carries on business, in such a way and with intent that any person may thereby be deterred from entering or approaching or dealing at such place,

¹ Swami Arunagirinatha, [1939] Mad. 87.

Explanation.—Encouragement of indigenous industries or advocacy of temperance without the commission of any of the acts prohibited by this section is not an offence under this section.

(2) No Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under this section except upon a report in writing of facts which constitute such offence made by a police officer not below the rank of officer in charge of a police station.

NOTE.

This section is intended to punish picketing. It enacts in a modified form ss. 66 and 67 of Ordinance X of 1932.

The section makes no limitation in respect of the parties disputing or the nature of the dispute giving rise to a situation where picketing is employed. Its application is universal. Had it been the intention of the legislature to exclude the application of this section from cases arising out of industrial disputes, it would have said so in explicit terms, more particularly in view of the nature of the majority of the other sections of the Act which have their origin in Ordinances. There is no conflict between this section and the Trade Unions Act (XVI of 1926).²

Clause (1) (a) applies as much to picketing of public servants as of private individuals. The Madras Government having passed an order for the introduction of Hindi in the schools, the accused who was opposed to such introduction incited others to loiter in front of the Premier's house with a view to compelling him to take steps to withdraw that order. It was held that the accused was guilty of abetment of an offence under cl. (1) (a).³

8. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

Procedure in offences under the Act.

9. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898,—

(i) no Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence under this Act;

(ii) an offence punishable under section 5 or 7 shall be cognizable by the police;

(iii) [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]; and (iv) an offence punishable under section 7 shall be non-bailable.

10. (1) The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that any offence punishable under sections 186, 188, 189, 190, 228, 295A, 298, 505, 506 or 507 of the Indian Penal Code, when committed in any area specified in the notification shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be cognizable, and thereupon the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall, while such notification remains in force, be deemed to be amended accordingly.

(2) The Provincial Government may, in like manner and subject to the like conditions, and with the like effect, declare that an offence punishable under section 188 or section 506 of the Indian Penal Code, shall be non-bailable.

11. [Incorporated as s. 16 (2) in the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, by this Act.]

12. [Incorporated as s. 17 (3) in the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, by this Act.]

13. [Incorporated as ss. 17A, 17B, 17C, 17D, 17E and 17F in the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, by this Act.]

14. [Incorporated in the Preamble of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, by this Act.]

15. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

16. [Incorporated in the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, after cl. (b) of sub-section (1) of s. 4 and after Explanation 1, by this Act.]

17. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

² R. S. Ruikar, (1934) 31 N. L. R. 318, 36 Cr. L. J. 1153, [1935] AIR (N) 149.

³ Swami Arunagirinatha, [1930] Mad. 87.

18. Anything done or any proceedings commenced in pursuance of the provisions of Chapter VI of the Special Powers Ordinance, 1932, shall, upon the commencement of this Act, be deemed to have been done or to have been commenced in pursuance of the corresponding provisions of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, as amended by this Act, and shall have effect as if this Act was already in force when such thing was done or such proceedings were commenced.

Adoption and continuance of action taken under Ordinance X of 1932.

19. Anything done or any proceedings commenced in pursuance of the provisions of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, as amended by section 77 of the Special Powers Ordinance, 1932, shall, upon the commencement of this Act, be deemed to have been done or to have been commenced in pursuance of the corresponding provisions of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, as amended by this Act, and shall have effect as if this Act was already in force when such thing was done or such proceedings were commenced.

Adoption and continuance of action taken under Act XXIII of 1931 as amended by Ordinance X of 1932.

20. [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935.]

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1938.

ACT No. XX OF 1938.

An Act to amend the criminal law.

WHEREAS it is expedient to supplement the criminal law by providing for the punishment of certain acts prejudicial to the recruitment of persons to serve in, and to the discipline of, His Majesty's Forces; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1938.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India.

(3) It shall come into force in a Province on such date as the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, appoint in this behalf for such province.

2. Whoever—

Dissuasion from enlistment and instigation to mutiny or insubordination after enlistment.

(a) with intent to affect adversely the recruitment of persons to serve in the Military, Naval or Air Forces of His Majesty, wilfully dissuades or attempts to dissuade the public or any person from entering any such Forces, or

(b) without dissuading or attempting to dissuade any person from entering such Forces, instigates the public or any person to do, after entering any such Force, any thing which is an offence punishable as mutiny or insubordination under section 27 of the Indian Army Act, 1911, or sections 10 to 12 and 14 to 17 inclusive of the Naval Discipline Act as applied to the Indian Navy by the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, or sections 35 to 37 inclusive of the Indian Air Force Act, 1932, as the case may be, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

No person shall be prosecuted for any offence under this Act except with the previous sanction of the Provincial Government.

Exception 1.—The provisions of clause (a) of this section do not extend to comments on or criticism of the policy of Government in connection with the Military, Naval or Air Forces, made in good faith without any intention of dissuading from enlistment.

Exception 2.—The provisions of clause (a) of this section do not extend to the case in which advice is given in good faith for the benefit of the individual to whom it is given, or for the benefit of any member of his family or of any of his dependents.

THE INDIAN ELECTIONS OFFENCES AND INQUIRIES ACT.

(ACT No. XXXIX OF 1920.)

AN Act to provide for the punishment of malpractices in connection with elections, and to make further provision for the conduct of inquiries in regard to disputed elections to legislative bodies constituted under the Government of India Act or the Government of India Act, 1935.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the punishment of malpractices in connection with elections, and to make further provision for the conduct of inquiries in regard to disputed elections to legislative bodies constituted under the Government of India Act or the Government of India Act, 1935; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

PRELIMINARY.

- Short title and extent. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act, 1920; and
(2) It extends to the whole of British India.

NOTE.

To make provision with respect to certain matters connected with elections under the Government of India Act, 1935, His Majesty in Council has promulgated the Government of India (Provincial Elections) (Corrupt Practices and Election Petitions) Order, 1936.¹ It declares certain offences and practices to be offences and practices involving disqualification for members of the Provincial Legislatures and fixes the periods for which the disqualifications are to operate.

PART I.

AMENDMENT OF THE INDIAN PENAL CODE AND CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

[Repealed by the Repealing Act, I of 1938.]

[The amendments in the Penal Code are introduced in the text at proper places.]

PART II.

ELECTION INQUIRIES AND OTHER MATTERS.

Definitions.

4. In this Part, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

- (a) “costs” means all costs, charges and expenses of, or incidental to, and inquiry;
(b) “election” means an election to a Chamber of any Legislature or Legislative Council constituted under the Government of India Act or the Government of India Act, 1935;
(c) “inquiry” means an inquiry in respect of an election by Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the Governor General or Governor;
(d) “pleader” means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in a civil Court, and includes an advocate, a vakil, and an attorney of a High Court.

5. Commissioners appointed to hold an inquiry shall have the powers which are vested in a Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, when trying a suit in respect of the following matters :—

- Powers of Commissioners. (a) discovery and inspection,
(b) enforcing the attendance of witnesses, and requiring the deposit of their expenses,
(c) compelling the production of documents,
(d) examining witnesses on oath,
(e) granting adjournments,

¹ See Gazette of India, dated 25-7-1936, Part I, pp. 955-968.

(f) reception of evidence taken on affidavit, and
 (g) issuing commissions for the examination of witnesses, and may summon and examine suo motu any person whose evidence appears to them to be material; and shall be deemed to be a civil Court within the meaning of sections 480 and 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Explanation.—For the purposes of enforcing the attendance of witnesses, the local limits of the Commissioners' jurisdiction shall be the limits of the Province in which the election was held.

Application of Act I of 1872 to inquiries.

6. The provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be deemed to apply in all respects to an inquiry.

Documentary evidence.

7. Notwithstanding anything in any enactment to the contrary, no document shall be inadmissible in evidence on the ground that it is not duly stamped or registered.

Obligation of witness to answer any certificate of indemnity.

8. (1) No witness shall be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to a matter in issue in an inquiry upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate or may tend, directly or indirectly, to criminate him; or that it will expose, or tend, directly or indirectly, to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind:

Provided that—

(i) no person who has voted at an election shall be required to state for whom he has voted; and

(ii) a witness who, in the opinion of the Commissioners, has answered truly all questions which he has been required by them to answer shall be entitled to receive a certificate of indemnity, and such certificate may be pleaded by such person in any Court and shall be deemed to be a full and complete defence to or upon any charge under Chapter IXA of the Indian Penal Code arising out of the matter to which such certificate relates, nor shall any such answer be admissible in evidence against him in any suit or other proceeding.

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall be deemed to relieve a person receiving a certificate of indemnity from any disqualification in connection with an election imposed by any law or any rule having the force of law.

Appearance by pleader.

9. Any appearance, application or act before the Commissioners may be made or done by the party in person or by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf:

Provided that any such appearance shall, if the Commissioners so direct, be made by the party in person.

10. The reasonable expenses incurred by any person in attending to give evidence may be allowed by the Commissioners to such person, and shall, unless the Commissioners otherwise direct, be deemed to be part of the costs.

Costs and pleader's fees, etc.

11. (1) Costs shall be in the discretion of the Commissioners, and the Commissioners shall have full power to determine by and to whom and to what extent costs are to be paid and to include in their report all necessary recommendations for the purposes aforesaid. The Commissioners may allow interest on costs at a rate not exceeding six per cent per annum, and such interest shall be added to the costs.

(2) The fees payable by a party in respect of fees of his adversary's pleader shall be such fees as the Commissioners may allow.

12. Any order made by the Central Government or Provincial Government on the report of the Commissioners regarding the costs of the inquiry may be produced before the principal civil Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any person directed by such order to pay any sum of money has a place of residence or business, or, where such place is within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a chartered High

Execution of orders at to costs.

Court, before the Court of Small Causes having jurisdiction there, and such Court shall execute such order or cause it to be executed in the same manner and by the same procedure as if it were a decree for the payment of money made by itself in a suit.

13. Any person who has been convicted of an offence under section 171E or 171F of the Indian Penal Code or has been disqualified from exercising any electoral right, for a period of not less than five years on account of malpractices in connection with an election shall be disqualified for five years from the date of such conviction or disqualification from—
- (a) being appointed to, or acting in, any judicial office ;
 - (b) being elected to any office of any local authority when the appointment to such office is by election, or holding or exercising any such office to which no salary is attached ;
 - (c) being elected or sitting or voting as a member of any local authority ; or
 - (d) being appointed or acting as a trustee of a public trust :

Provided that the Governor General, in the case of an election to a Chamber of the Federal Legislature or the Indian Legislature, and the Governor, in the case of an election to a Chamber of a Provincial Legislature, may, in his discretion, exempt any such person from such disqualification.

14. (1) Every officer, clerk, agent or other person who performs any duties in connection with the recording or counting of votes at an election shall maintain and aid in maintaining the secrecy of the voting and shall not (except for some purpose authorized by or under any law) communicate to any person any information calculated to violate such secrecy.

(2) Any person who wilfully acts in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding three months or with fine, or with both.

15. As respects elections to a Chamber of a Legislature constituted under the Government of India Act, 1935, this Part of this Act shall have effect subject to any relevant provision of any Order in Council or rules made under that Act in relation to such elections.

THE EXPLOSIVE SUBSTANCES ACT.

(Act No. VI of 1908.)

AN Act further to amend the law relating to explosive substances.

WHEREAS it is necessary further to amend the law relating to explosive substances ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Explosive Substances Act, 1908.

- (2) It extends to the whole of British India and applies also to—
- (a) all native Indian subjects of His Majesty in any place without and beyond British India ;
 - (b) all other British subjects within the territories of any native prince or chief in India.

2. In this Act the expression “explosive substance” shall be deemed to include any materials for making any explosive substance ; also any apparatus, machine, implement or material used, or intended to be used, or adapted for causing, or aiding in causing, any explosion in or with any explosive substance ; also any part of any such apparatus, machine or implement.

3. Any person who unlawfully and maliciously causes by any explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property shall, whether any injury to person or property has been actually caused or not, be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, to which fine may be added.

Punishment for causing explosion likely to endanger life or property.

NOTE.

The essence of an offence under this section is the unlawfully and maliciously causing by any explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property.¹

The word 'malice' is not used in its proper sense of vindictiveness against any particular individual but in its legal acceptance. The word malice in its legal acceptance is not confined to personal spite against individuals but consists in a conscious violation of law to the prejudice of another.²

4. Any person who unlawfully¹ and maliciously—

Punishment for attempt to cause explosion or for making or keeping explosive with intent to endanger life or property.

(a) does any act with intent to cause by an explosive substance,² or conspires to cause by an explosive substance, an explosion in British India of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property; or

(b) makes or has in his possession³ or under his control any explosive substance with intent by means thereof to endanger life, or cause serious injury to property in British India, or to enable any other person by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property in British India; shall, whether any explosion does or does not take place and whether any injury to person or property has been actually caused or not, be punished with transportation for a term which may extend to twenty years, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, to which fine may be added.

NOTE.

This section substantially reproduces the provisions of s. 3 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vic., c. 3).

1. 'Unlawfully'.—This word signifies 'not for a lawful object'; and the word 'maliciously' means intentionally and without justification or excuse or claim of right.³ The latter word occurs in ss. 219-220 of the Indian Penal Code.

2. 'Explosive substance'.—The 'explosive substance' need not be such as to enable a person by means thereof alone without the aid of other substances, to cause danger to life or injury to property. The term 'explosive substance' includes any part of any apparatus, machine, or implement intended to be used or adapted for causing or aiding in causing any explosive substance.

From the mere presence of mensal stains on a man's wearing apparel, it can be said that he either made or had in his possession or under his control an explosive substance with intent by means thereof to endanger life, or to cause serious injury to property in British India or to enable any other person by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property in British India.⁴

3. 'Possession'.—For purposes of an offence under cl. (b), possession must be conscious and intelligent possession and not merely the physical presence of the accused in proximity or even in close proximity of the offending object.⁵ Where a person supplied shots and red arsenic for making one bomb only and to try it in a place without being detected and without intending to endanger human life or to cause serious injury to property, it was held that he was a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence under cl. (b) as he had done overt acts in furtherance of such conspiracy.⁶

5. Any person who makes or knowingly has in his possession or under his control any explosive substance, under such circumstances as to give rise to a reasonable suspicion that he is not making it or does not have it in his possession or under his control for a lawful object, shall, unless he can show that he made it or had it in his possession or under his control for a lawful object, be punishable with transportation for a term

Punishment for making or possessing explosives under suspicious circumstances.

¹ Bamayya, (1910) 20 M. L. J. 657, [1910] M. W. N. 77, 11 Cr. L. J. 222.

² Bhagat Singh, (1930) 31 P. L. R. 73, 31 Cr. L. J. 290, [1930] AIR (L) 266.

³ Amrita Lal Hazra, (1915) 42 Cal. 957; Dulai Singh, (1928) 9 Lah. 531.

⁴ Indar Datt, (1930) 32 Cr. L. J. 818, [1931] AIR (L) 408.

⁵ Kuldip Chand, (1934) 37 P. L. R. 132, 36 Cr. L. J. 300, [1934] AIR (L) 768.

⁶ Bhabananda Banerjee, (1934) 57 C. L. J. 213, 34 Cr. L. J. 1222, [1933] AIR (C) 747, s.B.

which may extend to fourteen years, to which fine may be added or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years, to which fine may be added.*

NOTE.

Under this section and s. 19 of the Indian Arms Act mere possession of incriminating articles constitutes serious criminal offence and there must be mens rea or guilty knowledge before a person can be convicted of such possession. Mere proof that an incriminating article is found in premises occupied by a number of persons does not in itself establish prima facie the guilt of any particular person or all of them jointly. That being so they cannot be called upon after such evidence to establish their innocence. They can only be called upon to do that when the evidence has established a prima facie case against anyone or more of them or all of them.⁷

Under this section it is not necessary to come to any more definite finding than that the accused had possession of the explosive substance under suspicious circumstances.⁸ Where a bomb was found in the house of a person it was not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the accused had himself placed the bomb at the place where it was found; it was sufficient to prove that it was found there, and it remained for the accused to rebut the legal inference which followed under this section.⁹

The police suspected that certain persons were manufacturing bombs and an investigation was started against them. One of them gave information to the police that some bombs were concealed in the deorhi of his house. The police went to the house and the accused who was there took them to the place belonging to some one else, not far from the deorhi, and brought out from under a manure-heap a number of articles including some bombs. On the next day he was sent to a pond outside the village and after search in the pond he brought out a bundle containing bombs. It was held that the recoveries of explosives from places accessible to others were not sufficient to prove that the accused was in possession or control of the articles recovered and the conviction of the accused was illegal.¹⁰ The mere fact that a bomb and certain cartridges were recovered at the instance of the accused by the police from a certain place is not by itself sufficient to prove a case against the accused either under this section or s. 19 of the Indian Arms Act unless and until it is proved that these articles were placed there by the accused himself.¹¹

When following certain fires in a particular locality the house of the accused was searched, a bottle containing yellow phosphorous in water was found along with certain other substances like petrol, denatured spirit, lead chromate, aluminium powder and ferric oxide, he was prosecuted and convicted for an offence punishable under this section. On revision, it was held that in the natural form in which phosphorous at the time of the search was found in water in a bottle, it was not an explosive as defined by s. 2, and that the accused was not guilty of the offence with which he was charged, as possession of it by itself would not be chargeable under the Act. It is only an incendiary. If it had been used or found in a state in which it was used or adapted for exploding a bomb, then it could be said that it would be an explosive substance as defined in the Act.¹²

6. Any person who by the supply of or solicitation for money, the providing of premises, the supply of materials, or in any manner whatsoever, procures, counsels, aids, abets, or is accessory to, the commission or any offence under this Act shall be punished with the punishment provided for the offence.

Punishment of abettors.

⁷ Santa Singh, (1944) 26 Lah. 137, F.B.
⁸ Ramayya, (1910) 20 M. L. J. 657, [1910] M. W. N. 77, 11 Cr. L. J. 222.
⁹ Amar Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 31 of 1919, 21 Cr. L. J. 230.
¹⁰ Amrik Singh, (1930) 32 P. L. R. 150, 32

Cr. L. J. 585, [1931] AIR (L) 50.

¹¹ Chetu, (1946) 48 Cr. L. J. 200, 49 P. L. R. 16.

¹² Tammina Mutyalu, [1945] 2 M. L. J. 414, [1945] M. W. N. 689, 58 L. W. 615, 47 Cr. L. J. 592, [1946] AIR (M) 45.

*Section 5A was added by the Bengal Criminal Law (Arms and Explosives) Act (Beng. XXI of 1932), s. 5, and is in force in Bengal.

5A. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 3, section 4, or section 5, if an offence under any of these sections is tried by Commissioners appointed under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1925, or by a Special Magistrate under the Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act, 1932, any person found guilty of such offence shall be punished for transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, to which fine may be added.

Section 5B was added by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act (Beng. VII of 1934), s. 5, and is in force in Bengal.

5B. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, any person who makes or has in his possession any explosive substance under circumstances indicating that he intended that such explosive substance should be used for the commission of any offence of murder shall, if he is tried by Commissioners appointed under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1925, be punished with death, or with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, to which fine may be added.

Enhanced punishment for offences under sections 3, 4 and 5 in certain cases.

Enhanced punishment in certain cases.

NOTE.

The intention to procure, counsel, aid, abet or to be accessory to the commission of the offence is a necessary ingredient under this section, and, ordinarily, it is the primary intention of the accused that must be taken into consideration in determining his guilt.¹³

¹³ No Court shall proceed to the trial of any person for an offence against this Act except with the consent¹ of the Central Government.

Restriction on trial of offences.

NOTE.

Where a complaint was filed by a Sub-Inspector of Police before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of an offence under s. 399 of the Penal Code, and the facts disclosed also an offence under s. 4 (b) of this Act of which the Magistrate could not then take cognizance for want of the consent of Government under this section, and a complaint was subsequently filed by the Superintendent of Police, with such consent obtained, before the Additional District Magistrate, it was held that the latter had jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and that the initiation and continuation of the proceedings by him were legal notwithstanding that he had not withdrawn the original case to his own file.¹⁴

1. 'Consent'.—The consent under this section should state briefly the facts which constitute the offence and authorize the trial of the accused person upon these facts as constituting, in the opinion of the consenting authority, an offence under one or other sections of the Act. It is for the Court to decide finally whether upon the facts stated in the order of consent a particular offence has been committed, and the mere fact that the consenting authority is of opinion that the facts constitute an offence under one section of the Act, is in itself no bar to a conviction of the person upon the same facts of another offence under another section.¹⁵

When a case under this Act, which is exclusively triable by the Court of Session, is being inquired into in the Court of the committing Magistrate, it is not necessary for the prosecution to obtain the sanction of the Provincial Government under this section. The Sessions Court can proceed with the trial after the consent of the Provincial Government has been obtained. When sanction has been obtained for prosecution under s. (4) (b), the Sessions Judge is competent to frame a charge in the alternative under s. 5. But even if he does not frame the alternative charge he can, under s. 237, Criminal Procedure Code, convict the accused under s. 5 though he is charged under s. (4) (b) alone.¹⁶

THE FOREIGN RELATIONS ACT.

(ACT No. XII OF 1932.)

AN Act to provide against the publication of statements likely to prejudice the maintenance of friendly relations between His Majesty's Government and the Governments of certain foreign States.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide against the publication of statements likely to prejudice the maintenance of friendly relations between His Majesty's Government and the Governments of certain foreign States ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Foreign Relations Act, 1932.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

2. Where an offence falling under Chapter XXI of the Indian Penal Code is committed against a Ruler of a State outside but adjoining India, or against the consort or son or principal Minister of such Ruler, the Central Government may make, or authorize any person to make, a complaint in writing of such offence, and, notwithstanding anything contained in section 198 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, any Court competent in other respects to take cognizance of such offence may take cognizance thereof on such complaint.

Power of Central Government to prosecute in certain cases of defamation.

¹³ Bimal Pershad Jain, (1934) 35 Cr. L. J. 752, [1934] AIR (L) 583.

¹⁴ Lalit Chandra Chanda Chowdhury, (1911) 39 Cal. 119.

¹⁵ Amar Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 31 of 1919, 21 Cr. L. J. 230.

¹⁶ Nathu Ram, (1934) 57 All. 898.

3. The provisions of sections 99A to 99G of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and of sections 27B to 27D of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898, shall apply in the case of any book, newspaper or other document containing matter which is defamatory of a Ruler of a State outside but adjoining India or of the consort or son or principal Minister of such Ruler and tends to prejudice the maintenance of friendly relations between His Majesty's Government and the Government of such State, in like manner as they apply in the case of a book, newspaper or document containing seditious matter within the meaning of those sections :

Provided that for the purposes of this section the said provisions shall be construed as if for the words "Provincial Government" wherever they occur, the words, "Central Government" were substituted.

4. Where, in any trial of an offence upon a complaint under section 2, or in any proceeding before a High Court arising out of section 3, there is a question whether any person is a Ruler of any State, or is the consort or son or principal Minister of such Ruler, a certificate under the hand of a Secretary to the Central Government that such person is such Ruler, consort, son, or principal Minister shall be conclusive proof of that fact.

THE FUGITIVE OFFENDERS ACT, 1881.

(44 & 45 VIC., c. 69)

[As adapted and modified by the Government of India (Adaption of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

AN Act to amend the Law with respect to Fugitive Offenders in Her Majesty's Dominions, and for other Purposes connected with the Trial of Offenders.

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows ; (that is to say,)

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881.

PART I.

RETURN OF FUGITIVES.

2. Where a person accused of having committed an offence (to which this part of this Act applies) in one part of Her Majesty's dominions has left that part, such person (in this Act referred to as a fugitive from that part) if found in another part of Her Majesty's dominions, shall be liable to be apprehended and returned in manner provided by this Act to the part from which he is a fugitive.

A fugitive may be so apprehended under an endorsed warrant or a provisional warrant.

3. Where a warrant has been issued in one part of Her Majesty's dominions for the apprehension of a fugitive from that part, any of the following authorities in another part of Her Majesty's dominions in or on the way to which the fugitive is or is suspected to be ; (that is to say,)

- (1) A Judge of a superior Court in such part ; and
 - (2) In the United Kingdom a Secretary of State and one of the magistrates of the metropolitan police Court in Bow Street ; and
 - (3) In a British possession the Governor of that possession,
- if satisfied that the warrant was issued by some person having lawful authority to issue the same, may endorse such warrant in manner provided by this Act, and the warrant so endorsed shall be a sufficient authority to apprehend the fugitive in the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which it is endorsed, and bring him before a magistrate.

4. A magistrate of any part of Her Majesty's dominions may issue a provisional warrant for the apprehension of a fugitive who is or is suspected of being in or on his way to that part on such information, and under such circumstances, as would in his opinion justify the issue of a warrant if the offence of which the fugitive is accused had been committed within his jurisdiction, and such warrant may be backed and executed accordingly.

A magistrate issuing a provisional warrant shall forthwith send a report of the issue, together with the information or a certified copy thereof, if he is in the United Kingdom, to a Secretary of State, and if he is in a British possession, to the Governor of that possession, and the Secretary of State or Governor may, if he think fit, discharge the person apprehended under such warrant.

5. A fugitive when apprehended shall be brought before a magistrate, who (subject to the provisions of this Act) shall hear the case in the same manner and have the same jurisdiction and powers, as near as may be (including the power to remand and admit to bail), as if the fugitive were charged with an offence committed within his jurisdiction.

If the endorsed warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive is duly authenticated, and such evidence is produced as (subject to the provisions of this Act) according to the law ordinarily administered by the magistrate, raises a strong or probable presumption that the fugitive committed the offence mentioned in the warrant, and that the offence is one to which this part of this Act applies, the magistrate shall commit the fugitive to prison to await his return, and shall forthwith send a certificate of the committal and such report of the case as he may think fit, if in the United Kingdom to a Secretary of State, and if in a British possession to the Governor of that possession.

Where the magistrate commits the fugitive to prison he shall inform the fugitive that he will not be surrendered until after the expiration of fifteen days, and that he has a right to apply for a writ of habeas corpus, or other like process.

A fugitive apprehended on a provisional warrant may be from time to time remanded for such reasonable time not exceeding seven days at any one time as under the circumstances seems requisite for the production of an endorsed warrant.

6. Upon the expiration of fifteen days after a fugitive has been committed to prison to await his return, or if a writ of habeas corpus or other like process is issued with reference to such fugitive by a superior Court, after the final decision of the Court in the case,

(1) if the fugitive is so committed in the United Kingdom, a Secretary of State ; and

(2) if the fugitive is so committed in a British possession, the Governor of that possession, may, if he thinks it just, by warrant under his hand order that fugitive to be returned to the part of Her Majesty's dominions from which he is a fugitive, and for that purpose to be delivered into the custody of the persons to whom the warrant is addressed, or some one or more of them, and to be held in custody, and conveyed by sea or otherwise to the said part of Her Majesty's dominions, to be dealt with there in due course of law as if he had been there apprehended, and such warrant shall be forthwith executed according to the tenor thereof.

The Governor or other chief officer of any prison, on request of any person having the custody of a fugitive under any such warrant, and on payment or tender of a reasonable amount for expenses, shall receive such fugitive and detain him for such reasonable time as may be requested by the said person for the purpose of the proper execution of the warrant.

7. If a fugitive who, in pursuance of this part of this Act, has been committed to prison in any part of Her Majesty's dominions to await his return, is not conveyed out of that part within one month after such committal, a superior Court, upon application, shall discharge the person apprehended if not returned within one month.

tion by or on behalf of the fugitive, and upon proof that reasonable notice of the intention to make such application has been given, if the said part is the United Kingdom to a Secretary of State, and if the said part is a British possession to the Governor of the possession, may, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary, order the fugitive to be discharged out of custody.

8. Where a person accused of an offence and returned in pursuance of this part of this Act to any part of Her Majesty's dominions, either is not prosecuted for the said offence within six months after his arrival in that part, or is acquitted of the said offence, then if that part is the United Kingdom a Secretary of State, and if that part is a British possession the Governor of that possession, may, if he think fit, on the request of such person, cause him to be sent back free of cost and with as little delay as possible to the part of Her Majesty's dominions in or on his way to which he was apprehended.

Sending back of persons apprehended if not prosecuted within six months or acquitted.

9. This part of this Act shall apply to the following offences, namely, to treason and piracy, and to every offence, whether called felony, misdemeanour, crime, or by any other name, which is for the time being punishable in the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which it was committed, either on indictment or information, by imprisonment with hard labour for a term of twelve months or more, or by any greater punishment; and for the purposes of this section, rigorous imprisonment, and any confinement in a prison combined with labour, by whatever name it is called, shall be deemed to be imprisonment with hard labour.

Offences to which this part of this Act applies.

This part of this Act shall apply to an offence notwithstanding that by the law of the part of Her Majesty's dominions in or on his way to which the fugitive is or is suspected of being it is not an offence, or not an offence to which this part of this Act applies; and all the provisions of this part of this Act, including those relating to a provisional warrant and to a committal to prison, shall be construed as if the offence were in such last-mentioned part of Her Majesty's dominion an offence to which this part of this Act applies.

10. Where it is made to appear to a superior Court that by reason of the trivial nature of the case, or by reason of the application for the return of a fugitive not being made in good faith in the interests of justice or otherwise, it would, having regard to the distance, to the facilities for communication, and to all the circumstances of the case, be unjust or oppressive or too severe a punishment to return the fugitive either at all or until the expiration of a certain period, such Court may discharge the fugitive, either absolutely or on bail, or order that he shall not be returned until after the expiration of the period named in the order, or may make such other order in the premises as to the Court seems just.

Powers of superior Court to discharge fugitive when case frivolous or return unjust.

11. In Ireland the Lord Lieutenant or Lords Justices or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, also the chief secretary of such Lord Lieutenant, may, as well as a Secretary of State, execute any portion of the powers by this part of this Act vested in a Secretary of State.

Power of Lord Lieutenant in Ireland.

PART II.

INTER-COLONIAL BACKING OF WARRANTS, AND OFFENCES.

Application of part of Act.

12. This part of this Act shall apply only to those groups of British possessions to which, by reason of their contiguity or otherwise, it may seem expedient to Her Majesty to apply the same.

Application of part of Act to group of British possessions.

It shall be lawful for Her Majesty from time to time by Order in Council to direct that this part of this Act shall apply to the group of British possessions mentioned in the Order, and by the same or any subsequent Order to except certain offences from the application of this part of this Act, and to limit the application of this part of this Act by such conditions, exceptions, and qualifications as may be deemed expedient.

Backing of Warrants.

13. Where in a British possession of a group to which this part of this Act applies a warrant has been issued for the apprehension of a person accused of an offence punishable by law in that possession, and such person is or is suspected of being in or on the way to another British possession of the same group, a magistrate in the last-mentioned possession, if satisfied that the warrant was issued by a person having lawful authority to issue the same, may endorse such warrant in manner provided by this Act, and the warrant so endorsed shall be a sufficient authority to apprehend, within the jurisdiction of the endorsing magistrate, the person named in the warrant, and bring him before the endorsing magistrate or some other magistrate in the same British possession.

14. The magistrate before whom a person so apprehended is brought, if he is satisfied that the warrant is duly authenticated as directed by this Act and was issued by a person having lawful authority to issue the same, and is satisfied on oath that the prisoner is the person named or otherwise described in the warrant, may order such prisoner to be returned to the British possession in which the warrant was issued, and for that purpose to be delivered into the custody of the persons to whom the warrant is addressed, or any one or more of them, and to be held in custody and conveyed by sea or otherwise into the British possession in which the warrant was issued, there to be dealt with according to law as if he had been there apprehended. Such order for return may be made by a warrant under the hand of the magistrate making it, and may be executed according to the tenor thereof.

A magistrate shall, so far as is requisite for the exercise of the powers of this section, have the same power, including the power to remand and admit to bail a prisoner, as he has in the case of a person apprehended under a warrant issued by him.

15. Where a person required to give evidence on behalf of the prosecutor or defendant on a charge for an offence punishable by law in a British possession of a group to which this part of this Act applies, is or is suspected of being in or on his way to any other British possession of the same group, a judge, magistrate, or other officer who would have lawful authority to issue a summons, requiring the attendance of such witness, if the witness were within his jurisdiction, may issue a summons for the attendance of such witness, and a magistrate in any other British possession of the same group, is satisfied that the summons was issued by some judge, magistrate, or officer having lawful authority as aforesaid, may endorse the summons with his name; and the witness, on service in that possession of the summons, so endorsed, and on payment or tender of a reasonable amount for his expenses, shall obey the summons, and in default shall be liable to be tried and punished either in the possession in which he is served or in the possession in which the summons was issued, and shall be liable to the punishment imposed by the law of the possession in which he is tried for the failure of a witness to obey such a summons. The expression "summons" in this section includes any subpoena or other process for requiring the attendance of a witness.

16. A magistrate in a British possession of a group to which this part of this Act applies, before the endorsement in pursuance of this part of this Act of a warrant for the apprehension of any person, may issue a provisional warrant for the apprehension of that person, on such information and under such circumstances as would in his opinion justify the issue of a warrant if the offence of which such person is accused were an offence punishable by the law of the said possession, and had been committed within his jurisdiction, and such warrant may be backed and executed accordingly; provided that a person arrested under such provisional warrant shall be discharged unless the original warrant is produced and endorsed within such reasonable time as may under the circumstances seem requisite.

17. If a prisoner in a British possession whose return is authorised in pursuance of this part of this Act is not conveyed out of that possession within one month after the date of the warrant ordering his return, a magistrate or a superior Court, upon application by or on behalf of the prisoner, and upon proof that reasonable notice of the intention to make such application has been given to the person holding the warrant and to the chief officer of the police of such possession or of the province or town where the prisoner is in custody, may, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary, order such prisoner to be discharged out of custody.

Any order or refusal to make an order of discharge by a magistrate under this section shall be subject to appeal to a superior Court.

18. Where a prisoner accused of an offence is returned in pursuance of this part of this Act to a British possession, and either is not prosecuted for the said offence within six months after his arrival in that possession or is acquitted of the said offence, the governor of that possession, if he thinks fit, may, on the requisition of such person, cause him to be sent back, free of cost, and with as little delay as possible, to the British possession in or on his way to which he was apprehended.

19. Where the return of a prisoner is sought or ordered under this part of this Act, and it is made to appear to a magistrate or to a superior court that by reason of the trivial nature of the case, or by reason of the application for the return of such prisoner not being made in good faith in the interests of justice or otherwise, it would, having regard to the distance, to the facilities of communication, and to all the circumstances of the case, be unjust or oppressive, or too severe a punishment, to return the prisoner either at all or until the expiration of a certain period, the Court or magistrate may discharge the prisoner either absolutely or on bail, or order that he shall not be returned until after the expiration of the period named in the order, or may make such other order in the premises as to the magistrate or court seems just.

Any order or refusal to make an order of discharge by a magistrate under this section shall be subject to an appeal to a superior court.

NOTE.

A Magistrate purporting to act under this section cannot make an order of discharge on any other grounds than those indicated in the section. Magistrates to whom prisoners are brought under s. 14 are not entitled to decide whether the issue of the warrant for the apprehension of the prisoner was or was not justifiable on the evidence. They can only act under this section if the case appears to be trivial or if the magistrate considers the application not made bona fide, not made in the interest of public justice or for some other reason of that kind.¹

PART III.

Trial, &c., of Offences.

20. Where two British possessions adjoin, a person accused of an offence committed on or within the distance of five hundred yards from the common boundary of such possessions may be apprehended, tried, and punished in either of such possessions.

21. Where an offence is committed on any person or in respect of any property in or upon any carriage, cart, or vehicle whatsoever employed in a journey, or on board any vessel whatsoever employed in a navigable river, lake, canal, or inland navigation, the person accused of such offence may be tried in any British possession through a part of which such carriage, cart, vehicle, or vessel passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which the offence was committed; and where the side, bank, centre, or other part of the road, river, lake, canal, or inland navigation along which the carriage, cart, vehicle, or vessel passed in the course of such journey or voyage is the boundary of any British possession, a person may be tried for such offence in any British possession of which it is the boundary :

¹ Muhammad Naina v. Bawa Sahib, (1933) 45 M. L. J. 50, [1933] M. W. N. 324, 65 M. L.

J. 56, 37 L. W. 735, 34 Cr. L. J. 883, [1933] AIR (M) 508 (1).

Provided that nothing in this section shall authorise the trial for such offence of a person who is not a British subject, where it is not shown that the offence was committed in a British possession.

22. A person accused of the offence (under whatever name it is known) of swearing or making any false deposition, or of giving or fabricating any false evidence, for the purposes of this Act, may be tried either in the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which such deposition or evidence is used, or in the part in which the same was sworn, made, given, or fabricated, as the justice of the case may require.

Trial of offence of false swearing or giving false evidence.

23. Where any part of this Act provides for the place of trial of a person accused of an offence, that offence shall, for all purposes of and incidental to the apprehension, trial, and punishment of such person, and of and incidental to any proceedings and matters preliminary, incidental to, or consequential thereon, and of and incidental to the jurisdiction of any court, constable, or officer with reference to such offence, and to any person accused of such offence, be deemed to have been committed in any place in which the person accused of the offence can be tried for it ; and such person may be punished in accordance with the Courts (Colonial) Jurisdiction Act, 1874.

Supplemental provision as to trial of person in any place.

24. Where a warrant for the apprehension of a person accused of an offence has been endorsed in pursuance of any part of this Act in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, or where any part of the Act provides for the place of trial of a person accused of an offence, every court and magistrate of the part in which the warrant is endorsed or the person accused of the offence can be tried shall have the same power of issuing a warrant to search for any property alleged to be stolen or to be otherwise unlawfully taken or obtained by such person, or otherwise to be the subject of such offence, as that court or magistrate would have if the property had been stolen or otherwise unlawfully taken or obtained, or the offence had been committed wholly within the jurisdiction of such court or magistrate.

Issue of search warrant.

25. Where a person is in legal custody in a British possession either in pursuance of this Act or otherwise, and such person is required to be removed in custody to another place in or belonging to the same British possession, such person, if removed by sea in a vessel belonging to Her Majesty or any of Her Majesty's subjects, shall be deemed to continue in legal custody until he reaches the place to which he is required to be removed ; and the provisions of this Act with respect to the retaking of a prisoner who has escaped, and with respect to the trial and punishment of a person guilty of the offence of escaping or attempting to escape, or aiding or attempting to aid a prisoner to escape, shall apply to the case of a prisoner escaping while being lawfully removed as aforesaid, in like manner as if he were being removed in pursuance of a warrant endorsed in pursuance of this Act.

Removal of prisoner by sea from one place to another.

PART IV.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Warrants and Escape.

26. An endorsement of a warrant in pursuance of this Act shall be signed by the authority endorsing the same, and shall authorise all or any of the persons named in the endorsement, and of the persons to whom the warrant was originally directed, and also every constable, to execute the warrant within the part of Her Majesty's dominions or place within which such endorsement is by this Act made a sufficient authority, by apprehending the person named in it, and bringing him before some magistrate in the said part or place, whether the magistrate named in the endorsement or some other.

Endorsement of warrant.

For the purposes of this Act every warrant, summons, subpoena, and process, and every endorsement made in pursuance of this Act thereon, shall remain in force, notwithstanding that the person signing the warrant or such endorsement dies or ceases to hold office.

27. Where a fugitive or prisoner is authorised to be returned to any part of Her Majesty's dominions in pursuance of Part One or Part Two of this Act, such fugitive or prisoner may be sent thither in any ship belonging to Her Majesty or to any of Her subjects.

Conveyance of fugitives and witnesses.

For the purpose aforesaid, the authority signing the warrant for the return may order the master of any ship belonging to any subject of Her Majesty bound to the said part of Her Majesty's dominions to receive and afford a passage and subsistence during the voyage to such fugitive or prisoner, and to the person having him in custody, and to the witnesses, so that such master be not required to receive more than one fugitive or prisoner for every hundred tons of his ship's registered tonnage; or more than one witness for every fifty tons of such tonnage.

The said authority shall endorse or cause to be endorsed upon the agreement of the ship such particulars with respect to any fugitive prisoner or witness sent in her as the Board of Trade from time to time require. Every such master shall, on his ship's arrival in the said part of Her Majesty's dominions, cause such fugitive or prisoner, if he is not in the custody of any person, to be given into the custody of some constable, there to be dealt with according to law.

Every master who fails on payment or tender of a reasonable amount for expenses to comply with an order made in pursuance of this section, or to cause a fugitive or prisoner committed to his charge to be given into custody as required by this section, shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, which may be recovered in any part of Her Majesty's dominions in like manner as a penalty of the same amount under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and the Acts amending the same.

28. If a prisoner escape, by breach of prison or otherwise, out of the custody of a person acting under a warrant issued or endorsed in pursuance of this Act, he may be retaken in the same manner as a person accused of a crime against the law of that part of Her Majesty's dominions to which he escapes may be retaken upon an escape.

Escape of prisoner from custody.

A person guilty of the offence of escaping or of attempting to escape, or of aiding or attempting to aid a prisoner to escape, by breach of prison or otherwise, from custody under any warrant issued or endorsed in pursuance of this Act, may be tried in any of the following parts of Her Majesty's dominions, namely, the part to which and the part from which the prisoner is being removed, and the part in which the prisoner escapes and the part in which the offender is found.

Evidence.

29. A magistrate may take depositions for the purposes of this Act in the absence of a person accused of an offence in like manner as he might take the same if such person were present and accused of the offence before him.

Depositions to be evidence, and authentication of depositions and warrants.

Depositions (whether taken in the absence of the fugitive or otherwise) and copies thereof, and official certificates of or judicial documents stating facts; may, if duly authenticated, be received in evidence in proceedings under this Act:

Provided that nothing in this Act shall authorise the reception of any such depositions, copies, certificates, or documents in evidence against a person upon his trial for an offence.

Warrants and depositions, and copies thereof, and official certificates of or judicial documents stating facts, shall be deemed duly authenticated for the purposes of this Act, if they are authenticated in manner provided for the time being by law, or if they purport to be signed by or authenticated by the signature of a judge, magistrate, or officer of the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the same are issued, taken, or made, and are authenticated either by the oath of some witness, or by being sealed with the official seal of a Secretary of State, or with the public seal of a British possession, or with the official seal of a governor of a British possession, or of a colonial secretary, or of some secretary or minister administering a department of the government of a British possession.

And all courts and magistrates shall take judicial notice of every such seal as is in this section mentioned, and shall admit in evidence without further proof the documents authenticated by it.

Miscellaneous.

Provision as to exercise of jurisdiction by magistrates. 30. The jurisdiction under Part One of this Act to hear a case and commit a fugitive to prison to await his return shall be exercised,—

(1) In England, by a chief magistrate of the metropolitan police courts or one of the other magistrates of the metropolitan police court at Bow Street; and

(2) In Scotland, by the sheriff or sheriff substitute of the county of Edinburgh; and

(3) In Ireland, by one of the police magistrates of the Dublin metropolitan police district; and

(4) In a British possession, by any judge, justice of the peace, or other officer having the like jurisdiction as one of the magistrates of the Metropolitan police court in Bow Street, or by such other court, judge, or magistrate as may be from time to time provided by an Act or ordinance passed by the legislature of that possession.

If a fugitive is apprehended and brought before a magistrate who has no power to exercise the jurisdiction under this Act in respect of that fugitive, that magistrate shall order the fugitive to be brought before some magistrate having that jurisdiction, and such order shall be obeyed.

Power as to making and revocation of Orders in Council. 31. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council from time to time to make Orders for the purposes of this Act, and to revoke and vary any Order so made, and every Order so made shall while it is in force have the same effect as if it were enacted in this Act.

An Order in Council made for the purposes of this Act shall be laid before Parliament as soon as may be after it is made if Parliament is then in session, or if not, as soon as may be after the commencement of the next session of Parliament.

Power of legislature of British possession to pass laws for carrying into effect this Act. 32. If the legislature of a British possession pass any Act or ordinance—

(1) For defining the offences committed in that possession to which this Act or any part thereof is to apply; or

(2) For determining the court, judge, magistrate, officer, or person by whom and the manner in which any jurisdiction or power under this Act is to be exercised; or

(3) For payment of the costs incurred in returning a fugitive or a prisoner, or in sending him back if not prosecuted or if acquitted, or otherwise in the execution of this Act; or

(4) In any manner for the carrying of this Act or any part thereof into effect in that possession, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty by Order in Council to direct, if it seems to Her Majesty in Council necessary or proper for carrying into effect the objects of this Act, that such Act or ordinance, or any part thereof, shall with or without modification or alteration be recognised and given effect to throughout Her Majesty's dominions and on the high seas as if it were part of this Act.

Application of Act.

Application of Act to offences at sea or triable in several parts of Her Majesty's dominions. 33. Where a person accused of an offence can, by reason of the nature of the offence, or of the place in which it was committed, or otherwise, be, under this Act or otherwise, tried for or in respect of the offence in more than one part of Her Majesty's dominions, a warrant for the apprehension of such person may be issued in any part of Her Majesty's dominions in which he can, if he happens to be there, be tried; and each part of this Act shall apply as if the offence had been committed in the part of Her Majesty's dominions where such warrant is issued, and such person may be apprehended and returned in pursuance of this Act, notwithstanding that in the place in which he is apprehended a Court has jurisdiction to try him :

Provided that if such person is apprehended in the United Kingdom a Secretary of State, and if he is apprehended in a British possession, the governor of such possession, may, if satisfied that, having regard to the place where the witnesses for the prosecution and for the defence are to be found, and to all the circumstances of the case, it would be conducive to the interests of justice so to do, order such person to be tried in the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which he is apprehended, and in such case any warrant previously issued for his return shall not be executed.

34. Where a person convicted by a Court in any part of Her Majesty's dominions of an offence committed either in Her Majesty's dominions or elsewhere, is unlawfully at large before the expiration of his sentence, each part of this Act shall apply to such person, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, in like manner as it applies to a person accused of the like offence committed in the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which such person was convicted.

35. Where a person accused of an offence is in custody in some part of Her Majesty's dominions, and the offence is one for or in respect of which, by reason of the nature thereof or of the place in which it was committed or otherwise, a person may under this Act or otherwise be tried in some other part of Her Majesty's dominions, in such case a superior Court, and also if such person is in the United Kingdom a Secretary of State, and if he is in a British possession the governor of that possession, if satisfied that, having regard to the place where the witnesses for the prosecution and for the defence are to be found, and to all the circumstances of the case, it would be conducive to the interests of justice so to do, may by warrant direct the removal of such offender to some other part of Her Majesty's dominions in which he can be tried, and the offender may be returned, and, if not prosecuted or acquitted, sent back free of cost in like manner as if he were a fugitive returned in pursuance of Part One of this Act, and the warrant were a warrant for the return of such fugitive, and the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly.

36. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty from time to time by Order in Council to direct that this Act shall apply as if, subject to the conditions, exceptions, and qualifications (if any) contained in the Order, any place out of Her Majesty's dominions in which Her Majesty has jurisdiction, and which is named in the Order, were a British possession, and to provide for carrying into effect such application.

37. This Act shall extend to the Channel Islands and Isle of Man as if they were part of England and of the United Kingdom, and the United Kingdom and those islands shall be deemed for the purpose of this Act to be one part of Her Majesty's dominions ; and a warrant endorsed in pursuance of Part One of this Act may be executed in every place in the United Kingdom and the said islands accordingly.

38. This Act shall apply where an offence is committed, before the commencement of this Act, or, in the case of Part Two of this Act, before the application of that part to a British possession or to the offence, in like manner as if such offence had been committed after such commencement or application.

Definitions and Repeal.

39. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—
The expression "Secretary of State" means one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State :

The expression "British possession" means any part of Her Majesty's dominions, exclusive of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, and Isle of Man ; all territories and places within Her Majesty's dominions which are under one legislature shall be deemed to be one British possession and one part of Her Majesty's dominions :

The expression "legislature", where there are local legislatures as well as a central legislature, means the central legislature only.

The expression "governor" means any person or persons administering the government of a British possession, and includes the Governor and lieutenant Governor of any part of India :

The expression "constable" means, out of England, any policeman or officer having the like powers and duties as a constable in England :

The expression "magistrate" means, except in Scotland, any justice of the peace, and in Scotland means a sheriff or sheriff substitute, and in the Channel Islands, Isle of Man, and a British possession means any person having authority to issue a warrant for the apprehension of persons accused of offences and to commit such persons for trial :

The expression "offence punishable on indictment" means, as regards India, an offence punishable on a charge or otherwise :

The expression "oath" includes affirmation or declaration in the case of persons allowed by law to affirm or declare instead of swearing, and the expression "swear" and other words relating to an oath or swearing shall be construed accordingly :

The expression "deposition" includes any affidavit, affirmation, or statement made upon oath as above defined :

The expression "superior court" means :

(1) In England, Her Majesty's Court of Appeal and High Court of Justice; and

(2) In Scotland, the High Court of Justiciary ; and

(3) In Ireland, Her Majesty's Court of Appeal and Her Majesty's High Court of Justice at Dublin; and

(4) In a British possession, any court having in that possession the like criminal jurisdiction to that which is vested in the High Court of Justice in England, or such court or judge as may be determined by any Act or ordinance of that possession.

40. This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, which date is in this Act referred to as the commencement of this Act.

41. The Act specified in the Schedule to this Act is hereby repealed as from the commencement of this Act :

Provided that this repeal shall not affect—

(a) Any warrant duly endorsed or issued, nor anything duly done or suffered before the commencement of this Act ; nor

(b) Any obligation or liability incurred under an enactment hereby repealed; nor

(c) Any penalty, forfeiture, or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against any enactment hereby repealed ; nor

(d) Any legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such warrant, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture, or punishment as aforesaid ; and any such warrant may be endorsed and executed, and any such legal proceeding and remedy may be carried on, as if this Act had not passed.

SCHEDULE.

Year & Chapter.	Title.
6 & 7 Vict. c. 34.	An Act for the better apprehension of certain offenders.

THE INDIAN EXTRADITION ACT.

(ACT XV OF 1903.)

AN ACT to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Extradition and Rendition of Criminals.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the more convenient administration in British India of the Extradition Acts, 1870 and 1873, and of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 ;

And whereas it is also expedient to amend the law relating to the extradition of criminals in cases to which the Extradition Acts, 1870 and 1873, do not apply ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

- Short title. 1903. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Extradition Act,
- (2) It extends to the whole of British India (including British Baluchistan, the Santhal Paraganas and the Paraganas of Spiti);
- Extent and commencement. and
- (3) It shall come into force on such day as the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, may direct.
- Definitions. 2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—
- (a) “European British subject” means a European British subject as defined by the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force ;
- (b) “extradition offence” means any such offence as is described in the first schedule :
- (c) “Foreign State” means a State to which, for the time being, the Extradition Acts, 1870 and 1873, apply :
- (d) “High Court” means the High Court as defined by the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force :
- (e) “offence” includes any act wheresoever committed which would, if committed in British India, constitute an offence : and
- (f) “rules” include prescribed forms.

NOTE.

Clause (a).—A European British subject does not cease to be a European British subject by her marriage with an Indian subject of a Native State of India ; nor does she cease to be such by her domicile in a Native State of India.¹

Clause (c).—Chandranagore is a ‘Foreign State’ as defined by this clause, and the provisions of Chapter II thereof must be followed before a fugitive offender can be surrendered to the French authorities.²

Clause (e).—As to the wider interpretation assigned to the word ‘offence’, see Adams v. Emperor.³

CHAPTER II.

SURRENDER OF FUGITIVE CRIMINALS IN CASE OF FOREIGN STATES.

3. (1) Where a requisition is made to the Central Government by the Government of any Foreign State for the surrender of a fugitive criminal of that State, who is in or who is suspected of being in British India, the Central Government may, if it thinks fit, issue an order to any Magistrate who would have had jurisdiction to inquire into the crime if it had been an offence committed within the local limits of his jurisdiction, directing him to inquire into the case.
- Requisition for surrender.

¹ Bai Aisha, (1928) 31 Bom. L. R. 62, 53 Bom. 149.

² Cullington, (1920) 48 Cal. 328.
³ (1903) 26 Mad. 607.

(2) The Magistrate so directed shall issue a summons or warrant for the arrest of the fugitive criminal according as the case appears to be one in which a summons or warrant would ordinarily issue.

(3) When such criminal appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the Magistrate shall inquire into the case in the same manner and have the same jurisdiction and powers, as nearly as may be, as if the case were one triable by the Court of Session or High Court, and shall take such evidence as may be produced in support of the requisition and on behalf of the fugitive criminal, including any evidence to show that the crime of which such criminal is accused or alleged to have been convicted is an offence of a political character or is not an extradition crime.

(4) If the Magistrate is of opinion that a prima facie case is made out in support of the requisition, he may commit the fugitive criminal to prison to await the orders of the Central Government.

(5) If the Magistrate is of opinion that a prima facie case is not made out in support of the requisition, or if the case is one which is bailable under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force, the Magistrate may release the fugitive criminal on bail.

(6) The Magistrate shall report the result of his inquiry to the Central Government and shall forward, together with such report, any written statement which the fugitive criminal may desire to submit for the consideration of the Government.

(7) If the Central Government is of opinion that such report or written statement raises an important question of law, it may make an order referring such question of law to such High Court as may be named in the order, and the fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered until such question has been decided.

(8) If, upon receipt of such report and statement or upon the decision of any such question, the Central Government is of opinion that the fugitive criminal ought to be surrendered, it may issue a warrant for the custody and removal of such criminal and for his delivery at a place and to a person to be named in the warrant.

(9) It shall be lawful for any person to whom a warrant is directed in pursuance of sub-section (8), to receive, hold in custody and convey the person mentioned in the warrant, to the place named in the warrant, and, if such person escapes out of any custody to which he may be delivered in pursuance of such warrant, he may be re-taken as a person accused of an offence against the law of British India may be re-taken upon an escape.

(10) If such a warrant as is prescribed by sub-section (8) is not issued and executed in the case of any fugitive criminal, who has been committed to prison under sub-section (4), within two months after such committal, the High Court may, upon application made to it on behalf of such fugitive criminal, and upon proof that reasonable notice of the intention to make such application has been given to the Central Government, order such criminal to be discharged, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary.

NOTE.

It is the valuable right of a citizen that he should not be sent out to a foreign jurisdiction without the law relating to extradition being strictly complied with. It is the duty of the Court to give a strict interpretation to the provisions of the Extradition Act.⁴

Sub-sec. (1).—An order issued under this sub-section by the Government of Bengal upon a requisition made to the Government of India is held to be invalid, and cannot be “ratified” by a subsequent order of the Government of India. Where, however, the latter order directs the Magistrate in pursuance of the former order “and of the statutory provisions in that behalf to enquire into the said case,” the Government gives valid effect to its intention, and the Magistrate has jurisdiction to inquire. The only Government competent to issue the order for inquiry is the Government to whom the foreign State has made a requisition. This function must be performed strictly, and cannot be delegated.⁵

⁴ Ram Pargas, [1948] O. W. N. 64

Sub-sec. (4).—The Magistrate must under this sub-section report the case to the Local Government.⁶

Sub-sec. (5).—The High Court has the fullest discretion, having regard to the provisions relating to bail in the Criminal Procedure Code, to grant bail to a prisoner against whom proceedings are pending under this Act.⁷

Sub-sec. (6).—This sub-section is not a substitute for and does not interfere with proceedings taken under s. 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 491 is applicable to cases under this Act.⁸

Sub-sec. (10).—A Magistrate is not warranted in keeping people in custody on a mere allegation that criminal proceedings against them are pending in a foreign State. Unless proper steps be taken against persons detained under the Act, they must be released.⁹

4. (1) Where it appears to any Magistrate of the first class or any Magistrate specially empowered by the Central Government in this behalf that a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction is a fugitive criminal of a Foreign State, he may, if he thinks fit, issue a warrant for the arrest of such person, on such information or complaint and on such evidence as would, in his opinion, justify the issue of a warrant if the crime of which he is accused or has been convicted had been committed within the local limits of his jurisdiction

Power to Magistrate to issue warrant of arrest in certain cases.

Issue of warrant to be reported forthwith.

(2) The Magistrate shall forthwith report the issue of a warrant under this section to the Central Government.

(3) A person arrested on a warrant issued under this section shall not be detained more than two months unless within that period the Magistrate receives an order made with reference to such person under section 3, sub-section (1).

Person arrested not to be detained unless order received.

(4) In the case of a person arrested or detained under this section the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force relating to bail shall apply in the same manner as if such person were accused of committing in British India the crime of which he is accused or has been convicted.

Bail.

NOTE.

Sub-sec. (1)—A Magistrate may issue a warrant when the person to be arrested is within his jurisdiction. Section 4 merely provides a preliminary procedure. Under it an arrest may be effected before the receipt of the requisition mentioned in s. 3, otherwise the criminal might escape. The two sections do not overlap.¹⁰

5. (1) If the Central Government is of opinion that the crime of which any fugitive criminal of a Foreign State is accused or alleged to have been convicted is of a political character, it may, if it thinks fit, refuse to issue any order under section 3, sub-section (1).

Power of Government to refuse to issue order under section 3 when crime of political character.

(2) The Central Government may also at any time stay any proceedings taken under this Chapter and direct any warrant issued under this Chapter to be cancelled and the person for whose arrest such warrant has been issued to be discharged.

Power of Government to discharge any person in custody at any time.

6. The expressions "the Police Magistrate" and "the Secretary of State" in section 3 of the Extradition Act, 1870, shall be read as referring respectively to the Magistrate directed to inquire into a case under section 3 of this Act, and to the Central Government.

References to "Police Magistrate" and "Secretary of State" in section 3 of Extradition Act, 1870.

NOTE.

Under this section the Chief Presidency Magistrate has no option but to execute the warrants. Hence the Magistrate's custody of the prisoners for whom warrants are issued on arrest is legal and proper. The fact that the prisoners have been in British India at the time at which the offences with which they are charged are said to have been committed would be a good defence to the charges, but is not relevant to the question whether the custody in which they are detained is legal or illegal.¹¹

⁵ Rudolf Stallmann, (1911) 39 Cal. 164.

⁶ Ram Sahai, (1868) P. R. No. 10 of 1868.

⁷ Rudolf Stallmann, (1911) 39 Cal. 164.

⁸ Rudolf Stallmann, ibid., distinguishing Rudolf Stallmann, (1911) 38 Cal. 547.

⁹ Kaladgi Magistrate's Quarterly Return, (1877) Unrep. Cr. C. 124.

¹⁰ Rudolf Stallmann, (1911) 39 Cal. 164.

¹¹ C. P. Mathen, [1939] Mad. 728.

CHAPTER III.

SURRENDER OF FUGITIVE CRIMINALS IN CASE OF STATES OTHER THAN FOREIGN STATES.

7. (1) Where an extradition offence has been committed or is supposed to have been committed by a person, not being a European British subject, in the territories of any State not being a Foreign State, and such person escapes into or is in British India, and the Political Agent in or for such State issues a warrant, addressed to the District Magistrate of any district in which such person is believed to be, or if such person is believed to be in any Presidency town to the Chief Presidency Magistrate of such town, for his arrest and delivery at a place and to a person or authority indicated in the warrant, such Magistrate shall act in pursuance of such warrant and may give directions accordingly.

(2) A warrant issued as mentioned in sub-section (1) shall be executed in the manner provided by the law for the time being in force with reference to the execution of warrants, and the accused person, when arrested, shall be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, who shall record any statement made by him; such accused person shall then, unless released in accordance with the provisions of this Act, be forwarded to the place and delivered to the person or authority indicated in the warrant.

NOTE.

Extradition is only a means of bringing the accused before the tribunal having jurisdiction. Extradition proceedings could never limit the jurisdiction of the Court if there is nothing on the face of the proceedings to warrant the conclusion that any limitation has been imposed. The mere circumstance that one particular offence is mentioned when extradition is demanded does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that extradition is allowed for the purpose of the trial only on that charge, and on no other charge whatever. And in any event it could not exclude a trial and conviction on any charge, which the facts disclosed in the extradition proceedings would suffice to sustain.¹²

Under clause (1) there are three conditions precedent for the issue of a legal warrant: (1) the offence must be an extradition offence, (2) the accused must not be a European British subject, and (3) the offence must have been committed or must be supposed to have been committed by the accused in the territories of the State. Without all these three conditions being fulfilled the Political Agent would have no authority to issue a warrant under this section.¹³

A District Magistrate, who is addressed with a view to execution of a warrant issued by a Political Agent of a Native State under clause (1), must act in pursuance of such warrant and has no authority to ascertain whether a prima facie case exists against the accused or not.¹⁴

Where a warrant has been issued by the Political Agent under this section, its execution by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate in British India, in accordance with the Act, is, according to the Calcutta High Court, an executive act, and the High Court cannot interfere in revision with the proceedings of the Magistrate and the order to surrender the fugitive criminal, but if the latter considers himself aggrieved thereby, he can invoke the action of the Government under s. 15.¹⁵ The Bombay High Court has, however, dissented from this view and held that the order to surrender is a judicial order, which can be revised by the High Court either under s. 439 or s. 561A, or interfered with under s. 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁶ The view of the Patna High Court is in agreement with the Bombay view.¹⁷

On a requisition made to him by a Native State, the Political Agent, who was also a District Magistrate, issued a warrant under this section to arrest the accused. The latter surrendered of his own record and the warrant was returned unexecuted. The Political Agent then issued a certificate under s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, that the accused should be tried in British India. Subsequently, the State authorities pressed for the accused's surrender, and the Political Agent accordingly ordered the accused to be handed over to the State for trial. It was held that it was not open to the Political Agent to recall the certificate issued by him under s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, and that the order passed by him allowing the trial in the Native State was unsustainable.¹⁸

¹² Khoda Uma, (1892) 17 Bom. 369, 374, 375.

¹³ Sandal Singh v. District Magistrate of Dehra Dun, (1934) 56 All. 409, 417.

¹⁴ Giyan Chand, (1908) P. R. No. 3 of 1909, 9 Cr. L. J. 3.

¹⁵ Gulli Sahu, (1914) 42 Cal. 793.

¹⁶ Bai Aisha, (1928) 31 Bom. L. R. 62, 58

Bom. 149; Popatbhai Becharsingji, (1929) Cr.-Rev. No. 93 of 1929, decided by Kemp and Baker, JJ., on May 7, 1929 (Bom. Unrep.).

¹⁷ Jaipal Bhagat, (1921) 1 Pat. 57.

¹⁸ Vazirsaheb Allisaheb Jhagirdar, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 377, 13 Cr. L. J. 537.

The fact that the warrant issued by the Political Agent does not instruct the Magistrate in terms with regard to the particular frontier police station at which the prisoner should be delivered is not a matter of any importance.¹⁹

The expression "Political Agent" in this section when read in the light of cl. (40) of s. 3, General Clauses Act, 1897, includes an "Assistant Political Agent" who has been specifically authorized to sign extradition warrants.²⁰ The Chief Court of Oudh has held that a warrant signed by a subordinate of the Political Agent is not a legal warrant.²¹

Power to grant bail.—A British Indian Magistrate to whom a warrant has been addressed under this section has no power to admit to bail a person arrested under it apart from the provisions of ss. 8 and 8A.²²

Clause 2.—This clause prescribes the way in which the warrants in connection with "an extradition offence" referred to in cl. (1) shall be executed. In a case where the warrant is in connection with an offence under s. 395, which is an extradition offence mentioned in the first schedule, it is this clause and not s. 8, which is applicable, because s. 8 does not specify distinctly that the procedure laid down therein is for "an extradition offence". Section 8 only emphasises the fact that in either of these circumstances if the Magistrate feels inclined to do so he may report the case to the Local Government.²³

Where the accused were charged with receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity in Indore but it appeared that the property was received in British India, it was held that the accused could not be surrendered under the warrant of the Political Agent.²⁴

Where in the warrant issued by the Political Agent the accused is clearly well defined to ensure identity and the place at which and the authority to whom delivery is to be made are mentioned, the warrant is not wanting in particulars required by law and is not indefinite in such of its terms as are required by clause (1) to be stated therein.²⁵

(3) The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force in relation to proclamation and attachment in the case of persons absconding shall, with any necessary modifications, apply where any warrant has been received by a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate under this section as if the warrant had been issued by himself.

8. (1) Where a Political Agent has directed by endorsement on any such warrant that the person for whose arrest it is issued may be released on executing a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before a person or authority indicated in this behalf in the warrant at a specified time and place, the Magistrate to whom the warrant is addressed shall on such security being given release such person from custody.

(2) When security is taken under this section, the Magistrate shall certify the fact to the Political Agent who issued the warrant, and shall retain the bond.

(3) If the person bound by any such bond does not appear at the time and place specified, the Magistrate may, on being satisfied as to his default, issue a warrant directing that he be re-arrested and handed over to any person authorized by the Political Agent to take him into custody.

(4) In the case of any bond executed under this section, the Magistrate may exercise the powers conferred by the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force in relation to taking a deposit in lieu of the execution of a bond and with respect to the forfeiture of bonds and the discharge of sureties.

NOTE.

Where a person was arrested upon a warrant issued by a Political Agent under this Act, and was placed before a Magistrate, and such Magistrate passed an order releasing him on bail and directing him to appear before the Political Agent on a certain date, although there was no endorsement on the warrant giving the Magistrate power to pass such an order, it was held that in the absence of such an endorsement under this section the Magistrate had no authority to pass such an order.¹

¹⁹ C. P. Mathen, [1939] Mad. 728.

²⁰ Hadibandhu Padhan, (1945) 24 Pat. 609.

²¹ Ram Pargas, [1948] O. W. N. 64.

²² Murlidhar Bhagwandas, (1918) 20 Bom. L. R. 1009, 43 Bom. 340.

²³ Madan Sahu, (1934) 15 P. L. T. 493,

86 Cr. L. J. 375, [1934] AIR (P) 1553.

²⁴ Hukam Chand, (1873) P. R. No. 14 of 1873.

²⁵ Bajjnath, (1931) 8 O. W. N. 933, 32 Cr. L. J. 1243.

¹ Raj Kumar Dutt v. Tothal Sijo, (1907) 7 C. L. J. 171, 12 C. W. N. 602, 7 Cr. L. J. 198.

8A. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 7, sub-section (2), or in section 8, when an accused person arrested in accordance with the provisions of section 7 is produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, and the statement (if any) of such accused person has been recorded, such Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before proceeding further report the case to the Central Government and, pending the receipt of orders on such report, may detain such accused person in custody or release him on his executing a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance when required.

(2) In the case of any bond executed in pursuance of this section, the District Magistrate or the Chief Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, may exercise the powers conferred by the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force in relation to taking a deposit in lieu of the execution of a bond and with respect to the forfeiture of bonds and the discharge of sureties.

NOTE.

If the person whose extradition is sought is a British subject in whose favour the discretion vested by a treaty might possibly be exercised by the Provincial Government, he should raise the point before the District Magistrate, who would then refer the matter for the orders of the Provincial Government under this section.²

This section was added by Act I of 1913, s. 3.

Sub-section (2) was added by Act III of 1947, s. 2.

9. Where a requisition is made to the Central Government by or on behalf of any State not being a Foreign State, for the surrender of any person accused of having committed an offence in the territories of such State, such requisition shall (except in so far as relates to the taking of evidence to show that the offence is of a political character or is not an extradition crime) be dealt with in accordance with the procedure prescribed by section 8 for requisitions made by the Government of any Foreign State as if it were a requisition made by any such Government under that section :

Provided that, if there is a Political Agent in or for any such State, the requisition shall be made through such Political Agent.

NOTE.

This section only applies when a requisition has been made to the Government of India or to a Provincial Government and not when a warrant has been addressed to the District Magistrate.³

10. (1) If it appears to any Magistrate of the first class or any Magistrate empowered by the Central Government in this behalf that a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction is accused or suspected of having committed an offence in any State not being a Foreign State and that such person may lawfully be surrendered to such State, or that a warrant may be issued for his arrest under section 7, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, issue a warrant for the arrest of such person on such information or complaint and on such evidence as would, in his opinion, justify the issue of a warrant if the offence had been committed within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(2) The Magistrate shall forthwith report the issue of a warrant under this section, if the offence appears or is alleged to have been committed in the territories of a State for which there is a Political Agent, to such Political Agent and in other cases to the Central Government.

(3) A person arrested on a warrant issued under this section shall not, without the special sanction of the Central Government, be detained more than two months, unless within such period the Magistrate receives an order made with reference to such person in accordance with the procedure prescribed by section 9, or a warrant for the arrest of such person under section. 7.

(4) In the case of a person arrested or detained under this section, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force relating to bail shall apply in the same manner as if such person were accused of committing in British India the offence with which he is charged.

² Moonga Lal Keot, (1933) 12 Pat. 347.

³ Jaipal Bhagat, (1921) 1 Pat. 5.

NOTE.

The provisions of this Act are meant to ensure that the arrest and detention of persons, who are alleged to have committed an offence outside British territory, should be in accordance with a certain procedure and the sections of the Act with reference to such procedure should be construed strictly in favour of the subject. When there is neither a warrant under s. 7 nor a requisition under s. 9, the Magistrate is empowered to issue a warrant under this section. It is an essential ingredient of this procedure that there should be a warrant. An arrest without such warrant is illegal.⁴

This section applies only if the warrant issued under s. 7 is legal, but absconding from jail not being one of the offences mentioned in Schedule I of this Act, a warrant for arrest on such a charge does not fall within s. 7.⁵ Where a person is arrested without a warrant either under s. 54 (g) of the Criminal Procedure Code or under s. 33 (g) of the Bombay City Police Act, 1902, and detained by a Magistrate under s. 23 of this Act, such Magistrate has power to release the arrested person on bail under this sub-section.⁶

11. (1) A person accused of an offence committed in British India, not being the offence for which his surrender is asked, or undergoing sentence under any conviction in British India, shall not be surrendered in compliance with a warrant issued by a Political Agent under section 7 or a requisition made by or on behalf of any State not being a Foreign State under section 9, except on the condition that such person be re-surrendered to the Central Government on the termination of his trial for the offence for which his surrender has been asked :

Provided that no such condition shall be deemed to prevent or postpone the execution of a sentence of death lawfully passed.

(2) On the surrender of a person undergoing sentence under a conviction in British India, his sentence shall be deemed to be suspended until the date of his re-surrender, when it shall revive and have effect for the portion thereof which was unexpired at the time of his surrender.

12. The provisions of this Chapter with reference to accused person shall, with any necessary modifications, apply to the case of a person who, having been convicted of an offence in the territories of any State not being a Foreign State, has escaped into or is in British India before his sentence has expired.

13. Every person who is accused or convicted of abetting or attempting to commit any offence shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Chapter, to be accused or convicted of having committed such offence, and shall be liable to be arrested and surrendered accordingly.

14. It shall be lawful for any person to whom a warrant is directed in pursuance of the provisions of this Chapter, to receive, hold in custody and convey the person mentioned in the warrant, to the place named in the warrant, and, if such person escapes out of any custody to which he may be delivered in pursuance of such warrant, he may be re-taken as a person accused of an offence against the law of British India may be re-taken upon an escape.

15. The Central Government may, by order, stay any proceedings taken under this Chapter, and may direct any warrant issued under this Chapter to be cancelled, and the person for whose arrest such warrant has been issued to be discharged.

NOTE.

The Bombay High Court has laid down that this section ousts the jurisdiction of the High Court to inquire into the propriety of the warrant ; but leaves open the question of the High Court's powers to interfere with a Magistrate's action, if it was proved that such action was consequent upon a warrant issued by a Political Agent which was plainly illegal.⁷ Similarly, the Calcutta High Court agreeing ⁴ Santabir Lama, (1984) 62 Cal. 399.

⁵ Jaipal Bhagat, (1921) 1 Pat. 57.

⁶ Shriram Shambhudayal, (1924) 26 Bom. L.

R. 984, 26 Cr. L. J. 948, [1925] AIR (B) 104.

⁷ Huseinally Niazally, (1905) 7 Bom. L. R. 463, 2 Cr. L. J. 489.

with this view holds that where the order of the Magistrate is sought to be justified under an authority supposed to be derived from the law, but is in fact without jurisdiction, such order is revisable by the Court at the instance of the party whose liberty is affected by it.⁸ The Patna High Court has held that although this section empowers the Government of India and the Provincial Government to stay proceedings taken under Chapter III of the Act and to direct any warrant to be cancelled and the accused person to be arrested, this does not oust the jurisdiction of the High Court to interfere in a case where action under the Act has not been under a valid warrant.⁹

There is no provision in this Act making an inquiry by a competent British Court in British India into the truth of the accusation, whether in the presence of the accused or otherwise, a condition precedent to the issue and execution of the warrant of the Political Agent under s. 7.¹⁰

16. The provisions of this Chapter shall apply to an offence or to an extradition offence, as the case may be, committed before the passing of this Act, and to an offence in respect of which a Court of British India has concurrent jurisdiction.

Application of Chapter to offences committed before its commencement.

17. (1) In any proceedings under this Chapter, exhibits and depositions (whether received or taken in the presence of the person against whom they are used or not) and copies thereof, and official certificates of facts and judicial documents stating facts, may, if duly authenticated, be received as evidence.

Receipt in evidence of exhibits, depositions and other documents.

(2) Warrants, depositions or statements on oath which purport to have been issued, received or taken by any Court of Justice outside British India, or copies thereof, and certificates of, or judicial documents stating the fact of, conviction before any such Court, shall be deemed duly authenticated,— Authentication of the same.

(a) if the warrant purports to be signed by a Judge, Magistrate, or officer of the State where the same was issued or acting in or for such State :

(b) if the depositions or statements or copies thereof purport to be certified, under the hand of a Judge, Magistrate or officer of the State where the same were taken, or acting in or for such State, to be the original depositions or statements or to be true copies thereof, as the case may require :

(c) if the certificate of, or judicial document stating the fact of, a conviction purports to be certified by a Judge, Magistrate or officer of the State where the conviction took place or acting in or for such State :

(d) if the warrants, depositions, statements, copies, certificates and judicial documents, as the case may be, are authenticated by the oath of some witness or by the official seal of a minister of the State where the same were respectively issued, taken or given.

(3) For the purposes of this section "warrant" includes any judicial document authorising the arrest of any person accused or convicted of an offence.

Definition of "warrant".

NOTE.

In all cases where inquiries are held by a view to extraditing an accused person, it would be desirable that he should, if possible, be present thereat.¹¹

18. Nothing in this Chapter shall derogate from the provisions of any treaty for the extradition of offenders, and the procedure provided by any such treaty shall be followed in any case to which it applies, and the provisions of this Act shall be modified accordingly.

Chapter not to derogate from treaties.

NOTE.

This Act is the law of the land, not, so far as the third chapter is concerned, to be applied for this or that country by Order in Council or by any special means. If some special procedure has been arranged by treaty, this section provides that it may be followed; but if the Government should choose to exercise the powers given by the Act, no municipal Court can interfere on the ground that the Government had undertaken to act otherwise by treaty.¹²

The offence of cheating is an extradition offence so far as British India is concerned in view of ⁸ Gulli Sahu, (1913) 41 Cal. 400.

⁹ Jaipal Bhagat, (1921) 1 Pat. 57.

¹⁰ Huseinally, (1905) 7 Bom. L. R. 463, 2

Cr. L. J. 439.

¹¹ Ibid.

¹² Moonga Lal Keot, (1933) 12 Pat. 347.

this section, notwithstanding its omission from Article 4 of the treaty between the British Indian Government and the Hyderabad State.¹³

The East Indian Dependencies of France, having been expressly excluded from the Extradition Treaty of 1876, and not being States or parts of a State to which the Extradition Acts of 1870 and 1873 apply, are not "Foreign States" within the meaning of the Indian Extradition Act of 1903. Extradition in the East Indian Possessions of Great Britain and France are governed by Article 9 of the Treaty of March 7, 1815; and that article contemplating summary delivery at the request of any authority of either High Contracting Party and not providing any special procedure for the purpose of extradition, the British Indian Government may, on the statement of the Government of Pondicherry that a British Indian subject has committed the offence of theft within its territory and on its demand, deliver him up to the Government of Pondicherry, without holding an enquiry to satisfy itself that there is a prima facie case against the person whose extradition is sought. Where the treaty practically provides for surrender on demand, a more elaborate procedure cannot be super-imposed by the unilateral act of one of the parties.¹⁴

CHAPTER IV.

RENDITION OF FUGITIVE OFFENDERS IN HIS MAJESTY'S DOMINIONS.

19. For the purpose of applying and carrying into effect in British India the provisions of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, the following provisions are hereby made :—

(a) the powers conferred on "Governors" of British possessions shall be powers of the Central Government :

(b) the powers conferred on a "Superior Court" may be exercised by any Judge of a High Court :

(c) the powers conferred on a "Magistrate" may be exercised by any Magistrate of the first class or by any Magistrate empowered by the Central Government in that behalf : and

(d) the offences committed in British India to which the Act applies, are piracy, treason, and any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code with rigorous imprisonment for a term of twelve months or more or with any greater punishment.

CHAPTER V.

OFFENCES COMMITTED AT SEA.

20. Where the Government of any State outside India makes a requisition for the surrender of a person accused of an offence committed on board any vessel on the high seas which comes into any port of British India, the Central Government and any Magistrate having jurisdiction in such port and authorized by the Central Government in this behalf may exercise the powers conferred by this Act.

CHAPTER VI.

EXECUTION OF COMMISSIONS ISSUED BY CRIMINAL COURTS OUTSIDE BRITISH INDIA.

21. The testimony of any witness may be obtained in relation to any criminal matter pending in any Court or tribunal in any country or place outside British India in like manner as it may be obtained in any civil matter under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure for the time being in force with respect to commissions, and the provisions of that Code relating thereto shall be construed as if the term "suit" included a criminal proceeding :

Provided that this section shall not apply when the evidence is required for a Court or tribunal in any State outside India other than a British Court and the offence is of a political character.

¹³ Murlidhar Bhagwandas, (1918) 20 Bom. L. R. 1009, 43 Bom. 810.

¹⁴ Muthu Reddi, (1930) 53 Mad. 1023.

CHAPTER VII.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Power to make rules. 22. (1) The Central Government may make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for—

(a) the removal of prisoners accused or in custody under this Act, and their control and maintenance until such time as they are handed over to the persons named in the warrant as entitled to receive them ;

(b) the seizure and disposition of any property which is the subject of, or required for proof of, any alleged offence to which this Act applies ;

(c) the pursuit and arrest in British India, by officers of the Government or other persons authorized in this behalf, of persons accused of offences committed elsewhere ; and

(d) the procedure and practice to be observed in extradition proceedings.

(3) Rules made under this section shall be published in the Official Gazette and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted by this Act.

23. Notwithstanding anything in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, any person arrested without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, in pursuance of the provisions of section 54, clause seventhly, of the said Code, may, under the orders of a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such arrest was made, be detained in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions as a person arrested on a warrant issued by such Magistrate under section 10.

Detention of persons arrested under section 54, clause seventhly, Act V, 1898.

NOTE.

This section refers to cases of persons arrested under s. 54, cl. 7, of the Criminal Procedure Code and is intended to cover those cases where the police officer arrests not only without a warrant but also without an order from a Magistrate and acts on his own responsibility, on suspicion or information as based on facts which the police officer has considered for himself.¹⁵

24. [Repeals.] [Repealed by Act X of 1914, s. 3, Sch. II].

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

EXTRADITION OFFENCES.

[See section 2, clause (b), and Chapter III (Surrender of Fugitive Criminals in case of States other than Foreign States).]

[The sections referred to are the sections of the Indian Penal Code.]

Frauds upon creditors (section 206).

Resistance to arrest (section 224).

Offences relating to coin and stamps (sections 230 to 263A).

Culpable homicide (sections 299 to 304).

Attempt to murder (section 307).

Thagi (sections 310, 311).

Causing miscarriage, and abandonment of child (sections 312 to 317).

Causing hurt (sections 323 to 333).

Wrongful confinement (sections 347, 348).

Kidnapping and slavery (sections 360 to 373).

Rape and unnatural offences (sections 375 to 377).

Theft, extortion, robbery, etc. (sections 378 to 414).

Cheating (sections 415 to 420).

Fraudulent deeds, etc. (sections 421 to 424).

Mischief (sections 425 to 440).

Lurking house-trespass (sections 443, 444).

Forgery, using forged documents, etc. (sections 463 to 477A).

¹⁵ Santabir Lama, (1934) 62 Cal. 399.

Desertion from any unit of Indian States Forces declared by the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, to be a unit desertion from which is an extradition offence.

Piracy by law of nations.

Sinking or destroying a vessel at sea, or attempting or conspiring to do so.

Assault on board a ship on the high seas with intent to destroy life or to do grievous bodily harm.

Revolt or conspiracy to revolt by two or more persons on board a ship on the high seas against the authority of the master.

Any offence against any section of the Indian Penal Code or against any other law which may, from time to time, be specified by the Central Government by notification in the Official Gazette either generally for all States or specially for any one or more States.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

[Enactments Repealed].

[Repealed by Act X of 1914, s. 3, Sch. II].

THE INDIAN MERCHANDISE MARKS ACT, 1889.

(ACT NO. IV OF 1889).

AN Act to amend the Law relating to Fraudulent Marks on merchandise.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to fraudulent marks on merchandise; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Title, extent and commencement. 1. (1) This Act may be called The Indian Merchandise Marks Act, 1889.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 1889.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) “mark” has the meaning assigned to that expression in clause (f) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Trade Marks Act, 1940;

(1A) “trade mark” means a “registered trade mark” as defined in clause (j) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Trade Marks Act, 1940, or a mark used in relation to goods for the purpose of indicating or so as to indicate a connection in the course of trade between the goods and some person having the right as proprietor to use the mark:

(2) “trade description” means any description, statement or other indication, direct or indirect,—

(a) as to the number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight of any goods, or

(b) as to the place or country in which, or the time at which, any goods were made or produced, or

(c) as to the mode of manufacturing or producing any goods, or

(d) as to the material of which any goods are composed, or

(e) as to any goods being the subject of an existing patent, privilege or copyright;

and the use of any mark which according to the custom of the trade is commonly taken to be an indication of any of the above matters shall be deemed to be a trade description within the meaning of this Act:

(3) “false trade description” means a trade description which is untrue in a material respect as regards the goods to which it is applied, and includes every alteration of a trade description, whether by way of addition, effacement or otherwise, where that alteration makes the description untrue in a material respect, and the fact that a trade description is a trade mark or part of a trade mark shall not prevent such trade description being a false trade description within the meaning of this Act:

(4) “goods” means anything which is the subject of trade or manufacture:

(5) “name” includes any abbreviation of a name.

3. [Substitution of new sections for sections 478 to 489 of the Indian Penal Code].
 Repealed by Act I of 1938, s. 2, and Sch.

Trade Descriptions.

4. (1) The provisions of this Act respecting the application of a false trade description to goods, or respecting goods to which a false trade description is applied, shall extend to the application to goods of any such marks, or arrangement or combination thereof, whether including a trade mark or not, as are or is reasonably calculated to lead persons to believe that the goods are the manufacture or merchandise of some person other than the person whose manufacture or merchandise they really are, and to goods having such marks, or arrangement or combination, applied thereto.

(2) The provisions of this Act respecting the application of a false trade description to goods, or respecting goods to which a false trade description is applied, shall extend to the application to goods of any false name or initials of a person, and to goods with the false name or initials of a person applied, in like manner as if such name or initials were a trade description, and for the purpose of this enactment the expression false name or initials means as applied to any goods any name or initials—

(a) not being a trade mark, or part of a trade mark,

(b) being identical with, or a colourable imitation of, the name or initials of a person carrying on business in connection with goods of the same description and not having authorised the use of such name or initials, and

(c) being the name or initials of a fictitious person or of a person not carrying on business in connection with goods of the same description.

(3) A trade description which denotes or implies that there are contained in any goods to which it is applied more yards, feet or inches than there are contained therein standard yards, standard feet or standard inches is a false trade description.

Application of trade descriptions. 5. (1) A person shall be deemed to apply a trade description to goods who—

(a) applies it to the goods themselves, or

(b) applies it to any covering, label, reel or other thing in or with which the goods are sold or are exposed or had in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, or

(c) places, encloses or annexes any goods which are sold, or are exposed or had in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, in, with or to any covering, label, reel or other thing to which a trade description has been applied, or

(d) uses a trade description in any manner reasonably calculated to lead to the belief that the goods in connection with which it is used are designated or described by that trade description.

(2) A trade description shall be deemed to be applied whether it is woven, impressed or otherwise worked into or annexed or affixed to the goods or any covering, label, reel or other thing.

(3) The expression "covering" includes any stopper, cask, bottle, vessel, box, cover, capsule, case, frame or wrapper, and the expression "label" includes any band or ticket.

NOTE.

The improper use of a trade-name may fall under this section and be punishable under s. 6 or s. 7 as a false trade description.¹

6. If a person applies a false trade description to goods, he shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, and unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, and in case of a second or subsequent conviction with imprisonment which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Penalty for applying a false trade description.

NOTE.

Under this section a corporation can be prosecuted and convicted, because a corporation through its agents can entertain an intention to apply a false trade description to goods. A conviction under the section does not involve the proof of any intention. The offence under the section is made absolute. If a person applies a false trade description to goods, he is liable to be convicted whatever his intention may have been. Intention is material only under the proviso and by way of defence. A person can escape the consequences of his act by proving that he acted without intent to defraud. Generally speaking an intent to defraud involves an intent to cheat in some form or other and to cause loss to some one; but under this section there is a sufficient intention to defraud if there is an intention to deceive the purchaser. It is no intent to defraud where there is a misdescription of goods, without the knowledge that it was a misdescription.²

¹ Anath Nath Dey, (1912) 40 Cal. 281.

Penalty for selling goods to which a false trade description is applied.

7. If a person sells, or exposes or has in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things to which a false trade description is applied, or which, being required by notification under section 12A to have applied to them an indication of the country or place in which they were made or produced, are without the indication required by such notification; he shall, unless he proves—

(a) that, having taken all reasonable precautions against committing an offence against this section, he had at the time of the commission of the alleged offence no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade description, or that any offence against this section had been committed in respect of the goods, and

(b) that, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons from whom he obtained such goods or things, or

(c) that otherwise he had acted innocently, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, and in case of a second or subsequent conviction with imprisonment which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

7A. If a person tampers with, alters or effaces a mark which has been applied to any goods to which it is required to be applied by notification made under section 12A, he shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, and, in the case of a second or subsequent conviction, with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Penalty for tampering with, altering or effacing a mark applied in pursuance of section 12A.

Unintentional Contravention of the Law relating to Marks and Descriptions.

8. Where a person is accused under section 482 of the Indian Penal Code of using a false trade mark or property mark by reason of his having applied a mark to any goods, property or receptacle in the manner mentioned in section 480 or section 481 of that Code, as the case may be, or under section 6 of this Act of applying to goods any false trade description, or under section 485 of the Indian Penal Code of making any die, plate or other instrument for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark, and proves—

Unintentional contravention of the law relating to marks and descriptions.

(a) that in the ordinary course of business he is employed, on behalf of other persons, to apply trade marks or property marks, or trade descriptions, or, as the case may be, to make dies, plates or other instruments for making, or being used in making, trade marks or property marks, and that in the case which is the subject of the charge he was so employed and was not interested in the goods or other thing by way of profit or commission dependent on the sale thereof, and

(b) that he took reasonable precautions against committing the offence charged, and

(c) that he had, at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, no reason to suspect the genuineness of the mark or description, and he shall be acquitted.

(d) that, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons on whose behalf the mark or description was applied,

² Dhanraj Mills, Ltd., (1943) 45 Bom. L.R. 300, 44 Cr. L. J. 574, [1943] AIR (B) 182.

Forfeiture of Goods.

9. (1) When a person is convicted under section 482 of the Indian Penal Code of using a false trade mark, or under section 486 of that Code of selling, or exposing or having in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things with a counterfeit trade mark applied thereto, or under section 487 or section 488 of that Code of making, or making use of, a false mark, or under section 6 or section 7 of this Act of applying a false trade description to goods or of selling, or exposing or having in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things to which a false trade description is applied, or which, being required by notification under section 12A to have applied to them an indication of the country or place in which they were made or produced, are without the indication required by such notification, or is acquitted on proof of the matter or matters specified in section 486 of the Indian Penal Code or section 7 or section 8 of this Act, the Court convicting or acquitting him may direct the forfeiture to Her Majesty of all goods and things by means of, or in relation to, which the offence has been committed or, but for such proof as aforesaid, would have been committed.

(2) When a forfeiture is directed on a conviction, and an appeal lies against the conviction, an appeal shall lie against the forfeiture also.

(3) When a forfeiture is directed on an acquittal and the goods or things to which the direction relates are of value exceeding fifty rupees, an appeal against the forfeiture may be preferred, within thirty days from the date of the direction, to the Court to which in appealable cases appeals lie from sentences of the Court which directed the forfeiture.

Amendment of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

10. [Repealed by Act I of 1938, s. 2, and Sch.]

11. [Repealed by Act I of 1938, s. 2, and Sch.]

Stamping of Piece-goods, Cotton Yarn and Thread.

12. (1) Piece-goods, such as are ordinarily sold by length or by the piece, which have been manufactured, bleached, dyed, printed or finished in premises which are a factory, as defined in the Factories Act, 1934, shall not be removed for sale from the last of such premises in which they underwent any of the said processes without having conspicuously stamped in English numerals on each piece the length thereof in standard yards, or in standard yards and a fraction of such a yard, according to the real length of the piece, and, except when the goods are sold from the factory for export from British India, without being conspicuously marked on each piece with the name of the manufacturer, or of the occupier of the premises in which the piece was finally processed or of the wholesale purchaser in India of the piece.

(2) Cotton yarn such as is ordinarily sold in bundles, and cotton sewing or darning thread, which have been manufactured, bleached, dyed or finished in premises which are a factory, as defined in the Factories Act, 1934, shall not be removed for sale from those premises unless, in accordance with any rules made under section 20 of this Act, in the case of yarn the bundles are conspicuously marked with an indication of the weight of yarn in each bundle and the count of the yarn contained in the bundle and in the case of thread each unit is conspicuously marked with the weight of thread in the unit and the grist number and, except where the goods are sold from the factory for export from British India, unless each bundle or unit is conspicuously marked with the name of the manufacturer or of the wholesale purchaser in India of the goods.

(3) If any person removes or attempts to remove or causes or attempts to cause to be removed for sale from such premises or sells or exposes or has in possession for sale any such piece-goods or any such cotton yarn or any cotton sewing or darning thread which is not marked as required by sub-section (1) and sub-section (2), every such piece and every such bundle of yarn and all such thread, and everything used for the packing thereof, shall be forfeited to His Majesty and such person shall be punished with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Power to require goods to show indication of origin.

12A. (1) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, require that goods of any class specified in the notification which are made or produced beyond the limits of British India and imported into British India, or which are made or produced within the limits of British India, shall, from such date as may be appointed by the notification not being less than three months from its issue, have applied to them an indication of the country or place in which they were made or produced.

(2) The notification may specify the manner in which such indication shall be applied, that is to say whether to the goods themselves or in any other manner, and the times or occasions on which the presence of the indication shall be necessary, that is to say whether on importation only, or also at the time of sale, whether by wholesale or retail or both.

(3) No notification under this section shall be issued, unless application is made for its issue by persons or associations substantially representing the interests of dealers in or manufacturers, producers, or users of the goods concerned, or unless the Central Government is otherwise convinced that it is necessary in the public interest to issue the notification, nor without such inquiry as the Central Government may consider necessary.

(4) The provisions of section 23 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall apply to the issue of a notification under this section as they apply to the making of a rule or bye-law the making of which is subject to the condition of previous publication.

(5) A notification under this section shall not apply to goods made or produced beyond the limits of British India and imported into British India if in respect of those goods the Chief Customs Officer is satisfied at the time of importation that they are intended for exportation whether after transshipment in or transit through British India or otherwise.

Supplemental Provisions.

13. In the case of goods brought into British India by sea, evidence of the port of shipment shall, in a prosecution for an offence against this Act or section 18 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, be prima facie evidence of the place or country in which the goods were made or produced.

14. (1) On any such prosecution as is mentioned in the last foregoing section or on any prosecution for an offence against any of the sections of the Indian Penal Code, as amended by this Act, which relate to trade, property and other marks, the Court may order costs to be paid to the defendant by the prosecutor or to the prosecutor by the defendant, having regard to the information given by and the conduct of the defendant and prosecutor respectively.

(2) Such costs shall, on application to the Court, be recoverable as if they were a fine.

NOTE.

On any prosecution mentioned in s. 13, or for an offence under the relevant sections of the Penal Code, the Court should award costs under this section and not under s. 546A of the Criminal Procedure Code. These costs include the advocate's fees.³

The appellate Court can award the costs of appeal under this section.⁴

15. No such prosecution as is mentioned in the last foregoing section shall be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the commission of the offence, or one year after the first discovery thereof by the prosecutor, whichever expiration first happens.

NOTE.

'Offence' means the offence charged.⁵ It means the offence in respect of which the prosecution is launched. The limitation prescribed by this section is three years from the date of the commis-

³ Mohamed Cassim v. Shaik Thumbay Sahib, (1939) 41 Cr. L. J. 392, [1940] AIR (R) 33.

⁴ Ganpat, (1914) 16 Bom. L. R. 78, 15 Cr.

L. J. 522.

⁵ Nagendranath Shaha, (1929) 57 Cal. 1153.

sion of the offence charged and one year from the date of discovery by the prosecutor of the offence charged, whichever is less.⁶

The prosecution is within time if launched within three years of the specific offence complained against. The starting-point for limitation is not the termination of three years from the date of the first of a series of offences. There is nothing about a series of offences in this section or in s. 486, Penal Code; section 486 specifically confines the offence to selling a thing, "goods or thing".⁷

Authority of the Central Government to issue instructions as to administration of this Act.

16. (1) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, issue instructions for observance by Criminal Courts in giving effect to any of the provisions of this Act.

(2) Instructions under sub-section (1) may provide, among other matters, for the limits of variation, as regards number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight, which are to be recognized by Criminal Courts as permissible in the case of any goods.

17. On the sale or in the contract for the sale of any goods to which a trade mark or mark or trade description has been applied, the seller shall be deemed to warrant that the mark is a genuine mark and not counterfeit or falsely used, or that the trade description is not a false trade description within the meaning of this Act, unless the contrary is expressed in some writing signed by or on behalf of the seller and delivered at the time of the sale or contract to and accepted by the buyer.

Implied warranty on sale of marked goods.

18. (1) Nothing in this Act shall exempt any person from any suit or other proceeding which might, but for anything in this Act, be brought against him.

Savings.

(2) Nothing in this Act shall entitle any person to refuse to make a complete discovery or to answer any question or interrogatory in any suit or other proceeding, but such discovery or answer shall not be admissible in evidence against such person in any such prosecution as is mentioned in s. 14.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to render liable to any prosecution or punishment any servant of a master resident in British India who in good faith acts in obedience to the instructions of such master, and on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, has given full information as to his master and as to the instructions which he has received from his master.

19. For the purpose of s. 12 of this Act and clause (f) of s. 18 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare what classes of goods are included in the expression "piece-goods, such as are ordinarily sold by length or by the piece."

Definition of piece-goods.

20. (1) The Central Government may make rules, for the purposes of this Act, to provide, with respect to any goods which purport or are alleged to be of uniform number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight, for the number of samples to be selected and tested and for the selection of the samples.

Determination of character of goods by sampling.

(1A) The Central Government may make rules providing for the manner in which for the purposes of section 12 cotton yarn and cotton sewing or darning thread shall be marked with the particulars required by that section.

(2) With respect to any goods for the selection and testing of samples of which provision is not made in any rules for the time being in force under sub-section (1), the Court or officer of Customs, as the case may be, having occasion to ascertain the number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight of the goods, shall, by order in writing, determine the number of samples to be selected and tested and the manner in which the samples are to be selected.

(3) The average of the results of the testing in pursuance of rules under sub-section (1) or of an order under sub-section (2) shall be prima facie evidence of the number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight, as the case may be, of the goods.

(4) If a person having any claim to, or in relation to, any goods of which samples have been selected and tested in pursuance of rules under sub-section (1) or of an order

⁶ Mohamed Cassim v. Shaik Thumby Sahib [1940] Ran. 244.

⁷ Muhammad Ahmad v. Venkanna, [1930]

M. W. N. 1263, 32 Cr. L. J. 809, [1931] AIR (M) 276.

under sub-section (2), desires that any further samples of the goods be selected and tested, they shall, on his written application and on the payment in advance by him to the Court or officer of Customs, as the case may be, of such sums for defraying the cost of the further selection and testing as the Court or officer may from time to time require, be selected and tested to such extent as may be permitted by rules to be made by the Central Government in this behalf or as, in the case of goods with respect to which provision is not made in such rules, the Court or officer of Customs may determine in the circumstances to be reasonable, the samples being selected in manner prescribed under sub-section (1), or in sub-section (2), as the case may be.

(5) The average of the results of the testing referred to in sub-section (3) and of the further testing under sub-section (4) shall be conclusive proof of the number, quantity, measure, gauge or weight, as the case may be, of the goods.

(6) Rules under this section shall be made after previous publication.

21. An officer of the Government whose duty it is to take part in the enforcement of this Act shall not be compelled in any Court to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against this Act.

22. If any person, being within British India, abets the commission, without British India, of any act which, if committed in British India, would, under this Act, or under any section of that part of Chapter XVIII of the Indian Penal Code which relates to trade, property and other marks, be an offence, he may be tried for such abetment in any place in British India in which he may be found, and be punished therefor with the punishment to which he would be liable if he had himself committed in that place the act which he abetted.

THE INDIAN PRESS (EMERGENCY POWERS) ACT.*

(Act No. XXIII of 1931).

AN Act to provide for the better control of the press.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the better control of the press; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and duration. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, inclusive of British Baluchistan and the Santhal Parganas.

(3) [Repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1935, s. 2.]

NOTE.

The provisions of this Act are of a penal character, and they should be construed strictly and in such a manner as to protect the liberties of the subject.¹

Definitions. 2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) “book” includes every volume, part or division of a volume, pamphlet and leaflet, in any language, and every sheet of music, map, chart or plan separately printed or lithographed;

(2) “document” includes also any painting, drawing or photograph or other visible representation;

(3) “High Court” means the highest Civil Court of Appeal for any local area except in the case of the province of Coorg where it means the High Court of Judicature at Madras;

(4) “Magistrate” means a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate;

* This Act has been supplemented by the Indian States (Protection) Act, 1934 (XI of 1934), s. 3, and amended in Bengal by Ben. Act VII of 1934 and in Assam by Assam Act III of 1934.

¹ Des Raj, (1938) 85 Cr. L. J. 1447 (2), [1934] AIR (L) 264.

(5) "newspaper" means any periodical work containing public news or comments on public news;

(6) "news-sheet" means any document other than a newspaper containing public news or comments on public news or any matter described in sub-section (1) of section 4;

(7) "press" includes a printing-press and all machines, implements and plant and parts thereof and all materials used for multiplying documents;

(8) "printing-press" includes all engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, implements, utensils and other plant or materials used for the purpose of printing;

(9) "unauthorized newspaper" means—

(a) any newspaper in respect of which there are not for the time being valid declarations under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, and

(b) any newspaper in respect of which security has been required under this Act, but has not been furnished as required;

(10) "unauthorised news-sheet" means any news-sheet other than a news-sheet published by a person authorised under section 15 to publish it; and

(11) "undeclared press" means any press other than a press in respect of which there is for the time being a valid declaration under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867.*

NOTE.

Sub-s. 1.—Sub-sections 1 and 6 of this section are not mutually exclusive and pamphlets coming within sub-s. (1) will also come within sub-s. (6) if they contain any matter described in s. 4 (1) of the Act.

The accused, members of the Labour Protection League, were convicted, under s. 18 (1) of the Act, of the offence of having distributed unauthorized news-sheets, namely, two pamphlets which were part of a series issued by the said league. One of the pamphlets was entitled "Deception practised by the rich and the difficulties they bring upon the poor" and the other was a drama. In the pamphlets the administration of justice was depicted as being on the side of the rich, more definitely referred to therein as zemindars, mill-owners and land-owners, and susceptible to bribes; and Government was charged with aiding the rich, and the rich and the Government were depicted as the two enemies of labour and susceptible of taking bribes. The pamphlets were distributed amongst uneducated readers. It was held that the pamphlets in question were documents within sub-s. (6) of this section, and that

* The following sections have been added by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act (Beng. VII of 1934) and are in force in Bengal only.—

Prohibition of publication of certain information.

2A. The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, prohibit either absolutely or subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be specified in the notification, the publication in any newspaper, news-sheet, pamphlet, leaflet or other document of any class of information which, in the opinion of the Provincial Government, tends to excite sympathy with, or secure adherents to, the terrorist movement.

2B. Neither the name nor the designation nor any words, signs or visible representations disclosing the identity of any witness in a trial by Commissioners appointed under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1925, or in a trial by a special Magistrate under the Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act, 1932, shall, without the permission of the Commissioners, or of the Special Magistrate, as the case may be, or of the Provincial Government, be published in any newspaper, news-sheet, pamphlet, leaflet or other document.

The following sections have been added by the Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act (Assam III of 1934), s. 30 (1) and are in force in Assam only.—

2A. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, prohibit either absolutely or subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be specified in the notification, the publication in any newspaper, book or other document of any class of information which, in the opinion of the Local Government, tends to create an atmosphere favourable to the gaining of adherents to the terrorist movement.

2B. Neither the name nor the designation nor any words, signs or visible representations disclosing the identity of any witness in a trial by Commissioners, appointed under the Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1934, shall, without the permission of the Commissioners, or, after the termination of the trial, without the permission of the Local Government, be published in any newspaper, book or other document.

the pamphlet tended to bring into hatred and contempt (a) the Government established by law in British India, (b) the administration of justice in British India, and (c) a class or section of His Majesty's subjects in British India, within s. 4 (1) of the Act, and they came within the definition of "news-sheet"; and that the distribution of the pamphlets being unauthorised, the accused were rightly convicted.²

Sub-s. 2.—When the word "document" has not been defined in the Act itself except that by saying that it includes also any printing, drawing or photograph or other visible representation, the definition of the word as contained in the Penal Code and the Indian Evidence Act will apply.³

Sub-s. 5.—The expression "public news" means something such as current happenings or alleged current happenings of interest or likely to be of interest to the public or to a portion of the public. Anything new or unknown, when communicated to another, is news, and news which is intended for, or is communicated to the general public, no matter what its nature, is public news. It is only by publication, by becoming public, by being communicated to the general public that news can become public. If a periodical is published for the general public, all news appearing in it is public news, and the paper is a "newspaper" within the meaning of the Act.⁴ An information already in possession of the public can hardly be called news and a document containing it cannot be described either a newspaper or a news-sheet within the meaning of this section and s. 18.⁵

Sub-s. 6.—Painting of the words "Boycott British goods" on a road does not amount to making of an unauthorised news-sheet as defined in this sub-section.⁶

Whether a publication falls within the definition of "news-sheet" should be considered in each individual case, having regard to the ordinary meaning of words; for any matter published or commented on to fall within the definition there must be an element of novelty about it.⁷

Information which concerns a matter of public and topical interest as is contrasted with purely historical interest is public news. Information conveyed by photographs of persons of the Chittagong Armoury Raid though discovered more than two years after the raid, the legal proceedings and emergency measures arising out of it not having terminated, was held to be public news and such photographs were news-sheets within the meaning of this sub-section.⁸

A leaflet, purporting to be an exhortation to the public to strive for freedom or independence, which, while including references to matters of historical interest also contains information and comments on events of topical importance or interest, is a news-sheet.⁹

The handbills or posters containing, inter alia, the words "Whither Democracy" "Nearly 1,000 political prisoners detained in India without trial" do not fall within the definitions of "news-sheet" or "news-paper".¹⁰

Control of printing presses and newspapers.

3. (1) Any person keeping a printing press who is required to make a declaration under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, may be required by the Magistrate before whom the declaration is made, for reasons to be recorded in writing, to deposit with the Magistrate within ten days from the day on which the declaration is made, security to such an amount, not being more than one thousand rupees, as the Magistrate may in each case think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose:

Provided that if a deposit has been required under sub-section (3) from any previous keeper of the printing press, the security which may be required under this sub-section may amount to three thousand rupees.

(2) Where security required under sub-section (1) has been deposited in respect of any printing-press, and for a period of three months from the date of the declaration mentioned in sub-section (1) no order is made by the Provincial Government under section 4 in respect of such press, the security shall, on application by the keeper of the press, be refunded.

(3) Whenever it appears to the Provincial Government that any printing press kept in any place in the territories under its administration, in respect of which security under the provisions of this Act has not been required, or having been required has been refunded under sub-section (2), is used for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, book or other document containing any words, signs or visible re-

² Ramalingayya, [1937] Mad. 14.

³ Satyawan Acharya, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 335.

⁴ "New Sind", [1942] Kar. 127, s.B.

⁵ Mrs. P. B. Bharucha, [1942] Lah. 553, 556.

⁶ Panduranga Mudali, (1932) 63 M. L. J. 906, [1932] M. W. N. 1357, 34 Cr. L. J. 90, [1933] ATR (M) 123.

⁷ Ramakrishnan, [1946] Mad. 70.

⁸ Jitendralal Banerji, (1933) 60 Cal. 1089.

⁹ Sham Sul Huda, [1937] 2 Cal. 670.

¹⁰ Mrs. P. B. Bharucha, [1942] Lah. 553.

presentations of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the keeper of the press stating or describing such signs or visible representations, order the keeper to deposit with the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the press is situated security to such an amount, not being less than five hundred or more than three thousand rupees as the Provincial Government may think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose.

(4) Such notice shall appoint a date, not being sooner than the tenth day after the date of the issue of the notice, on or before which the deposit shall be made.

NOTE.

An order under sub-s. (3) requiring a deposit of security, need not state what particular clause of s. 4 (1) has been offended. When the passages complained of are set out in the form of an annexure to the order, the provisions of law are complied with.¹¹ An order under sub-s. (3) directing the keeper of a printing press to deposit security cannot be set aside, if the publication, in respect of which security has been demanded, contains words, which express admiration of the conduct of a convict sentenced to death.¹²

Section 3 (3) does not constrain the Provincial Government to do anything more than to state or describe the words, signs or visible representations. It does not require that every word to which objection is taken by Government should be reproduced verbatim in the notice.¹³

Where in a notice issued under sub-s. (3) Government objects to certain passages in a publication as offending against s. 4 (1) (a) (b), it is not open subsequently to Government to justify the notice by resorting to other clauses of the section.¹⁴

A joint keeper of a press on whom a notice has been served under sub-s. (3) cannot by purchasing the share of his partner escape liability to have his press forfeited when he continues to use the press, by pleading that he, the keeper, has not been given notice as required by the Act.¹⁵

Sections 3 and 7 contemplate action against both the keeper of the press and the publisher of the paper, and no distinction is drawn between the case where the keeper of the press and publisher are two different persons or one and the same.¹⁷

4. (1) Whenever it appears to the Provincial Government that any printing press in respect of which any security has been ordered to be deposited under section 3 is used for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, book or other document containing any words, signs or visible representations which—

Power to declare security or press forfeited in certain
cases.

(a) incite to or encourage, or tend to incite to or to encourage, the commission of any offence of murder or any cognizable offence involving violence, or

(b) directly or indirectly express approval or admiration of any such offence, or of any person, real or fictitious, who has committed or is alleged or represented to have committed any such offence, or which tend, directly or indirectly,—

(c) to seduce any officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the military, naval or air forces of His Majesty or any police officer from his allegiance or his duty, or

(d) to bring into hatred or contempt His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India¹ or the administration of justice in British India or any class or section² of His Majesty's subjects in British India, or to excite disaffection towards His Majesty or the said Government, or

(e) to put any person in fear or to cause annoyance to him and thereby induce him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security or to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which he is legally entitled to do, or

(f) to encourage or incite any person to interfere with the administration of the law or with the maintenance of law and order, or to commit any offence, or to

¹¹ "Amrita Bazar Patrika", (1932) 37 C. W. N. 166, 56 C. L. J. 157, 33 Cr. L. J. 949, [1932] AIR (C) 738, S.B.

¹² Bapuji Kunbi v. Local Government, (1933) 29 N. L. R. 244, F.B.

¹³ Abid Ali Khan v. The Government of the United Provinces, (1944) 20 Luck. 235, F.B.

¹⁴ Vishnu Gangadhar v. Government of Bombay, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 58.

¹⁵ Mahbub Ahmad, (1936) 18 Lah. 65, F.B.

¹⁷ "New Sind," [1942] Kar. 127, S.B.

refuse or defer payment of any land revenue, tax, rate, cess or other due or amount payable to Government or to any local authority, or any rent of agricultural land or anything recoverable as arrears of or along with such rent, or

(g) to induce a public servant or a servant of a local authority to do any act or to forbear or delay to do any act connected with the exercise of his public functions or to resign his office, or

(h) to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, or

(i) to prejudice the recruiting of persons to serve in any of His Majesty's forces, or in any police force, or to prejudice the training, discipline or administration of any such force;*

the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the keeper of such printing-press, stating or describing the words, signs or visible representations which in its opinion are of the nature described above,—

(i) where security has been deposited, declare such security, or any portion thereof, to be forfeited to His Majesty, or

(ii) where security has not been deposited, declare the press to be forfeited to His Majesty, and may also declare all copies of such newspaper, book or other document wherever found in British India to be forfeited to His Majesty.†

Explanation 1.—No expression of approval or admiration made in a historical or literary work shall be deemed to be of the nature described in this sub-section unless it has the tendency described in clause (a).

Explanation 2.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection shall not be deemed to be of the nature described in clause (d) of this sub-section.

Explanation 3.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection shall not be deemed to be of the nature described in clause (d) of this sub-section.

Explanation 4.—Words pointing out, without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which are producing to have a tendency to produce feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects shall not be deemed to be words of the nature described in clause (h) of this sub-section.

(2) After the expiry of ten days from the date of the issue of a notice under sub-section (1) declaring a security, or any portion thereof, to be forfeited, the declaration made in respect of such press under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall be deemed to be annulled.

NOTE.

Scope.—A keeper of a printing press or a publisher of a newspaper is liable for acts previously done. The Provincial Government is, therefore, competent to forfeit a deposit made by a keeper of a press for an objectionable article published before the keeper makes the deposit.¹⁸

Sub-sec. (1).—Where a newspaper published as a news item an opinion transmitted to it by a news agency and expressed to a representative of that agency by a person to the effect that suspension of the civil disobedience movement amounted to an acknowledgment of defeat which would not further the cause of national progress and there was no evidence as to the status and standing of the interviewer

¹⁸ Rewa Prasad Dube v. Provincial Government, Central Provinces and Berar, [1946]

Nag. 90, S.B.

* The following two clauses have been added by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act (Beng. VII of 1934) and are in force in Bengal only.— or which

(j) give any information in contravention of a notification published under section 2A, or

(k) disclose the identity of any witness in contravention of the provisions of section 2B,

Similar clauses have been added by the Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act (Assam III of 1934), s. 30 (2), and are in force in Assam only.

† The following proviso was added by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act (Beng. VII of 1934), and is in force in Bengal only.—

Provided that no such declaration shall be made in a case to which clause (j) applies unless the keeper of the printing-press has had an opportunity of showing cause why such declaration should not be made.

nor any other evidence that such opinion would cause any of the effects described in sub-s. (1) of this section. It was held that in the circumstances, and reading the words in their entirety in a free and fair spirit, they did not come within the purview of sub-s. (1) of this section.¹⁹

Clause (a).—Words tending to incite to or to encourage bloody revolution and the destruction of the present social order by bloodshed and force clearly come within cl. (a) of this sub-section. It is unnecessary to show that the words tend to incite to or to encourage the commission of a particular offence or offences. It is sufficient if they tend to incite to or to encourage the commission of cognizable offences of violence in general.²⁰ Where there is nothing in the “announcement” itself which can be said to encourage directly or indirectly the commission of any offence, much less murder or other cognizable offence involving violence, or which makes reference, explicit or covert, to any person who has, or is supposed to have committed crimes of this nature, the mere fact that the head-line of the poster contains words “Long, Long Live Revolution” cannot lead to the conclusion that it was intended to produce literature advocating violence.²¹

The biography of a living person containing a narrative of the Revolutionary Movement in existence about thirty-five years ago which has since passed into history can be a historical work as distinguished from a narrative of current events, though the person has taken a prominent part in such movement. No such historical work can be regarded as objectionable unless it has the present tendency to incite people to do such violent acts as may be punishable under the law. The legislature has drawn a clear distinction between a historical or literary work and newspaper articles, pamphlets and similar publications. In the case of the latter, approval or admiration of an offence of murder or other violent crime is enough to attract the penal provisions of this Act; but in the case of the former, mere approval or admiration of such offence is not enough, but it must be shown that it has a tendency to encourage the offence at the time the work is published.²²

Clause (b).—Before applying this clause it must be shown that a person held up for admiration has committed or is alleged to have committed an offence of murder or any cognizable offence involving violence. The words of this clause are wide enough to include offences involving violence against person as well as property, but the essential element in the appropriate application of the clause is an offence which involves violence.²³

Clause (d).—Where the general tendency of articles published in a newspaper is to assert that the Local Government is deliberately abusing and misusing the powers conferred upon it by Ordinances, and to appeal to it to cease from so doing, the articles tend to bring Government into hatred and contempt under cl. (d). It is immaterial even if the facts stated are true. There is no exception making truth and public good an answer to a charge under this section. If an article charges Special Courts constituted under the Ordinances with acting in co-operation with the executive, it tends to bring into hatred or contempt the administration of justice under the Ordinances.²⁴

In order to determine whether a particular document, book or newspaper falls within the ambit of this clause the Court should consider the writing as a whole and in a fair, free and liberal spirit, not dwelling too much upon isolated passages or upon a strong word here and there, which may be qualified by the context but endeavouring to gather the general effect to which the whole composition would have on the minds of the public. Expressions which are the stock in trade of political demagogues have no tendency to excite disaffection against the Government established by law in British India, and being of every day use have no sting left in them, may be styled political exaggerations and cannot be said to be seditious and, therefore, do not come within the purview of this clause. The criticism that a certain policy of the Government is so unfortunate that it has created a political deadlock which has led to famine and conditions resulting in a large number of deaths of people by hunger cannot be construed as meaning that the Government that pursued that policy was guilty of murder of the people who died owing to famine conditions in the country.²⁵ In deciding whether the words complained of fall within this sub-section, the Court must have regard to the surrounding circumstances; the context in which the words appear; the persons to whom the words were addressed; the political atmosphere in which the words were delivered, and the place where they were published. Where a Tamil newspaper of small circulation contained an exhortation to its Tamil readers in Rangoon to free India from an alien Raj with the “Sword of Ahimsa” and by a campaign of passive resistance, it was held that in the circumstances obtaining in the case, although the words complained of were seditious, they did not fall within this clause.¹ Intention of the accused is immaterial and the only material question is

¹⁹ Newspaper “Advance” & Sadhan Press, (1933) 38 C. W. N. 56, 58 C. L. J. 32, S.B.

²⁰ Badri Narayan Singh v. Chief Secretary to Government of Bihar, (1940) 22 P. L. T. 260, 42 Cr. L. J. 548, [1941] AIR (P) 132, S.B.; In the matter of the Partap (Urdu) Daily, Lahore, [1947] Lah. 795, F.B.

²¹ Des Raj, (1933) 35 Cr. L. J. 1447, [1934], AIR (L) 264.

²² Vishnu Gangadhar v. Government of Bombay, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 57, S.B.

²³ Jairam, [1947] Kar. 69, F.B.

²⁴ Pothan Joseph, (1932) 34 Bom. L. R. 917, 56 Bom. 472, S.B.

²⁵ Harkishan Singh, (1944) 47 P. L. R. 3, 47 Cr. L. J. 345, [1946] AIR (L) 22, F.B.

¹ S. N. S. Mudaliar v. The Secretary of State for India, (1931) 10 Ran. 163, S.B.

the tendency or effect of the words, signs, or visible representations complained of.² The police form part of the Government established by law in British India as do the Magistrates, Judges and Secretaries. Where, therefore, the police as a whole are attacked the words tend directly or indirectly to bring into hatred or contempt the Government established by law in British India.³ Where the article in a newspaper after condemning the acts of the non-Muslim Government said that not taking steps to remove the domination of that Government was irreligiousness and that every effort should be made to free the country from such a domination, it was held that the article came within cl. (d) of sub-s. (1) of this section.⁴ Where a pamphlet purported to deal with the grievances of the poor against the rich and referred on one side to labourers in fields and factories and on the other to rich persons, the zemindars, the bankers and the petty shop-keepers, and the pamphlet called on the labourers to assemble in large numbers at a certain place and it appeared that the feelings of the assembly would be inflamed by this pamphlet against the rich persons and bankers and the zemindars and the petty shop-keepers, it was held that as the action taken by the accused in publishing the pamphlet would promote feelings of enmity or hatred between the different classes of His Majesty's subjects, he was punishable under sub-s. (1) of s. 18.⁵ For a subject nation to pray to Shri-Krishna on "Janmashtami" day for attainment of political freedom is not a thing which can be legitimately condemned. But for an innocent sentiment of such character, expressions such as "uplifted hand of oppression", "oppressed and humiliated India", "India persecuted and under subjection" and "Piteous wail of a suffering people" will have no place and would be wholly inapposite. These expressions assume the presence of an agency which has oppressed and humiliated her, has uplifted its hands for oppressing her further, and has been persecuting her by keeping her under subjection and being heedless of the piteous wails of her suffering people. The only agency for which it is possible to behave in that way is the Government established by law, and the expressions, having been used with reference to it, obviously tend to bring it into hatred or contempt and are calculated to excite disaffection towards it.⁶ The proper standpoint from which an offending article is to be viewed in determining its tendency is to judge how it would be understood by an average reader reading the article as a whole and dispassionately.⁷ Where the question was whether a poster was hit by cls. (d) and (f) of s. 4, sub-s. (1), as bringing into hatred or contempt, or as exciting disaffection towards His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, or as inciting the commission of an offence, it was held that in dealing with such a poster containing a caricature or cartoon, the common sense interpretation of such a document, namely, the impression it gives to a man of ordinary common sense, must be taken. It was worse than useless to try to extract a meaning out of it by a laboured commentary. Where such a poster gives one the impression of being a mere call to labourers to unity and to struggle to end the exploitation of labour by capital, the poster is not hit by sub-s. (1) of this section even though in this process of exploitation the poor are represented as being crushed or oppressed.⁸

The Nagpur High Court has held that cl. (d) must be construed in the light of the explanations to it and with reference to its historical background because they are terms of art which had already acquired a definite legal meaning before they were incorporated into the Indian Act and Ordinance Cases which construe the expressions "excite disaffection", "to bring or attempt to bring Government into hatred and contempt", "directly or indirectly" in s. 124-A, Indian Penal Code, are relevant in construing similar expressions in s. 4 (1) and (d). The question of intention is material in construing the speech or writing which is said to offend against the provisions of s. 4 (1) (d).

The place, the circumstances and the occasion of publication have to be taken into consideration in finding whether a writing or speech offends against the provisions of s. 4 (1) (d).⁹

1. 'Government established by law in British India'.—No distinction in substance can be drawn between "Government established by law in British India" and the executive Government.¹⁰ This expression is to be interpreted not by reference to definitions of "Government of India" and "Local Government" in the General Clauses Act, but by reference to the definition of 'Government' in s. 17 of the Indian Penal Code as British Rule and its representatives as such.¹¹

The Cabinet of Ministers belonging to a particular party and administering the Government of

² "Anandabazar Patrika", (1932) 60 Cal. 408, S.B.; "Amrita Bazar Patrika", (1932) 37 C. W. N. 166, 56 C. L. J. 157, 33 Cr. L. J. 949, [1932] AIR (C) 738, S.B.

³ "Zamindar" Newspaper, Lahore, (1933) 35 P. L. R. 40, 35 Cr. L. J. 966, [1934] AIR (L) 219, S.B.

⁴ Mohammad Usman Ghani v. Government of B. & O., (1934) 15 P. L. T. 286, S.B.

⁵ Ram Saran Das Johri, (1934) 35 Cr. L. J. 1000, [1935] AIR (A) 717.

⁶ Dainik Nayak & Swadesh Press, (1932) 34 Cr. L. J. 816, [1933] AIR (C) 278, F.B.

⁷ "The Indian Express", [1935] M. W.

N. 6, F.B.

⁸ Kamal Sarkar, [1938] 1 Cal. 455.

⁹ Bhagwati Charan Shukla v. Provincial Government, Central Provinces and Berar, [1946] Nag. 865, dissenting from Pothan Joseph, (1932) 56 Bom. 472, 34 Bom. L. 46 S.B.; Gurbaksh Singh, (1947) 48 Cr. L. J. 897, [1947] AIR (L) 361, S. B.

¹⁰ "Anandabazar Patrika", (1932) 60 Cal. 408, S.B.

¹¹ "Amrita Bazar Patrika", (1932) 37 C. W. N. 166, 56 C. L. J. 157, 33 Cr. L. J. 949, [1932] AIR (C) 738, S.B.

the Province must be held to be Government established by law in British India.¹²

The Union Jack is not the emblem of the Government established by law in British India.¹³

A handful of officers cannot be regarded as Government established by law in British India.¹⁴ Criticism of alleged high-handed actions of police not done at the instance of Government in a newspaper will not come under this clause.¹⁵

2. 'Class or section'.—These words mean a definitely ascertainable body of individuals not an indeterminate body or group having no clearly defined and non-variable characteristic or criteria by which they may be distinguished from any other body or group. Exploiters or capitalists as such do not constitute a class or section within the meaning of this clause.¹⁶ But Rajas and Jagirdars form a section of His Majesty's subjects.¹⁷

A political party like the Indian National Congress is not a class within the meaning of this clause or cl. (h) and the criticism of a political leader in however a bad taste does not bring the writer under cl. (h), unless the article, read as a whole, has the effect of producing or tending to produce one or more of the undesirable results specified in one or other of those two clauses.¹⁸ A political body like the Muslim League is not a "class" or "section" within the meaning of sub-s. (1), cl. (d) or (h) and therefore articles in a newspaper aimed at criticising the Muslim League do not come within the mischief of these clauses.¹⁹

Attacks on individual police officers do not bring into hatred or contempt either the Government established by law in British India or any class or section of His Majesty's subjects. However strong the criticism of police officers as distinct from the whole force may be it cannot come under this clause.²⁰

Clause (e).—The words "tend directly or indirectly" mean something more than "have as a possible result". The 'tendency' required may often be indirect, as the section itself contemplates, and not apparent on the face of the words themselves. For proof not only of the intention of the writer but of what is really material, the effect which the words are likely to produce, it may be necessary to look to evidence other than the words themselves, their context or the general nature of the newspaper. Therefore, when hearing an application made under s. 23 (1), it is open to the High Court to consider evidence other than the words themselves or their context immediate or general.²¹

The words of this clause appear to refer to private individuals and can be applied to protect private persons. They are wide enough to cover what is commonly known as blackmail, and the fact that the person put in fear or annoyance may have another remedy by way of civil or criminal action, by a suit for defamation or a prosecution for extortion, does not exclude the application of this section in appropriate cases.²²

Clause (h).—The words "different classes" refer to religious, racial, social, tribal and possibly economic or functional but not to political classes like the Mahasabha or the Indian National Congress. If the feelings of hatred are endangered or tend to be endangered by the publication in a religious racial or social class as such, the publication would be hit by the clause but not where such feelings are engendered or tend to engender not in any class as a whole but among the admirers or followers of a particular person to whatever religious or social class they might belong.²³ The people comprise a large body of men; they form a separable portion of the population of the country; they consist of a number of persons possessing common attributes and are grouped together under the name "police". They thus form a "section" as well as a "class" of his Majesty's subjects in British India.²⁴

The publication of factual news is not within the ambit of s. 4 (1) (d) (h) even though with bold headlines, if it is not shown these headlines in any way misrepresent or go beyond the actual news. A publication which when written may be perfectly innocuous, but may fall within the ambit of this clause, when re-published at a time when communal tension between two classes is at its highest and the publication tends to promote feelings of enmity and hatred between them.²⁵

Clause (i).—If a book contains passages which tend directly or indirectly to bring into hatred or contempt or to excite disaffection towards the administration established in an Indian State, it will come within the purview of this clause.¹

Explanation 1.—The biography of a living person containing a narrative of the revolutionary movement in existence about thirty-five years ago which has since passed into history can be a historical work as distinguished from a narrative of current events, though the person has taken a prominent part in such movement. No such historical work can be regarded as objectionable unless it has the present ¹² Rajagopala Rao v. The Province of Madras, (1948) 61 L. W. 306.

¹³ Kamal Sarkar, [1938] 1 Cal. 455.

¹⁴ Jang-I-Azadi, (1947) 49 P. L. R. 235. [1948] AIR (L) 6.

¹⁵ Rajagopala Rao v. The Province of Madras, (1948) 61 L. W. 306.

¹⁶ Kamal Sarkar, [1938] 1 Cal. 455.

¹⁷ Jang-I-Azadi, sup.

¹⁸ M. Akhtar Ali Khan, (1947) 49 P. L. R. 190, 48 Cr. L. J. 915, F. B., [1947] AIR (L) 340.

¹⁹ In the matter of the Partap (Urdu) Daily,

Lahore, [1947] Lah. 795, F. B.

²⁰ Jang-I-Azadi, sup.

²¹ "New Sind", [1942] Kar. 127, S. B.

²² Ibid.

²³ Nawai Waqt Daily, Lahore, [1947] Lah. 497.

²⁴ "Zamindar" Newspaper, Lahore, (1938) 35 P. L. R. 40, 35, Cr. L. J. 966, [1934] AIR (L) 219, S. B.

²⁵ M. Akhtar Ali Khan, (1947) 49 P. L. R. 190, 48 Cr. L. J. 915, [1947] AIR (L) 340, S. B.; Nawai Waqt, Daily, Lahore, [1947] Lah. 497.

¹ Parkash Chand, (1937) 18 Lah. 445, F. B.

tendency to incite people to do such violent act as may be punishable under the law of the land.² Where a convict is termed a hero and the author desires the drum of his fame to reverberate in the whole universe, such expressions of admiration are not excluded by this Explanation, as they have a tendency to incite to, or encourage the commission of, the offence of murder, for which penalty of death is ordinarily inflicted.³

Explanation 2.—Disapprobation.—Mere disapprobation, however, strongly and flagrantly expressed, does not imply that the intention was to excite disaffection.⁴

Explanation 4.—In a pamphlet addressed to the Kisans the writer described their grievances in picturesque and expressive language. He described their lot as deplorable in the extreme, and stated that they were frequently the victim of abuse and even of beating at the hands of zemindars and Government officials. He suggested proposals for the amelioration of their condition, and urged them to unite so that those proposals might be lawfully carried out. It was held that taking the pamphlet as a whole it was extremely moderate in tone, and it contained nothing more than words pointing out without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which were producing and had a tendency to produce feelings of enmity or hatred between Kisans and zemindars, and, therefore, by reason of this Explanation, the words were not to be deemed to be words which tended directly or indirectly to promote such feelings.⁵

5. (1) Where the security given in respect of any press, or any portion thereof, has been declared forfeited under section 4 or section 6, every person making a fresh declaration in respect of such press under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall deposit with the Magistrate before whom such declaration is made security to such an amount, not being less than one thousand or more than ten thousand rupees, as the Magistrate may think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose.

(2) Where a portion only of the security given in respect of such press has been declared forfeited under section 4 or section 6, any unforfeited balance still in deposit shall be taken as part of the amount of security required under sub-section (1).

6. (1) If, after security has been deposited under section 5, the printing press is again used for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, book or other document containing any words, signs or visible representations which, in the opinion of the Provincial Government, are of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the keeper of such printing press, stating or describing such words, signs or visible representations, declare—

(a) the further security so deposited, or any portion thereof, and
(b) all copies of such newspaper, book or other document wherever found in British India to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(2) After the expiry of ten days from the issue of a notice under sub-section (1), the declaration made in respect of such press under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall be deemed to be annulled.

7. (1) Any publisher of a newspaper who is required to make a declaration under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, may be required by the Magistrate before whom the declaration is made, for reasons to be recorded in writing, to deposit with the Magistrate within ten days from the day on which the declaration is made, security to such an amount, not being more than one thousand rupees, as the Magistrate may in each case think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose :

Provided that if a deposit has been required under sub-section (3) from any previous publisher of the newspaper, the security which may be required under this sub-section may amount to three thousand rupees.

² Vishnu Gangadhar v. Government of Bombay, (1944) 47 Bom. L. R. 57, 46 Cr. L. J. 643, [1945] AIR (B) 207, F.B.

³ Bapuji Kunbi v. Local Government, (1933) 29 N. L. R. 244, F.B.

⁴ "Ananda Bazar Patrika", (1934) 61 Cal. 827, S.B.

⁵ Mohan Lal, [1935] A. L. J. R. 321, 46 Cr. L. J. 1019, [1935] AIR (A) 369.

(2) Where security required under sub-section (1) has been deposited in respect of any newspaper, and for a period of three months from the date of the declaration mentioned in sub-section (1) no order is made by the Provincial Government under section 8 in respect of such newspaper, the security shall, on application by the publisher of the newspaper, be refunded.

(3) Whenever it appears to the Provincial Government that a newspaper published within its territories in respect of which security under the provisions of this Act has not been required, or having been required has been refunded under sub-section (2), contains any words, signs or visible representations of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the publisher of such newspaper, stating or describing such words, signs or visible representations, require the publisher to deposit with the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the newspaper is published, security to such an amount, not being less than five hundred or more than three thousand rupees, as the Provincial Government may think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose.

(4) Such notice shall appoint a date, not being sooner than the tenth day after the date of the issue of the notice, on or before which the deposit shall be made.

NOTE.

Where a proceeding which is questioned purports to be taken under sub-s. (1) of this section under s. 30 the jurisdiction of the High Court is expressly barred unless the application can be brought within s. 23.⁶

An order under sub-s. (3) of this section requiring a deposit of security need not state what particular classes of s. 4 (1) had been offended. When the passages complained of are set out in the form of an annexure to the order, the provisions of law are complied with.⁷

8. (1) If any newspaper in respect of which any security has been ordered to be deposited under section 7 contains any words, signs or visible representations which, in the opinion of the Provincial Government, are of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the publisher of such newspaper, stating or describing such words, signs or visible representations,—

(a) where the security has been deposited, declare such security, or any portion thereof, to be forfeited to His Majesty, or

(b) where the security has not been deposited, annul the declaration made by the publisher of such newspaper under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, and may also declare all copies of such newspaper, wherever found in British India, to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(2) After the expiry of ten days from the date of the issue of a notice under sub-section (1) declaring a security, or any portion thereof, to be forfeited, the declaration made by the publisher of such newspaper under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall be deemed to be annulled.

9. (1) Where the security given in respect of any newspaper, or any portion thereof, is declared forfeited under section 8 or section 10, any person making a fresh declaration under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, as publisher of such newspaper, or any other newspaper which is the same in substance as the said newspaper, shall deposit with the Magistrate before whom the declaration is made security to such an amount, not being less than one thousand or more than ten thousand rupees, as the Magistrate may think fit to require, in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Central Government as the person making the deposit may choose.

(2) Where a portion only of the security given in respect of such newspaper has been declared forfeited under section 8 or section 10, any unforfeited balance still in deposit shall be taken as part of the amount of security required under sub-section (1).

⁶ Vishnu Ghanshyam Deshpande, [1914] N. L. J. 44, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 108, [1941] AIR (N) 97.

⁷ "Amrita Bazar Patrika", (1932) 37 C. W. N.

166, 56 C. L. J. 157, 35 Cr. L. J. 949, [1932] AIR (C) 738, S.B.; "The Daily Siyasal" case, (1937) 18 Lah. 438, F.B.

10. (1) If, after security has been deposited under section 9, the newspaper again contains any words, signs or visible representations which, in the opinion of the Provincial Government, are of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the publisher of such newspaper, stating or describing such words, signs or visible representations, declare—

Power to declare further security and newspapers forfeited.

- (a) the further security so deposited, or any portion thereof, and
- (b) all copies of such newspaper wherever found in British India to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(2) After the expiry of ten days from the date of the issue of a notice under sub-section (1), the declaration made by the publisher of such newspaper under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall be deemed to be annulled and no further declaration in respect of such newspaper shall be made save with the permission of the Provincial Government.

11. (1) Whoever keeps in his possession a press which is used for the printing of books or papers without making a deposit under section 3 or section 5, as required by the Provincial Government or the Magistrate as the case may be, shall on conviction by a Magistrate be liable to the penalty to which he would be liable if he had failed to make the declaration prescribed by section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867.

Penalty for keeping press or publishing newspaper without making deposit.

(2) Whoever publishes any newspaper without making a deposit under section 7 or section 9, as required by the Provincial Government or the Magistrate as the case may be, or publishes such newspaper knowing that such security has not been deposited, shall on conviction by a Magistrate be liable to the penalty to which he would be liable if he had failed to make the declaration prescribed by section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867.

12. (1) Where a deposit is required from the keeper of a printing press under section 3, such press shall not be used for the printing or publishing of any newspaper, book or other document after the expiry of the time allowed to make the deposit until the deposit has been made, and where a deposit is required from the keeper of a printing press under section 5, such press shall not be so used until the deposit has been made.

Consequences of failure to deposit security as required.

(2) Where any printing press is used in contravention of sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notice in writing to the keeper thereof, declare the press to be forfeited to His Majesty.

(3) Where a deposit is required from the publisher of a newspaper under section 7 and the deposit is not made within the time allowed, the declaration made by the publisher under section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, shall be deemed to be annulled.

13. Where any person has deposited any security under this Act and ceases to keep the press in respect of which such security was deposited, or, being a publisher, makes a declaration under section 8 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, he may apply to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction such press is situate for the return of the said security; and thereupon such security shall, upon proof to the satisfaction of the Magistrate and subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, be returned to such person.

Return of deposited security in certain cases.

14. Where any printing press is, or any copies of any newspaper, book or other document are, declared forfeited to His Majesty under section 4, section 6, section 8, section 10 or section 12, the Provincial Government may direct a Magistrate to issue a warrant empowering any police-officer, not below the rank of Sub-Inspector, to seize and detain any property ordered to be forfeited and to enter upon and search for such property in any premises—

Issue of search-warrant.

- (i) where any such property may be or may be reasonably suspected to be,
- (ii) where any copy of such newspaper, book or other document is kept for sale, distribution, publication or public exhibition or is reasonably suspected to be so kept.

Unauthorized news-sheets and newspapers.

15. (1) The Magistrate may, by order in writing and subject to such conditions as he may think fit to impose, authorise any person by name to publish a news-sheet, or to publish news-sheets from time to time.

Authorisation of persons to publish news-sheets.

(2) A copy of an order under sub-section (1) shall be furnished to the person thereby authorised.

(3) The Magistrate may at any time revoke an order made by him under sub-section (1).

Power to seize and destroy unauthorized news-sheets and newspapers.

16. (1) Any police-officer, or any other person empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government, may seize any unauthorized news-sheet or unauthorized newspaper, wherever found.

(2) Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class may by warrant authorise any police-officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector to enter upon and search any place where any stock of unauthorized news-sheets or unauthorized newspapers may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, and such police-officer may seize any documents found in such place which, in his opinion, are unauthorized news-sheets or unauthorized newspapers.

(3) All documents seized under sub-section (1) shall be produced as soon as may be before a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, and all documents seized under sub-section (2) shall be produced as soon as may be before the Court of the Magistrate who issued the warrant.

(4) If, in the opinion of such Magistrate or Court, any of such documents are unauthorized news-sheets or unauthorized newspapers, the Magistrate or Court may cause them to be destroyed. If, in the opinion of such Magistrate or Court, any of such documents are not unauthorized news-sheets or unauthorized newspapers, such Magistrate or Court shall dispose of them in the manner provided in sections 523, 524 and 525 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

17. (1) Where a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate has reason to believe that an unauthorized news-sheet or unauthorized newspaper is being produced from an undeclared press within the limits of his jurisdiction, he may by warrant authorise any police-officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector to enter upon and search any place wherein such undeclared press may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, and if, in the opinion of such police-officer, any press found in such place is an undeclared press and is used to produce an unauthorized news-sheet or unauthorized newspaper, he may seize such press and any documents found in the place which in his opinion are unauthorized news-sheets or unauthorized newspapers.

Power to seize and forfeit undeclared presses producing unauthorized news-sheets and newspapers.

(2) The police-officer shall make a report of the search to the Court which issued the warrant and shall produce before such Court, as soon as may be, all property seized :

Provided that where any press which has been seized cannot be readily removed, the police-officer may produce before the Court only such parts thereof as he may think fit.

(3) If such Court, after such inquiry as it may deem requisite, is of opinion that a press seized under this section is an undeclared press which is used to produce an unauthorized news-sheet or unauthorized newspaper, it may, by order in writing, declare the press to be forfeited to His Majesty. If, after such inquiry, the Court is not of such opinion, it shall dispose of the press in the manner provided in sections 523, 524 and 525 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(4) The Court shall deal with documents produced before it under this section in the manner provided in sub-section (4) of section 16.

NOTE.

The seizure of an undeclared press producing unauthorised news-sheets without a proper warrant under sub-s. (1) of this section is irregular and illegal. The forfeiture of a press under sub-s. (3) of this section seized without a warrant under sub-s. (1) cannot be sustained.⁸

Penalty for disseminating unauthorised news-sheets and newspapers.

18. (1) Whoever makes, sells, distributes, publishes or publicly exhibits or keeps for sale, distribution or publication, any unauthorised news-sheet or newspaper, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, any offence punishable under sub-section (1), and any abetment of any such offence, shall be cognizable.

NOTE.

What has to be decided is the effect on the minds of the persons who are supposed to have read the pamphlet distributed. The speech should be considered as a whole, and not by merely picking out objectionable sentences or words here and there, in order to find out the effect of it on the reader or the audience. The circumstances under which the speech is delivered or read, including time and place, should also be taken into consideration in determining the effect of it on the audience or the reader.⁹

1. 'Whoever makes, sells, etc.'—The maker means the creator or author and not the printer. Printing a news-sheet is not of itself an unlawful act. What is unlawful is to publish a news-sheet (as defined) without authority to so publish, and when this offence has been committed the author (or maker), the sellers, the distributors and the publishers are all equally liable to the penalty prescribed in this section, but not the printer. There is no legal obligation on a printer to ask an author whether he has obtained authority to publish a news-sheet. He is not bound to refuse a good customer on any such ground.¹⁰

The printer of a news-sheet is not its maker within the meaning of sub-s. (1) of this section.¹¹

Jurisdiction.—There is no restriction in this Act as to the Court by which offences punishable under this section are triable. Any Magistrate may try the offence.¹²

Punishment.—Persons who merely help in distributing unauthorised news-sheets in public meetings should not be punished as severely as those who actually help in the preparation of the news-sheet, when no connection between them from before is shown.¹³

Special provisions relating to the seizure of certain documents.

19. Where any newspaper, book or other document wherever made appears to the Provincial Government to contain any words, signs or visible representations of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, stating the grounds of its opinion, declare every copy of the issue of the newspaper, and every copy of such book or other document to be forfeited to His Majesty, and thereupon any police-officer may seize the same wherever found in British India, and any Magistrate may by warrant authorise any police-officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector to enter upon and search for the same in any premises where any copy of such issue or any such book or other document may be or may be reasonably suspected to be.

Power to declare certain publications forfeited and to issue search-warrants for same.

NOTE.

All that this section requires the Provincial Government to do is to state the grounds of its opinion and this is sufficiently complied with by mentioning the particular clause of sub-s. (i) of s. 4, which in the opinion of the Provincial Government had been contravened. There is nothing in that section which lays any obligations on the Provincial Government to set out the words or passages in the book which, in its opinion, were of the nature described in s. 4.¹⁴

20. The Chief Customs-officer or other officer authorised by the Provincial Government in this behalf may detain any package brought, whether by land, sea or air, into British India which he suspects to contain any newspapers, books or other documents of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), and shall forthwith forward copies Power to detain packages containing publications when imported into British India.

⁸ Nrishingchandra Ghosh, (1938) 60 Cal. 1108.

⁹ Public Prosecutor v. Subbia Mudaliar, [1937] M. W. N. 175.

¹⁰ Kumaran, [1937] M. W. N. 1067.

¹¹ Ismail Karimbhai, (1942) 44 Bom. L. R. 799.

¹² Sagi Narayana Razu, [1938] M. W. N. 911.

¹³ Sham Sul Huda, [1937] 2 Cal. 670, 674.

¹⁴ Parkash Chand, (1937) 18 Lah. 445, F.B.

of any newspapers, books or other documents found therein to such officer as the Provincial Government may appoint in this behalf to be disposed of in such manner as the Provincial Government may direct.

Prohibition of transmission by post of certain documents.

21. No unauthorised news-sheet or unauthorised newspaper shall be transmitted by post.

Power to detain articles being transmitted by post.

22. Any officer in charge of a post-office or authorised by the Post-master General in this behalf may detain any article other than a letter or parcel in course of transmission by post, which he suspects to contain—

(a) any newspaper, book or other document containing words, signs or visible representations of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), or

(b) any unauthorised news-sheet or unauthorised newspaper, and shall deliver all such articles to such officer as the Provincial Government may appoint in this behalf to be disposed of in such manner as the Provincial Government may direct.

Powers of High Court.

23. (1) The keeper of a printing press who has been ordered to deposit security under sub-section (3) of section 3, or the publisher of a newspaper who has been ordered to deposit security under sub-section (3) of section 7, or any person having an interest in any property in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under section 4, section 6, section 8, section 10 or section 19 may, within two months from the date of such order,¹ apply to the High Court for the local area in which such order was made, to set aside such order, and the High Court shall decide if the newspaper, book or other document in respect of which the order was made did or did not contain any words, signs or visible representations of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1).

(2) The keeper of a printing press in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under sub-section (2) of section 12 on the ground that it has been used in contravention of sub-section (1) of that section may apply to such High Court to set aside the order on the ground that the press was not so used.

NOTE.

In an application under this section the powers of the High Court are of a limited character. The High Court in such proceedings is called upon only to determine whether the words in the publication did or did not tend directly or indirectly to bring into hatred or contempt the Government or any section of the people or to promote feelings of enmity between the subjects within the meaning of s. 4, sub-s. (1), of the Act. The intention of the printer is foreign to such inquiry. Further the words complained of need not necessarily have brought about violence, they might merely be a prelude to a public disorder.¹⁵

This section is not ultra vires merely because it contravenes s. 561A, Criminal Procedure Code, or s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1909, as amended in 1915.¹⁶

In an application under this section by the publisher of a newspaper and the keeper of the printing press for setting aside the order of Government requiring them to deposit securities under the provisions of the Act for the publication of certain writings therein, the High Court is only to find out whether the words used in the said writing tended directly or indirectly to bring the Government into hatred or contempt or to excite disaffection towards it without going into the question of the intention of the writer. The onus of proof in proceedings under this section is on the person applying for relief to the High Court thereunder.¹⁷ In considering the application of a person to set aside an order of the Government forfeiting the security under this section, the Court will not take into account the motive or intention of such person, except in cases which fall within Explan. 4 of s. 4 of the Act. What has to be considered is the effect likely to be produced upon persons who may be expected to read the passages in question, and for that purpose not only ought the article to be read as a whole, but under s. 26 it is permissible for the Court to have regard to what is contained in other issues of the same publication with a view to ascertaining what would be the probable effect of the offending passages ¹⁵ Abid Ali Khan v. The Government of the United Provinces, (1944) 20 Luck. 285, F.B.

¹⁶ Vishnu Ghanshyam Deshpande, [1941] N. L. J. 44, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 108, [1941] AIR

(N) 97.

¹⁷ "Anandabazar Patrika", (1932) 60 Cal. 408, S.B.; Abid Ali Khan v. The Government of the United Provinces, sup.

upon those persons who normally would see the articles that are published in the newspaper. It makes no difference that the offending passage occurs in a letter published in the newspaper.¹⁸

1. 'Within two months from the date of such order.'—The word order must be read as being the order notified under s. 19 because there can be no forfeiture until the declaration has been notified. The period of limitation runs from the date of the notification of the order in the Gazette and not from the date on which the order was passed.¹⁹

24. Every such application shall be heard and determined by a Special Bench of the High Court composed of three Judges, or, where the High Court consists of less than three Judges, of all the Judges.

Hearing by Special Bench.

25. (1) If it appears to the Special Bench on an application under sub-section (1) of section 23 that the words, signs or visible representations contained in the newspaper, book or other document in respect of which the order in question was made were not of the nature described in section 4, sub-section (1), the Special Bench shall set aside the order.

(2) If it appears to the Special Bench on an application under sub-section (2) of section 23 that the printing-press was not used in contravention of sub-section (1) of section 12, it shall set aside the order of forfeiture.

(3) Where there is a difference of opinion among the Judges forming the Special Bench, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority (if any) of those Judges.

(4) Where there is no such majority which concurs in setting aside the order in question, the order shall stand.

26. On the hearing of an application under sub-section (1) of section 23 with reference to any newspaper, any copy of such newspaper published after the commencement of this Act may be given in evidence in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the words, signs or visible representations contained in such newspaper, in respect of which the order was made.

Evidence to prove nature or tendency of newspapers.

NOTE.

This section applies where that article in question is to be read in its context with a previous or subsequent article just as different parts of one article or different passages in one book are to be read along with the impugned article in order to ascertain its meaning. It is an enabling section permitting the words to be considered in their general context.²⁰

27. Every High Court shall, as soon as conveniently may be, frame rules to regulate the procedure in the case of such applications, the amount of the costs thereof and the execution of orders passed thereon, and until such rules are framed the practice of such Court in proceedings other than suits and appeals shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to such applications.

Procedure in High Court.

Supplemental.

28. Every notice under this Act shall be sent to a Magistrate, who shall cause it to be served in the manner provided for the service of summonses under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 :

Service of notice.

Provided that if service in such manner cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall, where the notice is directed to the keeper of a press, affix a copy thereof to some conspicuous part of the place where the press is situate, as described in the keeper's declaration under section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, and where the notice is directed to the publisher of a newspaper, to some conspicuous part of the premises where the publication of such newspaper is conducted, as given in the publisher's declaration under section 5 of the said Act; and thereupon the notice shall be deemed to have been duly served.

29. Every warrant issued under this Act shall, so far as it relates to a search, be executed in the manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Conduct of searches.

30. Every declaration of forfeiture purporting to be made under this Act shall, as against all persons, be conclusive evidence that the forfeiture therein referred to has taken place, and no proceeding purporting Jurisdiction barred.

¹⁸ Sun Press, Ltd., (1984) 13 Ran. 98, S.B.
¹⁹ Krishnamurthi, [1942] Mad. 10, S.B.

²⁰ Karanjia, (1945) 48 Bom. L. R. 151, 47 Cr. L. J. 744, [1946] AIR (B) 322.

to be taken under this Act shall be called in question by any Court, except the High Court on application under section 23, and no civil or criminal proceeding, except as provided by this Act, shall be instituted against any person for anything done or in good faith intended to be done under this Act.

NOTE.

This section is not ultra vires merely because it contravenes s. 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code, or s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1909, as amended in 1915.²¹

The District Magistrate, when dealing with this Act, or other similar Acts, is not a Court but an executive officer carrying out the functions on behalf of the executive Government and as such is not subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court. That being so, the High Court has no jurisdiction under s. 107 of the Government of India Act to interfere with the orders of the District Magistrate passed under this Act. The powers of the High Court to interfere with the orders passed under this Act are restricted by s. 23 and this section for the limited purpose of deciding whether the publication or article does or does not come within the purview of sub-s. (1) of s. 4.²²

Operation of other laws not barred. 31. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act.

Declaration under Act XXV of 1867 to be made before certain Magistrates. 32. All declarations required to be made under section 4, section 5, section 8 and section 8A of the Press and Registration of Books Acts 1867, shall be made, in a Presidency-town before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and elsewhere before the District Magistrate.

RULES FRAMED UNDER s. 27 OF THE INDIAN PRESS ACT.

BOMBAY RULES.

1. Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified at the foot by the affidavit of the applicant.

2. The petition shall be written in the English language on foolscap paper or other paper similar to it in size and quality, and divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

3. The petition shall be headed "In the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, Appellate Jurisdiction," and shall be intitled "In the matter of the (Name or description) book, document, newspaper or printing press", as the case may be.

4. The petition shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made and all documents and copies thereof in proof of such interest together with a copy of the order of forfeiture shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

5. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order of forfeiture.

6. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition and all vernacular documents relied on by the applicant and intended to be in evidence, shall be translated into English by an Official Translator or Translators so that no question may arise as to the accuracy of the translations or the admissibility in evidence of the documents and the translations annexed to them by reason of defects in such translations.

7. Printed or typed paper-books containing the petition and all exhibits annexed thereto with translations shall be prepared in the manner prescribed by the Rules for the preparation of paper-books in appeals to the High Court, and on admission, six copies of the paper-books shall be delivered to the Registrar by the applicant.

8. If the petition is admitted by the High Court, notice in writing of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given to the Public Prosecutor, Bombay, and a copy of the petition and exhibits with translations, if any, shall accompany such notice.

9. The costs of any application under section 23 shall be in the discretion of the Court hearing the application.

²¹ Vishnu Ghanshyam Deshpande, [1941] N. L. J. 44, (1940) 42 Cr. L. J. 108, [1941] AIR (N) 97.

²² Murli Manohar Prasad, (1984) 13 Pat. 547, F.B.

10. The Table of Fees now in force in this Court in its Original Civil Jurisdiction shall be applicable to applications under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, and proceedings thereon, and costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings, when costs have been awarded, shall be taxed on that scale unless otherwise ordered.

11. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Rules and Forms of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders, shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the High Court on applications under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931.

CALCUTTA RULES.

1. These rules shall apply to all applications made to, and all proceedings taken in, the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal under the Act.

2. Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Act to set aside an order for security under sub-section (3) of section 3 or under sub-section (3) of section 7 or an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 or under sub-section (2) of section 12 shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified at foot by the affidavit of the applicant.

3. The petition shall be written in the English language on foolscap paper or other paper similar to it in size and quality, bookwise, and divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

4. The petition shall be headed—

“In the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Original Jurisdiction.”

“In its Special Bench constituted under Act, XXIII of 1931” and shall be intitled “In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press or the (name or description) book, document or newspaper”, as the case may be.

5. In an application to set aside an order for security, the petition shall state whether the applicant is the keeper of the printing press or is the publisher of the newspaper, as the case may be, in respect of which the order for security has been made, and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such statement together with a copy of the order for security under sub-section (3) of section 3, or under sub-section (3) of section 7 of the Act, as the case may be, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

6. In an application to set aside an order for forfeiture the petition shall state what the interest of the applicant is, in the property, in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made, and all documents or copies thereof, in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the notice of forfeiture, under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 or under sub-section (2) of section 12 of the Act, as the case may be, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

7. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order for security or of forfeiture.

8. All vernacular documents, annexed as exhibits to the petition, and all vernacular documents, relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence, shall be translated into English, by a competent and duly qualified translator or translators, so that no question may arise, as to the accuracy of the translations, or the admissibility in evidence of the documents and the translations annexed to them, by reason of defects in such translations.

9. The petition, with exhibits annexed thereto, and their translations, if any, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits with translations, shall be presented to the Chief Justice, who will constitute a Special Bench, composed of three Judges, and appoint a day for the hearing and determination of the application.

10. Notice in writing of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given by the Registrar to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal, and a copy of the petition and exhibits with translations, if any, in the last preceding rule mentioned shall accompany such notice.

11. Printed paper-books containing the petition and all exhibits annexed thereto with translations shall be prepared in the manner prescribed by the rules for the preparation of paper-books in appeals from the High Court, Original Jurisdiction, and shall be delivered to the Registrar by the applicant at least one week before the day fixed for the hearing and determination of the application.

12. There shall be ordinarily printed 30 copies of the paper-book, but the Registrar may, where necessary, direct a larger number to be printed.

13. The table of fees now in force in this Court in its Original Civil Jurisdiction shall be applicable to applications under the Act, and proceedings thereon and costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings shall be taxed, where so directed, by the Taxing Officer.

14. The provisions of the Code and the Rules and Orders of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the High Court, on applications under the Act,

MADRAS RULES.

1. These rules may be cited as “The Rules of Procedure under the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act,” 1931. They shall come into operation on the 10th day of May 1932 and shall apply to all applications made to, and all proceedings taken in, the High Court of Judicature at Madras under the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, hereinafter referred to as "The Act."

2. Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Act shall be made by the presentation to the Registrar of a petition signed and verified at the foot by the applicant according to the rules governing the verification of pleadings.

3. The petition shall be written, typewritten, or printed, fairly and legibly, on substantial white foolscap folio paper, with an outer margin about two inches wide and an inner margin about one inch wide and separate sheets shall be stitched together bookwise. The writing or printing shall be on both sides of the paper, and numbers shall be expressed in figures.

4. The petition shall be headed: "In the High Court of Judicature at Madras, Original Jurisdiction," "Its Special Bench constituted under Act XXIII of 1931" and shall be intitled "In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press or of the (name or description) book, document or newspaper", as the case may be.

5. The petition shall also set out the date and the nature of the order sought to be set aside and, where the application is to set aside an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 of the Act, the interest of the applicant in the property in respect of which the order sought to be vacated has been passed.

6. The petition shall also set out the grounds on which the applicant seeks to set aside the order.

7. A certified copy of the order sought to be set aside and all documents, or copies thereof certified to be correct, on which the applicant relies in support of his application shall be filed along with the petition. If any of the documents or copies thereof are not in the English language, an application for their translation into English shall be filed along with the petition.

8. All documents filed by the applicant along with his petition not in the English language and intended to be relied on during the hearing of the petition shall be translated into English by the Interpreters or the Translators of the High Court or any other competent person whom the Chief Justice may appoint in that behalf.

9. On compliance with the requirements aforesaid and the preparation of the translations of documents, if any, that may be necessary, the petition shall be filed on the Original Side of the High Court and orders of the Chief Justice shall be obtained for constituting a Special Bench and for appointing a day for the hearing of the petition.

10. Notice of the date of the application and of the date of hearing thereof shall be given by the First Assistant Registrar on the Original Side of the High Court to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras to whom shall be forwarded also a copy of the petition and copies of the exhibits or their translations as the case may be.

11. The table of fees set out in Appendix II to the High Court Fees Rules, 1925, shall be levied by the Registrar upon the proceedings and documents filed under the Act and the proceedings thereon and the costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings shall be taxed if the Court so directs, by the Taxing Officer of this Court on the Original Side under the rules for taxation of costs contained in the High Court Fees Rules, 1925.

12. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Rules and Orders of this Court relating to the exercise of its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction shall be applied so far as they are applicable to the execution of orders made on applications under the Act.

ALLAHABAD RULES.

1. The rules framed under section 99F of the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act V of 1898, shall, mutatis mutandis, be applicable to every application made and to every proceeding taken under sections 23 to 25 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, No. XXIII of 1931.

PATNA RULES.

1. These rules shall apply to all applications made to, and all proceedings taken in, the High Court of Judicature at Patna under the Act.

2. Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Act to set aside an order for security under sub-section (3) of section 8 or under sub-section (3) of section 7 or an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8 10 or 19, or under sub-section (2) of section 12 shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified at foot by the affidavit of the applicant.

3. The petition shall be written in the English language on foolscap paper or other paper similar to it in size and quality, bookwise, and divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

4. The petition shall be headed—

"In the High Court of Judicature at Patna."

"In its Special Bench constituted under Act XXIII of 1931" and shall be intituled "In the matter of the (name, if any) printing press or the (name or description) book, document or newspaper," as the case may be.

5. In an application to set aside an order for security, the petition shall state whether the applicant is the keeper of the printing press or is the publisher of the newspaper, as the case may be, in respect of which the order for security has been made, and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such statement together with a copy of the order for security under sub-section (3) of section 3, or under sub-section (3) of section 7 of the Act, as the case may be, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

6. In an application to set aside an order for forfeiture the petition shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made, and all documents or copies thereof, in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the notice of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 or under sub-section (2) of section 12 of the Act, as the case may be, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

7. The petition shall state relevant facts only and conclude with the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order for security or of forfeiture.

8. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition, and all vernacular documents, relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence, shall be either translated into English by a competent and duly qualified translator or translators and verified by the affidavit of the translator, or shall be translated by the official translator of the Court at the cost of the applicant.

9. The petition with exhibits annexed thereto, and their translations, if any, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits with translations, shall be presented to the Chief Justice.

10. Notice in writing of the presentation of the petition together with a copy thereof and a copy of any exhibits annexed thereto shall be given by the Registrar to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa.

11. Within fourteen days of receipt of such notice the Chief Secretary may send to the Registrar a notice of his intention to oppose such petition and if he does so he shall send to the Registrar such affidavit as he may rely on in answer to the petition.

12. The Registrar on receipt of such notice and/or affidavit or affidavits shall notify the petitioner and on his application shall supply him with a copy of the same.

13. The petitioner shall not file any affidavit in reply without obtaining leave from the Chief Justice and such leave shall be granted if at all on such terms as to time as the Chief Justice may direct. Such application for leave shall be made ex parte by the petitioner within one week of receipt by him of the notice provided for in rule 12 above and shall be made in the chamber of the Chief Justice.

14. If the petitioner shall not within one week of the notice provided in rule 12 make application as provided by rule 13 the evidence shall be deemed to be closed and after deposit by the petitioner of the printing cost the Registrar shall cause the paper book to be prepared according to the rules in Chapter IX for the preparation of paper books in appeals from original decrees and not less than 20 copies thereof shall be printed.

15. When the evidence is closed the Registrar shall, so soon as may be, obtain the directions of the Chief Justice as to the appointment of a Bench of three Judges and the fixing of a day for hearing which shall be not less than one week from the day when the paper book is ready. Such directions shall be notified by the Registrar to the petitioner and to the Chief Secretary to the Government.

16. The table of fees now in force in this Court shall be applicable to applications under the Act, and proceedings thereon and costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings shall be taxed, where so desired, by the Taxing Officer.

17. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Rules and Orders of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the High Court, on application under the Act.

LAHORE RULES.

Rules to regulate the procedure in the case of applications to set aside orders for the deposit of security under Section 3 (3) or 7 (3) or of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931 :—

(1) Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, to set aside an order requiring the keeper of a printing press to deposit security under sub-section (3) of section 3, or requiring the publisher of a newspaper to deposit security under sub-section (3) of section 7, or to set aside an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 of the Act, shall be made within two months from the date of such order, by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the petitioner and verified at the foot by the affidavit of the petitioner.

(2) The petition shall be written in the English language on a foolscap paper or other paper similar to it in size and quality, and divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

(3) The petition shall be headed—

“In the High Court of Judicature at Lahore”, and shall be intitled, “In the matter of the— (name, if any) Printing Press or the (name or description) News-sheet or Newspaper, Book, or Document,” (as the case may be).

(4) The petition shall state what the interest of the petitioner is in the property in respect of which the order to deposit security or the order of forfeiture has been made, and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such interest together with a copy of the notice, under section 3, 4, 6, 8 or 10 or notification under section 19, as the case may be, of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

(5) The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order to deposit security or the order of forfeiture.

(6) The petitioner shall, with his petition, attach a receipt for a deposit of Rs. 100 to cover the cost of translating the vernacular documents into English and of printing the record.

(7) All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition, and all vernacular documents relied on by the petitioner and intended to be tendered in evidence, shall be translated into English by an official translator or translators.

(8) The petition with exhibits annexed thereto and their translations, if any, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits with translations, shall be presented to the Assistant Registrar, who shall lay the same before the Chief Justice. The Chief Justice shall then constitute a Special Bench and appoint a day for the hearing and determination of the petition.

(9) The Assistant Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the filing of the petition to the Government Advocate and shall ask him to obtain from Government and to furnish to the Court, as soon as possible, a copy of the particular news-sheet, newspaper, book or other document containing the words, signs or visible representations on which the order to deposit security was passed or the declaration of forfeiture was based.

(10) Subject to the provisions of section 26 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, evidence in support of or against the petition, shall be in the form of affidavits. The Government Advocate shall within ten days of the receipt of the notice mentioned in rule 9 file affidavits on behalf of the Crown and supply copies thereof to the other side. The petitioner shall, within ten days of the receipt of copies of the affidavits, file his affidavits and likewise supply the Government Advocate with copies.

(11) Notice in writing of the day appointed for hearing and determination of the petition shall be given by the Assistant Registrar to the Chief Secretary to the Government of the Punjab or to the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, as the case may be, and the copy of the petition and exhibits with translations, if any, mentioned in rule 8 shall accompany such notice.

(12) A printed paper book shall be prepared and completed under the order of the Assistant Registrar at least one week before the day fixed for hearing and determination of the petition.

(13) There shall be ordinarily printed 30 copies of the paper book but the Assistant Registrar may, when necessary, direct a larger number to be printed.

(14) In the absence of the special order the printed paper book shall ordinarily contain:—

(a) A copy of the order to deposit security or the declaration of forfeiture, in respect of which the petition is made;

(b) the petition and the affidavit of the petitioner;

(c) the exhibits annexed to the petition and their translation;

(d) the affidavits filed under rule 10 and reprint of such portion of the prescribed publications (translated into English, if in vernacular, in accordance with rule 7) as may be indicated by the parties within ten days of the receipt of the notice which will be issued by the Assistant Registrar to the petitioner or his counsel, if any, and the Government Advocate.

Note.—The cost of printing (a), (b) and (c) shall be met by the applicant out of the deposit made under rule 6, and cost of (d) shall be borne by the party concerned.

(15) If the deposit required under rule 6 proves insufficient to cover the cost of the printed paper book, the Assistant Registrar may, by a notice in writing, require that such further deposit, as seems to him necessary, shall be made within one week.

(16) If such further deposits be not made within the time specified in the notice, the petition shall be placed, without notice to the petitioner, before a Special Bench composed of three Judges which will either dismiss the petition or pass such other orders as may be suitable.

(17) The petitioner and his counsel and the Government Advocate shall be entitled to receive copies of the printed records on application to the Assistant Registrar one week before the date fixed for hearing.

(18) At the foot of every printed book shall be noted the amount of the printing and incidental charges and the person from whom levied, and such amount shall be included in the costs of the proceedings, unless the Court shall otherwise direct.

Should the amount so charged be less than the sum or sums deposited under rules 6 and 15, the Assistant Registrar shall refund the balance to the petitioner.

(19) The table of fees now in force in this Court shall be applicable to all petitions under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, and proceedings thereon and costs payable in respect of such petitions and proceedings shall be taxed, when so directed, by the Taxing Officer of this Court.

(20) The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and Rules and Orders relating to the execution of decrees shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the High Court on petitions under section 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931.

BURMA RULES.

1. These rules may be cited as "The rules under the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931." They shall come into operation immediately, and shall apply to all applications made to, and all proceedings taken in, the High Court of Judicature at Rangoon under the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, hereinafter referred to as "The Act."

2. Every application to the High Court under section 23 of the Act to set aside an order under section 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 12 or 19 shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified at the foot by the affidavit of the applicant.

3. The petition shall be written in the English language on one side only of foolscap paper or of other paper similar to it in size and quality, and shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and arithmetical calculations occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

4. The petition shall be headed:—

"In the High Court of Judicature at Rangoon, Original Jurisdiction, before the Special Bench constituted under section 24 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931", and shall be intitled:—

"In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press or the (name or description of the book), document, news-sheet and newspaper, etc., as the case may be."

5. The petition shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order has been made; and all documents or copies thereof, in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the order under section 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 12 or 19 of the Act as the case may be, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition unless an express order to the contrary is obtained from the Court.

6. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order.

7. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition, and all vernacular documents relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence, shall be translated into English in accordance with the Translation Rules of the High Court.

8. The petition, with exhibits annexed thereto and their translations, if any, together with one spare copy each of the petition and of the exhibits and of their translations, shall be presented to the Registrar, who will obtain the orders of the Chief Justice to constitute a Special Bench and appoint a day for the hearing and determination of the application.

9. Notice in writing of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma, and one copy each of the petition and of the exhibits with translations, if any, as mentioned in the last preceding rule, shall accompany such notice.

10. The scale of fees now in force in this Court in its Original Civil Jurisdiction shall be applicable to applications under the Act and proceedings thereon, and costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings shall be taxed, when so directed, by the Registrar, Original Side, in accordance with the rules for costs in applications made on the Original Side.

11. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and of the Rules and Orders of this Court relating to the exercise of its Ordinary Original Jurisdiction, including execution of decrees and orders, shall be applicable to the procedure in regard to applications under the Act as well as to the execution of orders made on such applications.

ODDH RULES.

Rules of procedure under section 27 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931 (XXIII of 1931).

The rules framed under section 99F of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) and printed in appendix X to the Rules of the Chief Court of Oudh shall, mutatis mutandis, be applicable to every application made, and to every proceeding taken, under sections 23 to 25 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931 (XXIII of 1931).

Rules under section 99F of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898).

The following rules are framed by the Court under section 99F of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) :—

1. These rules may be cited as "The Oudh Rules under section 99F of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898)". They shall come into operation on the date of publication thereof, and shall apply to all applications made to, and all proceedings taken in, the Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow under sections 99A to 99G of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), hereinafter referred to as "the Code."

2. Every application to the Chief Court, under section 99B of the Code, to set aside an order of forfeiture under sub-section (1) of section 99A, shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified at foot by the affidavit of the applicant, in accordance with the rules prescribed for affidavits in Chapter XI of the Rules of the Chief Court of Oudh.

3. The petition shall be written in the English language on foolscap paper or other paper similar to it in size and quality, bookwise, and divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

4. The petition shall be headed:—

"In the Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow."

"In its Special Bench constituted under section 99C of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898)" and shall be entitled "In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press or the (name or description) book, document or newspaper," as the case may be.

5. The petition shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the notice of forfeiture under sub-section (1) of section 99A of the Code, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

6. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order of forfeiture.

7. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition and all vernacular documents relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence shall be translated into English by a competent and duly qualified translator or translators, so that no question may arise as to the accuracy of the translations or the admissibility in evidence of the documents and the translations annexed to them by reason of defects in such translations.

8. The petition with exhibits annexed thereto and their translations, if any, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits with translations, shall be presented to the Judge taking applications. Such Judge will direct that the petition be laid before the Chief Judge who will constitute a Special Bench. Thereafter a day for the hearing and determination of the application shall be appointed.

9. Notice, in writing, of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given by the Registrar to the Chief Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces, and the copies of the petition and exhibits with translations, if any, in the last preceding rule mentioned shall accompany such notice.

10. Printed paper-books containing the petition and all exhibits annexed thereto with translations shall, in the manner prescribed by the rules for the preparation of paper-books in First Appeals in this Court, be prepared and completed under the orders of the Registrar at least one week before the day fixed for the hearing and determination of the application.

11. There shall be ordinarily printed 30 copies of the paper-book, but the Registrar may, when necessary, direct a larger number to be printed.

12. The table of fees now in force in this Court in its original civil jurisdiction shall be applicable to applications under section 99B of the Code and proceedings thereon, and costs payable in respect of such applications and proceedings shall be taxed when so directed by the Court.

13. Every summons and warrant of arrest issued by the Court shall be in writing, in duplicate, signed and sealed by the Registrar of the Court and shall ordinarily be sent to the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the summons is to be served or the warrant executed.

13A. When an application is for the review of a decree or order of a Judge of the Chief Court who has died before the presentation of the application, or has left the Court and is unlikely to return within three months, it shall be presented to the Chief Judge, who shall appoint a Bench to deal with the application.

14. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the rules and orders of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the Chief Court on applications under section 99B of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

NAGPUR RULES.

1. Every application under section 23 for setting aside an order of deposit of security under sub-section (3) of section 3 or under sub-section (3) of section 7, or an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10, or 19 or sub-section (2) of section 12 shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified by the affidavit of the applicant.

2. The petition shall be written in the English language and shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

3. The petition shall be headed—

“In the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces” and shall be entitled :—

“In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press, or the (name or description) newspaper, book or document”, as the case may be.

4. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order.

5. When the petition is for setting aside an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 it shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made, and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the notice of forfeiture, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

6. When the petition is for setting aside an order of deposit of security under sub-section (3) of section 3 or under sub-section (3) of section 7, or for setting aside an order of forfeiture under sub-section (2) of section 12, a copy of the notice ordering the deposit shall be annexed as exhibit to the petition.

7. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition and all vernacular documents relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence shall be translated into English by a translator or translators of the Court.

8. The petition with exhibits annexed thereto, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits, shall be presented to the Judicial Commissioner who will constitute a Special Bench and appoint a day for the hearing and determination of the application.

9. Notice in writing of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given to the Chief Secretary to the Government of the Central Provinces, and copies of the petition and exhibits mentioned in rule 7 shall accompany such notice.

10. The Special Bench may award such costs as appear to it reasonable and proper in the circumstances of each case.

11. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the rules and orders of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the Special Bench.

BENAR RULES.

1. Every application under section 23 for setting aside an order of deposit of security under sub-section (3) of section 3 or under sub-section (3) of section 7, or an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19 or sub-section (2) of section 12 shall be made by the presentation of a petition which shall be signed by the applicant and verified by the affidavit of the applicant.

2. The petition shall be written in the English language and shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively. Dates and sums occurring in the petition shall be expressed in figures.

3. The petition shall be headed :—

“In the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces”
and shall be entitled :—

“In the matter of the (name, if any) Printing Press, or the (name or description) newspaper, book or document,” as the case may be.

4. The petition shall state the ground or grounds on which it is sought to set aside the order.

5. When the petition is for setting aside an order of forfeiture under section 4, 6, 8, 10 or 19, it shall state what the interest of the applicant is in the property in respect of which the order of forfeiture has been made, and all documents or copies thereof in proof of such interest, together with a copy of the notice of forfeiture, shall be annexed as exhibits to the petition.

6. When the petition is for setting aside an order of deposit of security under sub-section (3) of section 3 or under sub-section (3) of section 7, or for setting aside an order of forfeiture under sub-section (2) of section 12, a copy of the notice ordering the deposit shall be annexed as an exhibit to the petition.

7. All vernacular documents annexed as exhibits to the petition and all vernacular documents relied on by the applicant and intended to be tendered in evidence shall be translated into English by a translator or translators of the Court.

8. The petition with exhibits annexed thereto, together with a copy of such petition and exhibits, shall be presented to the Judicial Commissioner who will constitute a Special Bench and appoint a day for the hearing and determination of the application.

9. Notice in writing of the day appointed for the hearing and determination of the application shall be given to the Chief Secretary to the Government of the Central Provinces, and copies of the petition and exhibits mentioned in rule 7 shall accompany such notice.

10. The Special Bench may award such costs as appear to it reasonable and proper in the circumstances of each case.

11. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the rules and orders of this Court relating to execution of decrees and orders shall be applicable to the execution of orders passed by the Special Bench.

THE INDIAN STATES (PROTECTION) ACT.

ACT NO. XI OF 1934.

AN Act to protect the Administrations of States in India which are under the suzerainty of His Majesty from activities which tend to subvert, or to excite disaffection towards, or to obstruct such Administrations.

WHEREAS it is expedient to protect the Administrations of States in India which are under the suzerainty of His Majesty from activities which tend to subvert, or to excite disaffection towards, or to obstruct such Administrations; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent
and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian States (Protection) Act, 1934.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

(3) This section and sections 2 and 3 shall come into force at once; the remaining sections of this Act shall come into force in any district or area only when and for such time as the Provincial Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, directs.

Conspiracy to overawe Administration of a State in India.

2. Whoever, within or without British India, conspires to overawe, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Administration of any State in India, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to seven years, to which fine may be added.

Application of Act
XXIII of 1931.

3. The Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, as amended by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, shall be interpreted—

(a) as if in sub-section (1) of section 4 of the Act, after clause (i) the following word and clause were inserted, namely :—

“or

(j) to bring into hatred or contempt or to excite disaffection towards the Administration established in any State in India”;

(b) as if in Explanation 2 and Explanation 3 to the said sub-section, after the word “Government” the words “or Administration” and after the letter and brackets “(d)” the words, letter and brackets “or clause (j)” were inserted; and

(c) as if after Explanation 4 to the said sub-section the following Explanation were inserted, namely :—

“Explanation 5.—Statements of fact made without malicious intention and without attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection shall not be deemed to be of the nature described in clause (j) of this sub-section”.

4. (1) When a District Magistrate or in a Presidency-town the Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that within his jurisdiction attempts are being made to promote assemblies of persons for the purpose of proceeding from British India into the territory of a State in India and that the entry of such persons into the said territory or their presence therein is likely or will tend to cause obstruction to the Administration of the said State or danger to human life or safety or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray within the said territory, he may, by order in writing stating the material facts of the case, prohibit within the area specified in the order the assembly of five or more persons in furtherance of the said purpose.

(2) When an order under sub-section (1) has been made, and for so long as it remains in force, any assembly of five or more persons held in contravention of the order shall be an unlawful assembly within the meaning of section 141 of the Indian Penal Code, and the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code and of Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall apply accordingly.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) shall be notified by proclamation, published in the specified area in such places and in such manner as the Magistrate may think fit, and a copy of such order shall be forwarded to the Provincial Government.

(4) No order under sub-section (1) shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof, unless the Provincial Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

5. (1) Where, in the opinion of a District Magistrate or in a Presidency-town the Chief Presidency Magistrate, there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may, by written order stating the material facts of the case and served in the manner provided by section 134 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, direct any person to abstain from a certain act if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent or tends to prevent obstruction to the Administration of a State in India or danger to human life or safety or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray within the said State.

(2) An order under sub-section (1) may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally.

(4) A District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate may, either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved, rescind or alter any order made under sub-section (1) by himself or by his predecessor in office.

(5) Where such an application is received, the Magistrate shall afford to the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him either in person or by pleader and showing cause against the order; and if the Magistrate rejects the application wholly or in part, he shall record in writing his reasons for so doing.

(6) No order under sub-section (1) shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof unless the Provincial Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

6. (1) Whoever wilfully disobeys or neglects to comply with any direction contained in an order made under sub-section (1) of section 5, or in such order as altered under sub-section (4) of that section, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

(2) An offence under this section shall be an offence for which a police-officer may arrest without warrant.

7. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 2 unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from the Central Government, if the offence is committed outside British India, and the Provincial Government in other cases.

THE INDIAN STATES (PROTECTION AGAINST DISAFFECTION) ACT, 1922.

An Act to prevent the dissemination by means of books, newspapers and other documents of matter calculated to bring into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection against, Princes or Chiefs of States in India or the Governments or Administrations established in such States.

WHEREAS it is expedient to prevent the dissemination by means of books, newspapers and other documents of matter calculated to bring into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection against, Princes or Chiefs of States in India or the Governments or Administrations established in such States; It is hereby, enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act, 1922.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

Definitions. 2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) “book” and “newspaper” have the meanings respectively assigned to them by the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867;

(b) “disaffection” includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity; and

(c) “document” includes any painting, drawing, photograph, or other visible representation.

Penalty. 3. (1) Whoever edits, prints or publishes, or is the author of, any book, newspaper or other document which brings or is intended to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or is intended to excite disaffection towards, any Prince or Chief of a State in India or the Government or Administration established in any such State, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

(2) No person shall be deemed to commit an offence under this section in respect of any book, newspaper or other document which, without exciting or being intended to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, contains comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of any such Prince, Chief, Government or Administration as aforesaid with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, or disapprobation of the administrative or other action of any such Prince, Chief, Government or Administration.

NOTE.

Under sub-s. (1) of this section any one or more of the four persons, viz., author, editor, printer and publisher of libellous matter are liable.¹

A person who is accused under this section is entitled to adduce evidence to prove that the allegations made by him are true inasmuch as he has a right to plead extenuating circumstances such as a worthy motive in mitigation of the penalty which may be imposed on him in the event of his conviction and for making good such a plea it may be necessary for him to show that the allegations are true.²

Power to forfeit certain publications or to detain them in course of transmission through post. 4. The provisions of sections 99A to 99G of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and of sections 27B to 27D of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898, shall apply in the case of any book, newspaper or other document containing matter in respect of which any person is punishable under section 3 in like manner as they apply in the case of a book, newspaper or document containing seditious matter within the meaning of those sections.

Courts by which and conditions subject to which offence may be tried. 5. No Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class shall proceed to the trial of any offence under section 3, and no Court shall proceed to the trial of any such offence except on complaint made by, or under authority from, the Provincial Government.

NOTE.

Where a sanction authorises the complainant to make complaint of an offence under s. 3 and very clearly restricts the prosecution to one of four offences under the section specifically, there is room for the contention that prosecution was sanctioned in regard to all. Where a person is tried in respect of three distinct offences of his being editor, the printer, and the author of the offending article and the sanction is in respect of one offence, the trial is illegal for want of sanction and the whole proceeding is vitiated.³

¹ Diwan Singh, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 744, [1935] AIR (A) 90.

² Santa Singh, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 117, [1927]

AIR (L) 710.

³ Diwan Singh, (1934) 36 Cr. L. J. 744, [1935] AIR (A) 90.

THE PENAL SERVITUDE ACT.

(ACT NO. XXIV OF 1855).

An Act to substitute penal servitude for the punishment of Transportation in respect of European and American Convicts.

Preamble. WHEREAS, by reason of the difficulty of providing a place to which Europeans or Americans can, with safety to their health, be sent for the purpose of undergoing sentences of transportation or of imprisonment for long terms it has become expedient to substitute other punishments for that of transportation; It is enacted as follows:—

No European or American to be sentenced to transportation.

1. No European or American shall be liable to be sentenced, ordered, by any Court within British India, to be transported.

Terms of penal servitude instead of the present terms of transportation.

2. Any person who, but for the passing of this Act, would, by any law now in force, or which may hereafter be in force, in any part of British India, be liable to be sentenced or ordered, by any such Court, to be transported, shall, if a European or American, be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be kept in penal servitude for such term as hereinafter mentioned.

The terms of penal servitude to be awarded by any sentence or order instead of the term of transportation to which any such offender would, but for the passing of this Act, be liable, shall be as follows: (that is to say)—

Instead of transportation for seven years, or for a term not exceeding seven years, penal servitude for the term of four years.

Instead of any term of transportation exceeding seven years and not exceeding ten years, penal servitude for any term not less than four and not exceeding six years.

Instead of any term of transportation exceeding ten years and not exceeding fifteen years, penal servitude for any term not less than six and not exceeding eight years.

Instead of any term of transportation exceeding fifteen years, penal servitude for any term not less than six and not exceeding ten years.

Instead of transportation for the term of life, penal servitude for the term of life.

And in every case where, at the discretion of the Court, one of any two or more of the terms of transportation hereinbefore mentioned might have been awarded, the Court shall have the like discretion to award one of the two or more terms of penal servitude hereinbefore mentioned, in relation to such terms of transportation.

Discretion of Courts as to alternative punishments. 3. Provided always that nothing herein contained shall interfere with or affect the authority or discretion of any Court in respect of any punishment which such Court may now award or pass on any offender other than transportation; but, where such other punishment may be awarded at the discretion of the Court instead of transportation or in addition thereto, the same may be awarded instead of, or (as the case may be) in addition to, the punishment substituted for transportation by this Act.

Effect of pardon granted upon condition of penal servitude. 4. If any offender sentenced by any Court within British India to the punishment of death shall have mercy extended to him, upon condition of his being kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term of years, all the provisions of this Act shall be applicable to such offender in the same manner as if he had been lawfully sentenced under this Act to the term of penal servitude specified in the condition.

5. [Power to substitute penal servitude for transportation.] Repealed by the Prisoners Act, 1871 (V of 1871).

6. [Mode of dealing with person under sentence of penal servitude.] Repealed by the Prisoners Act, 1871 (V of 1871).

7. [Application of enactments respecting transportation and imprisonment with hard labour.] Repealed by the Prisoners Act, 1871 (V of 1871).

8. [Removal of convicts under sentence of imprisonment from one prison to another.] Repealed by the Presidency Jails Act, 1867 (XII of 1867), and the Repealing and Amending Act, 1914 (X of 1914).

9, 10, 11 and 12. [Licenses to convicts under sentence of penal servitude to be at large.] Repealed by the Prisoners Act, 1871 (V of 1871).

13. Nothing in this Act is intended to alter or affect the provisions of the 12 & 13 Victoria, Chapter 43, or any Act of Parliament passed in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland since the 28th of August, 1888, or which may hereafter be passed.

Act not to affect the provisions of certain English statutes.

14. Any sentence or order upon any person describing him as a European or American shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to be conclusive of the fact that such person is a European or American within the meaning of this Act.

Sentence when proof that a person is European or American.

15. The word "European", as used in this Act, shall be understood to include any person usually designated a European British subject.

Interpretation clause.

16. [Commencement of Act.] Repealed by the Repealing Act, 1870 (XIV of 1870).

THE POLICE (INCITEMENT TO DISAFFECTION) ACT.

(ACT NO. XXII OF 1922).

AN Act to provide a penalty for spreading disaffection among the police and for kindred offences.

WHEREAS it is expedient to penalize the spreading of disaffection among the police and other kindred offences; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Police (Incitement to Disaffection) Act, 1922.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

(3) It shall come into force in any province or part of a province on such date as the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct.*

2. In this Act, the expression "member of a police-force" means any person appointed or enrolled for the performance of police duties under any enactment specified in the Schedule.

Definition.

3. Whoever intentionally causes or attempts to cause, or does any act which he knows is likely to cause, disaffection towards His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India or British Burma amongst the members of a police-force, or induces or attempts to induce, or does any act which he knows is likely to induce, any member of a police-force to withhold his services or to commit a breach of discipline shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Penalty for causing disaffection, etc.

Explanation.—Expressions of disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, or of disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government, do not constitute an offence under this section unless they cause or are made for the purpose of causing or are likely to cause disaffection.

NOTE.

When the whole of a speech is not taken down by the reporter but only portions, and there is nothing to show that such portions as are taken down were taken down incorrectly or that the excerpts of the speech are not a fair representation of the general drift of the speech, a conviction under this section could be based on the speech taken down in parts. It is not necessary that the speech should be addressed directly to the members of the police.¹

* See Bombay Government Gazette, 1930, Part I, 1930, p. 1394, dated June 5, 1930.

¹ Gopalan Nambiar, [1947] M. W. N. 765.

Saving of acts done by police associations and other persons for certain purposes.

4. Nothing shall be deemed to be an offence under this Act which is done in good faith—

(a) for the purpose of promoting the welfare or interests of any member of a police-force by inducing him to withhold his services in any manner authorised by law; or

(b) by or on behalf of any association formed for the purpose of furthering the interests of members of a police-force as such, where the association has been authorized or recognized by the Government and the act done is done under any rules or articles of the association which have been approved by the Government.

5. No Court shall proceed to the trial of any offence under this Act except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the District Magistrate or, in the case of a Presidency-town of the Commissioner of Police.

Sanction to trial of offences by subordinate Courts.

6. (1) No Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence under this Act.

Trial of cases.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in Chapter XXII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, no offence under this Act shall be triable summarily.

THE SCHEDULE. (See Section 2)

Year	No.	Short title.
		Acts of the Governor-General in Council.
1859	XXIV	The Madras District Police Act, 1859.
1861	V	The Police Act, 1861.
1887	XV	The Burma Military Police Act, 1887.
1888	III	The Police Act, 1888.
1892	V	The Bengal Military Police Act, 1892.
		Madras Act.
1888	III	The Madras City Police Act, 1888.
		Bombay Acts.
1890	IV	The Bombay District Police Act, 1890.
1902	IV	The City of Bombay Police Act, 1902.
		Bengal Acts.
1866	II	The Calcutta Suburban Police Act, 1866.
"	IV	The Calcutta Police Act, 1866.
1890	III	The Calcutta Port Act, 1890.
1920	II	The Eastern Frontier Rifles (Bengal Battalion) Act, 1920.
		Burma Act.
1899	IV	The Rangoon Police Act, 1899.
		Assam Act.
1920	I	The Assam Rifles Act, 1920.
		Regulation by the Governor-General in Council.
1888	II	The Andaman and Nicobar Islands Military Police Regulation, 1888.

THE PREVENTION OF CORRUPTION ACT.

(Act No. 11 of 1947).

WHEREAS it is expedient to make more effective provision for the prevention of bribery and corruption;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and duration.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India and it applies also to all British subjects and servants of the Crown in any part of India and to British subjects who are domiciled in any part of India wherever they may be.

(3) Section 5 shall remain in force for a period of three years from the commencement of this Act.

2. For the purposes of this Act "public servant" means a public servant as defined in section 21 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860).

3. An offence punishable under section 161 or section 165 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860) shall be deemed to be a cognizable offence for the purposes of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (V of 1898), notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained therein:

Provided that a police officer below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police shall not investigate any such offence without the order of a Magistrate of the first class or make any arrest therefor without a warrant.

4. Where in any trial of an offence punishable under section 161 or section 165 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860) it is proved that an accused person has accepted or obtained, or has agreed to accept or attempted to obtain, for himself or for any other person, any gratification (other than legal remuneration) or any valuable thing from any person it shall be presumed unless the contrary is proved that he accepted or obtained, or agreed to accept or attempted to obtain, that gratification or that valuable thing, as the case may be, as a motive or reward such as is mentioned in the said section 161, or, as the case may be, without consideration or for a consideration which he knows to be inadequate:

Provided that the Court may decline to draw such presumption if the gratification or thing aforesaid is in its opinion so trivial that no inference of corruption may fairly be drawn.

5. (1) A public servant is said to commit the offence of criminal misconduct in the discharge of his duty—

(a) if he habitually accepts or obtains or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain from any person for himself or for any other person, any gratification (other than legal remuneration) as a motive or reward such as is mentioned in section 161 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860), or

(b) if he habitually accepts or obtains or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain for himself or for any other person, any valuable thing without consideration or for a consideration which he knows to be inadequate, from any person whom he knows to have been, or to be, or to be likely to be concerned in any proceeding or business transacted or about to be transacted by him, or having any connection with the official functions of himself or of any public servant to whom he is subordinate, or from any person whom he knows to be interested in or related to the person so concerned; or

(c) if he dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriates or otherwise converts for his own use any property entrusted to him or under his control as a public servant or allows any other person so to do, or

(d) if he, by corrupt or illegal means or by otherwise abusing his position as a public servant, obtains for himself or for any other person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage.

(2) Any public servant who commits criminal misconduct in the discharge of his duty shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

(3) In any trial of an offence punishable under sub-section (2) the fact that the accused person or any other person on his behalf is in possession, for which the accused person cannot satisfactorily account, of pecuniary resources or property disproportionate to his known sources of income may be proved, and on such proof the Court shall presume, unless the contrary is proved, that the accused person is guilty of criminal misconduct in the discharge of his official duty and his conviction therefor shall not be invalid by reason only that it is based solely on such presumption.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (V of 1898), a police officer below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police shall not investigate any offence punishable under sub-section (2) without the order of a Magistrate of the first class or make any arrest therefor without a warrant.

6. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under section 161 or section 165 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860) or under sub-section (2) of section 5 of this Act, alleged to have been committed by a public servant, except with the previous sanction,—

(a) in the case of a person who is employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation and is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Central Government or some higher authority, Central Government ;

(b) in the case of a person who is employed in connection with the affairs of a Province and is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Provincial Government or some higher authority, Provincial Government ;

(c) in the case of any other person, of the authority competent to remove him from his office.

7. Any person charged with an offence punishable under section 161 or section 165 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860) or under sub-section (2) of section 5 of this Act shall be a competent witness for the defence and may give evidence on oath in disproof of the charges made against him or any person charged together with him at the same trial :

Provided that—

(a) he shall not be called as a witness except on his own request ;

(b) his failure to give evidence shall not be made the subject of any comment by the prosecution or give rise to any presumption against himself or any person charged together with him at the same trial,

(c) he shall not be asked, and if asked shall not be required to answer, any question tending to show that he has committed or been convicted of any offence other than the offence with which he is charged, or is of bad character, unless—

(i) the proof that he has committed or been convicted of such offence is admissible evidence to show that he is guilty of the offence with which he is charged, or

(ii) he has personally or by his pleader asked questions of any witness for the prosecution with a view to establish his own good character, or has given evidence of his good character, or the nature or conduct of the defence is such as to involve imputations on the character of the prosecutor or of any witness for the prosecution, or

(iii) he has given evidence against any other person charged with the same offence."

THE PREVENTION OF SEDITIOUS MEETINGS ACT.

(Act No. X of 1911).

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the prevention of public meetings likely to promote sedition or to cause a disturbance of public tranquillity.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the prevention of public meetings likely to promote sedition or to cause a disturbance of public tranquillity ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Prevention of Seditious Meetings Act, 1911.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, but shall have operation only in such Provinces or Parts of Provinces as the Provincial Government may from time to time notify in the Official Gazette.

2. (1) The Provincial Government may by notification in the Official Gazette, declare the whole or any part of a Province, in which this Act is for the time being in operation, to be a proclaimed area.

(2) A notification made under sub-section (1) shall not remain in force for more than six months, but nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to prevent the Provincial Government from making any further notifications in respect of the same area from time to time as it may think fit.

3. (1) In this Act, the expression "public meeting" means a meeting which is open to the public or any class or portion of the public.

(2) A meeting may be a public meeting notwithstanding that it is held in a private place and notwithstanding that admission there to may have been restricted by ticket or otherwise.

4. (1) No public meeting for the furtherance or discussion of any subject likely to cause disturbance or public excitement, or for the exhibition or distribution of any writing or printed matter relating to any such subject, shall be held in any proclaimed area—
Notice to be given of public meetings.

(a) unless written notice of the intention to hold such meeting and of the time and place of such meeting has been given to the District Magistrate or the Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, at least three days previously; or

(b) unless permission to hold such meeting has been obtained in writing from the District Magistrate or the Commissioner of Police, as the case may be.

(2) The District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class authorised by the District Magistrate in this behalf may, by order in writing, depute one or more Police-officers, not being below the rank of Head Constable, or other persons, to attend any such meeting for the purpose of causing a report to be taken of the proceedings.
Power of Magistrate to cause report to be taken.

(3) Nothing in this section shall apply to any public meeting held under any statutory or other express legal authority, or to public meetings convened by a Sheriff, or to any public meetings or class of public meetings exempted for that purpose by the Provincial Government by general or special order.
Exception.

5. The District Magistrate or the Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, may at any time, by order in writing, of which public notice shall forthwith be given, prohibit any public meeting in a proclaimed area, if, in his opinion, such meeting is likely to promote sedition or disaffection or to cause a disturbance of the public tranquillity.
Power to prohibit public meetings.

6. (1) Any person concerned in the promotion or conduct of a public meeting held in a proclaimed area contrary to the provisions of section 4 shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.
Penalties.

(2) Any public meeting which has been prohibited under section 5 shall be deemed to be an unlawful assembly within the meaning of Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code and of Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

7. Whoever, in a proclaimed area, in a public place or a place of public resort, otherwise than at a public meeting held in accordance with, or exempted from, the provisions of section 4, without the permission in writing of the Magistrate of the District or of the Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, previously obtained, delivers any lecture, address or speech on any subject likely to cause disturbance or public excitement to persons then present, may be arrested without warrant, and shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.
Penalty for delivery of speeches in public places.

8. No Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or of a Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate shall try any offence against this Act.
Cognizance of offences.

9. [Repealed by Act XII of 1927, s. 2, and sch.]

THE SLAVE TRADE ACT.

(39 & 40 Vic., c. 46.)

[As amended by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

An Act for more effectually punishing Offences against the Laws relating to the Slave Trade.

WHEREAS under an Act passed in the Session holden in the thirty-second and thirty-third years of the reign of Her present Majesty, the Governor General of India in Council is empowered to make laws for Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty without and beyond British India :

And whereas under an Act passed in the Session holden in the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, the Governor General of India in Council is empowered to make laws for all British subjects of Her Majesty within the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty whether in the service of the Government of India or otherwise :

And whereas the several Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty have no connexions, engagements, or communications with Foreign Powers, and the subjects of such Princes and States are, when residing or being in the places hereinafter referred to, entitled to the protection of the British Government, and receive such protection equally with the subjects of Her Majesty :

And whereas it is expedient to make provision for more effectually punishing offences against the laws relating to the slave trade by British subjects and other persons protected by the British Government in such places :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. If any person, being a subject of Her Majesty or of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty, shall, upon the High Seas or in any part of Asia or Africa which Her Majesty may from time to time think fit to specify by any Order in Council in this behalf, commit any of the offences defined in ss. 367, 370, and 371 (in the schedule to this Act respectively recited) of Act XLV of 1860, passed by the Governor General of India in Council and called "The Indian Penal Code", or abet within the meaning of the fifth chapter of the said Penal Code the commission of any such offence, such person shall be dealt with, in respect of such offence or abetment, as if the same had been committed in any place within British India in which he may be or may be found.

2. If the Legislature of India shall amend the provisions of the said sections 367, 370, and 371 of the said Penal Code, or any of them, or the said fifth chapter thereof so far as relates to the abetment of any of the offences forbidden by such sections, or make any further provision for preventing or suppressing the making, buying, or selling of slaves or any of the offences comprised in the said three sections, the Secretary of State shall, unless Her Majesty has disallowed such amendment or further provision, lay a copy of the amending Act before each House of Parliament, and after the same shall have lain on the table of both Houses of Parliament for the space of forty days, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, unless either House of Parliament shall present an address to Her Majesty to the contrary, to direct by Order in Council that the provisions of the first section of this Act shall apply to the law so amended or enlarged, and the same shall be applicable accordingly.

3. For the purpose of obtaining evidence of the commission of the offences made punishable by this Act or any Act of Parliament relating to slavery or the slave trade, every High Court in India shall have, as respects the persons in the first section of this Act referred to, and as respects any British colony, settlement, plantation, or territory, wherein any witness may be, the same powers as are conferred on the Court of Queen's Bench by the fourth section of an Act made and passed in the Session of Parliament holden in the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter ninety-eight, with respect to such British Colonies, settlements, plantations, and territories as are therein referred to.

And every High Court may, if it thinks fit, issue such commission as is mentioned in Chapter XL of the Indian Act V of 1898 called, "The Code of Criminal Procedure", to any consular officer of Her Majesty in the parts of Asia or Africa specified in any Order of Her Majesty in Council under section 1 of this Act, or to any political officer or agent of His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States or of the Governor-General in the said parts or in the dominions of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty, or to any Magistrate in British India, British Burma or Aden.

And the depositions taken by virtue of the said powers or under such commission shall be deemed by every court of original or appellate jurisdiction in India in any trial or proceeding under this Act or any Act of Parliament relating to slavery or the slave trade to be as good and competent evidence as if the witnesses deposing had been present and examined viva voce and had made oath or affirmation as required by law.

Application of Act to Burma.

3A. (1) The provisions of this Act shall apply to Burma subject to the modifications specified in this section.

(2) In section one, for the words "of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty" there shall be substituted the words "a native of any part of Burma not forming part of British Burma"; and for the words "British India", there shall be substituted the words "British Burma".

(3) In section two, for the words "the Legislature of India" there shall be substituted the words "the Burma Legislature".

(4) In section three, for the words "every High Court in India" there shall be substituted the words "the High Court at Rangoon"; for the words "And every High Court" there shall be substituted the words "And the High Court"; for the words from "agent of" to the words "alliance with her Majesty" there shall be substituted the words "agent of the Governor in the said parts"; and for the words "jurisdiction in India" there shall be substituted the words "jurisdiction in Burma".

(5) For any reference to the Indian Penal Code and for the reference to Chapter XL of the Code of Criminal Procedure there shall be substituted a reference to the Code or Chapter in question as adapted or modified under the Government of Burma Act, 1935, and in force as part of the law of Burma immediately after the commencement of that Act:

Provided that, if the Code of Criminal Procedure is repealed and re-enacted in Burma, either with or without modifications, the reference to the said Chapter XL shall be construed as a reference to the corresponding provisions of the re-enacted Code as for the time being in force in Burma.

Application of Act to Aden.

3B. (1) The provisions of this Act shall apply to Aden subject to the modifications prescribed in the section.

(2) In section one, the words "or of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty" shall be omitted and for the words "British India" there shall be substituted the word "Aden".

(3) In section two, for the words "the Legislature of India," there shall be substituted the words "any authority competent to make laws for Aden" after the word "unless", where it first occurs, there shall be inserted the words "(in the case of a law not made by Order in Council)" and for the words "amending Act" there shall be substituted the words "amending law."

(4) In section three, for the words "every High Court in India" there shall be substituted the words "the Supreme Court of Aden," for the words "And every High Court" there shall be substituted the words "And the Supreme Court"; for the words from "agent of" to the words "alliance with Her Majesty" there shall be substituted the words "agent of the Governor in such parts," and for the words "jurisdiction in India" there shall be substituted the words "jurisdiction in or for Aden".

(5) Any reference to the Indian Penal Code shall be construed as a reference to that Code as in force in Aden immediately after the commencement of the Aden Colony Order, 1936, and the reference to Chapter XL of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall be construed as a reference to that Chapter as for the time being in force in Aden, or, if the said Code is repealed and re-enacted in Aden, either with or without modifications, as a reference to the corresponding provisions of the re-enacted Code as for the time being in force in Aden.

4. And whereas by certain Orders of Her Majesty in Council made by virtue of an Act made and passed in the Session of Parliament holden in the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter ninety-four, which Orders are dated respectively the ninth August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six and the fourth November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, it is ordered that the provisions of such Orders relating to British subjects, shall extend and apply to all subjects of Her Majesty, whether by birth or by naturalisation, and also to all persons enjoying Her Majesty's protection in the several dominions mentioned in such Orders respectively.

Subjects of certain Indian Princes made amenable to certain Orders in Council.

It is hereby declared and enacted that for the purposes of the said Orders in Council, and of any Orders in Council which Her Majesty may hereafter think fit to make by virtue of the said Act of the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter ninety-four, all subjects of the several Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty, residing and being in the several dominions comprised in such Orders respectively, are and shall be deemed to be persons enjoying Her Majesty's protection therein.

NOTE.

By an Order in Council, dated April 30, 1877,¹ this statute is extended to the following parts of Asia and Africa :—

- (a) The territories of the Khan of Khelat and of the Sultan of Muscat in Mekran and Arabia.
- (b) The coasts of Baluchistan and of the Bunder Abbas Districts and the shores of the Persian Gulf.
- (c) The coasts of Arabia from Ras Mussendom to Cape Bal-el-Mandeb.
- (d) The territories of the following tribes near Aden, viz. :—

The Abdali	The Howshahi	The Subahi
The Foodli	The Alawi	The Gafai
The Akrahi	The Amir	The Oulaki
- (e) The Coast of Africa from Ras Sejarne to Delabon Bay.
- (f) The territories of the Sultan of Zanzibar.
- (g) The sea and islands within ten degrees of latitude and longitude from such coast and shores respectively.

By the Slave Trade Offences (India) Order in Council, dated 14th October 1913, this Act is made applicable to the territories of the Kaiti, Wahidi, Behan, Audali and Beda tribes near Aden, and to the territories of the Mahri tribe of Kishin and Socotra.²

S. 5. [Repealed by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

6. Save as aforesaid, nothing in this Act shall be deemed to affect any Order made or to be made by Her Majesty in Council by virtue of the said Act of the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty, chapter ninety-four.

Not to affect Orders made under 6 and 7 Vict., c. 94.

SCHEDULE.

[Sections 367, 370 and 371, of the Indian Penal Code, reproduced.]

THE TERRITORIAL WATERS JURISDICTION ACT, 1878.

(41 & 42 Vic., c. 73.)

[As adapted and modified by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

AN Act to regulate the Law relating to the Trial of Offences committed on the Sea within a certain distance of the Coasts of Her Majesty's Dominions.

WHEREAS the rightful jurisdiction of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, extends and has always extended over the open seas adjacent to the coasts of the United Kingdom and of all other parts of Her Majesty's dominions to such a distance as is necessary for the defence and security of such dominions :

And whereas it is expedient that all offences committed on the open sea within a certain distance of the coast of the United Kingdom and of all other parts of Her Majesty's dominions, by whomsoever committed, should be dealt with according to law.

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878.

¹ Published in the London Gazette, No. 24466, p. 3447, on June 1, 1877.

² Gazette of India, 1913, Part I, p. 1112.

2. An offence committed by a person, whether he is or is not a subject of Her Majesty, on the open sea within the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions, is an offence within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, although it may have been committed on board or by means of a foreignship, and the person who committed such offence may be arrested, tried, and punished accordingly.

Amendment of the law as to the jurisdiction of the Admiral.

3. Proceedings for the trial and punishment of a person who is not a subject of Her Majesty, and who is charged with any such offence is as declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, shall not be instituted in any Court of the United Kingdom, except with the consent of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and on his certificate that the institution of such proceedings is in his opinion expedient, and shall not be instituted in any of the dominions of Her Majesty out of the United Kingdom, except with the leave of the Governor of the part of the dominions in which such proceedings are proposed to be instituted, and on his certificate that it is expedient that such proceedings should be instituted.

Restriction on institution of proceedings for punishment of offence.

4. On the trial of any person who is not a subject of Her Majesty for an offence declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, it shall not be necessary to aver in any indictment or information on such trial that such consent or certificate of the Secretary of State or Governor as is required by this Act has been given, and the fact of the same having been given shall be presumed unless disputed by the defendant at the trial; and the production of a document purporting to be signed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State as respects the United Kingdom, and by the Governor as respects any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, and containing such consent and certificate, shall be sufficient evidence for all the purposes of this Act of the consent and certificate required by this Act.

Provisions as to procedure.

Proceedings before a justice of the peace or other magistrate previous to the committal of an offender for trial or to the determination of the justice or magistrate that the offender is to be put upon his trial shall not be deemed proceedings for the trial of the offence committed by such offender for the purposes of the said consent and certificate under this Act.

5. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to be in derogation of any rightful jurisdiction of Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, under the law of nations, or to affect or prejudice any jurisdiction conferred by Act of Parliament or now by law existing in relation to foreign ships or in relation to persons on board such ships.

Saving as to jurisdiction.

6. This Act shall not prejudice or affect the trial in manner heretofore in use of any act of piracy as defined by the law of nations, or affect or prejudice any law relating thereto; and where any act of piracy as defined by the law of nations is also any such offence as is declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, such offence may be tried in pursuance of this Act, or in pursuance of any other Act of Parliament, law, or custom relating thereto.

Saving as to piracy.

7. In this Act, unless there is something inconsistent in the context, the following expressions shall respectively have the meanings hereinafter assigned to them: that is to say,

Definitions.

"The jurisdiction of the Admiral," as used in this Act, includes the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England and Ireland, or either of such jurisdictions as used in any Act of Parliament; and for the purpose of arresting any person charged with an offence declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, the territorial waters adjacent to the United Kingdom, or any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, shall be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of any judge, magistrate, or officer having power within such United Kingdom, or other part of Her Majesty's dominions, to issue warrants for arresting or to arrest persons charged with offences committed within the jurisdiction of such judge, magistrate, or officer:

"Jurisdiction of the Admiral":

"United Kingdom": "United Kingdom" includes the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and other adjacent islands :

"Territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions": "The territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions," in reference to the sea, means such part of the sea adjacent to the coast of the United Kingdom, or the coast of some other part of Her Majesty's dominions, as is deemed by international law to be within the territorial sovereignty of Her Majesty; and for the purpose of any offence declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, any part of the open sea within one marine league of the coast measured from low-water mark shall be deemed to be open sea within the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions :

"Governor": "Governor," as respects India, means the Governor General; and as respects a British possession which consists of several constituent colonies, means the Governor General of the whole possession or the Governor of any of the constituent colonies; and as respects any other British possession, means the officer for the time being administering the Government of such possession; also any person acting for or in the capacity of Governor shall be included under the term "Governor" :

"Offence": "Offence" as used in this Act means an act, neglect, or default of such a description as would, if committed within the body of a county in England, be punishable on indictment according to the law of England for the time being in force :

"Ship": "Ship" includes every description of ship, boat, or other floating craft :

"Foreign ship": "Foreign ship" means any ship which is not a British ship.

THE WHIPPING ACT.

(Act No. IV of 1909).

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the punishment of whipping.
WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the punishment of whipping; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Whipping Act, 1909 ; and

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, inclusive of British Baluchistan and the Santhal Pargans.

Whipping added to punishments described in Act XLV. 1860. 2. In addition to the punishments described in s. 53 of the Indian Penal Code, offenders are also liable to the punishment of whipping.

NOTE.

The Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure must be read as if the Whipping Act formed a part of the Penal Code from the date of its enactment.¹

Offences punishable with whipping in lieu of other punishment.

3. Whoever commits any of the following offences, namely :—
(a) theft, as defined in s. 378 of the Indian Penal Code other than theft by a clerk or servant of property in possession of his master ;

(b) theft in a building, tent or vessel, as defined in s. 380 of the said Code ;

(c) theft after preparation for causing death or hurt, as defined in s. 382 of the said Code ;

(d) lurking house-trespass, or house-breaking, as defined in sections 443 and 445 of the said Code, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with whipping under this section ;

¹ Maniruddin v. Gaur Chandra Shamadar, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. 163, 15 W. R. (Cr.) 89,

P.B.; (1870) 5 M. H. C. (Appx.) 18.

(e) lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, as defined in sections 444 and 446 of the said Code, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with whipping under this section; may be punished with whipping in lieu of any punishment to which he may for such offence be liable under the said Code.

NOTE.

Under this section the offender in lieu of punishment provided by the Penal Code may be punished with whipping. The punishment under the Penal Code cannot be inflicted in addition to whipping.² Under the next section the offender may be punished with whipping in lieu of or in addition to any other punishment to which he may be liable.

Double sentences of whipping are not contemplated by this Act. Concurrent sentences of whipping on conviction for two offences at one trial are also illegal.³ The word 'concurrent' properly applies only to sentences of imprisonment. If it were applied to sentences of whipping, the literal meaning would be that the accused was to be flogged by two operators simultaneously.⁴

There is no age limit for whipping for an offence of theft. The limit of age is prescribed generally by the Criminal Procedure Code under s. 393, which in the case of males is over forty-five years of age, while in the Whipping Act itself s. 5 refers to juvenile offenders who, according to the Explanation to that section, are offenders under sixteen years of age. These sections should be read together along with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code which relate to whipping.⁵

Clause (b).—Sentence of whipping cannot be inflicted in the case of an attempt to commit an offence under this clause.⁶

Charge.—When punishment is inflicted under this Act, the charge must state the liability and the judgment should set out the grounds thereof.⁷

Offences punishable with whipping in lieu of or in addition to other punishment.

4. Whoever—

(a) abets, commits or attempts to commit, rape, as defined in s. 375 of the Indian Penal Code;

(b) compels, or induces any person by fear of bodily injury, to submit to an unnatural offence as defined in s. 377 of the said Code;

(c) voluntarily causes hurt in committing or attempting to commit robbery, as defined in s. 390 of the said Code;

(d) commits dacoity as defined in s. 391 of the said Code; may be punished with whipping in lieu of or in addition to any other punishment to which he may for such offence, abetment or attempt be liable under the said Code.

NOTE.

This section must be read subject to ss. 391 and 393 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under the former section no accused person shall be sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment when the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced is less than three months. Under the latter section certain exemptions are specified.

Juvenile offenders when punishable with whipping.

5. Any juvenile offender who abets, commits or attempts to commit—

(a) any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code, except offences specified in Chapter VI and in sections 153A and 505 of that Code and offences punishable with death, or

(b) any offence punishable under any other law with imprisonment which the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf, may be punished with whipping in lieu of any other punishment to which he may for such offence, abetment or attempt be liable.

Explanation.—In this section the expression "juvenile offender" means an offender whom the Court, after making such enquiry (if any) as may be deemed necessary, shall find to be under sixteen years of age, the finding of the Court in all cases being final and conclusive.

² Dagadu, (1891) 16 Bom. 357.

³ Venkataswamy, [1937] Ran. 386.

⁴ Veerappa, (1937) 88 Cr. L. J. 1013, [1937] AIR (R) 310.

⁵ Achar, [1940] Kar. 477.

⁶ Munshi Ram, [1937] A. L. J. R. 944, 39

Cr. L. J. 283, [1938] AIR (A) 16.

⁷ Badiya, (1882) 5 Mad. 158.

NOTE.

This section is not intended to override the provisions of ss. 3 and 4 which apply to juvenile offenders and which specify certain offences only for which whipping may be inflicted; but under this section a juvenile offender may be punished with whipping for an offence mentioned in clauses (a) and (b).

The sentence of whipping under this section may be passed in lieu of and not in addition to any other punishment to which the accused may be liable.

The following notification has been issued by the Governor General in Council in pursuance of clause (b)—

No. 1008.—In exercise of the powers conferred by s. 5, clause (b), of the Whipping Act, 1909 (IV of 1909), and in supersession of the Home Department Notification No. 1650, dated September 27, 1920, the Governor General in Council is pleased to specify the offences under the enactments and rules mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed, being offences punishable under the said enactments and rules with imprisonment, as offences for the abetment or commission of, or attempt to commit which, juvenile offenders may be punished with whipping in accordance with the provisions of the said section.*

SCHEDULE.

GENERAL ACTS.

1. The Police Act, 1861, (V of 1861), section 34.
2. The Public Gambling Act, 1867 (III of 1867), sections 4, 18 and 15.
3. The Cattle Trespass Act, 1871 (I of 1871), section 24.
4. The Northern India Canal and Drainage Act, 1878 (VIII of 1873), section 70, clauses (f) and (g).
5. The Opium Act, 1878 (I of 1878), section 9.
6. The Indian Forest Act, 1878 (VII of 1878), sections 25, 32 and 32 and rules made under section 41, for the infringement of which imprisonment is prescribed as a penalty.
7. The Indian Arms Act, 1878 (XI of 1878), sections 19, 20, 22 and 23.
8. The Indian Salt Act, 1882 (XII of 1882), sections 9 and 10.
9. The Indian Telegraph Act, 1885 (XIII of 1885), sections 24 and 25.
10. The Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), sections 126, 127, 128 and 129.
11. The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1890 (XI of 1890), sections 3, 4 and 5.
12. The Prisons Act, 1894 (IX of 1894), section 42.
13. The Excise Act, 1896 (XII of 1896), sections 45, 46, 49 and 51.
14. The Indian Fisheries Act, 1897 (IV of 1897), sections 4 and 5.
15. The Reformatory Schools Act, 1897 (VIII of 1897), sections 27 and 28.
16. The Indian Post Office Act, 1898 (VI of 1898), sections 61, 62 and 68.
17. The Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 (VII of 1904) section 16.
18. The Indian Electricity Act, 1910 (IX of 1910), section 40.
19. The Criminal Tribes Act, 1911 (III of 1911), sections 21, 22 and 24.
20. The Cantonment Code, 1912, s. 67 (i).

LOCAL ACTS.

Madras.

1. The Madras District Police Act, 1859 (XXIV of 1859), section 47.
2. The Madras Forest Act, 1882 (Madras Act V of 1882), sections 21, 28 and 50 and rules made under sections 26 and 35, for the infringement of which imprisonment is prescribed as a penalty.

3. The Madras Abkari Act, 1886 (Madras Act I of 1886), sections 53 and 58.
4. The Madras City Police Act, 1888 (Madras Act III of 1888), sections 46, 53, 64, 65, 67, 68, 71, 72 and 75.
5. The Towns Nuisances Act, 1889 (Madras Act III of 1889), sections 3, 5 and 7.
6. The Madras Salt Act, 1889 (Madras Act IV of 1889), section 74.

Bombay.

1. The Bombay Abkari Act, 1878 (Bombay Act V of 1878), sections 43 and 48.
2. The Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, 1887 (Bombay Act IV of 1887), sections 5 and 12.
3. The Bombay District Police Act, 1890 (Bombay Act IV of 1890), sections 62, 70 and 71.
4. The City of Bombay Police Act, 1902 (Bombay Act IV of 1902), section 122.

Bengal.

1. The Howrah Offences Act, 1857 (XXI of 1857), section 20.
2. The Calcutta Suburban Police Act, 1886 (Bengal Act II of 1886), section 41.
3. The Calcutta Police Act, 1866 (Bengal Act IV of 1866), section 68.
4. The Bengal Public Gambling Act, 1867 (Bengal Act II of 1867), sections 4, 11 and 18.
5. The Bengal Irrigation Act, 1876 (Bengal Act III of 1876), section 98.
6. The Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), section 77.
7. The Bengal Excise Act, 1909 (Bengal Act V of 1909), sections 46 and 52.

United Provinces.

1. The United Provinces Excise Act, 1910 (United Provinces Act IV of 1910), sections 60, clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), and 63.

Punjab.

1. The Punjab Land Preservation (Chos) Act, 1900 (Punjab Act II of 1900), section 19.

June 18, 1921, Part I, p. 872.

* Notification No. 1008, Home Department, Judicial, dated June 8, 1921, Gazette of India,

2. The Punjab Excise Act, 1914 (Punjab Act I of 1914), section 61, sub-section (1), clauses (a) and (c), and sub-section (2), clauses (a), (b) and (c).

Burma.

1. The Burma Gambling Act, 1899 (Burma Act I of 1899), sections 10, 11 12 and 13.

2. The Rangoon Police Act, 1899 (Burma Act IV of 1899), sections 30, 31 and 42.

3. The Burma Forest Act, 1902 (Burma Act IV of 1902), section 55, clause (b).

4. The Burma Salt Act, 1917 (Burma Act II of 1917), sections 9, 10, 13 and 15.

5. The Burma Excise Act, 1917 (Burma Act V of 1917), sections 30, 31, 32, 33 and 34.

Bihar and Orissa.

1. The Bengal Embankment Act, 1855 (XXXII of 1855), sections 10 and 17.

6. Whenever any Provincial Government has, by notification in the Official Gazette, declared the provisions of this section to be in force in any frontier district or any wild tract of country within the jurisdiction of such Provincial Government, any person who in such district or tract of country after such notification as aforesaid commits any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for three years or upwards, may be punished with whipping in lieu of any other punishment to which he may be liable under the said Code.

Special provision as to punishment with whipping in frontier districts.

7. [Repealed by Act I of 1938, s. 2 and Sch.]

8. [Repealed by Act XVII of 1914, s. 3 and Sch. II].

THE SCHEDULE.

[Repealed by Act XVII of 1914, s. 3 and Sch. II.]

THE BOMBAY (EMERGENCY POWERS) WHIPPING ACT.

(Bom. Act. No. XXVII of 1947).

WHEREAS in view of the provisions of sub-section (4) of section 93 of the Government of India Act, 1935, it is expedient to re-enact the provisions of the Bombay (Emergency Powers) Whipping Act, 1941;

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to amend further the law relating to the punishment of whipping in the Province of Bombay; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Bombay (Emergency Powers) Whipping Act, 1947.

(2) It extends to the whole of the Province of Bombay.

(3) This section and section 4 shall come into force at once. The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct that section 2 or section 3 shall come into force in such area and from such date as may be specified in such notification.

2. In addition to the persons who may be punished with whipping under section 4 of the Whipping Act, 1909, whoever commits or abets the commission of any offence punishable under sections 147, 148, 324, 325, 326, 435 or 436 of the Indian Penal Code may be punished with whipping in addition to any punishment to which he may be liable for such offence or for abetment of such offence under the said Code.

Punishment of whipping for certain offences.

Punishment for certain offences punishable under Bom. IV of 1902 and Bom. IV of 1890.

3. (1) Whoever—

2. The Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), section 77.

3. The Bihar and Orissa Excise Act, 1915 (Bihar and Orissa Act II of 1915), sections 47 and 55.

Central Provinces.

1. The Central Provinces Excise Act, 1915 (Central Provinces Act II of 1915), sections 34, clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (f), (g), (h) and 36.

Delhi.

1. Section 61, sub-section (1), clauses (a) and (c) and sub-section (2), clauses (a), (b) and (c) of the Punjab Excise Act, 1914 (Punjab Act I of 1914), as applied to the Delhi Province by Government of India notifications No. 3246-39 dated May 2, 1914, and No. 16272, dated October 30, 1915.

(a) commits an offence punishable under clause (a) of section 112 of the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902 (hereinafter called the said Act) or

(b) is punishable under clause (b) or clause (c) of section 122 of the said Act—

(i) for behaving in a riotous manner, or

(ii) for using any threatening words or gestures whereby a breach of the peace or public nuisance may be occasioned, may be punished with whipping in lieu of any punishment to which he may be liable for such offence under the said Act.

(2) Whoever commits an offence punishable under clause (a) of section 61D of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890, may be punished with whipping in lieu of any punishment to which he may be liable for such offence under the said Act.

Repeal of Bom. XI
of 1941.

4. The Bombay (Emergency Powers) Whipping Act, 1941, is hereby repealed.

TITLE BENGAL WHIPPING ACT.

(BENGAL ACT NO. X OF 1936.)

An Act to make certain offences against women punishable with whipping.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make certain offences against women punishable with whipping;

And whereas the previous sanction of the Governor-General has been obtained under sub-section (3) of section 80A of the Government of India Act to the passing of this Act:

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called The Bengal Whipping Act, 1936.

(2) It extends to the whole of Bengal.

2. Whoever—

Offences punishable with whipping in lieu of or in addition to other punishment.

(a) being a member of an assembly of two or more persons the common object of which is to commit an offence punishable under section 366 of the Indian Penal Code, abets, commits or attempts to commit such offence, or

(b) abets, commits or attempts to commit in respect of any female person any offence punishable under section 366A, 366B, 367, 372, or 373 of the said Code; may be punished with whipping in lieu of or in addition to any other punishment to which he may for such abetment, offence or attempt be liable under the said Code.

INDEX.

[The figures refer to sections and pages.]

Abandonment—

- of child by its mother, s. 317, p. 797.
- or exposure of child under 12 years of age, s. 317, p. 797.

Abatement—

- of nuisance by unlawful means, ss. 23, 268, pp. 56, 625.

Abduction—

- definition of, s. 362, p. 875.
- to murder the person abducted, s. 364, p. 878.
- wrongfully confine, s. 365, p. 879.
- of a woman, to marry, or seduce her, s. 366, p. 880.
- person, to subject him to grievous hurt, s. 367, p. 891.
- keeping in confinement person abducted, s. 368, p. 892.
- of a child to take property from it, s. 369, p. 894.
- married woman, s. 408, p. 1224.
- distinguished from 'kidnapping', p. 876.
- attempt to commit, p. 1318.

See KIDNAPPING.

Abetment—

- definition of, s. 107, p. 231.
- ingredients of, p. 232.
- is itself an offence under s. 40, p. 79.
- in foreign territory, forgery committed in British India, p. 37.
- to be an offence, not necessary that the act abetted should be committed, s. 108, Explan. 2, pp. 239, 241.
- the person abetted should be capable of committing an offence, s. 108, Explan. 3, pp. 239, 241.
- of abetment is an offence, s. 108, Explan. 4, pp. 240, 241.
- does not require concert between abettor and person abetted, s. 108, Explan. 5, pp. 240, 242.
- is of three kinds :—
 - (1) abetment by instigation, p. 232.
 - by suppressing evidence, p. 233.
 - consent to hold a stake is no instigation, p. 234.
 - deliberate absence is no instigation, p. 233.
 - instigation by letter, p. 233.
 - telephone, p. 233.
 - liability of master for, p. 233.
 - may be through a third party, p. 233.
 - intention, and not act, is material, p. 235.
 - (2) abetment by conspiracy, p. 234.
 - abortion, p. 235.
 - a mere conspiracy is not, p. 234.
 - a substantive offence, p. 234.
 - distinct offences of conspiracy, p. 234.
 - forgery, p. 235.
 - giving false information, p. 235.
 - suicide, p. 234.
 - sutti, p. 234.
 - (3) abetment by aid, p. 235.
 - by an act, p. 235.
 - acceptance of an unstamped receipt is not aiding, p. 236.
 - act abetted illegal, but not an offence, p. 236.
 - attestation or writing of a document is not aiding, p. 236.
 - lending of a house to extort a confession, p. 236.
 - weapon to a person to hurt another, p. 236.
 - order to assault, p. 236.
 - presence at a bigamous marriage, p. 236.
 - by an illegal omission, p. 236.
 - non-interference where there is duty to interfere, p. 237.
 - omission must be of legal obligation, p. 237.
 - is an offence if no principal offence is committed, s. 108, Explan., 2, pp. 239, 241.
- English law of—
 - accessory after the fact, p. 238.
 - before the fact, p. 238.

Abetment—concl.

- attempt to abet is an offence, p. 237.
- principal in the first degree, p. 237.
- second degree, p. 238.
- of an abetment is an offence, p. 242.
- mere subsequent knowledge cannot constitute an, p. 242.
- principal cannot be an abettor, p. 242.
- probable consequences in, p. 249.
- is a substantive offence, p. 243.
- test of guilt, p. 241.
- in British India of offences outside it, s. 108A, p. 243.
- general provisions regarding punishment for, ss. 109-117, pp. 243-258.
 - where the act abetted is committed, s. 108, p. 239.
 - abetment of assault, p. 245.
 - forgery, p. 245.
 - homicide, p. 45.
 - kidnapping, p. 445.
 - marrying during the lifetime of husband, p. 245.
 - by using forged document, p. 246.
 - if person abetted has a different intention or knowledge, s. 110, p. 247.
 - when one act abetted and a different act done, s. 111, p. 247.
 - abettor liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and act done, s. 112, p. 250.
 - act abetted causing an effect different from that intended, s. 118, p. 250.
 - abetment of attempt to murder, p. 251.
- when abettor present when offence committed, s. 114, p. 251.
 - person watching outside a house, p. 254.
 - mere presence is not sufficient, p. 253.
- if offence abetted is punishable with death or transportation for life and that offence is not committed, s. 115, p. 255.
 - act causing harm be done in consequence, p. 255.
 - hurt is caused, s. 115, p. 255.
 - offence abetted is punishable with imprisonment, and that offence is not committed, s. 116, p. 256.
 - abettor or person abetted is a public servant, s. 116, p. 257.
 - offence by the public generally or by persons more than ten in number, s. 117, p. 258.
- concealing design to commit offence punishable with death or transportation for life, s. 118, p. 260.
 - if offence be committed, s. 118, p. 261.
 - not committed, 261.
- public servant concealing design to commit offence which it is his duty to prevent, s. 119, p. 262.
 - if offence be committed, s. 119, p. 262.
 - punishable with death, s. 119, p. 262.
 - not committed, s. 119, p. 262.
- concealing design to commit offence punishable with imprisonment, s. 120, p. 263.
 - if offence be committed, s. 120, p. 263.
 - not committed, s. 120, p. 263.
- of abduction, p. 876.
- assault, pp. 236, 245.
 - on superior officer, s. 133, p. 321.
- attempt to murder, p. 251.
- cheating, p. 1061.
- forgery, p. 245.
- giving bribes, p. 384.
- giving false evidence, p. 473.
- homicide, p. 245.
- kidnapping, p. 807.
- of mutiny, assault, desertion or insubordination in Army, Navy, or Air Force, ss. 131, 138, pp. 319, 325.
- offences of waging war against the King, 121, 123, pp. 274, 286.
 - with any Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the King, ss. 125, 127, pp. 311, 313.
- suicide, punishment for, ss. 305, 306, pp. 778, 779.
- doctrine of previous conviction does not apply to, p. 138.
- in India, of the counterfeiting out of India or coin, s. 236, p. 502.
- mere presence at an extortion is not, p. 951.

Abettor—

- definition of, s. 108, p. 239.
 - wife not punishable as, in adultery, s. 407, p. 1221.
- See* ABETMENT.

Abortion—

- woman committing, on herself, s. 312, Explan., p. 792.
- for causing—in ordinary cases, s. 312, p. 792.
- without woman's consent, s. 313, p. 794.

Abortion—concd.

causing death in attempt to procure, s. 314, p. 795.
without woman's consent, s. 314, p. 795.

Absconding—

meaning of the term 'abscond', p. 412.
to avoid service of summons or other proceedings, s. 172, p. 412.

Absence—of married spouse for seven years, a defence to bigamy, s. 494, p. 1213.

Abuse—amounting to criminal insult, p. 1284.

Abuse of authority—

in kidnapping or abducting woman for illicit intercourse, s. 366, p. 880.

Abusive words—giving rise to grave and sudden provocation, p. 724.

Acceptance—of a person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.

Accessory—

after the fact, who is, p. 238.
before the fact, who is, p. 238.

Accident—

act done by, etc., is no offence, s. 80, p. 155.
defined, p. 155.
is not mischief, p. 1081.

Accomplice—

in cases of bribery, p. 384.

Accounts—

unsigned settlement of—in writing, is a valuable security, p. 63.
failure to keep, at an election, s. 171-I, p. 411.
false entries in, pp. 1060, 1145.
falsification of, s. 477A, p. 1176.

Account-books—

falsification of, with a view to deception, p. 1160.

Accusation—threat of—of an offence in order to commit extortion, ss. 388, 389, pp. 953, 954.

preferred in good faith to person in authority, not defamation, s. 499, eighth Exception, pp. 1234, 1253.

Accused—

bears the onus of proving exception, p. 141.
fabricating false evidence by, p. 477.
false evidence given by, p. 468.
false statements made by, pp. 434, 469.

Aconite—

death caused by, p. 715.

Acquittance—

of payment of money, forgery of, s. 467, p. 1157.

Act—

done in British as well as foreign territory, p. 29.
definition of, s. 38, p. 64.
done by several persons with common intent, s. 34, p. 65.
when criminal and done by several persons, each being liable, ss. 35, 37, 38, pp. 74, 75, 76.
effect caused partly by— and partly by omission, s. 36, p. 75.

See RASH AND NEGLIGENT ACT.

Act of insubordination—abetment of, s. 138, p. 325.

meaning of, p. 325.

Act of State--

Courts can decide whether an act was such or not, p. 153.
to support the plea of—it is not necessary that defendant must have authority from the Crown, and the act must be as a matter of policy outside the law, p. 153.
what amounts to an, p. 152.

Acts—

causing slight harm, p. 197.
serious harm p. 199.
words referring to, include illegal omissions, s. 32, p. 64.

Actor—

comment on performance of, s. 499, Excep. 6, ill. (c), p. 1233.

Adding—to a property-mark, s. 489, p. 1191.

Admiralty jurisdiction—

in respect of offences committed on the high seas, p. 29.
jurisdiction of Indian High Courts, p. 31.
Mofussil Courts, p. 32.
Presidency Magistrate's Court, p. 32.

Adoption—of a daughter by a dancing girl, p. 900.

forgery, or fraudulent cancellation or destruction of a will or authority to adopt, how punishable,
ss. 467, 477, pp. 1139, 1157, 1175.

Adulteration—

of food or drink, intended for sale, s. 272, p. 628.
sale of noxious food or drink, s. 273, p. 629.
of drugs or medicine, or sale of, when adulterated, ss. 274, 275, pp. 631, 632.
meaning of 'adulterates', p. 629.
selling adulterated article as unadulterated, p. 631. of milk with water, p. 629.

See FOOD OR DRINK.

Adultery --

confession by a woman of, is grave provocation in murder, p. 729.
death caused in provocation given by, p. 728.
house-trespass for committing adultery, pp. 1120, 1125.
by night for committing adultery, pp. 1125, 1128.
punishment for, s. 467, p. 1220.
wife not punishable for abetment of, s. 467, p. 1220.
reasons why wife not punishable as abettor, p. 1221.
death of husband does not end prosecution, p. 1223.
complaint by person aggrieved is necessary, p. 1223.
withdrawal of charge, p. 1224.
offender liable to conviction for every fresh act, p. 1224.
order for retrial and examination of wife, p. 1224.
distinguished from rape, p. 1222.
enticing or taking away, etc., a married woman with criminal intent, s. 498, p. 1224.
attempt to commit, p. 1301.

See MARRIAGE.

Advertisement -- of obscene books, s. 292, p. 655. publication of lottery proposals, in, p. 664.

puffing in, is not cheating, p. 1047.

Advocate—

See COUNSEL.

Affidavit—

by a convict, false statements in, pp. 437, 409.

Affirmation—solemn—included in the word "oath", s. 51, p. 82.

*See OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS.Affray—

- assaulting a public officer suppressing an, s. 152, p. 364.
- definition of, s. 159, p. 378.
- punishment for committing, s. 160, p. 378.
- distinguished from "assault", p. 379.
- "riot", p. 379.
- must be in a public place, p. 378.
- what is a public place, p. 379.
- not a public place, p. 379.

Age—

- limits of—with respect to capability of committing offence, ss. 82, 83, p. 164.

Agent—

- liabilities of—or owner or occupier of land not giving notice to police of riot, etc., ss. 154, 155, pp. 373, 375.
- liable to fine, if riot, etc., is committed, s. 156, p. 376.
- criminal breach of trust by, s. 409, p. 1015.
- meaning of, s. 409, p. 1017.
- comment on an, in a case, s. 490, Excep. 5, p. 1233.

Agricultural produce—

- mischief by fire to, s. 435, p. 1096.

Agricultural purposes—

- mischief to water for, s. 430, p. 1090.

Aid—

- definition of the term, s. 107, Expln. 2, p. 231.
- abetment by, p. 235.
- by an act, p. 235.
- accepting unstamped receipt, p. 236.
- act abetted must be an offence, p. 236.
- attesting or writing a document, p. 236.
- extorting a confession, p. 236.
- giving weapon to hurt another, p. 236.
- order to assault, p. 236.
- presence at a bigamous marriage, p. 235.
- by illegal omission, p. 236.
- omission must be of legal obligation, p. 237.
- in escape of State prisoner or prisoner of war, s. 130, p. 315.
- See ABETMENT.*

Air-Force—

- offences relating to, c. vii, p. 317.
- rumour to cause mutiny in, s. 505, p. 1287.

Airman—

- definition of, s. 131, p. 319.
- abetment of mutiny by, s. 131, p. 319.
- if committed, s. 132, p. 320.
- assault by, s. 133, p. 321.
- if committed, s. 134, p. 322.
- desertion by, s. 135, p. 322.
- harbouring, s. 136, p. 323.
- concealment, s. 137, p. 324.
- insubordination by, s. 138, p. 325.
- wearing garb of, s. 140, p. 326.
- mutiny by, rumour causing, s. 505, p. 1287.

Alarm—

- rumour to cause, to public, s. 505, p. 1287.

Alien—

- liability of—for an offence, p. 36.

Alien enemies—

- liability under the Code, p. 7.

Allegiance—

- seducing officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force from, s. 131, p. 319.

Allied State—offence committed by a British subject in, s. 4, p. 22.

Alteration—

made in document, when forgery, s. 464, pp. 1154, 1166.

amounting to forgery in certificate, p. 1156.

Government correspondence, p. 1156.

register, p. 1156.

document, p. 1166.

of books, account, etc., s. 477A, p. 1176.

Altered coin—

passing of altered coin, s. 250, p. 603.

Queen's coin, s. 251, p. 604.

possession of altered coin, s. 252, p. 605.

Queen's coin, s. 253, p. 605.

delivery of altered coin, s. 254, p. 605.

Altering appearance of coin—when it is ordinary coin, s. 248, p. 602.

Queen's coin, s. 249, p. 603.

Altering composition of coin—

punishment for, ss. 244, 246, 247, pp. 600, 601, 602.

Altering weight of coin—

punishment for, ss. 244, 246, 247, pp. 600, 601, 602.

scooping out and refilling an, s. 246, Explan., p. 601.

alteration of an ordinary coin, s. 248, p. 602.

Queen's coin, s. 249, p. 603.

Alternative—

conviction in—limit of punishment on, s. 72, p. 125.

imputation may be defamation, s. 499, Explan. 3, pp. 1232, 1236.

Altyasantana law—cohabitation under—is no marriage, p. 1220.

Ambassadors—

exemption of—from the jurisdiction of criminal Courts, p. 7.

liability under the Code, p. 7.

American—

sentence to be for penal servitude instead of transportation, s. 56, p. 95.

Ammunition—collection of, to wage war, s. 122, p. 285.

Animal—

definition of, s. 47, p. 81.

omission to prevent danger from any, s. 289, p. 652.

in savage animals mischievous temper presumed, p. 652.

tame animals, mischievous temper not presumed, p. 652.

causing hurt or grievous hurt by means of, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.

motion in an, constituting force, s. 349, p. 848.

theft, s. 378, p. 918.

subject of theft, p. 928.

mischief by poisoning, maiming, etc., ss. 428, 429, pp. 1088, 1089.

Annexation—

subsequent, of territory where the offence is committed, p. 27.

Annoyance—

caused by drunken person, s. 510, p. 1294.

in criminal trespass, s. 441, p. 1100.

meaning of the term, p. 1106.

Anonymous communications—criminal intimidation caused by any, s. 507, p. 1291.

Appeal memo—

false representation in an, pp. 426, 434.
statement in an, p. 437.

Appearance—

of coin, alteration in, s. 248, p. 602.
Queen's coin, alteration in, s. 249, p. 603.

Apprehension—

of offender, neglecting to aid in, s. 187, p. 452.
taking gift to recover stolen property without apprehension of offender, s. 215, p. 543.
public servant omitting to apprehend offender, s. 221, p. 557.
convict, s. 222, p. 559.
penalty for resisting or obstructing—of oneself, s. 224, p. 563.
another, s. 225, p. 566.
preventing—by harbouring or concealing person, s. 216, p. 545.
public servant voluntarily omitting, s. 221, p. 557.
of offender under sentence of Court, s. 222, p. 559.
resistance to lawful—of himself, s. 224, p. 563.
another, s. 225, p. 566.
omission of—by public servant, s. 225A, p. 569. resistance to lawful, s. 225B, p. 570.
what is lawful, p. 571.

See RESISTING.

Apprentice—

unpaid—is a servant, under s. 381, p. 945.

Arbitrator—

false evidence before an, s. 192, p. 470.
inclusion of—in the term “judge”, p. 48.
“public servant”, s. 21, ibid., p. 50.

Arms—

collecting—to wage war, s. 122, p. 285.

Army—

exemption of foreign, p. 7.
offences relating to—and committed by persons belonging to, Ch. VII, p. 317.
rumour causing mutiny in, s. 505, p. 1287.

Army Act (44 & 45 Vic., c. 58)— not affected by Penal Code, s. 5, p. 39.

Arrest—

after due inquiry, is good faith, p. 83.
if legal, is not wrongful confinement, p. 842.
penalty for resisting or obstructing, ss. 224, 225, pp. 563, 566.
without proper inquiry, is not good faith, p. 83.

Arsenic—

death caused by, p. 715.

Arson—

See INCENDIARISM.

Articles of War—

See INDIAN ARTICLES OF WAR.

Asiatic Power—

waging war against, s. 125, p. 311.

Assault—

on Governor General, etc., with intent to compel or restrain exercise of any lawful power, s. 124, p. 286.
abetting—by soldier, sailor or airman on superior officer, ss. 133, 134, pp. 321, 322.
on public servant while suppressing riot, etc., s. 152, p. 364.
definition of, s. 351, p. 851.
distinguished from ‘affray’, p. 379.
‘criminal force’, p. 851.

Assault—concl'd.

- mere words alone do not amount to, s. 351, Expln., p. 851.
- English law of, p. 851.
- punishment for, ss. 352-358, pp. 853-864.
- on public officer generally, s. 353, p. 854.
- defect in warrant, p. 857.
- search without proper order or warrant, p. 857.
- illegal attachment, p. 858.
- unlawful act of public servant is good defence, p. 858.
- indecent—on a woman, p. 860.
- with intent to outrage modesty of woman, s. 354, p. 860.
- dishonour person, s. 355, p. 862.
- in attempt to commit theft from person, s. 356, p. 862.
- wrongful confinement, s. 357, p. 863.
- on grave provocation, s. 358, p. 863.
- house-trespass for committing, s. 452, p. 1121.
- lurking house-trespass or house-breaking for committing, s. 455, p. 1125.
- by night or house-breaking for committing, s. 458, p. 1129.

See CRIMINAL FORCE.

Assembling—

- for the purpose of committing dacoity, s. 402, p. 980.

Assembly—

- joining or continuing in—after notice to disperse, s. 151, p. 302.
- religious—disturbing of, s. 296, p. 676.
- when it is "unlawful", s. 141, p. 328.

Assessor—

- when "public servant", s. 21, fifth, p. 49.
- false personation of—punishment for, s. 229, p. 581.

Assignment—

- by creditor, no offence under s. 206, p. 512.
- of perjury proof by two witnesses, p. 464.

Assistance—

- liability of private persons to render, p. 143.
- to a State prisoner or prisoner of war, in escaping, s. 130, p. 315.
- omission to give—to public servant, how punishable, s. 187, p. 452.
- in concealment of stolen property, s. 414, p. 1039.
- property, s. 424, p. 1076.

Association—

- when included in "person", s. 11, p. 45.
- in cases of thug, s. 310, p. 791.
- dacoity, s. 400, p. 974.
- theft, s. 401, p. 977.
- imputation against an, s. 499, Expln., 2, pp. 1232, 1245.

Atmosphere—

- pollution of, punishment for, s. 278, p. 635.

Attachment—

- resistance to illegal, pp. 211, 448.
- carrying away crops under, p. 513.
- harvesting crops under, p. 531.
- removal of property during, p. 1077.
- theft of property under, p. 931.

Attempt—

- an act towards commission, when, p. 1306.
- by life-convicts, s. 307 (2), p. 780.
- distinguished from 'preparation' and 'intention,' p. 1297.
- attempt, p. 1302.
- doctrine of previous conviction does not apply to, p. 132.
- does not include all remote acts done, p. 1307.
- in cases of impossible offence, p. 1305.
- is itself an offence under s. 40, p. 78.
- meaning of, p. 1302.
- of abetment is an offence, p. 237.
- punishment for attempt under s. 511 to be irrespective of s. 75, p. 132.

Attempt—Concl'd.

- to wage war against the King or his ally, ss. 121, 125, pp. 275, 311.
- wrongfully restrain or overawe Governor General, etc., in the exercise of lawful power, s. 124, p. 286.
- rescue prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.
- commit murder, s. 307, pp. 780, 1279.
- act committed in—must be capable of causing death, p. 785.
- commit culpable homicide, s. 308, p. 789.
- suicide, s. 309, pp. 798, 1300.
- robbery, s. 393, p. 962.
- robbery or dacoity when armed with deadly weapon, s. 398, p. 972.
- an offence not otherwise expressly provided for, s. 511, p. 1296.
- an impossible offence, p. 1305.
- cheat, p. 1065.
- commit abetment of an offence, p. 237.
- adultery, pp. 1222, 1301.
- house-breaking, p. 1313.
- house-trespass, pp. 1113, 1300, 1313.
- take bribe, is constituted by asking for it, p. 385.
- gratification, p. 386.
- commit rape, distinguished from 'indecent assault', p. 910.
- house-trespass, p. 1300.
- cause death or grievous hurt in house-breaking, s. 459, p. 1129.
- fraudulently cancel a will, etc., s. 477, p. 1175.

Attorney—

- criminal breach of trust by, s. 409, p. 1015.
- definition of, p. 1017.
- power-of—is a document, s. 29, ill., p. 61.

Auction—

- public servant illegally bidding at, s. 169, p. 397.
- mock bidding at an, s. 185, p. 442.

Authority—

- contempt of the lawful—of public servants, Ch. X, p. 412.
- abuse of. See ABUSE OF AUTHORITY.
- forgery of authority to adopt or transfer property, s. 467, p. 1174.
- cancellation of authority to adopt, s. 477, p. 1175.

Autrefois acquit—

- in cases under ss. 323, 352, 465, pp. 812, 854.

Balance—

- fraudulent use of a false, s. 264, p. 614.

Balance sheet—

- preparation of, for cheating, p. 1066.
- a false, p. 470.

Balloon—

- letting off fire—no offence, p. 648.

Banker—

- criminal breach of trust by, s. 409, p. 1015.
- false personation of, s. 416, ill. (a), p. 1061.

Bank-notes—

- counterfeiting, s. 489A, p. 1191.
- using as genuine forged for counterfeit, s. 489B, p. 1200.
- possessing forged or counterfeit, s. 489C, p. 1201.
- making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting, s. 489D, p. 1202.
- making or using documents resembling, s. 489E, p. 1208.

Banns of marriage—

- publication of, is not bigamy, p. 1210.

Baptism—

- forging register of, s. 466, p. 1155.

Believe—

“reason to believe”, meaning of the term, s. 26, p. 59.

Believes—

occurring in ss. 110, 189, 508, pp. 247, 461, 1291.

Belong—to a gang of dacoits, s. 400, p. 974.

 thieves, s. 401, p. 977.
 meaning of the term, p. 977.

Benefit—

as to meaning of, s. 92, Explan., p. 194.

Bid—

See ILLEGAL PURCHASE OR BID.

Bidding for certain property—public servant unlawfully buying or, s. 169, p. 397.

Bigamy—

absence of spouse for seven years, s. 494, Excep., p. 1207.
 Hindu and Mahomedan males not liable for, pp. 1208-1211.
 what constitutes the offence of, s. 494, p. 1287.
 Mahomedan minor can repudiate marriage on attaining puberty, p. 1208.
 marriage during iddat, p. 1209.
 divorce, effect of, p. 1209.
 custom of, how far valid, p. 1210.
 conversion of Hindu wife or husband, p. 1211.
 Native Christians, p. 1211.
 person present at a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.
 priest officiating at a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.
 proof of marriage among English, p. 1215.
 Hindus, p. 1216.
 Jews, p. 1216.
 Mahomedans, p. 1216.
 Native Christians, p. 1216.
 Parsis, p. 1216.
 publication of banns of marriage amounts to preparation only, p. 1216.
 complaint by aggrieved person is necessary, p. 1217.
 with concealment of previous marriage, s. 495, p. 1217.
 infant marriage, p. 1219.

Bill—

as receipted by cheque, not a valuable security, p. 64.
 cheating by a false, s. 415, ill. (d), p. 1042.
 making a false, p. 1100.

Bill of exchange—

endorsement on—is a document, s. 20, ill., p. 61.
 is a valuable security, s. 30, ill., p. 62.
 drawing a false, is forgery, s. 464, ill. (c), p. 1134.
 signing in own name may be forgery, s. 464, Explan., 1, ill. (a), (b), (c), p. 1135.
 on a fictitious person, s. 464, Explan. 2, ill., p. 1136.

Birth—

prevention of, of a child alive, s. 315, p. 796.
 concealment of—punishment for, s. 318, p. 800.
 forging register of, s. 466, p. 1155.

Blow—

aimed at one falling on another, p. 810.
 with an umbrella amounts to hurt, p. 827.

Boat—

conveying passengers in an unsafe, s. 282, p. 643.
 upsetting of for want of ballast, s. 280, p. 641.
 is movable property, in theft, p. 927.

Bodily pain—

whoever causes—is said to cause hurt, s. 319, p. 803.

Body—

damage or harm to, in cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.
 is not movable property, in theft, p. 927.
 private defence of the, s. 100, p. 217.

See PRIVATE DEFENCE.

Bona fide—dispute or claim, in theft, p. 921.

 mischief, pp. 1084, 1091. trespass, p. 1110.

Bone—

fracture or dislocation of—is “grievous hurt”, s. 320, seventhly, p. 805.

Books—

punishment for the sale, etc., of obscene, s. 292, p. 655.
 falsification of, s. 477A, p. 1176.
 are included in ‘goods’ in s. 480, p. 1185. comment on, is no defamation, s. 499, Excep. 6, ills. (a), (d), pp. 1213, 1214.

Bottomry—

of a ship, causing loss to, s. 425, ill. (f), p. 1078.

Boundaries—

mischief by destroying or moving marks of, s. 434, p. 1095.
 innocent removal of, p. 1096.

Boxing—

game of, is protected by s. 87, p. 185.

Boycott—

threat of social, p. 1282.

Boys—

enticing—under 14 years is kidnapping, s. 361, p. 865.

Breach of the peace—

insult intended to provoke—; punishment for, s. 504, p. 1283.
 circulating false report to cause, s. 505, p. 1287.

Breach of contract of service—

See SERVICE.

Breach of trust—

See CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST.

Breaking open—

closed receptacle, s. 461, p. 1182.
 by person entrusted with custody, s. 461, p. 1132.

Bribe—

offer of, amounts to abetment, s. 116, ill. (a), p. 257.
 person expecting to be a public servant taking, s. 161, p. 380.
 public servant taking, s. 161, p. 380.
 abetment of, p. 386.
 mere presence at the time of giving bribe is no offence, p. 384.
 not connected with official function is no offence, p. 383.
 to ask for—is an attempt to obtain one, p. 385.
 offering illegal gratification is abetment, p. 384.
 taking—for influencing public servant, ss. 162, 163, pp. 388, 389.
 public servant abetting the taking of a, s. 164, p. 390.
 obtaining a valuable thing without consideration, etc., s. 165, p. 391.

See GRATIFICATION.

Bribery—

accomplice in cases of, p. 384.
 evidence of general reputation in, p. 387.
 by a public servant, s. 161, p. 380.
 at an election, meaning of, s. 171B, p. 402.

punishment for, s. 171E, p. 407.
for screening offender from legal punishment, s. 213, p. 539.
attempt to commit, p. 1310.

miscief by injuring, s. 431, p. 1093.

- abetting in--of offences outside it, s. 108A, p. 243.
- committing outside of, s. 236, p. 592.
- crimes committed outside, p. 24.
- extent of, p. 3.
- kidnapping a person from, ss. 360, 363, pp. 864, 876.
- misappropriation or breach of trust beyond - of stolen property, s. 410, p. 1023.
- liability of foreigners in--for offences committed outside its limits, p. 36.

trade-mark protected in a. s. 478, p. 1183.
liability of foreigners in - for offences committed outside its limits, p. 36.

punishment of offences committed within, s. 2, p. 5. beyond, s. 3, p. 21.

criminal breach of trust, by, s. 409, p. 1015.
meaning of, p. 1017.

presumption where minor girl sold to or bought by keeper of a, s. 372, Expln. 1, p. 897.

complaint by, for defamation of sister, p. 1275.

killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any, 429, p. 1080.
See MISCHIEF.

mischief by fire to a, s. 436, p. 1097.
 negligence in pulling down or repairing, s. 288, p. 651.
 theft in a, s. 380, p. 942.
 what constitutes a, p. 942.
 is a--for purposes of theft, s. 380, p. 942.
 mischief, s. 436, p. 1097.
 house-trespass, s. 442, p. 1111.
 lurking house trespass, s. 443, p. 1111.
 See HOUSE.

can be subject of theft, p. 928.
killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any, s. 429, p. 1089.
set at large according to religious usage, p. 1089.
See MISCHIEF.

forceful or illegal seizure of — is wrongful loss, p. 58.
driving—without nose-strings is not rash driving, p. 637.

exhibition of false --, s. 281, p. 842.
 mischief by destroying, moving --, s. 483, p. 1095.

secret... of dead body of child, s. 818, p. 800.
forging register of, s. 466, p. 1153.

Burial places—

trespassing on—punishment for, s. 297, p. 678.

Buying—

currency-notes which are counterfeit, s. 489A, p. 1199.
 machinery for counterfeiting currency-notes, s. 489D, p. 1202.

Buying minor—

for purposes of prostitution, s. 373, p. 902.

Buying slaves—

punishment for, ss. 370, 371, pp. 895, 896.

Calendar—

British—; “year” or “month”, s. 49, p. 82.
 counterfeiting trade-mark in a, p. 1187.

Calf—

does not come under “bull”, “cow” or “ox”, s. 429, p. 1089.

Camel—

killing, poisoning, maiming, or rendering useless any, s. 429, p. 1089.

See MISCHIEF.

Cancelling—

documents with fraudulent intent, s. 477, p. 1175.

Candidate—

meaning of, at an election s. 171A, p. 401.

Capacity—

false measure of—; fraudulent use or possession of, ss. 265, 266, pp. 615, 616.
 making or selling, s. 267, p. 618.

Capital offence—false evidence to procure conviction for, s. 194, p. 491.

Car—

obscene pictures or engravings on a, for conveyance of idol, s. 292, p. 655.

Carcass—

can be the subject of theft, p. 929.

Carnal intercourse—against order of nature : penalty for, s. 377, p. 915.

See UNNATURAL OFFENCES.

Carrier—

criminal breach of trust by, s. 407, p. 1009.

Cart—

death caused by unattended, p. 834. running over by, p. 834.

Case—

having false trade-mark, s. 480, p. 1185.
 property-mark, s. 481, p. 1189.
 sale of a, bearing false trade-mark, s. 480, p. 1185.
 making a false mark on a, s. 487, p. 1197.
 opinion on merits of case, is not defamation, s. 499, Excep. 5, pp. 1233, 1250.

Cash-book—fraudulent alteration in a, p. 1180.

Castration—causing—is grievous hurt, p. 806.

Caste—

dinner, wilful pollution of food served at a, p. 683.
 false representation as to— in marriage, is cheating, p. 1062.
 imputation concerning a, p. 1241.
guru sentencing excommunication, privileged, p. 1252.
 headman of, requiring a member to clear her character, p. 1252.
 threat of excommunication from, p. 1282.

Cattle—

allowing to stray—is no wrongful loss, p. 56.
 forcible and illegal seizure of—is wrongful loss, p. 56.
 illegal impounding of—is no wrongful loss, p. 56.
 recovering possession of, p. 345.
 can be the subject of theft, p. 928.
 mischief done by, p. 1085.

Caution—

conveying a, for good, s. 499, Excep. 10, pp. 1234, 1270.

Cemetery—

trespass in a, s. 297, p. 678.

Censure—

by person in authority is no defamation, s. 499, Excep. 7, pp. 1234, 1252.

Cerebral haemorrhage — death by, p. 805.

Ceremonies — disturbing religious — : punishment for, ss. 296, 297, pp. 676, 678.

 of marriage, fraudulently gone through, s. 496, p. 1219.

Certificate—

issuing or signing a false, s. 197, p. 496.
 using as true—known to be false, s. 198, p. 498.
 obtaining a false, is cheating, p. 1070.
 alteration in, pp. 1146, 1156.
 forgery of a—attached to a petition for a vacant post, pp. 1146, 1166.
 purporting to be made by public servant, forgery of, s. 466, p. 1155.
 obtaining, by false statements, p. 1052.

See FALSE CERTIFICATE.

Channel—

mischief by injury to, s. 431, p. 1093.

Character—of the accused, evidence of, p. 979. lowering of, in defamation, s. 499, Explan. 4, pp. 1232, 1243.

Charge —

See FALSE CHARGE.

Cheating—

definition of, s. 415, p. 1042.
 distinguished from 'breach of contract', p. 1044.
 'extortion', p. 1044.
 'criminal breach of trust', p. 1044.
 'criminal misappropriation', p. 1044.
 by issuing fraudulent prospectus, p. 1046.
 snowball scheme, p. 1046.
 false representation as to caste in marriage is, p. 1062.
 immaterial whether means of detecting the fraud or not, p. 1046.
 inducing the person deceived to deliver property is, p. 1049.
 do something is, p. 1052.
 mere puffing in advertisement is not, p. 1057.
 cases of vendor and purchaser, p. 1058.
 mis-statement as to nature of goods, p. 1059.
 by uttering false coin, p. 1059.
 false compromise, p. 1060.
 false entries, p. 1060.
 railway passengers, p. 1060.
 personation, definition of s. 416, p. 1061.

Cheating—Concld.

punishment for, s. 417, p. 1063.
 for —by personation, s. 419, p. 1066.
 with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to person whose interest to be protected, s. 418, p. 1065.
 and dishonestly inducing delivery of property, s. 420, p. 1067.
 promissory note is property in, p. 1068.
 suppression of facts may be, p. 1069.
 obtaining a certificate is, p. 1070.
 forgery for the purpose of, s. 468, p. 1159.
 attempt at, pp. 1299, 1310.

Cheque—

upon a banker is a "document", s. 29, ill., p. 61.
 misappropriation of, s. 403, Expln. 2, ill. (c), p. 982.
 alteration of, is forgery, s. 464, ill. (c), (d), p. 1134.
 cancelled—is property under s. 405, p. 996.
 drawing of, when no money in bank, p. 1048.

Child—

act committed by—under 7 years, is no offence, s. 82, p. 164.
 above 7, but under 12 and of immature understanding, s. 83, p. 164.
 bigamy by, p. 165.
 murder by p. 165.
 rape by, p. 166.
 theft by, p. 165.
 act done to—for benefit of—with or without consent of guardian, ss. 80, 92, pp. 189, 193.
 under twelve cannot "consent", s. 90, p. 191.
 abetment of offences committed by s. 108, Expln., 3, pp. 239, 241.
 unborn—; offences relating to, ss. 315, 316, pp. 796, 797.
 exposure and abandonment of—under twelve years, s. 317, p. 797.
 concealment of birth of—, s. 318, p. 800.
 meaning of the word, p. 801.
 taking or enticing away—from lawful guardianship, s. 361, p. 864.
 father taking away his illegitimate child, s. 361, Excep., p. 865.
 abduction of, ss. 362, 364, 369, pp. 875, 878, 894.
 under ten, kidnapping or abducting with intent to steal from person, s. 369, p. 894.
 buying or selling—under 16 years of age for prostitution, etc., ss. 372, 373, pp. 897, 902.
 breach of contract to attend on, and supply wants of, s. 491, p. 1204.

See ABDUCTION ; CONCEALMENT.

Child-stealing—habitual association for, is thug, s. 310, p. 791.

See KIDNAPPING.

Choice of evils—

when act done to avoid harm is no offence, s. 81, p. 156.

Cholera—negligently spreading of, p. 626.

Cigarette—

obtaining of—from an automatic box, is theft, p. 925.

Circulating false report—

See FALSE REPORT.

Circulation—

of obscene books, etc., s. 292, p. 655. false rumour, etc., s. 505, p. 1287.

Circumstantial evidence—in cases of murder, p. 748.

Civil judgment—cannot be admitted in criminal trials in case of forgery, p. 1154.

Civil right—invasion of, is no mischief, p. 1081.

Civil service —

false pretence of being in, s. 415, ill. (a), p. 1042.

Civil suit—

orders passed in, disobedience to, p. 458.

Civil Surgeon—

not a public servant under s. 116, p. 257.

Claim—making a fraudulent—to property to prevent its seizure, s. 207, p. 515.

false—in Court of Justice, s. 209, p. 517.

satisfaction of, causing hurt for, s. 330, p. 822.

grievous hurt for, s. 331, p. 824.

wrongful confinement, s. 348, p. 840.

release of fraudulent, s. 424, p. 1076.

meaning of in s. 463, p. 1138.

Classes—

promoting enmity between, s. 153A, p. 367.

include races, p. 370.

offending sentiments of, no nuisance, p. 628.

outraging the religious feelings of, s. 295A, p. 673.

incitement between, rumour to cause, s. 505, p. 1287.

Cleanliness—

mischief to water used for, s. 430, p. 1090.

Clergyman—

passing a sentence of excommunication, p. 462.

Clerk—

possession of property by s, 27, p. 50.

theft by, s. 381, p. 944.

who is a- for purposes of theft, s. 381, p. 945.

criminal breach of trust by, s. 408, p. 1010.

falsification of accounts by, s. 477A, p. 1176.

See THEFT.

Closed receptacle — dishonestly breaking open, s. 461, p. 1132.

by person entrusted, s. 462, p. 1133.

Cohabitation — by a man deceitfully making woman to believe she is married to him, s. 493, p. 1206.

Coin—

definition, of, s. 230, p. 583.

Queen's, s. 230, p. 583.

cowries are not, s. 230, ill. (a), p. 583.

unstamped copper is not, s. 230, ill. (b), p. 583.

medals are not, s. 230, ill. (c), p. 583.

Company's rupee is Queen's, s. 320, ill. (d), p. 583.

Kanukhabad rupee is Queen's, s. 230, ill. (e), p. 583.

why heavier punishment for counterfeiting King's, p. 583.

coin need not be a legal tender, p. 584.

counterfeiting, ss. 231, 232, pp. 585, 587.

offences relating to, ss. 231-254, pp. 585-605.

the coin should have been used as money, p. 586.

passing a medal as, p. 586.

circulation of spurious coin not necessary, p. 587.

quicksilvering, p. 587.

making or selling instruments for counterfeiting, ss. 233, 234, pp. 588, 589.

possessing instrument for counterfeiting, s. 235, p. 590.

what are coining instruments, p. 591.

abetting in India the counterfeiting out of India of, s. 236, p. 592.

importing or exporting counterfeit, ss. 237, 238, p. 593.

delivery with knowledge of its being counterfeit, ss. 239, 240, pp. 594, 596.

joint uttering, p. 596.

ringing the changes, p. 596.

delivery of counterfeit—not known to be counterfeit when first possessed, s. 241, p. 597.

Coin—Concl'd.

possessing counterfeit—knowing it to be so when first possessed, ss. 242, 243, pp. 599, 600.
 causing—to be of wrong weight or composition, s. 244, p. 600.
 diminishing weight and altering composition of, ss. 246, 247, pp. 601, 602.
 altering appearance of, ss. 248, 249, pp. 602, 603.
 delivery to another of—possessed with knowledge that it is altered, ss. 250, 251, pp. 603, 604.
 possession of altered—possessed with knowledge of alteration, ss. 252, 253, p. 605.
 delivery of—as genuine, which when first possessed was not known to be altered, s. 254, p. 605.

Coining instrument—taking—from mint, s. 245, p. 601.

Coining tools—

making, mending, etc., of—for counterfeiting coin, s. 233, p. 588.
 Queen's coin, s. 234, p. 589.

Collecting—

arms to wage war against the Queen, s. 122, p. 285.

Collecting of persons—defamation of, s. 499, Expln., 2, p. 1232.

Collector—

when a—is a Judge, s. 19, ill. (a), p. 48.

Combustibles—

negligence with reference to, s. 285, p. 647.

Comment—

expressing disapprobation, s. 124A, Explns. 2, 3, pp. 288, 301.
 on the acts of public men, s. 499, Excep. 2, pp. 1232, 1247.
 must be fair, p. 1237.

Commission—

servant obtaining—when offence, p. 1011.

Commission agents—liability for sale of goods having counterfeit marks, p. 1195.

Commissioned officer—

“public servant”, s. 21, p. 49.

Commissioner—

Municipal—is a public servant, s. 21, tenth, ill., p. 50.

Commitment—wrongful, s. 220, p. 556.

Common intention—acts done in furtherance of, s. 34, p. 65.

 mere presence is not complicity, p. 73. necessary to constitute murder, p. 711.

Common law—

how far rights under—affected by the Code, p. 40

Common object—of unlawful assembly, s. 141, p. 328.

 in riot, ss. 146, 149, pp. 341, 351. acts done in prosecution of, p. 354.

Communication—

in good faith, s. 93, p. 195.
 for the benefit of addressee, s. 499, Excep. 9, pp. 1234, 1254.

Community—

included in “public” s. 12, p. 46.
 rumour to cause incitement between, s. 505, p. 1237.

Commutation—

of sentence, by Government, s. 54, p. 94.

Company—

included in "person", s. 11, p. 45.

imputation against a, s. 499, Explan. 2, pp. 1232, 1240.

Company's rupee—

is Queen's coin, s. 230, ill. (d), p. 583.

Complainant—

death of, puts an end to complaint of hurt, p. 812.

Complaint—

by prosecutrix in rape cases, p. 913.

aggrieved person, in defamation, p. 1275.

brother, p. 1275.

brother-in-law, p. 1275.

high priest of a community, p. 1275.

husband, p. 1275.

official superior, p. 1275.

President of Municipality, p. 1275.

Composition of coin—alteration in, by Mint servant, s. 244, p. 600.

other person, s. 246, p. 601.

if Queen's coin, s. 247, p. 602.

Compound—

is not a building, in house-trespass, p. 1112.

Compounding of offences—taking gift for, s. 213, p. 539.

making gift to induce, s. 214, p. 541.

in what cases legal, s. 214, Excep., p. 541.

Compulsion—

acts done under, s. 94, p. 195.

or necessity, doctrine of, p. 196.

as an element in abduction, s. 362, p. 875.

in inducing a woman to illicit intercourse, s. 366, p. 880.

minor girl, to illicit intercourse, s. 366A, p. 888.

Compulsory labour—unlawful, s. 374, p. 906.

Concealing—material facts, when an abetment, s. 107, p. 231.

a kidnapped person, s. 368, p. 892.

a married woman for illicit intercourse, s. 408, p. 1224.

Concealment—

of design to commit offence, ss. 118-120, pp. 260-263.

by public servant of an offence which it is his duty to prevent, s. 119, p. 262.

of design of waging war, s. 123, p. 286.

escaped prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.

deserter on board merchant vessel, s. 137, p. 324.

property to avoid seizure, s. 206, p. 512.

an offender, s. 212, p. 536.

no offence if done by husband or wife, s. 212, Excep., p. 536.

offence by accepting gratification, s. 213, p. 539.

offering gift or restoring property, s. 214, p. 541.

offender who has escaped or whose apprehension has been ordered, s. 216, p. 345.

the birth of child, s. 318, p. 800.

abducted or kidnapped person, s. 368, p. 892.

stolen property, s. 414, p. 1039.

property, s. 424, p. 1076.

previous fraud, document forged for, p. 1150.

former marriage, in bigamy, s. 495, p. 1217.

married woman, for illicit intercourse, s. 408, p. 1224.

name of person giving threat, s. 507, p. 1291.

Concealment of birth—

punishment for, s. 318, p. 800.

Conditional remission of punishment—violation of—; punishment for, s. 227, p. 575.

Conduct—

of public servant criticism of, s. 499, Excep. 2, pp. 1232, 1247.
 person in public matter, s. 499, Excep. 3, pp. 1233, 1248.

Confession—

does not fall within the purview of, s. 180, p. 429.
 by wife, of her immoral conduct is a grave provocation, p. 729.
 causing hurt or grievous hurt to extort, ss. 330, 331, pp. 822, 824.
 wrongful confinement to extort, s. 348, p. 846.

Confinement—

by person acting contrary to law, s. 220, p. 556.
 omission to keep in—by public servant, s. 221, p. 557.
 escape from—through negligence of public servant, ss. 223, 225A, pp. 560, 569.
 kidnapping or abduction for secret and wrongful, s. 365, p. 879.
 wrongful—of kidnapped or abducted person, s. 368, p. 892.
See SOLITARY CONFINEMENT ; WRONGFUL CONFINEMENT.

Confiscation—

order of, by Magistrate, in cases of sedition, p. 310.

Conflagration—

arrest of, what acts are justified in, s. 81, ill. (b), p. 157.

Connivance—

at hiring for unlawful assembly, s. 150, p. 361.
 of the husband, in cases of adultery, s. 497, pp. 1220, 1221.

Consent—

acts done by—not offences under ss. 87, 88, 89, 91, pp. 184, 186, 189, 198.
 when not valid, s. 90, p. 191.
 given under misconception of fact, p. 191.
 meaning of, p. 191.
 mere submission does not amount to, p. 191.
 misrepresentation, p. 192.
 in indecent assault, p. 192.
 in rape, must be intelligent consent, p. 192.
 obtained by fraud, p. 909.
 not required, when act done in good faith is beneficial, s. 92, p. 193.
 to hold stakes, p. 234.
 how far a defence in cases of murder, p. 740.
 miscarriage caused without, ss. 313, 314, pp. 794, 795.
 of woman, to her miscarriage, s. 314, p. 795.
 force used to person without consent is criminal force, s. 350, p. 848.
 conveying a person without consent beyond British India is kidnapping, s. 360, p. 864.
 sexual intercourse without—is rape, s. 375, p. 907.
 what amounts to, in adultery, s. 497, pp. 1220, 1221.
 theft, s. 378, Expln. 5, p. 918.

Consideration—

public servant obtaining valuable thing without—from person having official dealings with him,
 s. 165, p. 391.
 false statement as to, p. 1075.

Conspiracy—

abetment by, p. 234.
 what is meant by, p. 234.
 to commit acts amounting to distinct offences, p. 234.
 for the doing of a thing, ss. 107, 108, pp. 231, 240.
 definition of, s. 120A, p. 265.
 jurisdiction, p. 271.
 punishment for, s. 120B, p. 267.
 to wage war against the Queen or to overawe Government, s. 121A, p. 281.

Construction—

- of penal statutes, p. 14.
- debates in Legislature, p. 17.
- headings, p. 17.
- illustrations, p. 17.
- marginal notes, p. 17.
- proceedings of the Legislative Council, p. 16.
- provisos, p. 17.
- punctuation, p. 18.
- report of the Indian Law Commissioners, p. 16.
- report of the Select Committees of the Legislative Council., p. 16.
- statements of Objects and Reasons, p. 16.

Contagious disease—

- negligently spreading of, s. 269, p. 626.

Contempt—

- under common law, p. 40.
- before a Court, p. 579.
- in sedition, p. 298.
- of the authority of public servant, Chap. X, p. 412.

Contempt of authority—

- of public servant, Chap. X, p. 412.

See PUBLIC SERVANT.

Contempt of Court—

- by insult and interruption during judicial proceedings, s. 228, p. 576.
- common law rights not affected by Code, p. 40.

Contract of service—

See SERVICE.

Contradictory statements—

- perjury arising out of, p. 483.
- to be reconciled as far as possible, p. 483.

Contributory negligence—

- not a defence in criminal law, pp. 640, 772.

Conversion

- fraudulent of property, ss. 403, 404, 405, pp. 981, 990, 992.
- by a servant, under a special trust, p. 1012.
- effect of— on marriage, pp. 1211, 1212.

Convert

- marriage after becoming a, pp. 1211, 1212.

Conveyance

- deed of, false signature on, is forgery, s. 464, ill. (b), p. 1134.

Conveying

- of person in unsafe vessel, s. 282, p. 643.

Convict

- apprehension of, omission by public servant, s. 222, p. 559.
- negligence in causing escape of, s. 223, p. 560.
- murder or attempted murder by life—, ss. 303, 307, pp. 762, 780.
- affidavit by a—: false statements in, pp. 437, 469.
- not liable for fabricating false evidence, p. 468.
- escape of— from custody, s. 223, p. 560.

See ACCUSED.

Conviction—

- previous—, its effect on punishment, s. 73, p. 129.

Co-operation—

- doing one of several acts constituting an offence, s. 37, p. 75.

See ACT : OFFENCE.

Co-parcener—

theft of the separate property of a—by a, p. 933.
criminal misappropriation by a, p. 985.

Copy—

liability for making an incorrect, p. 1141. making a—of forged document, p. 1141.
of a lease not a valuable security, p. 68.
production of a forged copy, pp. 1156, 1165.

Corporation—

liability of—under the Code, p. 8. included in the term "person", s. 11, p. 45.

Corporeal property—

what it means and includes, p. 54.

Corpse—

offering indignity to human,—s. 297, p. 678.
is not subject of theft, p. 927.

Corpus delicti—discovery of the body of the person murdered not necessary, p. 750.

Correspondence—

alteration in, is forgery, p. 1156.

Corrosive substance—causing hurt or grievous hurt by, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.

Corrupt means—in bribery cases, s. 162, p. 388.

Corrupting water—

punishment for, s. 277, p. 684.

Corruptly—

occurring in, ss. 162, 196, 198, 200, 219, 220, pp. 888, 493, 498, 501, 555, 556.

Co-sharer—of land, liability of, for riot, p. 374.

Council—

Member of, assault upon a, s. 124, p. 286.

Counsel—

not liable for utterances as advocate, p. 1259.

Counterfeit—

definition of, s. 28, p. 60.
imitation need not be exact, s. 28, Expln. 1, p. 60.

Counterfeit-mark—cheating by a, s. 415, ill. (b), p. 1042.

forgery by a, ss. 475, 476, pp. 1173, 1174.
of a mark used by public servant, s. 484, p. 1198.

Counterfeit-coin—

See COIN.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes—

See BANK-NOTES ; CURRENCY-NOTES.

Counterfeiting property-mark—

See PROPERTY-MARK.

Counterfeiting seal, plate—

See FORGERY.

Counterfeiting stamps—See STAMPS.Counterfeiting trade-mark—See* TRADE-MARK.Counterfoil— of paying-in slip, is a valuable security, p. 63.

Court of Justice—

definition of, s. 20, p. 49.

what officer of a—"public servant", s. 21, fourth, p. 49.

acts under orders of—not offences, s. 78, p. 145.

absconding to avoid summons, etc., s. 172, p. 412.

preventing service, etc., of summons, etc., s. 173, p. 414.

neglecting to attend when ordered by, s. 174, p. 415.

not producing document in a, s. 175, p. 419.

neglecting to aid public servant in executing process of, s. 187, p. 452.

interrupting proceedings of, s. 228, p. 576.

forging record of proceedings of a, s. 400, p. 1155.

report of proceedings in—privileged, s. 400, Excep. 4, pp. 1233, 1250.Court-martial—trial before—is a judicial proceeding, s. 193, Expln. 1, p. 477.Courtyard— is building, in house-trespass, p. 1112.

Covenanted servant —is a "public servant", s. 21, first, p. 49.Cow — killing, prevention of, p. 345.

killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any, s. 429, p. 1089.

exhibiting cow's flesh for wounding religious feelings, p. 682.

swearing on cow's flesh, p. 682.

prevention of cow killing, unlawful assembly for, p. 345.

See MISCHIEF.Cowries—are not coin, s. 230, ill. (a), p. 588.Creditors— obtaining discharge of debt by anticipating other, s. 207, p. 515.

See FRAUDULENT DEEDS AND DISPOSITIONS OF PROPERTY.Cremation— lawful, is no nuisance, p. 623.

Crime—

committed outside British India, p. 24.

Criminal act—

by several persons in furtherance of a common intention, s. 84, p. 65.

persons concerned in—may be guilty of different offences, s. 38, p. 76.

See ACT.Criminal breach of contract— to attend on and supply wants of helpless person, s. 491, p. 1204.

Criminal breach of trust—

what constitutes, s. 405, p. 992.

punishment for, s. 406, p. 992.

by borrower, p. 998.

partner, p. 997.

executor de son tort, p. 998.

wife, p. 998.

auctioneer, p. 998.

pledgee, p. 998.

Criminal breach of trust—Concid.

- by loan, p. 998.
- deposit, p. 999.
- hire, 999.
- hire-purchase agreement, p. 999.
- stake-holder, p. 1002.
- carrier, s. 407, p. 1009.
- wharfinger, s. 407, p. 1009.
- warehouse-keeper, s. 407, p. 1009.
- clerk or servant, s. 408, p. 1010.
- commission obtained by servant, p. 1011.
- conversion by a servant under a special trust, p. 1012.
- using the property for benefit of another, p. 1013.
- appropriation of property by servant, p. 1013.
- public servant, banker, etc., s. 409, p. 1015.
- trustees, p. 1019.
- distinguished from 'criminal misappropriation', p. 993.
- dominion over property, p. 996.
- in respect of disputed claim, p. 1000.
- debt, p. 1000.
- wilful omission to account, pp. 1003, 1012.
- false accounting, p. 1004.
- no breach of trust if there is no dishonest use or disposal, p. 1005.
- bona fide claim, p. 1005.
- agreement to refund is no bar to prosecution, p. 1007.
- pending of civil suit between parties, p. 1007.
- employee withdrawing security deposit commits, p. 999.
- director paying dividends out of deposit commits, p. 1019.

See CARRIER ; CLERK ; PUBLIC SERVANT ; WHARFINGER.

Criminal conspiracy—

See CONSPIRACY.

Criminal force—

- in taking possession or enforcing a right, s. 141, Fourth, p. 328.
- definition of, s. 350, p. 848.
- in case of diseased spleen, p. 851.
- rescuing person arrested by police, p. 851.
- distinguished from 'assault', p. 851.
- threat of—amounts to an assault, s. 351, p. 851.
- in self-defence, s. 352, p. 853.
- otherwise than on grave provocation, s. 352, p. 853.
- punishment for, ss. 352, 353, pp. 853, 863.
- when used towards public servant, etc., s. 353, p. 844.
- defect in warrant, p. 857.
- search without proper order or warrant, p. 857.
- illegal attachment, p. 858.
- unlawful act of public servant is good defence, p. 858.
- towards woman to outrage her modesty, s. 354, p. 860.
- to dishonour a person, s. 355, p. 862.
- in attempt to steal property carried by a person, s. 356, p. 862.
- wrongfully confine a person, s. 357, p. 863.
- on grave provocation, s. 358, p. 863.

See ASSAULT.

Criminal intention—

- where acts done by several persons, s. 35, p. 74.
- what is, p. 157.
- act done without—to prevent other harm, p. 156.

Criminal intimidation—

- in kidnapping or abducting woman for illicit intercourse, s. 366, p. 880.
- definition of, s. 503, p. 1280.
- distinguished from 'extortion', p. 1280.
- 'defamation', p. 1260.
- threat of vengeance, p. 1281.
- excommunication, p. 1282.
- killing a person, p. 1282.
- drawing up a false document, p. 1282.
- getting a person dismissed, p. 1282.
- imprisoned, p. 1282.
- picketing, p. 1282.

Criminal intimidation—Concid.

- threat of ruining a man by cases is, p. 1282.
- social boycott, p. 1282.
- person threatened must be interested in the person intended to injure, p. 1283.
- if threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc., or to impute unchastity to a woman, s. 506, p. 1289.
- punishment for simple, s. 506, p. 1289.
- by anonymous communication, s. 507, p. 1291.

Criminal knowledge—

- where acts done by several persons, s. 35, p. 74.

Criminal misappropriation—

- dishonest misappropriation of property, s. 403, p. 981.
- for a time only, s. 403, Explan. 1, p. 981.
- when a finder of property commits, s. 403, Explan. 2, p. 981.
- differs from theft, p. 983.
- in respect of retention of money paid by mistake, p. 985.
- of joint property, p. 985.
- temple property, p. 985.
- in the case of lost property, p. 986.
- by partner, p. 986.
- when property found drifting in river, p. 986.
- is treasure trove, p. 987.
- claim of right, p. 988.
- by a servant misappropriating money received on behalf of his master, p. 988.
- secreting letters, p. 988.
- exchanging railway tickets, p. 988.
- harvesting crops under attachment, p. 988.
- of property of a deceased person, s. 404, p. 990.
- distinguished from 'criminal breach of trust', p. 993.

See MISAPPROPRIATION.

Criminal trespass—

- definition and punishment—, ss. 441, 447, pp. 1100, 1117.
- entry to commit an offence, p. 1102.
- when possession is joint, p. 1102.
- entry must be to cause annoyance, etc., p. 1106.
- when claim is bona fide, p. 1110.
- "house-trespass", s. 442, p. 1111.
- "lurking house-trespass", s. 443, p. 1114.
- "lurking house-trespass by night", s. 444, p. 1115.
- "house-breaking", s. 445, p. 1115.
- "house-breaking by night", s. 446, p. 1117.
- how punishable—
 - if simple, s. 448, p. 1118.
- in order to commit offence punishable—
 - with death, s. 449, p. 1119.
 - transportation for life, s. 450, p. 1120.
 - imprisonment, s. 451, p. 1120.
- if after preparation for causing hurt, etc., s. 452, p. 1121.
- "lurking house-trespass" or "house-breaking"—
 - how punishable, s. 453, p. 1122.
 - if in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment, s. 454, p. 1123.
 - after preparation to cause hurt, etc., s. 455, p. 1124.
 - simple, s. 456, p. 1125.
 - grievous hurt is caused, s. 459, p. 1129.
- "lurking house-trespass by night" or "house-breaking by night"—
 - how punishable—
 - simple, s. 456, p. 1125.
 - if in order to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment, s. 450, p. 1125.
 - after preparation to cause hurt or restraint, etc., s. 458, p. 1129.
- grievous hurt or death caused by one of several persons while committing, s. 460, p. 1131.

Criticism—

- fair, on books, pictures, etc., is justified, p. 1251.

Crops—

- carrying away, under attachment, p. 918.
- are not moveable property in theft, p. 926.
- under attachment, p. 981.
- harvesting of, under attachment, p. 988.
- cutting off, may not be mischief, p. 1081.
- removal of, by tenants, p. 1077.

Culpable homicide—

- definition of, s. 299, p. 684.
- when—is murder, s. 300, p. 702.
- is not murder, when committed under provocation, s. 300, Excep. 1, pp. 702, 722.
 - in exceeding the right of private defence, s. 300, Excep. 2, pp. 703, 732.
 - by public servant exceeding his powers, s. 300, Excep. 3, pp. 703, 735.
 - in sudden fight, s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 704, 736.
- when person above 18 years voluntarily suffers death, s. 300, Excep. 5, pp. 704, 739.
- distinguished from 'murder', p. 705.
- by causing death of person other than the person whose death was intended, s. 301, p. 742.
- punishment for—not amounting to "murder", s. 304, p. 762.
- attempt to commit—, s. 308, p. 789.
- causing death of quick unborn child, s. 316, p. 796.
- by exposure of child, s. 317, p. 797.

Culpable negligence—

- what amounts to, p. 688.

Culpable rashness—

- what amounts to, p. 688.

Cumulative punishment—

- not to be awarded where single offence is made up of different offences, s. 71, p. 112.
- sentences in rioting, p. 347.

Currency-notes—

- counterfeiting—or bank-notes, s. 489A, p. 1199.
- halves of—are goods in theft, p. 927.
- using as genuine forged or counterfeit—or bank-notes, s. 489B, p. 1200.
- possession of counterfeit—or bank-note, s. 489C, p. 1201.
- making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting—or bank-notes, s. 489D p. 1202.
- making or using documents resembling—or bank-notes, s. 489E, p. 1203.

Custody—

- escape from, under a civil warrant, p. 418.
 - of Court peons, p. 448.
- harbouring person in, s. 216, p. 545.
- escape from—by a State prisoner or prisoner of war, s. 130, p. 315.
 - suffering of by a public servant, ss. 222, 223, pp. 559, 560.
 - or attempt to ; penalty for, ss. 224, 225, pp. 563, 566.

See APPREHENSION ; ESCAPE.

Custody of property—

- building for, mischief by fire to, s. 486, p. 1097.

Custom—

- of divorce, how far a defence under s. 494, p. 1210.

Cutting—

- causing hurt or grievous hurt by instrument for, ss. 324, 326, pp. 818, 816.

Dacoits—

- penalties for harbouring, s. 216A, p. 549.
- belonging to a gang of, s. 401, p. 977.

See GANG OF DACOITS.

Dacoity—

- committed in foreign territory, p. 36.
- in respect of property belonging to two persons, p. 115.
- definition of, s. 391, p. 958.
- simple, s. 395, p. 963.
- if accompanied by murder, s. 396, p. 966.
- grievous hurt is caused or if death or grievous hurt is attempted to be caused, s. 397, p. 968.
- is either theft or extortion, p. 959.
- if offender armed with a deadly weapon, while attempting dacoity, s. 398, p. 972.
- making preparation for—how punishable, s. 399, p. 973.
- belonging to a gang of dacoits, how punishable, s. 400, p. 974.
- assembling for purpose of committing, s. 402, p. 980.
- dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of, s. 412, p. 1036.

See ROBBERY.

Damage—

- to place of worship, s. 295, p. 670.
- body, mind, reputation or property in cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.
- property, in mischief, s. 425, pp. 1078, 1080.

Dancing girl—

- adoption by, not necessarily illegal, p. 900.
- for purposes of prostitution, an offence, p. 900.

Danger—

- caused to public road by omission to take order with property, s. 288, p. 644.
- life or safety, s. 386, p. 830.
- by hurt, s. 337, p. 832.
- grievous hurt, s. 338, p. 833.

Dangerous weapons—

- voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt by, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.

Darkhast—

- false averments in, pp. 470, 500.

Dead body—

- of a child, concealment of, s. 818, p. 800.

Deadly weapon—

- in unlawful assembly, s. 144, p. 338.
- meaning of, p. 338.
- a lathi may or may not be, pp. 851, 970.
- possession of, in unlawful assembly, s. 158, p. 377.
- user of, in robbery or dacoity, s. 397, p. 968.
- possession of, in attempt to commit robbery or dacoity, s. 398, p. 972.

Death—

- definition of, s. 46, p. 81.
- punishment under Penal Code, s. 53, first, p. 85.
- sentence of—may be commuted, s. 54, p. 94.
- does not save offender's property to be liable for his unpaid fine, s. 70, p. 109.
- causing two deaths simultaneously, p. 115.
- causing—with consent or for benefit, not an offence, ss. 87, 88, 89, pp. 184, 186, 189.
- right of private defence when extends to, ss. 100, 103, pp. 217, 224.
- of complainant in unlawful assembly, p. 338.
- offence punishable with, fabricating false evidence to procure conviction for, s. 194, p. 491.
- causing of, by the effect of words on the imagination or the passions, p. 688.
- caused by mutual stone-throwing, p. 810.
- practising surgery, p. 771.
- without intention whilst doing unlawful act, p. 689.
- by rash and negligent act, s. 304A, pp. 768, 770.
- offences punishable with—
 - waging war against the Queen, s. 121, p. 274.
 - abetment of mutiny, s. 132, p. 320.
 - causing execution of innocent person by false evidence, s. 194, p. 491.
 - murder, ss. 302, 303, pp. 744, 762.
 - attempt to murder by life-convict, s. 307, p. 780.
 - dacoity with murder, s. 396, p. 966.
- causing by drowning, p. 787.
- negligence, s. 304A, p. 768.
- suffocation, p. 787.
- of complainant in hurt, terminates complaint, p. 812.
- person in fear of—for purposes of extortion, ss. 386, 387, 388, pp. 952, 953.
 - theft, s. 382, p. 946.
 - robbery : dacoity, s. 390, p. 955.
 - house-trespass, s. 449, p. 1119.
 - lurking house-trespass by night, s. 460, p. 1131.
 - house-breaking by night, s. 460, p. 1131.
- robbery or dacoity with attempt to cause, s. 397, p. 968.
- mischief committed after preparation made for causing, s. 440, p. 1100.
- house-trespass to commit offence punishable with, s. 449, p. 1119.
- caused by effect of words on imagination, p. 688.
 - without intention while doing an unlawful act, p. 689.
 - by want of treatment of dangerous wound, p. 699.
 - aconite, p. 715.
 - cerebral hæmorrhage, p. 805.

Death—Concl'd.

- caused by neglect to provide medical aid or food—
 - adults, p. 710.
 - infants, p. 710.
- while in a state of intoxication, p. 718.
- of husband is no injury to the wife, p. 81.
- does not end prosecution for adultery, p. 1223.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; HOUSE-TRESPASS ; MISCHIEF.

Debate—

- in Legislature, whether can be referred to, p. 17.

Debt—

- removal of property in satisfaction of—is theft, p. 924.
- dishonestly or fraudulently preventing payment of, s. 422, p. 1074.

Debtor—

See FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS.

Deceased—

- misappropriating movable property belonging to estate of, s. 404, p. 990.
- defamatory imputation to the—is actionable, s. 499, Expln. 1, pp. 1232, 1240.

Deceased person—

- imputation against—may be defamatory, s. 499, Expln. 1, pp. 1232, 1240.
- false personation of, is cheating s. 416, ill. (b), p. 1061.

Deceit—

See CREATING.

Deceitful means—

- as an element in abduction, s. 362, p. 875.

Decency—

- public: See Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Deception—

- dishonest concealment of facts is, s. 415, Expln., p. 1042.

Decisions—

- public servant pronouncing corrupt—in judicial proceedings, s. 219, p. 555.

Decked vessel—

- mischief with intent to destroy, s. 437, p. 1098.

Declaration—

- before a public servant, when on "oath", s. 51, p. 82.
- making a false—which is receivable in evidence, s. 199, p. 498.
- using a false—knowing it to be false, s. 200, p. 501.

See FALSE DECLARATION ; DYING DECLARATION.

Decree—

- copy of—is not a valuable security, p. 68.
- fraudulently suffering, or obtaining issue or execution of—for sum or property not due, ss. 208, 210, pp. 516, 518.
- fraudulent alteration of, p. 1167.

Deed—

- dishonest or fraudulent execution of—containing false statement of consideration, s. 423, p. 1075.
- of divorce is a valuable security, p. 68.

Defacing—

- will, authority to adopt or valuable security, s. 477, p. 1173.
- property mark, s. 489, p. 1199.

Defacing property-mark—

- is an offence, s. 480, p. 1185.

Defamation—

- in what it consists, s. 499, p. 1232.
- imputation on deceased person, s. 499, Explan. 1, pp. 1232, 1240.
 - association or class, ibid—Explan. 2, pp. 1232, 1240, 1245.
 - alternative or ironical, ibid, Explan. 3, pp. 1232, 1241.
 - lowering the reputation, ibid, Explan. 4, pp. 1232, 1243.
 - not defamatory, ibid, Exceps. 1-10 pp. 1232-1234, 1245-1270.
- punishment for, s. 500, p. 1234.
- printing or engraving defamatory matter, s. 501, p. 1278.
- selling defamatory matter, s. 502, p. 1278.
- publication is an essential ingredient, p. 1236.
 - in a newspaper, p. 1238.
 - repetition of, p. 1238.
- imputation—
 - concerning any person, p. 1239.
 - against a dead person, p. 1240.
 - combination of persons, p. 1240.
 - ironical expressions, p. 1241.
 - concerning a caste, p. 1241.
 - no difference between spoken and written, p. 1241.
 - harming the reputation, p. 1243.
 - true imputation for public good, s. 499, Excep. 1, pp. 1232, 1245.
 - what is public good, p. 1246.
 - imputation in public interests, p. 1247.
 - public conduct of public servant, s. 499, Excep. 2, pp. 1232, 1247.
 - conduct of a person touching public question, ibid., Excep. 3, pp. 1233, 1248.
 - publication of proceedings in Court, ibid., Excep. 4, pp. 1233, 1250.
 - merits of a case decided in Court or conduct of witnesses, ibid., Excep. 5, pp. 1233, 1250.
 - public performance, ibid, Excep. 6, pp. 1233, 1251.
 - censure passed in good faith by superiors, ibid, Excep. 7, pp. 1234, 1252.
 - imputation made by a person in authority, p. 1252.
 - accusation preferred in good faith to authorised person, ibid, Excep. 8, pp. 1234, 1253.
 - made to authorized person, p. 1253.
 - unauthorized person, p. 1254.
 - statement to protect interest of maker, s. 499, Excep. 9, pp. 1234, 1254.
 - communications made by member of caste, p. 1256.
 - privileges of—
 - judge, p. 1258.
 - counsel, pleader, etc., p. 1259.
 - witness, p. 1263.
 - parties, p. 1264.
 - statements made in—
 - pleadings, p. 1266.
 - reports, p. 1267.
 - statements made to protect—
 - another's interest, p. 1267.
 - maker's interest, p. 1268.
 - statements made without good faith, p. 1269.
- imputation made by pleaders, p. 1269.
- caution for the good of a person, s. 499, Excep. 10, pp. 1234, 1270.
- truth as a defence, p. 1273.
- good faith, p. 1273.
- relevant facts, what are, p. 1273.
- complaint by aggrieved person necessary, p. 1275.
 - brother, p. 1275.
 - brother-in-law, p. 1275.
 - high priest, p. 1275.
 - husband, p. 1275.
 - official superior, p. 1275.
 - president of municipality, p. 1275.
- to prosecute a judge, sanction necessary, p. 1276.
- petition containing defamatory statements to be refused, p. 1277.
- defamatory matter to be destroyed, p. 1277.

Defiling—

- a place of worship, s. 295, p. 670.

Definitions—

- of offences, to be subject to Exceptions, s. 6, p. 44.
- words used in the Penal Code, p. 44.

Defence—

See PRIVATE DEFENCE.

Defraud—

- meaning of, p. 57.

Deleterious substance—

causing hurt or grievous hurt by, ss. 324, 326, pp. 818, 816.

Deliberately—

as occurring in s. 298, p. 682.

Deliberate intention—to outrage religious feelings, s. 295A, p. 678.

wound religious feelings, s. 298, p. 681.

Delirious person—

suicide by a, abetment of, s. 305, p. 778.

Delivery of coin—liability for, altered coin, ss. 250, 251, 254, pp. 603, 604, 605.

counterfeit coin, ss. 239, 240, pp. 594, 596.

Delivery of property—

when fraudulent, is punishable, s. 206, p. 512.

in cases of extortion, s. 383, p. 947.

Delusion—effect of insane, p. 170.

Demand—

satisfaction of, for causing hurt, s. 330, p. 822.

grievous hurt, for, s. 331, p. 824.

wrongful confinement, s. 343, p. 846.

fraudulent release of, s. 424, p. 1076.

Demon—

See EVIL SPIRIT.

Deposit—director paying dividends out of—, commits criminal breach of trust, p. 1019.

employee withdrawing security—commits criminal breach of trust, p. 999.

Deposition—

witness refusing to sign a—in revenue inquiry, no offence, p. 429.

false evidence given in, p. 482.

to be read as a whole, in perjury, p. 485.

Depredation—

committing—on territories in alliance or at peace with the Queen, s. 126, p. 312.

receiving property obtained in, s. 127, p. 313.

Deserters—

harbouring as deserter naval or military officer, s. 136, p. 323.

concealment of deserter on board ship, s. 137, p. 324.

Desertion—

meaning of, s. 135, p. 323.

by military man, abetment of, s. 135, p. 322.

Design—

to commit offence, concealment of, s. 118, p. 260.

wage war, concealment of, s. 123, p. 286.

Destruction—of document to prevent its production as evidence, s. 204, p. 509.

obscene matter, p. 659.

evidence, s. 201, p. 502.

property, is mischief, s. 425, p. 1078.

religious object, s. 295, p. 670.

powers of member or joint, s. 320, p. 805.

will, authority to adopt or valuable security, s. 477, p. 1175.

books of account, s. 477A, p. 1176.

property-mark, s. 489, p. 1199.

libellous matter, p. 1277.

Detaining—

- an accused person, s. 225B, p. 570.
- a slave, s. 370, p. 895.
- married woman, s. 498, p. 1224.

Detection—

- of offence, causing hurt for, s. 330, p. 822.
- grievous hurt for, s. 331, p. 824.
- wrongful confinement for, s. 348, p. 840.

Dev Dasi—

- dedication of a minor as a—is an offence, p. 901.

Device—

- counterfeiting of, ss. 475, 476, pp. 1173, 1174.

Dhatura—

- administering of—
 - for causing death, p. 718.
 - attempting to cause death, p. 787.
 - causing hurt, pp. 804, 820.

Dhurna—

- sitting—at another's door, s. 508, ill. (a), p. 1291.

Diamonds—

- cheating by false, s. 415, ill. (c), p. 1042.

Diary—

- alteration of police, p. 1167.
- false statements in a police—is forgery, p. 1167.

Die—

- for making fictitious postal stamps, s. 263A, p. 618.
- counterfeiting trade mark, s. 485, p. 1194.

Direction of law—

- disobedience to, for causing injury, s. 166, p. 398.
- saving person or property, s. 217, p. 550.
- what is meant by pp. 398, 550.

Director—

- publishing false balance sheets, pp. 470, 1066.
- paying dividends out of deposits, p. 1019.

Disaffection—

- exciting—against Government. See SEDITION.
- meaning of, s. 124A, Explan. 1, p. 288.
- interpretations of, p. 301.

Disappearance—

- causing—of evidence to screen offender, s. 201, p. 502.

Disapprobation—

- as an ingredient in sedition, s. 124A, pp. 288, 305.

Disease—

- negligent spreading of infectious, s. 269, p. 626.
- malicious spreading of infectious, s. 270, p. 627.
- causing—is said to cause "hurt", s. 819, p. 802.

Diseased spleen—

See SPLEEN.

Disfiguration—

- permanent—of head or face is grievous hurt, s. 320, simply, p. 805.
- meaning of the term "disfigure", p. 806.
- branding of cheeks with red-hot iron is, p. 806.

Dishonest concealment—of facts, is cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.

Dishonest misappropriation—of property, ss. 403, 404, pp. 981, 990.

Dishonest removal—of property, s. 424, p. 1076.

by a partner, pp. 997, 1060.

during attachment, is an offence, p. 1076.

if order illegal, removal is no offence, p. 1077.

of crops by tenants, p. 1077.

removal under bona fide dispute, p. 1077.

Dishonestly—

definition of, s. 24, p. 56.

distinguished from 'fraudulently', p. 59.

occurring in ss. 369, 378, 383, 403, 404, 405, 411, 412, 420, 439, 461, 462, pp. 804, 918, 947, 981, 990, 992, 1023, 1036, 1067, 1099, 1132, 1133.

Dishonour—

to outrage modesty of woman, s. 354, p. 860.

assaulting, or using criminal force to, s. 355, p. 862.

Dislocation—

of a bone or tooth, s. 320, seventhly, p. 805.

Dismissal—threat of, p. 1282.

Disobedience—

to direction of law, for causing injury, s. 166, p. 393.

shielding person or property, s. 217, p. 550.

quarantine rule, s. 271, p. 628.

lawful order of public servant, s. 188, p. 452.

Disposal—

of dead body of a child, secretly, s. 318, p. 800.

a person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.

minor girl for prostitution, s. 372, p. 897.

stolen property, s. 414, p. 1039.

machinery for counterfeiting currency-notes, s. 489D, p. 1202.

Dispose of—a minor girl for purposes of prostitution, s. 372, p. 897.

meaning of the term, p. 899.

Disposition of property—

fraudulent, s. 421, p. 1073.

Distinct offences—

how sentence to be admeasured on conviction of, p. 116.

Distrain—resistance to, pp. 344, 441.

Distribution—of obscene books, etc., prohibited, ss. 292, 293, pp. 655, 659.

Disturbance—

of religious assembly, s. 296, p. 676.

funeral rights, s. 297, p. 678.

Dividend—

authority to receive, on valuable security, forgery of, s. 467, p. 1157.

Divine displeasure—threat of, at an election, s. 171C, p. 404.

in threat, p. 950.

rendering a person an object of, s. 508, p. 1291.

Divorce—

deed of, is valuable security, p. 63.
 dissolving marriage, p. 1209.
 custom of, how far a defence, p. 1210.

Document—

definition of, s. 29, p. 61.
 how far valuable security, s. 30, p. 62.
 cancelled instrument is not a, p. 63.
 unstamped document is a, p. 63.
 unregistered document is a, p. 63.
 public servant framing incorrect, s. 167, p. 394.
 omission to produce—when legally bound, s. 175, p. 419.
 witness not producing a, s. 175, p. 419.
 fabricating false evidence in—; punishment for, s. 192, p. 470.
 destruction of— to prevent its production, s. 204, p. 509.
 destroying a document, p. 509.
 secreting a document, p. 509.
 secreting of—is wrongful loss, p. 56.
 false—; what constitutes the making of a, s. 464, p. 1134.
 a hammer for marking sleepers is a, pp. 1160, 1164.
 forged—; what constitutes a, s. 470, p. 1170.
 certificate, pp. 1146, 1166.
 diary p. 1167.
 decrees, p. 1167.
 kabin-nama, p. 1147.
 plaint, p. 1166.
 prescription, p. 1167.
 receipts, p. 1166.
 return, pp. 1160, 1167.
 sanad, p. 1167.
 uttering, p. 1167.
 vakalatnama, p. 1146.
 voting paper, p. 1146.

See FALSE DOCUMENT : FORGED DOCUMENT.

Doorway—

entry through a,—is house-breaking, s. 445, illa. (d) to (h), pp. 1115, 1116.
 departure through a,—is house-breaking, p. 1125.

Doubt—

where offence committed is left in, s. 72, p. 125.
 must be as to matter of law and not as to facts, p. 126.
 punishment in cases of, as to murder, p. 756.

Drainage—

mischief by causing obstruction to, s. 432, p. 1094.

Dramatic performance .

inciting to sedition, can be prevented, p. 305.

Drawing --

sale, etc., of obscene, s. 292, p. 655.

Driving—

See RASH DRIVING.

Drink—

See FOOD OR DRINK.

Drugs—

adulteration and sale of adulterated, ss. 274, 275, pp. 631, 632.
 punishment for knowingly selling one drug for another, s. 276, p. 633. administration of stupefying, intoxicating, or unwholesome—with intent to cause hurt, s. 328,
 p. 820.
 poisonous, negligence with reference to, s. 337, p. 832.

See POISON.

Drunken person—

misconduct in a public place by a, s. 510, p. 1294.

Drunkenness—

insanity brought about by, p. 171.

See ANNOYANCE ; INTOXICATION.

Duelling—

does not fall under s. 300, Except. 3, p. 725.

Duty—

detering public servant from, causing hurt, s. 332, p. 825.
grievous hurt, s. 333, p. 828.

Dwelling-house, etc.—

theft in, s. 380, p. 942.
mischief with intent to destroy, s. 436, p. 1097.

See BUILDING.

Dying declaration—admissible in the case of rape, p. 912.

Ear—

privation of hearing of an, s. 320, thirdly, p. 805.

Earth—

land and things attached to the earth are moveable property, p. 55.
'earth' and 'the earth' distinguished, p. 55.
is moveable property in theft, p. 926.

East India Company—

Acts of Parliament passed after 1858 in anywise affecting the—not affected by Penal Code, s. 5, p. 38.

Effacing—writing, etc., from Government stamp, s. 261, p. 610.

Effect—

caused partly by act and partly by omission, s. 36, p. 75.

Election—

occurring in s. 21, Expl. 3, p. 50.
'candidate,' meaning of, s. 171A, p. 401.
'electoral right,' meaning of, s. 171A, p. 402. offences relating to, ss. 171A-171I, pp. 401-411.
bribery in, s. 171B, p. 402.
undue influence at an, s. 171C, p. 404.
personation at an, s. 171D, p. 405.
punishment for bribery, s. 171E, p. 407.
undue influence, s. 171F, p. 407.
false statement in connection with an, s. 171G, p. 409.
illegal payment in connection with an, s. 171H, p. 410.
failure to keep account of an, s. 171I, p. 411.

Electoral right—meaning of, s. 171A, p. 402.

Elephant—

killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any, s. 429, p. 1080.

See MISCHIEF.

Emasculation—

is grievous hurt, s. 320, firstly, pp. 805, 806.
by a man on himself no offence, p. 806.
operation in, p. 694.

Embezzlement—

See CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST.

Employer—

theft by clerk or servant, of property belonging to, s. 381, p. 944.
accounts of, falsification by servant, s. 477A, p. 1176.

Employment—

of any person to join unlawful assembly, s. 150, p. 361.

Endorsement on bill of exchange—

See BILL OF EXCHANGE.

Enemies—

exemption of alien, p. 7.

Engagement—

of any person to join unlawful assembly, s. 150, p. 361.

English Law—

1. The distinction between 'possession' and 'custody' does not exist in the Penal Code, p. 60.
2. Infancy.
incapacity to commit crime from 7 to 14 years, p. 165.
after 14 years, capacity to commit crime can be presumed, p. 165.
under 14 years, incapable of committing rape, p. 907.
3. Arrest by public officer.
resistance to an arrest under a defective warrant is allowed; not so under the Code, p. 217.
4. Abetment.
principal in the first degree, p. 237.
second degree, p. 238.
accessory after the fact, p. 238.
before the fact, p. 238.
5. Perjury.
provisions of, p. 464.
difference between English and Indian law, p. 464.
6. False personation.
of imaginary person no offence under English law, under the Code it is, p. 512.
7. Manslaughter.
1. voluntary manslaughter, p. 685.
2. involuntary manslaughter, p. 686.
8. Murder.
is killing with malice aforethought, p. 704.
9. Suicide.
liability for, p. 791.
10. Assault.
what is assault and battery, p. 851.
11. Rape.
presumption of incapacity in a child under 14 years, pp. 166, 907.
physical consent alone is required; under the Code intelligent consent is required, p. 102.
12. Larceny. difference between theft and, pp. 919, 937.
what amounts to, p. 919.
13. Stolen property.
provisions of law as to, p. 1024.
husband and wife, p. 1028.
14. False pretence.
distinguished from 'cheating', p. 1048.
15. House-breaking.
actual breaking necessary, p. 1116.
elements in, p. 1121.
16. Burglary. commission of, 1128.
17. Adultery.
is no crime, p. 1220.
18. Libel.
essence of the crime consists in its tendency to provoke breach of the peace, p. 1238.

Engraving—

of defamatory matter, s. 501, p. 1278.
sale of defamatory, s. 502, p. 1278.

Enhanced punishment—

See PREVIOUS CONVICTION.

Enmity—

promoting—between classes, s. 158A, p. 367.
'promotes', meaning of, p. 369.
'classes', meaning of, p. 370.

Enticing—

- minor, s. 361 p. 864.
- married woman, s. 498, p. 1224.
- meaning of the term, p. 1224.
- wife not punished as abettor, p. 1221.

Entries—

- false, in an account, p. 1147.

Entry—

- accompanied by force may amount to riot, p. 342.
- to commit an offence is criminal trespass, s. 441, p. 1102.
- false—in employer's books, s. 477A, p. 1179.

Erasure—

- of mark on a Government stamp denoting that it has been used, s. 263, p. 611.

See GOVERNMENT STAMP.

Escape—

- public servant allowing, suffering, or aiding—of prisoner of State or war, ss. 128, 129, 130, pp. 313, 314, 315.
- of offender from custody, s. 216, p. 545.
- public servant intentionally suffering—of person accused or under sentence, ss. 221, 222, pp. 557, 559.
- negligently suffering—of person charged or convicted, s. 223, p. 560.
- making or attempting to make—from lawful custody, s. 224, p. 563.
- from custody under a civil warrant, s. 174, p. 415.
- not otherwise provided for, s. 225^{1/2}, p. 570.

European—

- definition of, p. 95.

European or American—

- to be sentenced to penal servitude instead of to transportation, s. 56, p. 95.

See PENAL SERVITUDE.

Evidence—

- refusal by party in suit to give—; punishment for, s. 179, p. 428.
- under illegal pardon, p. 470.
- using—knowing to be false or fabricated, s. 196, p. 403.
- causing disappearance of or production of—to screen offender, s. 201, p. 502.
- destroying document to prevent its use, s. 204, p. 509.

See FALSE EVIDENCE.

Evil spirit—

- beating for the purpose of exorcising, p. 694.

Examination—

- false personation at an, pp. 437, 1061.

Exceptions—

- onus of proving—on accused, p. 141.
- general, Chap. IV, p. 141.
- definitions to be subject to general, s. 6, p. 44.

Exciting disaffection—

- against Government, s. 124A, p. 287.

Excommunication—

- clergyman passing sentence of, p. 462.
- from caste pronounced by a guru, p. 1252.
- headman, p. 1252.
- threat of—is no criminal intimidation, p. 1282.

Execution—

- application for, containing false averments, pp. 470, 500.
- fraudulent, of deed, s. 423, p. 1075.
- destruction to defeat, of decree, s. 425, ill. (d), p. 1078.
- of false document, s. 464, p. 1134.

Exhibition—

- of false lights, etc., s. 281, p. 642.
- obscene books, etc., prohibited, ss. 292, 293, pp. 655, 659.
- object, an insult to modesty of woman, s. 509, p. 1292.

Expecting to be a public servant—

- meaning of the expression, s. 161, Expln., pp. 380, 381.

Expert—

- opinion of—as to handwriting, in forgery, p. 1153.
- thumb-impression, in forgery, p. 1153.
- palm impression, p. 1153.
- foot print, p. 1153.

Explanations—

- general, Chap. II, p. 44.

Explosive substance—

- negligence with respect to, s. 286, p. 649.
- meaning of, p. 649.
- revolver is not an, p. 649.
- causing hurt or grievous hurt by, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.
- mischief by means of, s. 438, p. 1099.

Export—

- of counterfeit coin, ss. 237, 238, p. 593.
- slaves, s. 370, p. 895.

Exposure—

- of noxious food or drink for sale, s. 273, p. 629.
- drug or medicine for sale, s. 275, p. 632.
- child under 12 years of age, s. 317, p. 797.
- in a desert place, s. 307, ill. (b), p. 780.
- meaning of the term, "expose", p. 798.
- "leave", p. 798.
- of goods having counterfeit trade-mark, s. 486, p. 1194.

See CHILD ; FOOD OR DRINK ; COUNTERFEIT TRADE-MARK.

Expressions

- sense once explained to remain throughout, s. 7, p. 44.

Extortion—

- definition of, s. 383, p. 947.
- punishment for, s. 384, p. 947.
- threat of publishing libel, s. 383, ill. (a), p. 947.
- wrongful confinement, s. 383, ill. (b), p. 947.
- ploughing up field, s. 383, ill. (c), p. 947.
- grievous hurt, s. 383, ill. (d), p. 947.
- criminal accusation, pp. 948, 950.
- fire, p. 950.
- incendiarism, p. 950.
- Divine displeasure, p. 950.
- illegal exaction of money, p. 950.
- loss of appointment, p. 950.
- money obtained by frightening a person, p. 950.
- picketing, p. 951.
- wrongful confinement for purposes of, s. 347, p. 846.
- punishment for, s. 384, p. 947.
- causing hurt or grievous hurt for, ss. 327, 329, 330, 331, pp. 819, 822, 824.
- by putting a person in fear of injury, s. 385, p. 952.
- death or grievous hurt, s. 386, p. 952.
- or attempting to put a person in fear of death or grievous hurt, s. 387, p. 953.
- threat of accusation of offence punishable with death, transportation, etc., s. 388, p. 953.
- putting a person in fear of accusation of an offence, s. 389, p. 954.
- when it amounts to robbery, s. 390, p. 955.
- distinguished from 'theft', p. 947.
- 'cheating', p. 1044.
- 'criminal intimidation', p. 1280.

Extradition—

- in respect of offences committed in protected States of India, p. 24.
- harbouring of offenders who can be extradited, s. 216, pp. 546, 548.

Extra territorial jurisdiction—

- over offences committed on land, p. 25.
- subsequent annexation of territory, how affects the offence, p. 27.
- appeal from criminal jurisdiction exercised by Political Agents, p. 28.
- acts done within British as well as foreign territory, p. 29.
- over offences committed on the high seas, p. 29.
- Admiralty jurisdiction of, p. 29.
- High Courts, p. 31.
- Mofussil Courts, p. 32.
- Presidency Magistrate's Court, p. 32.
- law and procedure applicable to offence committed on the high seas, p. 34.
- piracy, p. 34.
- liability of foreigners for offences committed outside its jurisdiction, p. 36.

Eye—

- destroying an, s. 320, secondly, p. 805.
- operation on, rashly performed, p. 833.

Fabricating false evidence—

- definition of, s. 192, p. 470.
- punishment for, s. 193, p. 477.
- evidence fabricated must appear in a judicial proceeding, p. 480.
- no fabrication if evidence fabricated not admissible, p. 474.
- no erroneous opinion could be formed touching any point material to the result of a proceeding, p. 476.
- public servant not authorized to hold investigation, p. 474.
- evidence fabricated must be material, p. 476.
- accused not liable for fabricating evidence, pp. 468, 477.
- using such evidence, s. 196, p. 493.

See FALSE EVIDENCE.

Fabrication—

- of forged documents, ss. 464, 471, pp. 1134, 1162.
- certificate, pp. 1146, 1166.
- kabin-nama, p. 1147.
- plaint, p. 1166.
- receipts, pp. 1147, 1166.
- return, pp. 1160, 1167.
- diary, p. 1167.
- decree, p. 1167.
- sanad, p. 1167.
- vakalatnama, p. 1146.

Face—

- permanent disfigurement of, s. 320, sixthly, p. 805.

Facilitating commission of offence—

- by concealing or making false representation as to design of, ss. 118, 120, pp. 260, 263.
- where offender is public servant whose duty it is to prevent, s. 119, p. 262.
- offence is waging war against Queen, s. 123, p. 286.

Factor—

- criminal breach of trust, by, s. 409, p. 1015.
- meaning of, p. 1017.

False balance—

- use of, s. 264, p. 614.
- possession of, s. 266, p. 616.
- making or selling, s. 267, p. 618.

False balance sheet—

- preparation of—
 - not an offence under s. 191, p. 470.
 - an offence under s. 418, p. 1066.
- use of, is an offence, s. 418, p. 1066.

False certificate—

- issuing, signing or using as true, ss. 197, 198, pp. 496, 498.

False charge-- preferring of, before police officers, amounts to an injury, p. 81.

 with intent to injure, s. 211, p. 520.
 distinguished from 'giving false information', ss. 182, 211, p. 521.
 bare statement is not a, p. 527.
 whether complaint to police is a, pp. 527, 533.
 should be made to a Court having jurisdiction, p. 527.
 statement under s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, p. 528. of arson, p. 531.
 dacoity, p. 531.
 hurt, p. 531.
 theft, p. 531.
 in a petition, p. 531.
 police report, p. 531.
 civil remedy for, p. 532.
 compounding of, p. 532.
 abetment of, p. 532.
 includes a partly true and partly false complaint, p. 531.
 vexatious charge is not a, p. 532.
 accused should be allowed to prove truth of his complaint, p. 534.
 false charge to the police and not to the magistrate, p. 533.
 s. 250, Criminal Procedure Code, p. 535. charge-sheet by police, p. 535.
 finding should state the nature of, p. 535.
 misdirection to jury in cases of, p. 535.
 original proceedings, should not be pending, p. 535.
 punishment in respect of, p. 536.
 summary proceedings regarding, p. 535.
 of rape, p. 914.

False claim---

dishonestly making in Court, s. 209, p. 517.
 is not receiving stolen property if made bona fide, p. 1027.

False declaration--- making, subscribing or using as true--, ss. 199, 200, pp. 498, 501.

False document---

definition of, s. 464, p. 1134.

See DOCUMENT; FORGED DOCUMENT.

False entry--

in accounts, by clerk, etc., s. 477A, p. 1176.

False evidence--- giving and fabricating--, ss. 191, 192, pp. 463, 470.

 criminating statement no justification, p. 468.
 in written statements, p. 468.
 abetment, p. 469.
 illegality of trial does not purge perjury, p. 468.
 verifying application not requiring verification, p. 468.
 fabricating liability of accused for, pp. 468, 477.
 false verification in pleadings, p. 468.
 false statement in the application of an accused, p. 469.
 a balance-sheet, p. 470.
 darkhast, p. 470.
 kabin-nama, p. 470.
 under illegal pardon, p. 470.
 irregular trial, p. 470.
 should be used in judicial proceedings, p. 474.
 admissible, p. 474.
 before a public servant authorized to investigate, p. 474.
 touch a point material to the result of a proceeding, p. 475.
 accused person not liable for fabricating, p. 477.
 punishment, s. 193, p. 477.
 nature of proof, p. 481.
 depositions, p. 482.
 proceedings in trial, p. 481.
 powers of appellate Court, p. 483.
 contradictory statements, p. 483.
 irregular deposition, p. 482.
 witness criminating himself, p. 486.
 complaint, p. 486.

False evidence—Concid.

- separate trial for each accused, p. 486.
- when proceedings to be instituted, p. 489.
- giving or fabricating—to procure conviction of capital offence, s. 194, p. 491.
- using evidence known to be false, s. 196, p. 493.

False imprisonment—

- distinguished from ‘malicious prosecution’, p. 840.

False information—

- furnishing—to public servant, ss. 177, 181, pp. 424, 430.
- false reports by police officers, p. 425.
- return to a superior, p. 425.
- to a public servant, p. 426.
- income-tax officer, p. 426.
- by municipal doctor, p. 426.
- representation in memorandum of appeal, p. 426.
- statement on oath, p. 430.
- with intent to cause injury to another person, s. 182, p. 431.
- statement by accused in his defence, p. 434.
- memo of appeal, p. 434.
- transfer application, p. 434.
- mere belief is no, p. 435.
- causing a public servant by—to do what he ought not to do, p. 436.
- personation, p. 437.
- use of lawful powers to the injury of another, p. 436.
- in income-tax return, p. 437.
- to screen offender, s. 201, p. 502.
- respecting offences committed, s. 203, p. 508.
- distinguished from ‘false charge’, s. 211, p. 520.

False lights, marks, or buoys—

- exhibition of, s. 281, p. 642.

False mark—

- making a, on goods, s. 487, p. 1107.
- user of a, s. 488, p. 1198.

False personation—

- of soldier, by wearing garb, etc., s. 140, p. 326.
- voter at an election, s. 171D, p. 405.
- for purposes of suit or prosecution, s. 205, p. 511.
- fraudulent gain is not an essential element, p. 511.
- where an imaginary person is personated, p. 511.
- of juror or assessor, s. 229, p. 581.
- at an examination, pp. 437, 1061.

See PERSONATION.

False pretence—

- distinguished from ‘cheating’, p. 1044.

False register—

- making of a, p. 1160.
- marriage register, p. 1156.
- goods register, p. 1156.
- chelan register, p. 1180.

False report—

- circulating—to cause mutiny or disturbance, s. 505, p. 1287.
- submitting, p. 395.

False statement—

- in connection with an election, s. 171G, p. 409.
- on oath or affirmation, s. 181, p. 430.
- in application not requiring verification, p. 468.
- affidavit of a convict, p. 469.
- income-tax return, p. 437.

False weights and measures—

See WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Falsely—

occurring in ss. 170, 205, 211, pp. 398, 511, 520.

Falsification—

of accounts by clerk, officer, or servant, s. 477A, p. 1176.
trade and property mark, ss. 478, 480, 481, 487, pp. 1183, 1185, 1189, 1197.
punishment for ss. 482, 488, pp. 1196, 1198.

Farukhabad rupee—

is Queen's coin, s. 230, ill. (e), p. 583.

Fear—

vitiates consent in rape, s. 375, Thirdly, pp. 907, 909. of death, hurt, or wrongful restraint, in theft, s. 382, p. 946.
extortion, ss. 383, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, pp. 947, 952, 953, 954. robbery and dacoity, s. 390, p. 955.
mischief, s. 440, p. 1100.
house-trespass, s. 452, p. 1121.
lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, s. 455, p. 1124.
by night or house-breaking by night, s. 458, p. 1129.
rumour to cause, to public, s. 505, p. 1287.

Fear of injury—

renders consent invalid, s. 90, p. 191.

Feelings—

wounding religious, ss. 297, 298, pp. 678, 681.

Female—

See WOMAN.

Fencing—

game of, protected by s. 87, ill., p. 184.

Fictitious person—making of false document in the name of—is forgery, s. 464, Expln., 2, pp. 1135, 1149.

Fictitious stamps—

using or making, etc., ss. 262, 263A, pp. 611, 613. definition of, s. 263A, p. 613.

Fighting—

when—amounts to an affray, s. 159, p. 378.
culpable homicide committed in sudden fight, not murder, s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 704, 736, 757.
See AFFRAY.

Filth—

See NUISANCE.

Finding—of property when criminal misappropriation, s. 403, Expln., 2, pp. 981, 986.

Fine—

under the Penal Code, s. 53, sixthly, p. 85.
the only punishment, p. 90.
limited, p. 90.
unlimited, p. 90.
rule as to amount of, s. 63, p. 100.
Magisterial fines, p. 101.
in case of joint offenders, p. 102.
daily fine, p. 102.
amount of, how to be fixed, p. 102.
sentence of imprisonment for non-payment of, s. 64, p. 102.
imprisonment should be in proportion to the fine, p. 104.
limit to imprisonment for non-payment of—when both imprisonment and fine awardable, s. 65, p. 104.
description of imprisonment for non-payment of, s. 66, p. 107.
imprisonment for non-payment of—when offence punishable with fine only, s. 67, p. 107.
terminates on payment of, or proportional part of, ss. 66, 69, pp. 107, 108.
refund of fine paid not allowed, p. 109.

Fine—Concl'd.

may be recovered from property subsequently acquired, p. 111.
 period allowed for levy of, s. 70, p. 109.
 death of offender does not discharge liability for, s. 70, p. 109.
 levying fine, meaning of, p. 110.

See IMPRISONMENT.

Finger print—

opinion of expert as to, in forgery, p. 1153.

Fire—

causing hurt or grievous hurt by, or heated substance, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.
 mischief by means of, ss. 435, 436, 438, pp. 1096, 1097, 1099.
 omission to take proper precaution with, s. 285, p. 647.
 threat to cause destruction by, s. 506, p. 1289.

See MISCHIEF.

Fire-arm—

attempt to discharge a loaded, p. 787.

Fish—

can be subject of theft, p. 928.

Food or drink—

adulterating, intended for sale, s. 272, p. 628.
 selling, etc., noxious and unfit, s. 273, p. 629.
 mischief to water for, s. 430, p. 1090.

Football—game of, protected by, s. 87, p. 184.

Foot-print—opinion of expert as to, p. 1153.

Force—

acts done under compulsion, s. 94, p. 195.
 definition of, s. 349, p. 848.
 as an element in abduction, s. 362, p. 875.
 used to woman for illicit intercourse, s. 366, p. 880.

See CRIMINAL FORCE.

Forced labour—

punishment for unlawful compulsory, s. 374, p. 906.

Foreign army—

exemption of, from the provisions of the Penal Code, p. 7.

Foreign country—

importation of a girl from a, s. 366B, p. 891.

Foreign law—doctrine of previous conviction does not apply to convictions under, s. 75, p. 133.

 oath under, false statements under, p. 465.

Foreign Princes or States—

exemption of, from the provisions of the Penal Code, p. 6. offences against—, punishment of, ss. 125, 127, pp. 311, 313.

Foreign State—

trade-mark protected in a, s. 478, p. 1183.

Foreign territory—offences committed in, but triable in British India, ss. 3, 4, pp. 21, 22.

 abetment in—of forgery committed in British India, p. 37.
 dacoity in, p. 36.
 kidnapping in, p. 36.
 committing depredations in, s. 126, p. 312.
 abetting in British India the counterfeiting of coin in, s. 236, p. 592.

Foreigners—

liability of,—in respect of offences committed outside British India, p. 36.
not guilty of waging war against the Queen, p. 278.

Forfeiture—

of property, s. 53, fifthly, p. 85. used in committing depredation, etc., on a Power at peace with the Queen, s. 126,
p. 312.
acquired by, committing depredation on Power in alliance with Government, ss. 126, 127, pp. 312, 313.
of property improperly purchased by a public servant, s. 169, p. 397.
fraudulently removing, etc., property to avoid, s. 206, p. 512.
receiving or claiming property to avoid, s. 207, p. 515.
public servant disobeying law, to screen property from, s. 217, p. 550.
framing incorrect record, etc., to screen property from, s. 218, p. 552.

Forged document—

definition of, s. 470, p. 1161.
using or possessing a, ss. 471, 474, pp. 1162, 1172.
counterfeiting device or mark for appearance of authenticity to, ss. 475, 476, pp. 1173, 1174.
made to conceal a previous dishonest or fraudulent or negligent act, p. 1150.
alteration in a document without a fraudulent intent is not, p. 1166.

See DOCUMENT ; FALSE DOCUMENT.

Forgery—

abetment of—in foreign territory if committed in British India, p. 37.
definition of, s. 463, p. 1134.
punishment for, s. 465, p. 1136.
intent to defraud any particular person not necessary, p. 1140.
of a copy, p. 1141.
false document should have been actually made, p. 1144.
entries to commit fraud, p. 1145.
unauthorized signature, p. 1145.
fabricating certificate of fitness for a post, p. 1146.
personation at an examination, p. 1146.
petition in the name of another, p. 1146.
signing vakalatnama in the name of another, p. 1146.
obtaining voting paper in another's name, p. 1146.
false kabin-nama, p. 1147.
an order from a superior to a subordinate, p. 1147.
receipt for debt written off by creditors, p. 1147.
certificate of purchase, p. 1147.
certificate for employment, p. 1166.
conviction will be for abetment if it is proved that the accused himself made the document, p. 1152.
document made in the name of a fictitious person, p. 1150.
to conceal a previous dishonest, or fraudulent, or negligent act, p. 1150.
abetment of, p. 1152.
joint act, p. 1152.
opinion of expert as to hand-writing, p. 1153.
finger impressions, p. 1153.
foot-prints, p. 1153.
palm impressions, p. 1153.
thumb-impressions, p. 1153.
civil judgment not admissible, p. 1154.
of record of Court, etc., s. 466, p. 1155.
valuable security, will, etc., s. 467, p. 1157.
for cheating or harming reputation, ss. 468, 469, pp. 1159, 1161.
conditional uttering is, p. 1164.
of copy, p. 1165.
proceedings, ultra vires, p. 1165.
fabrication of receipts is, p. 1166.
of decree, p. 1167.
diary, p. 1167.
false return, p. 1167.
plaint, p. 1166.
prescription, p. 1167.
forger cannot be punished separately for using forged document, p. 1170.
making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., to commit, ss. 472, 473, pp. 1170, 1171.

Fouling atmosphere—

the offence of, s. 278, p. 635.

Fouling spring—

the offence of, s. 277, p. 634.

Fracture—of bone, etc., s. 320, seventhly, p. 805.

Framing incorrect document—

See DOCUMENT.

Fraud—

vitiates consent in rape, pp. 907, 909.

Fraudulent—

intent to defraud, p. 57.
 meaning of the word, s. 25, p. 57.
 distinguished from 'dishonest', p. 59.
 removal of property to prevent seizure, s. 206, p. 512.
 claim to property to prevent seizure, s. 207, p. 515.
 suffering a decree for a sum not due, s. 208, p. 516.
 claim in a Court of Justice, s. 209, p. 517.
 obtaining decree for a sum not due, s. 210, p. 518.
 delivery of counterfeit coin, s. 239, p. 594.
 cancellation of a will, authority to adopt, or valuable security, s. 477, p. 1175.

See FRAUDULENT DEEDS AND DISPOSITIONS OF PROPERTY.

Fraudulent claim—accepting or making—to prevent seizure of property, s. 207, p. 515.

 suffering decree or execution without just cause, s. 208, p. 516.
 making of a, in Court, s. 209, p. 517.
 obtaining decree or execution for, s. 210, p. 518.

Fraudulent concealment—

of property to prevent its seizure, s. 206, p. 512.
 distribution, s. 421, p. 1073.

Fraudulent decree—passing of, s. 208, p. 516.

 obtaining of, s. 210, p. 518.

Fraudulent deeds and dispositions of property—to defraud creditors, or deceive purchasers, ss. 421, 424, pp. 1073, 1076.

Fraudulent delivery—of property, to prevent its distribution among creditors, s. 421, p. 1073.

Fraudulent execution—of deeds, s. 423, p. 1075.

Fraudulent marriage—when an offence, s. 496, p. 1219.

Fraudulent preference—

See FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS.

Fraudulent removal—

of property, to prevent its seizure, s. 206, p. 512.
 distribution, s. 421, p. 1073.

Fraudulent transfers—to prevent seizure, s. 206, p. 512.

 distribution of property among creditors, s. 421, p. 1073.
 demand by creditor being enforced, s. 422, p. 1074.
 containing false statement as to consideration or person taking benefit, s. 423, p. 1075.
 dishonest removal or concealment of property, s. 424, p. 1076.
 by partner, p. 1076.
 during attachment, p. 1077.
 under illegal order, p. 1077.
 of crops by tenants, p. 1077.
 during bona fide dispute, p. 1077.

Fraudulently—

definition of, s. 25, p. 57.
 distinguished from 'dishonestly', p. 59.
 occurring in ss. 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 250, 252, 253, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, pp. 516, 518, 594, 596, 598, 599, 603, 605, 610, 611, 614, 615.

Fraudulently or dishonestly—

occurring in ss. 209, 246, 247, 415, 421, 423, 424, 464, 471, 477, 496, pp. 517, 601, 602, 1042, 1073, 1075, 1076, 1134, 1162, 1175, 1219.

Fugitive Offenders Act—harbouring a fugitive offender, s. 216, p. 546.

Funeral ceremonies—disturbance to performance of obsequies is offence, s. 297, p. 678. disturbing assembly for the performance of, s. 297, p. 678.

Funeral rites—disturbance of, s. 297, p. 678.

Gain—

See WRONGFUL GAIN.

Gaining wrongfully—expression defined, s. 23, p. 55.

Gambling—

in a public place is a nuisance, p. 622.
private house is no nuisance, p. 622.

Gang of dacoits—

punishment for belonging to a, s. 400, p. 974.
receiving stolen property from, s. 412, p. 1036.

Gang of thieves—punishment for belonging to a, s. 400, p. 974.

Gang of thugs—

punishment for belonging to a, s. 401, p. 977.

Garb of public servant—

wearing of, s. 171, p. 400.

Garb of sailor, soldier or airman—wearing of, s. 140, p. 326.

Gas—

is movable property, in theft, p. 927.

Gender—

meaning of the term, s. 8, p. 45.

Gesture—

making a—to wound religious feelings of another, s. 298, p. 681.
causing provocation, as an excuse for murder, p. 723.
when amounts to an assault, s. 351, p. 851.
an insult to modesty of woman, s. 509, p. 1202.

Ghost—killing under a belief of, p. 84.

Girl—

selling or letting to hire for prostitution, s. 372, p. 897.
buying of—for prostitution, s. 373, p. 902.
adoption of—by dancing woman, p. 900.

Gift—

or offering, etc., to screen offender, ss. 213, 214, pp. 539, 541.
to recover stolen property, etc., s. 215, p. 543.

Glanders—

negligent spreading of, p. 627.

Gold-bars—

trade-mark on, p. 1188.

Good faith—

- definition of, s. 52, p. 83.
- arrest after due inquiry, p. 83.
- without proper inquiry, p. 83.
- operation by an unskilful person, p. 84.
- rash act, p. 84.
- acts done in—under orders of Court, s. 78, p. 145.
- harm done in—without criminal intent, s. 79, p. 146.
- for the benefit of person without consent, s. 92, p. 193.
- communication made in, s. 98, p. 195.
- defence in theft, p. 921.
- wrongful restraint, s. 339, Excep., p. 835.
- mischief, pp. 1083, 1091.
- criminal trespass, p. 1110.
- defamation, pp. 1254, 1269, 1270.

Goods—

- in s. 294A includes moveables and immoveables, p. 665.
- misstatement as to nature of, is cheating, p. 1059.
- delivery of, in cheating, p. 1070.
- mark placed on, s. 478, p. 1183.
- in s. 480 includes books, p. 1186.
- false property-mark on, s. 481, p. 1189.

Government—

- definition of, ss. 17, 263A (4), pp. 47, 613.
- conspiracy to overawe, s. 121A, p. 281.
- overawing or abetment thereof, or attempt to overawe, s. 124, p. 286.
- exciting disaffection against, s. 124A, p. 287.

Government stamp—

- counterfeiting a, s. 255, p. 606.
- possessing instrument, etc., for counterfeiting a, s. 256, p. 607.
- making or selling, etc., instrument for counterfeiting, s. 257, p. 608.
- selling, etc., or possessing a counterfeit, ss. 258, 259, pp. 608, 609.
- using as genuine—known to be counterfeit, s. 260, p. 610.
- effacing writing on—with intent to cause loss to Government, s. 261, p. 610.
- using—known to have been used before, s. 262, p. 611.
- erasure of mark denoting that—has been used, s. 263, p. 611.
- prohibition of fictitious, s. 263A, p. 613.

Governor General—

- assault on, with intent to compel or restrain exercise of any lawful power, s. 124, p. 286.

Governor of Province—

- assault on—with intent to compel or restrain exercise of any lawful power, s. 124, p. 286.

Gratification—

- definition of, s. 161, p. 380.
- meaning of, p. 382.
- public servant improperly taking a, s. 161, p. 380.
- accepting—, etc., for influencing a public servant, s. 162, p. 388.
- for using personal influence with a public servant, s. 163, p. 389.
- abetment by a public servant of taking and giving of illegal, s. 164, p. 390.
- public servant taking—, etc., s. 165, p. 391.
- at an election, s. 171B, p. 402.
- accepting—, etc., to screen offender, or abandon prosecution, s. 213, p. 539.
- giving—, etc., in consideration of screening offender, etc., s. 214, p. 541.
- taking—, etc., to help in the recovery of stolen property, s. 215, p. 543.
- attempt to take a gratification, p. 544.

Grave and sudden provocation—

See PROVOCATION.

Grievous hurt—

- act done by consent not intended or known to be likely to cause death, or—, s. 87, p. 184.
- definition of—, s. 320, p. 805.
- voluntarily causing—, ss. 322, 325, pp. 811, 815.
- and rioting, joint liability for, p. 121.
- by branding of cheeks, p. 806.
- fracture of bone, p. 806.
- bodily pain for the space of twenty days, p. 807.

Grievous hurt—Concd.

- blow aimed at one person falling upon another, p. 810.
- death caused by rupture of deceased spleen, p. 810.
 - cerebral haemorrhage, p. 805.
- by a dangerous weapon, s. 326, p. 816.
- by cutting nose, punishment for, p. 818.
- to extort property or to constrain to an illegal act, s. 329, p. 822.
 - confession or to compel restoration of property, s. 331, p. 824.
- deter public servant from duty, s. 333, p. 828.
- on provocation, s. 335, p. 829.
- by an act endangering life or personal safety of others, s. 338, p. 833.
- kidnapping or abducting to cause, s. 367, p. 891.
- putting person in fear of—for extortion ss. 386, 387, pp. 952, 953.
- while committing dacoity or robbery, s. 397, p. 968.
- causing—while committing house-trespass or house-breaking, s. 459, p. 1129.
 - joint offenders, s. 460, p. 1131.

See HURT.

Gun—

- negligence with reference to, pp. 833, 834.
- firing a, in attempt to murder, s. 307, ill. (c), p. 780.

Guardian—

- act done to child or lunatic with consent of, ss. 89, 92, pp. 189, 193.

See LAWFUL GUARDIAN.

Habitual—

- association for robbery or child-stealing is thug, s. 310, p. 701.
 - committing dacoity, s. 400, p. 974.
 - theft, s. 416, p. 1023.
- dealing in slaves, s. 371, p. 896.
 - stolen property, s. 413, p. 1038.

Hair-pulling—

- of a woman amounts to hurt, p. 805.

Handwriting—

- opinion of expert as to, in forgery, p. 1153.

Harbour—

- definition of, s. 52A, p. 84.

Harbouring—

- prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.
- person hired for an unlawful assembly, s. 157, p. 376.
- deserters. See DESERTERS.
- offender, s. 212, pp. 536, 537.
- husband or wife not punishable for, s. 212, Excep., pp. 536, 538.
- penalty for—who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered, s. 216, p. 545.
- no offence, if offender is husband or wife of harbourer, s. 216, Excep., p. 546.
- robbers or dacoits, s. 216A, p. 549.
- husband or wife not punishable for, s. 216A, Excep., p. 549.

Harm—

- act likely to cause, s. 81, p. 156.
 - causing slight, s. 95, p. 197.
- caused in body, mind, reputation or property, in cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.
- to reputation, forgery for, s. 469, p. 1161.
 - in defamation, s. 469, p. 1232.

Harvest—

- of crops under attachment, is misappropriation, p. 988.

Hatred—

- in enmity between classes, s. 153A, p. 367.
- in sedition, s. 124A, p. 298.

Head—

- permanent disfigurement of, s. 320, sixthly, p. 805.

Headings—

construction of, in a statute, p. 17.

Health—

See ATMOSPHERE ; INFECTIOUS DISEASE ; PUBLIC HEALTH.

Hearing—of the ear, privation of, s. 320, thirdly, p. 805.

Heated substance—

See FIRE.

Helpless persons—breach of contract to attend on, s. 491, p. 1204.

High Court—

Admiralty jurisdiction of, p. 31.

appellate criminal jurisdiction over Europeans, p. 28.

High Seas—

offences committed on, Admiralty jurisdiction, p. 29.

jurisdiction of High Court, p. 31.

Mofussil Courts, p. 32.

Presidency Magistrates' Court, p. 32.

piracy, p. 34.

murder on, p. 37.

Highway—

punishment for robbery committed on—between sunset and sunrise, s. 392, p. 900.

See PUBLIC PLACE ; PUBLIC ROAD ; PUBLIC WAY.

Hiring—or being hired to join an unlawful assembly, ss. 150, 158, pp. 361, 377.

of an obscene book, etc., s. 292, p. 655.

a girl for purposes of prostitution, ss. 372, 373, pp. 897, 902.

Homicide—

is either (a) lawful or (b) unlawful.

(a) lawful homicide.

1. death caused justifiably, ss. 76, 81, pp. 141, 156.

2. by accident or misfortune, s. 80, p. 155.

3. child, etc., ss. 82, 85, pp. 164, 180.

4. in good faith, ss. 87, 88, 92, pp. 184, 186, 193.

(b) unlawful homicide.

1. culpable homicide not amounting to murder, s. 299, p. 684.

2. murder, s. 300, p. 702.

3. rash or negligent homicide, s. 304A, p. 768.

4. suicide, ss. 305, 306, pp. 773, 779.

culpable—distinguished from 'murder,' p. 705.

mania of, p. 172.

by a person suffering from fever, p. 174.

fanatic, p. 174.

ganja-smoker, p. 174.

monomaniac, p. 176.

morbid feeling, p. 175.

See CULPABLE HOMICIDE.

Horse—

shooting a, may be mischief, s. 425, ill. (g), p. 1078.

killing, poisoning, etc., any, s. 429, p. 1089.

See MISCHIEF.

House—

negligence in pulling down or repairing, s. 288, p. 651.

mischief with intent to destroy—by fire, s. 436, p. 1097.

House-breaking—

definition of, s. 445, p. 1115.

punishment for, s. 453, p. 1122.

House-breaking—Concl'd.

by night, s. 446, p. 1117.

punishment for, ss. 456-458, pp. 1125-1129.

liability of all persons engaged in—where death or grievous hurt caused, s. 460, p. 1131.

attempt to commit, p. 1313.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

House-breaking by night—

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; HOUSE-BREAKING.

House-trespass—

definition of, s. 442, p. 1111.

lawful entry followed by assault is house-trespass, p. 1112.

entry not to commit an offence is not, p. 1113.

officer exceeding his powers, p. 1114.

for committing adultery, pp. 1121, 1125.

punishment for, s. 448, p. 1118.

to commit offence punishable with death, s. 449, p. 1119.

imprisonment, s. 451, p. 1122.

transportation for life, s. 450, p. 1120.

after preparation to cause hurt, assault or wrongful restraint, s. 452, p. 1121.

attempt to commit, pp. 1300, 1313.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

Human body—

See BODY.

Human dwelling—

mischiefs by fire to a, s. 436, p. 1097.

trespass in a, s. 442, p. 1111.

Hundi—

is a valuable security, p. 63.

Hurt—

caused in manly sports and exercises, p. 185.

definition of, s. 319, p. 802.

hair-pulling of a woman is, p. 805.

death caused by kicking is, p. 805.

death due to weak condition, p. 805.

when it is "grievous", s. 320, p. 805.

voluntarily causing—, s. 321, p. 811.

act neither intended nor likely to cause death is—even though death is caused, p. 808.

death caused by rupture of a diseased spleen is—, p. 810.

punishment for, s. 323, p. 811.

death of complainant puts an end to complaint of, p. 812.

by dangerous weapon, s. 324, p. 813.

to extort property or to constrain to an illegal act, s. 327, p. 819.

by means of poison, etc., s. 328, p. 820.

to extort confession or to compel restoration of property, s. 330, p. 822.

deter public servant from duty, s. 332, p. 825.

blow with an umbrella amounts to, p. 827.

on provocation, s. 334, p. 828.

causing—by rash or negligent act, s. 337, p. 832.

putting a person in fear of—in theft, s. 382, p. 946.

extortion, s. 383, p. 947.

robbery: dacoity, s. 390, p. 955.

house-trespass, s. 452, p. 1121.

lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, s. 455, p. 1124.

lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, s. 458, p. 1129.

voluntarily causing—when committing robbery, s. 394, p. 962.

mischiefs after preparation for causing, s. 440, p. 1100.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; GRIEVOUS HURT ; HOUSE-TRESPASS ; MISCHIEF.

Husband and wife—

harbouring by one consort, ss. 136, 212, 216, 216A, pp. 323, 536, 545, 549.

husband may be guilty of rape, s. 375, Excep., p. 907.

death of husband not an injury to wife, p. 81.

does not end prosecution for adultery, p. 1228.

cases of theft between, p. 987.

Husband and wife—Concl'd.

wife cannot commit criminal breach of trust regarding husband's property, p. 998.
complaint of, in defamation of wife, p. 1275.

See ADULTERY ; BIGAMY ; MARRIAGE.

Ice-house—

introducing water into, is mischief, s. 425, ill. (b), p. 1078.

Iddat—

performing second marriage within, p. 1209.
enticing married woman during, p. 1226.

Idiot—

suicide by an, abetment of, s. 305, p. 778.

Idol—

obscene engraving on a car for an, s. 292, pp. 655, 657.
defiling an, by abhishekam, p. 672.
criminal misappropriation of property of, p. 985.

Ignorance of law—

See MISTAKE OF LAW.

Illegal—

definition of, s. 43, p. 80.
order by a public servant, s. 219, p. 555.
thing giving occasion to riot, s. 153, p. 364.

Illegal act—

to constrain to an, causing hurt for, s. 327, p. 819.
grievous hurt for, s. 329, p. 822.
wrongful confinement for, s. 347, p. 846.

Illegal commitments—for trial for confinement, s. 220, p. 556.

Illegal gratification—

by or to influence public servant, ss. 161, 164, pp. 380, 390.
to screen offender or to receive stolen property, ss. 213, 215, pp. 539, 543.

Illegal omission—words referring to acts include, s. 32, p. 64.

Illegal purchase or bid—

by a public servant, s. 169, p. 397.
for property ; punishment for, s. 185, p. 442.

Illegitimate child—

father removing—for no immoral purpose, is not kidnapping, s. 361, excep., pp. 865, 874.

Illicit intercourse—

definition of, s. 372, Expln., 2, pp. 897, 901.
abduction of woman to force her to, s. 366, p. 880.
by means of criminal intimidation in, s. 366, p. 880.
procurement of minor girl for, s. 366A, p. 888.
importation of foreign girl for, s. 366B, p. 891.
selling minor girl for, s. 372, p. 897.
buying minor girl for, s. 373, p. 902.
enticing married woman for the purposes of, s. 498, p. 1224.

Illustrations—

construction of, in a statute, p. 17.

Imaginary person—

personation of, in a suit, p. 511.
when cheating, ss. 416, 419, pp. 1061, 1066.

Immoral conduct—confession by wife, p. 729.

Immoral contract—payment of money under, is no cheating, p. 1069.

Immoral purpose—

selling minor girl for, s. 372, p. 897.
 buying minor girl for, s. 373, p. 902.

Impairing—permanent, of the powers of any member or joint, s. 320, p. 805.

Importation—

of girl from foreign country, s. 366B, p. 891.
 person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.

Importer—

protection for trade-mark of an, p. 1185.

Importing—

of counterfeit coin, ss. 237, 238, p. 593.
 girl under 21, for prostitution, s. 366B, p. 891.
 slave, s. 370, p. 895.

Impossible offence—

attempt to commit an, p. 1305.

Imprisonment—

under Penal Code, s. 53, fourthly, p. 85.
 is rigorous or simple, s. 53, fourthly, pp. 85, 87.
 maximum term of, p. 88.
 rigorous—applied to prisoner under sentence of transportation, s. 58, p. 96.
 may be commuted into transportation, s. 59, p. 96.
 wholly or partly rigorous or simple, s. 60, p. 99.
 power to impose—for non-payment of fine, s. 64, p. 102.
 imposed in proportion to the fine, p. 104.
 rules regulating amount and nature of—in default of fine, ss. 65, 66, 67, pp. 104, 107.
 termination of—on payment of fine, ss. 68, 69, p. 108.
 abetment of mutiny punishable with, s. 132, p. 320.
 giving false evidence to procure conviction of offence punishable with, s. 195, p. 492.
 committing house-trespass for committing offence punishable with, s. 451, p. 1120.
 lurking house-trespass or house-breaking for committing offence punishable with,
 s. 454, p. 1123.
 lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night for committing offence punishable with, s. 457, p. 1127.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; FINE.

Imputation—

an ingredient in defamation, s. 499, p. 1232.
 concerning any person, p. 1239.
 against a dead person, p. 1240.
 against combination of persons, p. 1240.
 concerning a caste, p. 1241.
 made by pleader, p. 1269.
 of unchastity to woman, s. 506, p. 1289.

Incantation—

threat of, gives no right of private defence, p. 734.

Incendiarism—

threat of—is extortion, p. 950.
 to any property worth Rs. 100, s. 435, p. 1006.
 destroy a house, s. 436, p. 1097.

Incitement—

report to cause, between classes, s. 505, p. 1287.

Income-tax officer—

false information to, p. 426.

Income-tax return—

false statements in, p. 437.

Indecent assault—distinguished from 'attempt to rape', p. 910.

Indian Army Act—

persons subject to—not liable under the Code, s. 139, p. 326.

Indian Marine Service—

rumours to cause mutiny in, s. 505, p. 1287.

Indian Princes—offences committed by, p. 7.

Indian States—

jurisdiction of British Courts over Christian subjects residing in, p. 28.

enhanced punishment for conviction in a Court of—, s. 75, p. 129.

importation of foreign girl through—for prostitution, s. 366B, p. 891.

Indignity—to human corpse, offering, s. 297, p. 678.

Indigo plants—

cheating as to, s. 415, ill. (g), p. 1042.

Indorsement—

on a bill of exchange is a "document", s. 29, Expln., 2, ill., p. 61.

valuable security, s. 30, ill., p. 62.

Inducement—

by deceitful means, as an element in abduction, s. 362, p. 875.

to woman for illicit intercourse, s. 366, p. 880.

procure minor girl for illicit intercourse, s. 366A, p. 888.

deliver property, in extortion, s. 383, p. 947.

cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.

Infants—

See CHILD.

Infectious disease—

negligent or malignant act likely to spread, ss. 269, 270, pp. 626, 627.

cholera, p. 626.

glanders, p. 627.

inoculation, p. 627.

plague, p. 626.

small-pox, p. 626.

syphilis, p. 626.

disobeying quarantine rules, s. 271, p. 628.

Infirmity—

causing—is, 'hurt', s. 319, p. 802.

Information—

giving false—with intent to conceal design to commit offence, ss. 118, 120, pp. 260, 263.

giving false—to commit offence where informant is a public servant, s. 119, p. 262.

omission to give notice and giving false—to public servant, ss. 176, 177, pp. 421, 424.

false—to a public servant to use his lawful powers, s. 182, p. 431.

mere belief is not, p. 435.

causing a public servant to do what he ought not to do, p. 436.

use of lawful powers to the injury of another, p. 436.

false statement in a petition, p. 437.

income-tax return, p. 437.

memo of appeal, p. 437.

omission to give—of offences by person legally bound to give, s. 202, p. 507.

giving false—respecting offence committed, s. 203, p. 508.

causing hurt or grievous hurt to extort, ss. 330, 331, pp. 822, 824.

wrongful confinement to extort, s. 348, p. 846.

See FALSE INFORMATION.

Injunction—

by a civil Court is not an order under s. 188, p. 453.

continuing nuisance after an—to discontinue, s. 291, p. 654.

must be before the Court, p. 655.

Injury—

- definition of, s. 44, p. 81.
- death of husband not an injury to wife, p. 81.
- false charge is an, p. 81.
- threat of—to public servant, ss. 189, 190, pp. 460, 462.
- of an offence in order to commit extortion, s. 385, p. 952.

See THREATS.

Innocence—

- onus of proving—on accused, s. 486, p. 1194.

Inoculation—

- not in itself illegal or negligent act, p. 627.

Inquest report—

- is not a statement under s. 180, p. 429.

Insane—

See LUNATIC.

Instigate—

- meaning of the word, s. 107, Expln. 1, p. 231, 232.

Instigation—

- abetment by, p. 232.
- through a third party, p. 233.
- master's liability for, p. 233.
- whether suppression of evidence is, p. 233.
- deliberate absence from an unlawful assembly is not, p. 233.
- by letter, p. 233.
- telephone, p. 233.
- consent to hold stakes is not, p. 234.
- to secure "swaraj", p. 301.

Instrument of coining—

- making, selling or possessing, for counterfeiting coin, ss. 233, 235, pp. 588, 590.
- Queen's coin, ss. 234, 235, pp. 579, 590.
- unlawful taking of, from Mint, s. 245, p. 601.

Instrument of counterfeiting—

- possession of stamps, s. 257, p. 608.
- forgery, ss. 472, 473, pp. 1170-1171.
- trade-mark, s. 485, p. 1194.
- currency-notes, s. 489D, p. 1202.

Instrument or weapon—

- hurt caused by, s. 324, p. 813.
- grievous hurt caused by, s. 325, p. 815.

Instrument of weighing—

- making or selling a false, s. 267, p. 618.

Insubordination—

- abetment of act of—by soldier, sailor, or airman, s. 138, p. 325.
- meaning of, p. 325.

Insult—

- to public servant in a stage of a judicial proceeding, s. 228, p. 576.
- refusal to answer a question, ss. 179, 228, pp. 428, 576.
- public servant must be sitting in a stage of judicial proceedings, p. 579.
- to the religion of any person, ss. 295, 295A, 297, pp. 670, 673, 678.
- entry upon another's property to, is criminal trespass, s. 441, p. 1100.
- intended to provoke breach of the peace, s. 504, p. 1283.
- what constitutes an, p. 1284.
- to the modesty of a woman, s. 509, p. 1292.

See INTENTIONAL INSULT OR INTERRUPTION.

Insurrection—

- joining an, against the King, s. 121, ill. (a), (b), p. 275.

Intent to defraud—

occurring in ss. 239, 240, 243, 252, 253, pp. 594, 596, 599, 605.

Intending or knowing—occurring in ss. 153, 335, 354, 366, 366A, 373, 421, 425, 435, 436, 437, 489, 504, pp. 364, 829, 860, 880, 888, 902, 1073, 1078, 1096, 1097, 1098, 1199, 1283.

Intention—to defraud, what is, p. 57.

 acts done in furtherance of common, p. 66.
 mere presence not equivalent to complicity, p. 73.
 where act is done by several persons, s. 35, p. 74. act done bona fide without criminal, s. 81, p. 156.
 criminal intention, meaning of, p. 157.
 differs from 'motive', p. 157.
 in cases of statutory crimes, p. 158. is essential in cases of sedition, pp. 290, 308.
 is gist of offence—
 in wearing garb of soldier, s. 140, p. 326.
 public servant, s. 171, p. 400.
 to cause injury, not an ingredient under s. 197, p. 496.
 is an essential part of the offence of using false weights, p. 614.
 death caused without requisite, pp. 696, 707.
 in cases of murder, pp. 711, 715.
 distinguished from 'attempt', p. 1297.

Intentional insult or interruption—to public servant sitting in judicial proceeding, s. 228, p. 576.

Intentional omission—to apprehend accused or a convict, ss. 221, 222, pp. 557, 559.

Interest—

imputation for the protection of one's, s. 499, Excep. 9, pp. 1234, 1254.
 authority to receive interest on valuable security, forgery of, s. 467, p. 1157.

Interest in land—where riot is committed, s. 154, p. 378.

Interference—

to an electoral right, s. 171C, p. 404.

Interruption—

to public servant in a judicial proceeding, s. 228, p. 576.

See INTENTIONAL INSULT OR INTERRUPTION:

Intimidation—

See CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION:

Intoxicating drug—

See DRUGS.

Intoxication—

act done in a state of, s. 85, p. 180.
 voluntary, is not a valid plea, p. 180.
 presumption of knowledge or intent against a man in a state of—produced against his will, etc., s. 86, p. 182.
 person in a state of—cannot "consent", s. 90, p. 191.
 right of defence against a person in a state of, s. 98, p. 207.
 no excuse in cases of murder, p. 718.
 abetment of suicide by a person in, s. 305, p. 778.
 causing a person to execute or alter a document while in a state of—is forgery, s. 464, p. 1134.
 in a public place, s. 510, p. 1294.

Intrusion—

on privacy of female, s. 509, p. 1292.

Inundation—

causing—or obstruction to public drainage, etc., is mischief, s. 432, p. 1094.

See PUBLIC DRAINAGE.

Investigation—

directed by law or Court of Justice in a stage of judicial proceeding, s. 193, Explan. 2, 3, pp. 478, 479.

See PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION.

Ironical remark—

may amount to defamation, s. 499, Explan. 3, pp. 1232, 1241.

Irrigation—

mischief by injury to works of—or by wrongfully diverting water, s. 430, p. 1090.

Joinder of charges—in theft, p. 943.

Joinder of offences—

See Commentary on s. 71, p. 112.

Joint—

See MEMBER.

Joint acts—

union of several persons to effect a criminal purpose, s. 34, p. 65.

liability of person who does one of several acts, s. 37, p. 75.

each person may commit a different offence, s. 38, p. 76.

liability for acts of any member of an unlawful assembly, pp. 341, 351.

person engaged in robbery, s. 394, p. 962.

dacoity, s. 396, p. 966.

lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, s. 460, p. 1131.

combining in forgery, p. 1152.

Joint family possession—of stolen property, p. 1027.

Joint offenders—

when sentenced to fine, each should be directed to pay, p. 102.

Joint ownership—

how far a defence in theft, p. 938.

mischief, s. 425, Explan. 2, p. 1078.

Joint possession—

how far a defence in theft, p. 938.

receiving stolen property, pp. 1027, 1033.

trespass, p. 1102.

Joint property—

criminal misappropriation of, p. 985.

mischief to, s. 425, Explan. 2, p. 1078.

theft of, p. 938.

no criminal trespass can lie in respect of, p. 1102.

Judge—

definition of, s. 19, p. 47.

includes arbitrators empowered by law to give definitive judgment, p. 47.

is a "public servant", s. 21, p. 40.

act of—when no offence, s. 77, p. 144.

acting under a misapprehension of jurisdiction, p. 145.

not liable for defamation for utterances as a Judge, p. 1258.

sanction of Government before prosecuting a Judge for defamation, p. 1276.

Judgment—

when doubtful of which of several offences a person is guilty, s. 72, p. 125.

act pursuant to, s. 78, p. 145.

forgery of authority to confess, s. 466, p. 1155.

publication of, s. 499, Excep. 4, pp. 1238, 1250.

Judicial officers—liability and immunity of, p. 146.

Judicial proceedings—explained, ss. 192, 193, Expln. 1, pp. 470, 477.

 fabricating or giving false evidence in, s. 193, p. 477.
 public servant corruptly making report, etc., in s. 219, p. 555.
 insulting and interrupting public servant in any stage of, s. 228, p. 576.
 what are and what are not, included in, pp. 471, 473.

See COURT-MARTIAL ; PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION.

Judicially—

meaning of, p. 144.

Jurisdiction—

territorial—of a State, extent of, p. 19.

where doubtful, p. 20.

over crimes committed outside British India, p. 24.

1. Extradition. The scene of offence committed may be—

(a) any of the protected Indian States, p. 24.

(b) some part of H. M.'s dominions, p. 25.

(c) some foreign State, p. 25.

2. Extra-territorial—over offence committed on

(i) land, p. 26.

cases under s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code, p. 26.

Act XIII of 1859, p. 28.

Christian British subjects in Indian States, p. 28.

subsequent annexation of territory where offence is committed, p. 27.

acts done in British as well as foreign territory, p. 29.

(ii) high seas, p. 29.

Admiralty jurisdiction, p. 29.

High Court, p. 31.

Mofussil Court, p. 32.

Presidency Magistrate's Court, p. 32.

law and procedure to be followed, p. 34.

piracy, p. 34.

liability of foreigners in British India for offences committed outside its limits, p. 36.

dacoity in foreign territory, p. 36.

kidnapping in foreign territory, p. 36.

murder on the high seas, p. 37.

abettment in foreign territory of forgery committed in British India, p. 37.

of civil Courts over soliders, p. 39.

when an act is an offence under two statutes, pp. 39, 40.

false evidence on oath before Court having no, p. 465.

charge should be before a Magistrate having, p. 527.

Juror—

is a public servant, s. 21, fifth, p. 49.

personation of, s. 229, p. 581.

Juryman—

when "public servant", s. 21, fifth, p. 49.

Justice—

offences against public, ss. 191-229, pp. 463-582.

Justice, Court of—definition of the term, s. 20, p. 49.

Justice of the Peace—holding an inquiry, is Court, s. 409, Excep. 4, pp. 1233, 1250.

Kabip-nama—

false statements in, p. 470.

Kabulayat—

is a valuable security, p. 63.

Keeping—of a lawful guardian, kidnapping from, p. 867.

Kicking—

death caused by—amounts to hurt, p. 805.

Kidnapping—

- committed in foreign territory, p. 36.
- from British India, s. 360, p. 864.
 - lawful guardianship, s. 361, p. 864.
- when taking is complete, p. 866.
 - enticing, p. 866.
- minor, p. 867.
- lawful guardian—
 - Hindu, p. 871.
 - Mahomedan, p. 872.
 - other nationalities, p. 873.
- pledging minor girl, p. 874.
- marrying without guardian's consent, p. 874.
- is of two kinds, ss. 350-369, pp. 864-894.
- when taking in complete, p. 866.
- from guardianship, not a continuing offence, p. 866.
- should be out of the keeping of the lawful guardian, p. 867.
- taking away in good faith is not kidnapping, p. 875.
- temporary guardianship does not oust lawful guardian's right, p. 871.
- distinguished from 'abduction', p. 875.
- removal of a child-wife from the custody of mother, p. 875.
- abetment, p. 876.
- punishment for, s. 363, p. 876.
- or abducting in order to murder, s. 364, p. 878.
 - wrongfully confine, s. 365, p. 879.
 - compel a woman to marriage, s. 366, p. 880.
 - procuration of minor girl, s. 366A, p. 888.
- importation of girl from foreign country, s. 366B, p. 891.
- in order to subject a person to grievous hurt, etc., s. 367, p. 891.
- with a view to wrongfully conceal or keep in confinement, s. 368, p. 892.
- a child to steal from its person, s. 369, p. 894.
- attempt at, p. 1301.

See ABDUCTION.

Knowingly or negligently—

- occurring in ss. 284, 288, 289, pp. 646, 651, 652.

Knows or believes—

- occurring in, ss. 167, 177, 182, 183, 197, 199, 201, 202, 203, 212, 216A, 235, 237, 238, 256, 257, 258, 273, 292, 411, 414, 489B, 489C, 489D, 497, 498, 499, 501, pp. 394, 424, 431, 439, 496, 498, 502, 507, 508, 536, 549, 590, 593, 607, 608, 620, 655, 1023, 1039, 1200, 1201, 1202, 1220, 1224, 1234, 1278.

Knowledge—

- how far an essential ingredient in murder, p. 692.
- gross negligence may amount to, p. 693.
- of probable consequences of an act, p. 693.
 - consequence of beating, p. 693.
 - causing a person to be bitten by a snake, p. 695.
 - exorcising evil spirit by beating, p. 694.
 - injury causing death, p. 695.
 - squeezing testicles, p. 695.
 - strangulation, p. 695.
 - unskilful operation, p. 694.
- death caused without requisite, no murder, p. 696.

Labels—

- trade-mark in, p. 1187.

Labour—

- unlawful compulsory, s. 374, p. 908.
- means mental or bodily labour, p. 906.

Land—

- extra-territorial jurisdiction, p. 25.
- is not movable property, p. 54.
- interest in, meaning of the term, p. 373.

Land-holder—

- liability of—, or his agent or manager, for riot, ss. 154, 155, 156, pp. 373, 375, 376.

Land-mark—

- mischievous by destroying or moving, etc., s. 434, p. 1095.
- innocent removal, p. 1096.

Liability—Concl'd.Exceptions—Concl'd.

- foreign army, p. 7.
- foreign sovereign, p. 6.
- Indian Princes, p. 7.
- Sovereign, p. 6.
- warship, p. 7.
- of a corporation, p. 8.
- of master for servant's act, p. 8.
 - statutory liability, p. 9.
 - neglect of duty, p. 10.
 - public nuisance, p. 10.
- of one for act done by another, ss. 34, 146, 149, pp. 65, 341, 351.

Libel—

- English law requires tendency to provoke breach of the peace, p. 1236.
- differs from slander under English law, p. 1242.
- is included in defamation under the Code, p. 1241.

See DEFAMATION.

License cases—

- liability of master for the acts of servant, p. 9.

Life—

- definition of, s. 45, p. 81.
- rash or negligent act endangering—or personal safety of others, s. 336, p. 830.
- causing hurt or grievous hurt by act endangering—or personal safety of others, ss. 337, 338, pp. 832, 833.

Life-convict—

- murder by a, s. 303, p. 762.
- attempt to murder by a, s. 307, p. 780.

Lights—

- exhibiting a false, s. 281, p. 642.

Light-house—

- mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful any, s. 433, p. 1095.

Limit of punishment—

- when offence is made up of several offences, s. 71, p. 112.

Limitation—

- lapse of six years in paying fine protects accused's property, but not his personal arrest, s. 70, p. 109.
- prosecution under s. 154, et seq., must commence at once, p. 374.
- for false trade-mark, etc., must commence in a year, p. 1197.

Line of navigation—

- obstructing—, s. 288, p. 644.

Local or special law—

- provisions of—not affected by Code, s. 5, p. 38.
- definition of, ss. 41, 42, p. 79, 80.
- offences under—general Exceptions of Penal Code applied to, s. 40, p. 78.
- provisions of Code as to abetment applied to, s. 40, p. 78.
- included in "offence", s. 40, p. 78.
- solitary confinement cannot be awarded in convictions under, p. 127.
- doctrine of previous conviction does not apply to offences under, p. 133.

See SPECIAL LAW.

Losing wrongfully—

- definition of, s. 23, p. 55.

Loss—

See WRONGFUL LOSS.

Lost property—

- finder of, liability of, s. 403, Expln. 2, pp. 981, 986.

Lottery—

- keeping office for, s. 294A, p. 660.
- meaning of the term p. 662.
- agreement to contribute re-payment by lot is not, p. 663.
- publishing advertisement of, p. 664.
- proposal of, p. 664.
- prizes decided by chance is, p. 665.
- skill is not, p. 668.
- keeping a lottery, p. 669.

Love-potion—

- administration of poison as, p. 804.

Lunatic—

- offences committed by, s. 84, p. 166.
- act done to—for benefit, with consent of guardian, or in certain cases without consent, an offence, ss. 86, 92 pp. 182, 193.
- cannot “consent”, s. 90, p. 191.
- right of defence against acts of, s. 98, p. 207.
- offences committed by—: abetment of, s. 108, Expln. 3, p. 239, 241.
- suicide by a, abetment of, s. 305, p. 778.
- taking or enticing away—from lawful guardian, s. 361, p. 864.
- causing a—to sign, seal, or alter a document is forgery, s. 464, p. 1134.
- breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of, s. 491, p. 1204.
- four kinds of:
 - idiot, p. 167.
 - non compos mentis* by sickness, p. 168.
 - affected by mental disorder, p. 168.
 - drunken person, p. 171.
- unsoundness of mind, how far an excuse, p. 169.
- partial delusion, p. 170.
- moral insanity, p. 170.
- insanity brought on by drunkenness, p. 171.
- homicidal mania, p. 172.
- impulsive insanity, p. 172.
- homicide by a person suffering from fever, p. 174.
- ganja-smoker, p. 174.
- religious fanatic, p. 174.
- melancholic homicidal mania, p. 175.
- homicide under the influence of morbid feeling, p. 175.
- without motive, p. 175.
- under the influence of insane delusions caused by loss of blood, p. 175.
- in a proxysm of insanity, p. 175.
- by a monomaniac, p. 176.
- from failure of reasoning powers, p. 176.
- during epileptic fit, p. 176.
- attempt to commit, p. 176.
- evidence necessary, p. 176.
- presumption of sanity, p. 177.

Lurking house-trespass—

- definition of, s. 443, p. 1114.
- creditors breaking open complainant's doors, p. 1125.
- departure through a door, p. 1125.
- entry to commit adultery, p. 1125.
- scaling a wall, p. 1125.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; HOUSE-BREAKING.

Lurking house-trespass by night—

- definition of, s. 444, p. 1115.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS ; HOUSE-BREAKING.

Machine—

- use of false weighing, s. 264, p. 614.

Machinery—

- negligent or rash act to make order with, s. 287, p. 650.
- for counterfeiting currency-notes, s. 489D, p. 1202.

Magistrate—

- when—is a “judge”, s. 19, ill. (b), p. 48.
- not a “judge”, s. 19, ill. (d), p. 48.

wife may be guilty of theft of her husband's property, p. 937.
commission of bigamy by, p. 1208.
nika, karao and sagai marriages, p. 1208.

an animal, is mischief, ss. 428, 429, pp. 1088, 1089.
meaning of the term, p. 1088.

an order to pay—is not conviction of an offence, p. 79.

a false document, s. 464, p. 1134.
rumour, s 505, p. 1287.

meaning of the term 'maliciously', s. 219, p. 555.
 meaning of 'malice aforethought', p. 704.
 not an ingredient in 'wrongful confinement', p. 8-40.

in enmity between classes, s. 153A, p. 367.

distinguished from 'false imprisonment', p. 840.

as used in ss. 219, 220, pp. 555, 556.

meaning of the term, ss. 153, 270, pp. 364, 627.

definition of, s. 10, p. 45.

liability of—for riot held on land, ss. 154, 155, pp. 373, 376.

hurt caused in, p. 185.

1. voluntary manslaughter—
 - (a) grave provocation, p. 685.
 - (b) sudden fight, p. 686.
2. involuntary manslaughter—
 - (i) accident neglect, p. 686.
 - (ii) culpable neglect, p. 686.

mischief to water used for, s. 480, p. 1090.
 false trade-mark on, s. 480, p. 1185.
 s. 484, p. 1193.
 of goods bearing false trade-mark, s. 480, p. 1194.

is a "document", s. 29, ill., p. 61.

construction of, in a statute, p. 17.

See INDIAN MARINE SERVICE.

See FALSE LIGHTS, MARKS OR BUOYS; GOVERNMENT-STAMPS; FORGERY.

Marriage—

- kidnapping or abducting a woman to compel her to a, s. 366, p. 880.
 - marrying a girl to prostitute her, p. 885.
 - sheltering a girl to prostitute her, p. 885.
 - abducting married woman to compel her to marry, p. 885.
- forging register of, s. 466, p. 1155.
- causing cohabitation by deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful, s. 493, p. 1206.
- performing—during lifetime of husband or wife, s. 494, p. 1207.
- includes nikah, sagat, pat and anand, but not jhingara, p. 1208.
- minor under Mahomedan law may repudiate marriage on attaining puberty, p. 1208.
- during iddat, p. 1209.
- dissolution of marriage—
 - divorce, custom of, p. 1210.
- complainant by aggrieved person is necessary, p. 1217.
- conversion from Christianity, p. 1211.
 - Hinduism, p. 1211.
 - Mahomedanism, p. 1212.
 - Zoroastrianism, p. 1212.
- publication of banns of marriage, p. 1210.
- bona fide belief as to earlier marriage having been set aside by Court, p. 1213.
- absence for seven years, p. 1213.
- person present at a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.
- priest officiating at a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.
- proof of—among—
 - Christians, p. 1216.
 - English, p. 1215.
 - Hindus, p. 1216.
 - Jews, p. 1216.
 - Parsis, p. 1216.
- with concealment of former, s. 495, p. 1217.
- ceremony fraudulently gone through, s. 496, p. 1219.
- cohabitation under Alyasanatana law is no, p. 1229.

See ADULTERY ; BIGAMY.

Married woman—

- kidnapping or abducting, s. 366, p. 880.
- committing adultery with, s. 497, p. 1220.
- wife cannot be punished as an abettor in adultery, p. 1221.
- enticing or taking away, s. 498, p. 1224.

Martial law—

- what is, p. 153.

Masculine—

- includes feminine, s. 8, p. 45.

Master—

- liability of—for servant's acts, p. 8.
 - statutory liability, p. 9.
 - licence cases, p. 9.
 - neglect of duty, p. 10.
 - public nuisance, p. 10.
 - for rash driving by the servant, p. 640.
- theft by servant at the bidding of, p. 923.
- misappropriation by servant of money on behalf of, p. 988.
- negligence of servant, in mischief, p. 1085.
- theft by servant of property in possession of, s. 381, p. 944.
- breach of contract by servant engaged to attend and supply the wants of the helpless persons, s. 491, p. 1204.

See SERVANT.

Maxims—

- a man is presumed to intend the natural and inevitable consequences of his act, p. 600.
- actus contra actum*, p. 234.
- actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea*, pp. 158, 159.
- bellum percutsum*, p. 275.
- bellum levatum*, p. 275.
- causa causans*, p. 770.
- causa sine qua non*, p. 770.
- compos mentis*, p. 149.
- coram non iudice*, p. 145.
- de minimis non curat lex*, p. 198.
- doli incapax*, p. 165.
- expressio unius est exclusio alterius*, p. 44.

Maxims—Conclud.

ignorantia facti excusat, pp. 142, 148.
ignorantia juris non excusat, p. 150.
inclusio unius est exclusio alterius, p. 44.
lex non favet votis delictorum, p. 621.
malitia supplet aetatum, p. 165.
mens rea, p. 158.
necesse est ut eam, non ut vivam, p. 161.
necessitas inducit privilegium quæ ad jura privata, p. 937.
non compos mentis, pp. 167, 168.
non est reum, nisi mens sit rea, p. 159.
noscitur a sociis, p. 893.
nullum tempus occurrit regi, p. 5.
presumptio juris et de jure, pp. 166, 241, 907.
qui peccat ebrius, luat sobrius, pp. 181, 1295.
quo animo, p. 274.
res ipsa loquitur, p. 652.
respondeat superior, p. 143.
sic utere tuout alienum non loedas, p. 644.
simple commendatio non obligat, p. 1057.
suppressio veri, p. 1056.
volenti non fit injuria, pp. 184, 1221.

Measures—

See WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Medals—

are not coins, s. 230, ill. (c), p. 582.
 passing of, as money, p. 586.

Medical practitioners—unqualified—causing injury, p. 188.

Medicine—

adulteration of—and sale of adulterated—, ss. 274, 275, pp. 631, 632.
 sale of—as different medicine, s. 276, p. 633.

Member of Council—assault on—with intent to compel or restrain exercise of lawful power of, s. 124, p. 286.

Member or joint—destruction or permanent impairing of the powers of any—is “grievous hurt”, s. 320, fifthly, p. 805.

 privation of—is “grievous hurt”, s. 320, fourthly, p. 805.

Men-of-war—

exemption of foreign men-of-war from provisions of the Penal Code, p. 7.

Mens rea—

when an essential ingredient, p. 158.

Merchandise—

trade-mark placed on, s. 478, p. 1183.
 s. 480, p. 1185.

Merchant—

criminal breach of trust by, s. 409, p. 1015.
 meaning of, p. 1016.

Merchant-vessel—liability of master of—for deserter, s. 137, p. 324.

Merger—

has no place in the criminal law of defamation, p. 1238.

Merits—

of public performance, discussion of, s. 499, Excep. 6, pp. 1238, 1251.

Military Court-martial—trial before—is a “judicial proceeding”, s. 198, Expln. 1, p. 477.

Milk—

adulteration of, with water, p. 629.

Mind—

damage to, in cheating, s. 415, pp. 1042, 1054.

Minor—

kidnapping a—from lawful guardianship, s. 361, p. 864.

procuration of, s. 366A, p. 888.

selling or buying—for prostitution, ss. 372, 373, pp. 897, 902.

consent of—, in rape, s. 875, p. 907.

Mint—

causing coin issued from—to be of different weight or composition from that fixed by law, s. 244, p. 600.

conveying coining tools out of, s. 245, p. 601.

evidence of an officer of, how to be taken, p. 586.

Misappropriation—of movable property, s. 403, Explns., 1 and 2, pp. 981, 986.

property found accidentally, s. 403, Expln. 2, pp. 981, 986.

of a deceased person, s. 404, p. 990.

See CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION.

Miscarriage—

causing—in ordinary cases, s. 312, p. 792.

woman committing—on herself, s. 312, Expln., p. 792.

causing—without woman's consent, s. 313, p. 794.

death in attempt to procure, s. 314, p. 795.

if done without woman's consent, s. 314, p. 795.

meaning of the term, p. 793, See WOMAN.

causing by poisonous drugs, p. 795.

Mischief—

definition of, s. 425, p. 1078.

punishment for, s. 426, p. 1079.

destruction of trespasser's property, p. 1080.

wrongful loss or damage necessary, p. 1079.

accident is not, p. 1081.

invasion of civil right is no, p. 1081.

how far bona fides good defence, pp. 1084, 1091.

absent master not liable for servant's negligence, p. 1085.

by cattle, p. 1085.

negligence is not, p. 1085.

causing damage to property, s. 427, p. 1087.

killing, maiming, etc., animal, ss. 428, 429, pp. 1088, 1089.

diminishing water-supply, ss. 430, 431, pp. 1090, 1093.

injuring public road, etc., s. 431, p. 1093.

causing inundation, etc., s. 432, p. 1094.

destroying, removing or rendering useless light-house, etc., s. 433, p. 1095.

or moving landmark, s. 434, p. 1095.

using fire, or explosive substance, ss. 435, 438, pp. 1096, 1099.

with intent to destroy house, s. 436, p. 1097.

with intent to destroy or make unsafe a vessel of 20 tons burden, s. 437, p. 1098.

committed after preparation for causing death or grievous hurt or wrongful restraint, s. 440, p. 1100.

breaking open a closed receptacle to commit, ss. 461, 462, p. 1132, 1133.

by cancelling, etc., valuable security, s. 477, p. 1175.

defacing property-mark, s. 489, p. 1199.

publication or circulation of statement, rumour, or report conducing to, s. 505, p. 1287.

Misconception—

renders consent invalid, s. 90, p. 191.

Misconduct—

detection of, causing hurt for, s. 330, p. 822.

grievous hurt for, s. 331, p. 824.

in a public place by a drunken person, s. 510, p. 1294.

Misfortune—

act done by—when no offence, s. 80, p. 155.

Misstatement—

as to the nature of goods sold is cheating, p. 1059.

Mistake of fact—effect of—as justifying act done by person believing himself bound or justified by law to do such act, ss. 76, 79, pp. 141, 146.

express command of a Magistrate or officer protects person, p. 146.

killing of another, is no defence, s. 301, p. 742.

how far a defence in theft, p. 928.

retention of money paid by, is misappropriation, p. 985.

Mistake of law—

does not prevent an act from being an offence, ss. 76, 79, pp. 141, 146.

ignorance of a new statute prohibiting an act, p. 150.

as well as of fact, p. 151.

may be considered in mitigation of punishment, p. 155.

Mistress—

permanent, is included in wife, p. 60.

Mock-bidding—

at an auction sale is an offence under s. 185, p. 442.

Mock-marriage—

meaning of, p. 1219.

for the purpose of inducing the woman to prostitute herself, p. 885.

Modesty—insulting the, of a woman, s. 509, p. 1292.

outraging the, of a woman, s. 354, p. 860.

Moharram procession—disturbance of, p. 677.

Money—

forgery of acquittance or receipt of, s. 467, p. 1157.

Month—

definition of, s. 49, p. 82.

Moral force—detention by, is wrongful confinement, p. 840.

Morals—

offences against public, ss. 268, 292, 294, pp. 619, 655, 659.

Motion—

giving rise to force, s. 340, p. 248.

Motive—

distinguished from intention, p. 157.

direct, not essential, p. 74.

Motive or reward for doing—definition of, s. 161, Expln., pp. 381, 383.

Movable property—

what the term means and includes, s. 22, p. 54.

and immovable property may be reached by distress and sale for non-payment of fine, p. 110.

what falls under the description of, p. 925.

boat, p. 927.

earth and stones, p. 926.

gas, p. 927.

human body, p. 927.

salt, p. 927.

valuable security, p. 927.

water, p. 928.

animals, such as bull, peacock, fish, cattle, carcass, pigeons, partridges, pp. 916, 928, 929.

Movable property—Concl'd.

what does not fall under the description of — growing crops, p. 926.

standing teak trees, p. 927.

property-mark in s. 479, p. 1185.

See FORFEITURE.

Moving—

what amounts to, in theft, s. 378, Explan. 3, pp. 918, 935.

Mule—

killing, poisoning, maiming, or rendering useless any, s. 429, p. 1089.

See MISCHIEF.

Municipal Commissioner—is a "public servant", s. 21, tenth, ill., p. 50.

Municipal doctor—false information by, p. 426.

Murder—

in s. 94 does not include abetment of, p. 196.

definition of, s. 300, p. 702.

punishment for, ss 302, 303, pp. 744, 762.

where murder committed by several persons, p. 758.

doubt exists, p. 756.

death caused from provocation, s. 300, Excep. 1, pp. 702, 722.

right of defence exceeded, s. 300, Excep. 2, pp. 703, 732.

public servant exceeds his powers, s. 300, Excep. 3, pp. 703, 735.

in sudden fight, s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 74, 736.

with consent, s. 300, Excep. 5, pp. 704, 739.

attempt to commit—; for, s. 307, p. 780.

act committed must be capable of causing death, p. 781.

death resulting not from accused's act but through other causes, p. 786.

poison cases, p. 787.

death by drowning, p. 787.

suffocation, p. 787.

discharging a loaded fire-arm, p. 787.

by life-convict, ss. 303, 307, pp. 762, 780.

kidnapping or abducting in order to—, s. 364, p. 878.

dacoity accompanied with, s. 396, p. 966.

death caused by effect of words on imagination or passion, p. 688.

without intention whilst doing an unlawful act, p. 689.

requisite intention or knowledge, p. 696.

distinguished from 'culpable homicide', p. 705.

death caused by stabbing in vital part is, p. 717.

acts not amounting to murder—

1. acts done while in a state of provocation, p. 722.

provocation caused by words or gestures, p. 723.

abusive words, p. 724.

whilst deprived of the power of self-control, p. 725.

should be grave and sudden, p. 725.

not be sought, p. 727.

no defence against acts done under cover of law, p. 727.

in self-defence, p. 728.

provocation caused by adultery, p. 728.

confession by a woman of immoral conduct, p. 729.

death not caused in a fit of passion, p. 730.

provocation plus fear, p. 731.

2. offender exceeding the right of private defence, p. 732.

cases where no right of private defence, p. 734.

exceeding the right of private defence, p. 734.

threats of incantations give no right of private defence, p. 734.

3. public servant exceeding the powers given to him by law, p. 735.

doing an unlawful act, p. 736.

4. death caused without premeditation in a sudden fight in the heat of passion, p. 736.

duelling, p. 736 sudden quarrel, pp. 736, 738.

offender taking no undue advantage, nor acting in a cruel or unusual manner, p. 737.

undue advantage, p. 739.

5. person suffering death giving consent, p. 739.

death caused by consent, p. 740.

premeditated fight, p. 741.

Murder—Concl'd.

- death caused by the voluntary act of the deceased resulting from fear of violence, p. 741.
- circumstantial evidence in, p. 748.
- confession, p. 750.
- demeanour, p. 750.
- discovery of body of person murdered not absolutely necessary, p. 750.
- eye-witness, p. 750.
- habitual association for robbery or child-stealing with murder is thug, s. 310, p. 791.
- kidnapping for abduction in order to murder, s. 364, p. 878.
- chemico-legal and post-mortem examination, p. 752.
- poisoning, p. 752.
- punishment
 - absconding of accused, p. 756.
 - absence of premeditation, p. 756.
 - benefit of doubt, p. 756.
 - bona fide dispute, p. 757.
 - constructive liability, p. 757.
 - custom of killing for unchastity, p. 757.
 - drunkenness, p. 757.
 - father and son, jointly committing murder, p. 757.
 - infants not to be sentenced to death or transportation, p. 757.
 - injuries sustained by accused, p. 757.
 - insulting language, p. 758.
 - jointly committing murder, p. 758.
 - dacoity accompanied with, s. 396, p. 966.
 - attempt to commit, pp. 780, 1300.

Music—

- causing disturbance of worship, s. 296, p. 676.

Mutilation—

- of book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account, etc., s. 477A, p. 1176.

Mutiny—

- abetment of—in Army, Navy, or Air Force, ss. 131, 132, pp. 319, 320.
- circulating false report with intent to excite—in Army, Navy, or Air Force, s. 505, p. 1287.
- meaning of the term, p. 319.

Mutiny Act—

- not affected by the Indian Penal Code, s. 5, p. 38.
- persons subject to—are not punishable under Chap. VII of the Indian Penal Code, s. 139, p. 326.

Name—

- false representations as to, p. 1063.

Native Indian subject—

- what it means and includes, p. 23.

Navigable—

- river or channel, destroying or injuring, s. 431, p. 1093.

See CHANNEL; RIVER.

Navigation—

- of a vessel, rash or negligent, etc., s. 280, p. 641.
- exhibiting false light, mark or buoy, to mislead, s. 281, p. 642.
- carrying passengers in an unsafe vessel, s. 282, p. 643.
- obstructing a public line of, s. 283, p. 644.
- injuring, by mischief, s. 431, p. 1093.
- endangering, by removing lights, buoys, etc. s. 433, p. 1095.

Navy—

- offences relating to and committed by persons belonging to, Chap. VII, include the Indian Marine Service, p. 320.
- rumour to cause mutiny in, s. 505 p. 1287.

See INDIAN ARMY ACT.

Necessity—

- doctrine of, as a defence, p. 196.

Negligence—

- in allowing a State prisoner or prisoner of war to escape, s. 129, p. 314.
- concealment of deserter on a ship, s. 137, p. 324.
- accused to escape, s. 223, p. 560.
- a person to escape, s. 225A, p. 569.
- rash or careless driving or riding, s. 279, p. 636.
- navigation of vessel, s. 280, p. 641.
- exhibiting false light, mark, or buoy, s. 281, p. 642.
- conveying for hire in unseaworthy vessel, s. 282, p. 643.
- obstructing highway or navigation, s. 283, p. 644.
- in dealing with poison, s. 284, p. 646.
- explosives, s. 286, p. 649.
- fire, s. 285, p. 647.
- machinery, s. 287, p. 650.
- in pulling down or repairing building, s. 288, p. 651.
- respect of animals in possession, s. 289, p. 652.
- gross—may amount to knowledge in murder, p. 693.
- causing death by, s. 304A, p. 768.
- in not providing medical aid or food to adults, p. 710.
- infants, p. 710.
- with reference to poisonous drugs, s. 337, p. 832.
- gun, in mischief, pp. 833, 834.

Negligent act—

See RASH OR NEGLIGENT ACT.

Negligently—

- occurring in ss. 129, 223, 225A, 269, 279, pp. 314, 560, 569, 626, 636.

Newspaper—

- publication of seditious matters in, p. 306.
- liability for correspondence, p. 306.
- publication of obscene matter, p. 656.
- defamatory matter in a, p. 1238.
- is published, wherever its copy is sent, p. 1238.

Newspaper proprietor—

- liable for obscene matter published by his servant, p. 657.

Night—

- lurking house-trespass by, ss. 441, 456, pp. 1100, 1125.
- house-breaking by, ss. 446, 456, pp. 1100, 1125.

Non-attendance—

- in obedience to an order, etc., s. 174, p. 415.
- order to attend necessary, p. 417.
- public servant must be competent to issue order of, p. 417.
- appearance through lawyer, p. 418.
- escape from custody, p. 418.
- personal service necessary, p. 418.
- public servant before whom attendance is to be put in, absent, p. 418.
- wilful departure, p. 417.

Non-resistance—

- by a girl to sexual intercourse, p. 909.

Nose-cutting—

- cases of, sentence to be passed in, p. 818.

Notice—

- disobedience to attend in answer to, s. 174, p. 415.

Noxious—

- means injurious to health, ss. 272, 274, 275, pp. 628, 631, 632.

Nude pictures—

- if work of art, selling, no offence, p. 657.

Nuisance—

- abatement of, by unlawful means, ss. 23, 268, 273, pp. 56, 619, 629, 625.
- nuisance is public or private, p. 619.

Nuisance—Concid.

- public, definition of, s. 268, p. 619.
 - what amounts to, p. 619.
- where no annoyance to public there is no, p. 621.
- gambling in a public place is, p. 622.
- exhibition in a shop-window is, p. 622.
- lawful cremation is not, p. 623.
- offending the sentiments of a class is no, p. 623.
- convenience does not afford defence, p. 624.
- no prescriptive right can be acquired to create, p. 624.
- civil and criminal liability, p. 624.
- liability of a master for acts of servants, p. 624.
 - joint owners, p. 624.
- prosecution under Criminal Procedure Code not a condition precedent, p. 624.
- situation of the place of, p. 625.
- statutory authority to commit, p. 625.
- spreading infectious and dangerous disease negligently, s. 269, p. 626.
 - syphilis, p. 626.
 - cholera, p. 626.
 - inoculation, p. 627.
 - plague, p. 626.
 - small-pox, p. 626.
 - glanders, p. 627.
- spreading infectious and dangerous disease, malignantly, s. 270, p. 627.
- disobeying quarantine law, s. 271, p. 628.
- adulterating food or drink for sale, s. 272, p. 628.
- sale of noxious food or drink, s. 273, p. 629.
- adulteration of drugs, s. 274, p. 631.
- sale of adulterated drugs, s. 275, p. 632.
 - one drug as a different drug, s. 276, p. 633.
- fouling water of public spring or reservoir, s. 277, p. 634.
- making atmosphere noxious to health, s. 278, p. 635.
- punishment for public—not otherwise provided for, s. 290, p. 654.
- continuance of—after injunction to discontinue, s. 291, p. 654.

See INFECTIOUS DISEASES ; PUBLIC NUISANCE.

Number—

- definition of, s. 9, p. 45.

Oath—

- what the word means and includes, s. 51, p. 82.
- refusing to take an, s. 178, p. 427.
- making false statements on, to public servant, s. 181, p. 430.
- magistrate has power to administer, p. 465.

Oaths or affirmations—

- refusal to take—, s. 178, p. 427.
- false statement on—, s. 181, p. 430.
- what are, s. 191, p. 463.

Obliteration—

- of documents, an offence, s. 204, p. 509.

Obscene acts and songs—

- doing, singing, reciting or uttering, s. 294, p. 659.

See OBSCENITY.

Obscene books, etc.—

- sale, distribution, importation, printing, public exhibition, or possession of, ss. 292, 293, pp. 655, 659.

See OBSCENITY.

Obscenity—

- importing, printing, etc., obscene matter, s. 292, p. 655.
- what it means and includes, p. 656.
- advocating checks to conception is no, p. 657.
- nude pictures, p. 657.
- purchase of obscene prints to entrap the seller, p. 657.
- liability of a newspaper proprietor for his servant's acts, p. 657.
- exposing obscene matter for sale, s. 298, p. 659.

Obstructing—

- the taking of property by authority of public servant, s. 183, p. 439.
- sale of property by public servant, s. 184, p. 442.
- public servant in discharge of his duty, s. 186, p. 443.
- obstruction in discharge of public functions, p. 445, 447.
- rescuing from custody, p. 448.
- illegal attachment, p. 448.
- search without search-warrant, p. 447.
- no obstruction if no overt act done, p. 449.
- if order or warrant not legal, p. 450.
- penalty for—apprehension of oneself s. 224, p. 563.
- another, s. 225, p. 566.
- not otherwise provided for, s. 225B, p. 570.
- a public way or line of navigation, s. 283, p. 644.

Obstruction—

- connotes physical obstruction, p. 442.
- in a public way or line of navigation, s. 283, p. 644.
- to a public drainage is mischief, s. 432, p. 1094.

Occupier—

- of land not giving police information of riot, s. 154, p. 373.
- for whose benefit a riot is committed, s. 155, p. 375.
- agents of—when liable, s. 156, p. 376.

Offence—

- committed prior to the operation of the Code, p. 3.
- out of British India, s. 3, pp. 21, 24.
- by servant of Queen within allied States, s. 4, p. 22.
- co-operation in committing—is an offence, s. 37, p. 75.
- several persons concerned in one act may be guilty of different offences, s. 38, p. 70.
- includes an abetment of an offence, p. 79.
- attempt to commit offence, p. 79.
- limit of punishment of—made up of several parts, s. 71, p. 112.
- punishment of person found guilty of one of several, s. 72, p. 125.
- acts or omissions which do not constitute an—
- act of person bound by law, or believing himself bound to do it, s. 76, p. 141.
- Judge when acting judicially, s. 77, p. 144.
- done pursuant to a judgment or order of a Court, s. 78, p. 145.
- of person justified, or believing himself to be justified, in doing it, s. 79, p. 146.
- accident in doing a lawful act, s. 80, p. 155.
- act likely to cause harm, but done to prevent other harm, s. 81, p. 156.
- of child under 7 years of age, s. 82, p. 164.
- above 7, but under 12, and of immature understanding, s. 83, p. 164.
- person of unsound mind, s. 84, p. 166.
- intoxicated persons, ss. 85, 86, pp. 180, 182.
- done by consent, not intended or known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, s. 87, p. 184.
- not intended to cause death done by consent for benefit of a person, s. 88, p. 186.
- done for benefit of child or insane person, by or by consent of guardian, s. 89, p. 189.
- a person without consent, s. 92, p. 193.
- communication made in good faith, s. 93, p. 195.
- act to which a person is compelled by threats, s. 94, p. 195.
- causing very slight harm, s. 95, p. 197.
- things done in private defence, s. 96, p. 199.
- when right of private defence exists, ss. 97-106, pp. 199-230.
- definition of, ss. 40, 77, 203, Expln., pp. 78, 424, 508, 537, 546.

See UNNATURAL OFFENCES.

Offender—

- causing disappearance of evidence or giving false information to screen—, s. 201, p. 502.
- harbouring or taking or offering gift to screen, ss. 212, 216, pp. 536, 545.
- screening an, from legal punishment, s. 213, p. 539.
- public servant omitting to apprehend an, s. 221, p. 557.

Officer—

- means a person exercising a delegated function of Government, s. 21, ninth, p. 40.
- protection from civil liability, p. 146.
- prosecution, p. 146.
- definition of, s. 131, Expln., p. 319.
- falsification of accounts by, s. 477A, p. 1176.
- circulation of false report causing officer to mutiny, s. 505, p. 1287.

Offices of nature—making atmosphere noxious, s. 278, p. 685.

Omission—

illegal—when included in the word “act”, s. 32, p. 64.

definition of, s. 33, p. 64.

effect caused partly by—and partly by act, s. 36, p. 75.

constituting an abetment, ss. 107, 108, pp. 230, 236.

to give information when illegal, ss. 118-120, pp. 260-264.

produce document or give information when bound to do so, ss. 175, 176, pp. 419, 421.

give information under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 176, p. 421.

presumption of knowledge, of an offence, p. 422.

liability of a karnam, p. 423.

N. W. P. and Oudh Land Revenue Act, p. 423.

Punjab Land Revenue Act, p. 423.

Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, p. 423.

to assist a public servant, s. 187, p. 452.

give information of offence by person legally bound to inform, s. 202, p. 507.

by public servant to apprehend offender, s. 221, p. 557.

convict, s. 222, p. 559.

to apprehend, on the part of a public servant, s. 225A, p. 509.

causing obstruction to public way, etc., s. 283, p. 644.

Operation—

extent of—of the Code, p. 1.

date of, of the Code, p. 2.

offences committed, prior to—of the Code, p. 3.

on piles by unskilful person, p. 84.

in emasculation, p. 694.

on eye, rashly performed, p. 833.

Order—

by a public servant, disobedience of, s. 188, p. 453.

failure to attend, s. 174, p. 415.

in civil suit, p. 458.

held to be valid, p. 458.

invalid, p. 458.

should be directed to the accused, p. 416.

public servant corruptly making an, s. 219, p. 555.

Out-house—

forms house in house-breaking, s. 445, Explan., p. 1115.

Outrage—

of religious feelings, s. 295A, p. 673.

upon a woman to insult her modesty, s. 354, p. 860.

Overawing—

Government, s. 121A, p. 281.

Governor-General, s. 124, p. 280.

Governor, s. 124, p. 280.

Member of Council, s. 124, p. 280.

by unlawful assembly, s. 141, p. 328.

Owner—

liability of—of land or his agent for riot committed on his land or for his benefit, ss. 154, 156, pp. 373, 376.

of non-resident co-sharer, p. 374.

prosecution to be without delay, p. 374.

or person for whose benefit, riot is committed, s. 155, p. 375.

Ox—

killing, poisoning, maiming, or rendering useless an, s. 420, p. 1080.

See MISCHIEF.

Package—

bearing false trade mark, s. 480, p. 1185.

property-mark, s. 481, p. 1189.

sale of, bearing false trade-mark, s. 486, p. 1194.

making a false mark on, s. 487, p. 1197.

Pain—

causing of bodily, is hurt, s. 319, p. 802.

Painting—

sale, etc., of obscene, s. 292, p. 655.

Palm impression—opinion of expert as to identity of, p. 1153.

Panchayat—

may be a Court of Justice, s. 20, ill., p. 49.

member of—when he is a Judge, s. 19, ill. (c), p. 48.

member of—assisting Court of Justice, etc., is a public servant, s. 21, fifth, p. 49.

Paper—

falsification of a, s. 477A, p. 1176.

Pardon—

evidence under illegal, p. 470.

Parole—

State prisoner or prisoner of war going out of his parole is said to escape from custody, s. 130, p. 315.

Parties—

comment on, in a case, s. 499, Excep. 5, pp. 1233, 1250.

liability for defamatory statements made by, p. 1264.

Partner—

can commit breach of trust as to partnership property, p. 997.

dishonest removal of property by a, pp. 997, 1076.

Partridge—

can be subject of theft, p. 929.

Passenger—

conveyed in an unsafe boat, s. 282, p. 643.

handing luggage to co-passenger to evade payment, p. 1060.

travelling by railway in a higher class without paying for it, p. 1060.

Paying-in slip—counterfoil of a—is valuable security, p. 63.

Payment—of money, forgery of receipt of, s. 467, p. 1157.

Peace—

provoking a breach of the, s. 504, p. 1283.

Peacock—

can be subject of theft, p. 928.

Penal servitude—awarded in the case of Europeans and Americans in substitution for transportation, s. 56, p. 95.

one of the punishments under the Penal Code, s. 53, thirdly, p. 85.

commutation of sentence of—without consent of convict, s. 55, p. 94.

See EUROPEAN AND AMERICAN.

Penal Servitude Act—

see the Appendix where it is set out in full.

Penal statutes—construction of, p. 14.

Penetration—

sufficient to constitute rape, s. 375, Expln., p. 907.

unnatural offence, s. 377, Expln., p. 915.

Perjury—

what amounts to, s. 191, p. 463.

English law of, p. 464.

differentiated from the Indian law, p. 464.

Perjury—Concl'd.

- assignment of—proof by two witnesses, p. 464.
- where Court has no authority to administer oath or affirmation or acts beyond its jurisdiction, p. 464.
- none, where oath is under foreign law, p. 465.
- before Court without jurisdiction, p. 465.
- criminating statement is no justification, p. 468.
- in written statements, p. 468.
- abetment, p. 469.
- illegality of trial does not purge, p. 468.
- non-liability of the accused for giving false evidence, p. 468.
- evidence under illegal pardon, p. 470.
- false statements in accused's application, p. 469.
 - balance sheet, p. 470.
 - darkhast, p. 470.
 - kabin-nama, p. 470.
- in irregular trial, p. 470.
- powers of appellate Court, p. 483.
- from contradictory statements, p. 483.

Person—

- every—liable to punishment under Penal Code for offences committed within British India, s. 2, p. 5.
- includes a foreigner, p. 5.
- does not include a corporation, p. 8.
- who is liable to be tried in British India for an offence committed beyond its limits is subject to the Penal Code, s. 3, p. 21.
- definition of, s. 11, p. 45.
- includes Government as representative of the whole community, p. 46.
- liability of every—for act done by several persons, s. 34, p. 65.

Personal safety—

- rash or negligent act endangering life or—, s. 336, p. 830.
- letting off steam near a level crossing, p. 832.
- throwing stones on a person's house, p. 832.
- causing hurt by act endangering life or—, s. 337, p. 832.
- negligence with reference to a gun, p. 833.
 - operation, p. 833.
 - poisonous drugs, p. 833.
- causing grievous hurt by act endangering life or—, s. 338, p. 833.
- sexual intercourse causing injury to wife, p. 834.
- death caused by allowing cart to go unattended p. 834.
- running over by a carriage, p. 834.
- discharging a gun, p. 834.

Personating—

- a soldier, sailor or airman, s. 140, p. 326.
- public servant, ss. 170, 171, pp. 398, 400.
- police-officer, for extorting money, p. 399.
- voter at an election, s. 171D, p. 405.
- another, for purpose of suit or prosecution, s. 205, p. 511.
- a juror or assessor, s. 229, p. 581.
- an imaginary person, p. 511.

Personation—

- of a soldier, sailor or airman, s. 140, p. 326.
- public servant, ss. 170, 171, pp. 398, 400.
- police-officer, for extorting money, p. 399.
- voter at an election, s. 171D, p. 405.
- punishment for, s. 171F, p. 407.
- at an examination, pp. 437, 1061, 1146.
- for purposes of suit or prosecution, s. 205, p. 511.
- of imaginary person, p. 511.
- juror or assessor, s. 229, p. 581.
- cheating by, s. 416, p. 1061.
- punishment for cheating, by, s. 419, p. 1066.
- at an examination, p. 1061.
- before a public servant, p. 1061.
- by witness, p. 1062.
- false representation as to caste, p. 1062.
- misrepresentation as to position in life, p. 1063.
- false statements as to name and performances, p. 1063.
- attempt at, p. 1209.

Petition—

containing defamatory statements may be refused, p. 1277.
false statement in a, p. 437.

Picketing—

threat of, pp. 951 1282.

Picture—

drawing of a libellous, s. 499, Expln., 4, ill. (c), pp. 1232, 1242.

Pigeon—

can be subject of theft, p. 929.

Piles—

operation on, by an unskilful person, p. 84.

Piracy—

what is, p. 34.
is of two kinds—
 jure gentium, p. 34.
 by statute law of England, p. 35.
evidence in cases of, p. 37.

Place of worship—

injuring or defiling, s. 295 p. 670.
trespass should be in a place of worship, s. 297, p. 678.
mischief by fire to, s. 436, p. 1097.
house-trespass in a, s. 442, p. 1111.

Plague—negligence regarding spread of, p. 626.

Plaint—

false statement in a, how far a forgery, p. 1166.

Plan—

See MAP OR PLAN.

Plate—

trade or property mark, s. 485, p. 1194.

Plea of guilty—

in murder cases, p. 753.

Pleader—

not liable for defamation for utterances, in Court, p. 1259.
imputation made by, p. 1269.

Pleadings—

defamatory statements made in, p. 1266.

Pledgee—

pledging the pledged property commits a breach of trust, p. 998.

Pocket—

counterfeiting a, for committing forgery, ss. 472, 473, pp. 1170, 1171.
attempt to pick a, s. 511, ill. (b), p. 1296.

Poison—

causing death by, p. 787.
rashness or negligence concerning, or omission to take proper order with, s. 284, p. 646.
attempt to murder by, s. 307, ill. (d), p. 780.
administration of—with intent to cause hurt or grievous hurt, ss. 326, 328, pp. 816, 820.
giving to animal, for mischief, ss. 428, 429, pp. 1088, 1089.
procuring, to kill a person, p. 1299.

Poisonous drugs—

negligence with reference to, s. 337, p. 832.
administering, to cause miscarriage, p. 795.
procuring, to kill a person, p. 1299.

Police torture—

death from, punishable under s. 330, ill. (a), p. 823.

Port hole—

entry through a, is house-breaking, s. 445, ill. (b), p. 1115.

Possession—

meaning of, s. 27, p. 59.

of property by a person through wife, clerk, or servant, s. 27, p. 59.

under Penal Code, abrogates the distinction made by English law between possession and custody, p. 60.

instruments of coining, s. 235, p. 590.

coin or Queen's coin which is counterfeit, ss. 242, 243, p. 598, 599.

instruments for countefeiting stamp, s. 256, p. 607.

false weights, by itself is no offence, s. 266, p. 616.

of obscene books, etc., prohibited, ss. 292, 293, pp. 635, 659.

minor girl for prostitution, s. 373, p. 902.

case of theft, p. 929.

theft by servant of property in—of master, s. 381, p. 944.

of property by wife is not per se possession of husband, p. 1028.

manual possession not necessary in receiving stolen property, p. 1026.

in cases of trespass must be actual, p. 1108.

of forged document, s. 474, p. 1172.

instrument for counterfeiting trade mark, s. 485, p. 1194.

forged currency-notes, s. 480C, p. 1201.

Possessory order—

how far a defence in theft, p. 932.

Postal receipt—for an insured article is not a valuable security, p. 63.

Postman—

secreting letters, commits misappropriation, p. 988.

Power-of-attorney—is "document", s. 29, ill. p. 61.

forgery of a, s. 466, p. 1155.

Preamble—

of the Indian Penal Code, p. 2.

Pregnancy—meaning of "quick with child", p. 793.

"with child", p. 793.

causing miscarriage, s. 312, p. 792.

without woman's consent, s. 313, p. 794.

death caused in miscarriage, s. 314, p. 795.

prevention of child being born alive, s. 315, p. 796.

causing death of quick unborn child, s. 316, p. 797.

Preliminary investigation—is a "stage of a judicial proceeding", s. 193, Explan. 2, p. 478.

Premeditated fight—

not protected by s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 704, 741.

Preparation—of incorrect document by public servant, s. 167, p. 394.

to wage war against the Queen is punishable, s. 122, p. 285.

commit depredation on an ally, s. 126, p. 312.

dacoity, is punishable, s. 399, p. 973.

what amounts to, in dacoity, p. 973.

assault, s. 351, p. 851.

death, hurt, restraint for theft, s. 382, p. 946.

house-trespass, s. 452, p. 1121.

house-breaking, s. 458, p. 1129.

is distinguishable from 'attempt', pp. 1302, 1308.

is a question of fact, p. 1301.

law allows a locus penitentiae, p. 1301.

Prescription—alteration of, may be forgery, p. 1167.

Presence—

not equivalent to complicity in a crime, p. 235.
 sufficient for conviction of murder, p. 711.
 at extortion is not sufficient for conviction, p. 951.
 a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.

Presidency—

definition of, s. 18, p. 47.

Press—

privilege of, p. 1267.

Presumption—

where minor girl sold to brothel-keeper, s. 372, Expln. 1, p. 897.
 bought by brothel-keeper, s. 373, Expln. 1, p. 903.
 in cases of dacoity, p. 964.

Previous conviction—enhancement of punishment in proof of, s. 75, p. 129.

 doctrine of, does not apply to abetment, p. 133.
 attempt, p. 132.
 convictions under foreign law, p. 133.
 special or local law, p. 133.
 evidence must be clear and precise, p. 133.
 jurisdiction of Magistrates, p. 135.
 punishment to be awarded, p. 137. record of previous conviction, p. 134. summary trial in cases of, p. 135.

Priest—officiating at a bigamous marriage, p. 1214.

Principal—

under the Penal Code, see ss. 34-38, pp. 65-76.
 in the first degree, who is, p. 237.
 second degree, who is, p. 238.
 cannot be punished as abettor, p. 242.
 forgery of authority to receive principal due on valuable security, s. 467, p. 1157.

Printing—

or engraving defamatory matter, s. 501, p. 1278.

See DEFAMATION.

Prints—

foot—, opinion of expert as to, p. 1153. sale of defamatory, s. 502, p. 1278.

Prison—

harbouring person who has escaped from, s. 216, p. 545.
 escape from—; intentional or negligent suffering of—by public servant, ss. 223, 224, pp. 560, 563.
 attempt to escape from—, 224, 225A, pp. 563, 569.

Prisoner—

voluntarily allowing or suffering or aiding escape of State, ss. 128, 129, 130, pp. 313, 314, 315.

Prisoner of State—escape of, from lawful custody, s. 128, p. 313.

Prisoner of war—

escape of, from unlawful custody, s. 128, p. 313.

Privacy—

intruding upon the—of a woman, s. 509, p. 1292. entering into the room of a lady in the middle of night, p. 1203.

Private defence—

- acts done in exercise of the right of, s. 96, p. 199.
- against an act not an offence under the Code, p. 200.
- cannot be pleaded by aggressors, p. 200.
- when right of—exists, ss. 97, 98, 99, pp. 201, 207.
- acts against which there is no right of, s. 99, p. 207.
- right of, s. 99, p. 207.
- cannot be pleaded against an act of a public servant which does not cause the apprehension of death or grievous hurt, s. 99 (2), pp. 207, 211.
- done at the direction of a public servant which does not cause the apprehension of death or grievous hurt, p. 207.
- when there is no time to have recourse to public authorities, s. 99, pp. 207, 212.
- permits the infliction of justifiable harm, p. 215.
- not allowed where more harm is caused than necessary, p. 216.
- of the body, when right of—extends to causing death, s. 100, p. 217.
- harm other than death, s. 101, p. 222.
- how long the right of—continues, s. 102, p. 223.
- of property, when right of—extends to causing death, s. 103, p. 224.
- harm other than death, s. 104, p. 226.
- how long the right of—continues, s. 102, p. 223.
- extends to injuries of innocent person, in the exercise of the right of, s. 106, p. 230.
- how far a justification to commit a riot, p. 343.
- when death caused in the exercise of the right of—does not amount to murder, s. 300, Excep. 2 pp. 708, 732.
- in case of murder, p. 733.
- exceeding the right of, pp. 732, 734.
- threat of incantations gives no right of, p. 734.
- where it is no defence, p. 734.
- in cases of assault or criminal force, s. 315, p. 851.

Privation—

- of the sight of eye, is grievous hurt, s. 320, secondly, p. 805.
- hearing of ear, is grievous hurt, s. 320, thirdly, p. 805.
- member or joint, is grievous hurt, s. 320, fourthly, p. 805.

Privilege—

- of Judges in defamation, p. 1258.
- counsel, pleader, etc., p. 1259.
- witness, p. 1263.
- parties, p. 1264.
- of statements made in—
- pleadings, p. 1266.
- protection of another's interest, p. 1267.
- one's own interest, p. 1268.
- reports p. 1267.

Prize-fight—

- persons sanctioning—guilty of manslaughter, p. 186.

Proceeding—

- of a Court of Justice, forgery of, s. 466, p. 1155.
- report of, s. 499, Excep. 4, pp. 1233, 1250.

Process—

- absconding to avoid, or preventing service or publication of—, or non-attendance in obedience to, ss. 172, 174, pp. 412, 415.

Proclamation—

- failure to attend, in answer to a, s. 174, p. 415.

Procuration—

- of minor girl, s. 366A, p. 888.
- punishment of whipping, p. 890.

Promissory note—

- executed by a minor through force is a valuable security, p. 63.
- is property in cheating, p. 1068.
- making false endorsement in, is forgery, s. 464, ill. (g), p. 1135.
- antedating of, when forgery, s. 464, Expl. 1, ill. (e), p. 1135.

Promoting—

hiring for unlawful assembly, s. 150, p. 361.
 enmity between classes, s. 153A, p. 367.

Property—

private defence of. See PRIVATE DEFENCE.
 resisting seizure and obstructing sale of, or illegally bidding for—in contempt of lawful authority, ss. 183, 184, 185, pp. 439, 442.
 fraudulent removal of, or claim to—to prevent seizure as a forfeiture or in execution of decree, ss. 206, 207, pp. 512, 515.
 public servant disobeying direction of law, or framing incorrect record in order to save person from forfeiture of, ss. 217, 218, pp. 550, 552.
 omission to take order with, resulting in obstruction to public road, s. 283, p. 644.
 punishment for voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt to extort—or compel its restoration, ss. 327, 329, 330, 331, pp. 819, 822, 824.
 wrongful confinement to extort—or compel its restoration, ss. 347, 348, p. 846.
 includes cancelled cheque in, s. 405, p. 996.
 a health certificate is a, p. 1049.
 means moveable property in ss. 403, 405, 420, pp. 981, 992, 1067.
 damage or harm to, in cheating, s. 415, p. 1042.
 cheating for inducing delivery of property, s. 420, p. 1067.
 certificate of having passed an examination is a, p. 1070.
 promissory note is a, p. 1068.

See CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION ; DEATH ; FORFEITURE ; FRAUDULENT DEEDS AND DISPOSITIONS OF PROPERTY ; STOLEN PROPERTY ; CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

Property in possession of wife, clerk, or servant—

explained, s. 27, p. 59.

Property-mark—

definition of, s. 479, p. 1185.
 distinguished from “trade-mark”, p. 1189.
 using false—; counterfeiting or making or possessing instruments for counterfeiting, ss. 481, 485, pp. 1189, 1194.
 selling goods marked with false, s. 486, p. 1194.
 making or using false—on goods, etc., 487, 488, pp. 1197, 1198.
 tampering with—with intent to injure, s. 489, p. 1199.

Prospectus—fraudulent, p. 1046.

Prostitute—

meaning of, p. 900.

Prostitution—

marrying a girl for letting her for, p. 885.
 sheltering a girl for letting her for, p. 885.
 procuration of minor girl for, s. 366A, p. 888.
 importation of foreign girl for, s. 366B, p. 891.
 selling or buying minor for purpose of—, ss. 372, 373, pp. 897, 902.
 adoption of a girl by a dancing woman, p. 900.
 brothel, p. 901.
dev dasi p. 901.
 meaning of the term, p. 900.

Proviso—

construction of, in a statute, p. 17.

Provocation—

wantonly giving—with intent to cause riot, s. 153, p. 364.
 caused by supposed witchcraft, p. 732.
 when—reduces murder to culpable homicide, s. 300, Excep. 1, pp. 702, 722.
 caused by words or gestures, p. 723.
 whilst deprived of the power of self-control, p. 725.
 grave and sudden, pp. 722, 725.
 not sought nor voluntarily provoked, p. 727.
 caused by adulterous intercourse, p. 728.
 where woman is wife, p. 728.
 not wife, p. 729.
 adultery, but death not caused in a fit of passion, p. 730.
 confession by a woman of immoral conduct, p. 729.

Provocation—Concd.

caused by abusive words, p. 724.

fear, p. 731.

causing hurt or grievous hurt on grave and sudden, ss. 334, 335, pp. 828, 829.

assaulting or using criminal force otherwise than on grave, s. 352, p. 853.

with intent to dishonour a person, s. 355, p. 862.

assault or criminal force on grave, s. 358, p. 863.

given by insult, s. 504, p. 1283.

See ASSAULT ; CRIMINAL FORCE.

Public—

definition of, s. 12, p. 46.

punishment for obscene acts and songs done in, s. 204, p. 659.

Public action—

promise of, at an election, s. 171C(3), p. 404.

Public conveyance—offences affecting, Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Public decency—

offences affecting, Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Public drainage—mischief by causing inundation or obstruction, s. 432, p. 1094.

Public functions—

what are, p. 445.

imputation on a public servant regarding, s. 499, Excep. 2, pp. 1232, 1247.

Public good—how far defence in defamation, pp. 1246, 1247.

Public health—offence relating to—by polluting atmosphere, s. 278, p. 635.

water, s. 430, p. 1090.

by negligent or malignant act likely to cause spread of infectious disease,
ss. 269, 270, pp. 626, 627.

Public justice—offences against, Chap. XI, p. 463.

Public line of navigation—danger or obstruction to, s. 288, p. 644.

See PUBLIC WAY.

Public mischief—statements conducing to, s. 505, p. 1287.

Public morals—

offences affecting, Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Public nuisance—abatement of, ss. 28, 268, pp. 56, 625.

definition of, s. 268, p. 619.

difference between public and private nuisance, p. 60.

annoyance to public necessary, p. 621.

gambling, p. 622.

lawful cremation is not, p. 623.

offending the sentiments of a class is not, p. 623.

no prescriptive right can be acquired to maintain, p. 624.

difference between civil and criminal liability, p. 624.

liability of owner for acts of servant, p. 624.

prosecution under Criminal Procedure Code, not a condition precedent, p. 624.

statutory authority to commit, p. 625.

situation to be taken into account, p. 625.

various offences constituting, ss. 268-294A, pp. 619-660.

punishment for—when not specially provided for, s. 290, p. 654.

continuance of—after injunction to discontinue, s. 291, p. 654.

Public peace—assembly likely to disturb—being a member of—after order to disperse, s. 151, p. 362.

insult tending to disturb, s. 504, p. 1283.

Public performance—criticism of the merits of a, s. 499, Excep. 6, pp. 1233, 1251.

Public place—

what constitutes a, p. 378.
what is and is not, p. 379.
singing of obscene songs in a, s. 294, p. 659.
misconduct by a drunken person in a, s. 510, p. 1294.

Public policy—

declaration of, at an election, s. 171C (3), p. 404.

Public question—expression of opinion respecting, s. 499, Excep. 3, pp. 1233, 1248.

Public river—

not included in public spring, p. 634.

Public road—

rash driving or riding on a, s. 279, p. 636.
mischief by injuring, s. 431, p. 1093.

Public safety—

offences affecting, Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Public servant—

who are included in the term, s. 21, p. 49.
 pro confesso, p. 53.
 statutory, p. 53.
private defence against acts of, s. 99, p. 207.
abetting an offence, s. 116, p. 256.
concealing design to commit offences, which it is his duty to prevent, s. 119, p. 262.
voluntarily and negligently allowing prisoner of State or war to escape, ss. 128, 129.
 pp. 313, 314.
assault, etc., on—suppressing riot, etc., s. 152, p. 364.
improperly taking a gratification, etc., s. 161, p. 380.
abetting the taking of bribe or gratification, ss. 161, 162, 163, 164, pp. 380, 388, 389, 390.
obtaining valuable things for inadequate consideration, s. 165, p. 391.
disobeying direction of law, s. 166, p. 393.
framing incorrect document, s. 167, p. 394.
unlawfully engaging in trade, s. 168, p. 396.
 buying or bidding for property, s. 169, p. 397.
personating a, ss. 170, 171, pp. 398, 400. of contempts of the lawful authority of, Chap. X, p. 412.
absconding to avoid service of summons, etc., issued by, s. 172, p. 412.
preventing service of summons, etc., s. 173, p. 414.
non-attendance in obedience to order from —or departure without leave of, s. 174, p. 415.
omission to produce or deliver up documents, to, s. 175, p. 419.
 give notice or information to, s. 176, p. 421.
 of an offence committed, ss. 176, 202, pp. 421, 507.
furnishing false information, s. 177, p. 424.
 respecting an offence committed, ss. 177, 203, pp. 424, 508.
refusing to be sworn by, s. 178, p. 427.
 answer question of, s. 179, p. 428.
 sign statement before, s. 180, p. 429.
making false statements on oath before, s. 181, p. 430.
giving false information to make use of his power to the injury of another, s. 182, p. 431.
resisting the taking of property by lawful authority of, s. 183, p. 439.
obstructing sale of property by lawful authority of, s. 184, p. 442.
illegal purchase of, or bid for property offered for sale by, s. 185, p. 442.
obstructing, in discharge of duty, s. 186, p. 443.
omission to assist—when bound by law to give assistance, s. 187, p. 452.
disobedience to orders of—duly promulgated, s. 188, p. 453.
threat of injury to, s. 189, p. 460.
 induce any person to refrain or desist from applying to—for protection, s. 190,
 p. 462.
disobeying directions of law in order to screen offender, s. 217, p. 550.
framing incorrect record or writing in order to screen offender, s. 218, p. 550.

Public servant—Concl'd.

making report, etc., contrary to law, s. 219, p. 555.
 keeping person in confinement contrary to law, s. 220, p. 556.
 omitting to apprehend, etc., person accused or sentenced, ss. 221, 222, pp. 557, 559.
 negligently suffering escape of person from confinement, s. 223, p. 560.
 omission to apprehend or sufferance of escape on part of, s. 225A, p. 569.
 insulting or interrupting a—during a judicial proceeding, s. 228, p. 576.
 committing culpable homicide by exceeding his powers, is not guilty of murder in acting bona fide, s. 300, Excep. 8, pp. 703, 735.
 exceeding the powers given by law and committing murder, p. 735.
 doing an unlawful act, p. 736.
 causing hurt or grievous hurt to— to deter him from doing his duty, ss. 332, 338, pp. 825, 833.
 using criminal force towards, s. 353, p. 855.
 criminal breach of trust by, s. 409, p. 1015.
 destroying, etc., land-mark fixed by, s. 434, p. 1095.
 register kept by a, forgery of, s. 466, p. 1155.
 certificate given by a, forgery of, s. 466, p. 1156.
 counterfeiting a property mark used by, s. 484, p. 1193.
 making false mark upon goods to deceive, s. 487, p. 1197. use of a false mark upon goods to deceive, s. 488, p. 1198.
 imputation on public conduct of public servants, s. 499, Excep. 2, pp. 1232, 1247.

Public spring or reservoir—does not include public river, p. 634.

 punishment for fouling water of, s. 277, p. 634.

Public tranquillity—offences against—, Chap. VIII, p. 328. circulating false report with intent to disturb, s. 505, p. 1287.

Public way—

rash or negligent driving or riding on, s. 279, p. 636.
 danger or obstruction in, s. 283, p. 644.
 obstruction should be to a particular person, p. 645.

Publication—

of obscene books, etc., prohibited, s. 292, p. 655.
 proposal for lottery, s. 294A, p. 660.
 banns of marriage, p. 1210.
 is an essential ingredient in the offence of defamation, p. 1236.
 communication to the person defamed is no, p. 1236.
 of defamatory matter in a newspaper, p. 1238.
 false rumour, s. 505, p. 1287.

Puffing—

in advertisements is not cheating, p. 1057.

Punchayat—

when a Judge, s. 19, p. 48.
 Court of Justice, s. 20, p. 49.
 member of a, when a public servant, s. 21, fifth, p. 49.

Punctuation—

construction of, in a statute, p. 18.

Punishable—

meaning of the term, discussed, p. 78.

Punishment—

when to be under the Penal Code, ss. 2, 3, 4, pp. 5, 21, 22.
 different kinds of, for :— death, pp. 86, 91.
 transportation, pp. 89, 91.
 penal servitude, p. 87.
 imprisonment, pp. 87, 91.
 forfeiture, p. 89.
 fine, pp. 89, 93.
 whipping, pp. 91, 93.
 detention in reformatories, p. 91.
 power to commute or remit, ss. 54, 55, p. 94.
 fractional terms of, how calculated, s. 57, p. 96.

Punishment—Concld.

where offences made up of several offences, s. 71, p. 112.

1. where repetition in same transaction of several criminal acts of exactly same character, may constitute one crime, p. 115.
theft of property belonging to two persons, p. 115.
dacoity in respect of property belonging to two persons, p. 115.
causing two deaths simultaneously, p. 115.
2. single transaction gives rise to different offences, p. 115.
house-breaking to commit mischief and assault, and mischief and assault, p. 116.
house-breaking to commit theft and theft in a house, p. 116.
house-breaking after making preparation for causing hurt or assault and committing rape, p. 116.
criminal intimidation to three persons at one time, p. 116.
resistance to taking of property by public servant, and assaulting him, p. 116.
rioting and hurt, and rescuing from custody, p. 116.
rioting and grievous hurt, p. 117.
rioting and house-trespass, p. 117.
theft and receiving gift to recover stolen property, p. 117.
theft and lurking house-trespass, p. 117.
theft and mischief, p. 117.
wrongful confinement and assault, p. 117.
abduction and rape, p. 117.
criminal conspiracy and dacoity, p. 117.
3. the same series of acts may constitute different offences, p. 121.
4. the compound offence includes different minor offences, p. 122.

in cases of attempt and abetment of same offence, p. 125.

when conviction is in the alternative, s. 72, p. 125.

enhanced punishment after previous conviction, s. 75, p. 129.

value of property stolen is no test, p. 132.

not applicable to attempts, p. 132.

not in cases of conviction under foreign law, p. 133.

offences under special or local law, p. 133.

See REMISSION OF PUNISHMENT.

Purchase—

of property by public servant, s. 169, p. 397.

Purse—

misappropriation of a, s. 403, Expln. 2, ills. (d), (e), p. 982.

Pursuits—

inability to follow ordinary, in grievous hurt, s. 320, eighthly, p. 805.

Quarantine—

disobedience to rules of—, s. 271, p. 628.

Queen—

definition of s. 13, p. 46.

servant of, s. 14, p. 46.

offences against—See STATE OFFENCES.

Queen's coin—

what is a, s. 230, p. 582.

Question—

refusing to answer a—put by a public servant, when an offence, s. 179, p. 428.

refusal to answer questions by a police-officer under s. 161, Crim. P. C., no offence, p. 428.

complainant not punishable for refusing to answer, p. 428.

Quick unborn child—causing death of, s. 316, p. 796.

Quick with child—meaning of the expression, s. 312, p. 793.

Railway passenger—travelling by a higher class without payment, p. 1060.

handing over luggage to co-passenger to evade payment, p. 1060.

evading payment of railway fare by production of old pass, p. 1060.

Railway thefts—deterrent sentences should be passed for, p. 941.

Railway tickets—are property in cheating, p. 1049. exchange of, is misappropriation, p. 988.

Ransom—kidnapping or abduction for, s. 365, p. 879.

Rape—

punishment for, s. 376, p. 907.
definition of—, s. 375, p. 907.
when husband may commit, s. 375, Excep., p. 907.
consent in rape, p. 908.
 by idiot or woman of unsound mind, p. 908.
 intoxicated woman, p. 909.
 sleeping person, p. 908.
 obtained by fraud, p. 909.
 fear, p. 909.
 prior to act, p. 908.
indecent assault upon a woman is not an attempt to commit, p. 910.
penetration is an element of the offence, p. 917.
physical incapacity to commit, is a good defence, p. 911.
dying declaration, p. 912.
evidence of previous connection, p. 912.
in India potency has to be proved, p. 912.
corroboration to complainant's story essential, p. 913.
collateral evidence in confirmation or otherwise, p. 914.
complaint by prosecutrix, p. 913.
false charge of rape, p. 914.
punishment measured by degrees of offence, p. 915.
distinguished from adultery, s. 497, p. 1220.
attempt to commit, pp. 1302, 1310.

Rash and negligent act—

in driving or riding, s. 279, p. 636.
 navigating a vessel, s. 280, p. 641.
on public way, s. 283, p. 644.
in dealing with poison, s. 284, p. 640.
 fire, s. 285, p. 647.
 explosive substance, s. 286, p. 640.
 machinery, s. 287, p. 650.
with respect to pulling down or repairing buildings, s. 288, p. 651.
 animal, s. 289, p. 652.
Causing death by, s. 304A, p. 768.
endangering life or personal safety of others, ss. 336, 337, pp. 830, 832.

See PUBLIC WAY.

Rash driving—

on a public road, an offence, s. 279, p. 636.
furious driving, p. 637.
driving bullocks without nose-strings, p. 637.
presence of any person on road not necessary, p. 638.
contributory negligence, p. 640.
liability of master for the—of his servant, p. 640.
joint liability, p. 640.

Rashly or negligently—

occurring in ss. 280, 284, 285, 286, 287, 304A, 336, 337, 338, pp. 641, 646, 640, 650, 768, 803, 832, 833.

Rash navigation—

when it amounts to an offence, s. 280, p. 641.
boat upset for want of ballast, p. 631.

Rashness, culpable—

what amounts to, p. 642.

Reason to believe—

definition of, s. 26, p. 59.

Reasonable apprehension—of danger in private defence, p. 224.

Reasonable means—to find out owner of lost property, s. 403, Expln. 2, pp. 981, 986.

Recapture—of prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.

Receipts—

forgery of, of payment of money, s. 467, p. 1157.
an offence, p. 1166.

Receiving—

property taken from an ally of Government, s. 127, p. 313.
a person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.
counterfeit currency-note, s. 489B, p. 1200.

Receiving stolen property—

what is stolen property, s. 410, p. 1023.
how punishable, s. 411, p. 1023.
manual possession not necessary in, p. 1026.
in the commission of a dacoity, s. 412, p. 1036.
habitually—or dealing with, s. 13, p. 1088.

Receptacle—

breaking open any closed, s. 461, p. 1132.
meaning of the term, p. 1132.
used for counterfeiting trade-mark, s. 480, p. 1185.
property-mark, s. 481, p. 1189.
sale of, bearing false trade-mark, s. 486, p. 1194.
making a false mark on a, s. 487, p. 1197.

Record—

public servant framing incorrect—to save offender from punishment, s. 218, p. 552.
actual commission of offence not necessary, p. 553.
with intent to cause loss to Government, p. 553.
without any such intent, p. 554.
forgery of, s. 466, p. 1155.

Reformatories—detention in, p. 91.

Refund—

of the amount of fine paid, not allowed, p. 109.

Refusal—to disperse unlawful assembly, s. 151, p. 362.

serve as a special constable, p. 414.
sign or receive summons, no offence under s. 173, p. 414.
take oath when lawfully required, s. 178, p. 427.
answer questions, s. 179, p. 428.
sign statement, s. 180, p. 429.
deposition, p. 429.
receipt for summons, p. 429.
mere—is not resistance under s. 133, p. 439.

Register—

jamaband is a, forging a—of birth, baptism, marriage, or burial, s. 466, p. 1155.
marriage register, p. 1156.
goods register, p. 1156.
chelan register, p. 1180.

Release—

fraudulent, of any demand or claim, ss. 421, 422, 424, pp. 1073, 1074, 1076.

Religion—

offences relating to, Chap. XV, p. 670.

Religious assembly—punishment for disturbing a, s. 296, p. 676.

disturbing, by saying 'amin', p. 677.
'mantra', p. 677.
music, p. 677.

Religious ceremonies—

disturbance of, s. 296, p. 676.

Religious feelings—outrage of, s. 295A, p. 673.

 uttering words, etc., with intent to wound, s. 298, p. 681.
 interpolation of a forbidden chant is an offence, p. 682.
 killing cow or exhibiting cow's flesh for wounding, p. 682.
 swearing on cow's flesh not an offence, p. 682.
 throwing dirty clothes at a person, not an offence, p. 683.
 wilful pollution of food served at a caste dinner, p. 683.

Religious object—

defiling of, for insulting religion, s. 295, p. 670.
 should be inanimate, p. 670.
 defiling an idol, p. 671.

Religious purposes—pictures, engraving, etc., for, are not obscene, s. 292, p. 655.

Religious worship—

disturbance of, s. 296, p. 676.

Removal—

dishonest or fraudulent, s. 424, p. 1076.
 by partner, pp. 997, 1076.
 during attachment, p. 1076.
 under an illegal order, p. 1077.
 of crops by tenants, p. 1077.
 under bona fide dispute, p. 1077.
 fraudulent removal of property, s. 206, p. 512.
 of person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.
 property-mark, s. 489, p. 1199.

Remission—

of punishment, ss. 54, 55, p. 94.
 violating conditions of, s. 227, p. 575.

Repetition—

of nuisance after injunction to discontinue, s. 291, p. 654.
 theft, is a grave offence, p. 939.
 defamation is an offence not less heinous, p. 1238.

Report—

public servant corruptly making a, s. 219, p. 555.
 circulating false, to incite to mutiny, s. 505, p. 1287.
 of proceeding in a Court of Justice is privileged, p. 1250, must be fair and accurate, p. 1250.
 of an officer in execution of duty to his superior, p. 1267.

Reputation—

general, evidence of, in bribery cases, p. 387.
 damage or harm to, in cheating, s. 415, p. 1042, 1053.
 forging petition for harming, s. 469, p. 1161.
 harming the, by defamatory statements, s. 499, p. 1232, 1243.
 criminal intimidation, s. 503, p. 1286.

Res nullius—cannot be the subject of receiving, p. 1027.

Rescue—

of prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.
 a person from custody of Court peons, p. 448.
 any person from lawful custody, s. 225, p. 566.
 meaning of the term, p. 567.
 in cases not otherwise provided for, s. 225B, p. 570.
 resistance to arrest without warrant, p. 572.
 improper execution of warrant, p. 572.
 bailiff must show the warrant to the person arrested, p. 572.
 from an arrest by chowkidar, p. 574.
 detention under s. 54, Criminal Procedure Code, p. 574.
 of person arrested by police, p. 851.

Reservoir—

fouling water of a public, s. 277, p. 634.

Resistance—

to taking of property by public servant, etc., punishment for, p. 116.
 officer acting without warrant or under illegal warrant, p. 209.
 the execution of a not strictly legal order, p. 211.
 distraint, p. 344.
 public officer, p. 344.
 the recapture of prisoner of State or war, s. 130, p. 315.
 the execution by law or legal process, s. 141, p. 328.
 the taking of property by a public servant, s. 183, p. 439.
 mere refusal is not resistance under s. 183, p. 440.
 legal if no lawful authority, p. 441.
 order of distraint, p. 440.
 the taking of property by a public servant without a warrant, p. 441.
 a process of civil Court, p. 446.
 the discharge of public functions, p. 447.
 rescuing from custody, p. 448.
 illegal attachments, p. 448.
 none, where no overt act done, p. 449.
 order or warrant illegal, p. 450.
 to apprehension of himself for an offence, s. 224, p. 563.
 lawful custody necessary for the offence of escape, p. 564.
 escape with consent no mitigation, p. 565.
 police-officer should show the authority under which he acts, p. 565.
 apprehension of another, s. 225, p. 566.
 apprehension in cases not otherwise provided for, s. 225B, p. 570.
 arrest without warrant, p. 572.
 improper execution of warrant, p. 572.

Restitution of stolen property—corrupt agreement to help in, ss. 213, 215, pp. 539, 543.

Restoration of property—offering bribe for, s. 214, p. 541.

 causing hurt for, s. 330, p. 822.
 grievous hurt for, s. 331, p. 824.
 wrongful confinement for, s. 348, p. 846.

Restraint—

See WRONGFUL RESTRAINT

Retaining—

stolen property, preparation to cause death, hurt or restraint, s. 382, p. 946.
 stolen property, s. 412, p. 1036.

Return—

unlawful—from transportation, s. 226, p. 575.

Revolver—

not an explosive substance, p. 649.

Reward—

acceptance of, as a bribe, s. 161, p. 380.

Riding—

rash or negligent—on public way, s. 279, p. 636.

Rigorous imprisonment—

a kind of punishment, s. 53, p. 84, 87.

Ring—

misappropriation of, s. 403, Expln. 2, ill. (f), p. 982.
 throwing of, in river, is mischief, s. 425, ill. (c), p. 1078.

Rioting—

and house-trespass, p. 117.
 and hurt, and rescuing from custody, p. 116.
 and grievous hurt, joint liability for, p. 117.
 when unlawful assembly is guilty of, s. 146, p. 341.

Rioting—Concld.

- punishment for, s. 147, p. 341.
- a sudden quarrel is no, p. 342.
- forcible entry, p. 342.
- a right to possession does not excuse, p. 342.
- defence of property, p. 343.
- private defence how far a justification, p. 343.
- enforcement of a right, p. 343.
- resistance to distraint, p. 344.
- public officer, p. 344.
- preventing cow killing, p. 345.
- recovering possession of cattle, p. 345.
- separate trial of opposite factions, p. 346.
- cumulative sentence, p. 347.
- when armed with deadly weapons, s. 148, p. 350.
- each person in a riot guilty of offence committed by another, s. 149, p. 351.
- act done in prosecution of common object, pp. 354, 356.
- commission of murder in prosecution of common object, p. 356.
- person having no common object to do a particular offence is not liable for commission of it by others, p. 357.
- person retiring from a fight has no common object with others, p. 357.
- hiring person to take part in, s. 150, p. 361.
- knowingly joining or continuing in assembly of five or more persons after it has been commanded to disperse, s. 151, p. 362.
- assaulting, etc., public servant suppressing riot, s. 152, p. 364.
- provoking a, s. 153, p. 364.
- promoting enmity between classes, s. 153A, p. 367.
- not giving the public notice of, s. 154, p. 373.
- person on whose behalf—takes place, liability for, s. 155, p. 375.
- liability of his agent or manager, s. 156, p. 376.
- harbouring persons hired for unlawful assembly, s. 157, p. 376.
- being hired to take part in, s. 158, p. 377.
- distinguished from 'affray', p. 379.
- causing—by disobeying orders of a public servant, s. 188, p. 433.

River—

- mischief by injury to, s. 431, p. 1093.
- property found drifting in a, p. 986.

Road—

- destroying or injuring a public, s. 431, p. 1093.
- rash driving or riding on a, s. 279, p. 636.
- non-observance of the rule of the, p. 637.

See PUBLIC ROAD.

Robbers—

- penalty for harbouring, s. 216A, p. 549.

Robbery—

- habitual association for committing, is thuggery, s. 310, p. 791.
- definition of, s. 300, p. 955.
- is an aggravated form of theft or extortion, p. 956.
- hurt independent of theft does not constitute, p. 957.
- punishment for simple, s. 392, p. 960.
- attempt to commit, s. 393, p. 962.
- causing hurt while committing or attempting to commit, s. 394, p. 962.
- with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt, s. 397, p. 968.
- attempt to commit—when armed with deadly weapons, s. 398, p. 972.
- belonging to or being associated with a gang for the purpose of committing, s. 401, p. 977.
- when it becomes dacoity, s. 391, p. 960.

See DACOITY.

Royal prerogative -

- saving for, s. 55A, p. 95.

Rule of the road—

- non-observance of the, is negligence, p. 637.

Rumour—

- circulation of a false, s. 505, p. 1287.

Rupee—

misappropriation of, s. 403, Expln. 2, ill. (a), p. 982.

Rupees—

See COMPANY'S RUPEES; FARUKHABAD RUPEE.

Safety—

public, Chap. XIV, p. 619.

Sailor—

definition of, s. 131, p. 319.

abetment of mutiny by, s. 131, p. 319.

—if committed, s. 132, p. 320.

on superior officer, ss. 133, 134, pp. 321, 322.

desertion of, and insubordination by, ss. 135, 136, 138, pp. 322, 323, 325.

concealment on a vessel, s. 137, p. 325.

false personation of—, s. 140, p. 326.

circulation of rumour to cause mutiny by, s. 505, p. 1287.

Sale—

by public servant, obstruction at a, s. 184, p. 442.

illegal bid at a, s. 185, p. 442.

of noxious food or drink, s. 273, p. 629.

drug or medicine, s. 275, p. 632.

obscene books, etc., prohibited, ss. 292, 293, pp. 635, 639.

a person as a slave, s. 370, p. 895.

a minor for the purpose of prostitution, s. 372, p. 897.

See DRUGS; FOOD OR DRINK.

Salt—

is movable property, in theft, p. 927.

Sample—

cheating by a false, s. 415, ill. (c), p. 1042.

Sanad—

is not a valuable security, p. 63.

fabrication of a, p. 1167.

Screening an offender—giving false information for the purpose of, s. 201, p. 562.

accepting consideration for, s. 213, p. 539.

offering consideration for, s. 214, p. 541.

not punishable where offence might have been compounded, s. 214, Except., p. 541.

public servant disobeying law for, s. 217, p. 550.

framing incorrect record for, s. 218, p. 552.

Sea mark—

exhibiting a false, s. 281, p. 642.

mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful a, s. 433, p. 1095.

Seal—

making or counterfeiting a—or possessing counterfeit—with intent to commit forgery, ss. 472, 473, pp. 1170, 1171.

punishable otherwise, s. 473, p. 1171.

Secret—

burying or disposal of a dead child, s. 318, p. 800.

wrongful confinement in, s. 346, p. 845.

kidnapping for confinement in, s. 365, p. 879.

Secreting—

of letters by postman, p. 988.

document with fraudulent intent, s. 477, p. 1175.

Section—

definition of, s. 50, p. 82.

Security—

See VALUABLE SECURITY.

Sedition—

- words or acts intended to cause, s. 124A, p. 287.
- intention is the gist of the offence, p. 290.
- innuendo, p. 298.
- visible representations, p. 296.
- 'attempts', meaning of, p. 296.
- hatred, or contempt, p. 298.
- disaffection, meaning of, p. 298.
- Government established by law in British India, p. 300.
- Her Majesty, meaning of, p. 299.
- incitement to secure 'swaraj', p. 301.
- disapprobation, p. 305.
- dramatic performance likely to excite feelings of disaffection, p. 305.
- exhortation not to pay taxes, p. 301.
- liability of an editor for letters of correspondents, p. 306.
- dissemination of seditious matter, p. 306.
- liability for extracts from other papers, p. 306.
- seditious meetings, p. 307.
- evidence of publication, p. 307.
- intention as gathered from other articles, p. 308.
- preface of a book, p. 308.
- speeches not charged as seditious, p. 308.
- written statement of accused, p. 308.
- confiscation of property of the accused, p. 310.
- jurisdiction, p. 310.
- appeal to Privy Council, p. 310.
- punishment, p. 310.

Seditious meeting—

- liability for, p. 307.

Seduction—

- of officer, soldier, sailor or airman, s. 181, p. 319.
- kidnapping or abducting a woman with a view to, s. 366, p. 380.
- procuration of minor girl for, s. 366A, p. 388.
- per se* is not an offence in England or India, p. 384.
- concealing person so abducted, s. 368, p. 392.

Self-control—

- want of, how far an excuse in cases of murder, p. 725.

Self-defence—

See PRIVATE DEFENCE.

Self-preservation—

- how far an excuse, p. 161.

Selling—

- a person as a slave, s. 370, p. 395.
- a girl for prostitution, s. 372, p. 397.
- goods with false trade-mark, s. 486, p. 1194.
- counterfeit currency-notes, s. 489A, p. 1199.
- machinery for counterfeiting currency-notes, s. 489D, p. 1202.
- defamatory prints or engravings, s. 502, p. 1273.

Sentence—

- commutation of, ss. 54, 55, p. 94.

Sentences—

- cumulative, in rioting, p. 347.

Separable offences—

- how sentences to be admeasured on conviction of, pp. 115, 116.

Sepulture—

- trespass in a place of, s. 297, p. 678.

Series of acts—

- liability for participation in, s. 37, p. 75.

Signs—

- in sedition, s. 124A, p. 287.
- outrage of religion, s. 295A, p. 673.
- defamation, s. 499, pp. 1232, 1242.

Singer—

- comment on performance of, s. 499, sixth Excep., ill. (c), p. 1233.

Singular number—

- includes plural, s. 9, p. 45.

Slander—

- is actionable only if it tends to public injury, p. 1241.
- under the Penal Code is included in defamation, p. 1241.
- differs from libel under English law, p. 1241.

See DEFAMATION.

Slavery—

- kidnapping or abducting in order to subject to, s. 367, p. 891.
- dealing with persons as slaves, s. 370, p. 895.
- meaning of the term slave, p. 895.
- habitually dealing in slaves, s. 371, p. 896.

Slight harm—

- act causing—not an offence, s. 95, p. 197.

Small-pox—

- carrying a child having—through street, p. 626.
- refusing to remove a child having—to hospital, p. 626.

Social boycott—

- threat of, p. 1282.

Social intercourse—

- refusal to have, p. 1285.

Sodomy—

See UNNATURAL OFFENCE.

Soldier—

- definition of, s. 131, Expln., p. 319.
- abetment of mutiny by—on superior officers, ss. 133, 134, pp. 321, 322.
- desertion of, and insubordination by, ss. 135, 136, 138, pp. 322, 323, 325.
- false personation of—, s. 140, p. 326.
- circulating rumour to incite, to mutiny, s. 505, p. 1287.

Solemn affirmation—

- included in the term 'oath', s. 51, p. 82.

Solicitor—

See ATTORNEY.

Solitary confinement—

- rules regarding sentence of—, and execution of such sentence, ss. 73, 74, pp. 127, 128.
- can be awarded in a summary trial, p. 128.
- cannot be inflicted when the sentence is of fine only, p. 128.
- when the sentence is of whipping, p. 128.
- cumulative sentences of—contrary to s. 73, p. 128.
- in cases of security for good behaviour, p. 128.
- limit of, s. 74, p. 128.

Songs—

- obscene, singing of, s. 294, p. 659.

Sound—

- making a, to wound religious feelings, s. 298, p. 681.
- insult modesty of woman, s. 509, p. 1292.

Sovereign—

- of the United Kingdom denoted in the Code by the word "Queen", s. 13, p. 46.
- exemption of, from the provisions of the Penal Code, p. 6.
- between, and his subject there can be no act of State, p. 152.

Sovereigns—attempt to melt, p. 1313.

Special constable—refusal to serve as, no offence under s. 173, p. 414.

Special law—is not affected by the Penal Code, s. 5, p. 38.

meaning of term, s. 41, p. 79.

offence extended to breach of, in certain cases, s. 40, p. 78.

conviction under, good, although the act is an offence under the Code, p. 39.

doctrine of previous convictions does not apply to offences under, p. 133.

Speech—

comment on a public, no defamation, s. 499, Excep. 6, ill. (b), p. 1233.

Spleen—rupture of diseased, death caused by—is hurt, p. 810.

grievous hurt p. 810.

criminal force, p. 851.

Sports and exercises—

hurt caused in, p. 185.

Spring—

See RESERVOIR.

Stabbing—

in a vital part causing death is murder, p. 717.

causing hurt or grievous hurt by instrument for, ss. 324, 326, pp. 813, 816.

Stamp—

See GOVERNMENT STAMP.

State offences—

what acts constitute—, Chap. VI, p. 274.

circulating false report with intent to cause, s. 505, p. 1287.

State prisoner—allowing or aiding escape of—, or harbouring—, ss. 128, 130, pp. 313, 315.

definition of, p. 314.

Statement—

punishment for refusing to sign, s. 180, p. 429.

made on oath or affirmation, s. 181, p. 430.

to public servant, s. 182, p. 431.

in protection of own interest, p. 1268.

another's interest, p. 1267.

without good faith, p. 1269.

about a false report, s. 505, p. 1287.

Statute—

construction of penal statutes, p. 14.

reports of the Indian Law Commissioners, p. 16.

headings p. 17.

illustrations, p. 17.

marginal notes, p. 17.

proceedings of the Legislative Council, p. 16.

provisos, p. 17.

punctuation, p. 18.

reports of Select Committees of the Legislative Council, p. 16.

statement of objects and reasons, p. 16.

Statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV, chap. 45, (Act for the better Government of India)— provisions of—not affected by the Penal Code, s. 5, p. 38.

Stealing—

kidnapping or abducting child under 10 for, s. 369, p. 395.

one's own property, p. 923.

See THEFT.

Steam—

letting off, near a crossing, p. 832.

Stolen property—

offering or taking gift to help in the restoration of—without using means to bring offender to justice, ss. 214, 215, pp. 541, 543.
 restoration of, in theft, p. 940.
 definition of, s. 410, p. 1023.
 dishonestly receiving, punishment for, s. 411, p. 1023.
 coming into the possession of the owner before its receipt by the person accused of receiving it, p. 1024.
 any profit to the receiver not necessary, p. 1027.
 manual possession not necessary, p. 1026.
 false claim is not receipt, p. 1027.
 husband and wife, p. 1028.
 joint Hindu family, p. 1027.
 joint possession with the thief, p. 1027.
 receiver is guilty though principal is not, p. 1027.
res nullius cannot be the subject of receiving, p. 1027.
 receiving by servant, p. 1029.
 property belonging to different owners, p. 1035.
 separate trials in respect of different items of, p. 1035.
 person committing theft or criminal breach of trust is not liable as receiver, p. 1035.
 receiving, when obtained in a dacoity—punishment for, s. 412, p. 1036.
 prosecution to prove guilty knowledge, p. 1038.
 habitually dealing in—punishment for, s. 413, p. 1038.
 assisting in the concealment of, s. 414, p. 1039.

See CONCEALMENT.

Stones—

are moveable property in theft, p. 926.
 throwing of, on a person's house, pp. 805, 832.
 mutual, death caused in, p. 810.

Strangulation—

causing death by, p. 695.

Stridhan—

a Hindu wife removing her—is not guilty of theft, p. 937.

Stupefying drug—administration of stupefying, intoxicating or unwholesome—without intent to cause hurt, s. 328, p. 820.

See DRUG.

Subpoena—

non-obedience to a, s. 174, ill. (a), p. 415.

Substitution—of one person for another is cheating, s. 416, p. 1061.

Sudden fight—

as a defence in cases of murder, s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 704, 736.
 where undue advantage is taken, p. 739.

Sudden provocation—

See PROVOCATION.

Sudden quarrel—

does not amount to riot, p. 342.
 zemindar not liable for, on his land, p. 375.
 death caused in a, s. 300, Excep. 4, pp. 704, 736.

Suffering an escape—negligently, s. 223, p. 560.

Suffocation — attempt to cause death by, p. 787.

Suicide—

- taking part in, of adult, s. 300, Excepn. 5, pp. 704, 739.
- of person under age or incapable of giving consent, is murder, s. 300, Excepn. 5, ill., p. 704.
- abetting of, by child or person incapable of consent, s. 305, p. 778.
- any person, s. 306, p. 779.
- attempting to commit, s. 309, p. 789.
- feigning of an attempt to commit, is an offence under, s. 387, p. 953.
- attempt to commit, p. 1800.

Suit—

- authority to institute or defend a, forgery of, s. 466, p. 1155.

Summons—

- absconding to avoid service of, s. 172, p. 412.
- preventing service of, s. 173, p. 414.
- refusal to receive a, p. 414.
- sign a, p. 414.
- serve as special constables, p. 414.
- throwing down of, after service, p. 414.
- disobedience to, s. 174, p. 415.
- a verbal order to attend is sufficient, p. 416.
- place of attendance must be specified, p. 416.
- wilful departure before time, p. 418.
- by incompetent officer, p. 417.
- order to attend necessary, p. 417.
- summons should be clear and specific in its items, p. 416.
- absence of public servant, p. 418.
- appearance through a lawyer, p. 418.
- escape from custody under a civil warrant, no offence, p. 418.
- personal service of, necessary, p. 418.
- refusal to sign a receipt for, no offence, p. 414.

Superior officer—

- meaning of the expression, p. 321.
- order of, how far binding on inferiors, p. 143.

Superstition—

- rash act committed through, p. 84.

Suppression—

- of unlawful assembly, assault or obstruction to, s. 152, p. 364.
- facts, may be cheating, p. 1069.

Surgical operation—

- by a person who is not qualified, p. 188.
- in good faith for a child's benefit, s. 89, ill., p. 190.

Sutti—

- abetment of the offence of, p. 234.
- when the offence is one of culpable homicide, p. 243.
- is death caused by consent, p. 740.
- a species of suicide, p. 779.

Swaraj—

- incitement to secure, is not sedition, p. 301.

Symbolical possession—

- how far a defence in theft, p. 932.

Syphilis—

- spreading of, p. 626.

Taking away—

- when taking is complete, in kidnapping, p. 865.
- in theft, need not be permanent, p. 921.
- a married woman, s. 498, p. 1224.

Tampering—

- with property-mark, s. 489, p. 1199.

Tank—

- fouling the water of a, s. 277, p. 634.

Taximeter—falsification of a, p. 1179.

Telephone—

instigation by, to commit an offence, p. 233.

Temple—

nude pictures, engravings, etc., in a, are not obscene, s. 292, pp. 656, 657.

Temple property—

criminal misappropriation of, p. 985.

trustee appropriating a temple jewel, p. 1019.

Temporary—

retention of property may be theft, p. 921.

misappropriation when dishonest is offence, s. 403, Expln., 1, pp. 981, 986.

Tent—

theft in a—, s. 380, p. 942.

house-trespass in a—, s. 442, p. 1111.

lurking house-trespass in a, s. 443, p. 1114.

Territorial operation—of the Penal Code, p. 19.

does not extend to—

Governor-General, Governors, Members of Councils, High

Court Judges, p. 6.

ambassadors, p. 7.

foreign sovereign, p. 6.

sovereign, p. 6.

alien enemies, p. 7.

foreign army, p. 7.

Indian Princes, p. 7.

warships, p. 8.

Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act—extent and application of, p. 19.

institution of proceedings against a foreigner, p. 20.

territorial waters, definition of, p. 19.

Testamentary documents—

See WILL.

Testicles—

causing death by squeezing of, p. 695.

Theft—

and mischief, punishment for, p. 117.

of property belonging to two persons, punishment for, p. 115.

assault or criminal force in attempt to commit—from person, s. 356, p. 862.

kidnapping or abducting child under 10 for, s. 369, p. 894.

definition of, s. 378, p. 918.

punishment for, s. 379, p. 919.

contrasted with larceny under English law, p. 919.

1. taking, p. 920.

cases of bona fide dispute, p. 921.

no wrongful gain is necessary, p. 921.

taking need not be permanent, p. 921.

property taken by mistake, p. 923.

stealing one's own property, p. 923.

removal of a debtor's property to enforce payment of debt, p. 924.

removal by pledgee of property pledged, p. 925.

servant's liability for act done at the bidding of his master, p. 928.

obtaining a cigarette from an automatic box, p. 925.

2. moveable property, what it includes, p. 925.

animals, p. 928.

bull, p. 928.

carcass, p. 929.

cattle, p. 928.

fish, p. 928.

partridges, p. 929.

peacocks, p. 928.

pigeons, p. 929.

Theft—Concl'd.

2. moveable property, what it includes—(Concl'd.)

boat, p. 927.
 crops, p. 926.
 earth and stones, p. 926.
 gas, p. 927.
 human body, p. 927.
 salt, p. 927.
 trees, p. 927.
 valuable security, p. 927.
 water, p. 928.

3. possession, p. 929.

in joint possession, p. 933.
 of property while under attachment, p. 931.
 symbolical possession, p. 932.
 regarding which possessory order is made, p. 932.

4. consent, p. 934.

unauthorized consent, p. 935.

5. moving of property, p. 935.

as between husband and wife, p. 937.
 English law, p. 937.
 Hindu law, p. 937.
 Mahomedan law, p. 937.

necessitas inducit privilegium quo ad jura privata, p. 937.

abetment, p. 937.

presumption, p. 938.

venue, p. 938.

joint trial, p. 938.

joinder of charges, p. 939.

theft and concealing of stolen property, p. 939.

house-breaking, p. 939.

receipt of stolen property, p. 939.

mischief, pp. 117, 939.

conviction for a different offence, p. 939.

repetition of, is a grave offence, p. 939.

single or several thefts, p. 939.

restoration of stolen property obtained in, p. 940.

railway thefts, p. 941.

in a dwelling-house, etc., s. 380, p. 942.

by clerk or servant of property in possession of master, s. 381, p. 944.

after preparation for causing death or hurt, s. 382, p. 946.

distinguished from 'extortion', p. 947.

when amounts to robbery, s. 390, p. 955.

differentiated from 'criminal misappropriation', p. 983.

attempt to commit, p. 1300.

See CLERK ; SERVANT.

Thieves—punishment for belonging to a gang of, s. 401, p. 977.

See GANG OF THIEVES.

Thing—

in counterfeiting, s. 28, p. 60.

Threat—

acts done under—when no offence, s. 94, p. 195.

of injury to public servants or to induce persons to refrain from applying to public servants,
 ss. 189, 190, pp. 460, 462.

incantation, affords no excuse for murder, p. 734.

grievous hurt, or death or of accusation of an offence made to commit extortion, ss. 385, 387, 389.
 pp. 952, 953, 954.

in cases of extortion—of publishing libel s. 383, ill. (a), p. 947.

wrongful confinement, s. 383, ill. (b), p. 947.

ploughing up field, s. 383, ill. (c), p. 947.

grievous hurt, s. 383, ill. (d), p. 947.

criminal accusation, p. 948.

incendiarism, p. 950.

illegal exaction of money, p. 950.

loss of appointment, p. 950.

criminal charge, p. 950.

Divine displeasure, pp. 404, 950.

wrongful confinement, p. 950.

money obtained by frightening a person, p. 950.

Threat—Concl'd.

- in cases of criminal intimidation, s. 503, p. 1280.
 - vengeance, p. 1281.
 - excommunication, p. 1282.
 - picketing, pp. 951, 1282.
 - social boycott, p. 1282.
- to kill a person, p. 1282.
 - get a person dismissed, p. 1282.
 - imprisoned, p. 1282.
 - ruin a man by false cases, p. 1282.
- person threatened must be interested, p. 1283.
- to cause hurt or destruction, s. 506, p. 1289.
- of Divine displeasure ; inducing a person to do or omit anything, s. 508, p. 1291.

See INJURY.

Thug—

- definition of, s. 310, p. 791.
- punishment for being a, s. 311, p. 791.

Thumb impression—

- opinion of an expert in, in forgery, p. 1153.
- put upon blank pieces of paper is valuable security, p. 63.

Tickets—

See RAILWAY TICKETS.

Token—

- carrying, of a public servant, s. 171, p. 400.
- soldier, s. 140, p. 326.

Title—

- meaning of—in s. 463, pp. 1134, 1138.

Title page—

- in an account book with names of partners is a valuable security, p. 63.

Tooth—

- fracture or dislocation of—is “grievous hurt”, s. 320, seventhly, p. 805.

Torture—

- in order to extort property, etc., ss. 327-329, pp. 819-822.
- confession, ss. 330, 331, pp. 822, 824.

Trade—

- public servant unlawfully engaging in, s. 168, p. 396.
- lending money on interest is not, p. 397.
- enactments prohibiting public officers from, p. 397.
- in goods having counterfeit trade-mark, s. 486, p. 1194.

Trade-mark—

- what is a, s. 473, p. 1183.
- what is using a false, s. 480, p. 1185.
- importer of goods can have his, p. 1185.
- trade-mark in—
 - calendars, p. 1187.
 - labels, p. 1187.
 - gold bars, p. 1188.
- general name cannot be subject of, p. 1188.
- use of receptacle having a, p. 1188.
- distinguished from ‘property-mark’, p. 1189.
- penalty for counterfeiting a, s. 483, p. 1192.
- counterfeiting—used by a public servant, s. 485, p. 1194.
- selling, etc., goods bearing false, s. 486, p. 1194.
- making or using false mark to deceive a public servant, s. 487, p. 1197.
- punishment for using false, s. 482, p. 1190.

Trafficking—

- in slaves, punishment for, s. 371, p. 896.
- counterfeit currency notes, s. 480B, p. 1200.

Transfer—

fraudulent, of property, s. 206, p. 512.
meaning of, p. 514.

Transit pass—

under a forest regulation is a valuable security, p. 63.

Translation—

a public servant framing an incorrect, s. 167, p. 394.
making an incorrect copy, p. 395.
submitting a false report, p. 395.

Transportation—

one of the punishments under the Code, s. 53, secondly, pp. 85, 86, 91.
for life, may be commuted, s. 55, p. 94.
European or American to be sentenced to penal servitude instead of, s. 56, p. 95.
calculation of fractions of, s. 57, p. 96.
treatment of offenders sentenced to—until transported, s. 58, p. 96.
may be awarded instead of imprisonment, s. 59, p. 96.
for less than seven years illegal, p. 97.
not under special or local law, p. 98.
cannot be substituted for imprisonment in default of fine, p. 98.
not to exceed the term of imprisonment, p. 98.
mode of sentencing, p. 99.
for life, for abetment of mutiny by an officer, soldier, sailor, or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force, s. 132, p. 320.
giving, etc., false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with, s. 195, p. 492.
person counterfeiting Queen's coin punishable with, s. 232, p. 587.
when murder punishable with, s. 302, p. 744.
murder by convict under sentence of, s. 303, p. 762.
culpable homicide not amounting to murder when punishable with, s. 304, p. 762.
house-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with, s. 450, p. 1120.
unlawful return from, s. 226, p. 575.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

Treasure trove—misappropriation of a, p. 987.

Treating—

at election is bribery, s. 171B, p. 402. meaning of, s. 171E, Explan., p. 407.

Tree—

is immovable property, in theft, p. 927.

Trespass—

meaning of the term, as used in s. 297, p. 678.
bona fide dispute or claim in, p. 1110.
person committing—in a state of intoxication, s. 510, p. 1294.

See CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

Trust—

See CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST.

Trustee—

criminal breach of trust by a, pp. 1019, 1020.
breaking open closed receptacle, s. 462, p. 1133.

Turbulent assembly—member of, who refuses to disperse after a lawful command, s. 151, p. 362.

if assembly already unlawful, s. 151, Explan., p. 362.

Truth—

how far a defence to a charge of defamation, pp. 1247, 1273.
onus lies on the person making imputation, p. 1246.

Umbrella—

blow with an—amounts to hurt, p. 827.

Unborn child—See CHILD.Unchastity— confession by a woman, how far provocation, p. 729.

 imputation of, threat for, s. 506, p. 1289.

Underwriters—

casting away of a ship to cause loss to, s. 425, ill. (e), p. 1078.

Undue influence—at an election, s. 171C, p. 404.

 punishment, s. 171F, p. 407.

Unlawful assembly—

definition of, s. 141, p. 328.
 member of—; who is a, s. 142, p. 329.
 violence in—amounts to rioting, p. 341.
 resistance to an unlawful search, p. 331.
 illegal arrest, p. 331.
 order under Police Act, p. 331.
 enforcement of right of land, p. 332.
 interrupting a procession, p. 334.
 illegal seizure, p. 334.
 illegal construction of a dam, p. 334.
 preventing cow-sacrifice, p. 335.
 taking water by force, p. 334.
 power to disperse an unlawful assembly, p. 337.
 joint trial of two opposite parties, p. 337.
 restoration of possession can be ordered, p. 338.
 death of complainant, p. 338.
 right of Crown to prosecute, p. 338.
 punishment for being a member of an, s. 143, p. 329.
 joining unlawful assembly armed with a deadly weapon, s. 144, p. 338.
 knowing it has been commanded to disperse, s. 145, p. 339.
 punishment for rioting, s. 148, p. 350.
 when armed with a deadly weapon, s. 149, p. 351.
 every member of an—guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object, s. 149, p. 351.
 act done in prosecution of common object, p. 356.
 person retiring from fight has no further common object with those who continue it, p. 357.
 non-liability without common object, p. 357.
 hiring, etc., persons to join in, s. 150, p. 361.
 knowingly joining or continuing, after it is commanded to disperse, s. 151, p. 362.
 refusal to disperse, p. 363.
 assaulting a public officer when suppressing an, s. 152, p. 364.
 wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot, s. 153, p. 364.
 owner or occupier or agent of land bound to give police notice of, s. 154, p. 373.
 liability of a person for whose benefit riot is committed, s. 155, p. 375.
 agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed, s. 156, p. 376.
 harbouring person hired for, s. 157, p. 376.
 being hired to take part in, s. 158, p. 377.
 when, becomes an affray, ss. 159, 160, p. 378.

See AFFRAY; RIOTING.Unlawful compulsory labour—See* COMPULSORY LABOUR.Unlawful purpose— buying a minor girl for, s. 373, p. 902. selling a minor girl for, s. 372, p. 897.

Unlawful return—from transportation, s. 226, p. 575.

Unlawful trade—See PUBLIC SERVANT; TRADE.Unlawfully— as occurring in ss. 269, 374, pp. 626, 906.

Unnatural lust—kidnapping or abducting a person for, s. 367, p. 891.

Unnatural offences—

punishment for, s. 377, p. 915.
 insufficient particulars in charge, p. 917.
 sentence of whipping appropriate for youthful offenders for, p. 917.
 attempt to commit, p. 1310.

Unsound mind—

See LUNATIC.

Unstamped copper—is not coin, though used as money, s. 230, ill. (b), p. 582.

Unwholesome drug—

See DRUG.

User—

of used Government stamps, s. 262, p. 611.
 false mark, s. 488, p. 1198.
 counterfeit currency notes, s. 489B, p. 1200.

Using—

a forged document as genuine, s. 471, p. 1162.

Uttering—counterfeit coin, s. 240, p. 596.

 forged document, p. 1167.

Vakalatnamah—

false signature on a, is forgery, p. 1146.

Valuable security—

any—may be subject of theft, p. 927.
 bill as receipted by cheque is not a, p. 64.
 copy of a decree of Court is not a, p. 63.
 copy of a lease is not a, p. 63.
 definition of, s. 30, p. 62.
 what is, and what is not, p. 63.
 voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt to extort—, or compel its restoration, ss. 329, 330, 331, pp. 822, 824.
 wrongful confinement to extort, or compel its restoration, ss. 347, 348, p. 846.
 is movable property, in theft, p. 927.
 delivery of—where extortion, s. 383, p. 947.
 procuring the making, etc., of—by cheating, s. 420, p. 1067.
 burning a, is mischief, s. 425, ill. (a.), p. 1078.
 forging a, s. 467, p. 1157.
 destroying, etc., s. 477, p. 1175.
 falsification of, s. 477A, p. 1176.

See FORGERY.

Valuable thing—

public servant obtaining,—without adequate consideration, s. 165, p. 391.

Vehicle—negligence or rashness in driving of a, s. 279, p. 636.

Vendor and purchaser—cheating between, p. 1058.

Vengeance—

threat of, p. 1281.

Verdict—

public servant corruptly pronouncing a, s. 219, p. 555.

Vessel—

definition of, s. 48, p. 82.
 rash or negligent navigation of, s. 280, p. 641.
 upsetting of, for want of sufficient ballast, s. 280, p. 641.
 conveying persons for hire in overloaded or unsafe, s. 282, p. 643.
 theft committed in a, s. 380, p. 942.

Vessel—Concl'd.

trespass committed in a, s. 442, p. 1111.

lurking house-trespass in a, s. 443, p. 1114.

casting away or destroying or attempting to destroy by fire or explosive substance any, ss. 437, 439 pp. 1098, 1099.

See SHIP.

Vexatious charge—

does not amount to false charge, p. 532.

Violation—

of condition of remission of sentence, s. 227, p. 575.

law of contract, is breach of trust, s. 405, p. 992.

Violence—

in unlawful assembly amounts to rioting, s. 146, p. 341.

robbery or dacoity, s. 397, p. 968.

Visible representations—

in sedition, s. 124A, p. 296.

enmity between classes, s. 153A, p. 367.

outrage of religion, s. 295A, p. 673.

defamation, s. 499, pp. 1232, 1242.

Vitiating atmosphere—when indictable, s. 278, p. 635.

Voluntarily—

definition of, s. 39, p. 77.

occurring in ss. 128, 171C, 186, 229, 277, 278, 296, 312, 322, 325, 326, 327, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 339, 377, 390, 394, 414, 460, 491, 508.

Voluntarily causing grievous hurt—

definition of, s. 322, p. 811.

See GRIEVOUS HURT.

Voluntarily causing hurt—

definition of, s. 321, p. 811.

See HURT.

Voters—

treating, at an election, s. 171B, p. 402.

undue influence to, s. 171C, p. 404.

false personation of, s. 171D, p. 405.

Voting paper—

obtaining, in the name of another, p. 1146.

Waging war—against the Queen, and attempt, abetment, preparation for, or concealment of design of, ss. 121, 123, pp. 274, 286.

constructive levying of war, p. 278.

foreigners are not guilty of the offence of, p. 278.

conspiracies for, s. 121A, p. 281.

collection of arms, etc., and making other preparation for, s. 122, p. 285.

concealment of design of, s. 123, p. 286.

against Asiatic Powers in alliance, etc., with the Queen, s. 125, p. 311.

receiving property taken in such, s. 127, p. 313.

Wall—

entry through a hole in, is house-breaking, s. 445, ill. (a), p. 1115.

by scaling a, is house-breaking, s. 456, p. 1125.

Wandering gang of thieves—punishment for belonging to, s. 401, p. 977.

Wantonly—

meaning of the term, s. 153, p. 364.

War—

See WAGING WAR, CHAP. VI, p. 274.

Warehouse-keeper—criminal breach of trust by—in respect to property, s. 407, p. 1009.

Warrant—

- resistance to an illegal attachment, p. 211.
- officer acting without warrant, p. 209.
- illegal search, p. 209.
- illegal warrant, p. 210.
- execution of a warrant, p. 211.
- assaulting a public servant while executing, s. 353, p. 854.
- defect in the warrant is no defence, p. 857.
- search without a proper order or warrant, p. 857.
- unlawful act of public servant good defence, p. 858.
- non-production of warrant at trial, p. 859.

Water—

- deprivation of use of, by unlawful assembly, s. 141, fourth, p. 328.
- adulteration of—with milk, p. 630.
- pollution of—of spring or reservoir, s. 277, p. 634.
- is movable property, in theft, p. 928.
- introducing, in ice-house, is mischief, s. 425, ill. (b), p. 1078.
- mischief by diverting, s. 430, p. 1090.
- diminution of supply of, p. 1090.

Way—deprivation of right of, by unlawful assembly, s. 141, p. 328.

See PUBLIC WAY.

Weapon—

- causing hurt by a dangerous, s. 324, p. 813.
- grievous hurt by a dangerous, s. 325, p. 815.

Wearing dress of soldier—

when punishable, s. 140, p. 326.

Wearing garb or carrying token—

- used by soldier, s. 140, p. 326.
- public servant, s. 171, p. 400.

Weights and measures—

- false and fraudulent use of, ss. 264, 265, pp. 614, 615.
- being in possession of false—with knowledge and intent, s. 266, p. 616.
- false instrument should have been used, p. 617.
- making or selling false, s. 267, p. 618.

Wharfinger—

criminal breach of trust by—in respect of property, s. 407, p. 1009.

Whipping—

is a form of punishment added by the Whipping Act, p. 91.

Whipping Act—

See THE APPENDIX.

Wife—

- includes a permanent mistress, p. 60.
- death of husband is not injury to, p. 81.
- harbouring husband, commits no offence, ss. 52A, 136, Except., 212, 216, pp. 84, 323, 530, 54.
- sexual intercourse by a man with his wife causing grievous hurt, s. 338, p. 633.
- between husband and—, if latter under 14, is rape, s. 375, fifthly, p. 907.
- offence of theft between husband and wife under—
 - English law, p. 937.
 - Hindu law, p. 937.
 - Mahomedan law, p. 937.
- cannot commit breach of trust as to husband's property, p. 998.
- in receipt of stolen property, p. 1028.
- adultery with, of another, s. 497, p. 1220.

Wife—Concl'd.

enticing away, of another, s. 498, p. 1224.
defamation of, complaint by husband, p. 1275.

Will—

sexual intercourse against—is rape, s. 375, pp. 907, 911.
denotes any testamentary document, s. 31, p. 64. alteration of a, is forgery, s. 464, ill. (f), (i), p. 1135.
forgery of, s. 467, p. 1157.
fraudulent cancellation or destruction of, s. 477, p. 1175.

Willfully—

as used in ss. 405, 477A, pp. 992, 1002, 1176, 1177.

Window—entry through a, is house-breaking, s. 445, ill. (c), p. 1115.

Witch—

punishing a woman as a, p. 694.

Witchcraft—

belief in, does not justify causing death, p. 694.

With child—

meaning of, p. 793.

Witnesses—

refusal of—to bind themselves by oath or affirmation, s. 178, p. 427.
 answer examination on, s. 179, p. 428.
 sign record of examination, s. 180, p. 429.
not producing a document, liable under s. 175, p. 419.
 bound to sign depositions in revenue inquiry, s. 180, p. 429.
criminating themselves, p. 436.
depositions of, must be taken in manner required by law, where perjury is assigned, p. 432.
prevarication by, may amount to interruption of judicial proceedings, p. 578.
personation by, p. 1062.
comment on witnesses in a case, s. 499, Excep. 5, pp. 1233, 1250.
liability for defamation for statements while in witness-box, p. 1263.

Woman—

definition of, s. 10, p. 45.
pregnant, capital sentence on, to be postponed, p. 94.
causing miscarriage of—with or without consent, ss. 312, 313, pp. 792, 794.
 death of—by act intended to cause miscarriage, s. 314, p. 795.
assaulting or using criminal force to—with intent to outrage her modesty, s. 354, p. 860.
kidnapping a—from lawful guardianship, s. 361, p. 864.
kidnapping or abducting a—to compel marriage, or her being seduced, s. 366, p. 880.
enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married, s. 498, p. 1224.
threat to impute unchastity to, s. 506, p. 1289.
word or gesture or act intended to insult the modesty of a, s. 509, p. 1292.
indecent assault upon a, is not an attempt to commit rape, p. 910.

Words—

referring to act include illegal omission, s. 32, p. 64.
death caused by the effect of, on imagination, p. 688.
causing provocation in cases of murder, p. 723.
do not amount to an assault, s. 351, Explan., p. 851.
used in defamation, s. 499, pp. 1232, 1241.
 insulting modesty of woman, s. 509, p. 1292.

Worship—

injuring or defiling a place of, s. 295, p. 670.
disturbing an assembly performing religious, s. 296, p. 676.
trespass in a place of, s. 297, p. 678.
house-trespass in a place of, s. 442, p. 1111.
mischief by destroying a place of—by fire, s. 436, p. 1097.

See MISCHIEF.

Wounding—

feelings, trespass for, s. 297, p. 678.
uttering words, for, s. 298, p. 681.

Writ of liberation—confinement of a person under, s. 345, p. 844.

Writing—containing directions or instructions is a "document", s. 29, p. 61.

expressing the terms of a contract is a "document", s. 29, ill., p. 61.
falsification of, s. 477A, p. 1176.

Written statement—

false statements made in a, p. 468.

Wrongful confinement—and assault, punishment for, p. 117.

definition of, s. 340, p. 839.
arrest by third person at the direction of police-officer, p. 840.
detention through moral force is sufficient, p. 840.
difference between false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, p. 840.
malice not necessary, p. 840.
period of confinement not material, p. 840. mistaken exercise of power by a police-officer is not, p. 841.
legal arrest is not, p. 842.
punishment for, s. 342, p. 843.
when, for 3 or more days, s. 343, p. 843.
10 or more days, s. 344, p. 844.
a liberation writ has issued, s. 345, p. 844.
confinement is secret, s. 346, p. 845.
it is for purpose of extortion of property, s. 347, p. 846.
confession, s. 348, p. 846.
assault or criminal force in attempt to commit, s. 357, p. 863.
kidnapping or abducting for a, s. 365, p. 879.
of person kidnapped or abducted, s. 368, p. 892.

See ABDUCTION; ASSAULT; CRIMINAL FORCE; KIDNAPPING; WRON RESTRAINT.

Wrongful gain—

definition of, s. 23, p. 55.

See DISHONESTLY.

Wrongful loss—

definition of, s. 23, p. 55.
breach of a condition is not, p. 56.
secreting a document is not, p. 56.
caused by cheating, s. 418, p. 1065.
in mischief, s. 425, p. 1078.

See DISHONESTLY.

Wrongful restraint—

definition of, s. 339, p. 835.
when—amounts to wrongful confinement, s. 340, p. 839.
punishment for, s. 341, p. 842.
putting a person in fear of—in theft, s. 382, p. 946.
extortion, s. 383, p. 947.
robbery: dacoity, s. 390, p. 955.
house-trespass, s. 452, p. 1121.
lurking house-trespass, s. 455, p. 1124.
house-breaking, s. 455, p. 1124.
lurking house-trespass by night, s. 458, p. 1129.
house-breaking by night, s. 458, p. 1129.
mischief committed after preparation made for causing, s. 440, p. 1100.

See WRONGFUL CONFINEMENT.

Year—

definition of, s. 49, p. 82.

